1. Cotterall v. Sweetman, 1 Rob. Ec. 304, 317, 320; Meister v. Moore, 96 U. S. 76, 79; Blackburn v. Crawford, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 175, 185, 194; Campbell v. Gullatt, 43 Ala. 57, 67, 68; Book v. Barron, 20 Ga. 702; Askew v. Dupree, 30 Ga. 173; Port v. Port, 75 Ill. 484; Stevenson v. Gray, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 193; Harrison v. Harrison, 22 Ired. 468; Jones v. Jones, 45 Md. 144, 159; Hutchins v. Kimmell, 31 Mich. 126; Dickson v. Brown, 49 Miss. 357; Hargraves v. Thompson, 31 Miss. 211; Dyer v. Brannock, 66 Mo. 391; Walter's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 392; Rodebough v. Sanks, 2 Watts (Pa.) 9; Pearson v. Howey, 11 N. J. L. 12; State v. Robbins, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 23; Peck v. Peck, 12 R. I. 485.

2. Jones v. Jones, 45 Md. 144, 159.

3. A statute may declare that no marriages shall be valid unless they are solemnized in a prescribed manner; but such an enactment is a very different thing from a law requiring all marriages to be entered into in the presence of a magistrate or a clergyman, or that it be preceded by a licence, or publication of banns, or be attested to by witnesses. Such formal provisions may be construed as merely directory, instead of being treated as destructive of a common law right to form the marriage relation by words of present assent. And such, we think, has been the rule generally adopted in construing statutes regulating marriage. Whatever directions they may give respecting its formation or solemnization, courts have usually held a marriage good at common law to be good notwithstanding the statutes, unless they contain express words of nullity. This is the conclusion reached by Mr. Bishop, after an examination of the authorities. Bishop, Mar. and Div., section 283 and note. We do not propose to examine in detail the numerous decisions that have been made by the state courts. In many of the States, enactments exist very similar to the Michigan statutes; but their object has manifestly been, not to declare what shall be requisite to the validity of a marriage, but to provide a legitimate mode of solemnizing it. They speak of the celebration of its rite rather than of its validity, and they address themselves principally to the functionaries they authorize to perform the ceremony. In most cases, the leading purpose is to secure a registration of marriages, and evidence by which marriages may be proved; for example, by certificate of a clergyman or magistrate, or by an exemplification of the registry. In a small number of the States, it must be admitted, such statutes have been construed as denying validity to marriages not formed according to the statutory directions. Notably has this been so in North Carolina and in Tennessee, where the statute of North Carolina was in force. But the statute contained a provision declaring null and void all marriages solemnized as directed without a licence first had. So, in Massachusetts, it was early decided that a statute very like the Michigan statute rendered illegal a marriage which would have been good at common law, but which was not entered into in the manner directed by the written law. Milford v. Worcester, 7 Mass. 48. It may well be doubted, however, whether such is now the law in that State. In Parton v. Hervey, 1 Gray (Mass.) 119, where the question was, whether a marriage of a girl only thirteen years old, married without parental consent, was a valid marriage (the statute prohibiting clergymen and magistrates from solemnizing marriages of females under eighteen without the consent of parents or guardians), the court held it good and binding, notwithstanding the statute. In speaking of the effect of statutes regulating marriage, including the Massachusetts statute (which, as we have said, contained all the provisions of the Michigan one), the court said: "The effect of these and similar statutes is not to render such marriages, when duly solemnized, void, although the statute provisions have not been complied with. They are intended as directory only upon ministers and law.¹ Thus, a statute declaring a marriage void but not expressing any intention of changing the pre-existing law will not be held to render a marriage formerly voidable absolutely void.² And so, a statute which provides a means of avoiding a void marriage without adding that such marriage shall be valid until duly avoided, does not thereby render such marriage voidable only, if void by the pre-existing law.³

3. Conflict of Laws.—In determining the validity of any marriage, it is necessary to decide first by what state's or country's laws its validity is to be tested. The capacity of the parties is controlled, according to different views, by the law of the place of the parties' domicil, or of the place where the marriage takes place; and the necessity and sufficiency of the ceremonies and consummation, by the law of the place where they are married. The law as to consent is the same everywhere.⁴

magistrates and to prevent, as far as possible, by penalties on them, the solemnization of marriages when the prescribed conditions and formalities have not been fulfilled. But, in the absence of any provision declaring marriages not celebrated in a prescribed manner, or between parties of certain ages, absolutely void, it is held that all marriages regularly made according to the common law are valid and binding, though had in violation of the specific regulations imposed by statute." There are two or three other States in which decisions have been made like that in 7th Massachusetts.

We will not undertake to cite those which hold a different doctrine, one in accord with the opinion we have cited from 1 Gray. Reference is made to them in Bishop, Mar. & Div., § 283, et seq.; in Reeve, Dom. Rel. 199, 200; in 2 Kent Com. 90, 91; and in 2 Greenl. Ev. The rule deduced by all these writers from the decided cases is thus stated by Mr. Greenleaf:

"Though in most, if not all the United States, there are statutes regulating the celebration of marriage rites, and inflicting penalties on all who disobey the regulations, yet it is generally considered that, in the absence of any positive statute declaring that all marriages not celebrated in the prescribed manner shall be void, or that none but certain magistrates or ministers shall solemnize a marriage, any marriage, regularly made according to the common law, without observing the statute regulations, would still be a valid marriage."

As before remarked, the statutes are held merely directory; because marriage is a thing of common right; because it is the policy of the State to encourage it, and because, as has sometimes been said, any other construction would compel holding illegitimate the offspring of many parents conscious of no violation of law." MR. JUSTICE STRONG, in Meister v. Moore, 96 U. S. 76, 79; 24 L. Ed. 827.

1. Cases cited supra.

2. "The disabilities enumerated are all canonical disabilities, and not those known to the law as civil disabilities. Canonical disabilities were such as rendered the marriage voidable and not void. They require the judgment of an ecclesiastical court, during the lives of the parties, to make them effective as causes of a divorce. On the other hand, civil disabilities, such as arose pro defectu consensus, for want of a capacity to contract, or mental infirmity, ipso facto avoided marriage without the action of the courts. When the legislature declared by statute that persons laboring under canonical disabilities should not marry under certain penalties, but such marriages should be void, and gave jurisdiction to the general court to hear and determine upon such marriages, it is to be supposed they designed to put persons laboring under such disabilities in the same position they were at common law, viz: they should be void, when established by the judgment of a court, in the life of the parties to the marriage, not to confound canonical and civil disabilities, and destroy the distinction between them." Harrison v. Harrison, 22 Md. 468.

3. Smith v. Smith, 5 Ohio St. 32, 33. But see Spicer v. Spicer, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 112.

4. See tit. CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol.

4. Capacity of Parties in General.—A party may be generally incapable of marrying or incapable of forming a particular marriage because of (1) want of age; (2) want of mental capacity to understand the nature of the act; (3) want of physical and sexual capacity to consummate the marriage (impotence); (4) relationship by blood (consanguinity), or by marriage (affinity) with the other party; (5) civil condition of servitude (slavery); (6) being of a different race from the other party; and (7) having been married before and that marriage not being at an end. The incapacities of precontract,¹ of relationship by carnal knowledge,² and of religious belief,³ have no existence now.

5. Capacity of Parties—a. Want of Age.—Want of age may render a marriage void, voidable, or simply illegal.

At common law, the marriage of a party under seven years of age was void;⁴ of a male between seven and fourteen, or a female between seven and twelve, voidable;⁵ of a male over fourteen and a female over twelve, valid.⁶

3, p. 598; Stewart Marriage and Divorce, §§ 105, 121.

1. Cheney v. Arnold, 15 N. Y. 345, 352. As to ecclesiastical law, see Baxter v. Brickley, 1 Lee 42; Reg. v. Millis, 10 Clark & F. 534, 763, 784.

2. Wing v. Taylor, 2 Swab. & Tr. 278.

3. Phila. v. Williamson, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 176, 177. See Com. v. Kenney, 120 Mass. 387.

4. 1 Black. Com. 436. "The next legal disability is want of age.

This is sufficient to avoid all other contracts, on account of the imbecility of judgment in the parties contracting; a fortiori, therefore, it ought to avoid this, the most important contract of any. Therefore if a boy under fourteen or a girl under twelve years of age marries, this marriage is only inchoate and imperfect, and, when either of them comes to the age of consent aforesaid, they may disagree and declare the marriage void, without any divorce or sentence in the spiritual court. This is founded on the civil law. But the canon law pays a greater regard to the constitution, than the age, of the parties; for if they are habiles ad matrimonium, it is a good marriage whatever their age may be. And in our law it is so far a marriage, that if at the age of consent they agree to continue together, they need not be married again. If the husband be of years of discretion, and the wife under twelve, when she comes to years of discretion he may disagree as well as she may, for in contracts the obligation must be mutual; both must be bound or neither; and so it is, vice versa, when the wife is of years of discretion and the husband under."

Bishop on M. & D., vol. 1, § 147. "Another period to be considered is that of seven years, alike in male and female. If either party to a marriage is below seven it is a mere nullity." See also 2 Burns Ecc. Law 434a.

5. Beggs v. State, 55 Ala. 108, at 111. "By the common law, no persons were capable of binding themselves in marriage until they had arrived at the age of consent, which in males was fixed at fourteen and in females at twelve. Marriage before that age was voidable at the election of either party, on arriving at the age of consent, if either of the parties was under that age when the contract was made." See also Koonce v. Wallace, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 194, and note 1 above.

6. See notes 4 and 5 above.

Parton v. Hervey, 1 Gray (Mass.) 119. "The age of consent in this commonwealth, as by the common law, is twelve in females and fourteen in males, and a marriage between two infants above those ages is valid, without the consent of their parents or guardians, notwithstanding the Rev. Stat., ch. 75, §§ 15, 19, which prohibit magistrates and ministers, under a penalty, from solemnizing the marriage of a female under the age of eighteen, or a male under the age of twenty-one, without the consent of the parent or guardian." See also Bennett v. Smith, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 439, 441; Governor v. Rector, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 57, 61.

Statutes prescribing at what age a party may marry are to be construed according to the rule already laid down,¹ and are to be held to affect the validity of a marriage which would be valid at common law only when the statute so expressly states.² And, as a rule, marriages of parties under the statutory age are held voidable at most, unless within the age at which they would have been void at common law.³ Statutes prescribing the consent of parents are deemed to be statutes relating to the ceremonies of marriage rather than to the age of the parties.⁴

The marriage of parties over seven years of age is therefore in general a voidable marriage;⁵ void unless confirmed,⁶ or valid unless avoided.⁷ It may be confirmed by acknowledgment or cohabitation, when both the parties are of full age.⁸ It may be

1. Parton v. Hervey, 67 Mass. 119, at 122. "But the effect of these and similar statutes is not to render such marriages, when duly solemnized, void, although the statute provisions have not been complied with. They are intended as directory only upon ministers and magistrates, and to prevent, as far as possible, by penalties on them, the solemnization of marriages when the prescribed condition and formalities have not been fulfilled. But in the absence of any provision declaring marriages not celebrated in a prescribed manner, or between parties of certain ages, absolutely void, it is held that all marriages regularly made according to the common law are valid and binding, although had in violation of the specific regulations imposed by statute. 2 Kent Com. 90, 91; 2 Greenl. Ev., § 460; Milford v. Worcester, 7 Mass. 48; Londonderry v. Chester, 2 N. H. 268; Hantz v. Sealy, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 405. And such is the effect given to similar statutes in England. The King v. Birmingham, 8 B. & C. 29; Catterall v. Sweetman, 1 Robertson 304.

In many States, statutes prescribe at what age a party may marry. Compare Ala. R. C. 1876, § 2333, with Ark. Dig. 1874, § 4172. For example, the age of eighteen for males and fourteen for females. Goodwin v. Thompson, 2 Greene (Iowa) 329. Shaffer v. State, 20 Ohio 1, 4. Or sixteen for males and fourteen for females. Koonce v. Wallace, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 194.

2. See note 1 above.

3. See notes 4, 5, 6, p. 487; note 1, supra; Walls v. State, 32 Ark. 565, 570; McDeed v. McDeed, 67 Ill. 545; People v. Slack, 51 Mich. 193, 200.

4. See note 1, p. 487, and n. 1, supra.

5. See notes 4 and 5, p. 487.

6. Shaffer v. State, 20 Ohio 1. "Marriages in this State, contracted by male persons under the age of eighteen, and female persons under fourteen, are invalid, unless confirmed by cohabitation after arriving at those ages respectively. Such a marriage not thus confirmed does not subject a party to punishment for bigamy for contracting a subsequent marriage while the first husband or wife is living." But see note 8 below, where this case is criticised.

7. Walls v. State, 32 Ark. 565. "Under an indictment for bigamy, evidence that the first marriage was within the age of legal consent is no defence, unless it also be shown that it was annulled by a court of competent jurisdiction."

At page 570: "By the common law, if he did not disaffirm the marriage on reaching the age of legal consent, but cohabited with the wife after arriving at such age, it would be an affirmation of the marriage contract. Bishop on Marriage and Divorce, §§ 195-6-7 and § 199; Tyler on Infancy and Coverture, p. 130, etc.; 2 Kent Com. Marg., p. 78." Cal. Civ. Code, §§ 82, 83.

8. Beggs v. State, 55 Ala. 108, 113. "The statute serves the purpose of its enactment when construed as operating merely an enlargement of the age of consent from that fixed by the common law—of twelve in females and fourteen in males—to fourteen in females and seventeen in males. The marriage of persons not of the statutory age is, as was the marriage between persons not of the age of consent at common law, imperfect, becoming perfect only by affirmation when the requisite age is obtained. Until disaffirmance, it is a marriage in fact, and the second marriage of either avoided by a nullity suit,¹ or without suit by conduct.² When the minor comes of age (marriageable age)³ either⁴ party may avoid the marriage by refusing to acknowledge the marriage or to cohabit;⁵ and the same effect would probably follow the same conduct during the minor's minority.⁶

An infant's guardian can have the adult enjoined from cohabiting or interfering with the infant until the latter's majority.⁷

b. Want of Mental Capacity.—Want of mental capacity has been held to render a marriage (1) void—a mere nullity, incapable of ratification;⁸ (2) valid unless avoided—a binding marriage, party is bigamy. The case of Shaffer v. State, 20 Ohio 1, is opposed to this view, and opposed, as we think, to the great weight of authority." See also Walls v. State, 32 Ark. 570; Cal. Civ. Code, § 82; People v. Slack, 15 Mich. 193; Koonce v. Wallace, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 194; Governor v. Rector, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 57, and Stewart on Marriage and Divorce, §§ 58, 150, 151.

1. Stewart on Marriage and Divorce, § 139. "A suit may be instituted for the purpose of declaring a pretended marriage to be void ab initio, or for the purpose of rendering void a voidable marriage; in either case the suit is properly called a nullity suit." See post, part 4.

2. McDeed v. McDeed, 67 Ill. 545; at 550: "There was evidence tending to show that John McDeed was under the age of eighteen at the time of the marriage, and that he never cohabited with M L after his arrival at that age, and that under such circumstances the marriage was made void under the law of Ohio. In view of there being such testimony in the case, the instruction was properly refused."

In The People v. Slack, 15 Mich. 193, at 199: "We are all agreed that if the separation takes place with consent of the party under age, and cohabitation is not resumed after such party attains the age of consent, the marriage is thereby rendered null, while we are not agreed that the party who is of competent age can by his own act annul it."

3. Warwick v. Cooper, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 659. See note 2 above.

4. Shaffer v. State, 20 Ohio 1; note 1, p. 487. But see note 2 above.

5. See note 2 above; post, part 4, § 4, notes.

6. See discussion in People v. Slack, 15 Mich. 193, 200, 203; 1 Bishop M. & D., § 149; McDeed v. McDeed, 67 Ill. 546.

7. Aymar v. Roff, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 49, "where a man was married to an infant under twelve years of age, who immediately declared her ignorance of the nature and consequences of the marriage, and her dissent to it, the court, on a bill filed by her next friend, ordered her to be placed under its protection, as a ward of the court, and forbade all intercourse or correspondence with her by the defendant, under pain of contempt."

"Majority" under the above means full age for marriage. Warwick v. Cooper, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 659.

8. Middleborough v. Rochester, 12 Mass. 363, 365.

"The verdict having established the fact that E. Winslow, to whom the pauper was formerly married, was, at the time of the solemnization, void of understanding, so as to be incapable of making a valid contract, judgment must be entered for the defendants. . . . No authority has been cited to show that such a marriage is valid to any intent or purpose whatever. On the contrary, it is laid down by Blackstone that, like all other contracts, if made with a fool, or person non compos, at the time of it, it is absolutely void. And it is but reasonable that these unhappy persons, who are prohibited by law from making any binding contract for the merest pecuniary trifle, should be protected from the effects of a covenant of so high a nature, which never could be entered into by the other party without some base or sinister design. If it would be hard that the issue of such marriages should be deemed bastards, it would be as much so that human beings without reason, or their families, should be the victims of the artifice of desperate persons who might be willing to speculate on their misfortunes." See also Portsmouth v. Portsmouth, 1 Hagg. Ecc. 355; Browning v. Reane, 2 Phillim. 69; Rawdon v.

which cannot be questioned collaterally¹ or after the death of the party,² unless duly avoided;³ and (3) void unless ratified—an inchoate marriage to which the needed consent may be given if the party acquires capacity and desires to confirm his act.⁴ The last is the best opinion.

The mental capacity necessary to enable a party to marry (or confirm his marriage) is such as renders him capable of understanding the nature of the act and its consequences,⁵ of entering Rawdon, 28 Ala. 565; Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371; Jenkins v. Jenkins, 2 Dana (Ky.) 102; Ward v. Dulaney, 23 Miss. 410; Keyes v. Keyes, 22 N. H. 553; Christy v. Clarke, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 529; Crump v. Morgan, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 91; Foster v. Means, Spear Eq. (S. Car.) 569; Clement v. Matison, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 93.

1. Wiser v. Lockwood, 42 Vt. 720. "At the time the marriage ceremony was performed between Sumner Lockwood and Sarah A. Blodgett he took part in it so far as he was capable of doing so, and such consent as he could give he did give. The ceremony was gone through with according to the laws of the State, and she became his wife and he became her husband as fully as he could become the husband of any woman. There was a marriage in fact, followed by cohabitation between them. This marriage was void in the sense in which the word 'void' is sometimes used. It was not binding upon him, and, perhaps, not upon her; but as to the latter we express no opinion. He, or any relative interested to have it annulled, could have done so, and it would have become void from the beginning, and have been in all things as if the ceremony had never been performed. Nothing was done to annul it, and it remained in as full force at the time of his decease as it ever had been. It remained a marriage in fact, and although void in the sense that it could have been avoided, still it was a marriage, and he and she were in fact husband and wife. This seems to be the plain import of the provisions of the statutes of this State upon this subject.

. . . This construction of the provisions of the statutes is in harmony with the common law upon this subject. Bac. Abr., Idiots and Lunatics D. Smart v. Taylor, 9 Mod. 98; Ex parte Turing, 1 Ves. & B. 140; Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 343."

2. See note 1 above.

3. See note 1 above and §§ 61, 139-149; Stewart on M. & D.

Bell v. Bennett, 73 Ga. 784. "The question of whether a man was of unsound mind, and so incapable of contracting a marriage, may be raised twelve years afterwards in a proceeding by the woman, after his death, to obtain the year's support given by statute."

4. Cole v. Cole, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 57, 63. "A lunatic, on regaining his reason, may affirm a marriage celebrated while he was insane. Bishop, § 189; Campbell v. Mesier, 6 Met. 415; 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 333. And this without any new solemnization. If there is sufficient reason to apply this principle to deeds and other contracts of persons incapable of consent for infancy, there is surely a better and stronger reason to extend it to the contract of marriage."

5. True v. Ranney, 21 N. H. 52. "The consent of the parties is essential to the validity of all contracts; and, as marriage is a contract, it is essential to its validity that the parties should understand the nature of the agreement they are about to enter into. . . . So, in the case of Browning v. Reane, 2 Phill. R. 70, SIR J. NICHOLL, after quoting Blackstone, said: 'Here, then, the law, and the good sense of the law, are clearly laid down; want of reason must, of course, invalidate a contract, and the most important contract of life, the very essence of which is consent. If the incapacity be such that the party be incapable of understanding the nature of the contract itself, and incapable, from mental imbecility, of taking care of his or her own person, or property, such an individual cannot dispose of her person and property by the matrimonial contract any more than by any other contract.' . . . The evidence in the case satisfies us, as we think it cannot fail to satisfy any reasonable man, that the petitioner was so imbecile; that she was entirely unable to understand the nature and obligation of the contract into which it was proposed she should enter. There is into ordinary contracts,¹ or of managing himself, his property, his affairs.² The want of capacity must exist at the time of the marriage;³ paroxysms of insanity before the marriage,⁴ or the development thereof afterwards⁵ will not suffice. The marriage of an insane person during a lucid interval is, in the absence of statute,⁶ valid;⁷ but the burden of proof lies on the party alleging the lucid interval.⁸

The marriage of a party who has not the requisite mental capacity may be confirmed by such party if he becomes competent and then acknowledges the marriage or continues the cohabitation.⁹ If he dies without a lucid interval,¹⁰ or if, after gaining lucidity, he refuses or fails to recognize the marriage as existing,¹¹ the marriage is absolutely void, and no marriage rights attach.¹² every reason to believe that no person so lamentably imbecile as this young woman appears to be, could have the remotest idea of the meaning of a contract for the performance of any of the ordinary duties of life, and still less of a contract of marriage." See also Ward v. Dulaney, 23 Miss. 410.

1. See note 5, p. 490, and Middleborough v. Rochester, 12 Mass. 363; Atkinson v. Medford, 46 Me. 510.

2. See note 5, p. 490.

3. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 66 Ill. 87, 89. "It would be a harsh rule indeed that would permit a man, who has married a woman who later in life becomes insane, to put her away on account of her inexpressibly sad misfortune. It is to the credit of our common humanity that there cannot be found, in all the range of judicial proceedings, a single case that holds that insanity is or could be a cause for divorce." See also Wertz v. Wertz, 43 Iowa 534; Ward v. Dulaney, 23 Miss. 410; Baker v. Baker, 82 Ind. 146.

In State v. Setzer, 97 N. Car. 252, "the question of whether a party to a marriage was an idiot, and so incapable of marrying, cannot be raised in a collateral proceeding, for example, in an action to which the children of such marriage, claiming as heirs, or next of kin, are parties."

4. Hamaker v. Hamaker, 18 Ill. 137; Achey v. Stephens, 8 Ind. 411; Smith v. Smith, 47 Miss. 211, and note 3, above.

5. See note 4, above.

6. Scott v. Paquet, 4 Lower Can. Jur. 149. "A person attacked with delirium tremens may have a lucid interval and may contract a valid marriage during such lucid interval."

7. See above, and Turner v. Myers, 1 Hagg. Const. 414.

8. See INSANITY AND LUNATICS, in this work, and Rawdon v. Rawdon, 28 Ala. 565.

Mere intoxication is not sufficient. Dixon v. Dixon, 22 N. J. Eq. 91. But if it has caused complete unconsciousness or madness, or has been produced by fraud, the marriage is void. Deaf and dumb persons are not idiots in law, and are mentally competent to marry. Harrod v. Harrod, 1 Kay & J. 4.

An inquisition is prima facie evidence of sanity or lunacy, but this evidence may be rebutted. Portsmouth v. Portsmouth, 1 Hagg. Const. 355; Keys v. Norris, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 388.

9. Cole v. Cole, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 57, 63. "But if the proof established the fact that she was of unsound mind at the time of the marriage, there is abundant evidence that she was afterwards restored, at least temporarily, and did not repudiate, but her acts and conduct recognized the validity of her marriage. A lunatic, on regaining his reason, may affirm a marriage celebrated while he was insane. Bishop, § 189; 6 Metc. 415; Campbell v. Mesier, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 333. And this without any new solemnization." See Sabalot v. Populus, 31 La. An. 854; McKenny v. Clark, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 321.

—10. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 2 Dana (Ky.) 102, 103. "A person of unsound mind cannot be married. The performance of a marriage ceremony and continued cohabitation till death, with one in that condition, will not constitute a legal marriage; nor give claim to dower or curtesy in his or her estate." See also Christy v. Clarke, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 529, 543; Foster v. Means, Spear (S. Car.) Eq. 569.

11. See note 9, above.

12. See note 9, above.

A decree of nullity¹ may ordinarily be obtained but is not necessary.²

c. Want of Sexual Capacity.—Want of sexual capacity, or impotence, is no impediment to marriage in the absence of statute or ecclesiastical jurisdiction.³ Under the ecclesiastical law, impotence rendered a marriage voidable,⁴ and in most States there is some statutory provision rendering impotence an impediment to marriage,⁵ or a "cause for divorce."⁶ Under the rule already laid down,⁷ a statute declaring a marriage void for impotence would be held to render it voidable only, as under the ecclesiastical law.⁸ And, likewise, statutes declaring impotence a cause for divorce will be construed to render it a cause for nullity.⁹

Impotence which affects the validity of a marriage is a defect

1. Rawdon v. Rawdon, 28 Ala. 565, 567. "The authorities are also equally clear that if a marriage contract be void, by reason of the insanity of one of the parties, the legal sequence is that no decree of divorce is necessary to restore the parties to their original rights." Ex parte Turney, 1 Ves. & Beames 140.

Yet we cordially approve the sentiment of the distinguished chancellor of New York, that "the fitness and propriety of a judicial decision, pronouncing the nullity of such a marriage, is very apparent, and is equally conducive to good order and decorum, and to the peace and conscience of the party." Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 343; Crump v. Morgan, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 91."

2. See note 1, above.

A decree may be obtained by the party himself if he becomes lucid. Turner v. Myers, 1 Hagg. Const. 414; Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 343. By his committee or guardian if he does not. Wagmire v. Jetmore, 22 Ohio St. 271; Thayer v. Thayer, 9 R. I. 377. The court may pass such a decree in the exercise of its ordinary equity jurisdiction. Wagmire v. Jetmore, 22 Ohio St. 271.

3. Anonymous, 24 N. J. Eq. 19. "A marriage will not be annulled for impotence. The court of chancery is restricted in its jurisdiction, in suits for divorce, to the legislation on the subject, and in suits for nullity of marriage to cases within the inherent and undoubted jurisdiction of equity. This court will, outside of its statutory jurisdiction, annul a contract of marriage only where the contract is void; not where it is voidable merely." At page 23: "Incompetency at the time of marriage to perform the duties which the marriage contract enjoins, will, if it continues and be incurable, render the marriage invalid. Greenstreet v. Cumyns, 2 Phill. 10. But such marriage is voidable only."

4. P. v. S., 37 L. J. Mat. Cas. 80. "The impotence of one of the parties to a marriage does not render the marriage void, but only voidable. The validity of such a marriage can only be questioned in the lifetime of both of the parties, and by the party who suffers an injury from it."

5. See note 9, below.

6. Rev. Laws of Ala., 1876, § 2685; Ark., 1874, § 2195; Colo., 1877, § 917; Del., 1874, p. 475; Fla., 1881, p. 472; Ga., 1878, § 1711; Ill., 1880, p. 422; Ind., 1881, 1032; Kan., 1881, § 4178; Ky., 1881, p. 522; Md., 1878, p. 480, § 12; Mass., 1882, p. 813; Minn., 1878, p. 626; Miss., 1880, § 1155; Mo., 1879, § 2174; Neb., 1881, p. 253; Nev., 1873, § 215; N. H., 1878, p. 432; N. J., 1877, p. 315; N. Car., 1873, p. 364; Ohio, 1880, § 5689; Pa., 1872, p. 507; R. I., 1882, p. 426; Tenn., 1873, § 2448; Va., 1878, p. 851; W. Va., 1879, p. 495; Wis., 1879, § 2356.

7. See §§ 62, 418, Stewart on Marriage and Divorce.

8. See note 4, above.

9. Stewart on Marriage and Divorce, § 235. "Most of the State statutes declare impotence a cause for divorce; such statutes are merely declaratory of the common law, and a divorce suit for impotence is really like a suit for nullity under the ecclesiastical law. Chase v. Chase, 55 Me. 21, 23; J. G. v. H. G., 33 Md. 401; Bascomb v. Bascomb, 25 N. H. 267; LeBarron v. LeBarron, 35 Vt. 365."

rendering the party permanently unfit for sexual intercourse.¹ The rule, as administered by the ecclesiastical courts, may be laid down as follows: If from some incurable² physical³ or psychical⁴

1. Anonymous, Deane & Swabey Ecc. Courts (England, 1855 to 1857), 296. "This is a suit brought by the plaintiff for the purpose of having his marriage with the defendant declared null and void, by reason of her incurable malformation and consequent inability for sexual intercourse. . . .

What is the principle, the foundation of the right to claim a decree pronouncing a marriage void where one of the parties is incapable of consummation? . . .

First, because the great chief purpose of marriage cannot be fulfilled; second, because by such marriage the temptation to evil courses is not removed; third, because in some cases, especially where the defect is on the husband's side, continued cohabitation would be destructive to the health and comfort of one of the parties."

2. J. G. v. H. G., 33 Md. 401, 405.

"Has the alleged impotence of the appellee been proved? A careful examination of the evidence has convinced us that this question must be answered in the affirmative. Without repeating here, at length or in detail, the evidence on this question, it may be stated that the testimony of the examining surgeons establishes the following facts:

"That the physical condition of the appellee at the time of the marriage was that of a very imperfect development of the sexual organs, both externally and internally. These organs were in a rudimentary condition, evincing that their development had ceased and been arrested before the age of puberty. She had never experienced the monthly sickness to which females of mature age are subject; and was without the natural passion or desire incident to woman. The rudimentary condition of her sexual organs and their imperfect development not only rendered conception impossible, but there was on her part an incapacity for vera copula. That is to say, she was not capable of the act of generation in its natural and ordinary meaning, but only of incipient and imperfect coition.

"In giving the results of their examination the surgeons differ somewhat as to the degree or extent of the organic defects; but we have stated the conclusions which appear to us to be established by their testimony. They all concur in saying that the defect is incurable.

"Whatever differences of opinion may have arisen as to the legal definition of impotence, it is well settled that if by reason of malformation or organic defect existing at the time of the marriage there cannot be natural and perfect coition, vera copula, between the parties; and it appears that the defect is permanent and incurable, the case comes within the legal definition of impotence, and is cause for nullity of marriage. Deane v. Aveling, 1 Rob. Ecc. R. 279; Devenbush v. Devenbush, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 554; 1 Bishop on M. & D., §§ 325 to 340."

See also Stagg v. Edgecomb, 3 Swab. & T. 240; Anon., 35 Ala. 226, 229; Ferris v. Ferris, 8 Conn. 166; Kempf v. Kempf, 34 Mo. 211, 213; Bascomb v. Bascomb, 25 N. H. 267; Morrell v. Morrell, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 324; Norton v. Norton, 2 Aiken 188.

3. W— v. H—, 2 Swab. & T. 240. "On a petition for a decree of nullity by reason of malformation of the woman, neither the court nor the parties are concluded by the terms of the report of medical inspectors, but the inspectors themselves and other medical men may be examined. There is no rule as to any particular age constituting a bar to such petitions. Where the result of the medical evidence is that the malformation might possibly, but at great risk to life, and with doubtful success as to the end desired, be removed, the petitioner need not call upon the respondent to submit to an operation, and such a state of things is equivalent to a permanent and irremovable malformation."

See also Ewens v. Ewens, 33 L. J. Mat. Cas. 37; Keith v. Keith, Wright (Ohio) 518.

4. G—S v. —T E, 1 Spink Ecc. Reports (England, 1854) 389. A decree of nullity was given on certificate that "We find no anatomical malformation, but from oral information obtained, during a somewhat lengthened interview, we are decidedly of opinion that there is some physiological defect which has prevented him from completing the act of copulation. As we cannot discover any special cause to defect of one party to a marriage, sexual intercourse¹ with the other party² is impossible in a complete³ and natural manner,⁴ or impracticable without the use of violence,⁵ or without danger to health,⁶ and if the defect existed at the time of the marriage,⁷ unknown to the party complaining,⁸ upon the application of such party to the proper court,⁹ and upon strict proof¹⁰ of facts making out such a case, the marriage will be declared null and void ab initio,¹¹ unless such complainant is insincere in bringing the suit,¹² or has been guilty of unreasonable and unexplained delay,¹³ which a remedy can be applied, we fear this defect will be permanent." See also H v. H, 3 Law R. D. 126; G v. G, 2 L. R. D. 287.

1. Deane v. Aveling, 1 Robb. Ecc. Reports, 279 (England, 1845). Upon following testimony of doctors decree of nullity was pronounced: "I found her external sexual organs perfectly formed and developed, and that the formation necessary for creating sexual desires was also perfect, but upon introducing the finger into the vagina an impediment at once presented itself, and I discovered that the vagina, instead of being, as it ought naturally to have been, of the depth of four inches or thereabouts, was in the said Maria D. of the depth of only one inch and a quarter . . . and the said vagina was so constructed as to form a perfect cul de sac, without any apparent means of communication with any internal organ . . . and of such contracted dimensions as would prevent the insertion of the male organ as in ordinary cases."

2. Anonymous, 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 637; Ousey v. Ousey, L. R., 3 P. & D. 223; H v. C, 1 Swab. & T. 605; Essex v. Essex, 2 How. St. Tr. 785. See note 1, supra.

3. Lewis v. Hayward, 35 L. J. Mat. Cas. 105, and note 1, supra.

4. See notes 2, 3, 4, p. 403; n. 1, supra.

5. G v. G, L. R., 2 Probate & Divorce (England, 1871) 287, 290. "It is unquestionable that these two people, neither of them advanced in life, have slept together for two years and ten months, and that the marriage has never been consummated. . . . The question is whether that cause is of such a character that it can practically be regarded as permanent. . . . Is he by mere brute force to oblige his wife to submit to connection? Every one must reject such an idea. . . . Dr. Farre says: 'As far as I can form an opinion, I believe, as a scientific man, that if these two people should live together again there will be no change for the better.' . . . he is entitled to a decree of nullity."

6. H v. H, 3 L. R. D. 126; Pollard v. Wybourne, 1 Hagg. Ecc. 725; S v. E, 3 Swab. & T. 240; F v. D, 4 Swab. & T. 86; and note 7 above.

7. J G v. H G, 33 Md. 401. "Where, by organic defect of the female, existing at the time of the marriage, there cannot be a natural and perfect coition—vera copula—between the parties, and the defect is permanent and incurable, the case comes within the legal definition of impotence, and will authorize a decree of divorce a vinculo."

See also Brown v. Brown, 1 Hagg. Ecc. 523; Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371; Bascomb v. Bascomb, 25 N. H. 267.

8. Norton v. Seton, 3 Phillim. 147; and note 7 above.

9. Stewart on Marriage & Divorce, § 67. "Such suits were instituted in the ecclesiastical courts in England, and can be entertained in the United States only by such courts as have succeeded to ecclesiastical jurisdiction or as are given jurisdiction by statute." Post, part 4.

10. M v. B, 3 Swab. & T. 550; A v. J, 37 L. J. Mat. Cas. 7; T v. D, 35 L. J. Mat. Cas. 51; Newell v. Newell, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 25; Lorenz v. Lorenz, 93 Ill. 376.

11. Post, part 4, § 8.

12. Lorenz v. Lorenz, 93 Ill. 377. "When a wife seeking a divorce on the ground of the impotency of her husband admits that she lived with him for ten years, during all which time he was impotent, her living with him and making no complaint is a circumstance that may be considered as tending to show her story is a fabrication."

See also Cuno v. Cuno, 2 L. R. D. 614; S v. A, L. R., 3 P. D. 72.

13. See note 12 above and Lewis v.

or is barred by limitations;¹ but the decree must be granted, if at all, during the lifetime of both parties.²

Impotence is sometimes difficult of proof, but evidence on this subject is not objectionable on account of indelicacy.³ Expert medical men usually testify as to the condition of the organs of the parties;⁴ and the court, independently of statute,⁵ can compel the defendant to submit to an examination,⁶ and issue an attachment to prevent his or her removal from its jurisdiction.⁷

The question is one of copulation, and not one of reproduction;⁸ but if conception has resulted from the intercourse of the parties, no matter how obtained, the question of impotence cannot be raised.⁹

This question will receive further treatment under IV. NULLITY SUITS.

Hayward, 35 L. J. Mat. Cas. 51; Castleden v. Castleden, 9 H. L. Cas. 186; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 45 L. J. D. Div. 89.

1. Kaiser v. Kaiser, 23 N. Y. Sup. 602; for example of such a statute see Cal. Civ. Code, § 83.

2. See case of P— v. S—, 37 L. J. Mat. Cas. 80, quoted in note 4, p. 492.

3. LORD STOWELL, in Briggs v. Morgan, 3 Phillim. 325, said: "It has been said that the means resorted to for proof are offensive to natural modesty, but nature has provided no other means and we must be under the necessity of saying that all relief shall be denied, or of applying the means within our power. The court must not sacrifice justice to notions of delicacy of its own." See also Lebarron v. Lebarron, 35 Vt. 365.

4. See notes 3, 4, p. 493, and note 1, p. 494 above, and T— v. M—, 35 L. J. Mat. Cas. 10; L. R., 1 P. D. 31.

5. Lebarron v. Lebarron, 35 Vt. 365. "Impotence being made by our statute a cause for nullifying a marriage, and the legislature having vested the supreme court with jurisdiction of the subject, the court have power to compel the defendant to submit to a medical examination, though the statute makes no provision for it."

See also Briggs v. Morgan, 3 Phillim. 325; T— v. M—, 35 L. J. Mat. Cas. 10; Anon. 35 Ala. 226; Shafto v. Shafto, 28 N. J. Eq. 34.

6. Briggs v. Morgan, 3 Phillim. 325; T— v. M—, 35 L. J. Mat. Cas. 10; Anon. 35 Ala. 226; Shafto v. Shafto, 28 N. J. Eq. 34; Devenbagh v. Devenbagh, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 554 and note 5 above.

7. B— v. L—, 38 L. J. Mat. Cas. 35 (England, 1869).

"In a suit for nullity of marriage by reason of malformation the respondent refused to comply with the order for inspection. The court declined to issue an attachment against her until after the hearing, but intimated that the attachment would issue forthwith if she attempted to remove out of the jurisdiction."

The only ground for refusal seems to be the defendant's old age at the time of marriage. Shafto v. Shafto, 28 N. J. Eq. 34.

8. In Deane v. Aveling, 1 Rob. Ecc. 279, at 296: "Mere incapability, however, of conception is not a sufficient ground whereon to found a decree of nullity, and alone so clearly insufficient, that it would be a waste of time to discuss an admitted point. The only question is, whether the lady is or is not capable of sexual intercourse, or, if at present incapable, whether that incapacity can be removed."

Neither a ruptured hymen in the woman (T— v. D—, L. R., 1 P. & D. 127; F— v. D—, 4 Swab. & T. 86) nor apparently fully developed organs in the man (M— v. H—, 3 Swab. & T. 517) is proof of true copulation; nor is an unruptured hymen inconsistent with the fact of consummation. (L— v. H—, 4 Swab. & T. 115.)

Caton v. Caton, 12 Cent. Rep. 45 District of Columbia. "A woman is 'matrimonially incapacitated' within the meaning of D. C. Rev. Stat. 738, when she is at time of marriage pregnant by a person other than her husband."

9. Lewis v. Hayward, 35 L. J. Mat. Cas. 105, at 107. "If a miscarriage actually took place, whatever appearances the person of the appellant may have exhibited, and however imperfect

d. Affinity and Consanguinity.—The marriage of a man and woman related by blood or by marriage within certain named degrees may be under the criminal law incest,¹ under the ecclesiastical law voidable,² or by express statute void.³ As affecting the capacity of parties to marry, it is dependent on statute;⁴ but as under the ecclesiastical law it rendered marriages simply voidable by a nullity suit,⁵ statutes declaring marriages "void" for consanthe intercourse may have been, there is of course an end of the appellant's case.

See §§ 62 to 67 in Stewart on Marriage and Divorce for a further discussion of the subject.

1. Stewart on Marriage and Divorce, § 158. "The marriage of parties related within the prohibited degrees may render them liable to punishment, the offence being called incest." In The State v. Schauhurst, 34 Iowa 548, "Revision—Sections 4367, 4368, forbid the intermarriage of a brother with a sister, and section 4369 declares that all persons within the degrees of consanguinity, in which marriages are prohibited, who shall intermarry with or carnally know each other shall be deemed guilty of incest, and punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding ten years. Crimes in this State are such as are prescribed by statute. It is entirely competent for the legislature, upon declaring an act to be a crime, to designate it by any term that may be chosen for that purpose. In this case, the statute forbids the intermarriage of persons within certain degrees. The crime thus recognized by the statute is not inappropriately termed incest. The act denominated in common language incest is also within the provisions of the statute." Desty Crim. L., § 58; U. S. v. Hiler, 1 Morris 330.

2. Harrison v. Harrison, 22 Md. 468. "The act of 1777, ch. 12, § 1, enacts that if any person within this State shall hereafter marry with any person related within any of the degrees of kindred or affinity expressed in the following table such marriage shall be void."

BOWIE, C. J., on page 483. "The canon and civil law regulating marriages was a part of the common law administered by ecclesiastical and civil tribunals in England, and transplanted to the colonies by our ancestors, without introducing corresponding courts to enforce them. The act in question, passed in the first year of the State government, was declaratory of the canon as a part of the common law, prohibiting marriages between persons related in such degrees of consanguinity and affinity as previously prevented their lawfully joining in matrimony. The disabilities enumerated are all canonical disabilities, and not those known to the law as civil disabilities. Canonical disabilities were such as rendered the marriage voidable and not void. They require the judgment of an ecclesiastical court, during the lives of the parties, to make them effective as causes of a divorce. On the other hand civil disabilities, such as arose 'pro defectu consensu,' for want of a capacity to contract, or physical infirmity, ipso facto avoided the marriage without the action of the courts. When the legislature declared by statute that persons laboring under canonical disabilities should not marry under certain penalties, but such marriages should be void and gave jurisdiction to the general court to hear and determine upon such marriages, it is to be supposed they designed to put persons laboring under such disabilities in the same position they were at common law, viz: they should be void when established by the judgment of a court.

When a marriage is declared to be void, it does not necessarily mean void 'ab initio.' Reason and justice would imply it was void from the time its nullity should be pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction." See also Hodkins v. McNeil, 9 U. Canada Chan. 305; Bonham v. Badgley, 7 Ill. 622; Parker's Estate, 44 Pa. St. 309; Com. v. Perryman, 2 Leigh (Va.) 717.

3. For example see Cal. Civ. Code, § 59; Ky. G. S. 1881, p. 514, § 1; Mass. P. S. 1882, p. 809, § 7; N. Y. R. S. 1882, p. 2332, § 3.

4. Cal. Civ. Code, § 59; Ind. R. S. 1881, § 5324; La. Civ. Code 1875, §§ 94, 95; Md. R. C. 1878, art. 51, §§ 1, 2, 8; R. S. N. J. 1877, p. 631, § 1, and see case in 34 Iowa quoted in note 1 above.

5. Post, part 4.

guinity or affinity will, under the rule already discussed,¹ be construed to mean "voidable" unless such construction is expressly negated by the terms of the statute.²

This disability is based remotely on the laws (so called) of Moses,³ directly on statute 32 Hen. VIII, ch. 38, and similar statutes enacted in this country, some details as to which are given in the notes.⁴

Marriages defective for this cause are, as a general rule, valid unless duly avoided by a nullity suit.⁵

e. Slavery.—A slave cannot marry (1) because he cannot make a valid contract;⁶ (2) because the duties of a slave are inconsistent with those of a husband or a wife;⁷ (3) because a slave is

1. See note 2, p. 496, last part. It must be borne in mind that marriage is favored by law, and therefore, unless by express words a statute goes to the validity of a marriage, i. e., unless there are words of nullity, it will be held to affect its legality only. Stewart on Marriage and Divorce, § 53, ante, part 2. § 2.

2. See note 2, p. 496, especially the latter part.

3. The Bible, Lev., ch. 18.

4. The statute of 32 Hen. VIII, ch. 38, confines the incapacity to all related in the ascending or descending line, and to collaterals including the third degree, civil reckoning (all nearer than first cousins), and by construction applies whether the relationship be by blood or marriage (Butler v. Gastrill, Gilb. Ch. 156), whether by whole blood or half blood (Reg. v. Brighton, 1 Best & Smith 447), whether legitimate or not (Reg. v. Chadwick, 11 Q. B. 173). Thus a man cannot marry his deceased wife's sister (Brook v. Brook, 9 H. L. Cas. 193), nor a woman her deceased husband's brother (Aughtie v. Aughtie, 1 Phillim. 201). Nowhere in this country is marriage with a deceased wife's sister invalid except in Virginia. Com. v. Perryman, 2 Leigh (Va.) 717; Kelly v. Scott, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 479. Nor can a man marry his deceased wife's sister's daughter (Worthy v. Watkinson, 2 Lev. 254), or wife's mother's sister (Butler v. Gastrill, Gilb. Ch. 156), though he may marry the widow of his great uncle (Harrison v. Burwell, Vaughan 206), or his brother's wife's sister (1 Bish. M. & D., § 314).

5. See note 2, p. 496, and Walter's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 302.

6. In Timmins v. Lacy, 30 Tex. 115, 136: "By the civil law slaves could not take by purchase or descent. They had no heirs, and therefore could make no will. They were not entitled to the rights and considerations of matrimony, and therefore had no relief in case of adultery. Nor were they proper objects of cognation or affinity, but of quasi cognation only. . . . The same disability. I apprehend, will apply to the case of slaves with us. . . . Cunningham v. Cunningham, 1 Har. & McH. (Md.) 561; Bynum v. Bostick, 4 De S. 266; Marbletown v. Kingston, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; 20 How. St. Tr. 27, show very conclusively that the permitted cohabitation existing formerly among our slave population did not partake of lawful marriage. If we could say the legal rights of husband and wife, parent and child, spring from these connections, it must also be held that corresponding disabilities flow from them, many of which are of a severely penal character, affecting almost this entire portion of our population."

Hall v. United States, 92 U. S. 27, 30. "It was an inflexible rule of the law of African slavery, wherever it existed, that the slave was incapable of entering into any contract, not excepting the contract of marriage. Stephens on West Ind. Slav. 58; Hall v. Millin, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 190; Gregg v. Thompson, 2 Mill. (S. Car.) 331; Jenkins v. Brown, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 299; Jackson v. Lurvey, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 397; Emerson v. Howland, 1 Mason (U. S.) 45; Bland v. Dowling, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 27."

7. Malinda v. Gardner, 24 Ala. 719, 724. "The father and mother were slaves, and persons in that condition are incapable of contracting marriage, because that relation brings with it certain duties and rights, with reference to which it is supposed to be entered into. But the duties and rights which are property.¹ So the marriage of a slave is a mere nullity,² though it is allowed a certain moral effect.³ Such a marriage may be valid by statute,⁴ or in a State which will not recognize slavery.⁵ And such a marriage may be confirmed after emancipation.⁶ In most States there are statutes relating to this subject,⁷ which was an important one twenty years ago, but is now no longer important except as history.

f. Race.—In many States the marriage of persons of different race, as whites and negroes, or whites and Indians,⁸ is forbidden and made a crime (miscegenation),⁹ and the statute may also render such marriages void.¹⁰ Under the rule already discussed,¹¹ such marriages will be deemed illegal only, unless expressly declared to be void.¹² Such statutes are constitutional and do not conflict with the fourteenth amendment, or Civil Rights bill.¹³ Owing to the great intermingling of the race, it is often difficult to determine whether a person is a white or a negro; this generally depends on the term of the statute.¹⁴ deemed essential to this contract are necessarily incompatible with the nature of slavery."

1. Howard v. Howard, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 235, 236. "A slave, being property, has not the legal capacity to make a contract, and is not entitled to the rights or subjected to the liabilities incident thereto."

2. See notes 6, 7, p. 497; note 1, supra; Andrews v. Page, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 653.

3. Stikes v. Swanson, 44 Ala. 633; Cantelon v. Hood, 56 Ala. 519; Williams v. State, 33 Ga. Supp. 85; Jones v. Jones, 45 Md. 144; Estill v. Rogers, 1 Bush (Ky.) 62; Johnson v. Johnson, 45 Mo. 595; State v. Adams, 65 N. Car. 537.

4. Markelton v. Kingston, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; Oliver v. Sole, Min. 29, 30 note.

5. See Minor v. Jones, 2 Redf. (N. Y.) 289. This is on the principle that "a court may refuse to recognize foreign marriages or impediments to marriage based on principles inconsistent with the fundamental law of the forum." Stewart on M. & D., § 121.

6. Stikes v. Swanson, 44 Ala. 633; McReynolds v. State, 5 Cold. (Tenn.) 18.

7. See for example Ark. Dig. 1874, § 4191; Fla. Dig. 1881, p. 409; Ga. Code, 1873, § 1667; Mo. R. S., 1879, § 3275; Tenn. R. S., 1871, § 2447.

8. Capacity of Parties—Race.—Ala. Code, 1876, § 4189; Cal. Civ. Code, 1881, § 60; Colo., 1877, § 1736; Md. R. C., 1878, art. 72, § 106; Me. R. S., 1871, p. 483, § 2, p. 487, § 1.

9. Stewart on M. & D., § 157. "The intermarriage of a man and woman of different races, generally of white and black, may be punishable by statute, the offence being called miscegenation. Desty Crim. L., § 59; Hoover v. State, 59 Ala. 57; Fraser v. State, 3 Tex. App. 263."

10. Succession of Minvielle, 15 La. Ann. 342; Hoover v. State, 59 Ala. 57; Scott v. State, 39 Ga. 321; Bailey v. Fiske, 34 Me. 77; Medway v. Needham, 16 Mass. 157; Kinney v. Com., 30 Gratt. (Va.) 858; State v. Kennedy, 76 N. Car. 251; State v. Hooper, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 201; State v. Brady, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 74.

11. See II, § 8, note 1, p. 498, and § 53 of Stewart on M. & D.

12. See note 11, above. This rule does not seem to have been expressly recognized in these cases, and is disregarded in Carter v. Montgomery, 2 Tenn. Ch. 216.

13. Fraser v. State, 3 Tex. App. 263; Green v. State, 58 Ala. 190; and see Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. (U. S.) 393; Ex rel. Hobbs, 1 Woods (U. S.) 537; State v. Gibson, 36 Ind. 389; Francois v. State, 9 Tex. App. 144; Kinney v. Com., 30 Gratt. (Va.) 858.

14. A mulatto is not usually a negro (Felix v. State, 18 Ala. 720), but is the child of a negro and a white person. (Medway v. Natick, 7 Mass. 88), not the child of a mulatto and a white (same case). And where a negro must have one-fourth negro blood, one drop less will make him white (McPherson v. Com., 28 Gratt. (Va.) 939);

g. Former Marriage.—The object of this section is to discuss the right and capacity of a person who has been married to marry during the lifetime of his or her spouse—a right and capacity which can exist only when there has been a divorce. The word “divorce” is very commonly used to include decrees of nullity; properly, a divorce is a complete or partial dissolution, and can be had only when there has been a valid marriage; an invalid marriage cannot be dissolved, but can be decreed null and void. (See this title, part 4).

The Marriage of a Person Already Married, Considered Civilly and Criminally.—A man cannot have at the same time two wives, or a woman two husbands; and one who has married once cannot marry again unless such first marriage was void,¹ or voidable and has been duly avoided;² or if valid, has been dissolved by death³ or divorce. Such a second marriage is both invalid and illegal. (See title DIVORCE, vol. 5, 745.)

Considered Civilly.—If a second marriage is had, it is not voidable merely,⁴ even where a statute provides that it may be debut a party with one-eighth (Bailey v. Fiske, 34 Me. 77), and even with one-sixteenth, negro blood has been held a negro (State v. Chavers, 5 Jones (N. Car.) 11), so a descendant of a negro in the fourth generation (State v. Watters, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 455).

1. Reeves v. Reeves, 54 Ill. 332. “The marriage of a woman with a man whose wife by a former marriage is still living, undivorced, is void, and her subsequent marriage with another is valid although her husband by such void marriage is living.” See Shook’s Est., 4 Brewst. 305; Bruce v. Burke, 2 Add. Ecc. R. 471.

2. For example, a woman, on discovering she had married an impotent, could not, without having such marriage decreed void, marry anyone else. See Smith v. Morehead, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 360. Stewart Mar. & Div., §§ 79, 159.

3. Stewart on Mar. & Div., § 167. “When one of the parties to a marriage is dead, the other cannot be her husband or his wife; the marriage is absolutely dissolved, and the survivor is a widow or widower.”

Presumption of Death.—In most of the States statutes provide that where a party has been absent unheard of, or beyond seas, for five or seven years, the other party shall not be punishable for marrying again (Barber v. State, 50 Md. 161, 167; Eubanks v. Banks, 34 Ga. 407; State v. Patterson, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 346, 350); but such statutes do not apply to cases where the party marries a second time knowing the absent party is alive (Reg. v. Briggs, 7 Cox (C. C.) 175, 177; Com. v. Johnson, 10 Allen (Mass.) 196, 198; 1 Bish. M. & D., § 596; Stewart M. & D., § 161); nor do they render the second marriage valid if the first really existed still (Glass v. Glass, 114 Mass. 563); though in some States the statutes expressly state that the second marriage must be declared void and thus made voidable simply (White v. Lowe, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 376, 379. See Spicer v. Spicer, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 112, 123, 124; People v. Vodes, 9 Alb. L. J. 5, 25; post, pt. 4, § 5). In general life is presumed to continue for seven years after the party has disappeared, but if a party supposing his wife dead, marries within seven years, and the wife is never heard of afterwards, it will generally be presumed not only that she is dead, but that she died before he married again (Kelly v. Drew, 12 Allen (Mass.) 107, 110; Canady v. George, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 103, 107; post, pt. 3, § 3).

4. Martin v. Martin, 22 Ala. 86, 101. “And first, as to the marriage; though a man marries never so often, he can have but one lawful wife living. So long as she is living, and the marriage bond remains in full force, all his subsequent marriages, whether meretricious, or founded in mistake and at the time supposed to be lawful, are utterly null and void. No decree of divorce is necessary to annul such subsequent marriage, for it never had any legal existence.

creed null,¹ but no decree is necessary,² and it is void ab initio.³ The effect of statutes which provide that under certain circumstances a bona fide second marriage shall be void only from the time that it is so decreed is unsettled; but courts will avoid, if possible, a construction which would give a person two spouses at the same time.⁴ Nor, in general, does the innocence of one of the parties make the second marriage any the less void,⁵ though by the Spanish⁶ and civil⁷ law a woman who is deceived into a marriage with a married man has the rights of a wife, and her children are legitimate;⁸ and even in other courts she has been allowed alimony.⁹ In one case, A, who had married B, Such was clearly the common law." Heffner v. Heffner, 23 Pa. St. 104; Higgins v. Breene, 9 Mo. 497; Ponder v. Graham, 4 Fla. 23, 30.

1. Drummond v. Irish, 52 Iowa 41. "A marriage between parties, one of whom has a husband or wife living, is absolutely void, and no rights of the other party are affected thereby. This is not altered by the fact that the statute provides for actions to annul such marriages." But see Jones v. Zoller, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 280.

2. See note 4, p. 499, and Blossom v. Barrett, 37 N. Y. 434.

3. See note 4, p. 499, and Miles v. Chilton, 1 Rob. Ec. 684; Bird v. Bird, 1 Lee 621; Bayard v. Morphew, 2 Phillim. 321; Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 105; Tefft v. Tefft, 35 Ind. 44; Janes v. Janes, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 141; Strode v. Strode, 3 Bush (Ky.) 227; Summerlin v. Livingston, 15 La. An. 519; Harrison v. Lincoln, 48 Me. 205; Glass v. Glass, 114 Mass. 563; Emerson v. Shaw, 56 N. H. 418; Zule v. Zule, 1 N. J. Eq. 96; Blossom v. Barrett, 37 N. Y. 434; Appleton v. Warner, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 270; Spicer v. Spicer, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 112; Heffner v. Heffner, 23 Pa., St. 104; Sellars v. Davis, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 503; Smith v. Smith, 1 Tex. 621; State v. Goodrich, 14 W. Va. 834. But see Eubanks v. Banks, 34 Ga. 407; Teter v. Teter, 88 Ind. 404.

4. See 3 Rev. Stat. N. Y. 1882, p. 2332, § 6; Spicer v. Spicer, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 112; Hiram v. Pierce, 45 Me. 367.

In Glass v. Glass, 114 Mass. 563, 565, "By the Gen. Stat., ch. 106, § 30, when a marriage is dissolved on account of a prior marriage of either party, and it appears that the second marriage was contracted in good faith, and with the full belief of the parties that the former husband or wife was dead, that fact shall be stated in the decree of divorce or nullity; and the issue of the second marriage, born or begotten before the commencement of the suit, shall be deemed to be the legitimate issue of the parent capable of contracting the marriage." And People v. Oades, 9 Alb. L. J. 5, 25; Wilson v. Wilson, L. R., 1 Eq. 247.

5. In Glass v. Glass, 114 Mass. 563, at 566, "It must be assumed upon the report of this case that the second marriage was contracted by both parties in good faith, and with the full belief that the respondent's former husband was dead. . . . A decree of nullity must therefore be entered." See U. S. v. Hays, 30 Fed. Rep. 710.

6. Lee v. Smith, 18 Tex. 141. "In Spanish Law, the consort who enters into matrimony in ignorance that her husband has a partner or wife living (or of other impediment to the marriage) is in law not only innocent of crime, but has all the rights, incidents and privileges pertaining to lawful marriage; and these are continued as long as there is ignorance of the former or other impediment to the second marriage."

7. Succession of Navarro, 24 La. An. 298.

8. In Lee v. Smith, 18 Tex. 141, at 145: "But the second marriage of Smith with Maria Jesusa Delgado was not null and void in law, with reference either to the wife or the children of that marriage." See also Harrington v. Sarfield, 30 La. An. 1297; Hiram v. Pierce, 45 Me. 367; Gaines v. New Orleans, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 642; Gaines v. Henner, 24 How. (U. S.) 553.

9. Strode v. Strode, 3 Bush (Ky.) 227, 228. "Appellant avers, in his answer, that when he married appellee, he had a wife living in the State of Texas, from whom he had not been divorced. This fact he does not allege he ever disclosed to her, or that she knew it, or had the means of being informed married C at eleven o'clock the same day that he was divorced from B, the divorce from B not having been granted until 2 o'clock, but A and C having acted in good faith, the marriage was held valid.¹

Considered Criminally.—When a party who is already married goes through the form of,² or contracts,³ a second marriage, he or she, or both parties,⁴ may be guilty of the crime of bigamy or polygamy.⁵ This is a purely statutory crime and does not exist at common law.⁶ Whether the English statute of 1604 is in force in the United States is doubtful; in Maryland it is,⁷ but not in Pennsylvania.⁸ The two marriages must be strictly on the subject. He had concealed his marriage in Texas from her; she, therefore, believed appellant to be her lawful husband when she married him. She was first deceived and then abandoned by him. . . . But independent of the case of Donnelly v. Donnelly, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 113, it has been held in England, that where the marriage was void, and the woman was of good character and blameless in the affair, she would be allowed a sum in solido nomine expensarum (Bish. on Mar. & Div., note to § 563); and it has been held in some of the States that alimony will be granted on a divorce from the bond of matrimony as well as from bed and board; and this court has heretofore sanctioned allowances for alimony upon the dissolution of the marriage relations where the woman has been blameless; and the weight of authority is to that effect." See Miles v. Chilton, 1 Rob. Ec. 684. But see Bird v. Bird, 1 Lee 627; Appleton v. Warner, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 270.

1. Merriam v. Wolcott, 61 How. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 377.

2. Reg. v. Brown, 1 Car. & K. 144; 47 Eng. C. L. 143; People v. Brown, 34 Mich. 339.

Hayes v. People, 25 N. Y. 390. "To support an indictment for bigamy, it is a sufficient marriage in fact that the parties agree to be husband and wife, and cohabit and recognize each other as such. It is immaterial whether a person who pretended to solemnize the contract was or was not a clergyman or magistrate, or that either party was deceived by his false representation of that character. It is no answer for the accused, that having a wife living, and so incapable of a valid marriage, he did not intend or consent to a marriage in fact, but obtained the consent of the woman by fraudulently imposing upon her the form of marriage by a pretended clergyman. A married man, it seems, imagining himself to effect mere seduction, may blunder into bigamy."

3. Robinson v. Com., 6 Bush (Ky.) 309, and note 2 above.

4. As a joint offence, consult Baumer v. State, 49 Ind. 544, 548; Delany v. People, 10 Mich. 241, 243.

5. Reynolds v. U. S., 98 U. S. 145, 146. "This is an indictment found in the district court for the third judicial district of the territory of Utah, charging George Reynolds with bigamy, in violation of section 5352 of the Revised Statutes, which, omitting its exceptions, is as follows: 'Every person having a husband or wife living, who marries another, whether married or single, in a territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, is guilty of bigamy, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500, and by imprisonment for a term of not more than five years.' " 4 Black. Com. 164; 1 Russ. Cr. (9th ed.) 268; 2 Whart. Crim. L. (8th ed.), § 1682; Desty Crim. L., § 89.

6. Barber v. State, 50 Md. 161, 166. "Bigamy was not a felony at the common law; indeed, according to that law it was not a crime of which the ordinary common law tribunals took cognizance at all. It was originally considered as of ecclesiastical cognizance exclusively." And Reynolds v. U. S., 98 U. S. 145.

7. Barber v. State, 50 Md. 161, 170. "We are of opinion, therefore, that the Stat. 1 Jac. 1, ch. 11, is still in force in this State, modified by the act of 1809, as to the punishment for the offence but not as to the grade of the crime."

8. Report of Judges, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 549, 622, 623.

proved.¹ The first must be valid² or voidable and not avoided;³ if it is void, there can be no bigamy.⁴ The second need not be otherwise valid, a mere contract⁵ or form of marriage being sufficient;⁶ so that a second marriage has been held to constitute bigamy, though void for consanguinity.⁷ The place where the first marriage took place is immaterial;⁸ but the second marriage must, in the absence of special statutory provision,⁹ have taken place in the State where the prosecution is instituted.¹⁰ Ignorance of the fact of the other's marriage may excuse the unmarried party;¹¹ but ignorance of law excuses no one;¹² so that a

1. Langtry v. State, 30 Ala. 536. In Morris v. Miller, 4 Burr. 2057, LORD MANSFIELD, in delivering the opinion of the court in a case of crim. con., said: "It shall not depend upon the mere reputation of a marriage which arises from the conduct or declarations of the plaintiff himself." He adds: "In prosecutions for bigamy, a marriage in fact must be proved." To the same effect are Fenton v. Reed, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 52; Com. v. Littlejohn, 15 Mass. 163; Bishop on Mar. & Div., § 324.

On the other hand, the following authorities are directly in point to show that marriage, even in prosecutions for bigamy, may be proved by cohabitation and the confessions of the party; but that the testimony, to justify a conviction, must be clear, strong and convincing. See able opinion by C. J. GIBSON in Forney v. Hallacher, 8 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 159; Com. v. Murtagh, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 272; Ham's Case, 11 Me. 391; Cayford's Case, 7 Greenl. (Me.) 57; State v. Hilton, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 434; Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (3rd Amer. ed.), 311."

2. Beggs v. State, 55 Ala. 108, 111. "The indispensable evidence to support a prosecution for bigamy is that the defendant had 'a former wife or husband living;' a subsisting, valid prior marriage, subjecting to its duties and conferring its rights. If the first marriage is void the offence has not been committed. 3 Whart. Am. Cr. Law, § 2628; 3 Greenl. Ev., § 208. But if it is merely voidable, contracted under disabilities or impediments, which render it capable of confirmation or avoidance as the party may elect, it is a marriage in fact until avoided, and a second marriage while it remains a marriage in fact is criminal. 3 Whart. Am. Cr. Law, § 2628; 1 East 466;" Breakey v. Breakey, 2 U. C. Q. B. 349, 353.

3. See above note and Rex v. Jacobs,

1 Moody (C. C.) 140; Walls v. State, 32 Ark. 565, 570; State v. Barefoot, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 209, 221.

4. See note 2 above and Reg. v. Chadiorick, 11 Q. B. 205, 235; 63 Eng. C. L. 204, 235.

5. See notes 2 and 3, p. 501.

6. See notes 2 and 3, p. 501, and Reg. v. Brown, 1 Car. & K. 144; Reg. v. Person, 5 Car. & P. 412; People v. Brown, 34 Mich. 339; 1 Am. Cr. R. 72; Carmichael v. State, 12 Ohio St. 553.

7. Reg. v. Brown, 1 Car. & K. 144. "A, a married woman, in the lifetime of her husband, married B, who was a widower, B having been the husband of A's deceased sister. Held, that this was bigamy in A, and that the circumstance that the marriage of A and B would have been wholly void under the Stat. 5 & 6 Will. IV, ch. 54, § 2, even if A had been an unmarried person, made no difference."

8. Beggs v. State, 55 Ala. 108, at 111, quoted in note 2 above: "This offence is committed without regard to the place of the former marriage, whether within or without the State."

9. Beggs v. State, 55 Ala. 108, at 110: "It results that the offence is committed only at the place of the second marriage; and there alone—in the very county—is the offence indictable and punishable. 2 Bish. Cr. Law, § 892; People v. Mosher, 2 Park Cr. Cas. 195; U. S. v. Jernegan, 4 Cranch (C. C.) 1. Subsequent cohabitation in another jurisdiction than that of the marriage may be an offence but it is not bigamy." Reg. v. Topping, Dears 647; Walls v. State, 32 Ark. 565; Com. v. Bradley, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 553; State v. Palmer, 18 Vt. 570.

10. See note 9 above and Com. v. Lane, 113 Mass. 458, 461.

11. Reg. v. Brown, 1 Car. & K. 144; State v. Goodenow, 65 Me. 30, 33.

12. State v. Goodenow, 65 Me. 30, 33.

second marriage contracted in good faith, and supposed to be lawful, may be sufficient to constitute bigamy.¹

When There Has Been a Decree of Nullity.—A decree of nullity may be passed in a case where the marriage is void or only voidable. In the case of a void marriage, the parties not being thereby incapacitated for marriage, they may marry again even before and without a decree of nullity.² In the case of a voidable marriage, it being void ab initio if duly avoided, the parties may marry again after a decree of nullity.³ But a marriage where there has been a voidable marriage which has not been avoided is both invalid⁴ and bigamous.⁵

When There Has Been a Decree Nisi or Which Has Been Appealed from.—A decree nisi does not dissolve a marriage and the parties cannot marry again until it has been made absolute.⁶ If there has been any appeal from a decree of divorce and the appeal is sustained, an intervening marriage of either party would be void.⁷ Whether a decree nisi, or a decree of a lower court subject to appeal, would be a defence in a prosecution for bigamy has not been decided; probably it would not.

When There Has Been an Absolute Divorce.—An absolute divorce, or a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, dissolves the relation of husband and wife, and either party may marry again,⁸ except in "Ignorance of the law excuses no one, etc." See Hoover v. State, 59 Ala. 57; Smith v. State, 13 Ark. 696; see note 1 below.

1. State v. Goodenow, 65 Me. 30. "A man and woman jointly indicted for adultery, the female defendant having a lawful husband alive, cannot set up in defence of the indictment that such husband had been married again, and that on that account they supposed they could lawfully intermarry; and that they were so advised by the magistrate who married them, they relying upon the opinion of the magistrate in good faith."

2. When There Has Been a Decree of Nullity.—Reeves v. Reeves, 54 Ill. 332. "The marriage of a woman with a man whose wife by a former marriage is still living, undivorced, is void, and her subsequent marriage with another is valid, although her husband by such void marriage is living." See Shook v. Shook, 4 Brewst. (Pa.) 305.

3. See n. 2, p. 502 above, and Thompson v. Thompson, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 131.

4. See n. 2, p. 502 above, and Smith v. Morehead, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 360; Stewart Mar. & Div., §§ 79-159.

5. See n. 2, p. 502 above, and Rex v. Jacobs, 1 Moo. (C. C.) 140; Walls v. State, 32 Ark. 565; State v. Barefoot, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 209, 221.

6. Where There Has Been a Decree Nisi or Which Has Been Appealed from.—Moors v. Moors, 121 Mass. 232. "A decree of divorce nisi under the Stat. of 1867, ch. 222, was granted, which by its terms was to be made absolute on notice, after six months' publication, 'unless sufficient cause to the contrary appear.' Within the six months the libellant, believing that he had obtained a divorce and was at liberty to marry again, married another woman and had sexual intercourse with her. Held, that the second marriage was illegal and void, and that the libellant was not entitled to have the decree of divorce made absolute." Noonan v. Villars, L. R., 2 Exch. Div. 359, 361; Cook v. Cook, 144 Mass. 163. "A marriage solemnized on the day before the entry of a decree absolute on a decree nisi, in favor of one of the parties, is void."

7. See note 6 above, and Allen v. MacClellan, 12 Pa. St. 328, 332.

8. Clarke v. Lott, 11 Ill. 105, 114. "The divorce is absolute, the marriage is dissolved and all rights and obligations dependent on the existence of the marriage relation are extinguished. The parties are no longer husband and wife but are permitted to marry at pleasure." Whitsell v. Mills, 6 Ind. 229, 230; Harding v. Alden, 9 Me. 149;

the case of a special prohibition which is discussed below. It is doubtful whether formerly in England a person could marry again after an absolute parliamentary divorce.¹ (See title DIVORCE, vol. 5, 745).

When There Has Been a Limited Divorce.—A limited divorce, or a divorce a mensa et thoro, does not dissolve the relation of husband and wife, and neither party can marry again.² But such second marriage, though invalid, does not constitute bigamy.³ At one time, it seems, a party could marry again after a divorce a mensa et thoro.⁴

When, Accompanying the Divorce, There Has Been a Prohibition Against Another Marriage.—A prohibition against the marriage after divorce of (generally only) the guilty party for a certain time, or except on certain conditions, is sometimes contained in a statute, as in New York,⁵ and is sometimes entered by a court as a part of the decree of divorce under the authority of a statute, as in Maryland.⁶ In either case the effect would be the same. But no such prohibition by a court is valid unless it is authorized by a statute,⁷ and unless the party against whom it is directed has been duly summoned or has appeared.⁸ A statute containing such a prohibition may be applied to existing marriages and causes of divorce,⁹ but perhaps a statute passed after a divorce, relieving a party of his incapacity, would be void.¹⁰ In some States the court may annul the decree of prohibition and allow the party to marry after the lapse of a certain time, provided that the party's intermediate conduct has been good.¹¹ On principle, if the prohibition contain no words of nullity, a marriage in disregard of it should be simply valid and illegal, and so it has once been held;¹² but, in general, where the prohibition Dickson v. Dickson, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 110, 115.

1. 2 Bish. Mar. & Div., § 698; Chester v. Mure, 3 Swab. & P. 223, 232.

2. In Barber v. State, 50 Md. 161, the court enumerates five exceptions to the Stat. 1 Jac. 1, ch. 11, being the statute which declared bigamy to be a felony. "3. Where there is a divorce (or separation a mensa et thoro) by sentence in the ecclesiastical court." Young v. Naylor, 1 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 383; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. (U. S.) 582; Savage v. Ignogoso, 7 La. 281.

3. See note 2 above.

4. See Wait v. Wait, 4 Const. (N. Y.) 95, 105; 2 Bish. M. & D. 728.

5. N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. 1882, § 761; Van Voorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18; 40 Am. Rep. 505.

6. Md. Rev. Code 1878, art. 51, § 12; Elliott v. Elliott, 38 Md. 357. In Maryland it is now very unusual for such a prohibition to be put into the decree.

7. Barber v. Barber, 16 Cal. 378. "There is no authority in the court to impose any restraint upon a second marriage, when a dissolution from the bonds of matrimony is adjudged. . . . The cases where restraint upon a second marriage is permitted have arisen upon express statutes authorizing its imposition upon the guilty party. (Bishop on Divorce, §§ 655-659); People v. Hovey, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 118."

8. Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127. In every suit such is the inalienable right of citizens of this country.

9. Elliott v. Elliott, 38 Md. 357.

10. Sparhawk v. Sparhawk, 116 Mass. 315, 320.

11. Cochrane v. Petitioner, 10 Allen (Mass.) 276; Bullock v. Bullock, 122 Mass. 3, 4; Peck v. Peck, 8 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 400.

12. Park v. Barron, 20 Ga. 702. "The has any effect, a marriage in disregard of it is a mere nullity,¹ though it be contracted with the innocent party and former spouse.² But such marriage does not constitute bigamy³ or adultery.⁴ In one case, where a second marriage, though after divorce, during the lifetime of the first spouse, was made felony by statute, such marriage was also held void.⁵ The absence of the innocent party unheard of for seven years does not avoid the prohibition.⁶ The effect of the prohibition in another State is discussed below.

When the Divorce Has Been Granted in a Different State—Conflict of Laws.—It is usually said that a divorce valid where granted is valid everywhere, but such a rule is neither strictly correct nor of much assistance. The validity of a divorce may be limited to the State where it is granted, if granted in a mode which neither law nor comity requires other States to recognize;⁷ or it may extend throughout the United States, if granted in one of the States, by virtue of the "full faith and credit" clause of the constitution;⁸ or it may extend everywhere by comity and international law.⁹ A divorce, too, may be valid as to one party guilty party for whose misconduct a divorce a vinculo matrimonii is found may be prosecuted for bigamy if he marries a second time during the life of the woman to whom he was first married; but the act forbidding him to marry the second time does not declare the latter marriage void. (2.) The law is more regardful of nuptial than of ordinary contracts; and persons incapable of contracting generally may contract marriage. (3.) Unlawful marriages are not void unless declared to be so." See § 53, Stewart on Marriage and Divorce.

1. Cropsey v. Ogden, 11 N. Y. 228, 235.

2. Moore v. Moore, 8 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 171, 173.

3. State v. Weatherby, 43 Me. 258; People v. Hovey, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 117.

4. State v. Weatherby, 43 Me. 258. "Where the wife was divorced for the fault of the husband, and he married another, and cohabited with her without having obtained a like divorce, he does not thereby commit the crime of adultery either by the laws of this State or at common law." Com. v. Putnam, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 136.

5. Calloway v. Bryan, 6 Jones (N. Car.) L. 569.

6. Borrowdale v. Borrowdale, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 336.

7. When the Divorce Has Been Granted in a Different State—Conflict of Laws.—Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195.

"Although marriage is a status, and every State has the right to fix, regulate and control the same as to every person within its jurisdiction, even though one of the parties may at the time actually reside in another State, yet a judgment of divorce granted in another State, under statutes making jurisdiction dependent entirely upon the residence then of the party applying for the divorce, at the suit of a husband against a wife who resided in this State, and who was not personally served with notice and did not appear in the action, but was ignorant of its pendency until after the judgment was rendered, it is not a bar to a subsequent action by such wife in this State for a divorce, alimony and a division of the property of such husband situated within this State, especially where such foreign judgment was based upon an alleged cause of action which was false in fact."

8. Constitution of U. S., art. 4, § 51; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 734; Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 105, 223.

9. Harvey v. Farnie, L. R., 5 P. D. 153, at 157: "Much may be said in favor of our recognizing in such circumstances the decree of the foreign court. For assuming that we protect the interests of society in England against the dissolution of the marriage of English persons abroad for some cause for which it could not be dissolved here, there seems no reason why by the comity of and not as to the other,¹ and it may destroy the marriage status and yet not affect certain property or personal right of the parties.² Certain rules may be stated, leaving the effect of fraud out of consideration, to wit (see title CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 499):

1. A divorce granted by a divorce court in due conformity with the law of such court is valid in the State where it is granted.³

2. Such a divorce, if both parties are domiciled in such State,⁴ or if only one of them is so domiciled and the other is duly served with process in such State,⁵ or voluntarily appears in the suit,⁶ is valid throughout the United States by virtue of the United States constitution,⁷ and properly everywhere by the principles of international law.⁸

3. Such a divorce, if only one of the parties is domiciled in such State, and the other, though not duly served with process, had an actual notice of the suit and an opportunity to defend it, would probably be held valid everywhere by comity, as no injustice would be done.⁹

4. Such a divorce, if only one of the parties is domiciled in such State, and the other has no actual notice at all of the suit, but a mere notice by publication, the divorce would probably be held valid in such other States as by their legislatures or courts have adopted the policy or recognized the justice of divorce granted on constructive notice,¹⁰ but not in such other States as have not adopted such policy but regard it as contrary to natural justice,¹¹ except so far as this is necessary under the United States nations we should not recognize the decree of a foreign court which proceeded upon principles in accordance with the English law." Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12; Dougherty v. Dougherty, 28 N. J. Eq. 581, 586; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78, 88.

1. People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78; Stilphen v. Stilphen, 58 Me. 508; Wright v. Wright, 24 Mich. 180; Dougherty v. Dougherty, 28 N. J. Eq. 581; Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195.

2. Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127; Gould v. Crow, 57 Mo. 200.

3. Niboyet v. Niboyet, L. R., 4 P. D. 1, 9; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 735; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87, 108.

4. Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 240; Stewart Mar. & Div., §§ 217a, 220.

5. Cases last cited; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78, 83.

6. Kinnier v. Kinnier, 45 N. Y. 535, 539, and see Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 108; Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127; Gould v. Crow, 57 Mo. 200; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78.

7. Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 108, 123. "The constitution and laws of the United States give the decree the same effect elsewhere which it had in Indiana." If a judgment is conclusive in a State where it is rendered, it is equally conclusive everywhere in the courts of the United States. 2 Story on the Constitution, § 1313; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 302.

8. See note 9, p. 505, and Niboyet v. Niboyet, L. R., 4 P. D. 1, 8.

9. Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 226. "We do not think the allegation of fraud is maintained . . . had early and ample notice in fact of the commencement of the proceedings, of the nature of them." See also Doughty v. Doughty, 28 N. J. Eq. 581, 586.

10. Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 271; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 237-239; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87, 106; Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195.

11. Shaw v. Atty. Gen., L. R., 2 P. & D. 156, 162; Doughty v. Doughty, 28 N. J. Eq. 581, 586; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78, 84.

constitution;¹ that is to say, except as to the status of the party domiciled,² and the property situate² in the State where the divorce was granted.

5. Such a divorce, if neither of the parties was domiciled in the State granted the divorce, has no extraterritorial validity, although both parties submitted themselves to the jurisdiction of the court.³

No attempt will be made to discuss these rules in this article.

A statute providing in general terms that the guilty party shall not marry after divorce applies only to divorces granted within the State.⁴ But whether the prohibition has any effect out of the State where the divorce is granted has been much disputed. In most States such a prohibition is regarded as a penalty,⁴ and therefore is deemed to have no extraterritorial force;⁵ but in Maryland⁶ and in North Carolina,⁷ it is held not to be a penalty, but a denial of relief and a continuation of that incapacity to marry which arises from an existing marriage. In these last States, therefore, the capacity to marry depending upon domicile,⁸ the prohibition would have equal effect, no matter where the party tried to marry, so long as such party retained his or her domicile;⁹ but in the first mentioned States the prohibition can be easily evaded. A New Yorker, prohibited by a New York court, has but to step into New Jersey to be married, and the New York courts will hold the marriage valid.¹⁰

1. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 734.

2. Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12, 19; Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127, 129; Gould v. Crow, 57 Mo. 200; Turner v. Turner, 44 Ala. 437, 450; Doughty v. Doughty, 28 N. J. Eq. 581; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78; Colvin v. Reed, 55 Pa. St. 375; Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195.

3. Harrison v. Harrison, 20 Ala. 629. "No other State has jurisdiction to annul or materially to impair, the marriage relation between citizens of this State; and having no jurisdiction of the subject matter, consent of parties cannot confer it." See also Harvie v. Farnie, L. R., 6 P. & D. 35; Shaw v. Atty. Gen., L. R., 2 P. & D. 156; House v. House, 25 Ga. 473; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 370; Whitcomb v. Whitcomb, 46 Iowa 437; Litowich v. Litowich, 19 Kan. 451; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156; People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247; State v. Armington, 25 Miss. 29, 36; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20, 33; Van Fossen v. Van Fossen, 37 Ohio St. 317; Platt's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 501, 504; Hare v. Hare, 10 Tex. 355.

4. Bullock v. Bullock, 122 Mass. 3. "A person against whom a divorce has been obtained for adultery in another State, by the law of which, in such a case, both parties may marry again, may contract a valid marriage in this commonwealth, without obtaining the leave of court provided for by the Gen. Stat., ch. 107, § 26, and the Stat. of 1864, ch. 216." Van Voorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18, 28; 40 Am. Rep. 505; citing most of the cases decided prior to 1881. In such States the incapacity to marry depends entirely on the prohibition; the marriage relation is wholly dissolved. People v. Hovey, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 117, 119; Moore v. Hegeman, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 68; Dickson v. Dickson, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 110, 114.

5. Above cases and Fuller v. Fuller, 40 Ala. 301, 351, 356; Stevenson v. Gray, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 193; Com. v. Lane, 113 Mass. 458; Putnam v. Putnam, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 433; Ex parte Webb, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 372; Van Storck v. Griffin, 71 Pa. St. 240.

6. Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127, 129; Elliott v. Elliott, 38 Md. 357.

7. Williams v. Oates, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 535, 538.

8. See last cited case.

9. See note 7. supra.

10. Van Voorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18.

6. Consent of Parties—a. As to Its Necessity.—Parties cannot become husband and wife without their mutual consent; consent is the very essence of a marriage; without it a marriage is null and void.¹ A mere marriage ceremony cannot make a man and woman husband and wife; so if they go through the forms of marriage in jest,² or supposing them mere preliminaries,³ it is no marriage. Nor can sexual intercourse make a marriage, the parties knowing or intending it to be unlawful.⁴ Though at the time of a marriage ceremony or consummation the mutual consent is wanting because one of the parties is mentally incompetent, or is not real, because of error, fraud or duress, and the marriage is therefore void, the necessary consent may be subsequently given when the party becomes sane⁵ or regains his freedom,⁶ or discovers the deception or mistake,⁷ and the marriage may be thus confirmed.⁸ Consent may be absent owing to error, fraud or duress.

Error.—Mistake of person but of nothing else affects the validity of a marriage.⁹ Thus, if a man and woman go through a marriage ceremony in masquerade, one supposing the other to be someone else, it is no marriage.¹⁰ So if a scamp, by pretending to be a known respectable man, and assuming his name, induced a woman to marry him;¹¹ though this, as all other mistakes induced by the other party, belongs rather to the subject of

1. Town of Mountholly v. Town of Andover, 11 Vt. 226, 227. "The case found by the jury is, that the ceremony of marriage was had before the justice without the consent of the parties. It was a marriage by force and duress.

Such a marriage has always been held void. Marriage is a contract, and requires the consensus animorum as much as any other contract." See also Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.) 181, 183; True v. Ranney, 21 N. H. 52, 54; Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Const. 54; Rundle v. Pegram, 49 Miss. 751.

2. In McClurg v. Terry, 21 N. J. Eq. 225. "A marriage ceremony, though actually and legally performed, when it was in jest and not intended to be a contract of marriage, and it was so understood at the time by both parties, and is so considered and treated by them, is not a contract of marriage. Intention is necessary, as in every other contract."

3. Clark v. Field, 13 Vt. 460, 472.

4. Peck v. Peck, 12 R. I. 485, 488. "It is indispensable to marriage, whether under the statute or at common law, that the parties consent to be husband and wife presently, and though cohabitation, following an engagement, is evidence of such consent, it is not conclusive, but only prima facie evidence of it, and as such open to rebuttal by counter proof. 1 Bishop on Mar. & Div., §§ 253, 254; Forbes v. Countess of Strathmore, Ferg. 113; The Queen v. Millis, 10 Cl. & Fin. 534, 782; Robertson v. State, 42 Ala. 509; Post v. Post, 70 Ill. 484; Cheney v. Arnold, 15 N. Y. 345."

5. See Cole v. Cole, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 57. Ante, II, 5, b.

6. See ante, II, § 5, e; infra, DURESS.

7. See Hampstead v. Plaistow, 49 N. H. 84, 98; Tompert v. Tompert, 13 Bush (Ky.) 326.

8. See post, part 4, § 4, note.

9. 1 Bishop M. & D., § 208; Rex v. Burton, 3 Maule & S. 537; State v. Farquharson, 3 Add. Ec. R. 282; La. Civ. Code, 1875, § 91.

10. Queen v. Millis, 10 Clark & Fin. 534, at 785: "For it will be found that novelists and dramatists give validity to marriage in masquerade, where the parties were entirely mistaken as to the persons with whom they are united; marriages which could hardly be supported in the ecclesiastical court, in a suit of jactitation, or for restitution of conjugal rights."

11. Rex v. Burton, 3 Maule & S. 537.

fraud. Mistake of character, fortune, health, makes no difference,¹ the parties take each other for better or worse.²

Fraud.—Deceit is an essential of marriage, or false representations which induce consent, especially where the deceived party is weak in mind, or young,³ and more certainly if there has been no consummation,⁴ will invalidate a marriage.⁵ Thus, where a girl of fifteen was inveigled into marriage by her father's coachman, who obtained both her consent and the celebration of the marriage by falsehood and fraud, and where she repudiated the marriage before consummation, it was held void.⁶ So where a man induced a woman to go through a regular marriage service, pretending it to be a mere betrothal.⁷ So where a woman, having consented to have sexual intercourse with a man, conceals witnesses, and just before the act makes him agree that it means marriage, he not intending it as such.⁸ So where a felon, by assuming a false name and character, induces a woman to marry

1. Ewing v. Wheatley, 2 Hagg. Const. 175, 182; Wakefield v. Mackay, 1 Phillim. 134, 137, note; Clowes v. Jones, 3 Curt. Ecc. 185.

2. Long v. Long, 77 N. Car. 304, 308. "And we cannot but say that nothing could be more dangerous than to allow those who have agreed to take each other in terms for better, for worse, to be permitted to say that one of the parties is worse than expected." See also Scroggins v. Scroggins, 3 Dev. (S. Car.) 535, 545; Hawk v. Harman, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 43, 50.

3. Youthfulness.—Lyndon v. Lyndon, 69 Ill. 43. "On bill to annul a marriage, and declare the contract void, it appeared that the complainant was a young school girl, only about fifteen years old at the time of the marriage; that the defendant was employed as her father's coachman, and while in such employ took advantage of his position, while driving the children out, to inveigle the complainant into the marriage; that he procured the licence through perjury, by swearing positively that the complainant was of age; and that she never consummated the marriage by cohabitation, but immediately repudiated the same. Held, that the marriage, under such circumstances, ought not to be held valid, but ought to be declared void; but that, had the parties voluntarily lived together as man and wife, the latter knowing that the crime of perjury had been committed, it would have been held valid."

Harford v. Morris, 2 Hagg. Ecc. 423; Browning v. Reane, 2 Phillim. 69; Rex v. Wakefield, 2 Lew. C. C. 279; Hull

v. Hull, 5 Eng. L. & Eq. 589. See note 7 below.

Old Age.—Where an old man, who had lost his eyesight and was more or less deaf and otherwise broken, was put under the influence of drugs and liquor and was induced to marry a woman he had no affection for, but who wanted his money, the marriage was annulled. Gillett v. Gillett (Mich.), 43 N. W. Rep. 1101.

4. See last note and Robertson v. Cole, 12 Tex. 356.

5. See cases cited in above notes and Tomppert v. Tomppert, 13 Bush (Ky.) 326; Guilford v. Oxford, 9 Conn. 321.

6. See note 3 above, where this case is quoted at length.

7. Clark v. Field, 13 Vt. 460, at 465. "We, however, are satisfied that the court of chancery, under its common equity jurisdiction, may rescind or relieve against a marriage contract or annul a contract solemnized before a magistrate or minister of the gospel, if obtained by force, fraud or imposition, or under a mistake as to the legal effect of such solemnization by one of the parties, if the other party knew the legal effect, and also knew that the party was under such mistake, when such ceremony has not been followed by consummation or cohabitation. Even when followed by consummation there may be extraordinary cases of fraud and imposition which require the aid of the court of chancery to prevent consequences in a high degree disastrous if that aid was not afforded."

8. Barr v. Fairie, 5 Mon. Dic. Supp.

him, and she repudiates the marriage before consummation.¹ So where a party who is physically incompetent conceals this;² or a woman who is pregnant by another man conceals it.³ But it is not fraud if the pregnancy is by the man she marries,⁴ nor if he has been put on his guard as to her virtue by antenuptial connection with her;⁵ nor if she, by falsely pretending to be pregnant by him induces him to marry her.⁶ On the other hand, mere antenuptial unchastity concealed is no fraud except by statute,⁷ nor are false representations as to character, health or fortune,⁸ nor false pretences of affection,⁹ nor marrying to escape punishment with the intention to immediately desert,¹⁰ nor the mere assumption of a false name.¹¹ A conspiracy by which one of the parties, with the help of others, brings about a marriage for an ulterior object, may be in this sense fraud, but the fraud must be upon one of the parties. Third parties cannot complain.¹²

Duress.—The fact that a party marries under actual compulsion invalidates the marriage.¹³ It does not suffice that he married unwillingly;¹⁴ he must have been forced by fear of bodily harm.¹⁵ But it is not duress when a man marries a woman after seducing her to avoid trouble with the overseers of the poor,¹⁶

921; cited 1 Bish. M. & D., § 202.

1. Rex v. Burton, 3 Maule & S. 537; Heffner v. Heffner, 3 Maule & S. 265.

2. Meyer v. Meyer, 49 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 311, 313; Benton v. Benton, 1 Day (Conn.) 111, 114.

3. Baker v. Baker, 13 Cal. 87, 103; and see Ala. R. C. 1879, § 2686; Ritter v. Ritter, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 81; Frith v. Frith, 18 Ga. 273; Ga. R. C. 1878, § 1712; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 3 Allen (Mass.) 605; Carris v. Carris, 24 N. J. Eq. 516, 523; Long v. Long, 77 N. Car. 304.

4. States v. States, 37 N. J. Eq. 195, 196. Plain inference from the cases cited above; and see Scroggins v. Scroggins, 3 Dev. (S. Car.) 535.

5. Seilheimer v. Seilheimer, 40 N. J. Eq. 412. Crehore v. Crehore, 97 Mass. 330. "If a man marries a woman whom he knows to be unchaste, having had sexual intercourse with her; this court will not declare the marriage void for the reason that she, on the day thereof, at the time being pregnant with a bastard child of which he was not the father, assured him that she was not pregnant, and he married her on faith in that assurance." But see Moss v. Moss, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 55.

6. Hoffman v. Hoffman, 30 Pa. St. 417, 421.

7. Farr v. Farr, 2 McArthur (U. S.) 35; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 3 Allen (Mass.) 605; Leavitt v. Leavitt, 13

Mich. 452; Carris v. Carris, 24 N. J. Eq. 516; Md. Rev. Code, 1878, p. 480; Va. Code 1860, p. 530; see 1 Bish. M. & D., § 179 n. 1.

8. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 3 Allen (Mass.) 605; Carris v. Carris, 24 N. J. Eq. 516; Long v. Long, 77 N. Car. 304.

9. Benton v. Benton, 1 Day (Conn.) 111, 113.

10. Same case.

11. Clowes v. Jones, 3 Curt. Ecc. 185.

12. McKinney v. Clarke, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 321, 324. "No more startling or absurd proposition can be conceived than that a marriage, legal in form, acquiesced in and held obligatory by the parties, and recognized as valid by law, might be annulled at the instance of a third person, for any cause whatever."

13. Willard v. Willard, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 297, 298. "It would seem to require no argument to show that a consent given under actual duress obtained by force is no consent; and although the form of the marriage has been observed, the essence of the contract is wanting." See also Hurford v. Morris, 2 Hagg. Const. 453; Pyle v. Pyle, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 58; Collins v. Collins, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 515.

14. Stevenson v. Stevenson, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 386, 387.

15. Stevenson v. Stevenson, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 386, 387.

16. Jackson v. Winne, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 47, 51.

or to avoid a prosecution,¹ though it is if in such case he is actually unlawfully imprisoned, and marries to get free,² or if he does not even formally consent.³ Duress cannot be predicated of compulsion to discharge a legal duty.⁴

b. As to Its Form.—The contract which is essential to a valid marriage may be expressed in words, written or oral,⁵ or in signs,⁶ or implied from conduct.⁷ No technical words are necessary, even when a celebration is required;⁸ it need only appear that the parties intend to live together and produce children under the shield and sanction of the law.⁹ Letters are often evidence of this contract, but it is doubtful whether parties can actually marry by letter;¹⁰ it would seem that in such case the present assumption of the marriage status could not be contemplated.¹¹ So as to marriage by telephone¹² or by proxy.¹³

Essence of the Contract.—The contract must be in substance, "to be husband and wife under the law."¹⁴ If the object of the

1. Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 24. "Marriage contracted through fear of imprisonment is not void, when the fear was not imposed as an inducement to the marriage, but arose from the arrest and prosecution of the party for bastardy."

See also Honnett v. Honnett, 33 Ark. 156, 160; Sickles v. Carson, 26 N. J. Eq. 440; Scott v. Shufeldt, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 43; Johns v. Johns, 44 Tex. 40.

2. Bassett v. Bassett, 9 Bush (Ky.) 696; Collins v. Collins, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 515; 1 Bish. M. & D., § 213. Not if lawfully; Johns v. Johns, 44 Tex. 40.

3. See Kopke v. People, 33 Mich. 41, 44, 45.

4. State v. Davis, 79 N. Car. 603, 605. "But the duress was not made out. It is true he was sued by the feme for a breach of promise of marriage and seduction, and was under arrest, but the arrest was lawful. A promises to pay B a hundred dollars, and B sues him for a breach of promise and compels him to pay; that is compulsion, but is not duress."

5. Dickerson v. Brown, 49 Miss. 357. "With reference to the consent necessary to consummate marriage, nothing more is needed than that, in language which is mutually understood, or in any words declaratory of intention, the parties accept of each other as husband and wife, and the doctrine is laid down that if the words do not of their natural meaning, or by common use, "conclude matrimony," yet if the parties intend marriage, and their intent sufficiently appears, they are inseparably husband and wife, not only before God, but also before men. 1 Bish. M. & D. 229. Consent may be either verbal or written, and where there was no ceremony, but the parties merely live together as husband and wife, for many years, they were held to be, in law, married. A maxim of law is, consensus, non concubitas, facit matrimonium."

6. See last note and Harrod v. Harrod, 1 Kay & J. 4, 16; People v. Taylor, 1 Mich. N. P. 198, 199.

7. See note 5 above, and Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Const. 54; 4 Eng. Ec. 485; Francis v. Francis, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 283, 287. "It is not necessary that the parties shall have expressly agreed to live together as husband and wife. The agreement or understanding may be implied, as in other cases, from their conduct and declarations."

8. Harrod v. Harrod, 1 Kay & J. 4, 16. Stewart on M. & D., § 92, 99.

9. See note 5 above.

10. 1 Bish. M. & D., § 231; Swinb. Spousals (2nd ed.) 162, 181; Ingles v. Robertson, 1 Fras. Dom. Rel. 157; Campbell v. Sassen, 2 Wils. & S. 309.

11. See dissenting opinion in Dumaresq v. Fishly, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 1198, 1204.

12. Marriages by telephone would probably stand on the same footing as marriages by letter.

13. Marriages by proxy have taken place at various times in history, generally between members of royal families of different countries.

14. The case of Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Const. 54; 4 Eng. Ec. 485-523, contains all the cases up to 1811 parties be the assumption of the legal status of marriage, an agreement to live together for life will suffice,¹ though so extensive an agreement is not necessary, as the law may allow divorce,² and even divorce at pleasure.³ But this must appear to be their object, and since an agreement to live together as husband and wife is not necessarily an agreement to be husband and wife, it will not suffice;⁴ nor will an agreement for a conjugal union such as their consciences and religion sanction;⁵ nor for cohabitation as long as they can agree.⁶ If legal marriage is their object, any stipulations inconsistent with the law are simply void.⁷ The apparent contract is not affected by a secret reservation of one of the parties.⁸ After taking a woman as his wife, she deeming herself such, a man cannot say he meant only to take her as his mistress.⁹ But if both parties have or know of an ulterior object, which alone is meant to be secured by an apparent contract, there is no marriage, as when a man wrote a letter to a woman he had seduced, acknowledging her as his wife, it being their sole object to gain admission for her to a lying-in hospital,¹⁰ or to void another alliance by pretending to be married.¹¹ The contract may be intended to take effect at once or in the future.

Consent per Verba de Præsentis.—The contract must be to be husband and wife thenceforth; it must contemplate the present assumption of the marriage status.¹² Thus, "this is your wed-on this point. Amongst other cases that of McAdam v. Walker, 1806, is quoted at page 504. "In that case Elizabeth Walker had cohabited with Mr. McAdam and borne him two daughters. In the presence of several of his servants, whom he had called into the room for the purpose of witnessing the transaction, he desired Elizabeth Walker to stand up and give him her hand; and she having done so, he said, 'This is my lawful wife, and these my lawful children.' On the same day, without having been alone with Walker during the interval, he put a period to his existence. The court held the children to be legitimate." See also Jewell v. Jewell, 1 How. (U. S.) 219; Letters v. Cady, 10 Cal. 533; Rundle v. Pegram, 49 Miss. 751; Barnett v. Kimball, 35 Pa. St. 13, 19; State v. Tachanatah, 64 N. Car. 614.

1. Roche v. Washington, 19 Ind. 53, 57. "What, then, constitutes the thing called a marriage? What is it in the eye of the jus gentium? It is the union of one man and one woman, 'so long as they both shall live,' to the exclusion of all others, by an obligation which, during that time, the parties cannot of their own volition and act dissolve, but which can be dissolved only by the State. Nothing short of this is marriage."

2. See DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 745, of this work.

3. Wall v. Williams, 8 Ala. 48, 51; Boyer v. Dively, 58 Mo. 510; but see State v. Tachanatah, 64 N. Car. 614; Roche v. Washington, 19 Ind. 53, 57.

4. Letters v. Cady, 10 Cal. 533; and see Jewell v. Jewell, 1 How. (U. S.) 219.

5. State v. Miller, 23 Minn. 352; Reynolds v. U. S., 98 U. S. 145, 161.

6. Randall v. Randall, 5 City H. Rec. (N. Y.) 141.

7. Dickerson v. Brown, 49 Miss. 357; Barnett v. Kimmell, 35 Pa. St. 13, 19, 20; Harrod v. Harrod, 1 Kay & J. 4, 16.

8. Barnett v. Kimmell, 35 Pa. St. 13, 20.

9. Robertson v. Stewart, 1 Sess. Cas. S. 4th Ser. 532; Bell v. Graham, 13 Moore P. C. C. 242; Stewart v. Menzies, 2 Rob. App. 547; Hamilton v. Hamilton, 9 Clarke & F. 327. But see Cunningham v. Cunningham, 2 Dow. 482. Consummation must be had. Locky v. Sinclair, 8 Sess. Cas. S. 2nd Ser. 582, 605.

10. McInnes v. More, Ferg. Cons. 33.

11. Stewart v. Menzies, 2 Rob. App. 547.

12. Peck v. Peck, 12 R. 1. 485, 488.

ding ring, we are married," followed by cohabitation, may be a good marriage contract.¹ It is not sufficient, on the other hand, to agree to present cohabitation, and a future regular marriage when more convenient,² or when a wife dies,³ or when a ceremony can be performed;⁴ nor can "I will marry you in six weeks if you will sleep with me to-night"⁵ be anything but a promise to marry. To this rule there is one exception.

Consent per Verba de Futuro cum Copula.—In one case, a contract looking to a future assumption of the marriage status is sufficient. In States where no marriage celebration is necessary, and when such contract is followed by sexual intercourse between the parties, the law, so as not to presume fornication, presumes that parties who have promised to marry mean sexual intercourse following such promise to be the consummation of such agreement.⁶ But this presumption may be rebutted by any facts which show that the parties knew or intended their intercourse to be illicit, as where at the time they were looking forward to being married with a ceremony.⁷ This mode of contracting marriage is said to be per verba de futuro cum copula.⁸ But these cases

"It is indispensable to marriage, whether under the statute or at common law, that the parties consent to be husband and wife presently, and though cohabitation following an engagement is evidence of such consent, it is not conclusive, but only prima facie evidence of it, and as such open to rebuttal by counter proof. 1 Bish. on Mar. & Div., §§ 253, 254; Forbes v. Countess of Strathmore, Ferg. 113; the Queen v. Millis, 10 Cl. & Fin. 534, 782; Post v. Post, 70 Ill. 484. See also Cheney v. Arnold, 15 N. Y. 345; Duncan v. Duncan, 10 Ohio St. 181." See also Clark v. Field, 13 Vt. 460, 475; Van Tuyl v. Van Tuyl, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 235; Askew v. Dupree, 30 Ga. 173.

1. Bissell v. Bissell, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 325.

2. Robertson v. State, 42 Ala. 509, 511. "That the defendant told her that he could not get a licence for them to marry at that time because 'all the old licences had run out,' but that 'as soon as the new licences come in,' he would get a licence and marry her, and that upon this agreement they cohabited. The agreement to marry here had reference to the future. It was an agreement to marry at a future time upon the occurrence of an antecedent event—the procurement of a licence. The cohabitation was necessarily before the occurrence upon which the agreement to marry was to be consummated. The cohabitation was, therefore, not in fulfilment of a matrimonial agreement, but in advance of an anticipated marriage. It was obviously understood to be an adulterous connection."

3. Duncan v. Duncan, 10 Ohio St. 181.

4. Estate of Beverson, 47 Cal. 621; Van Tuyl v. Van Tuyl, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 235; Fryer v. Fryer, Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. Cas. 85, 97.

5. Reg. v. Millis, 10 Clark & F. 534, and cases cited in note 12, p. 512.

6. Cargile v. Wood, 63 Mo. 501. "Where parties have cohabited together and held themselves out as man and wife, and there are circumstances from which a present contract may be inferred, the law, out of charity, and in favor of innocence and good morals, will presume matrimony. The law in general presumes against vice and in favor of innocence and good morals, and on this ground holds acknowledgment, cohabitation and reputation presumptive evidence of marriage; but cohabitation and reputation must both exist before the presumption can be raised." See III, §§ 3, 4 and 11 below; Stoltz v. Doering, 112 Ill. 34. "At common law, the fact of sexual intercourse after an agreement to marry at a future day does not constitute marriage. The copula must have been in fulfilment of the agreement to marry."

7. Peck v. Peck, 12 R. I. 485; Fryer v. Fryer, Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. Cas. 85, 97.

8. Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Const. 66; 4 Eng. Ec. 490.

must be distinguished from those of seduction following promise of marriage.¹

c. As to Its Effect.—In many States no ceremony of any kind is essential to a valid marriage, and in such States a contract between parties competent to marry constitutes marriage, known, as the case may be, as marriage per verba de præsenti, or as marriage per verba de futuro cum copula.² In States where a celebration is necessary, this contract must exist at the time of such ceremony or afterwards.³

7. Celebration or Ceremonies of Marriage—a. Their Necessity.—All States have statutes providing for the celebration of marriages; what permission must be gotten or notice given before the marriage; who must perform the marriage, and what record of the marriage must be made; but generally such provisions do not affect the validity but only the legality of the marriage.⁴ Whether or not any of such provisions must be complied with to render the marriage valid depends (1) upon whether by the pre-existing common or unwritten law any such formality were necessary, and (2) whether, if they were not, there is a provision in the statutes stating that noncompliance with it shall render a marriage void; and it is a general rule that no celebration of marriage is necessary at all except in States in which it is held that a celebration was necessary at common law, and in States where the statute, as in Kentucky, contains words of nullity.⁵

By the Common or Unwritten Law.—No celebration is neces-

1. Cheney v. Arnold, 15 N. Y. 345, 351. "It follows that the doctrine of the canon law that a contract of marriage per verba de futuro, followed by carnal intercourse, was a valid marriage did not become the law of this State by force of our adoption of the common law of England, for it was not a part of that common law. . . . Mutual promises to marry in future are executory, and whatever indiscretions the parties may commit after making such promises they do not become husband and wife until they have actually given themselves to each other in that relation. . . . If a man seduce a woman under a promise of marriage, we allow an action for the seduction at the suit of the father, and an action for a breach of the promise at the suit of the daughter."

2. Dickerson v. Brown, 49 Miss. 357, 372; Hutchins v. Kimmell, 31 Mich. 126. See § 6, b, above.

3. See § 6, above and IV, §§ 6 and 7 below.

4. Meister v. Moore, 96 U. S. 76, 79. "A statute may declare that no marriages shall be valid unless they are solemnized in a prescribed manner; but an enactment is a very different thing from a law requiring all marriages to be entered into in the presence of a magistrate or a clergyman, or that it be preceded by a licence or publication of banns, or be attested by witnesses. Such formal provisions may be construed as merely directory, instead of being treated as destructive of a common law right to form the marriage relation by words of present assent; and such, we think, has been the rule generally adopted in construing statutes regulating marriage. Whatever directions they may give respecting its formation or solemnization, courts have usually held a marriage good at common law to be good notwithstanding the statutes, unless they contain express words of nullity." Cotteral v. Sweetman, 1 Rob. Ecc. 304, 312; Campbell v. Gullatt, 43 Ala. 57, 69; Post v. Post, 70 Ill. 484; Carmichael v. State, 12 Ohio St. 553. But see Com. v. Munson, 127 Mass. 459; Bashaw v. State, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 177, which ignore this rule.

5. See note 4 above, and notes 5, 6, 7 and 8, p. 515.

sary by the law of nature,¹ or by the canon law prior to the council of Trent,² or by the civil law,³ or by the law of Scotland.⁴ Whether or not one is necessary by the common law of England is doubtful. In England, after much hesitation, it is settled that it is,⁵ and this view has been sustained in Maryland,⁶ Massachusetts⁷ and North Carolina.⁸ But the contrary has been held in Tennessee,⁹ and by the Supreme Court of the United States,¹⁰ and in Alabama,¹¹ California,¹² Georgia,¹³ Illinois,¹⁴ Iowa,¹⁵ Kentucky,¹⁶ Michigan,¹⁷ Minnesota,¹⁸ Mississippi,¹⁹ Missouri,²⁰ New York,²¹ Ohio,²² Rhode Island,²³ Pennsylvania,²⁴ and the English decision has been disapproved in Canada.²⁵ One was necessary by the Mexican law.²⁶ The result of these decisions combining with the statutes in the several States is given in the notes below.²⁷

1. By the Common or Unwritten Law.

—Richard v. Brehm, 73 Pa. St. 140; Lindo v. Belisario, 1 Hagg. Const. 216, 4 Eng. Ecc. 367; Dumaresly v. Fishly, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 368, 370. It would seem that citation of authorities for this proposition is unnecessary.

2. Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Const. 54; 4 Eng. Ec. 485; Reg. v. Millis, 10 Clark & F. 534; Hallett v. Collins, 10 How. (U. S.) 174; Succession of Prevost, 4 La. An. 347, 349.

3. Hallett v. Collins, 10 How. (U. S.) 174, 181.

4. Wright v. Wright, 15 Sess. Cas., § 767; McAdam v. Walker, 1 Dow, 148; Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Const. 54; 4 Eng. Ec. 485.

5. Beamish v. Beamish, 9 H. L. Cas. 274 (England). "It being settled by the decision in The Queen v. Millis, 10 Cl. & F. 534, that to constitute a valid marriage by the common law of England it must have been celebrated in the presence of a clergyman in holy orders, the fact that the bridegroom is himself a clergyman in holy orders, there being no other clergyman present, will not make the marriage valid." Du Moulin v. Druitt, 13 Ir., C., L. R. 212; Catherwood v. Cazlon, 13 Mees. & W. 261; 8 Jur. 1076.

6. Denison v. Denison, 35 Md. 361.

7. Com. v. Munson, 127 Mass. 459.

8. State v. Samuel, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 177, 179.

9. Grisham v. State, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 589.

10. Meister v. Moore, 96 U. S. 76, 78. "It certainly withdrew from the consideration of the jury all evidence, if any there was, of informal marriage by contract per verba de presenti. That such a contract constitutes a marriage at common law there can be no doubt, in view of the adjudications made in this country from its earliest settlement to the present day."

11. Campbell v. Gullatt, 43 Ala. 57, 69.

12. Graham v. Bennet, 2 Cal. 503, and Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 1, 25.

13. Askew v. Dupree, 30 Ga. 173.

14. Post v. Post, 70 Ill. 484.

15. Blanchard v. Lambert, 43 Iowa 228.

16. Dumaresly v. Fishly, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 368.

17. Hutchins v. Kimmell, 31 Mich. 126.

18. State v. Worthingham, 23 Minn. 528.

19. Hargroves v. Thompson, 31 Miss. 211.

20. Dyer v. Brannock, 66 Mo. 391.

21. Fenton v. Reed, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 52; Rose v. Clark, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 573.

22. Carmichael v. State, 12 Ohio St. 553.

23. Mathewson v. Phœnix, 23 Am. L. R. 401.

24. Guardians of Poor v. Nathans, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 149, 152.

25. Breakey v. Breakey, 2 U. C. Q. B. 349.

26. Rice v. Rice, 31 Tex. 174.

27. The Ala. code of 1876, § 2674, etc. that marriages are to be solemnized "by any licenced minister of the gospel in regular communion with the Christian church or society of which he is a member; by a judge of the supreme, circuit or city court, or by a chancellor within the State; or by the judge of probate or any justice of the peace within their respective counties."

What Law Governs.—The necessity of the celebration depends upon the law of the place where the parties enter into the contract which is essential to a valid marriage. Thus, if the parties desire to marry in Maryland they must not only have a celebration, but a religious one.¹ If, on the other hand, Marylanders desire to avoid this, they need only step into Pennsylvania.²

b. Nature.—Supposing some ceremonies to be necessary, it is another question to determine what portion of the various ceremonies may be omitted. For the ceremonies or celebration of marriage include not only the act of a civil or religious officer declaring the parties to be husband and wife, but the prerequi-

Vol. 3, supplement of 1880, Code of California, § 5070. "Marriage may be solemnized by either a justice of the supreme court, judge of the superior court, justice of the peace, priest or minister of the gospel of any denomination." Civ. Code 1881, § 55; McCausland v. McCausland, 52 Cal. 568.

The Georgia Code of 1882, § 1698, provides that to constitute a valid marriage there must be (1) Parties able to contract. (2) An actual contract. (3) Consummation according to law.

Section 1703 provides that ministers enumerated as in Cal. Code, justices of peace, etc., shall solemnize and return certificate, etc.

The Revised Statutes of Illinois, 1885, page 806, § 4, enumerate who may solemnize marriage; like the preceding statutes, no words are here found declaring marriage void if not celebrated in conformity therewith.

The case of Cartwright v. McGown, 121 Ill. 388, was decided in Illinois in 1888 after the above statute was in force, and the court held: "Marriage being a civil contract by which persons of opposite sexes agree to take each other for man and wife during their joint lives, unless it is annulled according to law, and to discharge toward each other the duties growing out of the relation assumed, may be entered into without any licence from the State, in the absence of a statute making it essential by declaring a marriage without it void. The only essentials at common law are that the parties must be capable of assenting, and that they must in fact consent to assume the new relation. . . . While the statute prescribes certain formalities to be observed in marriages, and certain steps to be taken to preserve the evidence of the same; it does not declare a marriage void which is legal by the common law merely because not entered into in accordance with its provisions."

The case of Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 1, is to the same effect, and holds that a celebration is not necessary.

The recent case of Beverlin v. Beverlin, 29 W. Va. 732, decided that the statute must be followed in that State in order to make a valid marriage. Thus West Virginia is added to Maryland, Massachusetts and North Carolina (see notes 8, 9 and 10 above) in the view that a celebration is necessary. We have seen, n. 5, p. 515, that in England a celebration is necessary. In Delaware (Rev. Code 1873, p. 473; Pettyjohn v. Pettyjohn, 1 Houst. (Del.) 332); Maine (R. S. 1871, p. 454, 486; State v. Hodgskins, 19 Me. 155), Virginia (Code 1873, p. 864; O'Neale v. O'Neale, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 582); Tennessee (Stat. 1871, §§ 24, 39; Grisham v. State, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 589; but see Johnson v. Johnson, 1 Cold. (Tenn.) 626; Rice v. State, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 14, 15; Andrews v. Page, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 653); Texas (R. S. 1879, p. 410; Rice v. Rice, 31 Tex. 174), a celebration is probably necessary. In all the other States it is believed that the question is undecided. Notes above give those States which have held that a celebration is unnecessary.

1. Denison v. Denison, 35 Md. 361. "A marriage contracted in this State merely per verba de presenti or per verba de futuro cum copula is not lawful. To constitute a lawful marriage some religious ceremony must be superadded to the civil contract."

2. Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93, 98; Stewart on Mar. & Div., § 108.

site authority for such act, and the duties resulting therefrom; not only the ceremony proper,¹ but the consent of parents,² or licence (consent of the State),³ or banns (consent of the church),⁴ and the registry of the fact that the marriage has been celebrated.⁵

Consent of Parents, Licence, etc.—Consent of parents, licence, publication of banns, registry of the marriage, though all or some of them everywhere necessary to the legality of a marriage, are nowhere, under English or American law, necessary to the validity thereof; they were not so by the pre-existing law, and no statute has made them so.⁶

Celebration Proper, by Whom Performed.—There could have been no valid marriage in England before the Reformation without the presence of a priest episcopally ordained, or afterwards without the presence of a priest or deacon.⁷ The principle of freedom of thought and statutes have extended the right to celebrate marriages to ministers of any church,⁸ and in most States to judges, chancellors and magistrates;⁹ and special provisions have been made for quakers.¹⁰ If the minister or judge, etc., were so de facto, and the parties have acted in good faith, the marriage is good, though he were not minister or judge, etc., de jure,¹¹ generally by statute.¹² Parties cannot marry themselves with a ceremony when a celebration is required; there must be a celebrant.¹³ The celebrant must be a third party; a minister cannot marry himself.¹⁴ He must not only be present, but must be there as the celebrant of the marriage.¹⁵

1. See n. 7-15, infra; n. 1-3, p. 518.

2. De Barros v. De Barros, L. R., 3 P. D. 1, 7. See note 6 above.

3. Askew v. Dupree, 30 Ga. 193. See note 6 above.

4. Gompertz v. Kensit, 13 L. R. Eq. 369. See note 6 above.

5. State v. Horsey, 14 Ind. 185; See Ill. R. S. 1880, p. 705.

6. See the extract from the Ill. case in note 28 above.

Stewart on M. & D., § 57. "Parents' consent is a mere matter of form, and generally not necessary, under the statutes, to the validity of a minor's marriage." See cases quoted in § 97, Stewart on M. & D.

We have seen in section 7 above that most of the States hold that compliance with the requirements of statutes is not necessary to the validity of the marriage.

7. Beamish v. Beamish, 9 H. L. 274. "It being settled by the decision in The Queen v. Millis, 10 Cl. & F. 534, that to constitute a valid marriage by the common law of England it must have been celebrated in the presence of a clergyman in holy orders; the fact that the bridegroom is himself a clergyman in holy orders, there being no other clergyman present, will not make the marriage valid.

8. See the statutes in note 27, p. 515, enumerating those who are permitted to perform the ceremony.

9. See last note.

10. See e. g. Md. Rev. C. 1878, art. 51, § 8.

11. Pearson v. Howey, 11 N. J. L. 12, 20; Taylor v. State, 52 Miss. 84; Reg. v. Millis, 10 Cl. & F. 534; Dormer v. Williams, 1 Curt. Ecc. 870; Kibbe v. Antram, 4 Conn. 134; State v. Willis, 9 Ark. 196; Com. v. Spooner, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 235; State v. Bray, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 289; State v. Winkley, 14 N. H. 480; State v. Abbey, 29 Vt. 60.

12. See Rev. Stat. of Mass. 1882, p. 811; Maine 1871, p. 456; Neb. 1881, p. 342; Nev. 1873, § 216; N. H. 1878, p. 429; Vt. 1880, p. 2319; Va. 1873, p. 844; Wis. 1878, § 2337.

13. See note 7 above.

14. See note 7 above.

15. See note 7 above.

Ceremony Proper, What Essential.—The celebrant need only take notice that the parties are before him to be married, and pronounce them husband and wife.¹ Thus at a marriage by an Episcopal clergyman, "the directions contained in the rubric respecting the opening address to the congregation, the adjuration to the persons about to be married as to confessing any lawful impediment to their union, the putting on the ring, etc., are not absolutely essential to the validity of the marriage; the essential part of the service is the reciprocal taking each other for wedded wife and wedded husband."² In the case of a religious celebration, the man and woman need not belong to that religion; thus protestants may be married by a Roman Catholic priest.³

c. Effect.—A marriage celebration will have no effect if the parties are not at the time competent to marry.⁴ Nor will it, if they do not intend to marry,⁵ though their consent may be presumed from their going through the ceremony,⁶ and to negative the presumption the absence of consent must be clearly shown.⁷ It is only where no celebration is had that a consummation is ever required,⁸ but from a consummation a celebration is often presumed.⁹

8. Consummation of Marriage.—The consummation of a marriage may be either subsequent sexual intercourse between the parties,¹⁰ or the assumption of the rights, duties and obligations of husband and wife, from which such intercourse may be implied.¹¹ There are two principal ends of marriage—a lawful indulgence of the passions to prevent licentiousness, and the procreation of children under the shield and sanction of the law.¹² If the par-

1. Ceremony Proper—What Essential.—Beamish v. Beamish, 9 H. L. 274; at 333: "Take place in the presence and with the assent of a clerk in holy orders, who must be a third person, and whose duty it is to prevent or put off the marriage if there be opposed a just impediment; and who, in case he allows of its proceeding, is then, in the primary sense of the word, to marry the parties by receiving their mutual consent to become man and wife."

2. In the above case, at page 337, LORD CAMPBELL said: "There ought to be a public form of celebration to which no reasonable person can object, admitting by means of registration of easy, certain and perpetual proof, the addition of a religious ceremony being highly desirable, although not absolutely necessary."

3. Burr v. Fontaine, 4 L. C. Rev. L. 163, S. C. 1872.

4. See II, § 4, etc., above.

5. See II, § 6 above.

6. See II, §§ 6 and 6, b, above, and Fleming v. People, 27 N. Y. 329, 335.

7. Clearly strong evidence must in all cases be produced to contradict and prove the opposite of what the party by his words and actions has testified to, etc.

8. Dumaresly v. Fishly, 3 A. K. Marsh (Ky.) 379, and next section.

9. See III, § 11 below.

10. Consummation of Marriage—Dumaresly v. Fishley, 3 A. K. Marsh (Ky.) 368, 377, dissenting opinion. "Thus I would say that a marriage executed according to the forms of law should be binding at all events, and that those made in other modes should require consummation evidenced by cohabitation, while in those which exist in bare words, and which had the offer of consummation on one side and a refusal on the other, I would leave the locus penitentia to the party rejected." Cal. Civ. Code 1881, § 55.

11. See last note and III, §§ 11 and 13 below.

12. Deane v. Aveling, 1 Rob. Ecc. 279, 298. "I apprehend that we are all agreed that, in order to constitute the ties know their intercourse to be contrary to law, even though it is sanctioned by their religion, it cannot be an element of marriage, but is mere fornication.¹

Sexual intercourse between the parties is necessary to a marriage per verba de futuro,² and the assumption of the marriage status usually raises a presumption of marriage;³ but in general no consummation is necessary to the validity of a marriage, whether it be formed by celebration⁴ or by mere consent,⁵ consensus non concubitus facit matrimonium.⁶ Thus, a marriage is valid though one of the parties absolutely refuse intercourse,⁷ or abandon the other at once.⁸ Statutes may modify this.⁹ By voluntary consummation, imperfections in the consent may be waived.¹⁰ And after consummation a marriage will be less readily set aside for fraud, etc.¹¹ Sexual intercourse is, however, a marriage right, and refusal or abuse of it gives rise to various questions.¹²

III. PROOF OF MARRIAGE—1. In General.—The question whether or not a valid marriage has been formed between a man and a woman may be relevant in any suit, before any tribunal, between any parties; and whether or not the evidence adduced establishes a marriage must be judicially determined on proof, or this question may be the issue in a suit instituted in a particular tribunal by one of the parties against the other, or by some third party against them both for the express purpose of determining the validity of an alleged marriage between them; and whether or not there has been a valid marriage is judicially determined by a decree. (See NULLITY SUITS, post, part 4.)

2. Presumptions.—In proving marriage, four different presump-marriage bond between young persons there must be the power, present or to come, of sexual intercourse. Without that power, neither of two principal ends of matrimony can be attained, namely, a lawful indulgence of the passions to prevent licentiousness, and the procreation of children, according to the evident design of Divine Providence." Briggs v. Morgan, 3 Phillim. 325; 1 Eng. Ec. 408. See II, § 5, c, above.

1. Port v. Port, 70 Ill. 484; State v. Miller, 23 Minn. 352; Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Const. 54; 4 Eng. Ec. 485.

2. Dumaresly v. Fishly, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 368. "Though cohabitation is necessary to render a marriage valid when entered into per verba de futuro, it is not so when the marriage was entered into per verba de presenti."

3. See III, §§ 4 and 11 below.

4. Potier v. Barclay, 15 Ala. 439, 449; Wier v. Still, 31 Iowa 107.

5. See cases in last four notes and Jackson v. Winne, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 47, 50; Gise v. Com., 81 Pa. St. 428. But see Com. v. Jackson, 11 Bush (Ky.) 679; Jewell v. Jewell, 1 How. (U. S.) 219, 234.

6. See II, § 6, above.

7. Potier v. Barclay, 15 Ala. 439; Cowles v. Cowles, 112 Mass. 298. See DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 745, at 789.

8. See DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 745.

9. Cal. Civ. Code 1881, § 55; Ga. Code 1878, § 1608.

10. Hampstead v. Plaistow, 49 N. H. 84, and Stewart on M. & D., §§ 150, 151.

11. See the case of Lyndon v. Lyndon, 69 Ill. 43, quoted in notes 3, 4, 5, 6, p. 509.

12. Stewart on M. & D., § 175. "Cohabitation is a matrimonial duty, and refusal to cohabit is not justified by any conduct short of a cause for divorce. The ecclesiastical courts, on the application of the other party, would enforce cohabitation on the part of the delinquent husband or wife. . . . Suits of this kind are still tions may be brought into play: 1. The general presumption in favor of marriage; 2, that of innocence; 3, that of life; and, 4, that of the due performance of their duties by public officers. All these presumptions are rebuttable.¹ It is doubtful whether they will all act in favor of third parties;² for instance, creditors.³

3. Presumption of Marriage.—It is not necessary for the party alleging a marriage to prove, in order to make out a prima facie case, the separate existence of each of the essentials, for marriage is favored in law.⁴ Thus, if the celebration of a marriage be proved, the contract,⁵ the capacity of the parties,⁶ in fact, the validity of the marriage⁷ is presumed. So, if the contract be proved, the capacity of the parties is presumed.⁸

4. Presumption of Innocence.—The presumption of innocence sometimes gives rise to a presumption of marriage.⁹ A man and woman cohabiting without being married are guilty of fornication,¹⁰ so when such cohabitation is under color and claim of brought in England, but have never been known in the United States." See title HUSBAND AND WIFE.

1. Port v. Port, 70 Ill. 484. "The cohabitation of two persons of different sexes, and their behavior in other respects as husband and wife, always afford an inference, of greater or less strength, that a marriage has been solemnized between them; yet such inference is destroyed by evidence that no marriage, in fact, ever was solemnized. Philbrick v. Spangler, 15 La. An. 46, 47; Goldbeck v. Goldbeck, 18 N. J. Eq. 42; Guardians of Poor v. Nathans, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 149.

2. See note 3 below.

3. Benavis v. Barba, 32 La. An. 1264. "The presumption of marriage, which results from reputation and long cohabitation, must yield to positive evidence to the contrary. Semble that such presumption only exists in favor of either party to the supposed marriage and of their children, but not of creditors, especially when both said parties deny ever having been married and having lived as husband and wife."

4. Piers v. Piers, 2 H. L. Cas. 331, 362; De Thoren v. Atty. Gen., L. R., 1 App. C. 686; Wilkie v. Collins, 48 Miss. 496; Caujolle v. Ferrie, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 127; Peck v. Peck, 12 R. I. 485. See note 7 below.

5. See note 7 below.

6. See note 7 below.

7. Wilkie v. Collins, 48 Miss. 496. "Society rests upon marriage, the law favors it, and when a man and woman have contracted marriage in due form the law will require clear proof to remove the presumption that the contract is legal and valid. A husband left his home in Mississippi, October 30th, 1859, and went to Louisiana on business, where he was last heard from by letter to his wife, November 30th, 1859, announcing that he was then sick in bed, and would return as soon as able to travel. He was of habitual delicate health, and his domestic relations had always been most agreeable. It was the belief of his family that he was dead, and on December 22nd, 1861, his wife married again. The absent husband was never heard of alive. Held, that under the circumstances the absent husband must be presumed dead, and that the second marriage is valid."

8. Caujolle v. Ferrie, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 177.

9. Blanchard v. Lambert, 43 Iowa 228. "Where a husband and wife separate and the former lives and cohabits for years with a woman whom he claims and who is reputed to be his wife, the law presumes a divorce from the first wife, and the latter may legally marry again. If the marriage was originally void, subsequent marriage will be presumed to have occurred, if the parties continued to cohabit together after the removal of the legal impediment." Holmes v. Holmes, 6 La. 463; Cargile v. Wood, 63 Mo. 501, 512; Caujolle v. Ferrie, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; Peck v. Peck, 12 R. I. 485; Carroll v. Carroll, 20 Tex. 731.

10. State v. Miller, 23 Minn. 352.

marriage, a marriage is often presumed;¹ but such presumption is to save the innocence of the parties, and will not arise if it will leave or involve one of them in guilt—as if a man is so cohabiting with two women,² or if one of the parties is proved to be married to someone else.³ So, sometimes, if a second marriage is proved, a previous divorce of the first one may be presumed,⁴ though in general a divorce can be proved only by the record;⁵ so death may, in such case, be presumed.⁶

5. Presumption of Life.—A party is, independently of statute, presumed alive for seven years after he is last heard of. After seven years he is presumed dead;⁷ but when presumed dead there is no presumption as to the precise time of his death;⁸ this from all the facts is to be determined by the court.⁹ But in marriage cases the presumption of life often conflicts with that of innocence,¹⁰ as where a husband, believing his wife dead, but having heard from her within seven years, marries again.¹¹ In such cases the two presumptions neutralize each other, and the court

1. Green v. State, 59 Ala. 68, 71; Lowry v. Coster, 91 Ill. 182; Proctor v. Bigelow, 38 Mich. 282; Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93; Jones v. Reddick, 79 N. Car. 290; Com. v. Stump, 53 Pa. St. 132.

2. George v. Thomas, 10 U. C. Q. B. 604; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 71 N. Y. 423.

3. Breaky v. Breaky, 2 U. C. Q. B. 340, 353; Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 24; Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 508; Blanchard v. Lambert, 43 Iowa 228; Harrison v. Lincoln, 48 Me. 205; Jones v. Jones, 45 Md. 144; Emerson v. Shaw, 56 N. H. 418; Senser v. Bower, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 450; Weinberg v. State, 25 Wis. 370.

4. See note 9, p. 520, and Hall v. Rawls, 27 Miss. 471.

5. That of course is the best evidence. Com. v. Boyer, 7 Allen (Mass.) 306; Streeter v. Streeter, 43 Ill. 155; State v. McElmurray, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 33, 41.

6. See the next five notes and Carroll v. Carroll, 20 Tex. 731.

7. Queen v. Lumley, Law R., 1 C. C. 196. "On a trial for bigamy, it was proved that the prisoner married A in 1836, left him in 1843, and married again in 1847. Nothing was heard of A after the prisoner left him, nor was any evidence given of his age. Held, that there was no presumption of law either in favor of or against the continuance of A's life up to 1847; but that it was a question for the jury, as a matter of fact, whether or not A was alive at the date of the second marriage."

Gilleland v. Martin, 3 McLean (U. S.) 490; Moffit v. Varden, 5 Cranch

(C. C.) 658; above case of Queen v. Lumley, at 199. LUSH, J., "The legislature, by this proviso, sanctions a presumption that a person who has not been heard of for seven years is dead; but the proviso affords no ground for the converse proposition, viz: that when a party has been seen or heard of within seven years, a presumption arises that he is still living. That as we have said, is always a question of fact." See note on PRESUMPTION OF DEATH, ante, part 2. § 2.

8. Rex v. Harbone, 2 Ad. & E. 540; Knight v. Nepean, 5 Barn. & Adol. 86, 94; Montgomery v. Bevans, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 653; Gilleland v. Martin, 3 McLean (U. S.) 490; Moffit v. Varden, 5 Cranch (C. C.) 658; Whiting v. Nicholl, 46 Ill. 230; Tisdale v. Connecticut Mut. etc. Ins. Co., 26 Iowa 170; Newman v. Jenkins, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 515; Bailey v. Bailey, 36 Mich. 181; Learned v. Corley, 43 Miss. 687; Hancock v. American Life Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 26, 30; Spencer v. Roper, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 333; Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 Ohio St. 155; Puckett v. State, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 355; Gorman v. State, 23 Tex. 646.

9. See note 7 above, and Murray v. Murray, 6 Oreg. 17, 25; Cameron v. State, 14 Ala. 546.

10. See note 9, p. 520, and Montgomery v. Bevans, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 653; 664; Dixon v. People, 18 Mich. 84; Gibson v. State, 38 Miss. 313; Senser v. Bower, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 450, 452; O'Gara v. Eisenlohr, 38 N. Y. 296, 301.

11. See note 7 above.

(judge or jury) decides as a matter of fact whether or not at the time of the second marriage the first was dissolved by death;¹ the leaning, however, is generally towards the presumption of innocence.²

6. Presumption of Performance of Duties.—That a celebrant as a public officer has done his duty is, presumed.³ Thus, if a marriage celebration be proved, it is presumed that the celebrant was duly authorized,⁴ that the proper preliminaries, as obtaining a licence,⁵ had been complied with;⁶ that the place⁷ and the forms used were legal.⁸

7. Proof in General.—The proof of a marriage may be direct or indirect; evidence may be given of the fact that competent parties have contracted marriage with proper celebration and consummation, or of the fact that they have lived together as husband and wife, and have been generally reputed as such. In some cases either kind of evidence will suffice; in some, direct evidence is necessary. In a question of a marriage vel non, the issue is the existence of the essentials of a valid marriage; if the celebration of a marriage is proved, the validity of the marriage,⁹ the contract¹⁰ and capacity of parties¹¹ is presumed as already shown; if the contract of a marriage is proved, if no celebration is necessary, the validity of the marriage,¹² the capacity of parties,¹³ is likewise presumed.¹⁴ So that the celebration or the con-

1. Kelly v. Drew, 12 Allen (Mass.) 107, 110.

2. See note 9, p. 520, and Williams Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 325; Yates v. Houston, 3 Tex. 433, 449; Canady v. Gorge, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 103, 109.

3. People v. Calder, 30 Mich. 85, 90. "Where the evidence shows that the parties appeared at a church and that the officiating minister then publicly, and in the presence of other persons in attendance, in fact performed a ceremony of marriage between such parties, and further, that the parties appeared to regard themselves as then married, it is fairly to be presumed, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that the ceremony was regular and legal, although the evidence fails to show what words were used by the parties or the minister, or the particulars of the ceremony, or what specific kind of ceremony was or would be according to the forms, usages or customs of such church."

Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 209; Vaughn v. Bijgers, 6 Ga. 188; Damon's Case, 6 Me. 148.

4. Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. (U. S.) 550; State v. Winkley, 14 N. H. 480; State v. Robbins, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 23.

See II, §§ 15, 16, 17 above.

5. See Piers v. Piers, 2 H. L. Cas. 331, and notes 4-10, p. 520.

6. See note 8, p. 520.

7. Sichel v. Lambert, 15 C. B., N. S. 781; Reg. v. Creswell, 1 Q. B. D. 446. We have seen that there is a presumption which favors marriage.

8. Rayaham v. Canton, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 293; People v. Calder, 30 Mich. 85, see note 3 above; Fleming v. People, 27 N. Y. 329.

9. Proof in General.—Wilkie v. Collins, 48 Miss. 496, 510, 511. See notes 5 to 8, p. 520, and note 1, p. 523.

10. Fleming v. People, 27 N. Y. 329, 335.

11. Blanchard v. Lambert, 43 Iowa 228, 230.

12. See also notes 5 to 8, p. 520. This results from the same presumption which favors marriage. In those States which hold that a celebration is not necessary, the marriage is held just as valid as where a celebration is required in England and some of the United States. The incidents of the marriage the marriage having been established, are the same. See Wilkie v. Collins, 48 Miss. 496, 511.

13. Hull v. Rawls, 27 Miss. 471.

14. Caujolle v. Ferrie, 26 Barb. (N.

tract may be the real issue. A contract without a celebration is, of course, no evidence of a celebration, but it is sometimes deemed so;¹ in such cases the marriage is said to be proved by indirect evidence.² The fact of the celebration is generally proved by the record thereof,³ or by witnesses present.⁴ The latter is considered stronger evidence,⁵ but it is not necessary under the rule for the best evidence to produce the record⁶ or the celebrant,⁷ unless, perhaps, the other evidence is purely circumstantial.⁸ The fact of the contract is generally proved by cohabitation and repute, hereafter discussed. The distinction generally made between proof of the fact of marriage and proof of the fact of matrimonial cohabitation applies properly only to cases when a celebration is necessary to the validity of the marriage,⁹ or is made an issue in the case.¹⁰

8. Marriage Records, Certificates, etc.—When the law requires a marriage to be recorded, such record, or the proper copy thereof,¹¹

Y.) 177; Starr v. Peck, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 270.

1. Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93, 97. "Evidence of such facts as those just stated, when clear of suspicion, has always been received as competent and sufficient upon which to found a presumption, as matter of fact, of the evidence of legal marriage. Where parties live together ostensibly as man and wife, demeaning themselves towards each other as such, and are received into society and treated by their friends and relations as having and being entitled to that status, the law will, in favor of morality and decency, presume that they have been legally married. 1 Taylor's Ev., §§ 140, 517; Hervey v. Hervey, 2 W. Bl. 877; Goodman v. Goodman, 28 L. J., Ch. 1; Jewell v. Jewell, 1 How. (U. S.) 219, 232. Indeed, the most usual way of proving marriage, except in actions for criminal conversation, and in prosecutions for bigamy, is by general reputation, cohabitation, and acknowledgment. Sellman v. Bowen, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 50; Boone v. Purnell, 28 Md. 607. This case is altogether unlike that of Denison v. Denison, 35 Md. 361."

2. State v. Winkley, 14 N. H. 480. See III, § 11. Camden v. Belgrade, 78 Me. 204. "On the question of whether there was a marriage, a living together for many years, being charged to have been without marriage, evidence of what kind of a family the woman came from and what kind of a home she left is competent."

3. Jackson v. People, 3 Ill. 231.

4. Com. v. Norcross, 9 Mass. 492, was a case of an indictment for adultery. "The recording of marriages was intended to perpetuate the evidence of the fact, after the witnesses present shall have died. But a copy of such record is not so satisfactory evidence as the testimony of witnesses. These last, indeed, are necessary to prove the identity of the parties. State v. Clark, 51 N. H. 456.

5. See last note and Warner v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 95, 101.

6. Jackson v. People, 3 Ill. 231. "On a trial for bigamy, a copy of the marriage licence and certificate of the officer or person solemnizing the marriage, properly authenticated by the clerk of the county commissioners' court, in whose office the original licence and certificate were filed, is admissible in evidence to prove such marriage. Under the statute of Illinois, it is optional with the prosecuting attorney, whether to use the marriage licence and certificate or other record evidence, or to prove the marriage by such other evidence as is admissible to prove a marriage in other cases." State v. Morison, 35 N. H. 22.

7. Coleman v. Coleman, 6 City H. Rec. 3, 4.

8. Com. v. Littlejohn, 15 Mass. 163.

9. Hubback on Succession, 237; Steadman v. Powell, 1 Add. Ec. R. 58, 64.

10. Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93. See III, § 13 below.

11. State v. Potter, 52 Vt. 33. "On trial on indictment for adultery, the State to prove marriage of respondent, offered in evidence a certified copy of a is direct evidence of the marriage¹ in criminal and civil cases alike;² but such record proves only what is required to be recorded,³ and is not conclusive.⁴ Such evidence, too, are certificates given by the celebrant to the parties,⁵ though this has been denied;⁶ but the delivery and custody of such certificates must be proved.⁷ So private records kept by a clergyman,⁸ certainly after his death;⁹ so entries in a family bible;¹⁰ so foreign records, if this is consistent with the law of the forum.¹¹ But in such record in the town clerk's office, which purported to be a record, not of a copy of the minister's record, but of the minister's certificate of the marriage, which certified the fact and date of the marriage, and stated the names, age and residence of the parties, the occupation of the respondent and the name of the minister, but did not state those items in separate columns. The copy contained no certification of what it was a copy, nor of what town the clerk whose name was signed thereto was clerk, nor of the name of the town wherein the record was made. Held, that under the maxim omnia presumuntur, etc., it was to be presumed that the record was made in, and that the clerk was the clerk of, the proper town; and that the record contained all that was necessary under the statute to make it authentic and valid as evidence of the fact of marriage." See also State v. Wallace, 9 N. H. 515.

1. See Jackson v. People, 3 Ill. 231, quoted in note 6, p. 523, and cases cited Woods, 2 Curt. Ecc. 516; Damon's Case, 6 Me. 148; Shorter v. Boswell, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 359; Milford v. Worcester, 7 Mass. 48; Jacocks v. Gillian, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 47; State v. Wallace, 9 N. H. 515; Jackson v. King, 5 Cowen (N. Y.) 237, 238.

2. See Jackson v. People, 3 Ill. 231, quoted in note 6, p. 523, and Woods v. in last note.

Tucker v. People, 122 Ill. 583. "On a prosecution for bigamy, the marriage may be shown by a certified copy of the marriage certificate, without an infringement of the constitutional right of the accused to meet his witnesses face to face."

3. State v. Colby, 51 Vt. 291, at 295. "The copies given in evidence do not contain that, but only a statement by the town clerk. . . . This is not one of the things required by the statute to be stated in the certificate to be issued by him. . . . This was not done, and so the copies of record fail to show the fact of marriage by lawful documentary evidence." Wiheh v. Law, 3 Stark 63; Perry v. Block, 1 Mo. 484.

4. Rice v. State, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 14; Woods v. Woods, 2 Curt. Ecc. 516; Cunningham v. Cunningham, 2 Dow 482.

5. Stockbridge v. Quicke, 3 Carr. & K. (England 1853) 305. "The clergyman gave the parties a certificate, and also made an entry of it in a register book which he kept. Held, that in support of a plea of coverture the certificate was receivable in evidence, as being a part of the transaction; but that the register book was not admissible in evidence."

See also Sichel v. Lambert, 15 C. B., N. S. 781; Wheeler v. McWilliams, 2 U. C. Q. B. 77; Squire v. State, 46 Ind. 459; Jones v. Jones, 18 Me. 308; Moon v. Com., 9 Leigh (Va.) 639. But see Com. v. Morris, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 391; Dower v. Kingdom, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 492.

6. Hill v. Hill, 32 Pa. St. 511; People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 349, 364; Gaines v. Relf, 12 How. (U. S.) 472.

7. Com. v. Morris, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 391. This rule is simply in accord with the general rules of evidence relating to the production and authentication of writings.

8. Blackburn v. Crawfords, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 175, 189; Clarke v. St. James, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 95. This comes under one of the well recognized exceptions to the rule which excludes hearsay evidence, namely, entries made in the regular course of business. See Evidence in this work.

9. Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 708; Kennedy v. Doyle, 10 Allen (Mass.) 161; Whitcher v. McLaughlin, 115 Mass. 167, 170; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Miller, 2 Colo. 442, 461.

10. Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 708, 719; Hubbard v. Lees, L. R., 1 Ex. 255.

11. 1 Bish. M. & D., § 475; Finlay v. Finlay, 31 L. J. Mat. Cas. 1495; cases the identity of the parties must always be shown,¹ though after lapse of time slight evidence thereof will suffice.² So a valid decree of divorce is evidence of a marriage.³

9. Witnesses of the Marriage.—Any person present at the marriage may testify thereto, whether a third party⁴ or the celebrant,⁵ and, in general, even the parties themselves.⁶ Such witnesses need not be able to testify to the sufficiency of the celebration;⁷ that is presumed until the contrary is shown.⁸ The celebrant may testify to his own qualifications.⁹ And, in general, it is sufficient to show that he was in the habit of acting in this capacity,¹⁰ or that he held himself out as qualified in the particular case.¹¹ In pedigree cases, members of the family may testify that a marriage was reputed in the family to have taken place.¹²

Caujolle v. Ferrie, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; 186.

1. Birt v. Barlow, 1 Dougl. 171, 174. "If neither the minister nor the clerk, nor any of the subscribing witnesses were acquainted with the married couple, in such a case, none of them might be able to prove the identity. But it may be proved in a thousand other ways. Suppose the bell ringers were called, and proved that they rang the bells and came immediately after the marriage, and were paid by the parties; suppose the handwriting of the parties were proved; suppose persons called who were present at the wedding dinner, etc., etc."

Damon's Case, 6 Me. 148; State v. Winkley, 14 N. H. 480; Com. v. Norcross, 9 Mass. 493; Northfield v. Plymouth, 20 Vt. 582.

2. See note 4, p. 520.

3. A divorce always presupposes a valid marriage. There cannot be a divorce unless there has been a marriage. See also Halbrook v. State, 34 Ark. 511; Amory v. Amory, 26 Wis. 152.

4. Brewer v. State, 59 Ind. 101, 103. "Each of the marriages is proved by persons who witnessed the ceremony, and the first, by the record of the licence and marriage. . . . No case can be found which holds that oral proof is not admissible on the question of marriage." See St. Devereux v. M. Dew Church, 2 Black W. 145; Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. (U. S.) 550, 589; Nixon v. Brown, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 157; State v. Williams, 20 Iowa 98; Com. v. Norcross, 9 Mass. 493; State v. Clark, 54 N. H. 456. See note 1 above.

5. Bird v. Com., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 800, 808; People v. Wigham, 1 Wheel. (C. C.) 115; State v. Goodrich, 14 W. Va. 834.

6. Mills v. U. S., 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 73.

7. Sussex v. Sussex, 11 Clark & F. 85; Wottrich v. Freeman, 71 N. Y. 601; Bird v. Com., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 800; American etc. Co. v. Rosenagle, 77 Pa. St. 507.

8. See last six sections above.

9. State v. Abbey, 29 Vt. 60; State v. McNally, 34 Me. 210; Bird v. Com., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 800.

10. State v. Abbey, 29 Vt. 60. "Upon a trial for bigamy, evidence that the person by whom a marriage ceremony was performed was reputed to be and that he acted as a magistrate or minister is admissible, and is sufficient prima facie proof of his official or ministerial character. Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 209; Damon's Case, 6 Me. 148; State v. Kean, 10 N. H. 147; State v. Robbins, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 23; Warner v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 95, 110.

11. See section 7, 6, of II, above; Rex v. Brampton, 10 East 282; Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. (U. S.) 550, 589; Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 209; Murphy v. State, 50 Ga. 150; Verholf v. Van Honnenlenger, 21 Iowa 429; People v. Calder, 30 Mich. 85; State v. Winkley, 14 N. H. 480; State v. Rood, 12 Vt. 396.

12. Kelly v. McGuire, 15 Ark. 555, 557. "Reputation or hearsay is admissible in all matters of pedigree; and so the repeated declarations of the father that he had married and by the marriage had two children, naming them; his recognition of them as his legitimate children their recognition of him as their father and of each other as brother and sister; and the fact that the marriage and legitimacy of the children were spoken of and known in the family, are sufficient to prove the marriage of the father and the legitimacy of the children." See also Chinac

10. The Parties as Witnesses.—By the common law, families were, by intermarriage, incapacitated from testifying for or against each other;¹ thus, a man being prosecuted for bigamy, his real (first) wife could not prove their marriage.² But the husband or wife could prove the marriage in a case affecting neither of them.³ Statutes have, in many States, abolished this incapacity, entirely or in part. But a statute abolishing incapacity from interest does not affect incapacity from marriage. Even by the common law, if no marriage exists, there can be no incapacity from marriage; therefore, parties can prove that an alleged marriage between them was no marriage,⁴ unless estopped,⁵ or unless there is sufficient evidence before the court to establish a prima facie marriage.⁶ Thus, in a prosecution for bigamy the prisoner's real wife cannot testify against him,⁷ but his second wife can.⁸ Under the Maryland statute, a party cannot prove the marriage after the other party's death;⁹ but can by Pennsylvania law.¹⁰ In criminal prosecutions, as for bigamy or adultery, the prisoner's confession of his marriage is sufficient proof of it.¹¹ In

v. Reinecker, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 613; Davis v. Wood, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 6; Mima Queen v. Hepburn, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 290; Chapman v. Chapman, 2 Conn. 347; Greenwood v. Spiller, 3 Ill. 502; Briary v. Harris, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 1164; Jones v. Jones, 45 Md. 144; Waldron v. Tuttle, 4 N. H. 371; Jackson v. Browner, 18 Johns (N. Y.) 37.

1. Cotton v. State, 62 Ala. 12, 13. "The common law excluded the husband and wife as a witness in any case, civil or criminal, in which either was a party. The principle of the rule required its application to all cases in which the interests of husband or wife were involved. Therefore, 'the wife is not a competent witness against any codefendant tried with her husband if the testimony concern the husband, though it be not directly given against him.' 1 Greenl. Ev., §§ 334-35."

On this subject see EVIDENCE, WITNESSES, and for a full discussion see HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, at p. 806 etc.

2. See Cotton v. State, 62 Ala. 12, quoted in last note, and Queen v. Madden, 14 U. C. Q. B. 588; Canton v. Bentley, 11 Mass. 441; State v. Patterson, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 346; Wilson v. Hill, 13 N. J. Eq. 143; Finney v. State, 3 Head (Tenn.) 544; State v. Wilson, 22 Iowa 364.

3. Wottrich v. Freeman, 71 N. Y. 601.

4. See article HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 806, etc.; Miles v. U. S., 103 U. S. 304; Robertson v. State, 42 Ala.

509; Reckstriker v. State, 31 Ark. 207; Johnson v. State, 61 Ga. 305; State v. Brown, 28 La. An. 279; Com. v. Wateman, 122 Mass. 43; Lebrun v. Lebrun, 55 Md. 496; Greenawalt v. McEnelly, 85 Pa. St. 352; Mann v. State, 44 Tex. 642.

5. See section 46 Stewart on Mar. & Div.

6. Rose v. Niles, 1 Abb. Adm. 411. This would not be so in case of marriage by fraud or force. Rex v. Hevice, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 114; Brown v. Brown, 1 Vt. 243.

7. See note 1 above. Finney v. State, 3 Head (Tenn.) 544; Queen v. Madden, 14 U. C. Q. B. 588; Miles v. U. S., 103 U. S. 304, 313; Johnson v. State, 61 Ga. 305; Finn v. Finn, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 339.

8. See above cases. She is not a wife at all; hence the reasons which would prevent do not exist.

9. Denison v. Denison, 35 Md. 361, 381; Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93.

10. Greenawalt v. McEnelly, 85 Pa. St. 352.

11. Reg. v. Simmonsto, 1 Car. & K. (Eng.) 164. "On an indictment for bigamy, the first marriage may be proved by the admissions of the prisoner; and it is for the jury to determine whether what he said was an admission that he had been legally married according to the law of the country where the marriage was solemnized." Cameron v. State, 14 Ala. 546; Squire v. State, 46 Ind. 459; Cook v.

civil suits, the declarations and admissions of the husband and wife are generally admissible to prove their marriage;¹ in the case of the husband, being admissions against interest;² and in any case, being part of the res gestæ of cohabitation and repute.³ (See title HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 806.)

11. Cohabitation and Repute.—When a marriage is proved by the fact that the parties lived together and were reputed to be husband and wife, it is said to be proved by cohabitation and repute. The facts that parties have publicly acknowledged each other as husband and wife,⁴ have assumed marriage rights, duties and obligations;⁵ have been generally reputed in the place of their residence to be husband and wife,⁶ are relevant to prove a contract of marriage between them, and, consequently, in cases where no celebration is necessary, a valid marriage.⁷ But in

State, 11 Ga. 53; Ham's Case, 11 Me. 391; Stanglein v. State, 17 Ohio St. 453; State v. Medbury, 8 R. I. 543; O' Neale v. Com., 17 Gratt. (Va.) 582. But see State v. Roswell, 6 Conn. 446; West v. State, 1 Wis. 209.

1. Jones v. Reddick, 79 N. Car. 290; Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. (U. S.) 550; Williams v. State, 54 Ala. 131; Fuller v. Fuller, 17 Cal. 605, 611; Murphy v. State, 50 Ga. 150; Squire v. State, 46 Ind. 459; Barnum v. Barnum, 42 Md. 251; State v. Libby, 44 Me. 469; State v. McDonald, 25 Mo. 176; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 71 N. Y. 423; Kenyon v. Ashbridge, 35 Pa. St. 157.

Womack v. Tankersley, 78 Va. 242. "Statements by a man and woman that they are husband and wife, cohabitation as such and recognition of offspring, held sufficient evidence of marriage."

2. Greenawalt v. McEnelly, 85 Pa. St. 352. "The admissions of a party of the fact of his marriage are against his interest, and when made under circumstances of deliberation are entitled to great weight. Denials, on the contrary, being declarations in his own interest, are entitled to little weight in opposition thereto."

3. Guardians of Poor v. Nathans, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 149, 178.

4. Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Miller, 2 Colo. 442 at 461. "It will be conceded that a declaration made by Buger as to the fact of his marriage would be held admissible. Caujolle v. Ferrie, 23 N. Y. 104; State v. Greenwell, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 414. . . . The behavior of two persons of different sexes as husband and wife always affords an inference of greater or less strength that a marriage has been solemnized between them. Their conduct being susceptible of two opposite explanations, we are bound to assume it to be moral rather than immoral, and credit is to be given to their own assertions and acts, whether express or implied, of a fact peculiarly within their own knowledge. We have this man and woman travelling together, surrounded with small children; their wearing apparel and bedding in the same trunks, and their initials on them. These facts certainly indicate a very intimate relation, and one that would warrant the presumption of marriage on the principle above stated." Barnum v. Barnum, 42 Md. 251, 296; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 71 N. Y. 423; In re Taylor, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 611, 617; Jones v. Reddick, 79 N. Car. 290.

5. Com. v. Hurley, 14 Gray (Mass.) 411. "Evidence that a woman occupied the same bed with the defendant in this tenement and was seen getting dinner and doing other household duties there in his absence is competent to prove her to be his wife."

6. Boone v. Purnell, 28 Md. 607, 627. The opinion must not be divided. Cunningham v. Cunningham, 2 Dow 482, 511; Yardley's Estate, 75 Pa. St. 207, 212. But see Badger v. Badger, 88 N. Y. 546.

7. Green v. State, 59 Ala. 68, 70. "Marriage may be proved by cohabitation and the confessions of the parties." This case was an indictment for fornication or adultery. See also notes 4 and 5 above and Breadalbane v. Breadalbane, Law R., 1 H. L. S. 182, 189; Holmes v. Holmes, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 525; Budington v. Munson, 33 Conn. 481, 487; Bowers v. Van Winkle, 41 Ind. 432; Miller v. White, cases where a celebration is necessary, evidence of a contract only is not relevant to prove the celebration;¹ still, if the parties have cohabited, such evidence may be, in certain cases, deemed relevant, on the presumption already discussed, that such cohabitation was lawful.² Cohabitation and repute may thus be direct or indirect evidence of a valid marriage; it is in neither case more than prima facie evidence,³ and may be rebutted by showing absence of the essential contract⁴ or capacity;⁵ whether it is so rebutted or not being left to the court or jury to determine from all the facts.⁶ As generally stated, "where parties live together ostensibly as man and wife, demeaning themselves towards each other as such, and are received into society and treated by their friends and relations as having and being entitled to that status, the law will, in favor of morality and decency, presume they have been legally married."⁷ Such presumption is generally rebutted by showing that the parties intended their connection to be illicit,⁸ or that there was an impediment to their marriage.⁹ If, when the connection began, it was intended to be illicit, this intention is presumed to continue, unless evidence is produced (it may be slight) of a change of mind.¹⁰ If, when the connection began, the parties desired or intended marriage, but an impediment existed, and this desire or intention is shown to have continued after the impediment was removed, and if, at such later time, the parties cohabited even temporarily in a place where marriage without celebration is valid, 80 Ill. 580; Proctor v. Bigelow, 38 Mich. 282; Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93; Henderson v. Cargill, 31 Miss. 367; Richard v. Brehm, 73 Pa. St. 140.

1. See II, section 7 above.

2. See III, section 4 above and Cargile v. Wood, 63 Mo. 501; Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598, 600.

3. Wilkinson v. Payne, 4 Term Rep. 468, 469; Myatt v. Myatt, 44 Ill. 473; Guardians of Poor v. Nathans, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 149, 153.

4. As that the union was illicit it must be borne in mind that very often the appearances of surrounding of those living in illicit intercourse and of married people are identically the same. Breadalbane v. Breadalbane, Law R., 1 H. L. S. 182; Floyd v. Calvert, 53 Miss. 37, 45; Barnum v. Barnum, 42 Md. 251, 296; Goldbeck v. Goldbeck, 18 N. J. Eq. 42, 43.

5. As that one was already married. Breaky v. Breaky, 2 U. C. Q. B. 349, 353; Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598, 600; Clark v. Cassidy, 64 Ga. 662, 665; Cram v. Burnham, 5 Me. 213, 215; Collins v. Collins, 80 N. Y. 1, 9; Emerson v. Shaw, 56 N. H. 418.

6. Breaky v. Breaky, 2 U. C. Q. B. 349; Rose v. Niles, 1 Abb. Adm. 411, 417; Allen v. Hall, 2 Nott & McC. (N. Car.) 114, 116.

7. Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93, 97.

8. See note 3 above.

9. See note 4 above.

10. Minnesota v. Worthingham, 23 Minn. 528, at 536. "The point is presented by counsel for the State that no presumption of marriage can arise in this case from any cohabitation of the parties occurring after the defendant's divorce because of its illicit character in the beginning. An intercourse originally unlawful and lustful from choice undoubtedly raises the presumption that its character remains such during its continuance. But this is a presumption not of law, but of fact for the consideration of the jury in connection with the particular facts and circumstances of the case." Cargile v. Wood, 63 Mo. 501; Barnum v. Barnum, 42 Md. 251, 297; and see Lapsley v. Grier, 1 H. L. Cas. 498, 503; Cunningham v. Cunningham, 2 Dow 482; Cram v. Burnham, 5 Me. 213, 215.

their marriage is proved;¹ and, if they were in a place where a celebration was necessary, upon slight additional evidence, a new celebration will be presumed;² at all events, the jury may decide in cases where proof by cohabitation and repute is proper, whether or not there was at any time a valid marriage.³ The weight of such evidence must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case.⁴ Courts have failed to note in every case the distinction between proof of a marriage per verba de presenti and proof of a marriage by celebration.

12. When Proof by Cohabitation and Repute Is Sufficient.—(1) In all cases, except when a celebration is alleged, as hereafter shown, in which no celebration is necessary to the validity of the marriage, the marriage may be proved by cohabitation and repute.⁵ (2) In all cases, except those mentioned in the next section, though a celebration is necessary to the validity of the marriage, it may be proved by cohabitation and repute.⁶ Thus, this is sufficient to prove marriage in actions by the widow for her dower.⁷

1. Blanchard v. Lambert, 43 Iowa 228. "When a husband and wife separate and the former lives and cohabits for years with a woman whom he claims and who is reputed to be his wife, the law presumes a divorce from the first wife and the latter may legally marry again. If the marriage was originally void, subsequent marriage will be presumed to have occurred if the parties continued to cohabit together after the removal of the legal impediment."

Collins v. Collins, 80 N. Y. 1, 9. But see Cram v. Burnham, 5 Me. 213; O' Gara v. Eisenlohr, 38 N. Y. 296, 302; Hunt's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 294, 297.

2. Wilkinson v. Payne, 4 Term Rep. 468; Breaky v. Breaky, 2 U. C. Q. B. 349; Rose v. Clark, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 574; Physick's Appeal, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 179, 187; State v. Whaley, 10 S. Car. 500; Williams v. Williams, 46 Wis. 464, 475. See also Lapsley v. Grierson, 1 H. L. Cas. 498; Hunt's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 294.

3. See note 10, p. 528.

4. This is a self-evident proposition. Steadman v. Powell, 1 Add. Ec. R. 58, 64, 65; Weatherford v. Weatherford, 20 Ala. 548, 557; Cram v. Burnham, 5 Me. 213, 215; Jackson v. Claw, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 346; Rose v. Clark, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 574, 580; Senser v. Bower, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 450, 452; Purcell v. Purcell, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 507; Bartlett v. Musliner, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 235. "It cannot be shown by general reputation that no marriage existed."

5. Richard v. Brehm, 73 Pa. St. 140, 14 C. of L.—34

144. "What kind of evidence is held to be satisfactory? Marriage may be proved in civil cases by reputation, declarations and conduct of the parties and other circumstances usually accompanying that relation. 2 Greenl. Ev., § 462. For civil purposes reputation and cohabitation are sufficient evidence of marriage. Senser v. Bower, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 450. In all civil cases involving merely the right of property the fact of marriage may be proved by long continued cohabitation as man and wife. Thorndell v. Morison, 1 Casey (Pa.) 326. Both cohabitation and reputation are necessary to establish a presumption of marriage, where there is no proof of actual marriage. Com. v. Stump, 3 P. F. Smith (Pa.) 132." See also De Thoren v. Atty. Gen., L. R., 1 App. C. 686; Campbell v. Campbell, Law R., 1 H. L. S. 182, 200; Langtry v. State, 30 Ala. 536; Murphy v. State, 50 Ga. 150; Squire v. State, 46 Ind. 459; State v. Wilson, 22 Iowa 364; Com. v. Jackson, 11 Bush (Ky.) 679; Blasini v. Blasini, 30 La. An. 1388; Cayford's Case, 7 Me. 157; State v. Armington, 25 Minn. 29, 35; Com. v. Holt, 121 Mass. 61. As to what cohabitation and repute is, see § 11 ante.

6. See cases in notes to section 11 above.

7. Sellman v. Bowen, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 50. "In an action at law for dower, . . . general reputation, cohabitation and acknowledgment are sufficient evidence of marriage in all or marriage rights,¹ or for the death of her husband;² by an heir;² by the husband and wife, as, of detinue,³ or ejectment;⁴ or against the husband and wife;⁴ or by the husband for slander of his wife;⁵ or against the husband for a debt of his wife;⁶ in actions for necessities;⁷ in cases of legitimacy;⁸ in suits for alimony;⁹ and in divorce cases.¹⁰

13. When Celebration and Actual Marriage Must be Proved.—In all cases in which a party alleges that a marriage was celebrated at a particular time and place, he must prove that it was so celebrated at that time and place, and cannot prove cohabitation and repute to raise a presumption of a marriage at some other time and place.¹¹

2. In all cases (if a celebration is necessary to the validity of the marriage) when proof of a marriage would render one of the parties criminally liable, as in prosecutions for bigamy,¹² adultery,¹³ or incest,¹⁴ and in actions for criminal conversation,¹⁵ the cases, except in actions for criminal conversation and in prosecutions for bigamy." See also Fleming v. Fleming, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 234; Young v. Foster, 14 N. H. 114, 118; Pearson v. Howey, 11 N. J. L. 12, 13; Chambers v. Dickson, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 475.

1. Stover v. Boswell, 3 Dana (Ky.) 232.

2. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Hall, 61 Pa. St. 361. "A man was found dead on a railroad. . . . Marriage in Pennsylvania is a civil contract and is provable in all civil actions by cohabitation, reputation, acknowledgment of the parties, reception of the family, and any other circumstances from which it may be inferred." Fleming v. Fleming, 4 Bing. 266.

3. Crozier v. Gano, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 257.

4. Hammick v. Bronson, 5 Day (Conn.) 290, 293; Newburyport v. Boothbay, 9 Mass. 414.

5. Hobdy v. Jones, 2 La. An. 944.

6. Tracey v. M'Arlton, 7 Dowl. Pr. 532.

7. See last note.

8. Eaton v. Bright, 2 Lee 85; 6 Eng. Ec. 47; Cheseldine v. Brewer, 1 Har. & McH. (Md.) 152; Clayton v. Wardell, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 214.

9. Trimble v. Trimble, 2 Ind. 76; Purcell v. Purcell, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 507.

10. See DIVORCE. Patrickson v. Patrickson, L. R., 1 P. & D. 86; Morris v. Morris, 20 Ala. 168, 172; Harman v. Harman, 16 Ill. 85, 88; Burns v. Burns, 13 Fla. 369; Wright v. Wright, 6 Tex. 3; Hitchcox v. Hitchcox, 2 W. Va. 435;

Mitchell v. Mitchell, 11 Vt. 134; and compare Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598.

11. Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93, 98. "And the appellee having assumed to prove that a valid marriage was celebrated on the particular occasion testified to by this witness, herself being a party to the transaction, it was incumbent upon him to show affirmatively that such marriage was in all respects in conformity to law; and failing in this, he cannot be permitted to rely upon other facts and circumstances of the case as the ground of a presumption that a marriage may have taken place between the parties on some other and different occasion from that spoken of by the witness. Blackburn v. Crawford, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 175."

12. See notes 7, p. 529, and 2 above. Breaky v. Breaky, 2 U. C. Q. B. 349, 358; Brown v. State, 52 Ala. 338; Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598; People v. Humphrey, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 314; Weinky v. State, 25 Wis. 370, 377.

13. Buchanan v. State, 55 Ala. 154. "In criminal prosecutions for adultery, marriage is a necessary ingredient of the offence, and must be proved; and while the declarations and conduct of the parties living together, holding out to the world that such relation exists between them, are competent evidence, general reputation is not." Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598; Wedgwood's Case, 8 Me. 75; Com. v. Norcross, 9 Mass. 492.

14. State v. Roswell, 6 Conn. 446.

15. Proctor v. Bigelow, 38 Mich. 282. "Marriage is provable by conduct and reputation in all civil cases involving celebration must be proved.¹ In such cases cohabitation and repute is not evidence.²

14. Proof of Foreign Marriages.—In setting up a marriage which took place in another country or state, it is usual to prove first the foreign law, then a marriage by contract or by celebration, as required thereby.³ If the fact of a celebration is proved, it is presumed in conformance with the foreign law,⁴ though that the special requirements of such law must be shown to have been complied with, has been sometimes held.⁵ If no foreign law be proved, there is a presumption that it recognizes as a valid marriage any cohabitation of competent parties with matrimonial consent.⁶ And courts will not presume the existence of marriage laws differing from those of the forum.⁷ A foreign marriage may also be proved by proper copies of the records.⁸ The more difficult the proof, the less will be the strictness of the court.⁹

15. Special Statutes.—In some of the States a statute provides for the proof of marriage; thus, in Massachusetts, where the record or cohabitation and repute is evidence of a marriage in any case,¹⁰ so in Minnesota.¹¹ But the California statute seems simply declaratory of the law heretofore stated.¹² property rights, but not in criminal cases nor actions for seduction." Birt v. Barlow, 1 Doug. 171; Catherwood v. Caslon, 13 Mees. & W. 261.

1. As ante sections 7 to 13.

2. See § 11 above, notes 1-6, p. 528.

3. The People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 349. "Where, in a prosecution for bigamy, the first marriage is alleged to have taken place in another State, proof not only of a marriage in fact, but of a valid marriage, according to the laws of that State, must be made by the prosecution." Montague v. Montague, 2 Add. Ec. R. 375; 2 Eng. Ecc. 350, 451; Reg. v. Savage, 13 Cox (C. C.) 178; Wottrich v. Freeman, 71 N. Y. 601; Warner v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 95, 104.

4. Reed v. Hudson, 13 Ala. 570; and see Breaky v. Breaky, 2 U. C. Q. B. 349, 360; Ward v. Dey, 1 Rob. Ecc. 759; Steadman v. Powell, 1 Add. Ec. R. 58; 2 Eng. Ec. 26; Starr v. Peck, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 270, 272; Caujolle v. Ferrie, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 177, 185; Bird v. Com., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 800. See section 4, PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE.

5. Catherwood v. Caslon, 13 Mees. & W. 260, 265. "Unless the plaintiff prove a marriage whereby the relation of husband and wife is really created, he cannot succeed; and the mere proof of a ceremony which the parties suppose to be sufficient to constitute that relation is not enough . . ." Smith v. Smith, 1 Tex. 621, 629; Reg. v. Smith, 14 U. C. Q. B. 565.

6. Hutchins v. Kimmell, 31 Mich. 126, 132; Williams v. State, 54 Ala. 131, 137; Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93, 97; Com. v. Kenney, 120 Mass. 387; Starr v. Peck, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 270; Evans v. Reynolds, 32 Ohio St. 163; Hynes v. McDermott, 82 N. Y. 41, 44.

7. State v. Patterson, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 346, 356.

8. See section 8 above, and State v. Goodrich, 14 W. Va. 834, 840; Finlay v. Finlay, 31 Law J., M. C. 149; State v. Dooris, 40 Conn. 145, 147; American etc. Co. v. Rosenagle, 77 Pa. St. 507, 514.

9. Phillips v. Gregg, 10 Watts (Pa.) 158, 169.

10. Mass. P. L. 1882, p. 811, 812; Com. v. Morris, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 391; Means v. Welles, 12 Met. (Mass.) 356, 361; Com. v. Hurley, 14 Gray (Mass.) 411; Com. v. Holt, 121 Mass. 61. "Upon an indictment for adultery, the fact that the defendant was married may, under the Gen. Stat., ch. 106, § 22, be proved by his admissions or by general repute."

11. Minn. Stat. 1878, p. 806; State v. Armington, 25 Minn. 29, 35, and cases there cited.

12. Cal. Civ. Code 1881, § 57; Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598, 602, and the whole

IV. NULLITY SUITS—1. In General.—A nullity suit is a suit brought for the purpose (1) of having a void marriage judicially declared to be void, or (2) of having a voidable marriage judicially made void. Nullity suits are frequently in statutes and in decisions called divorce suits,¹ and there seems to be precedent for so calling them,² but properly a divorce suit is a suit for the purpose of dissolving a marriage,³ and the consequences of a divorce are very different from those of a decree of nullity, as the latter does not only destroy marriage rights, but declares they never existed.⁴

2. Jactitation of Marriage.—A suit, which may partake of the nature of a nullity suit, but which in modern times is very rare,⁵ is the suit of jactitation of marriage. This is where a party, whether a man or a woman, complains in the ecclesiastical courts⁶ that another party falsely, maliciously and without authority, boasts that they are married.⁷ There are three defences: (1) denial of the boasting; (2) allegation of a marriage justifying it; (3) or of authority to assert the marriage.⁸ When the second law on the subject is stated in Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 1, where it is held that a ceremony is not necessary in California to the validity of a marriage. See the last three sections above.

1. Thus Maryland Code 1888, p. 143, provides that divorces may be granted for any cause rendering the marriage null and void ab initio. Bishop M. & D., § 226; Shelford M. & D. 182, 365; 1 Fras. Dom. Rel. 709.

Stewart on M. & D., § 198. "A decree declaring void a voidable or a void marriage is a decree of nullity, and should be distinguished from a decree of divorce. The word 'divorce' is, however, improperly used in both these senses, and most divorce statutes include grounds of nullity among the enumerated causes for divorce."

2. SIR JOHN NICHOLL, in the case of Elliott and Sugden v. Gurr, 2 Phillim. 16, 1 Eng. Ecc. 166, at 168, quoted LORD COKE, Co. Litt. 33a. "If a marriage de facto be voidable by divorce, in respect of consanguinity, affinity, precontract, or such like, whereby the marriage would have been dissolved, etc."

3. See article on DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 745.

4. Stewart on M. & D., § 141. "The decree is simply declaratory; it declares, it does not make, the marriage void." Rawdon v. Rawdon, 28 Ala. 565; Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371; Minvielle v. Minvielle, 15 La. An. 342; Lincoln v. Lincoln, 6 Rob. (N.

Y.) 525, 528; Smith v. Morehead, 6 Jones (S. Car.) Eq. 360; Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. (U. S.) 550, 582.

5. Walton v. Rider, 1 Lee 16; 5 Eng. Ecc. Reports 289. "This is a cause of jactitation of marriage brought by the Rev. William Walton against Rachel Rider by letters of request from Ely. Jactitation confessed; Rider justified, and pleaded marriage."

Note (a). "Suits for jactitation of marriage were of very familiar occurrence in the ecclesiastical courts of this country till the year 1776, when they were brought into disrepute by the celebrated trial of the Duchess of Kingston for bigamy before the House of Lords."

These suits are unknown in the United States, there being no ecclesiastical courts.

Doughty v. Doughty, 28 N. J. Eq. 581, at 588. "If the appellant, as he claimed, was not married to the respondent, but she was claiming that he was married, and he wished to put an end to such boastings, such a controversy was a private one between these two parties . . . and must be settled in the same way as other litigations are put to the test."

6. See note 5 above.

7. See above and Bodkin v. Case, Milw. 355, 366; Hawke v. Carrie, 2 Hagg. Const. 280; 4 Eng. Ecc. 543. See fully 2 Bishop M. & D., §§ 290, 750, 759.

8. See above cases.

defence is made, the suit is really one of nullity. Whether the decree in such case binds anyone but the parties is doubtful;¹ it does not if collusively obtained.²

3. Kinds of Nullity Suits.—As already stated, there are two kinds of nullity suits; one, in cases where the marriage is void anyhow, or is voidable without decree, and the decree is declaratory only; the other, in cases where the marriage is voidable and requires a decree to render it void. The two suits are distinct as to jurisdiction, procedure and causes, and the distinction must be carefully maintained.³

4. Suits to Declare Marriage Void Where No Decree Is Necessary.—A marriage which is void per se ab initio, may, by judicial decree, be declared void;⁴ such are marriages void for want of capacity⁵ or celebration.⁶ Likewise a marriage which is voidable by the parties;⁷

1. Duchess of Kingston, 20 How. St. Tr. 355; Clews v. Bathurst, 2 Strange 960; Da Costa v. Villa Real, 2 Strange 961.

2. Duchess of Kingston, 20 How. St. Tr. 355, 538; Walton v. Rider, 1 Lee 16; 5 Eng. Ecc. 289, 290 note.

3. Schafberg v. Schafberg, 52 Mich. 429.

4. Anonymous, 24 N. J. Eq. 19. "The court of chancery is restricted in its jurisdiction in suits for divorce to the legislation on the subject, and in suits for nullity of marriage to cases within the inherent and undoubted jurisdiction of equity. This court will, outside of its statutory jurisdiction, annul a contract of marriage only when the contract is void; not when it is voidable merely . . ." At p. 20. "In McClurg v. Terry, a decree of nullity was granted on the ground that no marriage contract was in fact intended by the parties; that it was a marriage in jest. In Selah v. Selah, 8 C. E. Green (N. J.) 185, decided in May term 1872, CHANCELLOR ZABRISKI says: 'In the case of McClurg v. Terry, it was held that this court has the power not only to dissolve legal contracts, which is the proper meaning of the word divorce as used in the constitution and statutes on the subject, but also to declare contracts of marriage void when entered into under circumstances that make such contracts invalid.'

. . . In the case of Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 343, the marriage contract was annulled for want of mental capacity to contract in one of the parties. In Ferlat v. Gogon, Hopk. (N. Y.) 478, it was annulled for fraud." See also Crump v. Morgan, 3

Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 91, 98; Waymire v. Jetmore, 22 Ohio St. 271; Clark v. Field, 13 Vt. 460; Fuller v. Fuller, 33 Kan. 582.

It is important to distinguish these suits from suits for nullity under the ecclesiastical law; in these cases the marriage is void without decree; in the others a decree is necessary. Schafberg v. Schafberg, 52 Mich. 429.

5. See II, sections 2 to 5, g, as to capacity.

6. See II, section 7, a, b, c, as to the celebration.

7. We have seen in II, section 2 above, what a voidable marriage is. It is a well recognized principle in the United States that no court can decree void a marriage otherwise valid except by statute. See Stewart on M. & D., § 144; 1 Bish. M. & D., § 72; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 39 Wis. 165, 171. But see Rose v. Rose, 9 Ark. 507.

Dissent Avoiding Marriage.—When the contract essential to the validity of a marriage is wanting because a party is unable to give the required consent or does not really consent, being induced thereto by fraud, error or duress, such party on becoming free to consent, or when the deception has been exposed, or the pressure removed, may or may not recognize the marriage; if he does, he assents, he confirms it (Reading v. Ludlow, 52 Vt. 628, 632); if he does not, he dissents, he avoids it. Waymire v. Jetmore, 22 Ohio St. 271, 273; Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 343, 344; Crump v. Morgan, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 91, 96; Coonce v. Wallace, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 194, 198; People v. Slack, 15 Mich. 193, 198; People v. Bennett, 39 Mich. 208, 209;

such are marriages voidable for lunacy,¹ nonage,² or want of consent;³ for fraud,⁴ error⁵ or duress.⁶ In such cases courts of equity, in the exercise of their ordinary jurisdiction, independently of any provision of the divorce law, may pass such a decree.⁷ Other courts, by special provision, such as divorce courts, may pass such a decree.⁸ In general, either party may complain;⁹ but one cannot allege his own fraud¹⁰ or duress,¹⁰ nor can one allege want of consent if he has ratified the marriage.¹¹ A lunatic may apply if he recovers his mind,¹² otherwise his guardian or committee applies.¹³ A sane party who has married a lunatic in ignorance and good faith may also complain.¹⁴ Per-

McDeed v. McDeed, 67 Ill. 545, 550.

Since a marriage without consent is void unless confirmed, a failure to assent is sufficient dissent (Shaffer v. State, 20 Ohio 1, 6, 7; Crump v. Morgan, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 91, 96; Jenkins v. Jenkins, 2 Dana (Ky.) 102), though dissent is generally expressed by refusal to cohabit or to acknowledge the marriage. McDeed v. McDeed, 67 Ill. 545, 550; People v. Slack, 15 Mich. 193, 198. In general, only the party whose consent was not given may dissent; but in cases of want of age (People v. Bennett, 39 Mich. 208, 209) and perhaps of want of mental capacity (see Hancock v. Peaty, L. R., 1 P. & D. 335, 341; Banker v. Banker, 62 N. Y. 409) either party may.

1. See II, section 5, a, above and Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 343, quoted in note 4, p. 533.

2. Walls v. State, 32 Ark. 565, 570; see II, section 5 above.

3. See II, section 6, a, b; Clark v. Field, 13 Vt. 460, 472; McClurg v. Terry, 21 N. J. Eq. 225.

4. Ferlat v. Gogon, Hopk. (N. Y.) Ch. 478, and note 3 above.

5. Reg. v. Millis, 10 Clark & F. 534, 785; and note 3 above.

6. As to this class of cases see Stewart on M. & D., §§ 139-141; Ferlat v. Gogon, Hopk. (N. Y.) Ch. 478, and above note 3; also ante, part II, § 6.

7. Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 343, 347. "If a man marry his mother or his sister, they are husband and wife, say the old cases, until a divorce and the marriage be judicially dissolved (39 Edw. III, 31 b; 9 Hen. VI, 34; 18 Hen. VI, 32; Bro. tit. BASTARDY, pl. 23; 1 Roll. Abr. 340, A. 1, 4, 357, A. 3) . . . All matrimonial and other causes of ecclesiastical cognizance belonged originally to the temporal courts. . . . and when the spiritual courts cease, the cognizance of such causes would seem, as of course, to revert back to the lay tribunals. I apprehend, then, that the power is necessarily cast upon this court." See also cases quoted in note 4, p. 533. Rawdon v. Rawdon, 28 Ala. 565; Tefft v. Tefft, 35 Ind. 44, 50; Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371; True v. Ranney, 21 N. H. 52; Scott v. Shulfeldt, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 43; Crump v. Morgan, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 91, 98; Waymire v. Jetmore, 22 Ohio St. 271; Lebarron v. Lebarron, 35 Vt. 365.

8. See Md. R. C., 1878, art. 51, § 12, p. 480; Cal. Civ. Code 1881, § 82; Del. Laws 1875, p. 475; Mass. P. S. 1882, p. 809; Vt. Laws 1882, §§ 2320, 2347, 2351.

9. See cases cited in note 7; Stewart on M. & D., §§ 58, 61, 67, 72 and 79.

Fuller v. Fuller, 33 Kan. 582. "A man who innocently marries a woman having an undivorced husband living may, independent of the statutes relating to divorce and alimony, maintain an action to have the colorable marriage declared null."

10. This would be in direct conflict with the well known and universally recognized equitable maxims of "He who seeks equity must do equity," and that complainants must come into court with clean hands. See Stewart on M. & D., §§ 46, 150, 151.

11. Such assent is usually given by cohabitation or acknowledgment of the marriage or by the assumption or continuance of the marriage status. See generally Cauleton v. Hood, 56 Ala. 519; McDeed v. McDeed, 67 Ill. 545, 550; People v. Slack, 15 Mich. 193.

12. Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 343.

13. Waymire v. Jetmore, 22 Ohio St. 271. See also II, section 5, a.

14. Banker v. Banker, 63 N. Y. 409.

haps, ever after the death of the parties, a decree could be obtained on the application of anyone interested.¹

Statutes sometimes provide for all the proceedings in these cases.

The decree in this class of nullity suits is simply declaratory: it declares, it does not make, the marriage void²; it is a judicial determination of the status of the parties, and though perhaps not binding on persons not parties to the suit,³ it practically settles the question of the validity or invalidity of the marriage. Of course it settles the existence or not of any marriage personal or property rights.⁴

5. Nullifying Voidable Marriage Where Decree Is Necessary—a. Jurisdiction.—Jurisdiction in the United States to declare void a marriage otherwise valid, as is the case with jurisdiction to grant a divorce,⁵ depends entirely upon statute.⁶ In England the ecclesiastical courts alone granted divorces and declared marriages void for the canonical impediments of impotence and consanguinity and affinity,⁷ and as no courts in the United States have succeeded to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction,⁸ courts of equity, for example, cannot as such avoid a marriage for impotency⁹ or consanguinity.¹⁰ Statutes sometimes confer this jurisdiction in unequivocal terms, but quite often include it with divorce jurisdiction, providing, for example, as in Maryland, that a divorce may be granted for impotence, etc. In such cases the word "divorce" will be construed to mean decree of nullity;¹¹ and even where jurisdiction in such cases is not expressly given it has sometimes been held to be impliedly given with divorce jurisdic-

"In an action to annul a marriage upon the ground of lunacy of the husband it appeared that two days after the marriage an inquisition in such proceedings was found declaring the husband to be of unsound mind and that he had been so for six months previous." Complainant did not prove lunacy was permanent, and for this and other reasons complaint was dismissed. See Hancock v. Peaty, L. R., 1 P. & D. 335, 341.

1. Inferences from cases in note 7, p. 534.

2. Rawdon v. Rawdon, 28 Ala. 565; Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371; Minvielle v. Minvielle, 15 La. An. 342; Lincoln v. Lincoln, 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 525; Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 343; Smith v. Morehead, 6 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 360; Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. (U. S.) 550, 582.

3. Duchess of Kingston, 25 How St. Tr. 355, 538.

4. 2 Bish. M. & D. 756; Perry v. Meddowcraft, 10 Beav. 122; Harrison v. Southampton, 17 Eng. L. & Eq.

364, 367; Clews v. Bathhurst, 2 Strange 960; Da Costa v. Villa, 2 Strange 961.

5. See title DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 745.

6. Hopkins v. Hopkins, 39 Wis. 167. "Courts of law or equity in this country in matters of divorce have only the power conferred on them by statute." Bishop M. & D., § 72. But see Rose v. Rose, 9 Ark. 507.

7. Elliott v. Garr, 2 Phillim. 16, 1 Eng. Ecc. 166, 168; see II, sections 4 to 7.

8. Anon., 24 N. J. Eq. 19; Penquet v. Phelps, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 566; Burtis v. Burtis, Hopk. (N. Y.) Ch. 557, 565; Perry v. Perry, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 501; Bowers v. Bowers, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 55; Lebarron v. Lebarron, 35 Vt. 365. But see Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 343.

9. Anon., 24 N. J. Eq. 19; Burtis v. Burtis, Hopk. (N. Y.) Ch. 557.

10. Bowers v. Bowers, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 19.

11. Md. Code, 1888, p. 143; Mattison

tion.¹ Statutes, also in some States create additional causes for avoiding marriages.² As to the persons and their status, jurisdiction, as in divorce cases, depends upon domicil.³

The principles applied and procedure as to the canonical disabilities is like that of the ecclesiastical courts,⁴ and, in general, is like that in divorce suits.⁵

b. Causes.—The causes of nullity are those of the canonical law, to wit: impotence⁶ and consanguinity and affinity;⁷ and such as may be created by statute,⁸ as the existence of a previous marriage honestly supposed to have been dissolved, under a New York statute,⁹ and absence of parent's consent under a Scotch law.⁹

c. Parties.—A voidable marriage may, in general, be avoided on the application of either party,¹⁰ but the decree must be passed during the lifetime of both the parties or the marriage will be binding.¹¹ Under statutes, the State is sometimes given power to apply for avoidance of the marriage where the cohabitation is incestuous or otherwise criminal.¹² Third persons whose property rights are affected should be made parties defendant,¹³

v. Mattison, 1 Strobh. (S. Car.) Eq. 387.

1. Johnson v. Kincade, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 470, 475; Head v. Head, 2 Ga. 191; Hamaker v. Hamaker, 18 Ill. 137, 140.

2. See II, § 5, g.

3. Blumenthal v. Tannenholz, 31 N. J. Eq. 194, 195. "This is a suit for a decree annulling a marriage for fraud.

... The complainant was, when the suit was brought, and still is, a minor. Her parents reside in Canada. There is no evidence that she has been emancipated. ... Unless one of the parties was domiciled here when the suit was brought the court has no jurisdiction in the case. ... Her domicile must be that of her parents."

4. Stewart on M. & D., § 224. "Courts granting divorces, so far as empowered by statute, apply the principles and practice of the ecclesiastical courts so far as they are suited to our condition and the general spirit of our laws." Lovett v. Lovett, 11 Ala. 763; Bauman v. Bauman, 18 Ark. 320; Finch v. Finch, 14 Ga. 362; Southwick v. Southwick, 97 Mass. 327; J G v. H G, 33 Md. 401; Gray v. Askew, 3 Ohio 466.

5. "This rule applies as well to nullity suits as to divorce suits proper." Stewart M. & D., § 224; J G v. H G, 33 Md. 401; Lebaron v. Lebaron, 35 Vt. 365; Jeans v. Jeans, 2 Har. (Del.) 38. 42.

6. See II, § 5, c; Anon., 24 N. J. Eq. 19;

Burtis v. Burtis, Hopk. (N. Y.) Ch. 557.

7. See II, § 5, d, Bowers v. Bowers, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 551.

8. See Stewart on M. & D., §§ 73-79; Boyer v. Tassin, 9 La. An. 491; Cropsey v. McKinney, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 47, 55.

N. Y. R. S. 1882, p. 2332, § 6; Val-leau v. Valteau, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 207; White v. Lowe, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 376; Cropsey v. McKinney, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 47, 55.

9. In Scotland a marriage can, within a year, but not afterwards, be avoided for want of parents' consent. Rex v. Jacobs, 1 Moody 140.

10. 2 Bish. M. & D., § 320; Shelford M. & D. 179.

11. A v. B and another, L. R., 1 P. & D. 559. "The validity of a marriage cannot be impeached on the ground of impotence after the death of one of the parties. The next of kin of a married woman are not at liberty to question her husband's right to administer to her estate on the ground of the nullity of the marriage by reason of the impotence of the husband." Combs v. Combs, 17 Abb. (N. Y.) 265.

12. See Md. R. C. 1878, art. 51, § 8, p. 479; Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 389, 391; Burgess v. Burgess, 1 Hagg. Const. 384; Ray v. Sherwood, 2 Curt. Ecc. 516, 529; 7 Eng. Ecc. 181, 187.

13. Kashaw v. Kashaw, 3 Cal. 312, and in some cases third persons may even apply for a decree of nullity.¹

d. Effect of Decree.—The decree makes void what might otherwise have been valid. In the absence of statute it renders the marriage void ab initio; it declares no marriage ever existed.² Thus, the children are illegitimate;³ the alleged husband has no rights in the alleged wife's property,⁴ nor have his creditors;⁵ and the sale of her chattel by him as husband is void.⁶ She can sue him for her property which he has taken,⁶ or for her services rendered to him before the decree.⁷ The communications between them are not privileged,⁸ and a town settlement depending on the marriage is void.⁹ Such a putative marriage is, however, sufficient consideration to support a marriage settlement.¹⁰ Such a decree is usually conclusive on all persons.¹¹ Not being properly a decree of divorce, alimony is not incident to it,¹² though if there has been a form of marriage, alimony pendente lite and counsel fees will be allowed.¹³ Under statutes, the effect of the decree is different; it may make the marriage null only from its 322; Foster v. Hall, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 540; Murray v. Murray, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 380; Sackett v. Giles, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) Ch. 204; Damon v. Damon, 28 Wis. 510, 515; but see Uhl v. Uhl, 52 Cal. 250.

1. This is a doubtful question and the weight of authority is perhaps against the right of a third party. Thus in Ray v. Sherwood, 1 Curt. Ecc. 173. "The service of a citation sufficient to constitute pendency of suit. Held, that the father, qua father, has not sufficient interest to institute a suit in the civil form for the purpose of annulling the marriage of his daughter when of age." See also Woods v. Woods, 2 Curt. Ecc. 516; Chick v. Ramsdale, 1 Curt. Ecc. 34; Farnemouth v. Watson, 1 Phillim. 355; Wells v. Wells, 3 Swab. & T. 364, 593.

2. Aughtie v. Aughtie, 1 Phillim. 201. "Marriage annulled by reason of affinity . . . the marriage being void ab initio, the husband has acquired no right over the property of the wife." Cage v. Acton, 1 Ld. Raym. 515, 521.

3. Aughtie v. Aughtie, 1 Phillim. 201. "There can be no doubt, if this is the case, that such a marriage is prohibited by law, and voidable. The facts necessary to be proved are the two marriages, and that the two husbands were brothers . . . ten children issue of first marriage . . . one child issue of second marriage. . . . I pronounce for the nullity."

4. See language in note 2.

5. Kelly v. Scott, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 479, 490; Sellars v. Davis, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 503.

6. Lawson v. Shotwell, 27 Miss. 630, 637. "Where the marriage is declared void, the wife, of course, can recover at law her property; because, in such case, the title never vested in the alleged husband." And see Anon., 1 Dyer 13; Fox v. Dawson, 8 Mart. (La.) 94; Young v. Naylor, 1 Hill (S. Car.) Eq. 383, 386.

7. Higgins v. Breen, 9 Mo. 497, 501; Blossom v. Barrett, 37 N. Y. 434.

8. Wells v. Fletcher, 5 Car. & P. 12. Because the only reason in law for making the communications privileged—marriage—has never existed.

9. Reading v. Ludlow, 43 Vt. 628. "The marriage of a man to a woman who was before and at the time of the marriage ceremony a lunatic, incapable of entering into a valid marriage contract, does not confer the settlement of the husband on the wife where the marriage has been decreed to be a nullity on the ground of such lunacy."

10. Ayers v. Jenkins, L. R., 16 Eq. 275, 281.

11. See notes 1 and 2, p. 533, to part 4, § 2, and 2 Bish. M. & D. 756.

12. Bird v. Bird, 1 Lee 621, 5 Eng. Ecc. 470; Bartlett v. Bartlett, Clarke 460; Chase v. Chase, 55 Me. 21.

13. See DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 745; O'Dea v. O'Dea, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 441. "A man brought a suit to have his marriage declared void on the ground that date;¹ the prior issue may be legitimate;² the court may have power to adjust the property rights of the parties.³

MARRIAGE BROKER—MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.

V. PENALTIES ATTENDING AN ILLEGAL MARRIAGE.—There are penalties in most States which parties may incur by omitting the various ceremonies prescribed for marriages. There are also various crimes which may attend the entrance into an illegal marriage, such as fornication, adultery, miscegenation, incest and bigamy, all of which will be found discussed under criminal law or under their respective names. Bigamy is also briefly discussed in this article, section II, 2.

MARRIAGE BROKER.—(See also BROKERS; ILLEGAL CONTRACTS.)

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS—(See also CONFLICT OF LAWS; COMMUNITY PROPERTY; CONTRACTS; FRAUD; FRAUD, STATUTE OF; HUSBAND AND WIFE; IMPLIED TRUSTS; SURETYSHIP.)

- I. Antenuptial Marriage Settlements, 539.
 1. Validity and Scope of, 539.
 2. Form, 540.
 3. Form of Statutes, 540.
 4. Capacity of Parties, 543.
 5. Consideration, 544.
 6. Fraud as Between Parties, 546.
 7. Fraud as Against Creditors, 548. [547.]
 8. Enforcement of, 550.
 9. Construction of, 550.
 10. Conflict of Laws as to, 551.
- II. Postnuptial Marriage Settlements, 552.
 1. Validity and Scope of, 552.
 2. Form, 553.
 3. Statutes Directly Affecting, 554.
 4. Capacity of Parties, 554.
 5. Consideration, 554.
 6. Fraud Between Parties, 559.
 7. Fraud as Against Creditors, 560.
 8. Enforcement of, 565.
 9. Construction of, 567.
 10. Conflict of Laws as to, 567.
11. Deeds Between Husband and Wife, 567.
12. Gifts of Personality, 567.
 - (a) The Donor's Intention, 568.
 - (b) Delivery Must be Clearly Proved, 570.
13. Bank Deposits, 572.
14. Mingling of Property, 573.
15. Services and Labor, 574.
 - (a) General Rule, 575.
 - (b) Express Contract, 575.
 - (c) Implied Contract, 575.
 - (d) Apparent or Pretended Agency, 576.
 - (e) Illustrations, 579.
 - (f) Statutes, 579.
16. Improvements on Real Estate, 579.
17. Resulting Trust, 580.
 - (a) When a Husband Buys with His Wife's Money in His Own Name, 580.
 - (b) When a Husband Buys with His Own Money in Wife's Name, 581.

the woman had a husband living. Held, that the court might allow the woman a council fee and alimony pendente lite."

1. Cal. Civ. Code, § 61. When there is a statute on the subject, that of course controls.

2. Stewart M. & D., § 78. The proper application of such statutes is to save the legitimacy of the children." Eubanks v. Banks, 34 Ga. 407; Hiram v. Pierce, 45 Me. 367; Earle v. Dawes, 3 Md. Ch. 230; Dyer v. Brannock, 66 Mo. 391, 418; Hartwell v. Jackson, 7

Tex. 576; Graham v. Bennet, 2 Cal. 503.

3. Vanvalley v. Vanvalley, 19 Ohio St. 588. "Where a divorce is granted on the petition of a woman, on the ground that the defendant had another wife living at the time of the marriage annulled by the decree, it is competent under the provisions of our statute for the court in such proceeding to also decree reasonable alimony to the petitioner." See also Strode v. Strode, 3 Bush (Ky.) 227, 230; State v. Smith, 19 Wis. 531.

- (c) Purchase by Married Woman in Her Own Name, 582.
- (d) Purchase by Married Woman with Her Husband's Funds in Her Own Name, 582.
- (e) Purchase with the Money of Both in Name of One, 582.
- (f) Resulting Trust, 582.
- 18. Life Insurance Policies, 582.
- 19. Suretyships, 584.
 - (a) Capacity Under General Powers, 584.
 - (b) Capacity Limited by Statute, 585.
 - (c) Contract Otherwise Binding, 586.
 - (d) Implied Suretyship, 586.
 - (e) Incidents of Her Suretyship, 587.

DEFINITION.—A marriage settlement is an agreement made by the parties in contemplation of marriage, by which the title to certain property is changed, and the property to some extent becomes inalienable.¹

I. ANTENUPTIAL MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS—1. Validity and Scope of.—No agreement before marriage can destroy the personal rights and liabilities of the status of husband and wife.² Thus, though before marriage a husband agrees to live in a certain place, he can after marriage, in the exercise of his marriage rights, decide, without regard to his agreement, upon the residence of himself and his wife.³ So an antenuptial contract that a husband shall not be liable for his wife's debts is a nullity as to her creditors if he is so liable by the law as husband.⁴

But parties contemplating marriage can by contract settle the precise rights they shall respectively have in their own and each other's property during their married life, and what shall become of their property afterwards.⁵ And third persons may settle

1. Bouvier.

2. Powell v. Manson, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 177, 193. "It is too plain for discussion that upon the marriage the husband becomes responsible for all the debts of the wife contracted before the marriage. To what extent her separate estate may be subjected to such debts is not very well settled. But it is clear that a mere antenuptial settlement will not relieve the husband of the obligation cast upon him by the law to discharge the debts of the wife, provided the claim is asserted and the recovery had during the existence of the coverture. This responsibility rises upon the marriage and only ceases with its termination." See also Nurse v. Craig, 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 148; Harrison v. Trader, 27 Ark. 288; Marshall v. Rutton, 8 Term Rep. 547; Hart's Cal. Civ. Code, § 159.

3. Hair v. Hair, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 163.

4. Harrison v. Trader, 27 Ark. 288. "The husband is liable for the debts of his wife, created dum sola, and no contract entered into between the parties in contemplation of marriage, can change the responsibility and obligation of the husband in this respect, so as to affect the rights of parties outside of the marriage agreement."

5. Andrews v. Jones, 10 Ala. 400. "Where an adult daughter, in contemplation of marriage, joins with her intended husband in relinquishing her entire estate to her mother, who was its guardian, and in possession of it—there being no evidence to impugn the bona fides of the transaction, and the daughter and husband declaring their determination to abide by it, the release cannot be set aside at the instance of the creditors of the latter and the estate made chargeable to them."

Boardman's Appeal, 40 Conn. 169 at 195. Parties married in 1857 after a settlement had been made. Husband died in 1871. The settlement was that the wife should not have the right of property on them, in consideration of their marriage, which they will hold, when married, subject to the terms of the settlement and not to the ordinary marriage estates.¹

All such contracts may in general be called marriage settlements.

The validity of such settlements may be specially affected by the form of the settlement, the execution and recording thereof, the capacity of the parties thereto, the consideration upon which it is made, and the fairness of the transaction; which matters will now be discussed.

2. Form of Antenuptial Marriage Settlements.—A marriage contract need not contain technical words;² it need only appear that there was a final, enforceable promise in regard to marriage rights in, to or over property, or in consideration of marriage.³ But a marriage settlement is subject to the operation and effect of all general laws as to the recording of instruments affecting rights in real estate or personalty,⁴ and there are generally special statutes besides, which must be complied with.

3. Form of Statutes.—In some states statutes require marriage dower, but only such property as was devised; the consideration for this settlement being the permission to the wife to keep her small estate. The court upheld the settlement and denied the widow's right to dower. (At 196.) "This was received and accepted in lieu of dower and in full discharge of all claims to any distributory share in his estate, should she survive him; which, in the ordinary course of nature, was certainly to be expected." See also Wollaston v. Berkeley, 45 Law J., Ch. Div. 772; Campion v. Cotton, 17 Ves. 264; English v. Foxall, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 595; Estate of Baubichon, 49 Cal. 18; Caulk v. Fox, 13 Fla. 147; Camp v. Smith, 61 Ga. 449; Jacobs v. Jacobs, 42 Iowa 600; Hanley v. Drumm, 31 La. An. 106; Naill v. Maurer, 25 Md. 532; Pierce v. Pierce, 71 N. Y. 157; Hicks v. Skinner, 71 N. Car. 539; Stilley v. Folger, 14 Ohio 610; Pa. Co. v. Foster, 35 Pa. St. 134; Peck v. Peck, 12 R. I. 485; McLeod v. Board, 30 Tex. 238; Woods v. Richardson, 117 Mass. 276; Ashurst's Appeal, 77 Pa. St. 464; Hunter v. Bryant, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 32.

1. Coverdale v. Eastwood, L. R., 15 Eq. 121; Madox v. Newton, Beat. 632; Ayliffe v. Tray, 2 P. Wms. 66; Lee v. Lee, 4 L. R., Ch. Div. 175; Ogden v. Ogden, 1 Bland 284; McAskie v. McCay, 2 Irish Eq. 1187; Foster v. Foster, 4 Cal. 231.

Marriage contracts may provide not only for the husband and wife, but for the issue, for the issue of a former marriage, for collaterals or even strangers. They may affect all kinds of property, in possession or expectancy. They may be made without the intervention of a trustee, the husband being so regarded when one is required.

2. Stoddert v. Bowie, 5 Md. 18.

"Letters are good marriage contracts, provided they sufficiently furnish the terms of the agreement, and contain not only an express promise, but the nature and extent of it. Promises and agreements in consideration of marriage, in order to be binding, must be certain, positive and unqualified."

3. Ogden v. Ogden, 1 Bland 284; Randall v. Morgan, 12 Ves. Jr. 67; Fauks v. Martin, 1 Eden 309; Kay v. Crook, 3 Jur., N. S. 104; Kinnard v. Daniel, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 496, and note 6 above.

It is not essential to the validity of a settlement that it should be recorded and delivered to the trustee named therein. Smith's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 319.

4. Foster v. Whitehill, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 259. "Marriage articles, whereby the title of lands may be affected, should be recorded in six months under the act of March 18th, 1775, in the proper county; or those titles shall be postponed to a subsequent purchase without notice express or implied." Southerland v. Southerland, 5 Bush. (Ky.) 591; Pickett v. Banks, 11 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 445.

contracts to be witnessed, acknowledged, recorded, accompanied with a schedule, etc.¹ In general, the noncompliance with such statutes renders a marriage contract void as to creditors only;² between the parties it is valid although unrecorded, etc.,³ and as to creditors, it is valid if they have actual notice.⁴ Acknowledg-

1. Mo. Rev. Stat. 1879, § 3280. Marriage contracts, to be in writing, sealed, acknowledged or proved, etc. All marriage contracts, whereby any estate, real or personal, in this State, is intended to be secured or conveyed to any person or persons, or whereby such estate may be affected in law or equity, shall be in writing, sealed and acknowledged by each of the contracting parties, or proved by one or more subscribing witnesses. Tex. Rev. Stat., 1879, § 2848. Every matrimonial agreement must be acknowledged before some officer authorized by law to take acknowledgments to deeds, and attested by at least two witnesses.

2. Cunningham v. Schilly, 41 Ga. 426; Strode v. Churchill, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 75; Moss v. Davidson, 9 Miss. 112; State v. St. Gemme, 31 Mo. 230; Abraham v. Cole, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 335; Taylor v. Rickman, 1 Busb. (N. Car.) Eq. 278; Smith v. Castrix, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 518; Bazemore v. Davis, 55 Ga. 505; Foster v. Whitehill, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 259; Anderson, 2 Call (Va.) 198; Thomas v. Gaines, 1 Gratt. (Va.) 347. Absolutely void. Ingham v. White, 4 Allen (Mass.) 412. Mary E. Ingham v. Sanford White, 4 Allen 412. Contract upon two promissory notes, signed by the defendant and payable to his wife, Melita White or bearer, and by her transferred before her death to the plaintiff. Upon agreed facts, which are fully stated in the opinion, judgment was rendered in the superior court for the defendant; and the plaintiff appealed to this court.

The legal rights of the parties do not seem to be affected by the instrument intended to operate as an antenuptial contract. By the provisions of Stat. 1845, ch. 208, authorizing such contracts and prescribing the manner in which they are to be made, it is required that the contract, with a schedule of the property intended to be secured thereby, shall, within ninety days after the making of the same, be recorded in the registry of deeds for the county in which the husband resides, if he is a resident in the commonwealth; and it is further provided "if not so recorded said contract shall be void." This contract was not so recorded in the county of Berkshire, where both parties resided. The language of the statute declaring the same void in such cases is direct and positive, and we must give effect to it. It was urged at the argument that the provision for recording was only required as a protection against creditors. That may have been one of the objects; but there may also have been other reasons for requiring their entry upon the public registry. We cannot feel authorized to introduce any limitation or exception to the plain words of the statute in relation to such contracts.

Neither Stat. 1855, ch. 304, nor Stat. 1857, ch. 249, enables the bearer of a promissory note given by a husband to his wife, for a valuable consideration, and payable to her or bearer on demand, to maintain an action thereon against the maker. Judgment for defendant.

3. Pierce v. Turner, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 154; Maggmac v. Thompson, 1 Bald. (U. S.) 344; Reinhart v. Miller, 22 Ga. 402; West v. Creditors, 1 La. An. 365; Sherrod v. Callegahan, 9 La. An. 510; Logan v. Phillips, 18 Mo. 22; Lemay v. Poupenez, 35 Mo. 71; Perryclear v. Jacobs, 2 Hill Ch. (S. Car.) 504; Gibbes v. Cobb, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 187; Dabney v. Kennedy, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 317. But see Ingham v. White, 4 Allen (Mass.) 412; Delane v. Moore, 14 Har. 253.

In Smith's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 319, a widower fifty-two years of age, with six children, and worth about $178,000, married a woman forty-three years old who had no property. In an antenuptial settlement she released, in consideration of real estate producing $1,200 a year, all her interest in his estate. The deed of settlement remained in the husband's possession and was never recorded. He died worth about $400,000. In addition to the real estate settled he bequeathed to her the interest of $15,000 for life. The residue of the estate he gave to his children. Held, that the settlement was valid and binding upon the wife.

4. Wilson v. McCullough, 23 Pa. St.

ment, when required, cannot be made after marriage.¹ If execution be proved, delivery will be presumed.²

The English Statute of Frauds,³ providing that no agreement in consideration of marriage shall be enforced unless in writing, and similar statutes, are also in force in many States.⁴ Under such statutes if the consideration be other than marriage, the statute does not apply.⁵ A note or memorandum of the contract, as by means of letters, etc., if it contains the terms of the contract, the consideration, as well as the promise, is sufficient writing, and binds the parties;⁶ though, if made after the marriage, not intervening creditors.⁷ The contract need be signed only by the party 440; Cummins v. Boston, 25 Ga. 277; Lemay v. Poupenez, 35 Mo. 71; Hughes v. Pledge, 1 Leigh (Va.) 443; Gibbes v. Cobb, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 54; Pickett v. Banks, 11 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 445; Scott v. Gibbons, 5 Munf. (Va.) 86.

1. Swift v. Fitzhugh, 9 Port. (Ala.) 39; Patton's Estate, Myrick Prob. (Cal.) 241; Banks v. Mitchell, Rice Ch. (S. Car.) 389; Jones v. Henry, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 427; Wilson v. McCullough, 23 Pa. St. 440; Johnson v. Walton, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 258.

2. Moore v. Smith, 5 N. J. Eq. 649.

3. 29 Car. II, ch. 3, § 4. No action shall be brought upon any agreement made upon consideration of marriage unless the agreement upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized.

4. Alex. Brit. Stat. 509, 528; Caton Law R., 2 E. & J. Ap. 127. See Rev. Laws of Conn. 1875, p. 441; Del. 1874, p. 356; Ind. 1881, § 4964; Me. 1871, p. 786; N. J. 1887, p. 445; N. Y. 1881, p. 2327; Ohio 1880, § 4199; R. I. 1882, p. 552; Tex. 1879, p. 363; Vt. 1880, § 981. For further authorities see Stewart on M. & D., § 35, and cases there cited. See also Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479.

5. Stileman v. Ashdown, 2 Atk. 478; Bradley v. Saddler, 54 Ga. 681; Riley v. Riley, 25 Conn. 154; Napier v. Wightman, Spears (S. Car.) Ch. 357; Embry v. Robinson, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 444; Child v. Pearl, 43 Vt. 224.

6. Stoddert v. Bowie, 5 Md. 18. "Letters are good marriage contracts, provided they sufficiently furnish the terms of the agreement, and contain not only an express promise, but the nature and extent of it." See also Og- den v. Ogden, 1 Bland (Md.) 284; Stoddert v. Bowie, 5 Md. 18; Wain v. Waters, 5 East 16.

7. Bowie v. Bowie, 1 Md. 86. This was an action of replevin brought to recover negroes alleged to belong to the estate of the appellant's testator, which had been delivered by the former to the latter in part execution of a marriage contract. The appellant claimed that he was entitled to the negroes because the marriage contract had not been reduced to writing before the marriage. "It is alleged on the part of the defence that in contemplation of a marriage between the appellee and the daughter of John T. Stoddert, an agreement was entered into between the fathers of the intended husband and wife, in which it was stipulated that John T. Stoddert should purchase a farm for the use of his daughter and her husband, and that R. W. Bowie should place on said farm personal property to a certain amount; that the farm was purchased and possession given to the husband and wife; that R. W. Bowie put upon the farm the negroes in dispute in part execution of the contract. It was urged in argument that at the time of the marriage the defendant had no knowledge of the agreement, and was therefore no inducement for the marriage. Here we have no direct or positive proof as to whether the appellee had or had not a knowledge of the contract prior to the marriage. But assuming that such knowledge must be shown to exist, positive proof need not be given. It may be inferred from circumstances. A voluntary settlement by parents after marriage is good against them and their immediate representatives. Indeed some authorities assert it to be valid against general creditors. But we need express no opinion on that sub-to be charged.¹ If the contract is wholly performed, the statute does not apply;² as, if A, having orally promised to give B certain slaves when B married C, gives him the slaves, B can hold them against A's executor.³ So if it has been performed by the party seeking to charge⁴ (not if only by the party sought to be charged);⁵ as, where A and B about to marry agree orally that A shall have B's notes, bonds, etc., absolutely, if he pays her a certain allowance during her life; after her death her administrators cannot claim such notes, etc., on the ground that the contract was not in writing.⁶ But marriage itself is not part performance.⁷ If the statute is not pleaded, the court will decree performance of a marriage contract, though oral.⁸

4. Capacity of Parties.—1. The capacity of the parties, with certain exceptions as to age, is that required for the execution of any other contract.⁹

2. Statutes sometimes enable infants to make valid marriage contracts to bar dower, etc.¹ In the absence of such a statute, the marriage contract of an infant is binding on the other party (if adult); but voidable by the infant on attaining full age,² or ject, as the rights of creditors are not presented in this issue. Judgment affirmed. See also Albert v. Winn, 5 Md. 66; Argenbright v. Campbell, 3 Hen. & M. (Va.) 144; Hammersly v. De Beil, 12 Clark & F. 45.

1. Cochran v. McBeath, 1 Del. Ch. 187.

2. Dygart v. Remerschneider, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 417.

3. Bowie v. Bowie, 1 Md. 87.

4. Ungley v. Ungley, Law R., 5 Ch. Div. 887; Houghton v. Houghton, 14 Ind. 505; Andrews v. Jones, 10 Ala. 400; Hussey v. Castle, 41 Cal. 239; Barnett v. Gaig, 8 Black 284; Livingston v. Livingston, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 537; Gochenback v. Brouse, 4 Watts & S. (Pa.) 546.

5. Catin Law R. 1 Ch. 137.

6. Crane v. Gough, 4 Md. 316.

7. Warden v. Jones, 2 De Gex & J. 76; Herry, 27 Ohio St. 14; Flenner v. Flenner, 29 Ind. 564; Bradley v. Sadtler, 54 Ga. 681.

8. Kirksly, 30 Ga. 156.

9. Since parties before marriage are still fully sui juris.

1. Hart's Cal. Civ. Code, § 181; Mass. Rev. St. 1882, p. 822; Ala. R. C. 1876, § 2236; Alex. Brit. St. 303; 27 Hen. 8, ch. 10.

2. Miliner v. Harwood, 18 Ves. 276; Wilson v. McCullough, 19 Pa. St. 77; Whitman v. Abernatty, 33 Ala. 154; Hoyt v. Snar, 53 Ill. 134; Lowry v. Tiernan, 2 Har. & G. (Md.) 34; Webb

v. Hall, 35 Me. 336; Youse v. Norcourt, 12 Mo. 549; Bool v. Mix, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 119; Card v. Patterson, 5 Ohio St. 319; Duvall v. Graves, 7 Bush (Ky.) 461; Wilson v. McCullough, 19 Pa. St. 77; Satterfield v. Riddick, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 265; Porch v. Fries, 18 N. J. Eq. 204; Webnor v. Kissan, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 321; Lester v. Frazer, 2 Hill (S. Car.) Eq. 529.

In Wilson v. McCullough, 19 Pa. St. 77, an intended husband stipulated by marriage articles, with the guardian of his intended wife, that, after she attained full age, they, as trustees, should have a conveyance of the one-half of the wife's property to hold to her separate use, and that he should have no interest in it. It was held that the contract was binding on the husband, and it was not allowable for him to join or aid his wife to defeat the user of the articles by the execution of a mortgage after attaining her majority. The restraint upon her arose not from the articles, but by virtue of the coverture; but he was forbidden by the articles from aiding her in such attempt. After the execution of such marriage articles by the husband and the guardians of the female, the husband and wife, after she had attained her majority, executed a mortgage of the wife's land to secure a debt of her husband. It was held that such articles were binding on her husband, and the subsequent mortgage by the husband and wife, made after she attained full within a reasonable time thereafter,¹ or by the infant's successors in estate,² or privies in blood.³ If not beneficial, it is absolutely void.⁴ Where the husband took her personalty absolutely by marriage, the wife's contract as to her personalty has been held valid.⁵ Infancy can be objected to only by the parties themselves.⁶ An infant may make a valid marriage contract through her guardian.⁷

5. Consideration.—1. The consideration of such a contract may be any valuable consideration, reciprocal stipulations, or the marriage itself.⁸

2. Marriage is a consideration of the highest value, and any contract or promise which brings about, or helps to bring about, a marriage is binding when the marriage has taken place,⁹ age, was inoperative to charge her interest in the land as reserved to her in the articles, in favor of anyone having notice of the marriage settlement.

1. Dodd v. Benthall, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 601; Matherson v. Davis, 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 443. See Chadbourne v. Rackliff, 30 Me. 354; Shallenberger v. Ashworth, 25 Pa. St. 152; Dandridge v. Minge, 4 Sand. (N. Y.) 397; Tabb v. Archer, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 408.

In Chadbourne v. Rackliff, 30 Me. 354, it was held that when an infant had conveyed real estate, mere acquiescence for years would afford no proof of ratification; that some act must be performed from which it could be inferred, and that an entry was a sufficient disaffirmance. After her marriage she could properly act only in connection with her husband, and that a suit by a husband and wife to recover land, which she had deeded when an infant, is a disaffirmance of the act of sale; their uniting in this suit is equivalent to an entry for such a purpose.

2. Whichcote v. Lyle, 28 Pa. St. 73.

3. Levering v. Heighe, 3 Md. Ch. 369; 2 Md. Ch. 81.

4. Succession of Wilder, 22 La. An. 219; Healy v. Rowan, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 414; Lee v. Stuart, 2 Leigh (Va.) 176.

In Healy v. Rowan, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 414, it was held that marriage articles made between an infant feme and her intended husband, beneficial to her and her contemplated issue, are obligatory upon the parties and will be enforced in a court of equity by a settlement in conformity therewith, on the application of the issue of the marriage. Here the infant feme was no party to the marriage articles, which were made between her guardians on the one part, and her intended husband on the other, and which cannot have the effect of divesting her property without holding that her guardians had authority, without her concurrence, to alienate her estate; this would be unwarranted by any sound principle, unnecessary for the validity of marriage agreements and settlements, and impolitic in subjecting minors to such dispositions of their property without their knowledge and against their will.

5. Harvey v. Ashley, 3 Atk. 607; Ellison v. Elwin, 13 Sim. 309; Levering v. Heighe, 3 Md. Ch. 365, 369.

6. Jones v. Butler, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 641.

7. Wilson v. McCullough, 19 Pa. St. 77.

8. In the case of Michael v. Morey, 26 Md. 239, it was held that the consideration of marriage is a valuable consideration and not only sustains covenants in favor of the wife and the issue of the marriage, but also covenants for settlements in favor of children of a former marriage as a moral consideration. See also Riley v. Riley, 25 Conn. 154; Brown v. Jones, 1 Atk. 188; Stileman v. Ashdown, 2 Atk. 498; Wheeler v. Caryl, Amb. 121; Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 348; Marshall v. Morris, 16 Ga. 368; Naill v. Maurer, 25 Md. 532; Armfield v. Armfield, 1 Freem. (Miss.) 311; Roberts v. Roberts, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 140; De Barante v. Gott, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 492; Rivers v. Thayer, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 136; Neves v. Scott, 9 How. (U. S.) 196; Triplett v. Romine, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 655; Ga. Laws, § 1782.

9. Andrews v. Jones, 10 Ala. 400; Johnston v. Dilliard, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 232; Chambers v. Sallie, 29 Ark. 407; Weller v. Cole, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 645; Stokes v. Jones, 18 Ala. 734; Wood v.

although it be invalid,¹ and even when it does not take place owing to the settlor's death,² against the settlor and those claiming under him, in favor of the husband and wife,³ their issue,⁴ the issue of a former marriage,⁵ collaterals,⁶ and even strangers;⁷ against the settlor's creditors, in favor of the husband and wife and their issue,⁸ although such issue were born before the mar-

Jackson, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 9; Roberts v. Roberts, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 140; Whillock v. Grisham, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 237. See Stewart on M. & D., § 40; Yeaton v. Yeaton, Ill. App. 579; Succession of Mossey, 4 La. An. 337.

1. Ayerst v. Jenkins, L. R., 16 Eq. 275.

2. Smith v. Allen, 5 Allen (Mass.) 454.

3. Wallaston v. Tribble, L. R., 9 Eq. 44; Melbourne v. Melbourne, 62 L. R., ch. 84; Prewit v. Wilson, 103 Md. 22; Herring v. Wickham, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 628.

4. In Prewit v. Wilson, 103 U. S. 22, it was held that an antenuptial settlement of lands, though made by the settlor with a fraudulent design of defrauding his creditors, will not be set aside in the absence of the clearest proof of his intended wife's participation in the intended fraud, for upon its annulment there can follow no dissolution of the marriage, which was the consideration of the settlement.

5. Michael v. Morey, 26 Md. 239. By an antenuptial agreement in consideration of the proposed marriage and of money, choses in action, book accounts and other personal property of the wife, amounting to $4,250, thereby made over to the husband, the latter bound himself, his heirs, executors, etc., in the event of his surviving his wife, to pay a certain sum of money "to any child or children which she may leave, and in the event of leaving more than one child, to distribute and pay said sum of money equally among all, share and share alike." Held: 1st. That it would be a most unnatural and forced construction of the contract to confine its general terms, which are broad enough to include all the children of the covenantee, or cestui que trust, to those only which might be born thereafter, where such construction would exclude the issue of a former marriage from all benefit of the estate of the mother, acquired before the contract was made. 2nd. That the issue of the former marriage is clearly within the letter as well as the spirit of the contract. 3rd. That the consideration of marriage is a valuable consideration, and not only sustains covenants in favor of the wife and the issue of the marriage, but also covenants for settlements in favor of children of a former marriage as a moral consideration. 4th. That in such cases the children are regarded as purchasers; they may enforce the obligations of the contracting parties, notwithstanding the nonperformance of mutual stipulations on the other side, unless they are conditional and dependent covenants. See also Nason v. Bell, 53 Ga. 416; Gale v. Gale, 6 Ch. Div. 414.

6. Never v. Scott, 9 How. 196; Parsons v. Ely, 45 Ill. 232; Buchanan v. Deshan, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 280; De Barante v. Gott, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 492; Eaton v. Tillinghast, 4 R. I. 276; Wallace v. McCullough, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 426; Mitchell v. Moore, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 275.

In Neves v. Scott, 13 How. 268, it was decided that volunteers could claim the interference of chancery to enforce the marriage articles in question.

7. Merritt v. Scott, 6 Ga. 563.

8. Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 348. Upon principle and authority to make an antenuptial settlement void as a fraud upon creditors, it is necessary that both parties should concur in, or have cognizance of, the intended fraud. If the settlor alone intend the fraud and the other party have no notice of it, but is innocent of it, she is not and cannot be affected by it. Marriage in contemplation of the law is not only a valuable consideration to support such a settlement, but is a consideration of the highest value, and from motives of the soundest policy is upheld with a strong resolution. The husband and wife, parties to such a contract, are therefore deemed, in the highest sense, purchasers for a valuable consideration; and so that it is bona fide, and without notice of fraud brought home to both sides, it becomes unimpeachable by creditors. See also riage,¹ but not collaterals,² etc. Although an existing marriage is no consideration,³ a contract in consideration of a marriage made after the marriage, in pursuance of and conforming with an agreement made before, is as valid against the settlor as if made before;⁴ but is valid against intervening creditors only if the agreement made before were enforceable.⁵ When another consideration is expressed in the contract, marriage cannot be shown to have been the consideration;⁶ and where marriage is the consideration, the failure of the wife's fortune cannot be alleged as a failure of consideration.⁷

6. Fraud as Between the Parties.—As between the parties, any concealment by one party as to the value of his or her property will render a marriage contract relating thereto voidable.⁸ Persons about to marry "do not, like buyer and seller, deal at arms' length, but stand in a confidential relation requiring the exercise of the greatest good faith. If the provision secured to the wife is manifestly unreasonable and disproportionate to the means of Cochran v. McBeath, 1 Del. Ch. 187; Marshall v. Morris, 16 Ga. 368; Brunell v. Witherow, 29 Ind. 123; Gorin v. Gordon, 38 Miss. 205; Credle v. Carrawan, 64 N. Car. 422; Jones's Appeal, 62 Pa. 324; Frank's Appeal, 59 Pa. St. 190; Buckner v. Smyth, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) Eq. 371; Ramsay v. Richardson, Riley (S. Car.) Ch. 271; Triplett v. Romine, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 655; Smith v. Cherrill, L. R., 4 Eq. 390; Campion v. Cotter, 17 Ves. 264.

1. Herring v. Wickham, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 628.

2. Davenport v. Bishop, 1 Phila. 701; Barham v. Earl, 10 Hare 133; Ford v. Stuart, 15 Beav. 505; Wallaston v. Tribble, L. R., 9 Eq. 44; Sueton v. Chetwynd, 3 Meriv. 249; Smith v. Cherrill, L. R., 4 Eq. 390.

3. Costillo v. Thompson, 9 Ala. 937.

4. Shaw v. Jakeman, 4 East 206; Battersoll v. Farrington, 1 Swanst. 106; Reader v. Livingston, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 481; Saunders v. Ferrill, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 97; Davidson v. Graves, Riley (S. Car.) Ch. 232; Jones v. Henry, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 427; Lockwood v. Nelson, 16 Ala. 294; Kinnard v. Daniel, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 496; Armfield v. Armfield, Freem. (Miss.) 311; Satterthwaite v. Emley, 4 N. J. Eq. 489; Reade v. Livingston, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 481; Finch v. Finch, 10 Ohio St. 501; Izzard v. Middleton, Ball. (S. Car.) Ch. 228; Davidson v. Graves, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 268.

5. In Albert v. Winn, 5 Md. 66, it is decided that a written settlement, or an agreement in writing to make one, before marriage in consideration thereof, is valid against creditors, but that a post nuptial settlement, reciting an antenuptial parol contract, is not valid against creditors, because as to them it is a voluntary conveyance, the subsequent written instrument not relating back to the prior parol agreement, so as to make the date of that the effective date of the settlement. See also Smith v. Green, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 118; Wood v. Savage, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 316; Andrews v. Jones, 10 Ala. 400; Dydgert v. Remerschneider, 32 N. Y. 629; Hussey v. Castle, 41 Cal. 239; Dundas v. Duteus, 2 Cox 235; Warden v. Jones, 2 De Gex & J. 76.

6. Betts v. Union Bank, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 175.

Marriage cannot be given in evidence as the consideration of a deed of bargain and sale expressed to be made for a money consideration only. The greatest extent to which the authorities have gone has been to allow an additional consideration to be proved, which is not repugnant to the one mentioned in the deed; but where a deed is impeached for fraud, the party to whom the fraud is imputed need not be permitted to prove any other consideration in support of the instrument. See also Galbreath v. Cook, 30 Ark. 424.

7. Marsh v. Marsh, 1 Atk. 159.

8. Frazer v. Boss, 66 Ind. 1; Tarbell v. Tarbell, 10 Allen (Mass.) 278; Fay v. Rickinson, 1 N. Car. 218; Woodward v. Woodward, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 49.

the intended husband, it raises a presumption of intended concealment, and throws on him the burden of disproving the presumption.¹

7. Fraud as Against Creditors.—As against creditors, if both parties intend,² or if the settlor intends and the settlee has notice of such intent³ to hinder, delay or defraud his creditors, the contract, to the extent at least of the settlor's debts, is void, no matter what the consideration;⁴ but not if the settlee has no such intent or notice;⁵ and mere knowledge of the settlor's indebtedness or insolvency will not amount to fraudulent intent or notice,⁶ though they may go to prove it, just as the unreasonableness of

1. Rieser's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 265; Pierce v. Pierce, 71 N. Y. 154; Daubenscheck v. Biggs, 71 Ind. 255; Russell's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 269; Pond v. Keen, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 126.

In Pierce v. Pierce, 71 N. Y. 154, it is held that while an antenuptial contract by which the future wife releases all claims against the estate of her husband upon his decease, will be sustained when fairly made, yet, from the confidential relations between the parties, it will be regarded with the most rigid scrutiny; and where the circumstances establish that the woman has been deceived, or induced by false pretences to enter into the contract, it will be held null and void. It seems that the presumption is against the validity of such a contract, and the burden of proof is cast upon the husband or his representatives to show perfect good faith; and strict proof will be required, particularly where the provision made for the wife is inequitable and unreasonably disproportionate to the means of the husband. The relationship of parties who are about to enter into the married state is one of mutual confidence and far different from that of those who are dealing with each other at arm's length. This is especially the case on the part of the woman; and it is the duty of each to be frank and unreserved when about to enter into an antenuptial contract, by a full disclosure of all facts and circumstances which may in any way affect the agreement.

2. In Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 348, MR. JUSTICE STORY, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Nothing can be clearer, both upon principle and authority, than the doctrine that to make an antenuptial settlement void, as a fraud upon creditors, it is necessary that both parties should concur in or have cognizance of the intended fraud." See also Prewitt v. Wilson, 103 U. S. 22; Pierce v. Harrington (Vt.) 2 N. E. 802.

3. Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 348.

4. Smith v. Cherrill, L. R., 4 Eq. 390; Bulmer v. Hunter, L. R., 8 Eq. 46; Cadogan v. Kennett, 2 Cowp. 432; Andrews v. Jones, 10 Ala. 400; Phillips v. Meyers, 82 Ill. 67; Jones v. Jones, 62 Pa. St. 324; Herring v. Wickham, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 628; Colombine v. Penhall, 1 Small & G. 228; Bulmer v. Hunter, 38 Law J., Ch. 543; Cason v. Murray, 15 Mo. 378; Ashmead v. Hearn, 13 Pa. St. 584; Bogman v. Draughan, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 243; Mosely v. Gainer, 10 Tex. 393, 419. Conveyance to defeat judgment on breach of promise is void. Smith v. Culbertson, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 106.

A gift of $7,000 to his wife by a man whose assets were uncertain, but did not exceed in value the sum of about $16,000, and whose debts were a little more than $9,000, was held fraudulent as to creditors. Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 31. See also Hunter v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22.

5. Bridge v. Eggleston, 14 Mass. 245; Marshall v. Morris, 16 Ga. 368; Rivers v. Thayer, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 136; Sisson v. Roath, 30 Conn. 15; Violett v. Violett, 2 Dana (Ky.) 323; Wright v. Stanard, 2 B. Marsh. (U. S.) 311; Blodgett v. Chaplin, 48 Me. 322; Palmer v. Henderson, 20 Ind. 297; Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 348.

6. In Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, in a voluntary settlement upon a grantor's wife, prior indebtedness is only presumptive and not conclusive proof of fraud. See also Campion v. Cotton, 17 Ves. 264; Richardson v. Horton, 7 Beav. 112; Sisson v. Roath, 30 Conn. 15.

In Bean v. Patterson, 122 U. S. 496

the settlement may.¹ A provision by which the settlor retains the property until his insolvency is void.²

8. Enforcement of.—A marriage contract is not merged or destroyed by the marriage of the parties.³ If executed, it will be upheld, in equity,⁴ and, after the dissolution of the marriage, at law;⁵ if executory, it may be specifically enforced during marriage, in equity,⁶ or sued upon after the dissolution of marriage, at law.⁷ If it carries out the intentions of the parties it cannot be modified or set aside unless all the parties interested consent, or are brought before the court;⁸ if it does not carry such intentions, it may be reformed in equity.⁹ If lost or destroyed, equity it is held that a husband who has applied to the payment of his debts proceeds of his wife's real estate, purchased for her by him while solvent, may lawfully secure his indebtedness to her by a conveyance to her after he is insolvent.

1. Davidson v. Graves, Riley (S. Car.) Eq. 232; Bank v. Marchand, Charlt. (Ga.) 247; Marshall v. Morris, 16 Ga. 368; Croft v. Arthur, 3 Desaus. (S. Car.) Eq. 223; McBurnie v. McBurnie, 1 De Gex, M. & G. 441.

2. Hodgson, Ex parte, 19 Ves. Jr. 206.

3. In Camp v. Smith, 61 Ga. 449, where, pending an application by the wife for homestead in land, which she owned at the time of the marriage, the husband conveyed the premises to her by deed, in fee simple, with power of disposition by will, and such conveyance was made in execution of a parol antenuptial agreement stipulating that each party should, after marriage, have the same rights of property as before, the ordinary's subsequent approval of the application for homestead did not operate to invest the husband with any interest in the property which would survive the wife and postpone the entry of her devisee; more especially as no minor children were left at her death. In such case, the wife's devisee took the title, and nothing passed to the children of either consort by a prior marriage under section 2024 of the code. See also Mack v. Heirs (Mo.), 8 West. Rep. 201; Baron v. Lines, 118 Ill. 374; Brooks v. Austin, 95 N. Car. 474; Hafer v. Hafer, 36 Kan. 524, 525; Abbott v. Winchester, 105 Mass. 115.

4. Hunter v. Bryant, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 32; English v. Foxall, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 595; Pond v. Obaugh, 16 Ark. 94; Smith v. Chapell, 31 Conn. 589; West v. Howard, 20 Conn. 581; Andrews

v. Andrews, 8 Conn. 79; Caulk v. Fox, 13 Fla. 147; Camp v. Smith, 61 Ga. 448; Croftwaight v. Hutchinson, 2 Bin. 407; Naill v. Maurer, 25 Md. 532; Miller v. Goodwin, 8 Gray (Mass.) 542; Tarbell v. Tarbell, 10 Allen (Mass.) 278; Kenley v. Kenley, 2 How. (Miss.) 751; Skillman v. Skillman, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 403; Grout v. Van Schoonbron, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) Ch. 336; Siler v. Fleming, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) Eq. 185; Stilley v. Folger, 14 Ohio 610; Godard v. Wagner, 2 Strobbh. (S. Car.) Eq. 1; Prebble v. Boghurst, 1 Swan 309.

5. In Edelen v. Edelen, 11 Md. 415, it was decided that where a widow by the terms of an antenuptial agreement had waived and relinquished all her rights to any portion of her husband's estate, she cannot charge her husband's estate with the costs incurred in resisting the probate of his will. See also Pierce v. Pierce, 71 N. Y. 157.

6. Connel v. Buckle, 2 P. Wms. 242; Rippon v. Dawding, Amb. 565; Hunter v. Bryant, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 32; Baldwin v. Carter, 17 Conn. 201; Jenkins v. Holt, 109 Mass. 261; Freeman v. Hill, 1 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) Eq. 389; Aucker v. Levy, 3 Strobbh. (S. Car.) Eq. 197; Prebble v. Boghurst, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 309.

7. Cage v. Acton, 1 Ld. Raym. 515; Patterson v. Patterson, 45 N. H. 164; Smiley v. Smiley, 18 Ohio St. 543.

8. Hildreth v. Eliot, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 293; Falk v. Turner, 101 Mass. 494; Crossland v. Shober, 1 Winst. (N. Car.) Eq. 10; Wright v. Tallmage, 15 N. Y. 307; Harper v. Scott, 12 Ga. 125; King v. Dunham, 31 Ga. 743; Kinnard v. Daniel, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 496.

9. Legg v. Goldwin, Forester 20; West v. Enissly, 2 P. Wms. 350; Love v. Graham, 25 Ala. 187; Denham v. Taylor, 29 Ga. 166; Burge v. Burge, 45 will revive it,¹ so, if countermanded fraudulently by the husband before marriage, its execution will be decreed.² A party does not lose his rights upon it by misconduct,³ or by failure to perform his part,⁴ or by divorce alone;⁵ but he may by long acquiescence.⁶ The issue, when interested, have a right to have it enforced.⁷

Ga. 301; Clemmons v. Drew, 2 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 314; Sanderlin v. Robinson, 6 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 155; Russell's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 269; Brown v. Brown, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 502; Burging v. McDowell, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 236.

1. In Barclay v. Waring, 58 Ga. 86, where an antenuptial deed settled certain property of the wife, vesting the legal title in trustees for that purpose, "in trust, nevertheless, to and for the sole and separate use of the said Margaret Marshall for and during her natural life, not subject to the debts, contracts or control of the said Adelbert, her intended husband, or any future husband, and from and after her death, then in trust to and for the sole and separate use of such person or persons as the said Margaret may, by deed or will duly executed, appoint; and if the said Margaret should depart this life without making such appointment, either by deed or will, then in trust to and for the husband and children of the said Margaret, should they survive her," and where the said settlement had been mutilated by tearing off some of the signatures thereto and a postnuptial deed had been made by the husband, by virtue of his marital rights, settling property differently, and the wife had obtained a total divorce from the husband, and had died leaving an only child, and this child, by her guardian, brought a bill in equity to cancel the postnuptial and set up the antenuptial deed, on the ground that the latter had been fraudulently mutilated by her father in order to make the former deed, and alter the terms of settlement after the marriage, and where the father defended the case by alleging that the antenuptial deed was mutilated and destroyed before the marriage by the trustee in his presence and that of his wife and the trustee; and where both wife and trustee were dead at the time of the trial:—Held, that the husband, the other parties to the settlement in esse at its execution and alleged destruction being dead, was an incompetent witness to prove the destruction of the marriage settlement:

and as he was the only witness to prove its legitimate destruction before the marriage, the decree setting up the antenuptial and canceling the postnuptial deed was right, its original execution having been sufficiently established by proof. See also Potts v. Cogdell, 1 Desaus. (S. Car.) Eq. 454.

2. Montacuts v. Maxwell, 1 P. Wms. 620.

3. Buchanan v. Buchanan, 1 Ball & B. 206; Sidney v. Sidney, 3 P. Wms. 275; Seagrave v. Seagrave, 13 Ves. 443; Crofton v. Ormsby, 2 Schoales & L. 583; Michael v. Morey, 26 Md. 239; Bowie v. Bowie, 1 Md. 101.

In Michael v. Morey, 26 Md. 231, where there was no pretence of misconduct on the part of the wife beyond the use of intemperate language and separation from the husband because of domestic troubles, held that she did not lose her rights under an antenuptial agreement made with her husband.

4. Ilston v. Key, Law R., 6 Ch. 610; Pyke v. Pyke, 1 Ves. Jr., 67; Bliss v. Sheldon, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 152; Shoch v. Shoch, 19 Pa. St. 252.

In Bliss v. Sheldon, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 152, where a man in contemplation of marriage agrees to make a settlement on his wife, upon his death, in consideration of which she agrees to relinquish her rights in his property after his decease, and he dies without having made the settlement, the widow is not barred of any rights which she might have asserted if no such agreement had been executed.

5. Barclay v. Waring, 58 Ga. 86; Bazemore v. Davis, 55 Ga. 505; Baggs v. Baggs, 58 Ga. 590.

6. Jones v. Higgins, L. R., 2 Eq. 538; Stone v. Stone, L. R., 5 Ch. 748.

7. In Bowie v. Bowie, 1 Md. 87, 101, ECCLESTON, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "A failure to comply by one party to a marriage contract does not release the other after the marriage has been consummated. Such a contract is not similar to those of an ordinary character. Rights are secured to the husband and wife and to the issue of the marriage, which entitle them to compel a compliance by either party, although the other has failed to discharge his obligation. Unless, indeed, there is a condition precedent. But such a condition must appear clearly and unequivocally to have been intended by the terms of the contract." These positions are fully sustained in MacQueen on Husband and Wife, 235, 236, in 66 Law Lib. This author, in speaking of precedent conditions, says: "So strong is this rule that in a late case, where there were at least plausible grounds for maintaining that the covenants were intended to be dependent upon each other, and where default was made on one side, the court, nevertheless, gave effect to the claims of the children." The case he refers to is Lloyd v. Lloyd, 2 Myl. and Cr. 182; Gale v. Gale, L. R., 6 Ch. Div. 144.

9. Construction of.—In construing marriage contracts the true intent of the parties will be carried out liberally, without regard to the strictly technical meanings of words used;¹ when possible,

1. Hutchins v. Dixon, 11 Md. 29. A husband executed a deed which recites that he was "disposed to invest his wife again with all the property" he acquired by marriage with her, "so that the same may be for her exclusive use and benefit as though she were a feme sole," and then conveys the property both real and personal, subject nevertheless to any debts she was answerable for at the time of the marriage, to a trustee in trust "for the use of the wife during the life of the husband, to be disposed of in any manner she shall direct during coverture; and if she survives the husband and makes no disposition thereof by last will and testament, then the same to descend to her legal heirs and representatives in the same manner as if they had never been married; provided, in case the husband died first, she should set up no claim to any part of his estate." On the same day the trustee executed a deed which refers to the deed of trust, and recites that the wife "had directed him to convey all said property to her," and then conveys the same to the wife, "to her sole use and benefit," to hold the same "for her sole use and benefit during her natural life, and after her death, in case she should not dispose of the same by last will and testament to her heirs and legal representatives forever, subject nevertheless to the provisions and conditions contained in the said deed of trust." The husband survived the wife and then died. Held, 1st. That as the first deed did not make any provision for the event of the wife's dying first without disposing of the property as authorized by its terms, if the second deed had not been executed, and the wife had died first intestate, the title to the personal property would have been restored to the husband. 2nd. But the second deed having been executed by the direction of the wife, and as both deeds clearly manifest the intention of the parties to carry the title to the property beyond the period of the wife's death, and to exclude the husband, his estate is entitled to no part of the personal property conveyed by such deeds.

Technical words are not necessary to create a separate estate in a feme covert, but adequate language must be employed to manifest a decided intent to transfer a separate interest and to exclude the husband, and this effect may be produced without the interposition of a trustee. When the words "next of kin," "heirs" and "representatives" are used in marriage settlements to designate the persons who are to take at the wife's death they are generally construed as having been so employed for the purpose of excluding the husband. Deeds must interpret themselves without reference to the acts of the parties; the court cannot be aided in the construction of any agreement by the acts which the parties may have done under it, nor is a party bound by any construction which he may have put upon the instrument.

Where the parties evidently intended to make a final complete settlement it will be so regarded, although it be headed "Articles of agreement," etc. To effectuate the intent of the parties, one part of the instrument may be taken as a complete settlement, and another part as mere articles. Neves v. Scott, 9 How. (U. S.) 106.

In Brown v. Ramsey, 74 Ga. 210, marriage contracts in writing are to be liberally construed, to carry into the effect the intention of the parties; and no want of form or technical expression will invalidate them. The intention of the parties is the cardinal rule of construction. Attendant and surrounding circumstances may always be resorted to, and proof of the local usage or understanding of words is admissible to issue will be included in the benefits of the contract,¹ and as issue, children of a former or subsequent marriage,² but not grandchildren.³ Statutes requiring the recording of such contracts will be strictly construed, and only in general for the protection of creditors.⁴

10. Conflict of Laws as to.—1. A marriage contract, if valid where made, is valid everywhere,⁵ unless prohibited in the place where it is sought to be enforced.⁶ So that when such a contract is valid in matter and in form (recorded, etc., if necessary) by the law of the place where it is made, its validity is not affected by the subsequent removal of the parties with the property into a State where it is not in form;⁷ but it may be invalid if in such place it is unlawful per se.⁸

2. A marriage contract invalid per se where made is invalid everywhere;⁹ but if invalid because wanting in form where made, but valid where it is sought to be enforced, it may in the latter place be enforced.¹⁰ arrive at the meaning intended by the parties. See also Carswell v. Schley, 56 Ga. 101; Ardis v. Printup, 39 Ga. 648; Stratton v. Rogers, 11 La. An. 380; Hooks v. Lee, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 157; Mintier v. Mintier, 28 Ohio St. 307; Creighton v. Clifford, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 188; Brown v. Foote, 2 Tenn. Ch. 255; Burgin v. McDowell, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 236; Caulk v. Fox, 13 Fla. 147; May v. May, 7 Fla. 207; and Estate of Baubichon, 49 Cal. 19.

1. Lafitte v. Lawton, 25 Ga. 305; Brown v. Brown, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 502; Phelps v. Phelps, 72 Ill. 545; Wallace v. Wallace, 82 Ill. 530.

2. Michael v. Morey, 26 Md. 239; Ardis v. Printup, 39 Ga. 648.

3. Adams v. Law, 17 How. 417.

4. Failure to record such an instrument as required by law will not, as a general rule, keep it from being valid with parties. De Lane v. Moore, 14 How. 283.

A verbal antenuptial agreement might, under special circumstances, be enforced in equity in order to prevent the party invoking the statute of frauds from perpetrating a fraud upon the other party, on the general principle that the statute is never to be so expounded as to make it a mere instrument in consummating a fraud upon the party against whom it is involved. McAnulty v. McAnulty, 120 Ill. 26. See also Cunningham v. Schley, 41 Ga. 426; Doe d. Credle v. Carrawan, 64 N. Car. 422.

5. Besse v. Pellochoux, 73 Ill. 285; Hicks v. Skinner, 71 N. Car. 539; Scheferling v. Huffman, 4 Ohio St. 241.

In Besse v. Pellochoux, 73 Ill. 285, the court held that where there is a marriage between parties in a foreign country, and an express contract concerning their rights and property, present and future, that, as a matter of contract, will be held equally valid everywhere, unless, under the circumstances, it stands prohibited by the laws of the country where it is sought to be enforced.

6. Besse v. Pellochoux, 73 Ill. 285.

7. Delane v. Moore, 14 How. 283. Where an antenuptial contract was made and recorded in one State, and the parties afterwards removed, with the property upon which it operated, to another State, the property is nevertheless protected against subsequent purchasers or creditors. Bank of the U. S. v. Lee, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 107; O'Neill v. Henderson, 15 Ark. 235; Smith v. Chapel, 31 Conn. 589; Young v. Templeton, 4 La. An. 254; Succession of Wilder, 22 La. An. 219; Dubois v. Jackson, 49 Ill. 49; Scheferling v. Huffman, 4 Ohio St. 241; Dougherty v. Snyder, 15 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 84; Townsend v. Maynard, 45 Pa. St. 198; L. Prince v. Guillemont, 1 Rich. 187; Lott v. Bertrand, 26 Tex. 654.

8. Besse v. Pellochoux, 73 Ill. 285.

9. Walker v. Forbes, 31 Ala. 9; Paine v. France, 26 Md. 46; Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1; Reid v. Lamar, 1 Strobb. (S. Car.) Eq. 27; Kenaga v. Taylor, 7 Ohio St. 134.

10. Cox v. U. S., 6 Pet. (U. S.) 172; Succession of Wilder, 22 La. An. 219;

3. A marriage contract as to its effect is governed by the law of the place where it is made,¹ unless it is made by the parties with the intention of having it performed elsewhere; in which case it is governed by the law of the place where it is to be performed.²

4. A marriage contract to convey or charge real estate must be valid in matter and form by the law of the place where the land lies.³

II. POSTNUPTIAL MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS. 1. Validity and Scope of.—The term postnuptial settlement used in this article includes all transfers of property, direct or indirect, between husband and wife, as well as all settlements made on them by third parties, such as have already been discussed. Transfers between husband and wife may depend for their validity upon; (1) the capacity of husband and wife to contract together (see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 789); (2) the form of the settlement; (3) the consideration; (4) the absence of fraud or duress between the parties; (5) the absence of fraud on the rights of creditors. Such transfers may be wholly or partially valid or invalid.⁴ Thus, postnuptial settlements are usually valid between the parties;⁵ one may be binding on the settlor, his heirs and representatives, and his voluntary assignees,⁶ but invalid as against his creditors;⁷ valid as to some (subsequent) creditors;⁸ but invalid as to other Hicks v. Skinner, 71 N. Car. 539; Adams v. Hayes, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 261.

1. Walker v. Forbes, 31 Ala. 9; O'Neill v. Henderson, 15 Ark. 235; Peake v. Yeedell, 17 Ala. 636; Lafitte v. Lawton, 25 Ga. 305; McLeod v. Board, 30 Tex. 238.

2. McLeod v. Board, 30 Tex. 248; Mason v. Homer, 105 Mass. 116; Mason v. Fuller, 36 Conn. 160; Glenn v. Glenn, 47 Ala. 204; Davenport v. Karnes, 70 Ill. 465; Hale v. N. J. Steam Nav. Co., 15 Conn. 539; Bliss v. Houghton, 16 N. H. 90; Broadhead v. Noyes, 9 Mo. 56; Dalton v. Murphy, 30 Miss. 59; Carroll v. Renich, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 798; Sherrod v. Callegan, 9 La. An. 510; Warder v. Arall, 2 Wash. (Va.) 282; Thompson v. Ketchan, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 285; Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 235.

3. Besse v. Pellochoux, 73 Ill. 281.

4. See Stewart on H. & W., ch. 6, § 100, and cases there cited.

5. In Cushman v. Cushman, 5 Md. 50, ECCLESTON, J., said: "A deed which is fraudulent against creditors may be impeached for their benefit, but it is good against all others. See the opinion of C. J. TANEY in White, Warner & Co. v. Winn and Ross, cited in 8 Gill 501. Such a deed cannot be successfully impeached by the parties to the fraud, or by their representatives or heirs at law. See also Stewart on H. & W., §§ 104, 115, 123.

6. In Garner v. Graves, 54 Ind. 188, 192, it is held that a transfer of property by a debtor to defraud his creditors is binding upon such debtor, and, on his decease, his administrator is likewise bound by such transfer, and cannot recover the possession of such property. See also Springer v. Drosch, 32 Ind. 486; Findley v. Cooley, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 2nd ed., 261; Laney v. Laney, 2 Ind. 196; O'Neil v. Chandler, 42 Ind. 471; Jones v. Obenchain, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 259, 267; Rogers v. Fales, 5 Pa. St. 154, 158.

7. In Miller v. Johnson, 27 Md. 6, property conveyed by a husband to his wife as a gift cannot be reached by a subsequent creditor, unless there is evidence of fraud in fact. See also Williams v. Banks, 11 Md. 198; Atkinson v. Phillips, 1 Md. Ch. Dec. 507; Unger v. Price, 9 Md. 552. See also Stewart on H. & W., §§ 113-118.

8. Plummer v. Jarman, 44 Md. 632. It may be conceded that a valid gift by a husband to his wife, after marriage, may be made, and that courts of equity will uphold such gifts as against the hus-

(existing) creditors;¹ valid as to part of the property settled, but invalid as to the rest;² invalid as an absolute grant, but valid as a security.³ Whether a settlement is, when it is valid between the parties, but otherwise invalid, void, or voidable, does not seem to be clearly determined.⁴ Though "void" is usually the word used, the better opinion seems to be that it is voidable only.⁵ For, a bona fide purchaser for value from a settlee whose title is invalid against creditors, gets a valid title even against such creditors,⁶ which could not be the case if the original settlement was absolutely void against them; and this is true of both realty and personalty;⁷ so property previously conveyed in fraud of creditors does not pass by a deed from the settlor for the benefit of such creditors;⁸ so, only a creditor can allege the invalidity of the settlement.⁹ The reason the word "void" is so often used is that in the great mass of cases no special proceeding need be resorted to to have a settlement declared void, but the question of validity may be determined in any proceeding at law or in equity to which both the settlor and settlee or their respective successors are parties.¹⁰

2. Form of.—There is no particular form necessary, nor are tech-band and those claiming under him; but as against subsisting creditors of the husband, if it be to their prejudice, such gift is utterly void. This is so upon general principles of equity and justice, and it is so by the statute law of the State.

Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580. A married woman claiming, in opposition to her husband's creditors, property purchased after marriage, must show that the consideration was paid out of her separate estate. Moore v. Page, 111 U. S. 117; Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 229; Mattingly v. Nye, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 370; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 31; Smith v. Vodges, 92 U. S. 183; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225; Clark v. Killian, 103 U. S. 766; Wallace v. Penfield, 106 U. S. 260.

1. Crooks v. Crooks, 34 Ohio St. 610, 615; Smith v. Vodges, 92 U. S. 183; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225. In order to defeat a settlement made by a husband upon his wife it must be intended to defraud existing creditors, or creditors whose rights are expected shortly to supervene.

2. Farmers' Bank v. Long, 7 Bush. (Ky.) 337, 340; Wickes v. Clarke, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 161, 172; Stewart on H. & W., § 106.

3. Herschfeldt v. George, 6 Mich. 456, 468; Stewart on H. & W., §§ 106, 132.

4. See Bump. Fraud. Convey., ch. 16; Stewart on H. & W., § 114.

5. Holland v. Cruft, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 321, 338; Schuman v. Peddicord, 50 Md. 560, 563; Mulford v. Peterson, 35 N. J. L. 127, 132; Anderson v. Roberts, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 515, 527; 9 Am. Dec. 235.

6. Bean v. Smith, 2 Mason (U. S.) 252, 272; Eldred v. Drake, 43 Iowa 569, 570; Oriental Bank v. Haskins, 3 Met. (Mass.) 332, 340; 37 Am. Dec. 140; Farmers' Bank v. Brooke, 40 Md. 249, 257; Phelps v. Morrison, 24 N. J. Eq. 195, 198, 199; Anderson v. Roberts, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 515, 525, 530; 9 Am. Dec. 235. Not of course in case of notice. Green v. Early, 39 Md. 223, 229.

7. Eldred v. Drake, 43 Iowa 569, 570; Farmers' Bank v. Brooke, 40 Md. 249, 257.

8. Scheffer v. Seltz, Md. Law Rec. March 22nd, 1884.

9. Cushwa v. Cushwa, 5 Md. 44, 50. A deed fraudulent as to creditors may be impeached by them, but is good against all others; it cannot be impeached by the parties to the fraud, or by their representatives or heirs at law. The grantor in a fraudulent deed cannot rely upon the fraud either as plaintiff, claiming relief against the effect of the deed, or as defendant, resisting the claim of the grantee.

10. See Stewart on H. & W., title Remedies, §§ 122-124, and cases there cited.

nical words required, in drawing postnuptial settlements, except where statutes apply. Some of the different forms which transfers are likely to take are discussed later in this article.

3. Statutes Applying to.—In some States all transfers of property between husband and wife must be recorded,¹ or ratified by a court;² in others, a wife must file a statement of all her separate property of which her husband has possession;³ and generally a married woman cannot release her marriage rights except by writing or deed.⁴ But acts requiring record of marriage settlements apply only to those in consideration of marriage, not to postnuptial settlements.⁵ Otherwise the formalities are the same as in transfers between strangers.⁶

4. Capacity of Parties.—The capacity of husband and wife to contract together has been discussed under the title HUSBAND AND WIFE, and the capacity of married women to contract will be discussed under the title MARRIED WOMEN.

5. The Consideration.—A consideration is necessary to render an executory contract enforceable, whether at law or in equity,⁷ and to render an executed settlement valid as against creditors;⁸ but voluntary settlements or executed gifts are binding between the parties.⁹ A voluntary settlement is one without consideration. Love and affection is a meritorious consideration;¹⁰ it serves often

1. Teague v. Downs, 79 N. Car. 280, 287; Lewis v. Caperton, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 148, 165; De Lane v. Moore, 14 How. 253.

Failure to record such an instrument as required by law will not, as a general rule, keep it from being valid inter partes. De Lane v. Moore, 14 How. (U. S.) 253.

2. Bowman v. Kaufman, 30 La. An. 1021, 1025; Keller v. Ruiz, 21 La. An. 283; Atkinson v. Atkinson, 15 La. An. 491, 492.

3. Smith v. Hewett, 13 Iowa 94, 96; Jones v. Jones, 19 Iowa 236, 239, 240. See Stewart on H. & W., §§ 120, 121.

4. Randles v. Randles, 63 Ind. 93, 100. See Stewart on H. & W., §§ 270-272.

5. Stewart on M. & D., §§ 34-36; Banks v. Brown, 2 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 558, 565; 30 Am. Dec. 380; overruling Price v. White, Bail. (S. Car.) Ch. 244, 263.

6. As to desirability of formalities, see Stewart on H. & W., §§ 120, 121.

7. Kesner v. Trigg, 98 U. S. 50. A postnuptial contract made upon sufficient consideration, and wholly or partly executed, will be sustained in equity. 1 Parsons Cont. 427, infra, n. 2; Crooks v. Crooks, 34 Ohio St. 610, 615. No gift good without delivery. Stewart H. & W. §§ 120, 127.

8. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 229. A postnuptial voluntary settlement, made by a man who is not indebted at the time, upon his wife, is valid against subsequent creditors. The statute 13 Eliz., ch. 5, avoids all conveyances not made on a consideration deemed valuable in law, as against previous creditors. But it does not apply to subsequent creditors if the conveyance is not made with a fraudulent intent. 1 Am. L. C. 171; Stewart H. & W., §§ 109, 113-118. As to scope of word "creditors," see Stewart H. & W., § 115.

9. Plummer v. Jarman, 44 Md. 632, 637. It may be conceded that a valid gift by husband to wife, after marriage, may be made, and that courts of equity will uphold such gifts as against the husband and those claiming under him; but as against subsisting creditors of the husband, if it be to their prejudice such gift is utterly void. See also Peirce v. Thompson, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 391, 393; Wilder v. Brooks, 10 Minn. 50, 54; Reid v. Gray, 37 Pa. St. 508, 510; Stewart H. & W., §§ 124, 127.

10. Worthington v. Bullitt, 6 Md. 172, 108. A father being indebted and in embarrassed circumstances, conveyed to his son land worth upwards of $20,000, for the moneyed consideration expressed in the deed of $12,000, of which to explain a grantor's purpose and to disprove a fraudulent intent;¹ it is a good consideration as against the grantor and his representatives;² but it is not a valuable consideration,³ it will not sustain an executory contract at all,⁴ or a settlement in prejudice of the rights of creditors.⁵ Existing marriage is a consideration of the same kind;⁶ as is a husband's desire to make provision for the support he owes his wife.⁷

Each of the following is a valuable consideration: A release of dower,⁸ or homestead,⁹ or previous settlement,¹⁰ or separate property but $5,000 was in part paid in money by the son. Held, that this was a voluntary conveyance to the extent of the excess of the value of the land over the $5,000, and was therefore void as to creditors who were such prior to and at its date. Whether such a voluntary deed can be supported or not, depends upon the condition of the grantor at its date; if he had then creditors who would be by it hindered and delayed in collecting their debts, though he was not in fact insolvent, still so far as it is a voluntary conveyance, or resting upon natural love and affection, it is void. Wells v. Treadwell, 28 Miss. 717, 726; Whitaker v. Whitaker, 52 N. Y. 368, 371; 11 Am. Rep. 711; McMillan v. Peacock, 57 Ala. 127, 129; Clayton v. Brown, 17 Ga. 217, 220; Majors v. Everton, 89 Ill. 56, 57; 31 Am. Rep. 65; Horder v. Horder, 23 Kan. 391, 392; Orr v. Orr, 8 Bush (Ky.) 156, 159; Todd v. Wickliffe, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 866, 906; Peirce v. Thompson, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 391.

1. Wells v. Treadwell, 28 Miss. 717, 726. A voluntary conveyance is presumed to be fraudulent as to subsequent purchasers; but this presumption may be destroyed, and if the conveyance, though voluntary, appear to have been made upon a meritorious consideration, without fraud or coercion, it is not void against a subsequent purchaser. Not all voluntary conveyances, but all fraudulent conveyances, are void.

CHANCELLOR KENT, in Sterry v. Arden, 1 J. C. R., sanctions the doctrine that voluntary conveyances are absolutely void as to subsequent purchasers, and holds that such is the rule held by the English authorities. On the contrary, CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL, in Cathart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 264-281, held that the rule settled by the English cases at the period or time referred to by CHANCELLOR KENT, and the sound rule upon the subject is, that "a subsequent sale without notice, by a person who had made a settlement not upon a valuable consideration, was presumptive evidence of fraud, which threw upon those claiming under such settlement the burden of proving that it was made bona fide. We consider this as the true exposition of the statute if it does not declare all voluntary conveyances, but all fraudulent conveyances, to be void. See also Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 229; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 31.

2. Orr v. Orr, 8 Bush (Ky.) 156, 159; Peirce v. Thompson, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 391, 393.

3. Clayton v. Brown, 17 Ga. 217, 220.

4. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 52 N. Y. 368, 371; 11 Am. Rep. 711.

5. Clayton v. Brown, 17 Ga. 217, 220.

6. Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, 485; Davidson v. Graves, Riley (S. Car.) Eq. 232; Stewart M. & D., §§ 33, 473.

7. Dale v. Lincoln, 62 Ill. 22, 26; Herschfeldt v. George, 6 Mich. 456, 465; Wilder v. Brooks, 10 Minn. 50, 54; Crooks v. Crooks, 34 Ohio St. 610, 615; Jones v. Obenchain, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 259, 262. Consult § 87, Stewart H. & W.

8. Sykes v. Chadwick, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 141; Hort v. Sorrell, 11 Ala. 386, 400; Nalle v. Lively, 15 Fla. 130; Sedgwick v. Tucker, 90 Ind. 271, 277; Brown v. Rawlings, 72 Ind. 505; Randles v. Randles, 63 Ind. 93; Hollowell v. Simonson, 21 Ind. 398, 400; Unger v. Price, 9 Md. 552; Bullard v. Briggs, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 533, 538; 19 Am. Dec. 292; Ward v. Crotty, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 52; Randall v. Randall, 37 Mich. 563, 572; Woodson v. Pool, 19 Mo. 340, 344; Garlick v. Strong, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 440; Searing v. Searing, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 283; Kelly v. Case, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 472, 474; Duffy v. Mechanics etc. Ins. Co., 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 413, 434; Banks v. Brown, Riley (S. Car.) Ch. 131, 135; 30 Am. Dec. 380; Payne v. Hutchinson, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 812.

9. Sproul v. Atchison v. Nat. Bank, 22 Kan. 336, 340; Keyes v. Rines, 37 Vt. 260, 264.

10. Phila. v. Riddle, 25 Pa. St. 259, 262.

erty rights;¹ an antenuptial enforceable promise to make a settlement;² an existing debt though barred by limitations;³ a wife's equity of settlement;⁴ use of property with understanding that it should be replaced;⁵ cash received as a loan;⁶ rents collected as agent;⁷ wife's right of survivorship in mortgage to her.⁸ It is a valuable consideration for a settlement that a court of equity would have compelled its execution.⁹ If husband and wife, each

1. Northington v. Faber, 52 Ala. 45, 47; Monaman v. Monaman, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 84, 89; Drury v. Briscoe, 42 Md. 154, 162; Teller v. Bishop, 8 Minn. 226; Butterfield v. Stanton, 44 Miss. 15, 35; Gicher v. Martin, 50 Pa. St. 138, 140; Peiffer v. Lytle, 58 Pa. St. 386, 391; Ready v. Bragg, 1 Head (Tenn.) 511, 515; Williams v. Powell, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 372, 385; Rose v. Brown, 11 W. Va. 122, 136; Wochoska v. Wochoska, 45 Wis. 423, 426.

In the case of Drury v. Briscoe, 42 Md. 154, a married woman being entitled to a distributee's share of the proceeds of the real estate of her father, sold under proceedings for a partition, her share with the consent of her husband, and took the note of the purchaser for the purchase money. This note the husband collected as a loan by his wife to him upon an agreement with her to repay it to her with interest and gave her his note for the amount due her. Afterwards the husband, becoming embarrassed, in order to protect his wife's claim, paid two judgments against himself and caused them to be entered to her use. The validity of this transaction being impeached by subsequent creditors of the husband as in fraud of them, it was held: 1st. That the husband did not reduce the chose in action of his wife into his possession by virtue of his marital rights, but in pursuance of his agreement with his wife obtained control of the note, and his agreement to repay her the amount he collected on it was founded upon an adequate consideration. 2nd. That the claim of the wife was manifestly just and should be allowed.

2. Mechanics v. Taylor, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 507; Andrews v. Jones, 10 Ala. 400, 421; Harper v. Scott, 12 Ga. 125; Lyne v. Bank of Ky., 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 545, 552; Belford v. Crane, 16 N. J. Eq. 265, 271; Reade v. Livingston, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 481, 488; 8 Am. Dec. 510; Saunders v. Ferrill, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 97, 102; Caines v. Marley, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 582, 588; Stewart M. & D. § 33;

Neilson v. Williams, 42 N. J. Eq. 291.

A promise by one to his intended wife before marriage that all he had or might have was to be hers, is not sufficient consideration for a deed made by him to her fourteen years after marriage and after he had failed.

3. Wilson v. Sheppard, 28 Ala. 623, 629; Jones v. Brandt, 59 Iowa 332, 347; Latimer v. Glenn, 3 Bush (Ky.) 535, 541; Lehman v. Levy, 30 La. An. 745, 750; Peiffer v. Lytle, 58 Pa. St. 386, 391; French v. Motley, 63 Me. 326, 318; Stewart H. & W. § 45.

4. Montefiore v. Behrens, Law R., 1 Eq. 171; Bradford v. Goldsborough, 15 Ala. 311, 315; McCauley v. Rodes, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 462; McClanahan v. Beasley, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 111, 114; Oswald v. Hoover, 43 Md. 360; Stockett v. Holliday, 9 Md. 480, 498; Partridge v. Havens, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 618, 624, 625; Walden v. Walden, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 88, 95, 96; Poindexter v. Jeffries, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 363, 373.

5. Butterfield v. Stanton, 44 Miss. 15, 35.

6. Teller v. Bishop, 8 Minn. 226, 228.

7. Barker v. Morrill, 55 Ga. 332, 334.

8. Stockett v. Holliday, 9 Md. 480, 498.

9. Wickes v. Clarke, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 161, 172; Buchanan v. Lee, 69 Ind. 117; Bayne v. State, Md. Law Rec., Aug. 23, 1884; Oswald v. Hoover, 43 Md. 360, 368; Plummer v. Jarman, 44 Md. 632; Peirce v. Thompson, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 391, 393; Gicker v. Martin, 50 Pa. St. 138, 141.

In the case of Oswald v. Hoover, 43 Md. 360, a husband received his wife's share of the proceeds of the sale of her father's real estate, sold under a decree of partition passed on the 2nd of December, 1856, and applied the same to the purchase of land in his own name, under a promise to her before the purchase that the money should be so applied and treated as a loan to him. A portion of the money was received in April, 1857, and the balance in June, 1860. The husband subsequently conveyed all of his property to a trustee to of them having interests, no matter how much, or of what degree, or of what quality, come to an agreement which is afterwards embodied in a settlement, it is a bargain and a transaction on valuable consideration.¹

Each of the following is a mere nominal consideration, really no consideration at all: The wife's property which by law is the husband's;² dower previously voluntarily released;³ property previously voluntarily given up;⁴ cohabitation, when this is a duty;⁵ the wife's services, when these belong to her husband.⁶

Adequacy.—As a general rule, if a consideration is real (valuable), its adequacy is not enquired into.⁷ But inadequacy of consideration is evidence of fraud.⁸ And, as against creditors, the consideration for a settlement must be fair and reasonable, the payment of a trivial sum,⁹ or such a disproportionate considera-be sold and the proceeds thereof distributed among his creditors. The property was sold and a report of the sales made to the circuit court of Washington county, in equity, by which the same were ratified and confirmed. The wife, under the usual notice by the auditor of the court to all persons having claims against her husband to file the same, filed her claim for the amount of her loan to him. Upon exceptions to this claim by the creditors of the husband, it was held that the wife's claim was an equitable one and should be allowed. See also Metsker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 66.

1. Teasdale v. Braithwaite, L. R., 4 Ch. Div. 85, 90; 46 L. J., Ch. 306.

2. Ream v. Karnes, 90 Ind. 167, 172; Buchanan v. Lee, 69 Ind. 117; Bayne v. State, Md. Law Rec., Aug. 23, 1884; Oswald v. Hoover, 43 Md. 360, 368; Plummer v. Jarman, 44 Md. 632, 637; Peirce v. Thompson, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 391, 393; Gicker v. Martin, 50 Pa. St. 138, 141.

3. Woodson v. Pool, 19 Mo. 340, 341.

4. Whittlesey v. McMahon, 10 Conn. 137; 26 Am. Dec. 382; Lyne v. Bank of Ky., 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 545, 552; Sabel v. Slingluff, 52 Md. 132, 134; Kuhn v. Stansfield, 28 Md. 210, 216; Terry v. Wilson, 63 Mo. 493, 499; Woodson v. Pool, 19 Mo. 340, 341; Clark v. Rosekrans, 31 N. J. Eq. 665, 667; Johnston v. Johnston, 31 Pa. St. 450, 454; Perkins v. Perkins, 1 Tenn. Ch. 537; Cheatham v. Hess, 2 Tenn. Ch. 763.

In the case of Sabel v. Slingluff, 52 Md. 132, 134, it is held that money received by a husband from the sale of his wife's real estate, made before the adoption of the code, belongs to the husband absolutely, unless at the time he received it he promised the wife to repay it and obtained possession of it upon the faith of such promise.

5. See Stewart on H. & W., § 59, where the subject is treated very fully.

6. Belford v. Crane, 16 N. J. Eq. 268, 271; Stewart on H. & W., § 65.

7. Hoot v. Sorrell, 11 Ala. 386, 400; Drury v. Briscoe, 42 Md. 154, 163; Duffy v. Mechanics' etc. Ins. Co., 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 413, 435; Banks v. Brown, Riley (S. Car.) Ch. 131, 138; 30 Am. Dec. 380; Taylor v. Heriot, 4 Desaus. (S. Car.) Eq. 227, 231. See Anson on Contracts, p. 63; Parsons on Contracts, 429; Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. (U. S.) 426; Follett v. Rose, 3 McLean (U. S.) 332; Stewart v. State, 2 Har. & G. (Md.) 114; Hubbard v. Coolidge, 1 Met. (Mass.) 84; Knobb v. Lindsey, 5 Ohio 468, 471; Gorce v. Wilson, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 597; Bracham v. Griffin, 3 Call. (Va.) 433; Kidder v. Chamberlain, 41 Vt. 62. But see Schnell v. Neel, 17 Ind. 29; Bailey v. Day, 26 Me. 88.

8. Goff v. Rogers, 71 Ind. 459, 461; Stewart on H. & W., § 112.

9. Metsker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 66. A loan by a wife to her husband, of money which is her separate property, upon his promise to repay it, creates an equity in her favor which a court of equity will enforce. Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580.

A married woman claiming, in opposition to her husband's creditors, property purchased after the marriage, must show that the consideration was paid out of her separate estate.

In Davis v. Fredericks, 104 U. S. 618, where a wife paid for property in cash from her own separate funds, it is not tion as two hundred and seventy dollars, for property worth two thousand dollars,¹ or four hundred dollars for property worth eighteen hundred dollars,² will not defeat creditors' rights; as to them the settlement is voluntary to the extent of the excess;³ and though, if the settlee has acted in good faith, he or she will be protected as a creditor, and the settlement treated as a security for the actual consideration.⁴

liable for her husband's debts on the ground that the deed to her was made in fraud of his creditors. See also Hitz v. Nat. Metropolitan Bank, 111 U. S. 722; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 31; Hollowell v. Simonson, 21 Ind. 398, 400; Bullard v. Briggs, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 533, 538; 19 Am. Dec. 291; Worthington v. Bullitt, 6 Md. 172, 198; Den v. York, 13 Ired. 206, 211.

1. Peigne v. Snowden, 1 Dessaus. (S. Car.) Eq. 591, 592. A married man cannot convey property of which he was the absolute owner, in trust for his wife (to whom he owed £280), to the prejudice of a creditor to whom he was indebted before he executed the deed, where the property was worth £2,000, for that circumstance is strong proof of a fraudulent intent.

2. Worthington v. Bullitt, 6 Md. 172, 198.

A father being indebted and in embarrassed circumstances conveyed to his son land worth upwards of $20,000, for the money consideration expressed in the deed of $12,000, of which but $5,000 was in fact paid in money by the son. Held, that this was a voluntary conveyance to the extent of the excess of the value of the land over the $5,000, and was therefore void as to creditors who were such prior to and at its date. A deed founded upon a moneyed consideration, which bears no adequate relation to the real value of the property, though valid as between the parties, may be assailed in chancery by creditors solely upon the ground of inadequacy of consideration. See also Herschfeldt v. George, 6 Mich. 456, 468.

3. Worthington v. Bullitt, 6 Md. 174, 198; Hinkle v. Wilson, 53 Md. 287, 294; Bullard v. Briggs, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 533, 538; Bowie v. Stonestreet, 6 Md. 418, 433; Hill v. Brigg, 52 Miss. 397, 402; Kelley v. Case, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 472, 474; Den v. York, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 206, 210; Peigne v. Snowden, 1 Dessaus. (S. Car.) Eq. 591, 592; Johnston v. Gill, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 587, 591; Davis v. Davis, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 587, 596; Warren v. Ranney, 50 Vt. 653, 656.

4. In Hinkle v. Wilson, 53 Md. 287, at a trustee's sale of an intestate's real estate for the purpose of partition among his heirs at law, the husband of one of the heirs at law purchased a part for $2,255; terms, one-third cash, balance in equal instalments at one and two years from day of sale, with interest. The husband signed the contract of sale and his note, with surety for the deferred payments. The sale was reported and ratified, and the husband entered into possession of the land as his own; and during 1872 to 1874 borrowed various sums of money in his own name and on his own credit to pay on the purchase, on which account was also paid an amount lent by a person to whom, in 1874, he executed a mortgage on the land for the security of part of what he received, without joinder of his wife, reciting his own indebtedness for the amount. After a petition by the trustee for a resale of the property at the risk of the husband for the balance of purchase money unpaid, the trustee reported the amount due by the husband to be $956.52, including interest. A distribution of this amount was made, and the share distributed to the husband's wife was $328.80. The aggregate of all distributions to her from the whole estate was $1,241, which amount was credited to the purchase money. The husband's wife, on his petition, in which he stated that he had sold his interest to her for a valuable consideration, was substituted, by order of court, in his stead as purchaser; and a deed was made to her by the trustee and recorded the 19th of February, 1878. The husband became indebted to the appellants in 1872 to 1874, and on some of their claims they had recovered judgments before a justice of the peace. On a bill filed by the appellants to have the deed to the husband's wife set aside, as being in prejudice of their rights as creditors, it was held that while the deed from the trustee to the husband's wife should be set aside as an absolute conveyance of the property, it would be allowed to

In the case of bad faith he or she will not be protected at all.¹

6. Fraud Between the Parties.—Formerly a married woman was deemed entirely under her husband's control, and incapable of voluntary acts in his presence,² and even now her torts and crimes committed in his presence are presumed committed under his coercion.³ So in the case of contracts. These at common law were void, and good in equity only if proved to have been fairly and freely made.⁴ But now, although the greatest good faith is required in dealings between husband and wife,⁵ which are treated much as dealings between trustee and cestui que trust are,⁶ and in case of a gift by her to him,⁷ or an inadequate consideration,⁸ or an advantage secured by him,⁹ the burden of proof is on him to show that the transaction was freely and deliberately concluded,¹⁰ the mere fact that he is her husband does not render it a fraud for him to take property from her;¹¹ but she must prove fraud or undue influence, and allowance will be made for their intimate relation.¹² The husband's fraud or duress will not affect the validity of a wife's transfer in the hands of a bona fide purstand as security to the grantee for the principal sum of $1,241; subject, however, to the mortgage executed by the husband; and that executions and levies on the land, under the appellants' judgments duly recorded, as required by the Act of 1868, ch. 443, constituted liens, according to their priority, upon the husband's equitable interest in the land; and that if such liens or judgments were not otherwise discharged, equitable interest might be void. See also Herschfeldt v. George, 6 Mich. 456, 468; Davis v. Davis, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 587, 596.

1. Warren v. Ranney, 50 Vt. 653, 656; Stewart on H. & W., § 107.

2. Stewart on H. & W., §§ 38, 121; Hepburn v. Dubois, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 345.

3. Stewart on H. & W., § 66, ch. 24; § 68, ch. 25.

4. Stewart on H. & W., §§ 41, 42, 359.

5. Willetts v. Willetts, 104 Ill. 122; Campbell's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 298, 309.

6. Darlington's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 512, 519; 27 Am. Rep. 726.

7. Boyd v. De La Montagnie, 73 N. Y. 493, 502; 29 Am. Rep. 197; McRae v. Battle, 69 N. Car. 98, 107; Darlington's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 512, 520; 27 Am. Rep. 726. In Boyd v. De La Montagnie, 73 N. Y. 498, a gratuitous transfer of property from a wife to a husband, induced in part by representations on his part that she was liable for a debt, for which in fact she was not liable, and made in the belief that the effect of the transfer would be to delay the creditors, or in some way to save the property, will be set aside by a court of equity. To sustain an action for that purpose it is not necessary to show a fraudulent intent upon the part of the husband in making the representations; a mutual misapprehension or mistake is sufficient. From the confidential relation of the parties the burden is thrown upon the husband, in order to sustain such a transfer, to show that the gift was freely and deliberately made, and that the transaction was fair and proper. The fact that the wife consented to the transfer to defraud creditors does not constitute a defence.

8. Birdsong v. Birdsong, 2 Head (Tenn.) 289, 296; Stewart on H. & W., § 106.

9. Jenne v. Marble, 37 Mich. 319, 322.

10. Smiley v. Reese, 53 Ala. 89, 101; Campbell's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 298, 309.

11. Scarborough v. Watkins, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 540, 547, 548; 50 Am. Dec. 528; Meriam v. Harsen, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 70, 82.

12. Boyd v. De la Montagnie, 73 N. Y. 498, 502, just cited is direct in point; see also Witbeck v. Witbeck, 25 Mich. 439, 442; Freeman v. Wilson, 51 Miss. 329, 333; Smyley v. Reese, 53 Ala. 89, 101; Stone v. Wood, 85 Ill. 603, 609; Lin v. Blizzard, 70 Ind. 23; Senger v. Rawson, 50 Iowa 634; Scarborough v. Watkins, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 540, 547; 50 Am. Dec. 518; Battle v.

chaser for value;¹ she cannot have her deed to a third party set aside on account of her husband's conduct,² unless they were confederates,³ or the husband acted as such third party's agent in obtaining the deed.⁴ In spite of fraud, equity will sustain a settlement between husband and wife if for the benefit of them both.⁵ Generally, courts of equity alone will afford them relief.⁶

7. Fraud as Against Creditors.—Husband and wife are one, and it is a great temptation for a husband to place property in his wife's name in order to secure himself. Innumerable cases have therefore arisen where the creditors of a husband have attached transfers to his wife and sought to have them declared void, and the principles applicable to such cases are quite well defined. A transfer by which the grantor hinders, delays or defrauds his cred-

Kasa, 30 La. An. 940; Whitridge v. Barry, 42 Md. 140, 153; Eccleston v. Furst, 48 Md. 145, 160; Smith v. Osborn, 33 Mich. 410; Jenne v. Marble, 37 Mich. 319, 322; Ferdon v. Miller, 34 N. J. Eq. 10, 13; Remington v. Wright, 43 N. J. L. 45; Rexford v. Rexford, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 6, 7; Meriam v. Harslem, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 70, 82; McRae v. Battle, 69 N. Car. 98, 107; Levi v. Earl, 3 Ohio St. 147; Campbell's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 298, 309; Darlington's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 512, 519; 27 Am. Rep. 726; Hammit v. Bull, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 29, 30; Birdsong v. Birdsong, 2 Head (Tenn.) 289, 296.

1. Conn. Life Ins. Co. v. McCormick, 45 Cal. 580; Spurgin v. Traub, 65 Ill. 170, 175; Finnegar v. Finnegar, 3 Tenn. Ch. 510.

2. Rogers v. Adams, 66 Ala. 600, 602. Duress of the wife, practiced by the husband to obtain her signature to a mortgage, does not affect the validity of the mortgage, when the mortgagee was not privy to such duress, and did not connive at it, or in any way participate in it. See also Collins v. Wassell, 34 Ark. 17, 33; Green v. Scrange, 19 Iowa 461, 465; Baldwin v. Snowden, 11 Ohio St. 203, 211; Hammit v. Bull, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 29, 50.

3. Fargo v. Goodspeed, 87 Ill. 290, 296.

4. Comegys v. Clarke, 44 Md. 108, 110. But see the case of Central Bank v. Copeland, 18 Md. 305 and 320, where a wife appears to have been induced to execute and acknowledge a mortgage of her property for her husband's debts by harshness and threats and the exercise of unwarrantable authority so excessive as to subjugate and control the freedom of her will. A court of equity will refuse to enforce it against her.

The fact that the mortgagee took no part in procuring the execution of the mortgage by the wife does not strengthen his right to set it up as valid, nor impair hers to avoid it; the acceptance of a mortgage implies adoption by the mortgagee of the husband's agency in procuring it.

5. Birdsong v. Birdsong, 2 Head (Tenn.) 289, 296.

6. In Stone v. Wood, 85 Ill. 603, where a wife fraudulently and deceitfully represented to her husband, then residing in a different locality from her, that if he would put the title to his house and lot in her name, she could sell it for a certain price, and would pay his debts and join him, giving him the surplus, and afterwards wrote him that she had made a sale, and thereby procured him to unite in a deed of the property to one she represented as a purchaser, but who, in fact, took the conveyance in trust for the wife, when she should reimburse him for some moneys loaned her and liabilities incurred, and the proof showed that the wife was untrue to her husband, and the grantee was a party to the fraud to deprive the husband of the property, it was held that the conveyance of the husband was properly set aside, and also a purchase by such grantee of the property under a judgment brought by him against the husband, the proofs showing that the rents of the property exceeded the sum paid by such grantee.

Where either husband or wife becomes untrue to the other, and by fraud obtains an unjust advantage over the other, a court of equity will as readily afford relief as it will between other persons not occupying that relation. See also Stewart H. & W., §§ 53, 121-124.

itors is called a "fraudulent conveyance." Such conveyances are of two kinds, those which are made with the intent to evade creditors, where there is fraud in fact,¹ and those where there is no such intent, but which being voluntary prejudice creditors' rights, where there is fraud in law.² The usual rules as to fraudulent conveyances apply generally to conveyances between husband and wife.³ But the subject is too vast to be minutely treated herein.

Statutes Protecting Creditors.—The statutes relating to this subject which are constantly referred to, which are merely declaratory of the common law,⁴ which, as a part of the common law, are in force in many States,⁵ and which form the basis of most modern statutes against fraudulent conveyances,⁶ are: 13 Eliz., ch. 5, and 27 Eliz., ch. 4. Statute 13 Eliz., ch. 5, provides that all transfers made to the end, purpose, and intent to delay, hinder or defraud creditors and others of their lawful rights are "utterly void" as against such creditors and others; but does not affect bona fide transfers for value. Statute 27 Eliz., ch. 4, provides that all transfers made for the intent and purpose of defrauding

1. In Williams v. Avery, 38 Ala. 115, a voluntary conveyance by a husband to his wife, if free from fraud, actual or constructive, will sometimes be upheld in equity as against subsequent creditors of the husband; but proof of an intent to hinder and defraud his creditors, will avoid the deed and render the property subject to subsequent debts.

In Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 229, a postnuptial voluntary settlement in favor of a wife and children is not to be impeached by subsequent creditors, under provisions of a statute that every voluntary conveyance of a person for his own benefit is fraudulent against creditors.

A conveyance from husband to wife, or a settlement of property upon her, which does not hinder or defraud then existing creditors, is not fraudulent as to subsequent creditors, without proof of actual or intentional fraud. Moore v. Page, 111 U. S. 117; Mattingly v. Nye, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 370; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 31; Smith v. Vodges, 92 U. S. 183; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225; Clark v. Kilrain, 103 U. S. 766; Wallace v. Penfield, 106 U. S. 260.

2. In Metsker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 66, conveyance of land by a husband to his wife, through a third person, in repayment of a loan, not made to defraud creditors, but to satisfy his equitable obligation to his wife, is not a voluntary conveyance, and is valid against his creditors. The conveyance by him, first to a third person who paid nothing, but took the title in trust for his wife, and from him to her to satisfy the common law inability to make a direct conveyance from husband to wife, is no evidence of fraud. Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479.

In a voluntary settlement upon a grantor's wife, prior indebtedness is only presumptive and not conclusive proof of fraud. See also Bean v. Patterson, 122 U. S. 496; Banks v. Patton, 1 Rob. (Va.) 400, 527.

3. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 229; 1 Am. Lead. Cas. 17; Shepard v. Shepard, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 57; Ewell's Lead. Cas. 280.

4. Cadogan v. Kennet, Cowp. 434; Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 309, 316; Adams v. Broughton, 13 Ala. 731, 739; Whittlesey v. McMahon, 10 Conn. 137, 141; 26 Am. Dec. 382; Fleming v. Townsend, 6 Ga. 103, 108; 50 Am. Dec. 318; Sparrow v. Chesley, 19 Me. 79; Hudnal v. Wilder, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 294; Wilt v. Franklin, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 502, 514, 523; Footman v. Pendergrass, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 33; Howard v. Williams, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 575, 580.

5. Gardner v. Cole, 21 Iowa 205; Bohn v. Headley, 7 Har. & J. (Md.) 257, 271.

6. Anderson v. Hooks, 9 Ala. 704; Blackman v. Wheaton, 13 Minn. 326.

subsequent purchasers are "utterly void" as against such subsequent purchasers; but does not affect bona fide transfers for value. These statutes are construed liberally,¹ and alike at law and in equity;² but while at common law fraudulent intent was a mere question of fact,³ under these statutes it became in part a question of law.⁴ The general statutes on the subject in the several States are given the same effect as these statutes in spite of somewhat different wording;⁵ but the modern system of public records has greatly diminished the importance of Statute 27 Eliz., ch. 4.⁶ There are, moreover, such statutes as that in Maryland, which provide that no acquisition of property by wife from husband shall be valid if made in prejudice of the rights of his creditors, and these seem to add nothing to the common law.⁷ Bankruptcy acts may also affect such conveyances, for a conveyance by a husband to his wife of all his property is an act of bankruptcy;⁸ and other collateral statutes may protect creditors.⁹

Existing Creditors.—If a debtor transfers his property for ade-

1. See 1 Bish. M. W., § 739. These statutes, as already intimated, have generally been understood by the courts as in some sense declaratory of the common law, rather than as introducing a new rule; though it is plain that they have a certain effect beyond what the common law would have without them. Still in their main provisions they are doubtless so far in affirmation of the common law as to bring them within the rule of interpretation, "that an enactment in its nature declaratory of the common law will be construed as far as may be according to the common law." In any view, these statutes are within another rule of interpretation, that enactments made to suppress frauds between individuals should be liberally interpreted.

2. Hopkirk v. Randolph, 2 Brock Marsh. (U. S.) 132, 139; Stewart H. & W., § 16.

3. Avery v. Street, 6 Watts (Pa.) 247, 248; Stewart H. & W., §§ 109, 112.

4. Myers v. King, 42 Md. 65, 71. Where articles of household furniture were purchased by a husband in pursuance of an antecedent agreement with his wife that he should advance the money and she would reimburse him, which she afterwards did, it was held, what is "a legal transfer" of property is a question of law, which a jury is incompetent to decide. See also Jones v. Spear, 21 Vt. 426, 431; Beers v. Botsford, 13 Conn. 146, 154; Gardiner Bank v. Wheaton, 8 Me. 373, 581. The accepted rule now is that the presumptions of law are rebuttable. Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 264, 280; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 31, 35; Stewart H. & W., §§ 116, 112.

5. Butterfield v. Stanton, 44 Miss. 15, 30; Johnston v. Gill, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 587, 592.

6. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 229; 1 Am. Lead. Cas. 17, 48.

7. See Scheffer v. Seltz, Md. L. Rec., March 22nd, 1884; Erdman v. Rosenthal, 60 Md. 312, 316; Crane v. Barkdoll, 59 Md. 534, 535; Hinkle v. Wilson, 53 Md. 287, 292; Trader v. Lane, 45 Md. 1, 14; Keller v. Keller, 45 Md. 259; Plummer v. Jarman, 44 Md. 634, 637; Myers v. King, 42 Md. 65; Drury v. Briscoe, 42 Md. 154; Sanborn v. Lang, 41 Md. 106; Farmers' Bank v. Brook, 40 Md. 249, 257; Green v. Early, 39 Md. 223; Warner v. Dove, 33 Md. 579, 586; Mayfield v. Kilgour, 31 Md. 240; Kuhn v. Stamford, 28 Md. 210. Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Deale, 18 Md. 26; Jones v. Jones, 18 Md. 464; Stockett v. Holliday, 9 Md. 480; Worthington v. Bullett, 6 Md. 172.

8. In Humes v. Scruggs, 94 U. S. 22. If a husband, when bankrupt, conveys to his wife property worth from $15,000 to $20,000, with no present consideration, but with a recital of part indebtedness to less than a fifth of its value, the transaction is fraudulent and void as to creditors. See also Parish v. Murphree, 13 How. (U. S.) 92; Re Alexander, 1 Low. (U. S.) 470, 474.

9. Reich v. Reich, 26 Minn. 97, 98.

quate valuable consideration, his creditors cannot complain unless his actual intention in making the transfer was to defeat or prejudice their rights, and was shared in by his grantee.¹ Still, in the absence of statute,² a mere preference of a bona fide creditor is lawful, irrespective of intent, and even though the debtor divests himself of all his property.³ But where the transfer is voluntary, the law raises in favor of existing creditors a presumption of fraudulent intent,⁴ which, in some old cases, and even now in some States, is, irrespective of the amounts of indebtedness,⁵ of the debtor's means,⁶ and of the property transferred,⁷ conclusive; but which, by the great weight of authority, may be rebutted by showing the purity of the grantor's intent and the reasonableness of the provision.⁸ The rule as stated by the Supreme Court of the United States reads: "The ancient rule that a voluntary postnuptial settlement can be avoided if there was some indebtedness existing has been relaxed, and the rule generally adopted in this country at the present time (1873) will uphold it if it be reasonable, not disproportionate to the husband's means, and clear of any intent, actual or constructive, to defraud creditors";⁹

1. Préwit v. Wilson, 103 U. S. 22, 23.
24. A conveyance executed for a valuable and adequate consideration will be upheld against the creditors of the grantor, however fraudulent his purpose may have been, if the grantee had no knowledge thereof.

2. Statutes often provide against preferences.

3. Carson v. Murray, 15 Mo. 378, 381. A debtor in failing circumstances may give a preference to one or more of his creditors, to the exclusion of others, and such disposition of his effect is not impeachable on the ground of fraud, even though it embraces all his property.

4. Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 31. A voluntary postnuptial settlement, if it be reasonable, and not disproportionate to the husband's means, and clear of any intent, actual or constructive, to defraud creditors, will be upheld; it will be held to be in bad faith toward existing creditors, if it is out of all proportion to the means of the husband, considering his state and condition, and seriously impair his ability to respond to the demands of his creditors. See also Hapgood v. Fisher, 34 Me. 407, 409; 56 Am. Dec. 663; Clarke v. McGeiham, 25 N. J. Eq. 423, 424; Leavitt v. Leavitt, 47 N. H. 329, 333; Woolston's Appeal, 51 Pa. St. 452, 456; Reynolds v. Stansford, 16 Tex. 386, 291; Bank v. Batton, 1 Rob. (Va.) 500, 527; Wilson v. Buchanan, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 334, 340.

5. In Reade v. Livingston, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 481. A voluntary settlement, after marriage, by a person indebted at the time, is fraudulent and void against all such antecedent creditors; and that without regard to the amount of the existing debts, or the extent of the property settled, or the circumstances of the party.

6. Reade v. Livingston, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 500; the conclusion to be drawn from the cases is, that if the party be indebted at the time of the voluntary settlement, it is presumed to be fraudulent in respect to such debts, and no circumstance will permit those debts to be affected by the settlement, or repel the legal presumption of fraud. The presumption of law, in this case, does not depend upon the amount of the debts, or the extent of the property in settlement, or the circumstances of the party. There is no such line of distinction set up, or traced in any of the cases.

7. Annin v. Annin, 24 N. J. Eq. 184, 191, 194. See notes to Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 229; 1 Am. Lead. Cas. 17; Costillo v. Thompson, 9 Ala. 937, 945; Bogard v. Gardley, 4 Smeeds & M. (Miss.) 302, 310; Davidson v. Graves, Riley (S. Car.) Ch. 219, 224; Cordery v. Zealy, 2 Bail. (S. Car.) 205, 208.

8. Hapgood v. Fisher, 34 Me. 407, 409; 56 Am. Dec. 663.

9. Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 31, 35.

and this rule is generally adopted,¹ even where a statute expressly provides that a transfer from husband to wife "in prejudice of the rights of subsisting creditors" shall be invalid.² A husband's love and affection for his wife, and a desire to secure her support, is ample reason for a gift to her;³ still his actual intention is a mere question of fact;⁴ but whether the gift is a reasonable one considering his circumstances seems to be a question of law.⁵ It is reasonable if his debts are trifling,⁶ or if he retains enough to readily pay them all;⁷ but unreasonable if his debts are so great as to embarrass him,⁸ or if he is insolvent,⁹ or if the gift leaves him insolvent,¹⁰ or if he denudes himself of all his property,¹¹ or if the property he conveys is easily accessible to creditors, while that which he retains, though ample in amount, is inaccessible to them.¹²

Subsequent Creditors.—A settlement is valid as against those who become creditors after it is made, unless there is an actual intent to defraud them;¹³ and if the settlement is on valuable consideration, unless the intent is shared in by the grantee.¹⁴ Transferring property with the intention of thus withdrawing it from the operation of debts about to be assumed is fraud in fact,¹⁵ and the transfer of all one's property is strong evidence of such fraud.¹⁶ A subsequent creditor cannot attack a settlement on the ground that it defrauds existing creditors;¹⁷ but if a settlement is set aside by existing creditors, subsequent creditors may come in pari passu with them.¹⁸

1. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 229; 1 Am. Lead. Cas. 17, cases collected. See Stewart H. & W., § 116, and cases there cited in note 13.

2. Warner v. Dove, 33 Md. 579, 586, 587.

3. Enders v. Williams, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 346, 351.

4. Hapgood v. Fisher, 34 Me. 407; 56 Am. Dec. 663; Carson v. Murray, 15 Mo. 378, 383; Pomeroy v. Bailey, 43 N. H. 118, 122; Stewart H. & W., § 109.

5. Warner v. Dove, 33 Md. 579; Stewart H. & W., §§ 109, 114.

6. Smith v. Reavis, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 341, 343.

7. Secor v. Souder, 95 Ind. 95, 100.

8. Wilson v. Buchanan, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 334, 340.

9. Bank v. Patton, 1 Rob. (Va.) 500.

10. Izard v. Middleton, Bail. (S. Car.) Ch. 228, 237.

11. Coates v. Gerlach, 44 Pa. St. 43, 46; Re Alexander, 1 Low. (U. S.) 470, 474; Ware v. Gardner, Law R., 7 Eq. 317, 321; Horn v. Ross, 20 Ga. 210, 223; Clayton v. Brown, 30 Ga. 490, 495; Wilder v. Brooks, 10 Minn. 50, 56; Piegné v. Snowden, 1 Dessaus. (S.

Car.) Eq. 591; Crane v. Stickles, 15 Vt. 252, 257.

12. Bullett v. Worthington, 3 Md. Ch. 99; Annin v. Annin, 24 N. J. Eq. 184, 194.

13. A conveyance from husband to wife, or a settlement of property upon her, which does not hinder or defraud then existing creditors, is not fraudulent as to subsequent creditors, without proof of actual or intentional fraud. Moore v. Page, 11 U. S. 117; Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 229; Mattlingly v. Nye, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 375; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 31; Smith v. Vodges, 92 U. S. 183; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225; Clark v. Killian, 103 U. S. 766; Wallace v. Penfield, 106 U. S. 260. See also Stewart H. & W., § 117, and cases in notes 1 and 2.

14. Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 348, 393.

15. Pawley v. Vogel, 42 Mo. 291, 303.

16. Martin v. Oliver, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 561, 565, 566; 49 Am. Dec. 717; Stewart H. & W., § 112.

17. Lynch v. Raleigh, 3 Ind. 273, 275.

18. Elliott v. Horn, 10 Ala. 348, 352;

Property Exempt.—Any property of a husband, personal¹ or real,² which his creditors could not proceed against,³ he may, as against them, settle upon his wife.⁴ Thus, there is no fraud, in law or in fact, in a conveyance by him to her of the homestead;⁵ or of her earnings,⁶ or cattle if they are exempt;⁷ or of her choses in action, which are not his till reduced to possession, and which his creditors cannot compel him to so reduce.⁸

Fraudulent possession is discussed under the title HUSBAND AND WIFE.

8. Enforcement of and Suits Upon.—The remedies for enforcing a postnuptial settlement depend largely upon the modes of procedure in the different States. As between husband and wife there are some special disabilities which have been discussed under title HUSBAND AND WIFE. Usually such settlements are enforced in equity.⁹ There the wife may have it specifically Lewis v. Love, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 345, 347; 38 Am. Dec. 161; Edwards v. Coleman, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 204, 205; Parkman v. Welch, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 231, 237; McConihe v. Sawyer, 12 N. H. 396; Hope v. Henderson, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 12, 14; 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 12, 14; 28 Am. Dec. 677; Hester v. Wilkinson, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 215, 218; Stewart H. & W., § 124.

1. Robb v. Brewer, 60 Iowa 539, 542.

2. Premo v. Hewitt, 55 Vt. 362, 366.

3. Stewart H. & W., §§ 122-124.

4. Jones v. Brandt, 59 Iowa 332, 344; Delashmut v. Tran, 44 Iowa 613, 616; Peterson v. Mulford, 36 N. J. L. 481, 489; Woodworth v. Sweet, 51 N. Y. 8, 10; Smethurst v. Thurston, Brightly (Pa.) 127, 129; Robinett's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 174, 178, 187; Leavitt v. Jones, 54 Vt. 423, 427; 41 Am. Rep. 840; Dreuzter v. Bell, 11 Wis. 114, 118; Hike v. Miles, 23 Wis. 164, 168.

5. Jones v. Brandt, 59 Iowa 332, 344.

6. Robb v. Brewer, 60 Iowa 539, 542; Premo v. Hewitt, 58 Vt. 362, 366. See Peterson v. Mulford, 36 N. J. L. 481, 489.

7. Leavitt v. Jones, 54 Vt. 423, 427; 41 Am. Rep. 849.

In the case of Leavitt v. Jones, 54 Vt. 423, a man sold nine lambs for a valuable consideration to his wife; and his creditor afterwards attached seven of these and eleven others, the increase of the nine. Held:

1. That the sale was valid; that it vested a perfect title in the wife.

2. No change of possession was required, because the nine sheep were exempt, and the ownership of the young followed their dams.

3. If they were not exempt at the time of the sale, because the husband owned thirty others, they were when attached, and this would enure to the benefit of the wife.

4. As between the vendor and the vendee the sale of the nine lambs was valid; hence the vendor never was the owner of the increase of these nine, which was necessary in order to require a change of possession.

8. Peterson v. Mulford, 36 N. J. L. 481, 489; Woodworth v. Sweet, 51 N. Y. 8, 10; Robinett's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 174, 178; Smethurst v. Thurston, Brightly (Pa.) 127, 129. See Stewart H. & W., §§ 176, 177.

In Robinett's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 178, ALLISON, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The law does not compel a husband to make his wife's choses in action his property; he may say that it was not his, and he may refuse to do any act that will make it his, and such refusal is consistent with his duty to those whom he is indebted; for it is the property of the debtor alone that can be taken by his creditors and applied to the payment of their just demands."

9. In Jones v. Jones, 18 Md. 464, a wife united with her husband in the sale of a farm, of which she was seised in her own right, upon the express agreement and understanding that he would invest a like sum for her use in other land; and in pursuance of this agreement, and in part performance of his contract, the husband purchased a farm and conveyed it by deed to his wife. Held, that a court of performed,¹ or rectified;² and where she and her husband have conveyed her property in trust for her sole separate use, she may after his death have it conveyed back to her;³ so when he has bought property in his name with her money, she may compel him to convey to her.⁴ But the grantor cannot revoke a settlement or have it set aside,⁵ except for fraud.⁶ No one not a party or creditor has any remedies at all.⁷

As to Creditors.—Courts of law and equity have concurrent jurisdiction over fraudulent conveyances;⁸ a creditor may treat the settlement as voidable, and apply to equity to have it set aside,⁹ or as void and attach personalty,¹⁰ or having bought the reality sue in ejectment.¹¹ But if the grantor has never held the legal title,¹² as where a husband has made a purchase and taken equity will not disturb the title of the wife under this deed in favor of the heirs at law of her husband. A contract may be entered into between husband and wife for the transfer of property from the husband to the wife for a valuable consideration, and such contract, if clearly established by proof, will be enforced in a court of equity. See also Stewart H. & W., §§ 42, 53.

1. Grain v. Shipman, 45 Conn. 572, 581.

2. Hanley v. Pearson, L. R., 13 Ch. D. 545; 549.

3. Tucker's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 354, 356. Husband and wife conveyed her property in trust for her separate use for life so that it should not be liable for her present or any future husband's engagements, and after her death for such persons and uses as she by her will should appoint, and in default of appointment for the persons who would be entitled to her "real and personal estate under the intestate laws of the place where she may be domiciled" at her death. The husband having died, held that the wife was entitled to a conveyance from the trustee of the trust estate. Equity will relieve from a voluntary and self-imposed trust without consideration when its purpose has been fulfilled and there is no other reason to preserve it.

4. Cade v. Davis, 96 N. Car. 139, where a husband contracts with his wife to invest money received from a sale of her land in other land, the title to which is to be taken to the wife, but, instead, he takes the title to himself, he must either execute his contract by conveying the land to her or restore to her the money which he received from her estate.

Bigley v. Jones (Pa.) 5 Cent. Rep. 670. A purchase by a husband of real estate in which his wife had an interest as heir, with an agreement—which is carried out—that the wife's share is to remain in the land, and be applied as part of the purchase money, will establish a resulting trust in the wife. See also Kline v. Ragland, 47 Ark. 111, where the purchase money for land conveyed to the husband is paid for in whole or in part by the wife, she has an equity to have a trust declared and enforced against him to the extent of her payment. See also Keller v. Keller, 45 Md. 269; Stewart H. & W., § 132.

5. Garner v. Graves, 54 Ind. 188, 192; Hildreth v. Eliot, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 293, 296; Bowser v. Bowser, 82 Pa. St. 57, 59; Cushwa v. Cushwa, 5 Md. 44, 50.

In Cushwa v. Cushwa, 5 Md. 44, a deed fraudulent as to creditors may be impeached by them, but it is good against all others; it cannot be impeached by the parties to the fraud or by their representatives or heirs at law. The grantor in a fraudulent deed cannot rely upon the fraud either as plaintiff claiming relief against the effect of the deed, or as defendant, resisting the claim of the grantee.

6. Stone v. Wood, 85 Ill. 603, 609; Stewart H. & W., § 110.

7. Currier v. Ford, 26 Ill. 488; Thompson v. Moore, 36 L. e. 47; Cushwa v. Cushwa, 5 Md. 44; Semay v. Bibeau, 2 Minn. 291; Graser v. Stellwagen, 25 N. Y. 315; Byrod's Appeal, 31 Pa. St. 341; Norton v. Kearney, 10 Wis. 443.

8. Mulford v. Peterson, 35 N. J. Eq. 127, 133; Bump. Fraud. Convey. 530, 531.

9. Bump. Fraud. Convey. 534.

10. Cook v. Cook, 43 Md. 522, 528; Green v. Early, 39 Md. 223, 229, 250.

11. O'Hara v. Dilworth, 72 Pa. St. 397.

12. Low v. Marco, 53 Me. 45, 49.

the deed in his wife's name,¹ the creditor must proceed in equity;² so in the case of bona fide valuable, but inadequate, consideration.³

9. Construction of.—As to this matter the same rules applicable to antenuptial settlements apply.

10. Conflict of Laws as to.—On this matter see same subject as to antenuptial settlements, and title CONFLICT OF LAWS.

11. Deeds of Settlement.—Deeds of settlement between husband and wife, especially in the case of separation,⁴ are common, and though it is usual to make them through the intervention of trustees, this is not necessary,⁵ but where a trustee is needed the husband is treated as such.⁶ Such deeds are always good in equity if equitable.⁷ To exclude the husband's marital rights in real estate the deed should contain express words,⁸ but every gift of personalty from husband to wife is presumed to be for her sole and separate use.⁹ In other respects such deeds are like deeds between strangers;¹⁰ for example, they may be delivered in escrow;¹¹ they are binding on the parties by estoppel.¹² All the property rights of the parties are often settled by deed.

12. Gifts of Personalty.—Gifts of personalty between husband and wife are usually good in equity if not at law;¹³ but as they are transfers of property without consideration, they are invalid as

1. Stewart H. & W., § 132.

2. Bump Fraud. Convey. 532; Stewart on H. & W., § 132.

3. Wright v. Stanard, 2 Brock. Marsh. (U. S.) 311, 314; Stewart H. & W., § 106.

4. See Stewart M. & D., §§ 182-191.

5. Banon v. Banon, 24 Vt. 375, 398; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225, 229. See Stewart M. & D., § 186; Stewart H. & W., §§ 41-43.

In Walker v. Walker, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 743, deeds of separation through a trustee, for separate maintenance of the wife, are legal, and equity will enforce them as to a separation immediately to occur or that has taken place.

6. Crooks v. Crooks, 34 Ohio St. 610, 616; Duffy v. Mechanics' etc. Ins. Co., 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 413, 443.

7. Shepard v. Shepard, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 57; 11 Am. Dec. 396; Ewell's Lead. Cas. Cor. 280; Sims v. Rickets, 35 Ind. 181; 9 Am. Dec. 679.

8. Plumb v. Ives, 39 Conn. 120; Hayt v. Parks, 39 Conn. 357; Bowen v. Lebrée, 2 Bush (Ky.) 112; Hutchinson v. Mitchell, 39 Tex. 487; Stewart H. & W., § 201.

9. Helmetag v. Frank, 61 Ala. 67; Deming v. Williams, 26 Conn. 226; Story v. Marshall, 24 Tex. 305.

10. Crooks v. Crooks, 34 Ohio St. 610.

11. See cases cited above.

12. Mulford v. Peterson, 36 N. J. L. 127; Stewart H. & W., § 412.

13. In Kitchen v. Bedford, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 413, the statute law of Arkansas has not changed the common law rule that a husband cannot legally make a gift to his wife during coverture. Where a husband has not parted with the legal title to bonds of which he may have made an equitable gift for his wife's benefit, he can call any person to account who unlawfully converts them. Perhaps he might have made an equitable gift for her benefit.

In Hutchins v. Dixon, 11 Md. 29, a feme covert may have a separate estate in personal property without a trustee; in such case equity will treat the husband as trustee for her benefit. See also Eddins v. Buck, 23 Ark. 507; Peck v. Brummagin, 31 Cal. 440; Deming v. Williams, 26 Conn. 226; Manny v. Rixford, 44 Ill. 129; Clawson v. Clawson, 25 Ind. 229; Thomas v. Harkness, 13 Bush (Ky.) 23; Dilts v. Stevenson, 17 N. J. Eq. 407; Seymour v. Fellows, 77 N. Y. 178; Paschall v. Hall, 5 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 108; Coates v. Gerlach, 44 Pa. St. 43; Fox v. Jones, 1 W. Va. 205; Stewart H. & W., § 43. Her equitable title becomes legal after her husband's death. Underhill v. Morgan, 33 Conn. 105, 108; Thomas v. Harkness, 13 Bush (Ky.) 23.

against creditors, whose rights they prejudice.¹ Gifts causa mortis differ from gifts inter vivos only in that the former are revoked if the donor does not die as expected,² and are therefore not separately discussed.³ The two essentials of a gift are, (1) the donor's intent to vest the title in the donee;⁴ (2) the execution of such intent by actual or constructive delivery.⁵ If a gift is good only in equity, it must be fair,⁶ reasonable,⁷ not extravagant,⁸ in fine, equitable.⁹ But once executed a gift is irrevocable;¹⁰ except under the civil or Spanish law.¹¹

(a) The donor's intention to vest the title in the donee must be clearly proved,¹² and is a mere question of fact, as in the case of gifts between strangers.¹³ But special presumptions arise from

1. 1 Parsons Cont. 236; Stewart H. & W., §§ 104, 108, 109, 111, 115, 117.

2. Conser v. Snowden, 54 Md. 175. "In order to render perfect a donatio mortis causa three things must concur: 1st. That the gift be made with a view to the death. 2nd. That it be with a condition, either express or implied, that it shall take effect only on the death of the donor, by a disorder from which he is then suffering; and 3rd. That there be a delivery of the subject of the donation."

It is well settled in Maryland, that there is no difference in the legal requirement to make a good delivery in gifts inter vivos and mortis causa. Although a gift causa mortis depends for its absoluteness on the death of the giver from the disease threatening life when the gift was made, so that recovery would revoke it, still for the time being and until recovery the absolute dominion over the thing given must be parted with at the time of the gift. 1 Parsons Cont. 236, 237. See GIFTS.

3. They are valid. Marshall v. Jaquith, 134 Mass. 138. Lanson v. Lanson, 1 P. Wms. 441; Miller v. Miller, 3 P. Wms. 356; Walter v. Hodge, 2 Swanst. 92; Whitney v. Wheeler, 116 Mass. 490, 492; Whitaker v. Whitaker, 52 N. Y. 368.

4. Manny v. Rixford, 44 Ill. 129; Skillman v. Skillman, 13 N. J. Eq. 403; Paschall v. Hall, 5 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 108.

5. See generally Connor v. Trawick, 37 Ala. 289; 1 Ala. Sel. Cas. 258; Camp's Appeal, 36 Conn. 88; 4 Am. Rep. 39; Minor v. Rogers, 40 Conn. 512; 16 Am. Rep. 69; Kerrigan v. Rantigan, 43 Conn. 17; Wheeler v. Wheeler, 43 Conn. 503; Evans v. Lipscomb, 28 Ga. 71; Cranz v. Kroger, 22 Ill. 74; Taylor v. Henry, 48 Md. 550;

3 Am. Rep. 486; Davis v. Ney, 125 Mass. 590; 28 Am. Rep. 272; Kimball v. Leland, 110 Mass. 325; Crittenden v. Phoenix Life Ins. Co., 41 Mich. 442; Curry v. Powers, 70 N. Y. 212; 26 Am. Rep. 577; Campbell's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 298, 306; Tillinghast v. Wheaton, 8 R. I. 536; 5 Am. Rep. 621.

6. Clawson v. Clawson, 25 Ind. 229, 239; Hatch v. Gray, 21 Iowa 29, 32.

7. Coates v. Gerlach, 44 Pa. St. 43, 45.

8. Paschall v. Hall, 5 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 108, 110.

9. Stewart H. & W., § 43.

10. Garner v. Graves, 54 Ind. 188, 192. See Rivers v. Carleton, 50 Ala. 40; Chew v. Chew, 38 Iowa 405, 406.

11. Fuller v. Ferguson, 26 Cal. 546, 547; Bradshaw v. Mayfield, 18 Tex. 21, 25; Ferris v. Parker, 13 Tex. 385.

12. Jennings v. Davis, 31 Conn. 134, 142; Manny v. Rixford, 44 Ill. 129, 133; Skillman v. Skillman, 13 N. J. Eq. 403, 407; Neufville v. Thomson, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 92, 94; Paschall v. Hall, 5 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 108, 109; Earl v. Champion, 65 Pa. St. 191, 194; Bradshaw v. Mayfield, 18 Tex. 21, 25.

13. In Stickney v. Stickney, 131 U. S. 227, there is no higher presumption that a married woman in the District of Columbia intends, by placing her separate money in the hands of her husband, thereby to make a gift of it to him, than there is that a third person has such intent when he in like manner deposits money with him. In the District of Columbia, whenever a husband acquires possession of the separate property of his wife, whether with or without her consent, he must be deemed to hold it in trust for her benefit, in the absence of any direct evidence that she intended to make a gift of it to him. See also 2 Schoul. Pers. Prop. 88; 1 Parsons Cont. 234.

the relation of the parties.¹ Thus, if a husband buys property in his wife's name, a gift thereof to her is prima facie presumed;² so if he takes a promissory note for a debt due him payable to her,³ or puts stock in her name,⁴ or deposits money to her credit;⁵ so if a note is taken payable to him and her, though he may dispose of it during his life,⁶ and perhaps by will,⁷ she takes it as survivor.⁸ Still, these presumptions may always be rebutted and the real intent shown.⁹ On the other hand, when a wife consents to her husband's expending her money, a gift of it to him is presumed, unless she shows that their intent was different;¹⁰ for example, that he received it as her agent,¹¹ or as a loan.¹² So a gift is presumed if by her consent he changes her realty into personalty,¹³ where personalty is by law his;¹⁴ but the mere pos-

1. Irvine v. Greeves, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 411, 417; Welch v. Welch, 63 Mo. 57, 61. Where gifts from the husband to the wife will be upheld in equity the same result will attend a gift to her from a third person, which the husband assents to and treats as belonging exclusively to her.

2. Jackson v. Jackson, 91 U. S. 122. Although by the common law, the money which a wife has at the time of her marriage, not secured to her by a settlement or contract, and that which she subsequently earns, belongs to the husband, it is competent and lawful for him to allow its investment in the purchase and improvement of real property for her separate use, if the rights of existing creditors are not thereby impaired. The doctrine of resulting trusts has no application to an investment of this kind; it constitutes a voluntary settlement upon the wife, whether made through the husband or directly by the wife with his consent. See also Stewart H. & W., § 132.

3. Phelps v. Phelps, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 556, 559. A married woman lent the interest accruing after her marriage upon a note held by her before her marriage, and the borrower gave her therefor a promissory note, which was made payable to her, in accordance with the wishes of her husband, in order that she might be the exclusive owner thereof, and the husband frequently declared that the money as well as the interest thereon was her separate property, and that he did not intend to claim or receive any part thereof to his own use; but he also stated to a third person that no agreement had been made with the wife in relation to the money either before or after the marriage. After the death of the husband, the borrower paid to the wife the amount due on his note, she having retained it in her custody. It was held that she was entitled to retain the amount so paid for her own use as against the executor of the husband. Love v. Francis (Mich.), 5 West Rep. 758.

A note taken by the husband upon the sale of his property to his wife is prima facie evidence of a gift to her. See also Rynders v. Crane, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 339, 347; Scott v. Simes, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 314.

4. Schick v. Grote, 42 N. J. Eq. 352. A deposit by a husband in a savings bank, upon the account of himself and wife, is not evidence of a gift to the wife, he retaining the power to draw the money at will, and in fact drawing the interest upon it on several occasions. See also Mason v. Fuller, 36 Conn. 160, 163; Jennings v. Davis, 31 Conn. 134, 142, 143; Neufville v. Thompson, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 92, 94.

5. Howard v. Windham Co. Savings Bank, 40 Vt. 597, 599; Stewart H. & W., § 128.

6. Towle v. Towle, 114 Mass. 167, 168.

7. Pile v. Pile, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 508, 511; 40 Am. Rep. 50.

8. Sanford v. Sanford, 58 N. Y. 69, 72; 45 N. Y. 723; Stewart H. & W., §§ 118, 132.

9. Snider v. Ridgeway, 49 Ill. 522, 524; cases cited in Stewart H. & W., § 128.

10. Tyson v. Tyson, 54 Md. 35, 38; Mellinger v. Bansman, 45 Pa. St. 522, 529.

11. Stewart H. & W., § 86.

12. Stewart H. & W., § 42.

13. See change of realty into personalty in Stewart H. & W., § 136.

14. Latimer v. Glenn, 2 Bush (Ky.) 535.

session and user of her chattels by him is of itself no evidence of a gift from her to him.¹

(b) *Delivery Must be Clearly Proved.*²—A mere declaration, as, "I give you this property," without delivery is merely an inchoate gift,³ and is treated as a promise to make a gift⁴—a promise which not even courts of equity enforce.⁵ The same is true though the declaration be in writing,⁶ but not if the writing be under seal, by virtue of the principle of estoppel.⁷ Declarations are usually evidence only of intent;⁸ delivery must be proved by facts showing actual, constructive, or symbolic change of possession.⁹ When, however, a husband purchases property for his wife as a gift, delivery to him is delivery to her, and subsequent possession by him is her possession.¹⁰ So that, when a husband bought a horse for his wife, the gift was upheld, though he kept the horse in his stable.¹¹ But it might have been otherwise had he first bought it for himself and then given it to her;¹² as when he gave her a wagon, but retained possession thereof and used it as before.¹³ Except in the case of personal ornaments and apparel,¹⁴ it is very difficult to prove actual delivery between husband and wife who are living together; as, for example, delivery of household furniture, and especially so when the question of fraud against creditors arises. And it may be said that the only safe delivery is by instrument under seal as between the parties,¹⁵ and

1. White v. Zone, 10 Mich. 333, 335; Allen v. Mills, 36 Miss. 640, 644; Stewart H. & W., § 119.

2. Dickeschild v. Exchange Bank, 28 W. Va. 341. The mere possession of the subject of the alleged gift, unaccompanied by proof of its delivery by the donor to the donee, is insufficient to establish it as a gift either inter vivos or causa mortis.

Schick v. Grote, 42 N. J. Eq. 352. To constitute a perfect gift the donor must part with the possession of and dominion over the property. See also Dilts v. Stevenson, 17 N. J. Eq. 407, 413, 414. See Cotteen v. Missing, 1 Madd. 174, 183; Woodruff v. Clark, 42 N. J. L. 198, 202. See cases cited in note 5, p. 568.

3. In re Pierce, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 426, 427; Machen v. Machen, 38 Ala. 364, 368; Woodson v. Pool, 19 Mo. 340, 345; Dilts v. Stevenson, 17 N. J. Eq. 407, 414; Wade v. Cantrell, 1 Head 346, 347. See Prater v. Frazier, 11 Ark. 249; Henderson v. Henderson, 21 Mo. 379. Husbands' naked declarations are no evidence as against third parties of wife's title. Hanson v. Millett, 55 Me. 184, 190; Parvin v. Capewell, 45 Pa. St. 89, 93.

4. 2 Schoul. Pers. Prop. 71.

5. Cotteen v. Missing, 1 Madd. 176, 183; Breton v. Woolven, L. R., 17 Ch.

Div. 416, 421; Crooks v. Crooks, 34 Ohio St. 610, 615.

6. Breton v. Woolven, L. R., 17 Ch. Div. 416, 421.

7. Fox v. Fox, L. R., 1 Ch. Div. 302, 306; Enders v. Williams, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 346, 350; Mulford v. Peterson, 35 N. J. L. 127, 136. See also McCutchen v. McCutchen, 9 Port. (Ala.) 650; 2 Schoul. Per. Prop. 84; Stewart H. & W., § 409.

8. See Olds v. Powell, 7 Ala. 653; Burney v. Ball, 24 Ga. 505; Morisey v. Bunting, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 3; Sims v. Saunders, Harp. (S. Car.) 374; 2 Schoul. Per. Prop. 85.

9. In Wogel v. Gast, 20 Mo. App. 104, delivery in some cases may be symbolical. See 1 Parsons Cont 234; 2 Schoul. Per. Prop. 69 et seq.; Stewart H. & W., § 120.

10. Scott v. Simms, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 314, 320. See Wheeler v. Wheeler, 43 Conn. 503, 509; Stewart v. Ball, 33 Mo. 154, 156.

11. Wheeler v. Wheeler, 43 Conn. 503.

12. Wheeler v. Wheeler, 43 Conn. 509.

13. Dilts v. Stevenson, 17 N. J. Eq. 407, 414.

14. In re Pierce, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 426, 427; Rogers v. Fales, 5 Pa. St. 154, 158.

15. In Hutchins v. Dixon, 11 Md.

by recorded instrument as against creditors.¹ Delivery by order is not perfected until the order is accepted or executed;² until such time it may be revoked and is revoked by the donor's death.³

30. The acknowledgment and recording of a deed import delivery, and are prima facie evidence of all circumstances necessary to give it validity. In Warner v. Hardy, 6 Md. 525, and Stewart v. Redditt, 3 Md. 67, it was decided that these formalities (the acknowledgment and recording) import delivery to the grantee. See also Miller v. Andrus, 1 La. An. 237; Woodson v. McClelland, 4 Mo. 495; Brummet v. Barber, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 543. See Stewart H. & W., §§ 102, 129, 125.

1. Hatch v. Gray, 21 Iowa 29, 32; Lyman v. Cessford, 15 Iowa 229, 234; Stewart H. & W., § 121.

2. See Chalmers Bills and Notes, 261, 262; Bromley v. Brunton, 37 Law J., Ch. 902; Law R., 6 Eq. 278; Hughes v. Stubbs, 11 Jur., N. S. 913; Harvard v. Pace, 15 Ga. 486. It is a revocable agency.

3. In Taylor v. Henry, 48 Md. 550, I H, being in feeble health and contemplating a departure from home for the benefit of his health, made a deposit in a savings bank in Baltimore of $1,850. In the depositor's bank book, furnished him at the time, the account was opened and the money credited to J H and M H, his mother, and the survivor of them, subject to the order of either. Corresponding entries were made upon the books of the bank. Some time after the deposit J H went again to the bank, accompanied by his sister, M T, and had the name of his mother erased and that of his sister substituted; so that the account was made to stand in the books thus: "14096—J H, M T, and the survivor of them, subject to the order of either. 1866, April 20th, received eighteen hundred and fifty dollars—$1,850." Of this amount J H drew out $50 on the 2nd of June, leaving a balance on deposit of $1,800. After the death of J H, that is on the 28th of September, 1866, M T obtained the bank book from the trunk of the deceased, where it had been constantly kept, and drew from the bank the entire balance with interest thereon. The deceased left no property other than this money, and by his will made sundry pecuniary bequests. On a bill filed by his administrators against M T and her husband to recover back the money drawn from the bank by her, it was held:

1st. That the right to the money depended upon the meaning and intention of the deceased in making the deposit in the form adopted, as gathered from the entry in the bank book, and all the circumstances surrounding the deceased at the time. 2nd. That if the words "and the survivor of them" had been omitted in making the entry in the bank book, the entry in the book would not be sufficient evidence of a complete and perfect gift. 3rd. That those words, when taken in connection with those which precede and those which follow them in the entry, do not import either a gift inter vivos or a gift causa mortis. 4th. That to make a gift inter vivos perfect and complete, there must be an actual transfer of all dominion over the thing given by the donor and an acceptance by the donee, or some competent person for him; and it is essential to the validity of such gift that it should go into effect, that is, transfer the property at once and completely. 5th. That having by the terms of the entry retained in himself the power to draw out the money, the deceased did not divest himself of dominion and control over the fund. 6th. That as the mother's name had been erased and that of the sister substituted, so the name of the sister could have been erased without the slightest question of the brother's right to do so. That the conclusion to be drawn from all the facts and circumstances of the case was, that the form of the entry in the bank book was nothing more than a device or an arrangement by the deceased to subserve a matter of convenience to himself, and that the sister was solely constituted an agent with power to draw money from the bank to meet some supposed or apprehended emergency that might possibly arise in his absence from home.

See also Taylor v. Henry, 48 Md. 550; 30 Am. Rep. 486; Jones v. Sock, L. R., 1 Ch. 25; Black v. Black, L. R., 13 Eq. 489; Smith v. Smith, 3 Stew. (N. J.) 564; Wellboin v. Odd Fellows B. & E. Co., 56 Tex. 501, 505.

In Wellboin v. Odd Fellows B. & E. Co., 56 Tex. 501, the mere deposit of money by a husband to the account of Delivery is not perfect unless accepted by the donee.¹

13. Bank Deposits of Husband and Wife.—A deposit by a husband of his own money in the names of himself and wife is not in itself a gift to her,² and if it is simply payable to her she is a mere his wife, a receipt of the same being taken in her name, does not of itself show that it was intended as a gift to the wife as her separate property. The husband having died, leaving a widow and two children, and no other property except a homestead and that deposit, held, that a party to whom the widow had assigned the receipt should have no right to recover any part of the deposit as against the claims of creditors.

1. If the agent of the donee residing with the donor be authorized to accept and receive the gift, so that actual delivery thereof to him is a delivery to such donee, and the gift is in fact so delivered to and accepted by him at the place of the donor's residence, his possession thereof at such place of residence will be insufficient to make it a valid gift. Dickeschied v. Exchange Bank, 28 W. Va. 341; 2 Schoul. Pers. Prop. 88.

2. In Schick v. Grote, 42 N. J. Eq. 352, a husband deposited in the name of himself and wife $1,000 in a savings bank, he did this because he could not deposit any more than he already had in his own name; nothing was drawn from the account before his death except some interest, which he drew. Held, not a gift to the wife. To same effect. People v. State Bank, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 607.

The form of the account to which the deposit was made is not evidence of gift to the wife from the husband. Brabrook v. Boston etc. Sav. Bank, 104 Mass. 228; Brown v. Brown, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 565; Marshall v. Cantwell, L. R., 20 Eq. 328; Smith v. Speer, 34 N. J. Eq. 336; Dilts v. Stevenson, 17 N. J. Eq. 407.

Where a wife deposited money of her husband, consisting mainly of her own earnings, in a savings bank, in her own name, without his knowledge, held, not a gift, but to belong to the husband. McDermott's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 358, 51 Am. Rep. 526.

Where money belonging to the husband is deposited in the name of the wife, the drawing checks thereon by her in payment of his debts and household expenses is evidence to show that the wife is a mere agent of the husband, and that the money so deposited and remaining in the bank belongs to his estate, and not to the wife's. Lloyd v. Doghe, L. R., 8 Ch. Ap. 88; 8 Moak, Eng. Rep. 775; 14 Eq. 241. See Galliland v. Gilliland, 66 Mo. 522.

Where a husband deposited in a savings bank money to his credit, so that it could be drawn either by himself or his wife, and the deposit book was given to him, it was held (1) that this was not a valid gift of the money to the wife—a delivery of the money, or at least of the evidence of the deposit, being indispensable to such a gift; and (2) that the wife was a mere agent of the husband, in respect to the sum deposited, without any beneficial interest therein. Brown v. Brown, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 565, 568, 569. See Green v. Green, 11 Week. Dig. 374.

Where S deposited $1,000 in a bank and took a certificate of deposit as follows: "S has deposited in this bank $1,000, payable to the order of himself or his wife on return of this certificate," and after the death of S his wife presented the certificate and got the money, it was not only held not to be a gift from husband to wife, but that the wife had no authority to draw the money after her husband's death, and the bank had to pay the money over again to her husband's administrator. Second National Bank v. Wrightson, 63 Md. 81, 84. See also Murray v. Cannon, 41 Md. 466.

Putting deposit in name of both and the survivor of them might be evidence of a gift to the survivor, but if it appears that the husband merely made the deposit in this form as a matter of convenience, it was held not a gift to his wife who survived. Taylor v. Henry, 48 Md. 550.

Where a husband deposits his money in a bank and takes a receipt in his wife's name, this does not constitute a donation to his wife, but the money remains community property, and subject on his death to be administered as belonging to his estate. Wellboin v. Odd fellows B. & E. Co., 56 Tex. 501.

A husband has no right except at common law to deposit in his wife's agent to draw it,¹ and her agency ceases on his death.² If the deposit is made in her name alone, its effect depends on the circumstances of the case; prima facie, except where the community system prevails, it is a gift to her,³ good against his heirs,⁴ though not against his creditors;⁵ but it may be shown that it was not a gift to her,⁶ as where it was entrusted to her for the support of the family.⁷ Of course as between her and the bank she may draw it, if the deposit is in her sole name.⁸ So if she deposits his money with his consent in her name, the deposit is deemed a gift to her.⁹ But a gift by a husband to his wife of a deposit in his name, must be perfected by delivery.¹⁰ A check alone is not delivery, and if he dies before his wife draws the money or has the check accepted, the gift does not take effect.¹¹

14. Mingling of Husband's and Wife's Property.—Some difficult questions sometimes arise where the property of a husband and a wife has been so mingled as to be beyond identification, but these questions will be found soluble upon principles already discussed.¹² If an ascertainable sum of a wife's money is mingled name made by her. Ganley v. Troy etc. Bank, 98 N. Y. 487.

1. See cases cited above.

2. Second National Bank of Baltimore v. Wrightson, 63 Md. 81, 84.

A being at the point of death and desiring to give B a sum of money gave him a check on his bank. Held, the delivery of the check was not sufficient delivery of the money to render the gift valid and effectual. Re Mather, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 632.

It was held in Harris v. Clark, 3 N. Y. 93, that a written order upon a third person made by the donor was not the subject of a valid gift, either inter vivos or mortis causa. Hewitt v. Kage, L. R., 6 Eq. 198; Second Nat. Bank v. Williams, 13 Mich. 282, 291; Conser v. Snowden, 54 Md. 175, 183. A check, or order to pay money, is not good as a gift. An endorsement is simply an order to pay money. A check does not amount to an assignment of the funds; until payment it is revocable by the drawer. Lunt. Bank of N. A., 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 221; Phelps v. Phelps, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 123; Fulton v. Fulton, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 581, 592; Beak v. Beak, 2 Moak, Eng. Rep. 390, 393, note; L. R., 13 Eq. 489.

It is otherwise as to the delivery of a certificate of deposit, or choses in action which are evidence of indebtedness enforceable against the institution or individual by whom they are issued. Westerlo v. De Witt, 36 N. Y. 340; Champney v. Blanchard, 39 N. Y. 111. See GIFTS.

3. Wellboin v. Oddfellows B. & E. Co., 56 Tex. 501, 504.

4. Fisk v. Cushman, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 20, 25; Howard v. Windham Co. Savings Bank, 40 Vt. 597, 599.

5. Ames v. Chew, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 320, 323; Spelman v. Aldrich, 126 Mass. 113, 117; ante, § 7.

6. Way v. Peck, 47 Conn. 23, 25; McClusky v. Provident Instit. for Savings, 103 Mass. 300, 306.

7. In McCubbi v. Patterson, 16 Md. 179, where a laborer was employed on condition that his notes should be payable to his wife to be used for the support of himself, wife and children, and part of these wages were deposited in bank in the name of his wife without his knowledge, it was held no gift. See Bates v. Bank of Brockport, 89 N. Y. 286.

8. Sweeny v. Boston etc. Sav. Bank, 116 Mass. 384, 386.

9. Jennings v. Davis, 31 Conn. 134, 142, 143.

10. See DELIVERY, ante, § 12.

11. Chalmers Dig. Bills etc., art. 262; citations supra, n. 3.

12. See discussion of equivocal possession of husband and wife, under title HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9. While modern statutes give married women practically the full rights of unmarried women over their property it is generally held that the marriage relation, its intimacy, etc., is not to be unnecessarily affected, and that wives can waive their rights. So that many cases hold strongly that where a wife by her husband with his own without her consent,¹ or upon no understanding that it shall be returned,² she is to the extent of such sum her husband's cestui que trust or creditor; but her consent alone to such a course is merely evidence of a waiver of her rights and of a gift to him.³ If, however, the amount of money so mingled is not ascertainable, she cannot recover from him or his estate.⁴ In many cases a married woman must keep her separate property separate.⁵

15. Settlements of Earnings, Labor, etc.—When a wife's services belong to her husband he may abandon all rights to her future earnings.⁶ If by statute a wife's "separate" earnings are hers, places money in her husband's hands and nothing is said, there is a presumption of a gift. Thus, in Tyson v. Tyson, 54 Md. 35, 38, it is said: "If the husband received and applied the fund, whether money, goods or chattels, or collected choses in action, with the wife's privity and consent, and without an agreement or promise to repay or restore it, no legal obligation rests on the husband to restore it; no right of action enures to her, and to that extent her rights are extinct. Edelen v. Edelen, 11 Md. 415, 420; Kuhn v. Stansfield, 28 Md. 210; Oswald v. Hoover, 43 Md. 360." See Harden v. Darwin, 66 Ala. 55, 63; Adlard v. Adlard, 65 Ill. 212, 216, 217; Jacobs v. Miller, 50 Mich. 119, 124. See ante, § 12.

But a different view seems to be taken in Stickney v. Stickney, 131 U. S. 227, where it is said: "But we are of opinion that, in the absence of her testimony, there would be no presumption since the passage of the Married Woman's act, that she intended to give to her husband the moneys she placed in his hands, any more than a gift would be inferred from a third person, who in like manner deposited money with him.

We think that wherever a husband acquires possession of the separate property of his wife, whether with or without her consent, he must be deemed to hold it in trust for her benefit, in the absence of any direct evidence that she intended to make a gift of it to him."

In a similar case where a husband received his wife's money in her presence and appropriated it without either saying a word, the court said: "She was not bound to attempt a rescue of it from him, or proclaim that it was not a gift. She might rest on the idea that his receipt in her presence was with the intent to take care of it for her. . . .

If it was not a gift the husband was a trustee for his wife, and whether he kept the money in his pocket or put it into real estate which he had purchased, honesty required that he should account to her for it. He could be compelled to do so in equity." Bergey's Appeal, 60 Pa. 408. See post, § 17.

1. Gover v. Owings, 16 Md. 91, 99.

2. Hill v. Hill, 38 Md. 183, 185; supra cases, Dent v. Slough, 40 Ala. 518, 523; Chambers v. Richardson, 57 Ala. 85, 90.

3. Hawkins v. Providence etc. R. Co., 119 Mass. 596, 598; 20 Am. Rep. 353. But see Stickney v. Stickney, 131 U. S. 227, supra.

If a husband invests a mixed fund in his wife's name, his creditors can attach the investment only to the extent of his interest. Bridges v. Phillips, 25 Ala. 136, 138.

4. McClusky v. Provident Instit. for Savings, 103 Mass. 300, 306; Glover v. Alcott, 11 Mich. 470, 479.

5. Birkback v. Ackroyd, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 365, 366. Nor can she claim that her earnings have been given her by her husband if they are mingled with his, as there is no gift without delivery. Quidort v. Pergeaux, 18 N. J. Eq. 472, 480; Pawley v. Vogel, 42 Mo. 291, 302.

A wife does not, however, waive her rights to her chattels by allowing her husband to use them, as in the case of furniture. Fitch v. Rathbun, 61 N. Y. 579, 581. Unless she gives them to him, Shirley v. Shirley, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 363, 365.

In a case where a husband and wife died about the same time, each leaving a separate estate, they were held equally entitled to a fund found in her trunk. Bergen v. Van Liew, 36 N. J. Eq. 637, reversing same case at p. 251.

6. Peterson v. Mulford, 36 N. J. L. 481, 487, 489; Quidort v. Pergeaux, 18 she has thereby no interest in money earned jointly with her husband;¹ and usually when husband and wife are in business together without any special understanding, it is presumed that the wife intended to give her services to her husband.² A husband may give his wife his own services, whether he does so or not raising many questions.

(a) General Rule.—A husband may, as his wife's agent, manage her separate property or separate business with or without compensation;³ but neither he nor any creditor of his has, in the absence of special agreement, any right in the property managed, earned or accumulated through his agency.⁴ Partnerships between husband and wife are not included within this discussion.⁵

(b) Express Contract.—Contracts between husband and wife are in most States void,⁶ and therefore there is usually no express contract by a wife to pay her husband for his services. In cases when such contract can and does exist, she may even be made his garnishee;⁷ but in the absence of such contract neither he nor any creditor of his has any right against her or her property.⁸

(c) Implied Contract.—There is no implied contract that a wife will pay her husband for his services.⁹ His first duty is to support her and his family,¹⁰ and in helping her to make her property productive he is but discharging this duty, and is presumed amply compensated with the home and support she allows him.¹¹ Moreover, as one's talents and capacity to labor are not property, and as therefore no debtor can be made to work for his creditors,¹² a husband who is entitled to his wife's services may give them to her even against his creditors,¹³ and may likewise give her his own labor,¹⁴ but not his accumulations.¹⁵

N. J. Eq. 472, 479. Not if actual fraud. Hozelbaker v. Goodfellow, 64 Ill. 238.

The decisions are inharmonious. Such a gift has been held void against creditors. Basham v. Chamberlain, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 443, 444. Void against existing creditors. Glaze v. Blake, 56 Ala. 379, 385. Void against subsequent creditors. Keith v. Woombell, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 211, 213. Not void against subsequent creditors unless actual fraud. Glaze v. Blake, 56 Ala. 379, 385. Good against devisees. Jones v. Reid, 12 W. Va. 350, 364. Her earnings not liable to be attached for his debts if his earnings are exempt. Hoyt v. White, 46 N. H. 45, 47.

1 See Wife's Earnings, title HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9.

2. McClusty v. Provident Instit. for Savings, 103 Mass. 300, 304; Hollowell v. Horter, 35 Pa. St. 375, 380.

3. See Agency of Husband for wife, title HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9.

4. Full discussion in Miller v. Peck, 18 W. Va. 76, 85, 96. See note 1, p. 576.

5. See title MARRIED WOMEN.

6. See title HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9.

7. Lewis v. Johns, 24 Cal. 78, 103; Keller v. Moyer, 55 Ga. 406, 410; Miller v. Peck, 18 W. Va. 75, 100.

8. McIntyre v. Knowlton, 6 Allen (Mass.) 565, 567; Webster v. Hildreth, 33 Vt. 457, 458. See note 1, p. 576.

9. Lewis v. Johns, 24 Cal. 98, 103.

10. See title HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9.

11. Cooper v. Ham, 49 Ind. 393, 416; McIntyre v. Knowlton, 6 Allen (Mass.) 565, 566.

12. Abbey v. Deyo, 44 N. Y. 343, 347; Rush v. Vought, 55 Pa. St. 437, 445; Hodges v. Cobb, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 50, 56.

13. Peterson v. Mulford, 36 N. J. L. 481, 487; Hoyt v. White, 46 N. H. 45, 47.

14. Miller v. Peck, 18 W. Va. 75, 99.

15. In Isham v. Shafer, 60 Barb. 317;

(d). Apparent or Pretended Agency.—A husband may thus, as his wife's agent, manage her property or business without acquiring any rights in said property or business, or subjecting it to the claims of his creditors.¹ But while apparently her agent and Rush v. Vought, 55 Pa. St. 437, 445; Holdship v. Patterson, 7 Watts (Pa.) 547.

1. In Baxter v. Maxwell (Pa.), 6 Cent. Rep. 743, a married woman who, by judicial decree, has secured the benefits of the act of April 3rd, 1872, may employ her husband to manage and superintend the business in which she is engaged; and his creditors cannot seize in execution her property produced by his superintendence and labor over and upon her separate property, although the business was such as the husband alone had skill and knowledge to conduct.

In Spering v. Laughlin, 113 Pa. St. 209, held that the husband assists in managing the wife's business is evidence for the jury in determining the good faith of her claim of property. A husband may act as agent for his wife and give his wife his labor and skill without injuring her title to her own property; and his creditors cannot sell her property produced by his labor and skill with her original property.

In Leeds v. Kahler, 76 Pa. St. 262, a married woman owned land which she farmed, her husband managing for her; he had long been insolvent and without credit; her credit was good. He purchased a horse for her and signed a note for the price, "John E. Seeds for Josephine Seeds." She received the horse and used it on the farm and acknowledged her liability for its payment. The horse was seized for the husband's debt before it was paid for. In an issue on a sheriff's interpleader, held, where a wife has separate estate and buys goods on its credit, she may hold them against the creditors of the husband. To protect goods from the husband's creditors, it is incumbent on the wife to establish that their purchase was on the credit of her separate estate.

In Lewis v. Johns, 24 Cal. 98, it was held that in the absence of an express agreement to that effect, there is no implied obligation on the part of the wife to compensate the husband for his supervision of and labor bestowed upon her separate property.

In Keller v. Mayer, 55 Ga. 406, the husband may be his wife's agent or employé in the management of her separate estate; and if she becomes indebted to him for services by contract, express or implied, she is subject to garnishment at the instance of his creditors.

In Bongard v. Core, 82 Ill. 19, a married woman may own real and personal property under the statute, and have her husband act as her agent in transacting the business growing out of such property, such as preserving and transferring the same, without subjecting it to the payment of his debts. If a married woman buys land and pays for the same from the products when sold, even though her husband acts as her agent in its control and management, bestowing a portion of his time, the land will not become his, and the products thereof will not be liable for his debts. The fact that a crop is raised on the land of the wife under the supervision of her husband, he contributing some personal labor in controlling and managing the business, will not make the crop his and subject it to the payment of his debts. Where a crop raised upon the land of a married woman is taken in execution as the property of the husband, and the proof tends to show that she employed and paid for the labor that produced the same, through her husband, the fact whether he was her agent in the matter should be submitted to the jury, and it is error to refuse an instruction upon the hypothesis of his agency.

In Cooper v. Ham, 49 Ind. 393, a wife may employ her husband to act as her agent in operating a mill owned by her, and such employment is not proof of an attempt on her part to defraud his creditors. The husband in such case has the right to give his personal services and skill to the management of his wife's property without any other compensation than the support and maintenance of himself and family.

In Carn v. Royer, 55 Iowa 650, facts considered under which it was held that the leasing of a farm by a wife, and its cultivation by minor sons and hired labor, with some assistance from her husband, was not in fraud of her husband's creditors, and did not render the products of the farm subject to his debts.

pretending to act in that capacity he may be conducting a business of his own under her name simply for the purpose of evading

In Abbey v. Deyo, 44 N. Y. 343, by the existing statute law of New York a married woman may acquire the title to personal property by grant or purchase; and this purchase may be made in any of the ordinary modes known to the law, or to the course of business. It may be made by the payment of cash for the property purchased, or she may buy it on her own credit. And if a purchase be made by her, and the credit given to her with the object of vesting the title in her, she will acquire thereby a title to the property in her own name and as her sole and separate property. So the purchase may be made by herself in person, or by her authorized agent; and her husband may be that agent. She may carry on the trade or business of a merchant. She may conduct it with the property and means which she has fairly acquired by purchase; and she may carry it on herself by her personal labor and services exclusively, or exclusively through the medium of agents, or partly in each mode. She may make her husband her agent to conduct such business; and if she does so bona fide, without permitting her name to be used as a cover for fraud, intending to compensate him (or through him his creditors), and not to absorb the proceeds of his labor and earnings in the business for her own benefit, excluding his creditors therefrom, the transaction is lawful, and will be upheld by the law.

In Webster v. Hildreth, 33 Vt. 457, if a husband improves his wife's land without any agreement with her through trustees or otherwise that his labor and money expended thereon shall vest in him any interest therein or entitle him to any claim against or compensation from her property, he gains no right or title thereto which his creditors can reach by attachment or by the aid of a court of equity.

In Miller v. Peck, 18 W. Va. 75, a married woman having personal property, which she is allowed by statute to hold as her separate property, may barter and trade with reference thereto through her husband as her agent, and will be entitled to the increase thereof, though living with her husband. Although the husband may have given his own labor in such barter and trade, or may have used the labor of his horses therein, in the absence of the fraud of the wife, this does not change the character of the property, and the property is not liable for the debts of the husband.

In Penn v. Whiteheads, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 74, a husband carries on the mercantile business as agent for his wife, and he is aided by his sons who are minors. The business is profitable and property is accumulated from its profits. The husband has an interest in this property which may be subjected by his creditors to the payment of his debts.

In Wilson v. Loomis, 55 Ill. 352, 354, notwithstanding the act of 1861, if a married woman advance her own separate money and place the same in the hands of her husband for the purpose of carrying on any general trade, although in the wife's name, and the husband by his labor and skill in that undertaking increase the funds, the entire capital embarked in the enterprise, together with the increase, will not constitute the separate estate of the wife, but will be liable for the debts of the husband. Though as between the husband and wife, if the rights of no creditors intervene, the rule might be different. See also Aldridge v. Muirhead, 101 U.S. 397, 399; Voorhees v. Bonesteel, 16 Wall. (U.S.) 16, 31; Coon v. Rigden, 4 Col. 275, 287, 288; Martinez v. Ward, 19 Ala. 175, 188, 189; Wells v. Smith, 54 Ga. 262, 264; Olsen v. Kern, 10 Ill. App. 578, 582; Langford v. Greirson, 5 Ill. App. 362; Cubberly v. Scott, 98 Ill. 38, 40; Bellows v. Rosenthal, 31 Ind. 116, 118; Parker v. Bates, 29 Kan. 597; Commonwealth v. Fletcher, 6 Bush (Ky.) 171, 172; McIntyre v. Knowlton, 6 Allen (Mass.) 565, 567; Merrick v. Plumley, 29 Mass. 566; Rankin v. West, 25 Mich. 195, 200; Hossfeldt v. Dill, 28 Minn. 469; Hamilton v. Booth, 55 Miss. 60; 30 Am. Rep. 500; Glass v. Thomas, 6 Mo. App. 157; Owen v. Cawley, 36 N. Y. 600, 604, 605; Smith v. Sweeney, 55 N. Y. 234, 235; Gage v. Dauchy, 34 N. Y. 293, 297; Buckley v. Wells, 33 N. Y. 518, 521; Knapp v. Smith, 27 N. Y. 233; Holdstrop v. Patterson, 7 Watts (Pa.) 547; Hodges v. Cobb, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 50, 56; Feller v. Alden, 23 Wis. 301, 304; Boos v. Gomber, 23 Wis. 284, 286; Dayton v.

his creditors,¹ or he may be using her property as a gift to him,² or as a loan;³ in such cases the business is his and the remedies of his creditors against the assets thereof are full.⁴ So when she has no power by statute to trade, but with his consent is in a business which he conducts, it is his business;⁵ the right of his creditors against a business which he conducts can be questioned only when by statute she can trade alone.⁶ When he has been using her property in his business, her rights are at best those of a creditor.⁷ In some cases where a wife has amassed a fortune through the efforts of her husband, it has been held that a court of equity would in favor of his creditors make some apportionment⁸—treat the husband and wife as it were as partners.⁹

Walsh, 47 Wis. 113; 32 Am. Rep. 757. Compare cases infra, n. 1, below; Stewart H. & W. 187.

1. See Hurlburt v. Jones, 25 Cal. 225; Wortman v. Price, 47 Ill. 22; Brownell v. Dixon, 37 Ill. 198, 208; Cooper v. Harn, 49 Ind. 393, 416; Laing v. Cunningham, 17 Iowa 510; National Bank of the Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 13, 25; Knapp v. Smith, 27 N. Y. 277, 280; Woodsworth v. Sweet, 51 N. Y. 8; Gage v. Dauchy, 34 N. Y. 293, 298.

2. See Dent v. Slough, 40 Ala. 518; Freeman v. Orser, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 476.

3. Glidden v. Taylor, 16 Ohio St. 509.

4. In Brownell v. Dixon, 37 Ill. 198, a husband may act as the agent of his wife in the control and management of her personal property, either generally or under special instructions but she should be careful to see that her husband is acting in truth and in fact in that character, as very slight circumstances may, in certain cases, be sufficient for a jury to infer that the property he is managing is really his own and not that of his wife. See also Gage v. Dauchy, 34 N. Y. 293, 298.

5. In Erdman v. Rosenthal, 16 Md. 312, on a bill filed by a married woman for an injunction to restrain an execution issued against her husband and levied upon personal property which she claimed to be hers, it was held: 1st. That the husband being in apparent possession and active control of the property, dealing with it as his own, it was incumbent upon the wife, in order to defeat the rights of the creditors of the husband, to establish by clear and undoubted proof a bona fide right and title to the property. 2nd. That the simple assertion of title as against the husband or his creditors would not do; there must be clear affirmative proof to show how the property was acquired, and, if purchased, that it was paid for with the money or purchased upon the credit of the wife exclusively. 3rd. That her claim to the property on the ground that it was paid for out of the profits of a business conducted upon a place leased by her, could not be maintained unless the business was in fact conducted at her expense and for her benefit. See also Wortman v. Price, 47 Ill. 22, 24; Albey v. Deyo, 44 N. Y. 343, 347; Bucher v. Ream, 68 Pa. St. 421, 426; National Bank of the Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 13, 25.

6. Shackleford v. Collier, 6 Bush (Ky.) 149, 159; Alt v. Laforette, 9 Mo. App. 91; Pawley v. Vogel, 42 Mo. 291; Lyman v. Place, 16 N. J. Eq. 30; Quidort v. Pergieaux, 18 N. J. Eq. 472, 480.

In Wortman v. Price, 47 Ill. 22, under the act of 1861, for the protection of married women in their separate property, the husband may act as agent for his wife in a particular transaction, or generally for the control of her property or the investment of her funds. He may lease her property and collect the rents, or invest her money, or change the character of the investment if authorized by her, and he may do this without subjecting her property to his debts. But she cannot make him her agent to engage in trade to be managed by him, to which all his time and energies must be devoted, without subjecting the property embarked in such trade and its profits to the payment of his debts.

7. See Wortman v. Price, 47 Ill. St., cited above. Also Glidden v. Taylor, 16 Ohio St. 509, 521; infra, note 2.

8. Cooper v. Ham, 49 Ind. 393, 416; Com. v. Fletcher, 6 Bush (Ky.) 171; Glidden v. Taylor, 16 Ohio St. 509, 520; Filler v. Allen, 23 Wis. 301, 305.

9. In Glidden v. Taylor, 16 Ohio

Whether the business is the husband's or the wife's is simply a question of fact, the burden of proof being generally on the wife to show that the business was hers.¹ So whether there is fraud is a question of fact.²

(e) Illustrations.—Thus, where a husband with his team did a great deal of work on his wife's property, and his creditors attempted to sell the crop for his debts, the court held that he could give to her the labor of himself and his beasts, and that the accretions to her property continued hers and could not be touched by his creditors.³ Where a manufacturer of large experience failed, and then started up again with his wife's money and in her name, and made a fortune, the court allowed her her money and interest, but held the remaining profits for his debts.⁴ Where, while the wife's earnings belonged to her husband, he consented that she should trade in her own name, but took part himself in the business, the business was held his, and therefore liable for his debts.⁵

(f) Statutes.—In some States there are statutes expressly referring to this subject.⁶

16. Improvements by One Spouse of the Other's Real Estate.—The land of one spouse is not liable for improvements placed upon it by the other, either to such other⁷ or to such other's creditors,⁸

St. 509, the wife was allowed only her money and legal interest.

In The National Bank of Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 13, the whole was held liable for the husband's debts. To treat them as partners would be fairer when there is really a mingling of goods, etc. See Stewart H. & W. § 129.

1. Keller v. Mayer, 55 Ga. 406, 490; Knapp v. Smith, 27 N. Y. 277; Abbey v. Deyo, 44 N. Y. 343. Of course her capacity to trade is a question of law. Also discussed in Stewart H. & W., §§ 118, 121, very fully.

2. Myers v. King, 42 Md. 65, 70; Stewart H. & W., § 86.

3. Miller v. Peck, 18 W. Va. 95, 102.

4. Glidden v. Taylor, 16 Ohio St. 509.

5. National Bank of Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 13, 25.

6. See Porter v. Gamba, 43 Cal. 105; Youngworth v. Jewell, 15 Nev. 45.

7. In Dick v. Hamilton, 1 Deady (U. S.) 322, a subsequent creditor of the husband has no claim on the property of the wife for money expended thereon, unless it appear that it was so expended with intent to defraud such creditor. Where an insolvent husband lived with his family in the house of his wife, and during the time made repairs thereon, so as to keep it habitable, held, that the property was not liable to the creditor of the husband for the value of such repairs.

In Coleman v. Smith, 52 Ala. 259, neither the use of moneys of the wife's statutory separate estate in permanent improvements on the husband's lands, nor his executing a trust deed on them to secure a debt due her, constitute them her statutory separate estate. On bill filed by the wife to subject the lands to her demands, a decree ordering a sale to pay the trust deed, but subordinating the claim for money used in improving the land to a mortgage given by the husband to a third person, is in no proper sense a "subjecting to sale the separate estate for a married woman," entitling her to an appeal and supersedeas without security under the act approved March 9th, 1871. See also Hood v. Sorrell, 11 Ala. 386; Swain v. Duane, 48 Cal. 358; Bean v. Scroggin, 12 Ill. App. 321; Mather v. Dobschuetz, 72 Ill. 438; Capp v. Stewart, 38 Ind. 479. But see Stewart on H. & W., § 131, and particularly note 1, citing very many cases.

8. Capp v. Stewart, 38 Ind. 479; Corning v. Fowler, 24 Iowa 584; Robinson v. Huffman, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 80; Pruno v. Hewitt, 55 Vt. 362, 367; cases supra, note 5, p. 539.

except (1) in the case of a contract by the owner of the land which renders it liable,¹ or (2) as against creditors in the case of actual fraud.² As a general rule improvements placed upon real estate without any agreement of the owner to the contrary, become a part of the realty and are lost to the party who places them there and to his creditors.³ As between the parties in the absence of contract there seems to be no ground even for equitable interference,⁴ although when a husband improperly uses his wife's money to improve his lands equity will cause her to be reimbursed when the lands are sold.⁵ Nor ought a wife's land to be liable at all for improvements placed on them against her wishes or without her consent.⁶ But when a husband, who, within the knowledge of his wife, is indebted, with her consent improves her property, and becomes unable to pay his debts, there is good ground for equitable interference.⁷

17. Resulting Trusts Between Husband and Wife.—(a) When a husband buys with his wife's money in his own name, there arises a resulting trust in her favor,⁸ unless a different intention on her

1. In Wilson v. Jones, 46 Md. 349, it was held that in order to charge the debts contracted by a married woman upon her separate estate as a lien in equity, it is necessary that it should affirmatively appear that her contract was made with direct reference to her separate estate, and that it was her intention to charge the same.

A bill was filed against a feme covert and her trustee for the purpose of charging her separate estate with a lien for materials furnished by the complainants for the improvement of the same; the bill did not aver that there was any contract by her to bind her separate estate, or any intention on her part to create a charge or specific lien thereon for the payment of the complainant's claim. On demurrer to the bill it was held that the bill stated no case entitling the complainants to relief in equity, and that the demurrer should be sustained. See also Crickmore v. Breckenridge, 51 Ind. 294, 298. But see under community system Succession of Roth, 33 La. An. 540; Stewart H. & W., § 314.

2. Corning v. Fowler, 24 Iowa 584, 586; Hoot v. Sorrell, 11 Ala. 388, 406; Kirby v. Burns, 45 Mo. 234, 235; Caswell v. Hill, 47 N. H. 407, 415; Barto's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 386, 392; Cater v. Eveleigh, 4 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 19, 20; 6 Am. Dec. 596. See cases supra, n. 3, supra.

3. See Mather v. Fraser, 2 Kay & J. 536; Farrar v. Stackpole, 6 Me. 154; 19

Am. Dec. 201; Green v. Phillips, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 752; 21 Am. Rep. 323; Boone Real Prop., § 9.

4. As gifts are not discountenanced, see Stewart H. & W., §§ 100, 105, 127.

5. Colleman v. Smith, 52 Ala. 259, 261.

6. Barto's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 386, 392.

7. Rose v. Brown, 11 W. Va. 122, 137; supra, notes 3, 6.

8. In Gebel v. Weiss (N. J. 1887), 7 Cent. Rep. 126, where a woman paid her money for land and for the repairs and improvements put on it after the purchase, and accepted a conveyance thereof to herself and another, as her husband, in the belief that she was the lawful wife of such other, and that in case she should survive him the property would be wholly hers, those who claim under him have no better claim to the property than he had. Where she learns after his death that when he married her he had a wife living, she can maintain a suit against the latter and her children to obtain a decree assuring to complainant the title to the whole of the property, on the ground that his name was inserted in the deed through his fraud in marrying her and inducing her to believe that he was her lawful husband. See also Heath v. Slocum, 115 Pa. St. 549; Bigley v. Jones (Pa.), 5 Cent. Rep. 670; Henderson v. Maclay (Pa.), 5 Cent. Rep. 225; Dilts v. Stewart (Pa.), 1 Cent. Rep. 606; Heberd v. Wines, 105 Ind. 239; Harris v. Brown, 30 Ala. 401, 402; part is shown,¹ and the burden of proof is on the husband to show she intended a gift to him,² which is, however, prima facie established by proof of her knowledge and consent.³ The wife, on her part, must clearly show that her money was paid.⁴ When such a resulting trust has arisen, the husband's creditors cannot complain if he conveys the legal title to her though he does so to defeat their remedies against the property.⁵ While this property is not liable for the husband's debts, his bona fide assignee for value without notice takes it clear of the trust.⁶

(b) When a husband buys with his own money in his wife's name, the transaction is deemed an advancement and gift to her,⁷ unless a different intention on his part is shown, as where she had agreed to hold it for him,⁸ or was invested with the title for his convenience, he being ill,⁹ or a foreigner.¹⁰ In such cases no resulting trust arises in favor of himself, or his heirs, but one does arise in favor of such creditors of his as could have set aside a direct conveyance of equal value from him to her, that is to say, existing creditors,¹¹ unless the settlement was fair and reason-

Plummer v. Jarman, 44 Md. 632, 638; Keller v. Keller, 45 Md. 269, 275; Wales v. Newbould, 9 Mich. 45, 64; Barnard v. Kuhn, 36 Pa. St. 383, 390; Ready v. Bragg, 1 Head (Tenn.) 511.

1. Wales v. Newbould, 9 Mich. 64; note 3, p. 541; § 132, Stewart H. & W.

2. See case cited supra, n. 4.

3. In Tyson v. Tyson, 54 Md. 35, a legacy amounting to $2873.35, from the wife's father, was paid by his executor to the husband and wife jointly, and they executed a joint and several release therefor under seal, and acknowledged the same as their act before a justice of the peace. The money was appropriated by the husband. Years afterwards the wife filed a bill of complaint asking that she might be divorced a mensa et thoro, that proper alimony might be awarded to her, and that the said sum of $2,873.35 might be paid to her by her husband. A decree was passed divorcing the complainants a mensa et thoro from her husband, and awarding her alimony to the extent of $156 per annum during the joint lives of herself and husband, but omitting to award her the said sum of $2,873.35. On appeal from the decree by the complainant the same was affirmed, it being held that the conversion of the money by the husband with the concurrence of the wife, and her conjoint act and deed, destroyed her right to recover it as her separate property after divorce, after a lapse of a series of years without any promise or agreement on the part of the husband to return it; that the transaction amounted to an absolute gift. See also Russell v. Russell, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 54.

4. Plummer v. Jarman, 44 Md. 632, 638.

5. Harris v. Brown, 30 Ala. 401, 402; Stewart H. & W., § 105, n. 22; Wilson v. Sheppard, 28 Ala. 623, 629.

6. Ready v. Bragg, 1 Head (Tenn.) 511, 515; Gorman v. Wood, 68 Ga. 524; Darnaby v. Darnaby, 14 Bush (Ky.), 485, 488. Consult Stewart H. & W., § 100.

7. In Jones v. Bland, 116 Pa. St. 190, proof that land conveyed to a married woman was bought with her husband's money raises a presumption that the land was intended as a gift to her. Eykyn v. Eykyn, L. R., 6 Ch. Div. 115, 118; Jackson v. Jackson, 91 U. S. 122, 125; Ward v. Ward, 36 Ark. 586, 588; Andrews v. Oxley, 38 Iowa 578, 580; Ederly v. Ederly, 112 Mass. 175; Darrier v. Darrier, 58 Mo. 222, 227; Linker v. Linker, 32 N. J. Eq. 174, 177; Scott v. Simes, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 324, 329; Irvine v. Greever, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 411, 417; Bent v. Bent, 44 Vt. 555, 559.

8. Marshall v. Curtwell, L. R., 20 Eq. 328, 331; Higgins v. Higgins, 46 Cal. 259, 263; Wormley v. Wormley, 98 Ill. 544; Dun v. Hornbeck, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 629, 630; Bent v. Bent, 44 Vt. 555.

9. Marshall v. Curtwell, L. R., 20 Eq. 328, 331.

10. Dun v. Hornbeck, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 629.

11. In Jackson v. Jackson, 91 U. S.

able,¹ but not subsequent creditors, unless there was fraud in fact.² For a married woman may be trustee, even by implication and against her will.³ Still in these cases she is trustee only to the extent of the money paid by her husband.⁴

(c) Every purchase by a married woman in her own name is deemed to have been made with her husband's money,⁵ but she may show her funds were used.⁶ So if she paid only a part she is directly interested in the purchase to that extent, and holds the title as security when it is assailed by her husband's creditors.⁷

(d) A purchase by a married woman with her husband's funds in her own name is deemed a settlement by him on her, unless it appears that she did so wrongfully, or with a different purpose.⁸

(e) A purchase with the money of both in the name of one is deemed a gift to that one, unless the other shows a different intent, or a breach of trust.⁹ If the purchase is in the name of both, a tenancy by entireties is created.¹⁰

(f) A resulting trust can be enforced only in equity.¹¹

18. Insurance of Life for Benefit of Spouse.—A wife has a direct interest in the life of her husband, which may be insured by him

122, although by the common law the money which the wife has at the time of her marriage, not secured to her by a settlement or contract, and that which she subsequently earns, belongs to her husband, it is competent and lawful for him to allow its investment in the purchase and improvement of real property for her separate use, if the rights of existing creditors are not thereby impaired. The doctrine of resulting trusts has no application to an investment of this kind; it constitutes a voluntary settlement upon the wife, whether made through the husband or directly by the wife with his consent. See also Peck v. Brummagin, 31 Cal. 440, 447; Ransdell v. Fuller, 28 Cal. 37, 43; Wing v. Goodman, 75 Ill. 159, 163; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. McLaughlin, 77 Ill. 275, 278; Garner v. Graves, 54 Ind. 188, 192; Snow v. Paine, 114 Mass. 520, 526; McCowan v. Donaldson, 128 Mass. 169, 170; Adams v. Brackett, 5 Met. 280, 286; Shepard v. Pratt, 32 Iowa 296, 298, 301; Baker v. Dobyns, 4 Dana (Ky.) 220, 225; Duhow v. Young, 3 Bush (Ky.) 343; Hearn v. Lander, 11 Bush (Ky.) 669; Low v. Marco, 53 Me. 45, 49; Warner v. Dove, 33 Md. 579; Matthews v. Torinus, 22 Minn. 132; Rogers v. McCauley, 22 Minn. 384, 386; Hill v. Bugg, 52 Miss. 397; Rose v. Brown, 11 W. Va. 122, 136; Stewart H. & W., §§ 113-117.

1. Shepard v. Pratt, 32 Iowa 296, 301; Matthews v. Torinus, 22 Minn. 343, 349; Warner v. Dove, 33 Md. 579, 584.

2. Duhme v. Young, 3 Bush (Ky.) 343, 349; Matthews v. Torinus, 22 Minn. 132, 135.

3. Harden v. Darwin, 66 Ala. 55, 61, 62; Stewart H. & W., § 450.

4. Hearn v. Lander, 11 Bush (Ky.) 675, 676; Hill v. Bugg, 52 Miss. 397, 401. Consult Stewart H. & W., § 106.

5. Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 583, 582; Rose v. Brown, 11 W. Va. 122, 136.

6. Higgins v. Higgins, 46 Cal. 259; Ramsdell v. Fuller, 28 Cal. 37, 42; McDonald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393, 398; Huston v. Curl, 8 Tex. 239, 242; 58 Am. Dec. 110.

7. Hopkins v. Carey, 23 Miss. 54, 58; Grain v. Shipman, 45 Conn. 472, 583; Hill v. Bugg, 52 Miss. 397, 401.

8. Adlard v. Adlard, 65 Ill. 212, 216, 217; Darrier v. Darrier, 58 Mo. 222, 227. Consult supra, notes 7, 8, 9, p. 581.

9. Harden v. Darwin, 66 Ala. 55, 65; Marshall v. Cantwell, L. R., 20 Eq. 328; Hopkins v. Carey, 23 Miss. 54, 58. Does husband have to prove gift, supra notes 1, 2, p. 581.

10. Jacobs v. Miller, 50 Mich. 119, 124, realty. Eykyn v. Eykyn, L. R., 6 Ch. Div. 115, 118, personality.

11. Law v. Marco, 53 Me. 45, 49.

(and by her under special statutes) for her benefit.¹ When such insurance has been made the policy is her separate property,² the proceeds belong not to the community but to her and her representatives;³ she may assign it,⁴ even for her husband's debt,⁵ but such assignment must be free from fraud and duress,⁶ but he cannot assign it or defeat her rights, as by a fraudulent surrender,⁷ nor can either of them so defeat the rights of children, who are also beneficiaries;⁸ still, if he survives her he may surrender a policy taken out for her benefit,⁹ or dispose of it by will,¹⁰ or have another person, as a second wife, made beneficiary.¹¹ Her separate estate is not, however, liable for the premiums.¹² If a husband assigns a policy for his benefit to his wife for hers, it may, just as any other assignment, be a fraud on his creditors;¹³ so if he surrenders a policy in his name and takes out one in hers, for this is really an assignment;¹⁴ so if he makes a large and un-

1. In Gambs v. Covenant Mut. Life Ins. Co., 50 Mo. 44, 47, at common law and prior to the statute (Wagn. Stat. 936, § 15), the wife had such an interest in the life of her husband that a policy taken out by him for her benefit would be valid, and where the husband died during the life of his wife it would be enforced. But not so as to her legal representatives where the husband survived her. The only ground upon which the policy could be sustained when issued was the fact that the wife had a right to look to her husband for support. That object being lost by her death, the husband would not be bound to continue the policy for the benefit of her legal representatives, and he might change the policy for the benefit of a subsequent wife.

In Central Bank of Wash. v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, a wife and children have an insurable interest in the life of the husband and father. See also Thompson v. American etc. Ins. Co., 46 N. Y. 674, 675; Stewart H. & W., § 393.

2. Pomeroy v. Manhattan Life Ins. Co., 40 Ill. 399, 402; Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Booker, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 606, 618.

3. Succession of Bofenschen, 29 La. An. 711, 714.

4. In Whitridge v. Barry, 42 Md. 140, a policy of insurance taken on the life of a husband for the sole use of his wife, and payable to her or her assigns, is a chose in action of the wife's which she has the right to assign or otherwise dispose of with her husband's consent. Ainsworth v. Backus, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 414, 417; Godfrey v. Wilson, 70 Ind. 50, 56.

5. In Emerich v. Coakley, 35 Md. 188, 190, an assignment by a wife and her husband, for the benefit of his creditors, of a policy of insurance on his life obtained for her sole and separate use and made payable to her and her assigns is valid.

The forbearance of the creditors of the husband and the granting an extension of time for the payment of his debts, is a valid consideration for an assignment by the wife. Stewart H. & W., § 134.

6. Stewart H. & W., § 110. See cases cited supra, notes 2 and 3. Also Fowler v. Butterly, 78 N. Y. 68; 34 Am. Rep. 507.

7. See Knickerbocker v. Weitz, 99 Mass. 157, 159; Barry v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 49 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 504, 508; Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Booker, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 606, 618, 619.

8. Meller v. Meller, L. R., 6 Ch. Div. 127, 128. Consult cases cited supra, n. 5.

9. See Gambs v. Covenant Mut. Life Ins. Co., 50 Mo. 44, cited at length in n. 71. Also see Kerman v. Howard, 23 Wis. 108, 112.

10. In Kerman v. Howard, 23 Wis. 108, 112, where a husband survives his wife, having previously procured a policy of insurance on his own life for her benefit, and himself paid the premiums thereon, he may dispose of it by will or otherwise.

11. Gambs v. Covenant Mut. Life Ins. Co., 50 Mo. 44.

12. Ogden v. Guill, 56 Miss. 330, 332.

13. Elliott's Appeal, 50 Pa. St. 75, 83; Stewart H. & W., §§ 113-117. See English Woman's Act 1882, § 11.

14. Stokes v. Coffey, 8 Bush (Ky.)

reasonable insurance in her favor when he is indebted,¹ but even against creditors he may insure his life for her benefit for a reasonable amount.² Statutes often exempt insurance policies from the claims of creditors.³

19. Wife as Surety for Husband.—Contracts and conveyances by a wife for the benefit of her husband's creditors are in reality indirectly contracts and conveyances with him. But special considerations have arisen with reference to the wife's capacity to be surety for her husband, and to the incidents of her suretyship.

(a) Capacity Under General Powers.—In the absence of express prohibition in the settlement or statute whence she derives her capacity to contract, a wife can to the full extent of that capacity, equitable or statutory, contract as surety for her husband.⁴ Thus, 533, 538. That is to say, it is an indirect transfer. Stewart H. & W., § 99.

1. Stokes v. Coffey, 8 Bush (Ky.) 533, 588.

2. In Elliott's Appeal, 50 Pa. St. 78, policies of insurance effected without fraud directly and on their face for the benefit of the wife, and payable to her, are not to be held fraudulent as to creditors. Smedley v. Felt, 43 Iowa 607, 608; Stokes v. Coffey, 8 Bush (Ky.) 533, 538; Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Booker, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 606, 618.

3. Md. R. C. 1878, p. 483, § 26.

4. In Perkins v. Elliott, 23 N. J. Eq. 526, a married woman cannot charge her separate estate by a contract of suretyship, unless in consideration of a benefit to herself or her estate. The rule is the same, whether such separate estate has been created by deed or will, or by force of the statute relating to the property of married women. A married woman executed a joint and several note with her husband, stating therein that the money was to be a charge on her separate estate, and it appeared that this money was to be applied to the payment of a mortgage given by the husband and wife on lands of the husband. Held, that the feme was bound, as she derived a benefit from the transaction, in relieving the lands in which she had a dower right from the encumbrance.

In Muller v. Bayley, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 521, real estate is conveyed to a trustee for a married woman, the whole equitable estate being vested in her, free from liability for her husband's debts; and with express power in her to mortgage, convey in trust or otherwise pledge the property or any part of it, and the trustee is, on her request, to sell it and pay the proceeds to her or reinvest. The wife may subject the property to pay the debt of, or raise money for, her husband.

In Wolff v. Van Metre, 19 Iowa 134, the wife cannot bind herself as surety for her husband by a contract which does not relate to her separate property; but she may execute a mortgage conveying her separate property to secure either her own or her husband's debts.

In Woolsey v. Brown, 74 N. Y. 82, a married woman is not disqualified from executing as surety an undertaking upon appeal.

In Hall v. Tay, 131 Mass. 192, a mortgage was given by a husband and wife on her land to A, as security for sales of goods to be made by him to the husband. Held, that parol evidence was admissible to show that the liabilities which the mortgage was intended to secure were those to be incurred by the husband to a firm of which A was a member; and that it was immaterial that the wife did not know of the existence of the firm when she executed the mortgage, or when the subsequent purchases of goods were made.

In Wilcox v. Todd, 64 Mo. 388, where a deed of trust is given by the husband and wife jointly on the land of the latter to secure a debt of the husband, she occupies the position of a surety toward him, and, like any other surety, may compel a creditor of the husband holding a mortgage on other property of his to resort thereto in the first instance before subjecting her property to the payment of his debts; and a fortiori she has that right when the creditor has no such security; and her equity is unaffected by the fact that her land is not owned by her as a sepa-mortgages by wife for husband's debts are common,¹ so are assignments of personalty;² and a married woman who can make a promissory note can endorse one for her husband.³

(b) Capacity Limited by Statute.—In some States statutes ex-

rate estate. See also Greiner v. Greiner, 58 Cal. 115, 122; Collins v. Dawley, 4 Colo. 138; Ayres v. Husted, 15 Conn. 504, 517; Edwards v. Schoeneman, 104 Ill. 278, 285; Hubble v. Wright, 23 Ind. 322, 324; Low v. Anderson, 41 Iowa 476, 478; Latimer v. Glenn, 2 Bush (Ky.) 535, 543; Mayo v. Hutchinson, 57 Me. 546; Emerick v. Coakley, 35 Md. 188, 190; Watson v. Thurber, 11 Mich. 457; Stine v. Montgomery, 35 Miss. 83, 104; Re Harrall, 13 N. J. Eq. 101; Purvis v. Carstaphan, 73 N. Car. 575, 581; Baldwin v. Snowden, 11 Ohio St. 203, 211; Moore v. Fullen, 6 Oreg. 272; 25 Am. Rep. 524; Haffey v. Carey, 73 Pa. St. 431, 432; McFerrin v. White, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 449; Rhodes v. Gibbs, 39 Tex. 432. A married woman having no capacity to contract at common law can do so only in equity or by statute. Stewart H. & W., Contracts of Married Women, §§ 355-393.

1. Short v. Battle, 52 Ala. 456, 460; Ward v. Spear, 20 Cal. 660, 674; Young v. Graff, 28 Ill. 20; Brockschmidt v. Hagenbusch, 72 Ill. 562; Washburn v. Roesch, 13 Ill. App. 268, 272; Hubble v. Wright, 23 Ind. 322, 324; Moffitt v. Roche, 77 Ind. 48, 51; Wolf v. Van Metre, 23 Iowa 397; Green v. Scranage, 19 Iowa 461, 465; Carregy v. Clarke, 44 Md. 108; Helburn v. Warner, 112 Mass. 271, 275; Smith v. Osborn, 33 Mich. 410; Armstrong v. Stovall, 26 Miss. 275, 280; Schneider v. Stahr, 20 Mo. 269; Wilcox v. Todd, 64 Mo. 388, 389; Robbins v. Abrahams, 5 N. J. Eq. 465; Bank of Albion v. Burns, 46 N. Y. 170, 175; McVey v. Cantrell, 70 N. Y. 295, 297; 26 Am. Rep. 605; Purvis v. Carstaphan, 73 N. Car. 575; Moore v. Fuller, 6 Oreg. 272; 25 Am. Rep. 524; Bayler v. Com., 40 Pa. St. 37; Jamison v. Jamison, 3 Whart. (Pa.) 457; Lytle's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 131, 133; McFerrin v. White, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 449; Rhodes v. Gibbs, 39 Tex. 432; Muller v. Bayly, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 521.

In Stafford Sav. Bank v. Underwood, 54 Conn. 2, the only limitation upon the wife's power of alienation of her real estate is her husband's consent; and a conditional sale or mortgage evidenced by her husband joining in the deed is valid when made to secure his debt.

In McFillin v. Hoffman, 42 N. J. Eq. 144, a wife joining with her husband in a mortgage of her own property to secure his debt is his surety merely, and entitled to all the rights and privileges of a surety. See cases cited in opinion of court.

2. In Pomeroy v. Manhattan Life Ins. Co., 40 Ill. 398, unless restrained by the deed or marriage settlement under which a married woman holds her separate personal property, she may pledge or dispose of it in equity, independent of the statute. And under the act of 1861, commonly called the "Married Woman's Act," she may dispose of her separate personal property, and cannot afterward repudiate the act by which it is done. See also Collins v. Dawley, 4 Colo. 138; 34 Am. Rep. 72; Emerick v. Coakley, 35 Md. 188, 190.

3. Consult Stewart H. & W., ch. 21, § 385, where the subject is treated at length.

In Mayor v. Holmes, 124 Mass. 108, under the Stat. of 1874, ch. 184, a promissory note made by a married woman jointly with her husband, for no other consideration than a debt of his to the payee, binds her. (By section 1 of that act "a married woman may convey her shares in corporations, and lease and convey her real property and make contracts oral and written, sealed and unsealed, in the same manner as if she were sole;" but "nothing in this act shall authorize a married woman to convey property to, or make contracts with, her husband.")

GRAY, C. J., in construing this act, said: "Before the Stat. of 1874, ch. 184, the female defendant would not have been liable, but this statute has removed that restriction, and in the broadest terms enables a married woman to 'make contracts, oral and written, sealed and unsealed, in the same manner as if she were sole,' and does not require that the consideration of her contracts should enure to her own benefit. See also Parker v. Kane, 4 Allen (Mass.) 346; Kenworthy v. Sawyer, 125 Mass. 28, 29; Goodman v. Hill, 125 Mass. 587, 589. Compare De Vries v. Conklin, 22 Mich. 255, 258, pressly, or by necessary implication, prohibit a wife's contracts as surety for her husband.¹ But such is not the effect of statutes forbidding contracts between husband and wife,² or providing that a wife's property shall not be liable for her husband's debts.³ Nor does a statute which prohibits such contracts as to her statutory separate property affect her capacity as to her equitable separate property.⁴

(c) Contract Otherwise Binding.—The contract must, however, not only be one which, though a married woman, she has capacity to make, but also one which would bind her as surety if unmarried.⁵

(d) Implied Suretyship.—Whenever a wife conveys or mortgages her property, or binds herself for her husband's debt she does so prima facie simply as his surety;⁶ but whether she is so

260; Sawyer v. Fernald, 59 Me. 500, 502.

1. Bibb v. Pope, 43 Ala. 190, 200; Bowman v. Kaufman, 30 La. An. 1021, 1025; Worthington v. Faber, 52 Ala. 45, 47; Dunbar v. Mize, 53 Ga. 435, 437; Foxworth v. Magee, 44 Wis. 430; Erwin v. Hill, 47 Miss. 675; n. 7, p. 581, Ala., Ga. and Miss. cases.

2. Major v. Holmes, 124 Mass. 108, 109, cited n. 2, p. 585.

3. Hubble v. Wright, 23 Ind. 322, 324.

4. In Short v. Battle, 52 Ala. 456, the wife must be regarded in equity as a feme sole with respect to her equitable separate estate, having capacity to bind or charge it by her contracts, and to alienate or otherwise dispose of it. She may mortgage it as security for her own debt, or that of another.

In Northington v. Faber, 52 Ala. 45, a mortgage by the wife of her statutory separate estate, to secure payment of her husband's debt, was held void, conferring no title on the purchaser under it, and she, or her personal representatives, may maintain trover against the purchaser for conversion of property thus acquired.

5. In Schmidt v. Postel, 63 Ill. 59, 60, in an action against a husband and wife, upon a promissory note executed by both of them, the wife pleaded in bar that at the time of the making the promises, etc., mentioned, she was, and still is, the wife of her codefendant, and that the note was given for hogs bought by her husband; that the debt was his, and that she signed the note only as security for him, and such note was the only cause of action, the court below sustaining a demurrer to the plea. Held, that the court erred, the plea presenting a complete bar as to the wife.

MR. JUSTICE BREESE delivered the opinion of the court: "This is a plain case; the main question arising in it is settled by Carpenter v. Mitchell, 50 Ill. 470, where it was held that the note of a married woman, executed with her husband in payment for land purchased by the wife and conveyed to her, could not be the foundation of an action at law against her. If allowed, it would frustrate the object of the act of 1861, to protect married women in their separate property; for under the influence of her husband, which a married woman usually is, her separate property could be swept from her by his foolish undertaking and reckless contracts."

In Doyle v. Kelly, 75 Ill. 574. While, according to the laws in force in 1870, a married woman might lawfully bind herself in a contract in relation to her separate property, yet the laws then in force conferred no power upon her to become surety for her husband upon a promissory note given by her husband for a liability he had incurred, and the contract was held void as to the wife.

In Hetherington v. Hixon, 46 Ala. 297, the signing of her husband's note, previously made and delivered by him, by a wife, as his surety, does not impose on her any obligation which will sustain its subsequent recognition. See also O'Daily v. Morris, 31 Ind. 111; Wolf v. Van Metre, 19 Iowa 134; West v. Laroway, 28 Mich. 464; Sawyer v. Fernald, 59 Me. 500; De Vries v. Conklin, 22 Mich. 255; Bayler v. Com., 40 Pa. St. 37, 44; Hatz's Appeal, 40 Pa. St. 209; White's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 134; see Baylie Sureties, ch. 4.

6. Huntingdon v. Huntingdon, 2 or not depends upon her intent, and the debt may be shown to have really been hers.¹ Nor is she a surety so far as concerns creditors if she is one of the original contractors and nothing else appears.²

(c) Incidents of her Suretyship.—Whenever a wife is expressly or impliedly, as above, surety for her husband, she has the same rights as other sureties.³ Thus, she has her equity of exoneration.⁴ She may not only, if she has paid his debt, go against him for reimbursement pari passu with his other creditors, being subrogated to the rights of the creditor she has paid,⁵ but she may compel him or his representatives to redeem her goods which have been pledged for his debt,⁶ and after his death she or her representative or her creditor may have her property exonerated of its White & T. Lead. Cas. 1010. Mortgage of wife's estate of inheritance for the benefit of her husband. Wife's estate considered only as surety. A wife joins with her husband in a mortgage of her own inheritance, in order to buy him a place, and the husband covenants to pay the money. He accordingly pays the money, and takes an assignment of the mortgage in trust for himself. The mortgage being for a term of years, the husband devises it for the benefit of his younger children. But it was held that the elder son, as heir of the wife, was entitled to have the term assigned as he should direct, discharged from all demands of the younger children. See cases collected in the notes to this case. Also, see Hassey v. Wilke, 38 Hun (N.Y.) 522, 523; Ward v. Spear, 20 Cal. 660, 674; Ayres v. Husted, 15 Conn. 504, 517; Latimer v. Glenn, 2 Bush (Ky.) 535; Johns v. Reardon, 11 Md. 465, 469; Knight v. Whitehead, 26 Miss. 245, 246; Wilcox v. Todd, 64 Mo. 388, 389; Loomer v. Wheelwright, 3 Saund. Ch. 135, 154; Bank of Albion v. Burns, 46 N. Y. 170, 175; Purvis v. Carstaphan, 73 N. Car. 575, 581; Miner v. Graham, 24 Pa. St. 491, 495; Hammit v. Bull, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 29, 30; infra, notes 3-12. This does not apply to her release of dower. Hawley v. Bradford, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 200, 201.

1. Duffy v. Mechanics' etc. Ins. Co., 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 413, 433; Clinton v. Hooper, 3 Bro. C. C. 212, 213; 1 Ves. Jr. 173; Kinnoul v. Monly, 3 Swanst. 208 n; Spear v. Ward, 20 Cal. 660, 674.

2. Alexander v. Bouton, 55 Cal. 15, 19; Spear v. Ward, 20 Cal. 660, 677.

3. Van Horne v. Everson, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 526, 530. When a wife becomes surety for her husband, by making a valid lien upon her own property or estate, she is entitled to the same equitable rights as other sureties. See also Wilcox v. Todd, 64 Mo. 388; Bank of Albion v. Burns, 46 N. Y. 170, 175; Hawley v. Bradford, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 200, 201; Sheidle v. Weishlee, 16 Pa. St. 134, 137.

4. In Johns v. Reardon, 11 Md. 465, husband and wife executed a mortgage of real estate belonging, one moiety to the wife in fee, and the other moiety to the husband in fee, but this mortgage was not properly acknowledged. Subsequently the same parties executed a mortgage of the same land to another party, which, being duly acknowledged, was decided to have priority over the former, and both were to secure debts due by the husband. Held, a wife who joins her husband in a mortgage of real estate, partly her own and partly her husband's, to secure a debt due by her husband, stands as surety of her husband to the mortgage and has the right to have the husband's interest first applied to pay the debt, in exoneration of her interest. See also Butterfield v. Stanton, 44 Miss. 15, 33; Wilcox v. Todd, 64 Mo. 388; Shinn v. Smith, 79 N. Car. 310; Huntington v. Huntington, 2 Bram. Parl. C. 1; 2 White & T. Lead. Cas. 1010.

5. Gleaver v. Paine, 1 De Gex J. & S. 87, 95, 96; supra, n. 4; Greiner v. Greiner, 58 Cal. 115, 122; 12 The Reporter 647, supra, n. 42.

6. In Re Harrall, 31 N. J. Eq. 101, 102, the wife of a lunatic who had an ample estate applied for an order requiring his guardian to redeem for her benefit certain separate property of hers (jewells, etc.) pawned, with her consent, by her husband while sane, to pay his personal expenses, and the proceeds of liability out of his real and personal estate.¹ As in the case of other sureties she may compel the creditor to first exhaust the principal's means;² if any of his securities are released,³ or his time is extended,⁴—

the loan were so applied. Held, that she was entitled to relief, and that her husband, under the circumstances, is bound in equity to redeem the property.

1. In Ayres v. Husted, 15 Conn. 504, B, D and E, creditors of C, having successively, and in the present order of their names, attached C's personal property, it was, in pursuance of an agreement between them, placed in A's hands, to be by him sold, and the proceeds to be applied to the judgments, to be recovered by the attaching creditors, in the same manner as they would by law be applied in the ordinary course of proceeding. Where C and his wife conveyed to B the equity of redemption in her land, to be applied in payment of certain claims of B against C, which were previously secured in part by attachment of C's personal property, on which D and E, other creditors of C, had also liens by subsequent attachments, the residue of such equity of redemption to be applied in payment of a debt due from C to his daughter, and the balance, if any, to be paid to J, another creditor of C; on the claim of D and E that B should be compelled, for their benefit, to resort, for the satisfaction of his claims, to such equity of redemption, before he proceeded against the property attached; it was held, that such claim of D and E was inadmissible, as the property constituting the two funds did not wholly belong to C, but the land belonged to his wife, and was conveyed only as collateral security, and specifically for the benefit of other creditors, whose equity was equal to that of D and C. See also Aguilar v. Aguilar, 5 Madd. 414; Stewart M. & D., § 460; Huntington v. Huntington, 2 White & T. Lead. Cas. 1010, 1015; Lancaster v. Evans, 10 Beav. 154, 266; Johns v. Reardon, 11 Med. 465, 468; Knight v. Whitehead, 26 Miss. 245, 246; Fitch v. Cotheal, 2 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 29, 30; Miner v. Graham, 24 Pa. St. 491, 495; Weeks v. Haas, 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 520, 523; 39 Am. Dec. 39; note 4, p. 587.

2. In Moffitt v. Roche, 77 Ind. 48, where a woman and her husband, to give "a secondary security" for the payment of notes of the partnership of which he was a member, already secured by a mortgage of partnership real estate, executed a mortgage on her separate real estate, they became sureties for the firm, and she is entitled to have the property mortgaged by the firm exhausted before her real estate can be subjected to the payments of such firm debts. See also Sheidle v. Weishlee, 16 Pa. St. 134, 137; Wilcox v. Todd, 64 Mo. 388.

3. In Purvis v. Carstaphan, 73 N. Car. 575, 592, where a wife joins her husband in a conveyance of her separate property to secure a debt of the husband, the relation which she sustains to the transaction is that of surety. And a surety is entitled to the benefit of all the securities which the creditor acquires from the principal debtor, and if the creditor perverts or misapplies such securities to the prejudice of the surety, he thereby discharges the surety pro tanto. Therefore where a feme covert joined her husband in a conveyance of her separate estate to secure the payment of advances which the defendant, a merchant, had agreed to make, to enable the husband to carry on a farm, and the mortgage also conveyed the crops to be made, and all the stock, tools, etc., to secure the sum of $1,500, and the husband received the $1,500, and the additional sum of $1,110, and the crops were delivered to the defendant, who sold them, and by the direction of the husband, without the knowledge of the wife, applied the proceeds of the crop to the payment of the additional sum of $1,100; it was held, that as against the husband the application was valid, but as against the wife, as surety, it was a perversion of the security, and operated as a discharge of the liability of the land.

4. In Ward v. Spear, 20 Cal. 660, W executed a bond to S, conditional for the payment by him of six thousand dollars in one year with interest, and at the same time, as security for its payment, W and wife executed a mortgage upon the separate property of the wife, wherein was recited as the consideration of its execution the receipt of six thousand dollars by the mortgagors, "and each of them." In an action by S to foreclose the mortgage, the wife defended or if he buys the debt,¹ she is discharged. If her mortgaged estate is sold for her husband's debt under decree, she may have a decree over against him.²

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS—MARRIED WOMEN.

MARRIED WOMEN—(See also ADULTERY; ALIMONY; COMMUNITY PROPERTY; CRIMINAL LAW; DIVORCE; DOMICIL; DOWER; HOMESTEAD; HUSBAND AND WIFE; MARRIAGE; MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS; WILLS).

- I. Status, Generally, 591.
 1. No Legal Existence at Common Law, 591.
 2. Exceptions at Common Law, 591.
 3. Legal Existence in Equity, 592.
 4. Effect of Modern Statutes, 592.
 5. Coverture Combined with Other Disabilities, 593.
- II. Wills of Married Women, 594.
 1. No Capacity at Common Law, 594.
 2. Exceptions at Common Law, 595.
 3. Capacity in Equity, 596.
 4. Capacity Under Statutes, 597.
 5. Validity and Operation of Married Women's Wills Distinguished, 598. [599.
 6. Effect of Husband's Consent,
 7. Gifts Causa Mortis of Married Women, 600.
 8. Revocation of Will by Married Women, 601.
 9. Wills of Married Women Made Before Marriage, 602.
 10. Republication of Wills After Dissolution of Marriage, 603.
 11. Conflict of Law as to Married Women's Wills, 603.

upon the ground that she was a mere surety for her husband, and that the liability of her property had been discharged by an extension of the time of payment given by S to her husband. By the pleadings, the extension of time was admitted, and the question of suretyship put in issue, and the cause was submitted without the introduction of other proof than the bond and mortgage. Held, that the property of the wife was bound by the mortgage; that she was not a surety for her husband, the recital as to the consideration meeting and counteracting the effect which would otherwise have arisen from the form of the transaction. See also Fiscel v. Dorner, 35 Mich. 151; Smith v. Townsend, 25 N. Y. 479, 483; Bank of Albion v. Burns, 46 N. Y. 170, 175; but see Lytle's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 131, 133.

1. In Fitch v. Cotheal, 2 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 29, 30, the wife of J. W., being seised of lands, joined him in executing three several mortgages to secure his lands for money lent. Before his death, his attorney, with means furnished by him, paid the mortgages, and took an assignment of the lands and mortgages to S, who soon after gave J. W. a certificate that he held them in trust for J. W. and subjected to his order and control. Held, that J. W. was the principal debtor, and his wife's lands stood in the relation of a surety for his debt, and that after the assignment and certificate, the securities belonged to him in equity, and the lands were thereby discharged from the lien of the mortgages.

2. In Neimceinez v. Gahn, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 614, where a wife unites with her husband in a mortgage of her real estate merely as a security for the payment of his debt, she is entitled to have his interest in the estate, as tenant by the curtesy, first sold and applied to the payment of the debt, in exoneration of her estate or interest in the mortgaged premises. This equity is paramount to the claim of a judgment creditor, who has only a general lien upon the husband's interest in the premises subsequent to the mortgage. Where a wife becomes a surety for her husband by the execution of a valid lien upon her own property or estate, she is entitled to the same equitable rights as other sureties. Where a surety is compelled to pay the debt of his principal, in order to save his property or to discharge his personal liability, he has an equitable right to be substituted in the place of the creditor as to all his remedies against the principal debtor and his estate.

III. Contracts of Married Women, 604.

1. Law of Married Women as Affecting the Law of Contracts, 604.
2. Capacity at Common Law, 604. [605.]
3. Exceptions at Common Law, 604.
4. Capacity in Equity, 606.
5. Capacity Under Statutes, Generally, 609.
6. Rules as to Construction of Statute, 614.
7. Antenuptial Contracts, 618.
8. Confirmation of Invalid Contracts, 619.
9. Contracts Through Agents, 620.
10. Distinction Between Personal Contracts and Those Binding Her Property, 620.
11. Implied Contracts, 621.
12. Effect of Husband's Joining, 621.
13. Purchases and Sales, 621.
14. Covenants and Bonds, 622.
15. Promissory Notes, 623.
16. Releases and Receipts, 624.
17. Rents, Repairs, Family Expenses, 625.
18. Endorsements, Suretyships, 626.

IV. Deeds of Married Women, 626.

1. At Common Law, 626.
2. Under Statutes, 627.
3. Of Equitable Separate Property, 628.
4. Of Statutory Separate Property, 628.
5. Joinder of Husband in, 629.
6. Execution, Acknowledgment and Recording of, 629.
7. Confirmation of, 631.
8. Avoidance of, 633.
9. Power of Attorney, 634.
10. Agreements to, 635.

V. Estoppel Against Married Women, 637.

1. General Rules, 637.
2. Estoppels of Record, 638.
3. Estoppels by Deed, 639.
4. Estoppels in Pais—In General, 640.
5. Estoppel in Pais—Contracts, 640.
6. Estoppels in Pais—False Representations, 641.
7. Estoppels in Pais—Silence, Acquiescence, 643.
8. Estoppels in Pais—Pure Torts, 644.
9. Estoppels in Pais—Acts of Husband, 644.

10. Estoppels in Pais—Acts While Sole, 646.

VI. Torts of Married Women, 647.

1. Antenuptial Torts, 647.
2. Postnuptial Torts, 647.
3. Torts Connected with Contracts, 649.

VII. Crimes of Married Women, 649.

1. Married Women's Liability, 649.
2. Proof and Presumption of Guilt, 649.

VIII. Suits of Married Women, 650.

1. Rights and Remedies Distinguished, 650.
2. Effect of Marriage on Pending Suits, 650.
3. Suits at Common Law, 650.
4. Suits in Equity, 651.
5. Suits Under Statutes, 651.
6. Effect of Dissolution of Marriage on Pending Suits, 651.
7. Costs, 652.
8. Modes in Which Married Women May Sue, 652.
9. Actions and Defences, 655.
10. Plea of Coverture Against Married Women, 655.
11. Plea of Limitations Against Married Women, 656.
12. Modes in Which Married Women May be Sued, 657.
13. Married Women; How Summoned, 658.
14. Actions and Defences, 659.
15. Plea of Coverture by Married Women, 660.
16. Plea of Limitations by Married Women, 661.
17. Effect of Judgments Against Married Women, 661.
18. Powers of Husband Over Wife's Suit, 662.
19. Married Women's Attorneys—Employment, 664.
20. Married Women's Attorneys—Compensation, 665.

IX. Married Women Traders, 667.

1. Sources of Capacity to Trade, Generally, 667.
2. Definitions—Trade, Business, etc. etc., 668.
3. Capacity at Common Law, 670.
4. Capacity in Equity, 671.
5. Capacity Under Statutes, 672.
6. Incidents of Capacity, 674.
7. Express and Implied Powers, 675.
8. Rights of Creditors, 676.
9. Rights and Liabilities of Husband, 678.

10. Married Women as Partners, 678.

11. Married Women as Incorporators, Stockholders, etc., 680.

X. Married Women in Representative Capacities, 680.

1. The Questions Involved, 680.

2. General Rules, 683.

I. STATUS OF MARRIED WOMEN, GENERALLY—1. No Legal Existence at Common Law.—At common law a wife was under the power and authority of her husband; her legal identity was merged in his; and she had of herself no separate legal existence in the eye of the law.¹ Therefore, all her contracts were absolutely void;² her torts³ and crimes⁴ committed in her husband's presence were his rather than hers, and she could neither sue nor be sued alone.⁵ But the inconvenience of the strict application of this fiction gave rise to exceptions.

2. Exceptions at Common Law—1. Wife Abandoned.—When a husband has abjured the realm under the old common law, or has permanently abandoned his wife and the State by the present law, she has most of the capacities of a feme sole.⁶ Thus, she may contract,⁷ will,⁸ sue,⁹ and be sued¹⁰ as such.

2. Wife Divorced a Mensa et Thoro.—After a divorce a mensa et thoro the woman has still a husband, and is not, therefore, a feme sole;¹¹ and so in England she is held to remain under all the disabilities of coverture,¹² but in the United States a different rule has been adopted and she may generally contract, sue, be sued, etc., as if unmarried.¹³

3. Husband Civilly Dead.—When one is outlawed, banished, imprisoned for life, etc., he is civilly dead, and his wife has the

1. 1 Blackst. Com. 442; 2 Kent Com. 129; Litt., § 168; Coke Litt. 112 b; Story Eq., § 1367; 1 Bishop M. W., § 35; Wells v. Caywood, 3 Colo. 487, 491; Hoker v. Boggs, 63 Ill. 160; Long v. Kinney, 49 Ind. 235; O'Ferrall v. Simplot, 4 Iowa 381; Trader v. Love, 45 Md. 1, 14; Burdens v. Amperse, 14 Mich. 91; Frissell v. Rozier, 19 Mo. 448; Aultman v. Obermeyer, 6 Neb. 260; Patterson v. Patterson, 45 N. H. 164; White v. Wager, 25 N. Y. 328; Barron v. Barron, 24 Vt. 375, 398; Willock v. Noble, Law R., 7 H. L. 580, 589. See article on HUSBAND & WIFE, vol. 9.

2. White v. Wager, 25 N. Y. 325; Norris v. Lantz, 18 Md. 260; Martin v. Duelly, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 9, 12; Patterson v. Lawrence, 90 Ill. 174; Waul v. Kirkman, 25 Miss. 609; Shroyer v. Nickell, 55 Mo. 264; Farrar v. Bessey, 24 Vt. 89.

3. See Baker v. Young, 44 Ill. 42, and other cases cited, vol. 9, note 8, p. 823 of this work.

4. See vol. 9, page 826, of this work.

5. Tucker v. Scott, 3 N. J. L. 955; Hawes Parties, §§ 63, 70.

6. Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 105, 107; High v. Worley, 33 Ala. 196; Way v. Peck, 47 Conn. 23; Gallagher v. Delargy, 57 Mo. 29; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199; Mason v. Jordan, 13 R. I. 193.

7. Bean v. Morgan, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 148. See III, below.

8. Countess v. Prodgers, 2 Vern. 104, 105. See II of this article.

9. Love v. Moynahan, 16 Ill. 277, 282. See VIII of this article.

10. Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. 31, 34. See VIII hereof.

11. Stewart M. & D., § 449. See DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 840, 841.

12. See notes 8, 9 and 10, vol. 5, p. 840.

13. Barber v. Barber, 21 How. (U. S.) 582, 598; Dean v. Richmond, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 461; Pierce v. Burnham, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 303.

capacities of a feme sole.¹ Thus, she may contract, will, sue, and be sued, as if unmarried.²

4. Husband Not Sui Juris.—As a general rule, the insanity, infancy, or other incapacity of a husband does not affect the personal status of his wife.³ A deed by an infant husband and his wife of her property is voidable by him, and if avoided by him, void as to her also.⁴ A husband's mere sickness or inability does not give his wife the power to act for him, except so far as this is necessary for the support of his family or the preservation of his property; and there can be no implication of her agency in fact if he is insane.⁵ But if he is insane and confined in an asylum out of the State, she has the capacities of a feme sole, just as if he were civilly dead.⁶ A statute which provides that when from drunkenness, profligacy, or other cause, a husband fails to provide for his wife, she may act as if sole, does not under "other cause" include insanity, but only some cause within the husband's control.⁷

5. Wife in Representative Position.—So, as will hereinafter be shown, a wife could act fully as agent, executrix, trustee, etc.

3. Legal Existence in Equity.—Great inconvenience was found to result from the fiction of the nonexistence, in the eye of the law, of wives; and courts of equity, from the earliest times, recognized their legal existence with respect to property settled on them to their sole and separate use;⁸ so that with respect to such property married women have always had many of the capacities of unmarried women.⁹ But these capacities were limited to the aforesaid property: a wife has no greater personal capacity in equity than at law.¹⁰

4. Effect of Modern Statutes.—It is to statutes today that we must look, for the most part, in order to determine the status of married women. For in all the States the common law system of coverture has been more or less destroyed by legislation. The main difficulty lies in determining how far a particular statute has modified the pre-existing law.

1. Worthington v. Cooke, 52 Md. 297 at 307. "As a general principle it is incontrovertibly true that at common law a married woman cannot contract so as to make herself liable . . . certain exceptions . . . as, for instance, if the husband was banished or had abjured the realm (Co. Litt. 133 a), or if the husband be an alien residing abroad, in such cases the wife would not only have the capacity to contract, but she would be capable of suing and of being sued alone."

2. See III, II and VIII of this article and last note above.

3. There seem to be no cases just on this point, but the proposition is an easy inference from the well known principles on this subject.

4. Barber v. Wilson, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 268.

5. Alexander v. Miller, 16 Pa. St. 215, 220.

6. Gustin v. Carpenter, 51 Vt. 585.

7. Edson v. Hayden, 20 Wis. 682.

8. Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 Ohio St. 155, 165. See generally EQUITY, HUSBAND AND WIFE, MARRIAGE, MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS, in this work.

9. See Stewart on H. & W., §§ 197 to 216.

10. Johnson v. Cummins, 16 N. J. Eq. 97, 106; Butler v. Buckingham, 5 Day

5. Coverture Combined with Other Disabilities—Coverture and Infancy, etc.—When a party labors under several disabilities, each must be considered by itself, and must be given as great effect as if it existed by itself. In the absence of express legislation, neither a man nor a woman attains full age by marriage.¹ A statute which enables a married woman to make certain contracts if of "full age," means full age generally, not full age for marrying.² The husband of an infant has the same marital right and liabilities as the husband of an adult.³ Infancy and coverture are separate and distinct disabilities, and each must be considered by itself.⁴ They may exist separately, or they may coexist. When they coexist, the removal of one in no way is a removal of the other.⁵ And the same applies to insanity and coverture, etc.⁶ The deed of an infant married woman being voidable for infancy, the question arises whether it can be avoided or confirmed while the disability of coverture continues.⁷ The general rule at common law, and even under modern acts (since the coercion of the husband over the wife is not destroyed⁸) is that the wife cannot confirm the deed, except by a new deed executed in accordance with the married women's acts after attaining full age,⁹ until both of her disabilities have been removed;¹⁰ that is to say, until she has attained full age and coverture has been terminated by death¹¹ or divorce.¹² A statute which enables a woman

(Conn.) 492, 501; 5 Am. Dec. 174. See the various heads referred to in note 8, p. 592

1. McMorris v. Webb, 17 S. Car. 558, 562; 43 Am. Rep. 629; 2 Bish. M. W., § 513. A marriage, however, with the parents' consent, emancipates an infant. Bucksport v. Rockland, 56 Me. 22; Taunton v. Plymouth, 15 Mass. 203; Burr v. Wilson, 18 Tex. 367.

2. McMorris v. Webb, 17 S. Car. 558; 43 Am. Rep. 629.

3. Nicholson v. Wilborn, 13 Ga. 467. "Upon the marriage of an adult with a ward under age, the rights and powers of the guardian cease, both as respects her person and her estate, and the husband acquires the same rights and incurs the same obligations which he acquires and incurs in case his wife is of age." But see GUARDIAN AND WARD, vol. 9 hereof, at page 95.

4. Sims v. Bardoner, 86 Ind. 87, 97; Adams v. Palmer, 51 Me. 480, 488; Bool v. Mix, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 119, 129; 31 Am. Dec. 285.

5. Watson v. Billings, 38 Ark. 278; 42 Am. Rep. 1; Adams v. Palmer, 51 Me. 480, 488.

6. Webb v. Hall, 35 Me. 336 and last two notes.

7. Hughes v. Watson, 10 Ohio 127, 311.

14 C. of L.—38

133. "The deed was executed by complainant when she had no capacity to do it. She had no capacity because she was a feme covert. . . . As to her, then, the deed is void, or at least voidable, and cannot operate to bar her right of dower. This opinion is sustained by the case of Bool v. Mix, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 119, in which it was held by the supreme court of New York that where a party is an infant as well as feme covert, the disability arising from infancy remains, although she execute and acknowledge a deed in the form prescribed by the statute."

8. Miles v. Lingeran, 24 Ind. 385; Dodd v. Benthall, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 601, 607.

9. Williams v. Baker, 71 Pa. St. 476; Miles v. Lingeran, 24 Ind. 385.

10. Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 309; Magee v. Welsh, 18 Cal. 155; Sims v. Bardoner, 86 Ind. 87; Youse v. Norcoms, 12 Mo. 549; 51 Am. Dec. 175; Dodd v. Benthall, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 601; Matherson v. Davis, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 443.

11. Hartman v. Kendall, 4 Ind. 403, 404.

12. Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, to confirm her deeds during coverture does not compel her so to do.¹ But as to statutory separate property, a married woman may be estopped;² and it seems that by her conduct during coverture, after attaining full age, she may estop herself from avoiding her deed after the determination of coverture.³ Neither can she, it is said, during coverture, disaffirm her deed by any act in pais;⁴ but a husband can disaffirm a deed of his wife's in which he as infant joined.⁵ Still, by making another conveyance during coverture,⁶ or by bringing suit for the land,⁷ she may disaffirm her deed; and under modern statutes it is said she may disaffirm her deeds generally during coverture.⁸ She need not restore the consideration;⁹ but she must not delay her avoidance beyond a reasonable time after the cessation of coverture.¹⁰ A statute validating deeds of infant married women is not retrospective in its operation.¹¹

II. WILLS OF MARRIED WOMEN—1. No Capacity at Common Law.—At common law the will of a married woman was, generally, a mere nullity, because by marriage her legal existence was merged into that of her husband;¹² she had no separate disposing power; she was not sui juris; she was not a free agent, but was under the power and control of her husband,¹³ her incapacity depended also on the fact that she had nothing to dispose of, it is said.¹⁴ The disability of coverture in respect to wills differs materially from that of infancy, idiocy, or lunacy,¹⁴ and though it be removed, any

1. Miles v. Lingerman, 24 Ind. 385, 388.

2. Discussed fully in part V of this article.

3. Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300, 307; Stringer v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 82 Ind. 100, 108, and see part V of this article.

4. Dodd v. Benthall, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 601, 607. See McIlvaine v. Kadel, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 193, 195.

5. Barker v. Wilson, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 268, 269, 271.

6. Youse v. Norcombs, 12 Mo. 549, 564; 51 Am. Dec. 175; Ross v. Adams, 28 N. J. L. 160, 163; contra, Law v. Long, 41 Ind. 586, 597.

7. Webb v. Hall, 35 Me. 336.

8. Buchanan v. Hubbard, 96 Ind. 1. "A married woman may, at any time during coverture, disaffirm a deed made by her while an infant, and she is not estopped by the facts that when the deed was executed she appeared and was believed by the grantee to be an adult; that the grantee, with her knowledge, after reaching majority, improved the land, and that he had conveyed to an innocent purchaser, and that after majority she, with her husband, enjoyed and exercised dominion over the consideration received."

9. Markham v. Merritt, 8 Miss. 437, 444; Law v. Long, 41 Ind. 586, 600; Miles v. Lingerman, 24 Ind. 385, and last note.

10. Sims v. Bardoner, 86 Ind. 87, 93.

11. Adams v. Palmer, 51 Me. 480, 489.

12. See §§ 1 and 5, part I, of article on HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 789; Hood v. Archer, 1 McCord (S. Car.) L. 225.

13. Adams v. Kellogg, Kirby (Conn.) 195; 1 Am. Dec. 18; Burton v. Holly, 18 Ala. 408, 411; Marston v. Norton, 5 N. H. 205.

14. Bishop v. Blair, 36 Ala. 80.

"The husband acquires by the marriage the right to use and occupy, during coverture, lands belonging to the wife, whether her title be governed by the 'woman's law' or not." Allen v. Hooper, 50 Me. 371. "The personal property of the wife, in her possession at the time of the marriage, vests absolutely and immediately in the husband, who could dispose of them as he pleases, and on his death they go to his representatives."

From this condition of the law the other disability will remain.¹

2. Exceptions at Common Law.—At common law a married woman who, owing to peculiar circumstances, had the capacities of a feme sole, could make a will,² as where her husband was civilly dead, being, for example, banished for life,³ but the adultery and desertion of her husband did not enable her to make a will.⁴ So when she was acting in a representative capacity, for example, as executrix, she could make a will,⁵ or where she was acting for and in the place of another, as where she made a will of personalty with her husband's consent,⁶ or under a power.⁷ For there is no question of the right of a married woman to execute a power of any kind;⁸ she may will realty even, under a power given by a mere agreement between her and her husband before marriage,⁹ and when she acts under a power the whole doctrine of disability by coverture is eliminated.¹⁰ In executing a power she need not statement in the text is a direct inference and is so stated in the case of Willock v. Noble, Law R., 7 H. L. 580, 603. See Jarman on Wills 38, for proposition that disability from coverture differs from other disabilities.

1. Zimmerman v. Schoenfeldt, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 692, 698.

2. Cutter v. Butler, 25 N. H. 343, at 352: "The following cases are recognized in the books which have come under our observation, in which at common law a married woman may make a will: (1) A married woman, executrix, might make a valid will of the personal property held by her in autre droit as such executrix. . . . (2) A woman whose husband had been banished for life by an act of parliament may make a will. . . . (3) Personal property may be holden in trust subject to the disposal of a married woman by her will. . . . (4) The husband may agree with the wife or with one of her friends as trustee for her, either before the marriage or after the marriage, upon a sufficient consideration to allow her to dispose of certain property or of a certain amount of personal property, by will. . . . (5) By the assent of the husband the wife may devise her chattels real. . . . She may dispose by her will of her choses in action, including debts and contracts due to her, and her right of action for goods carried away (bien asports) before the marriage by a like assent on the part of the husband. . . . (7) She may by her husband's assent bequeath by will the personal chattels in possession, which belonged to her at her marriage, or which have fallen to her afterwards."

3. Countess v. Proddgers, 2 Vern. 104, and last note.

4. Freeland v. Ryno, 26 N. J. Eq. 160, 163.

5. See note 5 above, and Hudson v. Lloyd, 2 Bro. C. C. 534, 543; Scammell v. Wilkinson, 2 East 556; Lee v. Bennett, 31 Miss. 119; 57 Am. Dec. 330; West v. West, 3 Rand. (Va.) 373, 375.

6. See note 5, above, and Marston v. Norton, 5 N. H. 205, 210.

7. Noble v. Willock, L. R., 8 Ch. 778, 787; Ross v. Ewer, 3 Atk. 156, 160; Osgood v. Breed, 12 Mass. 525, 532; Bradish v. Gibbs, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 523, 540; Jones v. Shields, 14 Ohio 359; Thorndike v. Reynolds, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 21.

8. Schley v. McCeney, 36 Md. 266, 273. "There can be no question made of the right of a feme covert to execute a power, whether collateral, appendant or in gross, and in no case is the concurrence of the husband necessary, unless made so by the power itself. The law prescribes no particular ceremonies to be observed in the execution of a power; but the terms of the power may direct it to be executed by a note in writing, or by will or deed, or may prescribe any ceremonies which the will or caprice of the party creating it may think proper, all of which must be complied with, however unessential or unimportant they may appear to be in themselves. 2 Wash. Real Prop. 317; 1 Sugden on Powers 211; Hawkins v. Kemp, 3 East 410, 430."

9. See note 5 above, and Bradish v. Gibbs, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 523, 540; Barnes v. Irwin, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 199, 203.

10. Noble v. Willock, L. R., 8 Ch. 778, conform to the requirements of married women's statutes,¹ nor have the consent or joinder of her husband;² she may execute it in favor of her husband;³ her mode of executing it and her right to do so are unaffected by married women's enabling acts.⁴ But she must refer to the power, unless the will would be of no effect otherwise;⁵ and a power to sell, use or exchange is not a power to will.⁶ She may revoke a will made under a power by another subsequent will.⁷ But any paper which is to take effect as a will must be probated.⁸

3. Capacity in Equity.—Since courts of equity have long recognized the separate existence and separate property of married women, the reasons for the incapacity to will under the common law do not exist in equity, and married women's wills of equitable and separate estate are very common.⁹ So wills which are valid only through the consent of the husband are sustained only in equity.¹⁰

Wills of Equitable Separate Estate.—As to a married woman's wills of her equitable separate estate there are three views, corresponding to the three views of her power over such estate generally: (1) That she stands towards this estate precisely as a feme sole, and can will it, be it real or personal; this is the English and the common view.¹¹ That she has over this estate only the power given by the instrument creating it, and can will it only under a power.¹² (3) That she has the powers of a feme sole over the personalty and the profits of the realty;¹³ but none over the realty itself, except such as are given by the instrument creating the estate.¹⁴ Her right to will, when it exists, includes the right to destroy the husband's curtesy,¹⁵ to will to the husband him-787, and the chief question becomes whether or not the power has been strictly obeyed.

1. Schley v. McCeney, 36 Md. 267, 274.

2. See Stewart on H. & W., § 208, and case cited in last note.

3. Bradish v. Gibbs, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 523, 540.

4. George v. Bussing, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 558.

5. Mory v. Michael, 18 Md. 227, 241.

6. Harris v. Harbeson, 9 Bush (Ky.) 397, 402.

7. Hawksley v. Barrow, L. R., 1 Pro. & D. 147, 152.

8. Stone v. Forsyth, 2 Doug. 707; Ross v. Ewer, 3 Atk. 156; Picquet v. Swan, 4 Mason (U. S.) 443, 461; Cutter v. Butler, 25 N. H. 343, 359; 57 Am. Dec. 330; Newlin v. Freeman, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 514, 520.

9. Stewart on H. & W., § 208, see note 6 below.

10. Bradish v. Gibbs, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 523, 540.

11. Willcock v. Noble, L. R., 7 H. of

L. 580, at 596. "A married woman, however, is capable of making a will with respect to personal property settled to her separate use, or over which she has a power of appointment, or when the will is made with the assent of her husband. In these cases when the married woman has a disposing power notwithstanding her coverture, there is no difference in the operation of her will from that of an unmarried woman." See also Cutter v. Butler, 25 N. H. 343, 351; 57 Am. Dec. 330; Bradish v. Gibbs, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 523, 540; Barnes v. Irwin, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 199, 203; 1 Am. Dec. 278.

12. Wagner v. Wagner, Ashm. (Pa.) 448, 451.

13. West v. West, 3 Rand. (Va.) 373, 375.

14. See same case.

15. Cooper v. McDonald, 7 Ch. D. 288, 296; Poole v. Blakie, 35 Ill. 495, 502. And in this way it may be said that a married woman has greater power of testamentary disposition than a man, for a widow, notwithstanding the proviself,¹ and to appoint an executor.²

4. Capacity Under Statutes.—General statutes as to wills do not affect the capacity of married women.³ A statute authorizing a wife to will generally has been held not to authorize a will to her husband;⁴ but the soundness of this rule is questionable.⁵ A statute authorizing her to will her "separate property" includes whatever property the legislature may afterwards declare separate.⁶ A separate property act, which says nothing as to wills, does not authorize wills,⁷ though a contrary view is sometimes taken.⁸ A statute which authorizes conveyances by implication excludes wills.⁹ An enabling act does not take away the power to execute a will in accordance with the common law rules.¹⁰ A statute which is declaratory of the common law is construed in accordance therewith, so that when the husband's consent is required, a particular consent is meant.¹¹ A statute prohibiting a husband from witnessing his wife's will does not render it unlawful for him to be present when she executes her will.¹² These sions of a will, is always entitled to her thirds.

1. Burton v. Holly, 18 Ala. 408, 411, 412.

2. Churchill v. Dibben, 9 Sim. 447, 452.

3. Baker v. Chastang, 18 Ala. 417 at 423. "The construction which was placed by the English courts upon the first statute of wills seems generally to have been followed by the American courts in the several states whose statutes are similarly worded, and the better opinion seems to be that a married woman cannot make a valid will of lands, even with the consent of her husband, and without any statute prohibition to that effect." Adams v. Kellogg, Kirby (Conn.) 195; Reese v. Cochran, 10 Ind. 195; Osgood v. Breed, 12 Mass. 525, 530; Marston v. Norton, 5 N. H. 205. But see Noble v. Enos, 19 Ind. 72; Bennett v. Hutchinson, 11 Kan. 398, 410; Allen v. Little, 5 Ohio 65.

4. Fitch v. Brainard, 2 Day (Conn.) 163, 189; Wakefield v. Phelps, 37 N. H. 295, 305.

5. Wakefield v. Phelps, 37 N. H. 295, 302.

6. Emmert v. Hays, 89 Ill. 1. "Since the passage of the Married Woman's act of 1861, a married woman, married before that act took effect, may devise, by will, real estate which she owned at the time of her marriage. Under the Rev. Stat. of 1845 she could devise her separate property, and the act of 1861 enlarged the meaning of the term 'separate property,' and made it embrace such property as a married woman owned at the time of her marriage, or such as she should acquire during coverture, in good faith, from any person other than her husband, and made the same subject to devise by her."

7. Cain v. Bunkley, 35 Miss. 119, 145; Compton v. Pierson, 28 N. J. Eq. 229, 231; Naylor v. Field, 25 N. J. L. 287, 288.

8. Mosser v. Mosser, 32 Ala. 551, 555.

9. Harker v. Harker, 3 Harr. (Del.) 51, 59.

10. Buchanan v. Hubbard, 26 Md. 1, at 7. "The power of the testatrix to dispose of her property by such an instrument as the will before us was not derived alone from any provision of the code; under the decisions of this court before cited it would have been a good will to pass the property in question if executed by a married woman before the code was adopted, and notwithstanding the provisions of the sixth section of the act of 1842. The property being held by her to her sole and separate use, that act did not apply to it, and when re-enacted in the code it must have the same operation and effect, and cannot be construed as abridging or taking away the power of the testatrix to dispose of her property by will executed as if she were a feme sole."

11. Kurtz v. Saylor, 20 Pa. St. 205, 209.

12. Dickinson v. Dickinson, 61 Pa. St. 401, 406.

statutes are said to be strictly construed, but this rule must be taken with qualifications.¹

Wills of Statutory Separate Property.—In most of the States the separate property acts provide for the willing of separate property.² Whether a statute which says nothing of disposition by will, but secures her property to her as a feme sole, enables her to will it, is doubtful, the decisions not being directly in point, as those relating to equitable property are. But few cases seem to have arisen, and some of them are cited hereunder.³

5. Validity and Operation of such Married Women's Wills Distinguished.—A distinction must be made between the validity and the operation of a married woman's will. At common law she could not will; first, because she had no legal capacity, and second because during her husband's life she had no property for a will to act upon;⁴ and on the one hand we find her wills sustained when she has no capacity, as where she disposes of her husband's property, whether held in her right, or in his own, with his consent,⁵ while on the other we find a perfectly valid will inoperative as to certain property, for example, to property which passes to her husband by survivorship.⁶ It would seem that when her power to will is given by the instrument or statute which secures the property to her separate use, she can will the whole of the same and defeat the marital rights of her husband;⁷ but that when her incapacity to will is removed by statute generally, her will operates only so far as it does not conflict with the marital rights of her husband.⁸ In probating a married woman's will, its opera-

1. Compton v. Pierson, 28 N. J. Eq. 229, 231.

2. Wills of Statutory Separate Property.—In 3 Jarm. on Wills, p. 752, are collected the statutes of a great many States on this subject; specific mention is made of married women in most of them.

3. Mosser v. Mosser, 32 Ala. 551, 555; Harker v. Elliott, 3 Harr. (Del.) 51, 59; Urquhart v. Oliver, 56 Ga. 344, 347; Emmert v. Hays, 89 Ill. 1, 13; Noble v. Enos, 19 Ind. 72; Bennett v. Hutchinson, 11 Kan. 397, 408; Schull v. Murray, 32 Md. 9, 16; Burroughs v. Nutting, 105 Mass. 228; Stewart v. Ross, 50 Miss. 776; Wakefield v. Phelps, 37 N. H. 295; Compton v. Pierson, 28 N. J. Eq. 229, 231; Huston v. Cone, 24 Ohio St. 11, 20; Clarke's Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 376; Stroud v. Connelly, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 217, 220; Warner v. Warner, 37 Vt. 356, 368.

4. Validity and Operation of Such Wills Distinguished.—Willcock v. Noble, L. R., 7 H. L. 580, 603.

5. See § 6, below, and Lee v. Bennett, 31 Miss. 119, 126.

6. Stroud v. Connelly, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 217, 221. Compare Alsop v. McArthur, 76 Ill. 20, 25.

7. Pool v. Blakie, 53 Ill. 495. "A husband cannot be tenant by the curtesy of real estate conveyed to the wife for her sole and separate use, and with power of disposal, and who has disposed of it by will duly executed and attested." Cooper v. McDonald, 7 Ch. Div. 288, 296.

8. Clark's Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 376, 377. "A husband is entitled to his curtesy in the real estate of inheritance of his deceased wife, when he elects to take it against her last will. In considering the legislation upon the power of a married woman to devise her real estate, the fact must not be overlooked that his curtesy estate was one arising at common law in the life time of his wife, and becoming fixed in him at the instant of her death. It was, therefore, not a subject upon which her devise could operate. As soon as issue is born alive capable of inheriting, the husband becomes tenant by the curtesy initiate, and the estate vested by tion must be limited to the kinds of property which it is in her power to dispose of.¹

6. Effect of Husband's Consent.—A husband cannot by his consent give his wife any personal capacity to make a will,² for the status of married women depends on the law and not on contract;³ the most his consent can do is to enable her to dispose by will of property which belongs to him, either in his own right or in her right, as her husband,⁴ and it seems that this applies only to personal property.⁵ In fact when a wife makes a will which is valid by virtue of her husband's consent, she makes it simply as his agent;⁶ and she must be specially authorized to make the will in question,⁷ a general consent not being sufficient,⁸ and knowledge on the part of the husband of the contents of the will being necessary.⁹ The assent may be given during or after coverture,¹⁰ orally or in writing,¹¹ and may be proved directly or in-the birth cannot be determined either by the death or coming of age of the infant. 'After issue born,' says C. J. GIBSON, 'he has a freehold in his own right, for which he is separately bound to do homage to the lord, whose tenant he then becomes, and the wife cannot forfeit for treason.'

1. Willock v. Noble, L. R., 7 H. L. 580, 590, 597; Cutter v. Butler, 25 N. H. 343, 359; 57 Am. Dec. 330.

2. Lord St. John v. Lady St. John, 11 Ves. Jr. 525 at 532. "The contract of marriage cannot be affected by any contract between the parties. It is admitted everywhere that by the known law, founded upon policy, for the sake of keeping together individual families, constituting the great family of the public, there shall be no separation a mensa et thoro, except propter sævitiam aut adulterium." The principle in the note is the same as that in the text; that is, the parties cannot by agreement alter the law.

3. Lee v. Bennett, 31 Miss. 119, 126; Cutter v. Butler, 25 N. H. 343, 356; 57 Am. Dec. 330; Van Winkle v. Schoonmaker, 15 N. J. Eq. 384; Thorndike v. Reynolds, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 21, 29.

4. Osgood v. Breed, 12 Mass. 525, 532.

5. Baker v. Chastang, 18 Ala. 417. "The construction which was placed by the English courts upon the first statute of wills seems generally to have been followed by the American courts, in the several States whose statutes are similarly worded, and the better opinion seems to be that a married woman cannot make a valid will of lands, even with the consent of her husband, and without any statute prohibition to that effect." See also Adams v. Kellogg, Kirby, Conn. 195, 196; 1 Am. Dec. 18; Lee v. Bennett, 31 Miss. 119, 126; Sanborn v. Batchelder, 51 N. H. 426, 431; Newlin v. Freeman, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 514, 520. This follows from the fact that while at common law a will of personalty made by a married woman with her husband's consent, served to carry the property to the legatees, since a wife's personalty vests absolutely in her husband by marriage, and he may do with it as he pleases, yet as has been seen in the above extract, he has no such interest in her realty. A devise by a wife would therefore have no effect as against the heir, or even against the husband as to his life interest.

6. See note 5 to part II, § 2, above.

7. Cutter v. Butler, 25 N. H. 343, 357; 57 Am. Dec. 330.

8. Rex v. Betterworth, 2 Strange 891; Willock v. Noble, L. R., 7 H. L. 580, 597; George v. Bussing, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 558, 563; Jones v. Brown, 34 N. H. 439, 446; Kurtz v. Saylor, 20 Pa. St. 205, 209.

9. Willock v. Noble, L. R., 7 H. L., 580, 590. Unless the husband has knowledge there can of course be no consent.

10. Van Winkle v. Schoonmaker, 15 N. J. Eq. 384.

11. Reed v. Blaisdell, 16 N. H. 194. "If a husband, at sundry times before, and at the execution of, a testamentary paper by the wife disposing of a chose in action, verbally consent to such disposition, it is such consent as is required for the validity of such instrument as a will."

directly,¹ as, for example, by the fact that the will was in his hand-writing;² the usual and proper mode is by his assenting to the probate of the will.³ The assent is generally revocable by the husband, at pleasure, until probate;⁴ it is revoked by his death, and he must, therefore, survive her to render the will good.⁵ The will must be probated,⁶ and the husband should assent to the probate;⁷ if he does so, he cannot afterwards revoke his consent.⁸ It is said, even, that he cannot revoke any consent given after his wife's death.⁹ But he may render his assent irrevocable by a contract on valuable consideration,¹⁰ or under seal,¹¹ and he may by his conduct estop himself from denying his consent.¹² When the will is valid without the husband's consent, by assenting thereto he waives his rights inconsistent with the provisions of the will.¹³ Whether a statute which requires the husband's consent to his wife's will renders a will made without such consent invalid, or simply inoperative as to the husband's interest, must depend on the wording of the act itself.¹⁴ Generally, under the statutes, his assent is not necessary for any purpose.¹⁵

7. Gifts Causa Mortis of Married Women.—The principles appli-

1. Van Winkle v. Schoonmaker, 15 N. J. Eq. 384, 386; Cutter v. Butler, 25 N. H. 354, 357; 57 Am. Dec. 330.

2. Grimke v. Grimke, 1 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 366, 381.

3. West v. West, 3 Rand. (Va.) 373.

4. Van Winkle v. Schoonmaker, 15 N. J. Eq. 384, 387. "The consent is not obligatory, but is revocable at the pleasure of the husband at any time before probate is granted."

5. The wife is acting here as an agent, and as in all other cases of agency the death of the principal terminates the authority of the agent. See the cases of Noble v. Willock, L. R., 8 Ch. 778, 789, 790; Willock v. Noble, L. R., 7 H. L. 580, 591, 597; 1 Redf. Wills 25.

6. Schull v. Murray, 32 Md. 9, 10. "The will of a feme covert, professing to dispose of her property, must be admitted to probate in the same manner as that of any other person, capable in law of making a will."

7. George v. Bussing, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 558; Lee v. Bennett, 31 Miss. 119, 126; West v. West, 3 Rand. (Va.) 373.

8. Van Winkle v. Schoonmaker, 15 N. J. Eq. 384, 388. "It is reported to have been held by SIR H. JENNER FUST, in Maas v. Sheffield, that if after the death of the wife the husband does assent to a particular will, he is bound by that assent; and as a consequence of that decision, it is stated by elementary writers, that if, after the death of the wife, the husband acts upon the will, or or once agrees to it, he is not, it seems, at liberty to retract his assent and oppose the probate. 1 Williams on Exrs. 47, and note w.; 1 Bright 65, and note d."

9. Cutter v. Butler, 25 N. H. 343, 357, 358; 57 Am. Dec. 330.

10. Lloyd v. Hodsden, 2 Bro.C.C. 534, 543; Van Winkle v. Schoonmaker, 15 N. J. Eq. 384, 386.

11. Fisher v. Kimball, 17 Vt. 323, 328.

12. Van Winkle v. Schoonmaker, 15 N. J. Eq. 384, 388. "If for instance, the executor, in advance of the probate, with the assent of the husband, dispose of the property bequeathed to third persons, or if rights are otherwise acquired under the will, it may well be that the husband would not be permitted to retract his assent and oppose the probate."

13. McBride's Estate, 81 Pa. St. 303, 305. "The joinder of the husband in a will of lands executed by the wife in Pennsylvania, when her power of disposition is unqualified (act of 1848, § 8, Pamph. L. 537), can mean nothing else but that he consents and agrees to the disposition therein made, and if it is an immediate disposition, it must mean a release of his courtesy or it means nothing."

14. Schley v. McCeney, 36 Md. 267, 273, and Vreeland v. Ryno, 26 N. J. Eq. 160, 162.

15. Urquhart v. Oliver, 56 Ga. 344, 346.

cable to wills of married women seem generally applicable to their gifts causa mortis.¹ A wife may make a donatio mortis causa of her equitable separate estate,² or of any of her personalty with her husband's consent,³ and she may make such a gift to her husband himself.⁴ But she cannot, of course, give away what she has previously disposed of.⁵

8. Revocation of Wills by Married Women.—The same capacity is required to revoke a will as to execute it,⁶ and it is because a married woman cannot revoke a will at common law that marriage itself works a revocation.⁷ Any valid will made during coverture revokes all other wills, so far as they are inconsistent with it.⁸ If she may make a will, she may revoke one.⁹

9. Wills of Married Women Made Before Marriage.—A will made before marriage by a woman was at common law revoked by her marriage.¹⁰ This rule has been said to rest on the following grounds: (1) That as she could not make a will during coverture, her antenuptial will ceased on marriage to be ambulatory, which is contrary to the nature of wills;¹¹ (2) that by marriage her power to dispose of her property was taken away, and her husband's rights attached by operation of law;¹² (3) that marriage worked so great a change in her condition that the law would presume

1. Jones v. Brown, 34 N. H. 439, 446. "Now a married woman by her husband's assent, may bequeath by will personal property in possession which belonged to her at her marriage, or which has fallen to her afterwards. A general assent that the wife may make a will is hardly sufficient. There must ordinarily be evidence of an assent to the particular will which is made by the wife. The assent may be proved by circumstances as well as by direct proof. . . . If these principles are applicable, as we think they are, to the case of a donatio causa mortis, the husband in this case would be bound by the gift, by his wife, of the things which he saw divided."

2. Kilby v. Godwin, 2 Del. Ch. 61, 71.

3. Jones v. Brown, 34 N. H. 439, 446.

4. Caldwell v. Kenfrew, 33 Vt. 213, 219.

5. See Stewart on H. & W., § 350. This proposition is self evident.

6. Mosser v. Mosser, 32 Ala. 551, 556. See note 9, below.

7. Morton v. Onion, 45 Vt. 145, 153. "It is the opinion of the court that the rule that the marriage of a woman revoked a will made by her before marriage, rested for its reason on the fact that by virtue of the husband's marital rights, the woman becoming covert became thereby disabled to dispose of the property named in the will. The will ceased to be ambulatory. It is only in view of the supervening rights of the husband, accruing by the fact of marriage, as to her property, that the rule had any ground or reason."

8. Hawksley v. Barrow, L. R., 1 Pro. & D. 147, 152.

9. Mosser v. Mosser, 32 Ala. 551, 556. "The instrument of June, 1854, being a will, it results that it was revocable. The will of January 25th, 1855, if valid, expressly revoked the former one."

10. See note 4, above, and Forse v. Hembling, 4 Coke Rep. 60, 61; Douglas v. Cooper, 3 Mylne & K. 378, 481; Hodsdon v. Lloyd, 2 Bro. C. C. 540, 544; 2 Term 684; Cotter v. Laver, 2 P. Wms. 623, 624; Tuller v. Tuller, 79 Ill. 99, 101; Garrett v. Dabney, 27 Miss. 335, 342; Allen v. Fellows, N. H. (1884); Compton v. Pierson, 28 N. J. Eq. 229, 230; Brown v. Clark, 77 N. Y. 369; Loomis v. Loomis, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 257; Wood v. Bullock, 3 Hawks. (N. Car.) L. 298; Kurtz v. Saylor, 20 Pa. St. 205, 209; Davis's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 107. And see note 2, p. 603.

11. See note 3, above, and 3, below, and Tuller v. Tuller, 79 Ill. 99, 101, and article in this work on WILLS.

12. See note 6, and article on Hus-that she had not meant her will to operate in case of her marriage.¹ Whatever the grounds were, there was no question at common law but that her will was revoked; but whether modern statutes, securing to her separate property or authorizing her to dispose of her property by will, indirectly repeal this rule is disputed. On the one hand, it is said that by these statutes her will is no longer ambulatory, and her rights to her property are full, and that therefore the reasons for the rule at common law are gone and the rule must go also;² that marriage alone does not work a revocation, because it does not do so in the case of a man;³ and that a will is revoked only by marriage and birth of issue.⁴ On the other hand, it is said that it is perfectly consistent with the legislative intent in passing these statutes that antenuptial wills should be governed by the previous rule;⁵ and that the rule that a will is not revoked by marriage alone, but only by marriage and birth of issue, is not a reasonable one, and should not be applied to married women unless expressly adopted by statute.

BAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 789, especially pages 841 to 845.

1. Brown v. Clark, 77 N. Y. 369, 372. "We concur in the conclusion reached by the surrogate that the will was revoked by the subsequent marriage of the testatrix. It was the rule of the common law that the marriage of a woman operated as an absolute revocation of her prior will. Force and Hembly's Case, 4 Co. 61. The reason of the rule is stated by LORD CHANCELLOR THURLOW in Hodsden v. Lloyd, 2 Bro. Ch. 534. He says: 'It is contrary to the nature of the instrument, which must be ambulatory during the life of the testatrix; and as by the marriage she disables herself from making any other will, this instrument ceases to be of that sort, and must be void.' See also Swan v. Hammond (Mass.), 19 Cent. L. J. 431, and Tuller v. Tuller, 79 Ill. 99, 102.

2. Noyes v. Southworth, 55 Mich. 173, 174. "Laying aside such decisions as are made under statutes, the only foundation which has been suggested for holding a woman's marriage to operate as an implied revocation, is the common law rule to that effect which was based on the effect of marriage on a woman's property and testamentary capacity. . . . These were reasons enough to maintain the common law doctrine. Our constitution has done away with all the disabilities of coverture on this head, and expressly authorized every married woman to make wills of her estate as if she were sole. This leaves her case to be governed by the same rule which would apply to anyone else on change of condition. . . . But there is no sound reason that we can perceive why, in the absence of statute, implied revocations should be extended, or should be differently treated as between men and women, when the property rights of married women have ceased to be hampered by marriage."

3. Tuller v. Tuller, 79 Ill. 99, 103.

4. Tyler v. Tyler, 19 Ill. 151.

5. Swan v. Hammond, 138 Mass. 45, 46. "It is urged in argument, that, since the statutes allowing a married woman to make a will, with certain limitations as to the rights of the husband, were passed, the reason upon which the rule was founded, that the will of a feme sole is revoked by marriage, no longer exists, and that her will, like that of a man, should be held to be revoked, not by marriage alone, but by marriage and the birth of a child. This argument is not without force, but its force would be much greater if we could see any good reason why in the case of a man both marriage and the birth of a child should be held necessary for the revocation of his will. . . . But we are of opinion that the question now before us has been so far settled by statute as not to admit of change by construction. . . . has substantially the force of an express enactment of the rules of the common law, which we are not at liberty to change, even if the reason for the rule, in case of a woman, no longer exists. This was the view taken in Brown v. Clark, 77 N. Y. 369, upon a similar question, under a statute of New York."

ute.¹ In many States the rule that marriage alone revokes any will is adopted by statute, and where this rule was adopted by statute only as to married women, statutes afterwards passed increasing the powers and capacity of married women do not repeal it.² The rule at common law applied to cases where the wife survived her husband,³ but not to wills made under and by virtue of a power.⁴

10. Republication of Wills After Dissolution of Marriage.—A will made before marriage and revoked by marriage is not revived by the death of the husband, but must be republished.⁵ A valid will made during coverture remains valid, and does not have to be republished when the marriage is dissolved.⁶ And an invalid will made during coverture does not become valid when the husband dies; the widow's intention to adhere thereto will not suffice; nothing can give it efficacy save a republication.⁷ A republication means a re-execution, with all the formalities required by law.⁸ A codicil duly executed is a republication.⁹ The delivery by a widow of a will executed during coverture has been held to make a valid will.¹⁰ The death of the husband revokes a will made with his consent at common law.¹¹

11. Conflict of Law as to Married Women's Wills.—Wills of real estate are governed by the law of the State where the lands lie,¹² wills of personalty by the law of the testator's domicile.¹³ The validity and effect of the will of a married woman depends on the

1. See case quoted from in last note.

2. Brown v. Clark, 77 N. Y. 369, 373.

"But the courts cannot dispense with a statutory rule because it may appear that the policy upon which it was established has ceased. The married women acts confer testamentary capacity upon married women, but they do not undertake to interfere with or abrogate the statutes prescribing the effect of marriage as a revocation. It was quite consistent that the legislature should have intended to leave the statute of 1830 in force although the new statutes took away the reason upon which it was based."

3. Cotter v. Layer, 2 P. Wms. 623, 624; Garrett v. Dabney, 27 Miss. 335, 343.

4. Logan v. Bell, 1 Com. B. 873, 886; Noyes v. Southworth, 55 Mich. 133. Compare Hodsden v. Lloyd, 2 Bro. C. C. 540, 544.

5. Garrett v. Dabney, 27 Miss. 335. "Where a feme sole duly executes a will, which is valid at the time it bears date, but subsequently to the execution of the will she marries, held, that her subsequent marriage annuls the will, and leaves it no longer subject to the wife's control; nor is the will revived by the death of the husband, the wife surviving." See also Cotter v. Layer, 2 P. Wms. 623. Contra, Wood v. Bullock, 3 Hawks (N. Car.) 298, 300.

6. Thorndike v. Reynolds, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 21, 32.

7. Osgood v. Breed, 12 Mass. 525, 530.

8. Willock v. Noble, Law R., 7 H. of L. 580, 597. "But if the validity of the will depended upon her husband's assent, and, as already shown, his dying in her lifetime prevented that assent from having any efficiency. Mrs. Dawes could not have given new life to the will without a republication, and that could not be without an execution of it with all the formalities required by law."

9. Kurtz v. Saylor, 20 Pa. St. 205, 209.

10. Miller v. Brown, 2 Hagg. Ecc. 209.

11. See case quoted from in note 8 above.

12. 1 Jarman Wills, ch. 1, 4 Kent 513, 524. Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 483, 504.

13. See above note and Lawrence v. Kitteridge, 21 Conn. 577; Fellows v. Miner, 119 Mass. 541; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 43 N. Y. 424.

law which exists at the time of her death,¹ though its validity had been held to depend on the law existing at the time of its execution.²

III. CONTRACTS OF MARRIED WOMEN—1. Law of Contracts as Affected by Law of Married Women.—The law of contracts requires that there shall be two parties at least to every contract, and that the parties shall be capable of giving their consent. In the first of these rules, since at common law husband and wife are one person, lies the main reason for the invalidity of contracts between husband and wife;³ in the second, since a wife is said at common law to have no will of her own, but to be under the power and control of the husband, lies the reason for the invalidity of all contracts of married women.⁴ As the unity of husband and wife has been gradually encroached upon in equity and by statute, and as the disabilities of married women have been gradually directly and indirectly removed, the number of contracts which a married woman can make has been gradually growing. But so blind has been legislation, and so inconsistent have been decisions, that the present state of the law of contracts of married women is most confused. The word contracts used in this part of this article includes all transactions between consenting parties, although deeds are particularly discussed under the next part.

2. Capacity of Married Women at Common Law, Generally.—At common law, generally, all contracts, agreements, covenants, promises, and representations of married women were absolutely null and void,⁵ at law and in equity.⁶ The grounds of their in-

1. Wakefield v. Phelps, 37 N. H. 295, 306. "A will does not take effect, nor are there any rights acquired under it, until the death of the testator; and its construction and validity depend upon the law as it then stands. A statute passed after the making of a will, but before the death of the testator, by which the law is changed, takes affect upon the will. To give the statute such a construction is not to make it retrospective in its operation, since it affects no rights vested before its passage."

2. Kurtz v. Saylor, 20 Pa. St. 205. "But a will made in 1833, if invalid for such want of authority, was not validated by the act of 1848 passed during her lifetime. Her right to make a will was to be determined by the law as it existed when the will was made, and not as it was at the time of her death."

3. Contracts of Married Women.—See title HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9; White v. Wager, 25 N. Y. 328, 329.

4. See this title, ante, part I; Mortin v. Dwelby, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 9, 12, 13; 4 Am. Dec. 245.

5. In Neef v. Redmon, 76 Mo. 195,

197, a vendor who has contracted in writing to convey land to a married woman, and has received part of the purchase money, is so far bound that he cannot rescind without tendering back the money; and one purchasing from him with notice of the contract will take subject to her equitable right, so that if the vendor afterward conveys to her, she may maintain an action against him for the title. See also Stewart on H. & W., § 368.

6. Pond v. Carpenter, 12 Minn. 430, 432. A married woman cannot, either at law or in equity, bind her person or her property generally by contract, and the only remedy allowed will be against her separate property. In an action against a wife and her husband the complaint alleged "that goods, wares and merchandise were sold and delivered to the wife, for her sole use and benefit, and on credit of her separate estate and property, at her instance and request, and at the instance and request of her husband, and that the defendants jointly and severally promised to pay for them." Held, on demurrer to validity were that a married woman had no legal existence, being merged in her husband;¹ that she had no separate existence,² and that she had no consenting capacity, as she was under the power and control of her husband, and his wish was her law.³ The common law rule, although for the greater part done away with by equity and statutes, still so far exists that any capacity of a married woman to contract is regarded as exceptional, and the grounds thereof must be alleged and proved by one setting it up.⁴ Married women are still prima facie unable to contract at all.⁵

3. Contracts of Married Women at Common Law—Exceptions.—

Under certain circumstances at common law married women had the capacities of unmarried women, and could therefore contract as femes sole. This was the case when the husband was an alien residing abroad,⁶ or when he had been banished,⁷ or had abjured the realm,⁸ or was civilly dead.⁹ In the United States a permanent departure from the State, and renunciation of his married rights by a husband, invests his wife with the capacities of a feme sole,¹⁰ though whether under such circumstances she can make a the complaint, that the allegation of the sale to the wife in the manner stated, at the instance and request of her husband, is a sufficient allegation of the consent of the husband to the charge of her separate estate by the will. The fact that the husband, under these circumstances, assumed a joint and several liability for the indebtedness, does not deprive the creditor of his remedy against the separate property of the wife. See also Stewart on H. & W., § 389.

1. Rodemeyer v. Rodman, 5 Iowa 426, 427; Stewart on H. & W., § 39, 331.

2. Kelso v. Tabor, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 125, 128; Stewart on H. & W., § 39.

3. In Martin v. Dwelby, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 9, a deed of lands executed by a feme covert, together with her husband, but not acknowledged by her pursuant to the statute conveying lands belonging to the feme, and the payment of the consideration money by the grantee, is not such an agreement to convey as will be enforced against the heirs at law of the feme, by a decree for specific performance. It seems that a covenant entered into by a feme covert, except as to property held by her as her separate estate, or subject to her exclusive control, or as a trustee, is absolutely void. See also Sanford v. McLean, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 117, 122; 23 Am. Dec. 773.

4. Hinkson v. Williams, 41 N. J. Eq. 35, 37; S. P., Stilwell v. Adams, 29

Ark. 346; Way v. Peck, 47 Conn. 23; Tracy v. Keith, 11 Allen (Mass.) 214, 215; West v. Laraway, 28 Mich. 464, 467; Pollen v. James, 45 Miss. 129, 133; Lewis v. Perkins, 36 N. J. L. 133; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199.

In Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199, in an action upon contract against a married woman, the burden is upon the plaintiff, not only to prove the contract, and that it was made by her or her authorized agent, but that it was a contract she was capable of making.

5. In Rodemeyer v. Rodman, 5 Iowa 426, prima facie a feme covert is still unable to contract—to sue and be sued. With reference to certain matters, however, a feme covert may contract, and sue and be sued.

6. Gallagher v. Delargy, 57 Mo. 29, 37.

7. Rhea v. Renner, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 105, 107; Stewart on M. & D., § 177.

8. Musick v. Dubson, 76 Mo. 624, 628; 43 Am. Rep. 780.

9. Worthington v. Cook, 52 Md. 297, 306; Stewart on H. & W., § 334.

10. In Musick v. Dodson, 76 Mo. 624, the abandonment of a married woman by her husband for a period of time sufficient to entitle her to a divorce does not remove her disability to contract, unless he has gone beyond the limits of the State. See also 43 Am. Rep. 780; Danner v. Berthold, 11 Mo. App. 351, 355; Stewart on M. & D., § 177; Stewart on H. & W., § 332.

valid deed seems to be disputed.¹ Though in Texas mere separation, if permanent, is sufficient to produce this result, the true rule seems to be that neither departure from the State alone nor separation alone is sufficient; but the husband must have both renounced his marital rights and put himself permanently beyond the process of the courts of the State.² The effect of a divorce a mensa et thoro is different in different States.³ A married woman may also, as agent, under a power, and in representative capacities, contract as a feme sole.⁴

4. Contracts of Married Women—Capacity in Equity.—Independently of statute, a married woman's personal contracts are no more binding in equity than they are at law;⁵ as to her person and her general property her contracts are absolutely void,⁶ so that even her deed, if not properly executed at law, cannot be reformed, corrected, or enforced in equity.⁷ But equity recognizes the separate property and existence of married women, and, in most States, a wife is with respect to such property treated as a feme sole, and her contracts relating to the latter are enforced in a proceeding in rem.⁸ Thus, her contract to sell her equitable separate estate is valid,⁹ and even if not enforceable against her specifically, if she has received the purchase money the property is liable for its repayment;¹⁰ and a contract, in consideration of a loan, to pay it back, and to give a mortgage for it on her equitable separate estate, may be enforced as an equitable mortgage.¹¹ That is to say, any contract charging her equitable sepa-

1. In Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 105, by the laws of Maryland a feme covert, who has been abandoned by her husband, is not permitted to marry a second time until her husband shall have been absent seven years, and shall not have been heard of during that time. By those laws a married woman cannot dispose of real property without the consent of her husband; nor can she execute a good and valid deed to pass real estate, unless he shall join in it. The separate examination and other solemnities required by law are indispensable, and must not be omitted. A deed, therefore, executed by a married woman of real property acquired by her while a feme sole trader while she was abandoned by her husband, is void. See also Beckman v. Stanley, 8 Nev. 257, 261; Contra, Pro Gallagher v. Delargy, 57 Mo. 29, 37; Danner v. Berthold, 11 Mo. App. 351, 355.

2. See case of Danner v. Berthold, 11 Mo. App. 317.

3. Discussed in Stewart on H. & W., § 333; Stewart on M. & D., § 449.

4. Stewart on H. & W., §§ 89, 98,

363, 482, 487; Martin v. Dwelby, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 9, 12; 21 Am. Dec. 245.

5. Vaughan v. Vanderstegen, 2 Drew. 165, 180; Miller v. Newton, 23 Cal. 554, 564; Hodges v. Price, 18 Fla. 342; Patterson v. Lawrence, 90 Ill. 174, 179; Rodemeyer v. Rodman, 5 Iowa 426; Norris v. Lantz, 18 Md. 260, 269; Jenne v. Marble, 37 Mich. 319, 323; Loomis v. Brush, 36 Mich. 40, 46; Boatman Sav. Bank v. Collins, 75 Mo. 280, 281; White v. Wager, 25 N. Y. 328, 334.

6. Rodemeyer v. Rodman, 5 Iowa 426. "In order to make a wife liable in her separate property upon a contract entered into during coverture, the plaintiff should show that such contract related to the expenses of the family, or to other proper purposes, as contemplated by section 1455 of the code; or that it related to her separate property; or that the contract purports to bind herself only."

7. Loomis v. Brush, 36 Mich. 40, 46.

8. Pawley v. Vogel, 42 Mo. 291, 302.

9. Stead v. Nelson, 2 Beav. 245, 248.

10. Girault v. Adams, 61 Md. 1, 12, 13.

11. Stead v. Nelson, 2 Beav. 245, 248;

rate property for the payment of money may be enforced against such property,¹ and such contracts may be made through anyone, including her husband,² as her agent.³ Though a married woman's capacity to contract with reference to her equitable separate property has always been recognized to some extent, the reasons for and limits of this capacity are not clearly determined, and different rules relating thereto have prevailed at different times and in different places. One theory has been that her contracts are enforceable against her property as equitable appointments, mortgages, or conveyances thereof, on the ground that her power to dispose includes a power to encumber, and that private powers need not be strictly executed to create valid appointments.⁴ Under this theory only express charges would be enforceable,⁵ and no oral charge would have any effect as to real estate.⁶ Since, as to these matters, the weight of the law is otherwise, and for other reasons, this theory has of late met with much disfavor,⁷ though it is the only one possible where, although the wife has only such powers over her estate as are expressly given her, such estate is held liable for contracts which are not expressly authorized.⁸ Another more satisfactory theory has been accepted in States where a married woman is, as to her equitable separate estate, a feme sole; namely, that it is an incident of ownership that property should be liable for its owner's debts, or at all events an incident of the jus disponendi, and that the liability of equitable separate property for her debts is a consequence of the fact that a married woman is in equity absolute owner thereof.⁹ There are some rules as to the liability aforesaid upon which there seems to be some general agreement.

(1) It is not liable unless the wife has the jus disponendi.¹⁰

Wainwright v. Hardisty, 2 Beav. 363, 365; Hall v. Eccleston, 37 Md. 510, 520.

1. McDermott v. Garland, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 496; Taylor v. Shelton, 30 Conn. 122, 128; Crickmore v. Breckenridge, 51 Ind. 294, 297; Merrill v. Parker, 112 Mass. 250.

2. Same cases.

3. Crickmore v. Breckenridge, 51 Ind. 294, 297.

4. Hall v. Eccleston, 37 Md. 510, 520. "We suppose it to be equally clear that a contract, founded upon proper consideration, by which the husband and wife bind themselves to execute a mortgage of the separate estate of the wife, will be enforced by a court of equity, and such estate held liable for the debt intended to be secured; and it is quite as free from doubt that the separate estate held by the wife is liable in equity for all the debts, encumbrances, or other engagements, which she, together with her husband, may by express terms, or clear implication, charge thereon." Ellett v. Wade, 47 Ala. 456, 464.

5. Knox v. Jordan, 5 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 175. Nearly everywhere intent to charge may be implied. Miller v. Newton, 23 Cal. 554, 564; Yale v. Dederer, 22 N. Y. 451, 459.

6. Clark v. Miller, 2 Atk. 379; Burch v. Breckinridge, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 482, 487. Writing generally held not necessary; Murray v. Barlee, 3 Mylne & K. 209, 223; Ozley v. Ikelheimer, 26 Ala. 332; Miller v. Newton, 23 Cal. 554; Girault v. Adams, 61 Md. 1, 13; Miller v. Brown, 47 Mo. 504, 510; Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 573, 635.

7. Vaughan v. Vanderstegen, 2 Drew. 165, 181.

8. Knox v. Jordan, 5 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 175; Creighton v. Clifford, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 188, 198.

9. Vaughan v. Vanderstegen, 2 Drew. 165, 182; Shattock v. Shattock, Law R., 2 Eq. 182, 189.

10. Aylett v. Ashton, 1 Mylne & C.

Thus, when she has only a life estate the reversion is not liable;¹ when she cannot dispose of the corpus of her land, only the rents and profits are liable,² and when she cannot dispose of it at all, it is not liable at all.³

(2) It is not liable when no credit is given to it,⁴ as when the credit is given to the husband,⁵ and in the case of household expenses the credit is presumed to have been given to the husband.⁶

(3) It is not liable when there is no consideration;⁷ the wife is not estopped in equity by her seal.⁸ Still, usually, the consideration need not benefit her.⁹

(4) It is liable if expressly charged.¹⁰ As to this all agree, and the intention need not be expressed in the contract,¹¹ or in writing.¹²

(5) It is liable if impliedly charged.¹³ The intent to charge may, except in North Carolina,¹⁴ be proved by circumstantial evidence.¹⁵ In many courts, to prevent the implication of a fraudulent intent in the married woman at the time she contracted her debts not to pay them, the law raises a presumption that she intended to pay them in the only way possible, namely, out of her separate property; and such courts hold her property prima facie liable on all her contracts, on the doctrine of implied intent.¹⁶ This presumption may be rebutted by showing that neither party had in mind payment out of her estate.¹⁷ Very rarely, however, is this liability said to be independent of express or implied intent to charge, as it is in Virginia.¹⁸ Some courts which recognize implied charges refuse to raise the implication from the mere fact of coverture.¹⁹

105, 111; Shattock v. Shattock, Law R., 2 Eq. 182, 189; Buckner v. Davis, 20 Ark. 447; Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 573, 674.

1. Shattock v. Shattock, Law R., 2 Eq. 182, 189.

2. McChesney v. Brown, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 393, 404.

3. Clark v. Makenna, Cheves (S. Car.) Eq. 163.

4. No wrong is then done to the third party. Matthewman v. Matthewman, Law R., 3 Eq. 781, 787; Staley v. Hamilton, 19 Fla. 275, 297.

5. First case cited in last note.

6. For he is the head of the household. Powers v. Russell, 20 Mich. 179, 184.

7. Then it is nudum pactum.

8. Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 572, 683.

9. Stewart on H. & W., § 134. Contra, Perkins v. Elliott, 23 N. J. Eq. 526, 535.

10. A charge is an equitable mortgage. First Nat. Bank v. Haire, 36 Iowa 443, 446; Harrison v. Stewart, 18 N. J. Eq. 451.

11. Miller v. Newton, 23 Cal. 554, 564; Koontz v. Nabb, 16 Md. 549, 554; Wilson v. Jones, 46 Md. 349; Second Nat. Bank v. Miller, 63 N. Y. 639.

12. Murray v. Barlee, 3 Mylne & K. 208, 223.

13. Greatly v. Noble, 3 Mod. 77, 94; Patton v. Kinsman, 17 Iowa 428; Pond v. Carpenter, 12 Minn. 430, 432; Yale v. Dederer, 22 N. Y. 451, 459; Finch v. Marks, 76 Va. 207, 210.

14. Knox v. Jordan, 5 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 175, 176.

15. Miller v. Newton, 23 Cal. 564; Jackson v. West, 22 Md. 71, 76, 84.

16. Phillips v. Graves, 20 Ohio St. 371, 390.

17. Kimm v. Weippert, 46 Mo. 532.

18. Burnett v. Hawie, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 481, 486; Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 572, 581, 602, 608.

19. Jones v. Harris, 9 Ves. 485, 497; Staley v. Hamilton, 19 Fla. 275, 297; Shannon v. Bartholomew, 53 Ind. 54, 56; Patton v. Kinsman, 17 Iowa 428, 433; Wilson v. Jones, 46 Md. 349; DeVries v. Conklin, 22 Mich. 255; Pond v. Carpenter, 12 Minn. 430, 432;.

(6) It is liable for a debt incurred for its preservation,¹ or for some purpose connected necessarily with its full enjoyment.² Other courts have extended this principle, and hold the estate liable whenever the contract benefits it or the married woman, on the ground, it seems, of implied intent.³ Others, on the other hand, do not hold it liable even for improvements on it, if there is no express or implied charge.⁴ A few courts refuse to hold it liable for a debt not for its benefit, even on a charge.⁵

(7) It is liable on contracts in relation to it,⁶ or on the faith and credit of it.⁷

But the only satisfactory way of determining the law in each particular State is to examine the decisions therein.

5. Contracts of Married Women—Capacity Under Statutes.—The present capacity of married women to contract depends largely on statutes; and the effect of statutes, general and special, on the common-law rules, forms a most important subject, which will be separately discussed. Separate property acts do not enable a married woman to make personal contracts—this is universally admitted.⁸ But three classes of her contracts have been recognized as binding on her statutory separate property: (1) contracts

Johnson v. Cummin, 16 N. J. Eq. 97; Partridge v. Stocker, 36 Vt. 108, 117.

1. London v. Lempriere, Law R., 4 P. C. 572, 594; Crickmore v. Breckenridge, 51 Ind. 294.

2. Batchelder v. Sargent, 47 N. H. 262; Montgomery v. Eveleigh, 1 McCord (S. Car.) Eq. 267; Magwood v. Johnson, 1 Hill (S. Car.) Eq. 228.

3. Orange Bank v. Traver, 7 Sawy. (U. S.) 210, 216; Henry v. Blackburn, 32 Ark. 445, 451.

4. Shannon v. Bartholomew, 53 Ind. 54, 56; Wilson v. Jones, 46 Md. 349, 357. Contra, Henry v. Blackburn, 32 Ark. 445, 451.

5. Williams v. Hugunin, 69 Ill. 214, 217; Perkins v. Elliott, 23 N. J. Eq. 526, 535.

6. London v. Lempriere, Law R., 4 P. C. 572, 594; Collins v. Underwood, 33 Ark. 265.

7. Stately v. Hamilton, 19 Fla. 275, 298; Williams v. Hugunin, 69 Ill. 214, 217; Black v. Bryan, 18 Tex. 453, 465; Todd v. Lee, 15 Wis. 365.

8. O'Daily v. Morris, 31 Ind. 111. "Our statutes do not change the rule of the common law, so far as it applies to the contracts at large of a married woman, that she is incapable of binding herself by an executory contract, and that all such contracts made by her, whether in writing or by parol, are absolutely void at law." McKee v. Reynolds, 26 Iowa 578; Pond v. Carpenter, 12 Minn. 430, 432; Ames v. Foster, 42 N. H. 381, 385.

Late Decisions on Contracts of Married Women from Various State Courts Under Statutes:

California.—A married woman, in California, is incapable of contracting a personal obligation except in cases provided by statute. Norton v. Meader, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 604.

Under Civ. Code, a married woman may enter into any agreement or transaction respecting her property which she might if unmarried. She may mortgage or convey it by deed of trust to secure the debts of her husband, and, having done so, his creditors may enforce their claims against it in the same manner and to the same extent that they could if it were his property, and not hers. Burkle v. Levy, 70 Cal. 250.

District of Columbia.—The common law disability has not been removed in the District of Columbia (Ritch v. Hyatt, 3 MacArth. (D. C.) 536); but a married woman may contract to repair her house, or to put it into rentable condition. Harmon v. Garland, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 1.

Florida.—Though the wife may conduct a mercantile business in Florida and the husband may act as agent for her in that business, yet she cannot make a contract herself or by him as agent on which she will be personally liable.

To determine whether the credit was given to him or to her, it should be shown that the fact was known to the vendor, or that between him and the husband there was a clear and distinct understanding that the credit was given to her; else the husband will be liable. McQuaid v. Fontane, 24 Fla. 509.

A married woman is by the common law incapable of making a contract that will bind her personally, either in law or equity; and for this reason there cannot, in the absence of legislation changing the common law, be a judgment or decree against her personally for the recovery of money, as distinguished from a decree charging her separate estate, or other property, with the payment of money. No exception to this rule is created by the existence of a marriage contract between husband and wife giving her the right to control and manage her separate estate and property the same as if she had remained unmarried.

Wherever coverture avoids a contract which a wife has attempted to make, it likewise bars a personal recovery against the wife on the ground of the fraud connected therewith; and the bar cannot be overcome by suing her in an action ex delicto.

It is error to decree a recovery of money of or against a married woman personally in a suit in equity instituted to set aside a contract for the sale of land on the ground of fraud, and to recover the amount of a cash payment made thereon by the complainant. Prentiss v. Paisley, 7 L. R. A. 640.

Georgia.—A married woman is not liable on her note given for money borrowed to pay the premium due by the husband upon a policy of insurance on his life, where it is not shown that the policy was for her benefit alone. Jones v. Bradwell (Ga.) 1890, 10 S. E. Rep. 745.

Illinois.—As to the power of the wife, under the enabling laws of Illinois, to engage in trade, etc., see Re Kinkead, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 405; Farwell v. Kinkhead, 1 Am. L. Rec. 323.

Indiana.—A married woman may execute a promissory note for property purchased by her. Lane v. Schlemmer, 114 Ind. 206.

Kentucky.—A note given by a married woman, not for necessities for herself or family, and for which credit was not given her, is void. Stevens v.

Deering (Ky.) 1888, 9 S. W. Rep. 292.

Maryland.—A bond executed by a feme covert alone, without the joinder of her husband, is void, and no action can be maintained upon it, either during coverture or afterwards. Harris v. Dodge (Md.) 1890, 19 Atl. Rep. 597; Davis v. Carroll (Md.) 1889, 18 Atl. Rep. 965.

Massachusetts.—A married woman who endorses bank promissory notes at her husband's request, for him to fill up and use, which afterward and in her absence he fills up and negotiates for value at a bank, is liable to the bank as endorser, under the Massachusetts statutes, which give her the unrestricted right to contract except with her husband. Binney v. Globe Nat. Bank (Mass.), 6 L. R. A. 379.

Michigan.—A married woman cannot make an executory contract that is not directly connected with her estate. Howe v. North, 69 Mich. 272.

But she may render herself liable for things bought by her for family use. Ibid.

Yet she is not liable upon a contract for the board of herself and husband. Ibid.

She cannot make a valid contract for the erection of a building upon the joint property of herself and husband, but can contract only with reference to her sole or separate property. Curtis v. Crowe (Mich.) 1889, 41 N. W. Rep. 876.

A contract in writing to bind her must have been made on behalf of her sole property. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Wayne Co. Sav. Bank, 68 Mich. 116.

The statutes do not authorize a wife to become personally liable on an executory promise except concerning her separate estate. Kenton Ins. Co. v. McClellan, 43 Mich. 564; Reed v. Buys, 44 Mich. 80; Edwards v. McEnhill, 51 Mich. 160; Harvey v. Galloway, 48 Mich. 532; Richards v. Proper, 44 Mich. 96; Wilson v. Coolidge, 42 Mich. 112; Gantz v. Toles, 40 Mich. 725.

Minnesota.—The capacity of married women to be bound and estopped by their conduct is incident to their enlarged power to deal with others under Minnesota statutes. Dobbin v. Cordiner (Minn.), 4 L. R. A. 333.

Mississippi.—The statutes of Mississippi in relation to married women have not relieved a wife from common law disabilities to make contracts.

Canal Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325.

With certain exceptions a married woman cannot bind herself by any covenant, nor can she be bound by the covenants of her trustee in a deed of separation; nor can she, in consideration of such separation, convey or release to her husband her claims on his estate. Stephenson v. Osborne, 41 Miss. 119, 125.

In Mississippi, unless a married woman has a separate estate she is subject, as to her contracts, to the disability of coverture. Canal Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325.

A personal judgment against a married woman, in an action against her on her promissory note, is a nullity under the laws of Mississippi. Ibid.

Missouri.—Under the Revised Statutes of Missouri a married woman may act as feme sole as to her separate property, and may make contracts for purchase of personal property with her separate means. Dailey v. Singer Mfg. Co., 88 Mo. 301; Rosenheim v. Hartsock, 90 Mo. 357; Miller v. Brown, 47 Mo. 504.

The restriction by Missouri Rev. Stat. 669, on the power of a married woman to covenant in a joint deed with her husband of her statutory estate, does not apply to her covenants in a conveyance of her separate estate in equity. Barlow v. Delaney, 40 Fed. Rep. 97.

New Jersey.—Under the New Jersey revision, a wife may contract to sell her real estate, and specific performance thereof will be decreed, after her husband's death, against one purchasing with knowledge thereof. Union Brick & Tile Mfg. Co. v. Lorillard, 44 N. J. Eq. 1.

New York.—In New York, a married woman may carry on business and may make contracts in the prosecution of such business. United States v. Garlinghouse, 11 Int. Rev. Rec. 11. See Voorhees v. Bonesteel, 83 U. S., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 16.

In the course of her separate business she can make negotiable paper which will be governed by the law merchant. Noel v. Kinney, 106 N. Y. 74.

Her contracts may be either express or implied, and may be made either personally or by agent, and when within the statute they will charge her separate estate. Dickerson v. Rogers, 114 N. Y. 405.

As to all contracts relating to her separate estate a married woman stands at law, under the Married Woman's acts, on the same footing as if unmarried. Noel v. Kinney, supra; Overseers of Poor of Parker City v. Overseers of Poor of Du Bois Borough (Pa., 1887), 9 Atl. Rep. 457; Freeking v. Rolland, 53 N. Y. 422; Bodine v. Killeen, 53 N. Y. 93.

North Carolina.—As to the power of a wife, in North Carolina, to make contracts which will charge her separate estate, see Matthews v. Murchison, 17 Fed. Rep. 760.

Ohio.—The ius disponendi which attaches in Ohio to the estate of a married woman is largely regulated by statute. Levi v. Earl, 30 Ohio St. 147.

The ground upon which a court of equity charges her separate estate for her general engagements is not because her contracts have any validity, but because the circumstances are such that equity decrees it to be just that they should be paid out of her estate. Ibid.

Her separate property is not liable for her general engagements in the absence of a contract valid in law to bind the same. Rice v. Columbus etc. R. Co., 32 Ohio St. 380.

Except so far as capacity has been given to her by statute to bind herself by her contracts, they are void. Payne v. Thompson, 44 Ohio St. 192.

She may charge her separate estate at least to the extent that such liability may be incurred for its benefit. Phillips v. Graves, 20 Ohio St. 371; Patrick v. Littell, 36 Ohio St. 79.

Pennsylvania.—The wife has only such power over her personal property as is conferred by statute. Hinkle v. Landis (Pa.), 25 W. N. C. 218.

All contracts made by the wife concerning her separate estate, other than for labor and materials for improving the same, are subject to her disabilities as a feme covert, except where a case is made out for the court to charge her separate estate. Spearman v. Ward, 114 Pa. St. 634.

Under Pennsylvania Act of February 29th, 1872, a married woman can make a valid judgment note for a sewing machine purchased for her own use. Baker v. Singer Mfg. Co., 122 Pa. St. 363.

Under the Pennsylvania Act of June 3d, 1887 (Pub. Law, 332, known as the Married Persons' Property Act), a married woman may confess judgment, or bind herself or her estate by contract, for three purposes, viz: where which would bind her equitable separate property;¹ (2) contracts which are expressly authorized by the statute—as when a statute empowers to make contracts “relating to,” or “with reference to,” her property;² (3) contracts which are impliedly authorized by statute—contracts without the capacity for making which she could not possess, use and enjoy her property as it was intended, under the statute, that she should.³ On some of these contracts, the remedy is at law; on others, it is in equity; and on still others, there are current remedies at law and in equity.⁴ But the remedy and the obligation must be kept quite distinct.⁵ Unfortunately, the above distinctions have not been generally recognized or regarded and it is almost impossible to lay down rules applicable to all the States. The burden is upon the party alleging the liability of the property to show that the contract is one that binds it.⁶ When a separate property act gives a married woman capacity to make certain specified contracts with respect to her property, or to charge or encumber it only by contract executed with certain formalities, it impliedly restrains her from making any others, or any without such formalities, even in equity; but the fact that courts of law imply from the terms of a statute a limited capacity to contract, does not necessarily prevent courts she engages in trade or business, in the management of her separate estate, and for necessities; but she cannot bind her estate generally as a feme sole. Real Estate Invest. Co. v. Roop (Pa.), 7 L. R. A. 211.

A married woman cannot enter into a valid agreement with a third person, without the consent of her husband, transferring to such person a sum of money in consideration of his obligating himself to pay her an annuity out of such sum during her natural life; and if she does so it will be presumed that such third person knew that she was acting ultra vires. Hinkle v. Landis (Pa.), 25 W. N. C. 218.

South Carolina.—Under the South Carolina law, a married woman cannot execute a valid contract of suretyship. Harris v. McCaslan (S. Car., 1889), 10 S. E. Rep. 104.

A note given by a married woman for money borrowed for her own use is valid, under S. C. Gen. Stat. 2037. Howard v. Kitchens (S. Car.) 1889, 10 S. E. Rep. 224.

And a note given by her for money expended on account of her child at her request is valid. Ibid.

Wisconsin.—In Wisconsin, married women have not been vested by statute with general power to bind themselves or their separate estates by the ordinary contract of endorsement of a note. Avery v. Doane, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 64.

1. Johnson v. Cummin, 16 N. J. Eq. 97, 104; Bedford v. Burton, 106 U. S. 338; Donovan v. Donovan, 41 Conn. 551; Cox v. Wood, 20 Ind. 54, 59; Hall v. Eccleston, 37 Md. 510, 520; Pond v. Carpenter, 12 Minn. 430, 432; Doyle v. Orr, 51 Miss. 229, 232; Pemberton v. Johnson, 46 Mo. 342; Corn Exchange Ins. Co. v. Babcock, 42 N. Y. 613, 628; Patrick v. Littell, 36 Ohio St. 79, 83; Glass v. Warwick, 40 Pa. St. 140, 145; Hall v. Dotson, 55 Tex. 520; Stockton v. Farley, 10 W. Va. 171.

2. Marshall v. Berry, 13 Allen (Mass.) 43, 45; Plumer v. Lord, 5 Allen (Mass.) 460, 462; West v. Laraway, 28 Mich. 464; Batchelder v. Sargent, 47 N. H. 262, 264.

3. Williams v. Hugunin, 69. Ill. 214, 219; Smith v. Howe, 31 Ind. 233; Durea v. Getchell, 55 Me. 241, 248; Albin v. Lord, 39 N. H. 196, 201; Frecking v. Rolland, 53 N. Y. 422; Wieman v. Anderson, 42 Pa. St. 311, 317; Krouskop v. Shontz, 51 Wis. 204, 214.

4. Phillips v. Graves, 20 Ohio St. 371, 389; Bradford v. Greenway, 17 Ala. 797; Johnson v. Cummin, 16 N. J. Eq. 97, 106.

5. MacLay v. Love, 25 Cal. 367, 382.

6. Tracey v. Keith, 11 Allen (Mass.)

of equity from recognizing some further capacity.¹ And, though some courts have taken, as it is believed, the true ground, that equity has nothing to do with statutory separate property, the majority have held that her statutory estate is bound by her contracts in equity precisely as it would have been had it been created by a deed to her sole and separate use instead of by a statute.² Whether a particular contract is binding on particular statutory separate estate depends on the rule which would determine in the State where it was made, whether the said contract would be binding on an equitable separate estate.³ Thus, in New Jersey the contract must be beneficial to her, or must be an express charge;⁴ in Kansas, any contract is irrebuttably presumed to have been intended as a charge and to be binding, etc.⁵ Two limitations to this liability have been recognized: (1) She cannot charge unless she can convey—a rule which has been questioned, but which prevails as to equitable separate estate.⁶ (2) If her husband's consent to her conveyances is required, any contract of hers to be a charge must be made with his consent—rule also questioned.⁷ There are cases, as suggested above, which deem charges as indirect conveyances, and will not recognize them unless executed with all the formalities required of a conveyance.⁸ A power to convey always includes a power to charge.⁹

When the separate property act authorizes a married woman to make contracts "relating to," or "with respect to," or "with reference to," her separate property, the question is, what contracts do so relate, etc.? Whether a contract for the purchase money of certain property is a contract relating to that property is disputed.¹⁰ But contracts for the cultivation, improvement, stocking, supplying with tools, or with work horses, of her separate farm, are contracts relating thereto;¹¹ so is a contract for furniture for her house;¹² but not a contract for supplies for the family,¹³ or for the purchase of a saddle horse.¹⁴ So a contract providing for damages for an injury to her property is a contract with reference thereto.¹⁵ When the wife's capacity to contract with reference to

214; West v. Laraway, 28 Mich. 464; Pollen v. James, 45 Miss. 129, 133.

1. Todd v. Lee, 15 Wis. 365, 380; Jones v. Crosthwaite, 17 Iowa 393, 403.

2. Perkins v. Elliott, 23 N. J. Eq. 526.

3. Scott v. Scott, 13 Ind. 225; case in last note and Staley v. Hamilton, 19 Fla. 275.

4. Perkins v. Elliott, 23 N. J. Eq. 526.

5. Wicks v. Mitchell, 9 Kan. 80, 87.

6. See § 4, ante.

7. Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 572, 674; Holl v. Eccleston, 37 Md. 510, 520; Selph v. Howland, 23 Miss. 264, 267.

8. Staley v. Hamilton, 19 Fla. 275, 295.

9. Hall v. Dotson, 55 Tex. 520.

10. Pro Labaree v. Colby, 99 Mass. 559, 560. Contra, Jones v. Crosthwaite, 17 Iowa 393, 402; Miller v. Albertson, 73 Md. 343.

11. Batchelder v. Sargent, 47 N. H. 262; Burr v. Swan, 118 Mass. 588, 589; McCormick v. Holbrook, 22 Iowa 487, 489; Mitchell v. Smith, 32 Iowa 484, 487.

12. Harmon v. Garland, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 1.

13. Schneider v. Garland, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 350.

14. McDermott v. Garland, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 496.

15. Duren v. Getchell, 55 Me. 241, 248.

her separate property is implied from her capacity to hold, use and enjoy the same, as being involved therein, the question is, what contracts are necessary and proper to render her tenure, use and enjoyment of the property as full and beneficial as was intended? Whether, when she may acquire by purchase, she may buy on credit, is disputed;¹ but if she may trade, she may buy a bill of goods on credit,² and may make all contracts in the usual course of business.³ If she may earn for her own use, she may buy a sewing machine to do her sewing on,⁴ or a piano to give lessons on.⁵ She may employ counsel to litigate her rights to her property;⁶ she may employ servants and laborers thereupon;⁷ she may lease it, make contracts for its cultivation, repair, etc., and for disposing of its produce.⁸ Whatever is essential to make its use beneficial, she may do.⁹ These contracts, it must be remembered, are not binding on her personally, but they are enforced against her property, in some States by a suit at law, in others by a proceeding in equity.¹⁰

6. General Rules as to Construction of Statutes Relating to Contracts of Married Women.—(1) General statutes relating to contract, but not expressly referring to married women, do not affect the validity of married women's contracts, but apply to these, only so far as they are valid under other statutes.¹¹

1. Pro Tiemeyer v. Turnquist, 85 N. Y. 516, 521; 39 Am. Rep. 674.

2. Trieber v. Stover, 30 Ark. 727.

3. Plumer v. Lord, 5 Allen (Mass.) 460; Frecking v. Roiland, 53 N. Y. 422.

4. Williamson v. Dodge, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 498, 499; Dayton v. Walsh, 47 Wis. 113, 120.

5. Dayton v. Walsh, 47 Wis. 113, 120.

6. Leonard v. Rogan, 20 Wis. 540.

7. Cookson v. Toole, 59 Ill. 515, 520.

8. Carpenter v. Mitchell, 50 Ill. 470.

9. Batchelder v. Sargent, 47 N. H. 262.

10. Doyle v. Orr, 51 Miss. 229, 232; Johnson v. Cummin, 16 N. J. Eq. 97, 104; Cookson v. Toole, 59 Ill. 515, 519; Stockton v. Farley, 10 W. Va. 171, 175.

11. Effect of General Statutes not Mentioning Married Women on Married Women's Contract.—In illustration of the rule stated in the text, a statute providing that all deeds "shall be valid between the parties though not recorded," would not render the deed of a married woman valid; a statute providing for the giving of replevin bonds does not enable a married woman plaintiff to give such a bond. See Ward v. Whitney, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 246. A statute relating to auction bids would not make the bid of a married woman valid. See De Hay v. Dennis, 14 Rich. (S.

Car.) Eq. 27, 29. General insolvent laws have been held inapplicable to married women. Relief Building Assn., Schmidt, 55 Md. 97, 98. A statute requiring the officer to certify that the party executing a deed "was known to me" does not apply to married women's deeds executed under another special act not requiring this. Bell v. Lyle, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 44, 45. As to recording, see Applegate v. Tracy, 9 Dana (Ky.) 215, 224.

On the other hand, under the National Bank acts which do not mention married women, these are liable for assessment on their stock. Anderson v. Line, 14 Fed. Rep. 405, 406; In re Reciprocity Bank, 22 N. Y. 9, 15. And under statutes defining the liability of purchasers at mortgage sales without referring to married women, these have been held bound. Fowler v. Jacob, 62 Md. 326. Because other statutes had empowered them to hold stock and purchase property separately from their husbands. So where a married woman may sue as if sole, her attorney may under a general law obtain a lien for his fees. Putnam v. Tennyson, 50 Ind. 456, 458. And her valid general mortgage may be foreclosed under a general law. Hartman v. Ogborn, 54 Pa. St. 120, 123. And when a married woman may contract, statutes like the statute of frauds apply to her contracts; she must be liable under the general as well as the marriage laws. See Hetherington v. Hixon, 46 Ala. 297; Sawyer v. Fernald, 59 Me. 500; DeVries v. Conklin, 22 Mich. 255, 258; Bayler v. Com., 40 Pa. St. 37, 44.

(2) Statutes which secure to a married woman the separate use and enjoyment of her property, and which either do not refer to her contracts at all, or authorize contracts "relating to," or "with respect to," etc., such property, do not enable her to contract generally, but only in connection with such property.¹ And there are three classes of contracts which may be authorized by these statutes, to-wit: 1, contracts binding the property, in equity, as if it were equitable separate property; 2, contracts falling within the classes expressly authorized by the words "with reference to," etc.; and 3, contracts necessary to the separate use and enjoyment of the property as secured by the statute.¹

(3) A married woman's contracts which would be binding on her equitable separate property in equity are valid as against her statutory separate property in the same way.²

(4) A married woman is not, with respect to her statutory separate property, a feme sole. She has by implication the capacity to make such contracts, and no others, as are necessary to the exercise of the capacities, or the enjoyment of the rights, expressly given her by the statute.³

1. Effect of Statutes Creating Married Women's Statutory Separate Estates.—The meaning of the rule in the text is that statutes, such as have been passed in all the States, destroying the husband's common law estate in his wife's property, and securing to the wife her own property to her own use, do not affect the general personal status of the wife, and give her no capacity to make any contract which is not in some way connected with the property so secured to her. See the following cases. Canal Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 325, 332; Sykes v. Chadwick, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 141, 151; Hodges v. Price, 18 Fla. 342, 344; Jenne v. Marble, 37 Mich. 319, 321; Russell v. People's Sav. Bank, 39 Mich. 671, 673, 33 Am. Dec. 444; Doyle v. Orr, 51 Miss. 229, 232; Huyler v. Atwood, 26 N. J. Eq. 504, 506.

In three following rules the different kinds of contracts which may be authorized by such statutes are discussed. The distinction is suggested in Bressler v. Kent, 61 Ill. 426, 430; 11 Am. Rep. 67; Todd v. Lee, 15 Wis. 365, 380.

2. Contracts in Equity Under Married Women's Separate Property Acts.—Courts of equity have long recognized a married woman's contracts with respect to her property secured to her separate use by act of party—by deed, etc. See ante, part III, § 4; and for the same reasons and to the same extent they enforce her contracts with reference to her separate property created by act of State—by statute. Johnson v. Cummins, 16 N. J. Eq. 97, 104, 105. See ante, part III, § 5. The rule states the prevailing opinion, though some courts have held that equity has nothing to do with the legal separate property of wives. See MacLay v. Love, 25 Cal. 367, 382; West v. Laraway, 28 Mich. 464, 465; Cain v. Burkley, 35 Miss. 119, 145.

But whether a particular contract is binding on a particular piece of property must depend upon the rule which would determine, in the place where the contract is made (see post, rule (9)), whether the contract could be binding on the property if it were equitable separate estate and the terms of the statute were the terms of the deed. Scott v. Scott, 13 Ind. 225, 228. So that in New Jersey the contract must be beneficial or an express charge. Perkins v. Elliott, 23 N. J. Eq. 526, 534. While in Kansas any contract is irrebuttably presumed to be intended as a charge on the property. Wicks v. Mitchell, 9 Kan. 80, 87. For other limitations of this rule see ante, part III, § 5.

3. Implied Power to Contract Under Married Women's Separate Property

(5) When the statute authorizes a married woman to contract "with reference to," "with respect to," etc., her separate property, her contracts to be valid must be "with reference to," etc., her said property.¹

Acts.—This rule means that the power to contract must be expressly given, or it must be incidental and necessary to the use and enjoyment of the property as the statute says it shall be used and enjoyed. Bressler v. Kent, 61 Ill. 426, 427; 14 Am. Rep. 67; Cole v. Van Riper, 44 Ill. 58.

Under a statute providing that a married woman shall have over her property the same rights and power as a feme sole, she may dispose of it. Beal v. Warren, 2 Gray (Mass.) 447, 459; post, part IV. She may agree to dispose of it. Dreutzer v. Lawrence, 58 Wis. 594, 598; post, part IV, § 10. She may do this by power of attorney. Patton v. King, 26 Tex. 685, 686; post, part IV, § 9. She can do with respect to it whatever any other person can do with respect to his or her property. Beard v. Dedolph, 29 Wis. 136, 141. She may invest it. Rieper v. Rieper, 79 Mo. 352, 361. She may charge it for her debts. Williams v. Hugunin, 69 Ill. 214, 219; 18 Am. Rep. 268.

When a married woman may "hold, enjoy and possess her property as if sole" she may make all contracts necessary to such holding and enjoyment. Williams v. Hugunin, 69 Ill. 214, 219; 18 Am. Rep. 268. Cookson v. Toole, 59 Ill. 515, 519; Smith v. Howe, 31 Ind. 233, 234; Lindley v. Cross, 31 Ind. 106; Duren v. Getchell, 53 Me. 241, 248; Albin v. Lord, 39 N. H. 196, 201; Freeking v. Rolland, 53 N. Y. 422, 425; Mahon v. Gormley, 24 Pa. St. 80; Wright v. Blackwood, 57 Tex. 644, 648; Krouskop v. Shontz, 51 Wis. 204, 214. She may lease it. Parent v. Callerand, 64 Ill. 97, 99. She may contract for legal services to it. Leonard v. Rogan, 20 Wis. 540, 542. Or for manual labor on it. Cookson v. Toole, 59 Ill. 515, 519. For cultivating it. Carpenter v. Mitchell, 50 Ill. 470. For repairing it. Beard v. Dedolph, 29 Wis. 136, 141. For selling its crops. Cookson v. Toole, 59 Ill. 515, 521. And she may render it liable for her debts. Williams v. Hugunin, 69 Ill. 214. To the extent at least of its income. See Cox v. Wood, 20 Ind. 54.

This implied capacity does not conflict with her capacity in equity discussed under rule (3); the two capacities exist side by side. Todd v. Lee, 15 Wis. 365, 380. In some States it is held that the implied capacity can be enforced only in equity. Hugler v. Atwood, 26 N. J. Eq. 504, 506. But the cases cited above hold that it is properly enforced at law.

1. Express Power to Contract Under Married Women's Separate Property Acts.—On the principle, referred to more fully under rule (7), expressum unius est exclusio alterius, the enumeration in a statute of certain contracts which a married woman may make is a denial of her capacity to make any others; but it is probable that statutes providing that a married woman's contracts with reference to her property shall be valid are simply attempts to create a rule which had previously existed in equity as to equitable separate property. See Albin v. Lord, 39 N. H. 196, 203; Leake v. Sebaco, 21 N. J. Eq. 269, 282; Yale v. Dederer, 18 N. Y. 265, 272; Walker v. Reaney, 36 Pa. St. 410, 414. So that there would be no conflict between this rule and rule (3).

The following contracts "relate to," "concern," "refer to" and "respect" a married woman's separate property, to-wit: contracts for the direct benefit of the same. Russell v. People's Sav. Bank, 39 Mich. 671, 674. For selling it. Bailey v. Pearson, 29 N. H. 77. Leasing. Vandevoort v. Gould, 36 N. Y. 639, 643. Mortgaging. Marlow v. Barlew, 53 Cal. 456, 459. For cultivating. Basford v. Pearson, 7 Allen (Mass.) 504, 505. For improving. Burr v. Swan, 118 Mass. 588, 589. For stocking. Batchelder v. Sargent, 47 N. H. 262, 264. For fencing. Albin v. Lord, 39 N. H. 196, 202. For repairing. Parker v. Kane, 4 Allen (Mass.) 346, 347. For supplying with laborers. Cookson v. Toole, 59 Ill. 515, 520. Or with tools. McCormick v. Holbrook, 22 Iowa 487, 489. Also a covenant for title in a deed of such property. Richmond v. Tibbles, 26 Iowa 474, 476; Basford v. Pearson, 7 Allen (Mass.) 504, 505. So an agreement for the sale of the same. Last cases cited and Baker v. Hathway, 5 Allen (Mass.) 103, 104; Durfee v. McClurg, 6 Mich. 223, 232. Not an agreement for the purchase of such property. Jones v.

(6) Statutes expressly authorizing or prohibiting certain specified contracts are strictly construed and, respectively, neither authorize nor prohibit any contracts not specified;¹ but statutes expressly authorizing specified contracts may, by implication, prohibit all others, and contracts expressly prohibiting certain contracts may, by implication, authorize others.²

(7) Under a statute expressly enabling a married woman to contract as if unmarried, she may make contracts generally, entirely unaffected by her coverture,³ but it is doubtful whether she may

Gosthwaite, 17 Iowa 393, 402. A purchase of furniture for her separate house. Tillman v. Shackleton, 15 Mich. 447, 454. Or of a horse for her separate farm. Mitchell v. Smith, 32 Iowa 484, 487. Whether a purchase of property for her separate use is a contract with respect to that property as separate property is disputed, but the better view is that the obligation to pay arises only after, or at the moment as, the property vests, and therefore it is separate property when the promise to pay for it is made, and the latter is thus a contract with reference to it. Messer v. Smyth, 58 N. H. 298, 299-301; Adams v. Charter, 46 Conn. 551, 554; Tillman v. Shackleton, 15 Mich. 447, 456; Hugler v. Atwood, 26 N. J. Eq. 504, 507; Tlemeyer v. Turnquist, 85 N. Y. 516, 522; 39 Am. Rep. 674; Gamer v. Hanaford, 53 Wis. 85, 87. A contract buying a horse for pleasure riding is not a contract with reference to her separate property. McDermott v. Garland, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 496. Nor is one for supplies for the family. Schneider v. Garland, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 350. Nor a contract by which money is borrowed to buy the property. Ames v. Foster, 42 N. H. 381, 385. But see Cashman v. Henry, 75 N. Y. 103, 108; 31 Am. Rep. 437. Nor a contract of suretyship. Russel v. People's Saving Bank, 39 Mich. 671, 673; Hugler v. Atwood, 26 N. J. Eq. 504, 506. See more fully also ante, III, §§ 4, 5.

1. Effect of Statutes Expressly Authorizing or Prohibiting Specified Contracts.—Under a statute which authorizes one kind of contract, no other can be made. Abshire v. State, 53 Md. 64, 67; Sturmfelz v. Frickey, 43 Md. 560, 571; Robertson v. Bruner, 24 Miss. 242, 244. So that when a married woman is authorized to dispose of her property by sale, she cannot dispose of it by gift. Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533, 536. The only capacities implied are those which are necessarily incidental to rights or capacities expressly given. See last rule.

Likewise statutes prohibiting certain contracts are strictly interpreted, so that a prohibition against contracts between husband and wife will not apply to contracts of the wife as surety for her husband. Major v. Holmes, 124 Mass. 108, 109. See article MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.

2. On the other hand, when a married woman is authorized to make certain contracts or to make contracts with certain formalities, she is impliedly restrained from making any others. Staley v. Hamilton, 19 Fla. 275, 295. And a prohibition of certain contracts in a statute may make clear the intention of the legislature to authorize all other contracts of the class to which the prohibited contract belongs; thus, under a statute authorizing a married woman to acquire property, "provided that no acquisition from her husband in prejudice of the rights of his creditors shall be valid," authorizes her to acquire from her husband in all cases when the rights of his creditors are not prejudiced. Trader v. Lowe, 45 Md. 1, 14.

3. Effect of Statutes Expressly Authorizing Married Women to Contract as if Unmarried.—When a statute says that a married woman may contract as if unmarried, it is presumed to mean this literally and fully. Edwards v. Shoeneman, 104 Ill. 278, 283. And her contracts are not affected by coverture at all. Worthington v. Cooke, 52 Md. 297, 308. She may make all kinds of contracts which an unmarried woman may make. See Pelzer v. Campbell, 15 S. Car. 581, 601; 40 Am. Rep. 705. Including contracts of suretyship. Hart v. Grigsby, 14 Bush (Ky.) 542; title MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS. Promissory notes. Messer v. Smyth, 58 N. H. 298, 299; post, III, § 15. Contracts binding on her equitable separate property. Watte v. Wolfe, 16 S. Car. 256, make contracts directly with her husband.¹

(8) If a statute which enables a married woman to contract requires her contracts to be executed in a certain way, this requirement must be substantially complied with to give her contract any validity;² but if she has the capacity to contract independently of the statute which requires the formalities, a contract not complying therewith may still be valid.³

(9) The capacity of a married woman to contract personally, or as to movables, depends on the law of the place where the contract is made;⁴ to contract as to immovables, on the law of the place where they lie.⁵

(10) The validity of a contract, and the rights of the parties thereunder, depend upon the law existing at the time it is made.⁶

7. Contracts of Married Women Made Before Marriage.—Marriage suspends the remedies against a married woman on her antenuptial contracts, or rather it makes her husband liable for them with her, and a judgment recovered on such a contract against husband and wife can be satisfied out of the property of either of them.⁷ Her husband's liability ceases on her death or on divorce,⁸ while on divorce or his death her full liability revives.⁹ And the same is said to be the effect of any event which gives her the powers of a feme sole.¹⁰ And her promise during coverture to pay an antenuptial debt does not take such debt out of the statute of limitations, being itself void.¹¹ In many States the husband's liability for his wife's antenuptial debts has been 268, 269. An implied promise rises against her when it would rise against a feme sole, and on such contracts she is liable at law. Worthington v. Cooke, 52 Md. 297, 298.

1. An exception may be in the case of her contracts with her husband. See title HUSBAND AND WIFE, where this question is fully discussed.

2. Effect of Statutes Requiring Formalities.—The whole discussion of this rule belongs rather to the subject of DEEDS OF MARRIED WOMEN, treated hereinafter in part IV.

3. See Bedford v. Burton, 106 U. S. 338, 341; Edwards v. Schoeneman, 104 Ill. 278, 284; Scranton v. Stewart, 52 Md. 68, 80; Phillips v. Graves, 20 Ohio St. 371, 389; Dreutzer v. Lawrence, 58 Wis. 594, 598, 599.

4. Conflict of Laws.—This is the general rule. See title CONFLICT OF LAWS. But there is another view—that this depends on the law of the married woman's domicile. Dow v. Gould etc. Silver Min. Co., 31 Cal. 629, 652; Snelson v. Williams, 57 Miss. 451, 462.

5. Statutes Operate Prospectively.—

The validity of the contract and the rights of the parties thereunder, depends upon the law existing at the time it is made. Edwards v. Schoeneman, 104 Ill. 278, 282; Loomis v. Brush, 33 Mich. 40, 47; Eckert v. Reater, 31 N. J. L. 133.

6. A statute providing that "all contracts of married women shall be valid" does not affect existing contracts. Lee v. Lanahan, 59 Me. 478, 481; Bryant v. Merrill, 55 Me. 515, 516. And a note made before the act but delivered afterwards is invalid, though it is good if delivery authorized afterwards. Taylor v. Boardman, 92 Ill. 566, 568.

7. Hall v. White, 27 Conn. 488, 494; Peace v. Spierin, 2 Dessaus. (S. Car.) Eq. 460, 470. Contra, Haygood v. Harris, 10 Ala. 291, 292.

8. See article on DIVORCE in this work, and Cureton v. Moore, 7 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 204, 206.

9. Hull v. White, 27 Conn. 488, 494.

10. Clarke v. Windham, 12 Ala. 798, 801.

11. Parker v. Cowen, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 518, 520.

destroyed by statute, and her full liability on the same has been declared.¹

8. Contracts of Married Women—Confirmation Thereof.—It involves somewhat difficult questions to determine what is required of a woman who has made a contract while under the disabilities of coverture to confirm it.

The mere fact that a wife survives her husband does not give any efficacy to her contracts made during coverture,² though it has been held that a contract enforceable against her during coverture only in equity could be enforced at law against her after coverture;³ but her liability on her antenuptial contracts revives.⁴ As her contracts made during coverture are void and not voidable, they cannot be ratified, and therefore, according to the better view, her mere promise to perform them made after coverture (after divorce or death of husband) is without consideration and void;⁵ but in some States the moral consideration is deemed sufficient to support and render valid such a promise,⁶ and in others the courts have expressly declined to decide this point.⁷ But whatever be the opinion as to the effect of an express promise, there is no doubt that a mere recognition of the contract gives it no new validity.⁸ A contract enforceable in equity is, however, ample consideration for an express promise;⁹ so is the surrender of a note void as to her, but binding on others;¹⁰ so is a note given for an antenuptial debt.¹¹ A married woman cannot set up her invalid deed by parol,¹² but she can confirm her assignments and deeds by reacknowledgment and recording,¹³ by estop-

1. Ala. Code, 1876, § 2704; Cal. Civ. Code, § 170; Wood v. Orford, 52 Cal. 412; Md. Acts 1880, §§ 31, 32; Pa. Purd. Dig. 1872, p. 1006.

2. Candy v. Coppock, 85 Ind. 594, 597. "The agreement made with decedent while she was a married woman was void and cannot be enforced. The question as to whether a promise made by a feme sole to pay a debt, created while she was a feme covert, is supported by a sufficient moral obligation to make the promise binding, it is unnecessary to decide. . . . An acknowledgment of an agreement does not constitute a promise to pay." Ross v. Singleton, 1 Del. Ch. 149.

3. Schaeffer v. Ivory, 7 Mo. App. 461.

4. Clarke v. Windham, 12 Ala. 798.

5. Musick v. Dodson, 76 Mo. 624; Hayward v. Barker, 52 Vt. 429; Hetherington v. Hixon, 46 Ala. 297; Cook v. Bradley, 7 Conn. 57, 61; Howard v. Simpkins, 70 Ga. 322, 326; Thomas v. Passage, 54 Ind. 106, 112; Loomis v. Brush, 36 Mich. 40, 47; Foster v. Wilcox, 10 R. I. 443.

6. Hemphill v. McClimans, 24 Pa.

St. 367, 371. "But the legal disability was gone when she made her last promise. That, too, was worthless, if there was no consideration to ground it upon. But the rule is a very familiar one, that an existing moral duty, not enforceable by law, is a sufficient consideration for an express promise to perform that duty." Viser v. Bertrand, 14 Ark. 267; Franklin v. Beatty, 27 Miss. 347; Atkins v. Banwell, 2 East 506; Gibbs v. Merrill, 3 Taunt. 311.

7. Spitz v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 641; Candy v. Coppock, 85 Ind. 584, 597; Hubbard v. Bugbee, 55 Vt. 506, 509.

8. Candy v. Coppock, 85 Ind. 594, 597.

9. Cleveland v. Low, 32 Ga. 458, 463; Hubbard v. Bugbee, 55 Vt. 506, 509.

10. Spitz v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 641.

11. Parker v. Cowan, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 518, 520.

12. Price v. Hart, 29 Mo. 171, 172.

13. Riggs v. Boylan, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 445, 446.

pel,¹ etc., and in Iowa may ratify her deed of the homestead as if she had never been married.² So by bringing suit on an invalid contract she confirms it by matter of record.³

9. Contracts of Married Women Through Agents.—A married woman had at common law no legal existence and could not, therefore, have any legal representatives;⁴ or rather her legal existence was merged in that of her husband, and he was for all things her agent in law;⁵ so her antenuptial appointment of agent was revoked by her marriage.⁶ Her capacity to contract through agent is now co-extensive with her capacity to contract directly:⁷ thus, she cannot make a contract through an agent which she could not make herself, as a contract with respect to her property not separate;⁸ and she can make through an agent such contracts as she could make herself, as contracts charging her separate estate,⁹ or in the course of her business.¹⁰ The position of her husband as her agent,¹¹ her appointment of attorneys at law,¹² and her powers of attorney,¹³ are elsewhere discussed.

10. Distinction Between Personal Contracts of Married Women and Her Contracts Binding Her Property.—In considering the contracts of a married woman it is important to distinguish between her personal contracts, which bind her personally, and her contracts with reference to her separate property, which are binding thereupon. The distinction originated in equity, which recognized her separate ownership of property settled to her sole and separate use, and her capacity to change the same with her contracts. Such contracts were not enforceable against her personally, but only against the property, which became a kind of artificial person, in a proceeding in rem.¹⁴ And so, under statutes creating statutory separate estate, the courts continued to hold that her contracts to be valid should be "with reference to" her estate, and that mere personal contracts were void unless expressly authorized.¹⁵ The distinction, originally one both of capacity and of remedy, has in some States under the statutes become one of capacity only, the woman being liable as if un-

1. See part V of this article.

2. Spafford v. Warren, 47 Iowa 47, 51.

3. Walker v. Owen, 79 Mo. 563, 571.

4. Kelso v. Tabor, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 125, 128. "By the marriage, at common law, the husband and wife become one person, and the very being or legal existence of the woman is suspended during the marriage."

5. Rodemeyer v. Rodman, 5 Iowa 426, 427.

6. Montague v. Carneal, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 351, 352.

7. Wilder v. Abernethy, 54 Ala. 644, 646.

8. Hall v. Callahan, 66 Mo. 316, 324.

9. Vail v. Meyer, 71 Ind. 159, 165; Morrison v. Thistle, 67 Mo. 596, 600.

10. Paine v. Farr, 118 Mass. 74.

11. See vol. 9, pp. 837, 838, 839.

12. See vol. 9, pp. 837, 838, 839.

13. See vol. 9, pp. 837, 838, 839.

14. Pawley v. Vogel, 42 Mo. 291, 302. "She may pledge and bind that property, but none other; her general disability at law continues as before; but a court of equity may proceed in rem against that property, though not in personam against herself, and subject it to the payment of her separate debts."

15. Bailey v. Pearson, 29 N. H. 76, 87.

married on all contracts made with reference to her estate.¹ On this point, however, much confusion exists.

11. Implied Contracts of Married Women.—A promise will not be implied by law when the law would not recognize an express promise; so that, at common law, there was no implied assumpsit against a married woman;² and her payment during coverture on account of an antenuptial debt did not affect the running of the statute of limitations.³ But when she can contract she may be suable on the common counts.⁴ If she occupies premises, the law raises an implied promise to pay rent.⁵ If she orders materials, the law implies a contract to pay for them.⁶ But if she buys necessities, the implied promise is one of the husband's, for he is liable therefor.⁷ And if she receives money claimed by another, there is no implied promise to pay it back.⁸

12. Effect of Husband's Joiner in His Wife's Contracts.—The joinder of a husband with his wife does not, independently of statute, affect her capacity to contract, for the status of married women cannot be destroyed by agreement;⁹ so that the joint bond or note of husband and wife is the note or bond of the husband alone.¹⁰ But a husband's joinder in his wife's disposition of property to which he is entitled by his marriage rights makes such disposition effectual.¹¹ His joinder may be required by statute, and in such cases he may so contract as not to bind himself, this being the effect of his joinder in Louisiana.¹² When he joins, his wife is not discharged of her obligation by the adjudication that he is a bankrupt.¹³ Whether a wife must have her husband's joinder to a contract with reference to her separate property when she cannot dispose of such property without his joinder, does not seem to be settled; some cases seem to infer the negative, while others point towards the affirmative.¹⁴ It is a general rule that a married woman cannot bind by contract property which she cannot dispose of.¹⁵

13. Purchases and Sales of Married Women.—Generally speaking, a married woman cannot contract to buy or sell property, because a contract to buy is a mere personal contract, and a contract to

1. Kavanagh v. O'Neill, 54 Wis. 101, 106.

2. Tucker v. Cocke, 32 Miss. 184. "A feme covert is not competent to contract to act as the agent or bailiff of another so as to bind herself personally, and where she cannot expressly contract the law will not raise an implied assumpsit."

3. Farrar v. Bessey, 24 Vt. 89.

4. Hinkson v. Williams, 41 N. J. L. 35, 38; Spafford v. Warren, 47 Iowa 47, 51.

5. Ackley v. Westervelt, 86 N. Y. 448, 453.

6. Vail v. Meyer, 71 Ind. 160.

7. See vol. 9, p. 840.

8. Platt v. Hawkins, 43 Conn. 139, 143.

9. Stewart on M. & D., §§ 172, 181.

10. Cummings v. Miller, 3 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 146, 147.

11. Palmer v. Davis, 28 N. Y. 242, 247.

12. Lehman v. Barrow, 23 La. An. 185, 188.

13. Allers v. Forbes, 59 Md. 374, 376.

14. Matthews v. Murchison, 17 Fed. Rep. 760, 767; Pierce v. Osman, 79 Ind. 259, 260; Hall v. Eccleston, 37 Md. 510, 520; Townsend v. Chapin, 12 Allen (Mass.) 476, 479; Cozzens v. Whitney, 3 R. I. 79, 83.

15. See section 4 of part III, ante.

sell is not one of the modes usually specified for the disposition of married women's separate property. Still an agreement to sell is a contract with reference to the property, and may be valid as such.¹ But with a married woman's actual purchases and sales it is different. It is not one of her privileges to buy without paying, and therefore where she may acquire by purchase she may buy on credit, and be bound for the purchase money.² A promise to pay for separate property is a contract with respect to her separate property.³ So if she follows the modes prescribed she may sell her property, and is bound by her acceptance of any consideration, as when in part payment she took the release of a debt of her husband.⁴ If her sale is void and the purchaser has paid her the purchase money, it is generally settled that he must bear the loss.⁵ She may recover the property without restoring the purchase money;⁶ though in some cases this has been denied.⁷

14. Covenants and Bonds of Married Women.—Generally a married woman's seal adds nothing to the validity of her contract; it does not, for example, estop her as to the consideration.⁸ Her covenants, like her simple contracts, were void at common law; no judgment or damages could be recovered on them at law, nor has any case presented itself in which one of them has been enforced in equity.⁹ By statute she is sometimes expressly authorized to covenant, and on such a covenant she is liable at law.¹⁰ But statutes authorizing her to convey, to make deeds, etc., do not render valid her covenants in such deeds, etc.; so that a warranty deed of a married woman is no better than a quit-claim deed.¹¹ Still a covenant or title in a deed of her property may be valid as a contract "with respect" thereto;¹² and covenants for purposes

1. Baker v. Hathway, 5 Allen (Mass.) 103, 104. "The real estate was her sole and separate property, and she was under the statute authorized to sell and convey the same, having the assent of her husband in writing, or he joining with her in the conveyance. The husband joining . . . obviates the objection that the wife could not be bound by a contract to sell, because she could not make a written conveyance without the assent of her husband."

2. Dayton v. Walsh, 47 Wis. 113, 120; Thiemeyer v. Turnquist, 85 N. Y. 516, 521.

3. Messer v. Smyth, 58 N. H. 298, 299.

4. Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 Ohio St. 155, 165.

5. Sections 368, 412, Stewart on H. & W.

6. Alexander v. Salisbury, 37 Ala. 375; Wood v. Terry, 30 Ark. 385, 393; Oglesby v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164, 170; Glidden v. Strupler, 52 Pa. St. 400, 404;

McLaurin v. Wilson, 16 S. Car. 402, 410.

7. Pilcher v. Smith, 2 Head (Tenn.) 208, 211.

8. Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 573, 683. "The debts of a married woman, for which her separate estate is liable, arise from any transaction out of which a debt would arise, if she were a feme sole, except that she is not liable for a bond or covenant which she has signed and sealed, but which was given without any consideration, she not being estopped from denying the consideration in a court of equity."

9. Pilcher v. Smith, 2 Head (Tenn.) 208, 211.

10. Worthington v. Cooke, 52 Md. 297, 307.

11. Batsford v. Wilson, 75 Ill. 133, 134.

12. Richmond v. Tibbles, 26 Iowa 474, 481; Bosford v. Pearson, 7 Allen (Mass.) 504, 505. Not a covenant in her husband's deed. Griffin v. Sheffield, 38 Miss. 359, 392.

immediately connected with the use, etc., of her property may be valid under her implied powers.¹ There are cases in which a married woman has been held estopped by her covenants, though she could not have been held liable in damages for the breach thereof.² So her bonds were void;³ though in equity, one to secure purchase money was held valid as to the property purchased,⁴ and one expressly charging her separate property may be valid.⁵ Nor can she file a bond in a judicial proceeding unless expressly authorized.⁶

15. Promissory Notes of Married Women.—At common law the promissory note of a married woman was void;⁷ a mortgage for the sole purpose of securing it was void;⁸ if made jointly with another it was void as to her, but valid as to her copromissor;⁹ so as to a surety;¹⁰ it was equally void in the hands of bona fide assignees for value without notice.¹¹ By accepting a note from a married woman purchaser a vendor did not lose his lien.¹² Now a party endeavoring to enforce a promissory note must show that it falls within some equitable or statutory exception;¹³ in Michigan, for example, it must be shown that it was for something connected with her separate estate;¹⁴ in Louisiana, that it benefited her.¹⁵ Under an act enabling a married woman to contract as if sole, she may make a promissory note,¹⁶ and validly endorse a note of her husband's firm,¹⁷ and execute a note in blank,¹⁸ and be liable, though her husband joined with her and has been adjudged a bankrupt.¹⁹ Under an act enabling her to contract with reference to

1. Kolls v. De Leyer, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 208, 211; Houghton v. Milburn, 54 Wis. 554, 564.

2. Davis v. Tingle, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 593, 543; Fowler v. Shearer, 7 Mass. 14, 21; Wadleigh v. Glines, 6 N. H. 17; Hill v. West, 8 Ohio 222, 225; Fletcher v. Coleman, 2 Head (Tenn.) 384.

3. Wilson Sewing Machine Co. v. Fuller, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 480, 481; Huntley v. Whitner, 77 N. Car. 392, 393; Schnyder v. Noble, 94 Pa. St. 286, 289.

4. Schnyder v. Noble, 94 Pa. St. 286, 289.

5. Woolsey v. Brown, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 52, 53.

6. Ward v. Whitney, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 246; Woolsey v. Brown, 74 N. Y. 82, 84.

7. Taylor v. Boardman, 92 Ill. 566. "Prior to July 1st, 1874, a married woman living with her husband was totally incapacitated to give a note, with her husband or otherwise as surety, and could not give any binding authority to do any act essential to the making or delivery of the same." Vance v. Wells, 6 Ala. 737; Simpers

v. Sloan, 5 Cal. 457, 458; Shannon v. Canney, 44 N. H. 593, 594.

8. Hodges v. Price, 18 Fla. 342, 345; Sperry v. Dickinson, 82 Ind. 132, 135.

9. Robinson v. Robinson, 11 Bush. (Ky.) 174, 179.

10. Willingham v. Leake, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 453, 457.

11. Kenton v. McClellan, 43 Mich. 564, 565; Cooley v. Barcroft, 43 N. J. L. 363.

12. Case in note 1, above.

13. Buhler v. Jennings, 49 Mich. 538, 539; Saratoga Co. Bank v. Pruyn, 90 N. Y. 250, 256.

14. See preceding note.

15. Taylor v. Carlisle, 2 La. An. 579, 580.

16. Messer v. Smyth, 58 N. H. 298; Marlow v. Barlew, 53 Cal. 456, 459; Wood v. Orford, 52 Cal. 412; Kenworthy v. Sawyer, 125 Mass. 28.

17. Kenworthy v. Sawyer, 125 Mass. 28.

18. Hord v. Taubman, 79 Mo. 101, 103.

19. Kenton Ins. Co. v. Hill, 125 Mass. 587.

her separate property, a note with reference to something else is not valid;¹ but a note for repairs on the same is valid.² In equity her note might be a charge, as any other promise to pay might.³ At common law she could in her own name endorse a note drawn to her order, with her husband's consent, and her said endorsement passed a good title,⁴ and his said consent could be indirectly proved;⁵ but she could not be liable as endorser.⁶ Under a statute enabling her to dispose of her separate property jointly with her husband, his joint endorsement of her separate note was not required, but only his consent express or implied.⁷ And she can be liable as endorser only when she can be liable as maker.⁸ Her acceptance of a bill given for the debt of another is void, where she cannot bind herself for the debt of another.⁹

16. Releases and Receipts of Married Women.—A release is a contract, and works as an estoppel, while a receipt is a mere statement—a mere admission of payment, and not conclusive. When a married woman is entitled to certain property, her sole receipt therefor, unless impeached, is a perfectly good discharge;¹⁰ the receipt of her husband, except as her agent in fact, being on the other hand, worthless.¹¹ But a married woman is not bound by a seal, is not estopped, where she could not contract;¹² and as if she accepted part of her property for the whole, or something in place of her legal rights, she would really dispose of such rights

1. Kenton Ins. Co. v. McClellan, 43 Mich. 564, 568.

2. Parker v. Kane, 4 Allen (Mass.) 346.

3. Hord v. Taubman, 79 Mo. 101, 103.

4. Stevens v. Beals, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 291, 293.

5. McClain v. Weidemeyer, 25 Mo. 364, 367.

6. Norris v. Lantz, 18 Md. 260.

7. Whitridge v. Barry, 42 Md. 140; Trader v. Lowe, 45 Md. 1.

8. Shannon v. Canney, 44 N. H. 592, 593.

9. Cooley v. Barcroft, 43 N. J. L. 363, 366.

Promissory Note.—A note given by a married woman, not for necessities for herself or family, and for which credit was not given her, is void in Kentucky. Stevens v. Deering (Ky. 1888), 9 S. West. Rep. 292.

A married woman cannot claim that a note executed by her as surety for her husband was without consideration, on the ground that it was for a loan previously made to him, where the money had been handed to him on condition that she was to sign the note, and it was all one transaction. Sypert v. Harrison, 11 S. West. Rep. 435.

In Connecticut a married woman is not estopped by a note executed jointly with her husband which recites that the said sum is procured for her benefit, where the real consideration is a loan to the husband by the payee. Kilbourn v. Brown, 56 Conn. 149. Note for repairs of house good in Kentucky. Baird v. Bruning, 84 Ky. 645. Note substantially as surety for husband is void in Michigan. Littlefield v. Dingwall, 71 Mich. 223. So in Mississippi. Enochs v. Newton, 65 Miss. 86. And in South Carolina. Livingston v. Shingler, 30 S. Car. 159. Mere personal note void in South Carolina. Booker v. Wingo, 29 S. Car. 116. There as in Tennessee note must be "with reference" to separate estate. Warren v. Freeman, 85 Tenn. 513; Jordan v. Keeble, 85 Tenn. 412; Eckerly v. McGhee, 85 Tenn. 661.

10. Gore v. Carl, 47 Conn. 291, 293; Windsor v. Bell, 61 Ga. 671; Nevins v. Gourley, 95 Ill. 206, 213; Trader v. Lowe, 45 Md. 1; Read v. Earle, 12 Gray (Mass.) 423, 425; Early v. Rolfe, 95 Pa. St. 58, 60.

11. Rieper v. Rieper, 79 Mo. 352, 458.

12. Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 572, 583; Powell's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 403, 413.

in whole or in part, her release is not valid except as a receipt unless she can contract as if unmarried,¹ or has full power of disposition over the rights released.² At common law she could give neither release nor receipt, as her legal existence was gone, and her present property rights vested in her husband.³

17. Rents, Repairs and Family Expenses.—At common law a married woman could, of course, not lease property, and in her leaseholds her husband had very full rights.⁴ When she can lease by statute expressly she is liable for the rent at law.⁵ A lease is, in fact, the purchase of a term, and a married woman is liable for the rent just as she would be for purchase money.⁶ If she can lease, she is liable on an implied promise for the use and occupation of premises which she holds after the expiration of the lease, and this though her husband and family are living with her.⁷ For repairs on her property at common law she was in no way liable,⁸ and even for repairs on her equitable separate estate she was liable only if she made the contract in such a way as to bind her said estate.⁹ From her mere knowledge that repairs were being made on her property at her husband's request, no promise on her part to pay therefor can be implied.¹⁰ But when she is collecting the rents of her separate property, and allows out of them for repairs, she is bound.¹¹ So a contract for repairs is beneficial to her estate,¹² and is a contract with reference thereto,¹³ and is a contract which, owing to her ownership of her separate property, she may by implication make.¹⁴ From a purchase by the wife of family supplies, a promise to pay on the part of the husband and not of the wife is implied.¹⁵ If she expressly contracts to pay therefor, she is liable only if she is liable generally on her contracts, or expressly charges her estate.¹⁶ For a purchase

1. See § 371, Stewart on H. and W.

2. Consult preceding and following sections of this article and that on HUSBAND AND WIFE, in vol. 9.

3. Mobley v. Leophart, 47 Ala. 257, 261; Kidwell v. Kirkpatrick, 70 Mo. 214, 216.

4. See pp. 842, 843 of vol. 9 of this work

5. Cruzen v. McKaig, 57 Md. 454, 462. "But by statute she is enabled, as if she were a feme sole, to bind herself by any covenant that runs with or relates to the estate demised; and as we have said, there can be no reason why an estate for a term of years, or of greater extent, may not be conveyed to a married woman jointly with another . . . and obligated herself in the form authorized by the statute, as if she were feme sole."

6. Bush v. Babbitt, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 213, 214.

7. Ackley v. Westervelt, 86 N. Y. 448, 453.

8. Crane v. Kelley, 7 Allen (Mass.) 250, 251.

9. Wilson v. Jones, 46 Md. 357. "We have carefully examined the decisions in England and in this country, and have reached the conclusion that a married woman having a separate estate, cannot affect that separate estate, unless the obligation sought to be enforced presents upon its face some evidence of the intent to charge the estate, or there is evidence aliunde tending to prove such intent."

10. Bickford v. Dane, 58 N. H. 185, 186.

11. Cheney v. Pierce, 38 Vt. 515.

12. Batchelder v. Sargent, 47 N. H. 262, 266.

13. Vail v. Meyer, 71 Ind. 159, 164.

14. Parker v. Kane, 4 Allen (Mass.) 346.

15. Shaw v. Thompson, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 198, 200.

16. Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 572, 661.

of family necessities is not of itself a contract with reference to her separate estate,¹ nor is it a contract which she can make by virtue of her powers implied from her ownership of her property.² In some States her property is made jointly liable with her husband's for all family supplies, but this is a liability of her property and not of herself.³

18. Endorsements, Suretyships, Contracts of Married Women.—At common law a married woman could not be a surety because she could not contract at all.⁴ In equity, though in most States a contract made with intent to charge equitable separate property therewith is enforceable, even if made for the benefit of another, in some States such contracts are enforced only if beneficial to the woman or the property, and suretyship contracts are void.⁵ But the general rule is that all deeds, mortgages, etc., of a married woman, made in accordance with the law, are valid, no matter whom they benefit;⁶ for a general power or enabling act does not limit a married woman to contracts for her benefit.⁷ But some statutes expressly except suretyship contracts, and under these a contract of a married woman jointly with another for his debt is void as to her;⁸ nor is a contract between her and her husband any consideration in favor of the payee for her endorsement of her husband's note.⁹ And a suretyship contract is not a contract "with reference," etc., to her separate property, unless it is charged thereon;¹⁰ nor is it a contract which she is empowered to make by implication from her power to hold, enjoy, etc.¹¹ Her acceptance of a bill of exchange for goods sold another is a suretyship contract;¹² but her liability as stockholder is not the liability of a surety.¹³ The rules are the same whether a wife goes surety for her husband or for a stranger, and her liabilities in the former case have already been fully discussed.¹⁴

IV. DEEDS OF MARRIED WOMEN—1. At Common Law.—At common law a married woman has no legal existence and no present prop-

1. Schneider v. Garland, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 350.

2. Thomas v. Passage, 54 Ind. 106, 114.

3. Frost v. Parker, 65 Iowa 178.

4. Schmidt v. Postel, 63 Ill. 58. "In an action against a husband and wife, upon a promissory note executed by both of them, the wife pleaded in bar that at the time of the making the promises, etc., mentioned, she was and still is the wife of her codefendant, and that the note was given for hogs bought by her husband; that the debt was his, and that she signed the note only as security for him, and such note was the only cause of action, the court below sustaining a demurrer to the plea. Held, that the court erred, the plea presenting a complete bar as to the wife."

5. Perkins v. Elliott, 23 N. J. Eq. 526, 528, 533.

6. Comegys v. Clarke, 44 Md. 108, 111.

7. Hart v. Grigsby, 14 Bush (Ky.) 542; Mayo v. Hutchinson, 57 Me. 546; Major v. Holmes, 124 Mass. 108; Witte v. Wolfe, 16 S. Car. 256, 268.

8. Brent v. Mount, 65 Ga. 92, 93.

9. Reed v. Buys, 44 Mich. 80, 82.

10. State Sav. Bank v. Scott, 10 Neb. 83, 86.

11. Russell v. People's Sav. Bank, 39 Mich. 671; Huyler v. Atwood, 26 N. J. Eq. 504; Kavanagh v. O'Neill, 53 Wis. 101, 105.

12. Cooley v. Bancroft, 43 N. J. L. 363, 365.

13. Hobart v. Johnson, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 359, 362.

14. See section 134, Stewart on H. &

erty rights, and therefore her deed, whether of dower or of her own property, was, like her other contracts, a mere nullity.¹ She could be barred of her dower² or divested of her property only by fine and common recovery.³ Fines and common recoveries have never existed in this country, and now do not exist anywhere,⁴ but statutes have taken their place.⁵ In some States, independently of statute, the joint deed of husband and wife has always been recognized as if authorized by the common law.⁶ Whenever a wife held the position of an unmarried woman, as when her husband was civilly dead,⁷ or had abandoned the realm,⁸ or as to her equitable separate property,⁹ she could deed her own property as if unmarried.

2. Under Statutes.—Everywhere statutes have been passed relating to married women's deeds of dower, of the reversionary interest in her realty, and of her statutory separate estate. These are statutes expressly referring to married women, as the general statutes do not apply to their deeds,¹⁰ unless they deed as if unmarried.¹¹ The general rule is that a married woman can convey her property, except her equitable separate estate, only in the mode prescribed by statute.¹² The deed must be acknowledged and certified to substantially as required by the statutes, or it is mere waste paper.¹³

W., and articles on HUSBAND AND WIFE, and MARRIAGE in this work.

1. See, generally, articles in this work on Husband and Wife, Marriage, Stewart on Husband & Wife, §§ 402-404, and Gillespie v. Worford, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 632, 638.

2. Leonis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52, 55; Hartley v. Ferrell, 9 Fla. 374, 378; Bressler v. Kent, 61 Ill. 426; 14 Am. Rep. 67; Lane v. McKeen, 15 Me. 304, 305.

3. Lawrence v. Heister, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 371, 377; Helms v. Franciscus, 2 Bland (Md.) 544, 563; 20 Am. Dec. 402; Bool v. Mix, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 119, 129; 31 Am. Dec. 285.

4. Martin v. Dwelly, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 9, 12; 21 Am. Dec. 245.

5. Last note and Lawrence v. Heister, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 371, 377.

6. Manchester v. Hough, 5 Mason (U. S.) 67, 68; Fowler v. Shearer, 7 Mass. 14; Davey v. Turner, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 11; Albany Fire Ins. Co. v. Bay, 4 Const. (S. Car.) 9.

7. Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 108. "The law seems to be settled that when the wife is left without maintenance or support by the husband, has traded as a feme sole and has obtained credit as such, she ought to be liable for her debts. . . . And the same reason applying where the husband had abjured the realm, the wife, in that case, was allowed to sue as a widow for her dower. In such case she has been permitted to alien her land, without her husband, and is exempted from the disabilities of coverture."

8. See last note and Danner v. Berthold, 11 Mo. App. 351, 355; Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 Ohio St. 155, 161.

9. See note 7, and Miller v. Newton, 23 Cal. 554, 567.

10. Applegate v. Gracy, 9 Dana (Ky.) 215, 224; Belle v. Lyle, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 44. See DEEDS.

11. Edwards v. Schoeneman, 104 Ill. 278, 283.

12. Lewis v. Waters, 3 H. & McH. (Md.) 430. "No deed of lands from a feme covert can be valid and operative to pass her interests therein, unless her acknowledgment is made according to the act of 1715, ch. 47. This act prescribes a precise and particular form which must be substantially complied with." And see Leonis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52, 57; Schroyer v. Nickell, 55 Mo. 264, 267; Gilchrist v. Buie, 1 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) Eq. 346, 359; Brown v. Farren, 3 Ohio 140, 155; Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 Ohio St. 155.

13. It is the observance of the statute which gives the ability. Hepburn v.

3. Of Equitable Separate Property.—When a married woman has the capacity to deed her equitable separate property she executes the deed, unless the settlement provides otherwise, as if unmarried.¹ As to whether or not she has the capacity there are three rules: (1) That she has the capacity unless the settlement takes it away;² (2) that she has not the capacity unless the settlement gives it;³ and (3) that she has the capacity to deed away her estate during coverture, but not her reversion.⁴ Her equitable property, which is not separate, she must deed as she does her legal estates of the same kind.⁵

4. Of Statutory Separate Property.—The general rule is that a married woman has no capacity to dispose of her statutory separate lands unless this is expressly given by statute.⁶ The power to dispose is not, for example, included within the power to "own enjoy, and possess, as if unmarried,"⁷ and when the capacity is not expressly given her she must dispose of her statutory separate property in the same way as she would dispose of property held as at common law,⁸ and her invalid deed would have no effect.⁹ If the statute expressly gives her the power to dispose of her property, but prescribes some particular mode of disposition—some particular formalities—the deed must substantially conform with the requirements of the statute or it will be wholly void.¹⁰ If the statute expressly gives her the power of disposition, but names no particular mode of execution, etc., she may execute her deed as if unmarried,¹¹ and if it is imperfect it may be confirmed,¹¹ and will be valid in equity just as the imperfect deed of an unmarried woman is.¹¹

Dubois, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 345, 374; Lane v. Dolick, 6 McLean (U. S.) 200; Leonis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52, 57; Mariner v. Saunders, 10 Ill. 113; Cross v. Everts, 28 Tex. 523, 532.

1. American Home Missionary Soc. v. Wadhams, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 597, 602. "Hence it follows, that in relation to a separate estate held by a feme covert, without the prohibition of anticipation, she is, to all intents and purposes, a feme sole, and so she is treated in all the books." Essex v. Atkins, 14 Ves. 542; Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 572, 578.

2. Chew v. Beall, 13 Md. 348, 360.

3. Swift v. Castle, 23 Ill. 209, 222.

4. Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 573, 682, 683.

5. Clayton v. Rose, 87 N. Car. 106, 110; Young v. Young, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 461, 477; Hawley v. Twyman, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 728.

6. Swift v. Luce, 27 Me. 285. "The statute of 1844, ch. 117, entitled 'An act to secure to married women their rights in property,' has not so altered the common law as to enable a feme covert to sell her personal property without the assent of her husband.

There does not appear to have been any language used in the act with a design to remove the disabilities imposed by the common law upon a feme covert, and to enable her, contrary to its rules, to make sales and purchases of property."

7. Parent v. Callerand, 64 Ill. 97, 99.

8. Bressler v. Kent, 61 Ill. 426. "The act of February 21st, 1861, 'to protect married women in their separate property,' does not go to the extent of authorizing married women to sell real estate without concurrence of the husband. Such power cannot be implied, but must be given in direct terms."

9. Lucas v. Cobbs, 1 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) L. 228, 232; Rogers v. Higgins, 48 Ill. 211, 216.

10. Silliman v. Cummins, 13 Ohio 116, 118.

11. Edwards v. Schoeneman, 104 Ill. 278, 284; Scranton v. Stewart, 52 Ind. 68,

5. Joinder of Husband.—The husband's joinder in his wife's deed is generally necessary to render it valid,¹ and is unnecessary only when she is expressly authorized to deed "as if sole," or "as if unmarried."² At common law he had an actual estate to convey, and it would seem that he had to join as a cograntor;³ but when the whole estate is vested in the wife and his assent is required to prevent imposition, his mere signature to the deed is enough,⁴ and he need not be named in the body of the deed.⁵ But his assent cannot be proved by parol, although, where his assent was required in writing, his joinder in a mortgage note was held sufficient, though he did not join in the mortgage at all. The joint deed of husband and wife need not be executed at the same time and place. Whether he shall join is discretionary with him, and he cannot be compelled to join; so it is a personal right and cannot be delegated; nor can he honestly claim compensation for joining. His joinder is not necessary in his wife's deed of her equitable separate estate, when she has the power to convey as if sole, nor need he join in her deed executed under a special power. Where, by statute, a husband must join in his wife's deeds, she cannot without him make a deed good in equity, or a good agreement to convey.

6. Execution, Acknowledgment and Recording of Married Women's Deeds.—When a married woman executes a deed under a power she must strictly conform with the terms of the power;⁶ she must execute it herself; she would not be bound by another signing her name in her presence,⁷ nor by another filling in blanks left by her,⁸ and she must acknowledge it in conformity with the power if the power refers to the mode of acknowledgment.⁹ When a privy examination apart from her husband is required, omission thereof is fatal.¹⁰

89; Silliman v. Cummins, 13 Ohio 116, 119.

1. Alexander v. Saulsbury, 37 Ala. 375, 377; Hartley v. Ferrell, 9 Fla. 374, 378; Bressler v. Kent, 61 Ill. 426; Scott v. Scott, 13 Ind. 225; Shumaker v. Johnson, 35 Iowa 33, 35; Jewett v. Davis, 10 Allen (Mass.) 68, 71; Buchanan v. Hazzard, 95 Pa. St. 240, 243; Young v. Snyder, 3 Grant (Pa.) 150, 151.

2. Rake v. Lawshee, 24 N. J. L. 613, 616.

3. Blythe v. Dargoin, 68 Ala. 370, 375.

4. Pease v. Bridge, 49 Conn. 58, 61; Evans v. Summerlin, 19 Fla. 858, 861; Hills v. Bearse, 9 Allen (Mass.) 403, 406; Stone v. Montgomery, 35 Miss. 83, 107; Elliott v. Sleeper, 2 N. H. 525, 529.

5. Chapman v. Miller, 128 Mass. 269, 271. "In the case at bar, the wife, having acquired her title by deed since the statute of 1857, might convey it without her husband joining as a grantor, and the insertion of his name in the last clause of the mortgage, with his signature and seal, manifest the 'assent in writing,' which was all that was requisite to make it valid."

6. Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (U. S.)

24. "A paper executed under seal for the husband's benefit, by husband and wife, acknowledged in separate form by the wife, and meant to be a mortgage of her separate lands, but with blanks left for the insertion of the mortgagee's name and sum borrowed, and to be filled up by the husband, is no deed as respects the wife, when afterwards filled up by the husband and given to a lender of money, though one bona fide and without knowledge of the mode of execution."

7. Hord v. Taubman, 79 Mo. 101, 104, and reasoning in above note.

8. See note 1.

9. Cross v. Everts, 28 Tex. 523.

10. Pratt v. Battels, 28 Vt. 685; 2

An examination apart means an examination out of the presence of the husband so that he cannot communicate with his wife by word, look or motion.¹ The husband and wife need not acknowledge at the same time.² If a married woman has full power to deed her property and no special acknowledgment is required, the effect of defects in the acknowledgment is the same as in the case of unmarried women.³

The Certificate.—The certificate is the legal evidence of the execution of the deed,⁴ and it must show that everything has been done which is necessary to the validity of a married woman's deed.⁵ The certificate is prima facie evidence of all that it states;⁶ it is not conclusive as against the wife,⁷ so that she may show, for example, that there was in fact no prior examination,⁸ except, perhaps, where the grantee was a party to, and had no notice of, the defect,⁹ and except as to bona fide purchasers for value.¹⁰ Without a proper certificate the deed is absolutely void;¹¹ an in-

Scribner Dow., ch. 13; Hepburn v. Dubois, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 345, 374.

1. Belo v. Mayes, 79 Mo. 67. "The examination of the wife separate and apart from the husband, required by the statute, means an examination out of the presence of the husband, so that he cannot communicate by word, look or motion."

2. Newell v. Anderson, 7 Ohio St. 12, 16. Compare Adams v. Buford, 6 Dana (Ky.) 406, 408.

3. Edwards v. Schoeneman, 104 Ill. 278, 284; Scranton v. Stewart, 52 Ind. 68, 89; Silliman v. Cummins, 13 Ohio 116, 119.

4. Young v. Duvall, 109 U. S. 573, 577. "The certificate of the officer states every fact essential under the statute to make the deed, upon its being delivered for record, as effectual in law as if Mrs. Young was an unmarried woman. The duties of that officer were plainly defined by statute. It was incumbent upon him to explain the deed fully to the wife, and to ascertain from her whether she willingly signed, sealed and delivered the same, and wished not to retract it. The responsibility was upon him to guard her against coercion or undue influence upon the part of the husband, in respect to the execution and delivery of the deed. To that end he was required to examine her privily and apart from the husband. These facts were to be manifested by a certificate under his hand and seal."

5. Gill v. Fauntleroy, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 177; S. B. Toulmin v. Heidelberg, 32 Miss. 268; Bagby v. Emberson, 79 Mo. 139; Browder v. Brownder, 14 Ohio St. 589; Mullins v. Weaver, 57 Tex. 5, 6.

6. Carpenter v. Dexter, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 513; Rhoades v. Selin, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 718; Smith v. McGuire, 67 Ala. 34, 37; Blackman v. Hawks, 89 Ill. 512; Heeter v. Glasgow, 79 Pa. St. 79.

7. Russell v. Baptist Theological Union, 73 Ill. 337. "It is a rule that the acknowledgment of a deed cannot be impeached for anything but fraud, and in such case the evidence must be clear and convincing beyond a reasonable doubt; and whilst the making of a false certificate is a fraud upon the party against whom it is perpetrated, yet the mere evidence of the party purporting to have made the acknowledgment cannot overcome the officer's certificate, nor will such evidence, slightly corroborated, overcome it." Jackson v. Hayner, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 469, 472; Central Bank v. Copeland, 18 Md. 305; Fisher v. Meister, 24 Mich. 447; Marsh v. Mitchell, 26 N. J. Eq. 497; Priest v. Cummings, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 617, 631.

8. See above note.

9. Davis v. Kennedy, 58 Tex. 516; Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 24, 34; O'Ferrall v. Simplot, 4 Iowa 381; Dodge v. Hollingshead, 6 Minn. 1; Stone v. Montgomery, 35 Miss. 83; Williams v. Robson, 6 Ohio St. 510, 515; Baldwin v. Snowden, 11 Ohio St. 203; Shrader v. Decker, 9 Pa. St. 14; Hartley v. Frosh, 6 Tex. 208; Harkins v. Forsythe, 11 Leigh (Va.) 294.

10. Reasoning in above cases.

11. Smith v. McGuire, 67 Ala. 34, 37; Leonis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52, 56.

sufficient certificate cannot be helped out by parol evidence,¹ or reformed in equity.²

7. Confirmation of Married Women's Deeds.—If a married woman's deed is defective it may be confirmed, if confirmable, in three ways: by act of party, by statute, and by suit in equity.

(1) By Act of Party.—If a married woman's deed is imperfectly executed, it is usually utterly void, and cannot, therefore, be ratified by her;³ her subsequent assent to it, during⁴ or after coverture,⁵ or her parol adoption of it,⁶ or her declarations of her willingness to do everything necessary to make it valid,⁷ give it no validity. To give it effect it must be re-acknowledged and delivered;⁸ it must be made a new deed;⁹ and in such case it does not relate back, but takes effect only from the date of such re-acknowledgment and delivery;¹⁰ and so it is defeated by an intermediate valid deed of the same property.¹¹ In cases where the deed, though defective, is executed by her while acting with the powers of a feme sole, it is not wholly invalid and may therefore be confirmed.¹²

(2) By Curative Statutes.—As a general rule, statutes curing the defects in deeds of married women are void;¹³ but in some States they have been held valid,¹⁴ especially where the State constitution authorized them.¹⁵ There seems to be no reason why a statute

1. Jourdan v. Jourdan, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 268, 274; Pendleton v. Bulton, 3 Conn. 406, 412; Martin v. Hargardine, 46 Ill. 322; Smith v. Hunt, 13 Ohio St. 260; Harty v. Ladd, 3 Oreg. 353.

2. Barnett v. Shackleford, 6 J. J. Marsh (Ky.) 532; 22 Am. Dec. 100; Lindley v. Smith, 58 Ill. 250; Wannall v. Kem, 51 Mo. 150.

3. Buchanan v. Hazzard, 95 Pa. St. 240, 243. "Nothing is better settled than that a deed by a married woman without joining her husband is absolutely void; and the evidence of the husband's verbal assent could not help the matter. . . . Nothing but a new deed, duly executed and acknowledged, could avail."

4. Adams v. Buford, 6 Dana (Ky.) 406, 408; Watson v. Bailey, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 470.

5. Price v. Hart, 29 Mo. 171.

6. Same case, and § 366, Stewart on Husband and Wife.

7. Adams v. Buford, 6 Dana (Ky.) 406, 408.

8. See note 1 above and Smith v. Shackleford, 9 Dana (Ky.) 452, 476; Boatman v. Curry, 25 Mo. 433; Doe v. Howland, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 277, 284; 18 Am. Dec. 445; Newell v. Anderson, 7 Ohio St. 12, 16; Jourdan v. Jourdan, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 268, 276.

9. Miller v. Shackleford, 3 Dana (Ky.) 289, 297.

10. Doe v. Howland, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 277, 284; 18 Am. Dec. 445; Buchanan v. Hazzard, 95 Pa. St. 240, 243.

11. Jackson v. Stevens, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 110. "A deed executed by a feme covert is not binding upon her, until acknowledged, and her subsequent acknowledgment does not relate back to the time of the acknowledgment of the deed. So, where a husband and wife execute a deed for land of the wife, but which she does not then acknowledge, and the husband and wife afterwards execute another deed of the same land, which is acknowledged by the wife, and the wife then acknowledges the first deed, the title to the land is vested in the grantee in the second deed."

12. Spafford v. Warren, 47 Iowa 47, 51.

13. Loomis v. Brush, 36 Mich. 40, 46. "It is very well settled that such an instrument is of no more validity as an actual conveyance in equity than at law. . . . There can be no ground for claiming that a deed absolutely void in law when made is validated as a conveyance by the subsequent laws which enable married women to take and enjoy property as if sole."

14. Randall v. Kruger, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 137, 149.

15. Purcell v. Goshorn, 17 Ohio St. 641, 646; 49 Am. Dec. 448; Smith v. Turpin, 20 Ohio St. 478, 491.

should be able to cure a defect which neither the parties nor a court of equity could remedy.¹

(3) By Courts of Equity.—Although it lies within the ordinary jurisdiction of courts of equity to carry out the intentions of parties, and to correct, reform and compel a re-execution of an imperfect deed, this jurisdiction is founded, not on the validity of the deed, as a deed, but on the evidence which it gives of a contract between the parties, on its validity as a contract to give a deed.² This jurisdiction depends, therefore, on the capacity of the parties to the contract to give and take a deed, and as married women have usually no general capacity to contract, and as a contract to execute a statutory power could not be specifically enforced,³ courts of equity have not been in the habit of reforming or giving effect to the imperfect deeds of married women.⁴ Generally a married woman's deed invalid at law is equally invalid in equity.⁵ When she can convey only under a power which prescribes a certain mode, if that mode is not pursued the power is no more executed in equity than at law, and if equity enforced the deed it would give the grantor an additional power.⁶ But where the grantor has the power of a feme sole to convey, independently of the mode followed, equity will reform a defect and compel a conveyance in accordance with the intentions of the parties.⁷ And as a deed of property is a contract with reference thereto, wherever such contracts are valid, although the grantee may perhaps not have a specific performance of an imperfect deed, he may probably enforce it as a contract against the property,⁸ and recover any purchase money paid thereupon.⁹ For the reasons above

1. See note 2 above and Silliman v. Cummins, 13 Ohio 116, 119.

2. Gebb v. Rose, 40 Md. 387, 393. "But clearly no relief can be afforded. The instrument involved is without effect even as a contract to convey, the least objectionable footing upon which it could be placed." Carr v. Williams, 10 Ohio 305, 310.

3. McBryde v. Wilkinson, 29 Ala. 662; Wilks v. Burns, 60 Md. 64, 71.

4. Holland v. Moon, 39 Ark. 120, 124.

5. Williams v. Walker, 9 Q. B. D. 576, 581; Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 24, 34; Holland v. Moon, 39 Ark. 120, 124; Leonis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52; Breit v. Yeaton, 101 Ill. 242, 262; Stevens v. Parish, 29 Ind. 260, 263; Grapengether v. Fijervary, 9 Iowa 163; Gebb v. Rose, 40 Md. 387, 394; Bagby v. Emberson, 79 Mo. 139; Marvin v. Smith, 46 N. Y. 571, 574; Purcell v. Goshorn, 17 Ohio 105, 124; Roseburgh v. Sterling, 27 Pa. St. 292; Wright v. Dufield, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 218.

6. See Leonis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52, 55.

7. Edwards v. Schoeneman, 104 Ill. 278. "Under the acts of 1869, and section 18 of the act of 1872, relating to conveyances, a married woman might, by joining with her husband in the execution of a deed or mortgage relating to the sale or disposition of her real estate, bind and conclude herself, the same as a feme sole. . . . Since the passage of the act of 1869, in regard to conveyances, a court of equity may correct a mistake in the description of the property in a deed or mortgage of a married woman's land."

8. Felkner v. Tighe, 39 Ark. 357. "A married woman cannot make an executory contract to convey land which will bind her or her heirs; but if her vendee, under such contract, should make payments on the land, such payments will be a charge upon the land, enforceable in equity, upon her refusal to convey." See also Shroyer v. Nickell, 55 Mo. 264, 269; Danner v. Berthold, 11 Mo. App. 351, 358.

9. Inference from above cases.

given, equity will not prevent a married woman from setting² up the validity of a deed which in equity and good conscience she ought to recognize, in cases where it would not confirm it;¹ though there are a few cases where equity has upheld the deed of a married woman to prevent great injustice.²

8. Avoidance of Married Women's Deeds.—Although the deed of a married woman be perfect on its face, she may show that in fact it was obtained by fraud or duress, or was improperly executed, and that it is therefore void.³ As to her right to do this as against a party to the fraud,⁴ or any party with notice of the defect or fraud,⁵ or with notice of such facts as should have put him on his guard,⁶ or on whose behalf the husband has perpetrated a fraud,⁷ there is no doubt; and if she in fact never executed the deed, and it is a forgery, she may impeach it as against anyone,⁸ but if, though she executed the deed improperly, the certificate is perfect, she cannot, it seems, impeach it as against purchasers without notice, it being a general rule, founded on public policy, that defects of execution cannot be alleged against bona fide purchasers or assignees for value if the certificate be perfect,⁹ as to them, in such cases, the certificate is conclusive.¹⁰ The officer who made the certificate cannot impeach the same,¹¹ nor will the unsupported testimony of the wife be sufficient to overcome the certificate.¹² If she acknowledged the signature, she cannot say she did not sign the deed;¹³ nor can she allege that she did not

1. Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 24, 34; Alexander v. Saulsbury, 37 Ala. 375, 378; Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164, 170; Glidden v. Strupler, 52 Pa. St. 400.

2. Cahill v. Martin, 7 Law Rec. 361, 379; Reis v. Lawrence, 63 Cal. 129; Patterson v. Lawrence, 90 Ill. 174; Glass v. Warwick, 40 Pa. St. 140.

3. Allen v. Lenoir, 53 Miss. 321, 331. A proper acknowledgment is an essential part of the execution of a conveyance of her land by a married woman. The bill charges the execution of the mortgage by Mr. and Mrs. Lenoir. In her answer, she denies that he ever acknowledged it. There is nothing but the official certificate of her acknowledgment to contradict her answer, which is supported by a number of circumstances which fully sustain it."

4. Davis v. Kennedy, 58 Tex. 516, 9.

5. Eyster v. Hathaway, 50 Ill. 521, 4; Ford v. Teal, 2 Bush (Ky.) 156; Marsh v. Mitchell, 26 N. J. Eq. 497; Chrader v. Decker, 9 Pa. St. 14, 16.

6. Louden v. Blythe, 27 Pa. St. 22, 25.

7. Central Bank v. Copeland, 18 Md. 5, 318.

8. Allen v. Lenoir, 53 Miss. 321, 331; Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 24, 34; Burns v. Lynde, 6 Allen (Mass.) 305, 312; Conover v. Porter, 14 Ohio St. 450.

9. De Arnaz v. Escandon, 59 Cal. 486, 489. "The grantee may properly regard her execution and acknowledgment of the instrument as evidence of her consent to its delivery; and if, without notice of her dissent, it is delivered by the husband, she cannot afterwards be permitted to question his right to do so without allowing a fraud to be practiced against the grantee. Were it otherwise, a large majority of all the deeds executed by husband and wife within this State, have never been delivered by the wife and would not bind her." Kerr v. Russell, 69 Ill. 666, 670; 18 Am. Rep. 38; Johnston v. Wallace, 53 Miss. 331, 337; Baldwin v. Snowden, 11 Ohio St. 203, 212; Hall v. Patterson, 51 Pa. St. 289.

10. Johnston v. Wallace, 53 Miss. 331, 337.

11. Central Bank v. Copeland, 18 Md. 305, 318; Harkins v. Forsythe, 11 Leigh (Va.) 294.

12. Kerr v. Russell, 69 Ill. 666.

13. Same case.

read or understand the deed if she had full opportunities for so doing, and alleges no fraudulent concealment;¹ nor can she deny that she assented when she silently did so;² her declarations made at the time of the execution are evidence as part of the res gesta.³ If she has duly executed the deed, and has left it with her husband, she cannot deny his authority to deliver it⁴ (but the delivery must be made before her death).⁵ She cannot be estopped from impeaching her deed by her assent thereto during coverture, or by her mere delivery thereof, or even by her retention of the purchase money; she cannot do indirectly by matter in pais what she can do directly only by deed duly acknowledged and recorded.⁶ As to conveyances to her husband, owing to their relation, he is treated much as he would be were he her trustee, and must show good faith throughout.⁷

9. Married Women's Powers of Attorney.—Independently of express statute, a married woman may, where she has over her equitable separate property the powers of a feme sole convey it by power of attorney;⁸ but she cannot through an attorney execute even a private power,⁹ or release her dower,¹⁰ or convey her property held as at common law,¹¹ unless, as to the last, owing to her husband's civil death, etc., she has the capacities of a feme sole.¹² In some States powers of attorney are expressly regulated by statute;¹³ but whether a married woman is ever authorized by implication to convey through an attorney is not settled, and the difficult question relating to this subject is, whether under the statutes authorizing her to convey her statutory sepa-

1. Comegys v. Clarke, 44 Md. 108, 111. "The paper was merely handed to her with the remark that there was another paper to which her name was wanted. She could read and write and had every opportunity to ascertain what the paper was before executing it, but she neither read it herself nor asked any explanation from either her husband or the justice of the peace, who was present, as to the character or contents of the paper. Under these circumstances she has no right to relief by injunction to restrain the appellant from a foreclosure of the mortgage upon the ground that its execution was procured by fraud and deceit."

2. Rexford v. Rexford, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 6, 9.

3. Louden v. Blythe, 16 Pa. St. 532, 542.

4. Ackert v. Pultz, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 386, 388; Baldwin v. Snowden, 11 Ohio St. 203, 213.

5. Shoenberger v. Hackman, 37 Pa. St. 87, 94. This is but an illustration of the general law that death is a revocation of delegated powers.

6. Lewis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52, 58.

7. Witbeck v. Witbeck, 25 Mich. 438, 442.

8. See § 205, Stewart on Husband and Wife.

9. Hord v. Taubman, 79 Mo. 101, 104.

10. Lewis v. Coxe, 5 Har. (Del.) 401, 402.

11. Heywood v. Shreve, 44 N. J. L. 94; Kenrick v. Wood, Law R., 9 Eq. 333, 337; Holladay v. Daily, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 606, 609; Hooper v. Smith, 23 Ala. 639; Patton v. Stewart, 19 Ind. 233; Wilkinson v. Getty, 13 Iowa 157, 158; Hall v. Callahan, 66 Mo. 316, 324; Sumner v. Conant, 10 Vt. 9, 20.

12. Wright v. Blackwood, 57 Tex. 644, 648.

13. Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 24, 33; Douglas v. Fulda, 50 Cal. 177; Butterfield v. Beall, 3 Ind. 203, 207.

Her power of attorney to sell to pay husband's debts is void under statute prohibiting her suretyship contracts. Veal v. Huet, 63 Ga. 728.

rate property she may convey by attorney.¹ It seems plain that she cannot, if a privy examination is required, for this must accompany the conveyance itself;² but where she may convey as if sole, there seems no reason why she cannot convey by attorney,³ provided that her husband join in executing the power, if his joinder is required in her deed.⁴ Of course any power of attorney to be valid must be executed with all the formalities required with the act which it authorizes.⁵ As to powers of attorney unconnected with the conveyance of land, they gain no validity by the seal and acknowledgment, and their validity is tested as that of other contracts of married women.⁶ At common law a married woman's antenuptial power of attorney was revoked by her marriage.⁷

10. Married Women's Agreements to Give Deeds.—It is commonly said that a wife's executory contract to make a deed of property is absolutely void,⁸ and even her contract to deed property held by her as trustee has been so held.⁹ When she is under her common law disabilities, and can therefore make no contract, she cannot, under statutes authorizing her release of dower, or her conveyance of her common law property by deed, jointly with her husband and privily acknowledged, make an oral contract to give a deed,¹⁰ or one in which her husband does not join,¹¹ or one in which he joins but which is not acknowledged;¹² and it seems equally settled that such statutes invest her simply with statutory powers, which must be strictly executed, and that an agreement to convey is not in itself a conveyance, and therefore not an execution of such powers, though executed with all the formalities required by such statutes for a conveyance,¹³ and that such

1. See cases quoted in note 11, preceding page.

2. Holland v. Moon, 39 Ark. 120, 125; McDaniel v. Grace, 15 Ark. 465; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533, 556, 557; Gillespie v. Worford, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 632, 638.

3. Vail v. Meyer, 71 Ind. 159, 165. "It may be conceded, as a general rule, that a married woman cannot appoint an agent. But a married woman holds and enjoys her real estate as if she were sole, and it becomes essential to its enjoyment that she have the power to make improvements by building new or repairing old buildings upon it. . . . And we think it follows that she may make such contracts in person or by an agent whom she may appoint for that purpose." Bickford v. Dane, 58 N. H. 185.

4. Holland v. Moon, 39 Ark. 120, 126.

5. Butterfield v. Beall, 3 Ind. 203, 207; Steele v. Lewis, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 48, 49; Bocock v. Pavey, 8 Ohio St. 270, 278.

6. Heywood v. Shreve, 44 N. J. L. 94, 95, 96.

7. Montague v. Carneal, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 351, 352.

8. Miller v. Albertson, 73 Ind. 343, 345. "No principle of law is better settled than that a married woman could not, previous to the act of March 25th, 1879, concerning married women, bind herself in any way by an executory contract for the sale of real estate." See also Shroyer v. Nickell, 55 Mo. 264, 268; Wright v. Dufield, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 218, 221.

9. Avery v. Griffin, Law R., 6 Eq. 606, 609.

10. Dankel v. Hunter, 61 Pa. St. 382, 384.

11. Behler v. Weyborn, 59 Ind. 143, 145; Gebb v. Rose, 40 Md. 387; Townsend v. Chapin, 12 Allen (Mass.) 476, 478; Kingsley v. Gilman, 15 Minn. 59, 61; Huff v. Price, 50 Mo. 228.

12. Leonis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52, 56; Watrous v. Chalker, 7 Conn. 224, 228; Lane v. McKeen, 15 Me. 304, 305; Pentz v. Simonson, 13 N. J. Eq. 232.

13. Felkner v. Tighe, 39 Ark. 357, 362.

agreements cannot be enforced even in equity, because equity will not reform, correct or complete the execution of a statutory power.¹ A married woman who holds her equitable separate property with the powers of a feme sole can agree to convey it,² but her husband must join with her if the settlement so provides;³ and as to such property her imperfect mortgage is treated as an agreement to give a mortgage and is enforced as a charge.⁴ How far she can agree to convey her statutory separate estate is doubtful, when she has neither the general ownership thereof, nor the general power to convey it as if sole, but a particular mode for its conveyance is provided by statute; it is certain that she cannot bind herself under such statutes for its future conveyance by an agreement not executed according to the statute,⁵ and whether she can by one executed according to the statute is disputed.⁶ The true rule seems to be that when a privy acknowledgment is necessary, an agreement to convey, though executed with such acknowledgment, could not be enforced, for a contrary rule would lead to the absurdity of a married woman being compelled to execute a deed, and to acknowledge that she executed it freely and of her own accord;⁷ but when she can convey as a feme sole, even though it be provided that her husband shall join, there is no reason why her agreement to convey should not be enforced as the agreement of a feme sole would be.⁸ When she has full ownership of her property, or may contract generally as a feme sole, her agreement to convey is valid.⁹ When her contracts with reference to her separate estate are valid, an agreement to convey or an imperfectly executed deed should be valid as such.¹⁰ When-

"In Bishop's work on the Law of Married Women, vol. 1, § 601, it is said, though the statutes authorize femmes covert to convey their lands, and this authority ought to be construed to comprehend everything properly belonging to the contract of actual sale, yet it does not qualify them to enter into a valid executory agreement to sell; for a prior agreement to sell is not an essential part of the actual selling. . . . In a State like Pennsylvania, where the thing agreed to be done is looked upon by the tribunals as done, it might take effect as a conveyance. But in the other States generally, and in England, no executory agreement to convey, formal or informal, with or without the concurrence and joinder of the husband, will bind the wife. Not even a court of equity will give such an agreement effect by decreeing its fulfillment against her."

1. See last note and Bright v. Boyd, 1 Story (U. S.) 478, 487; McBryde v. Wilkinson, 29 Ala. 662, 667; Silliman v. Cummins, 13 Ohio 116, 118. Contra, Clayton v. Frazier, 33 Tex. 91, 100. Otherwise as to private powers. 2 Wash. Real Prop. 300, et seq.; Waterman Spec. Perf., § 387.

2. Stead v. Nelson, 2 Beav. 245, 248; Wainwright v. Hardesty, 2 Beav. 363, 365; Butler v. Buckingham, 5 Day (Conn.) 492, 497; Pilcher v. Smith, 2 Head (Tenn.) 208, 211.

3. Gelston v. Frazier, 26 Md. 329, 344.

4. Hall v. Eccleston, 37 Md. 510, 520; Whitely v. Stewart, 63 Mo. 360, 363.

5. Shroyer v. Nickell, 55 Mo. 264, 268.

6. Pro Dankel v. Hunter, 61 Pa. St. 382, 384. Contra, Stedham v. Matthews, 29 Ark. 650, 658.

7. Leonis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52, 58; Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547, 559; 6 Am. Rep. 624.

8. Dreutzer v. Lawrence, 58 Wis. 594, 598.

9. Brown's Appeal, 94 Pa. St. 362, 367; Dreutzer v. Lawrence, 58 Wis. 594; Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547, 559; Spafford v. Warren, 47 Iowa 47, 51.

10. Baker v. Hathway, 5 Allen ever her contract is valid she can be compelled to specifically enforce it,¹ though if this would require her privy acknowledgment a different rule might apply;² but there are some cases where, though the right to specific performance has been denied her land has been held responsible for any money paid on account of, or expended on the faith of, the contract.³ At common law the husband could not by his agreement to convey affect the wife's interest in her lands, though such an agreement bound him.⁴

V. ESTOPPELS AGAINST MARRIED WOMEN—1. General Rules.—One may be estopped by a judgment, by a deed, by a contract, or by a tort; and the general rule as to married women is that they can be estopped only by valid judgments⁵ or deeds;⁶ by contracts only so far as they have the capacity to contract;⁷ and only (Mass.) 103, 105. Husband may have to join. Behler v. Weyburn, 59 Ind. 143, 145.

1. Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547, 559; Kingsley v. Gilman, 15 Minn. 59, 61.

2. Leonis v. Lazzarovich, 55 Cal. 52.

3. Felkner v. Tighe, 39 Ark. 357, 363; Shroyer v. Nickell, 55 Mo. 264, 269; Martin v. Dwelly, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 9, 12; Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 Ohio St. 155, 165.

4. Steffey v. Steffey, 19 Md. 5, 12.

5. Morse v. Toppan, 3 Gray (Mass.) 411, 412. See on this point Faithorne v. Blaquiere, 6 Maule & S. 73; Gambette v. Brock, 41 Cal. 72, 82; Doyle v. Kelly, 75 Ill. 574; Elson v. O'Dowd, 40 Ind. 300, 306; Guthrie v. Howard, 32 Iowa 54, 55; Spalding v. Wathen, 7 Bush (Ky.) 659, 663; Case v. Ribelin, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 29, 30; Baines v. Burbridge, 15 La. An. 628; Magruder v. Buck, 56 Miss. 314; Green v. Branton, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) Eq. 500, 504; Graham v. Long, 65 Pa. St. 383; Baxter v. Dear, 24 Tex. 17, 21.

But the judgment must be a valid one. Griffith v. Clarke, 18 Md. 457, 464. "Persons in the condition of a feme covert are not competent to employ an attorney. If she had appeared in the suit at law by attorney employed by her husband, and her coverture had been pleaded in defence to the action, the court would have allowed the plea. But the question here is, whether the defendant, being sued at law on a personal contract altogether void at law, is to be prejudiced by the entry of a judgment by default against her for nonappearance? In our opinion, such a judgment is, at law, merely void, and was properly enjoined by the circuit court."

6. Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill.

164, 170; Glidden v. Strupler, 52 Pa. St. 400, 406; Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 24, 33; Alexander v. Saulsbury, 37 Ala. 375, 378; Wood v. Terry, 30 Ark. 385, 393; Behler v. Weyburn, 59 Ind. 143; Comegys v. Clarke, 44 Md. 108, 110; Merriam v. Boston, 117 Mass. 241; Norton v. Nichols, 35 Mich. 148, 150; Den v. Demarest, 21 N. J. L. 525, 541; Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 Ohio St. 155, 161; Waltee v. Weaver, 57 Tex. 569; Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 572, 683; Godfrey v. Thornton, 46 Wis. 677, 690.

7. Powell's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 403, 413. "It is true she was a married woman, and the general rule undoubtedly is that the doctrine of estoppel does not apply to such persons. But there are exceptions. The rule rests upon the fact that a married woman cannot contract. It follows logically that what she cannot pass by contract she may not pass by estoppel. But where the law clothes her with the power to contract, to the extent of that power she is bound precisely as other persons are bound. The law gives her the right to dispose of her personal estate with the assent of her husband. In doing so she has no more right to injure and mislead others than if she were sui juris. To hold otherwise would enable her to continue her operations with her separate estate so long as they were profitable, and then make reprisals for her losses upon those who had trusted her." Matthews v. Murchison, 17 Fed. Rep. 760, 766; Schwartz v. Saunders, 46 Ill. 18, 24; Spafford v. Warren, 47 Iowa 47, 51; Preston v. Evans, 56 Md. 476; Dann v. Cudney, 13 Mich. 239, 242; Bodine v. Killeen, 53 N. Y. 93, 96; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199; Towles v.

by torts of a kind for which they would be liable.¹ It is clear that a married woman under disabilities cannot be estopped just as if she were sui juris, and the only way of determining in what cases she may be estopped is to ascertain, first, whether the alleged estoppel grows out of a judgment, deed, contract, or tort; and second, whether such judgment, deed, contract, or tort is binding as such on the married woman.²

2. Estoppels of Record.—A judgment, accordingly, against a married woman, on her void contract,³ or warrant of attorney,⁴ or by confession when she cannot contract,⁵ is void and does not estop her. Such a judgment against a married woman under disability is a manifest error, like a judgment against a dead person.⁶ The principle that a party is estopped from alleging, in order to impeach a judgment collaterally, what he alleged or might have alleged as a ground for defence in the suit, does not apply to a case where the defendant was a married woman under disability.⁷ But this has been expressly denied, and it has been held that a judgment against a married woman, if fairly obtained, is binding on her, and that she is estopped thereby from setting up in a collateral suit that she was a feme covert, whether she had alleged this defence, or had allowed the suit to go by default.⁸ In cases where she is sued on a valid cause of action, she is estopped by the judgment as any other person is.⁹ And where she is liable

Fisher, 77 N. Car. 437, 443; Mason v. Jordan, 13 R. I. 193, 195.

1. Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164, 169; Drake v. Glover, 30 Ala. 382; Reis v. Lawrence, 63 Cal. 129, 135; Lathrop v. Soldiers' Loan etc. Assoc., 45 Ga. 483.

2. To illustrate: A judgment is obtained against a married woman on a void note; she moves to have it set aside, alleging her coverture and its consequent invalidity; it is a general principle that when a person applies to have a judgment set aside he cannot allege any ground which he might have alleged in the suit as a defence. It is held that this rule does not apply to married women, because the judgment is invalid. See Griffith v. Clarke, 18 Md. 457, 464. Again, a married woman makes a deed of certain property, and the deed being imperfectly executed is utterly void; but after receiving the purchase money she sues the grantee in ejectment; held, she is not estopped from setting up her title, because the deed is invalid. See Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164.

3. Griffith v. Clarke, 18 Md. 457. "A promissory note signed by a feme covert cannot be enforced against her by any proceeding at law; a judgment by default against her, when sued at law on such a note, is a nullity, and enforcement of it against her separate estate may be restrained in equity by injunction. The principle that a party cannot impeach a judgment on any ground which might have been pleaded or relied on, as a defence to the suit, does not apply to a case where the defendant is a feme covert and not sui juris." Doyle v. Kelly, 75 Ill. 574; Magruder v. Buck, 56 Miss. 314.

4. Faithorne v. Blaquire, 6 Maule & S. 73; Graham v. Long, 65 Pa. St. 383, 386.

5. Baines v. Burbridge, 15 La. An. 628.

6. Spalding v. Wathen, 7 Bush (Ky.) 659; Case v. Ribellin, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 29, 30.

7. Griffith v. Clarke, 18 Md. 457.

8. Elson v. O'Dowd, 40 Ind. 300.

9. Brown v. Kemper, 27 Md. 666 at 672. "The judgment was rendered against them jointly. And although it was a judgment by default and the amount found by inquisition, the finding was as effectual as a verdict found upon issues. . . . The judgment, therefore, being in an action for a tort, is not void at law, and this court cannot so regard it. It is different essenwith her husband, as on her antenuptial contracts and on her torts, she is bound thereby,¹ although her husband, having full power to manage the suit, has neglected it,² unless he has colluded with the plaintiff;³ and her property may be seized under such a judgment if entered generally against them both.⁴ If her land be seized under a void judgment, she is not estopped from recovering it in ejectment.⁵

3. Estoppels by Deed.—A married woman is not estopped by her invalid deed.⁶ She may, for example, recover the property conveyed thereby in ejectment though she has received the purchase money.⁷ But where the said purchase money does not vest in the husband, as at common law, but becomes separate property of the wife, the courts have revolted against this rule as most unjust, and have either held her bound to restore the said money,⁸ or have charged the same on the property as a debt.⁹ If she could be estopped by her invalid deed, she would be able to convey her property without reference to the statutes relating to conveyances of married women, and the said statutes would be in effect repealed.¹⁰ She is not estopped by her seal from showing that the deed was made without the consideration required by law,¹¹ or from showing that the deed is void because executed in blank.¹² But she is estopped, it seems, from saying that she did not sign a deed which she has duly acknowledged,¹³ or that she did not read or understand it,¹³ or did not intend to deliver it when she left it in the hands of her husband and he delivered it.¹⁴ By her deed, voidable on account of infancy, but ratified by re-tially from the case of Griffith v. Clarke, 18 Md. 457." Baxter v. Dear, 24 Tex. 17, 21.

1. Green v. Branton, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) Eq. 500, 504.

2. Same case and § 461, Stewart on H. & W.

3. Same case.

4. Howard v. North, 5 Tex. 290, 299; 51 Am. Dec. 769.

5. Caldwell v. Walters, 18 Pa. St. 79, 83; 55 Am. Dec. 592.

6. Alexander v. Saulsbury, 37 Ala. 375. "A sale by the wife alone, without the concurrence of her husband, of property belonging to her statutory separate estate, is absolutely void and passes nothing to the purchaser." Wood v. Terry, 30 Ark. 385, 393; Morrison v. Wilson, 13 Cal. 494, 498; Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164, 170; Behler v. Weyburn, 59 Ind. 143, 145; Dukes v. Spangler, 35 Ohio St. 119, 127; Godfrey v. Thornton, 46 Wis. 677, 690.

7. Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164.

8. Pilcher v. Smith, 2 Head (Tenn.) 208, 211.

9. Shroyer v. Nickell, 55 Mo. 264, 268.

10. Glidden v. Strupler, 52 Pa. St. 400, 403. "The next point is that of estoppel. If through the administration of equity we can produce a result which the law denies ab initio on the ground of public policy, then estoppel or compensation, its equitable equivalent, will accomplish what the law and policy have forbidden. But we have seen that in such a case equity does not overturn but follows the law. Story's Equity, §§ 64 a, 3, 96, 97, 177, 243." Morrison v. Wilson, 13 Cal. 494; Behler v. Weyburn, 59 Ind. 143; Todd v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 19 Ohio St. 514, 526; Pettit v. Fretz, 33 Pa. St. 118, 120.

11. Radford v. Carwile, 13 W. Va. 572.

12. Drury v. Foster, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 24, 33.

13. Kerr v. Russell, 69 Ill. 666, 673; 18 Am. Rep. 634.

14. Ackert v. Pultz, 7 Barb. (N. Y.)

ceipt of the purchase money during coverture, she is estopped,¹ and so she is by her deed, valid because made after her husband had permanently left her and the State;² and when she has validly assigned a mortgage to her husband in blank, she is estopped from denying his right to pledge it.³ But her valid deed estops her only from denying it to be a conveyance; she is not, unless she can contract independently, estopped by her covenants therein,⁴ and she may set up an after-acquired title.⁵ The effect of her deeds of dower,⁶ and the right to impeach her deeds,⁷ have already been discussed.

4. Estoppels in Pais—In General.—A married woman may be estopped in pais by a declaration in the nature of a contract or warranty, or in the nature of a fraudulent representation or tort, and she is estopped in one case or the other only when she can render herself liable by such a contract or tort.⁸ But the usual requirements to an estoppel in general apply to estoppels against married women, and a married woman is not estopped unless her representation has been relied on, and unless the other party would be injured by her denying it.⁹

5. Estoppels in Pais—Contracts.—A married woman's liability to be estopped by her contracts is coterminous with her capacity to contract; if the contract is valid it estops her; if it is invalid it does not.¹⁰ The contract may be either express or implied, but a contract which she could not expressly make will never be implied against a married woman.¹¹ But her assent or contract will be implied when she could expressly contract, as where she sells a horse which is her separate property, and allows the money to be paid to her husband;¹² in such case she cannot afterward deny

386, 388; Baldwin v. Snowden, 11 Ohio St. 203, 213.

1. Scranton v. Stewart, 52 Ind. 68, 94.

2. Reis v. Lawrence, 63 Cal. 129, 135; Danner v. Berthold, 11 Mo. App. 351, 355; Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 Ohio St. 155, 161, 162.

3. Flanagin v. Hambleton, 54 Md. 222, 232.

4. Blain v. Harrison, 11 Ill. 384, 386; Shumaker v. Johnson, 35 Ind. 33, 38; Preston v. Evans, 56 Md. 476, 491; Merriam v. Boston, 117 Mass. 241, 244; Nash v. Spoffard, 10 Met. 192; Den v. Demarest, 21 N. J. L. 525, 541; Bartlett v. Boyd, 34 Vt. 256, 261.

5. Blain v. Harrison, 11 Ill. 384, 386; Shumaker v. Johnson, 35 Ind. 33, 38; Nash v. Spoffard, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 192.

6. See vol. 5, p. 884, of this work.

7. See IV, § 8, above.

8. Powell's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 403, 413. "As to him, Mrs. Powell is estopped from setting up her release. It is true she was a married woman, and the general rule undoubtedly is that the doctrine of estoppel does not apply to such persons. But there are exceptions. The rule rests upon the fact that a married woman cannot contract. It follows logically, that what she cannot pass by contract she may not pass by estoppel. But where the law clothes her with the power to contract, to the extent of that power she is bound precisely as other persons are bound." Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164, 169.

9. McGregor v. Sibley, 69 Pa. St. 388, 394.

10. See note 8, above, and Danner v. Berthold, 11 Mo. App. 351.

11. Tucker v. Cocke, 32 Miss. 184, 190; Farrar v. Bessey, 24 Vt. 89, 92.

12. Spafford v. Warren, 47 Iowa 47. "Where a conveyance of the homestead by the wife was void, but she surrendered possession of the property voluntarily, made no objection to the grantee's title when in her presence he offered to sell it, and permitted him to remain in quiet possession for more his authority to receive it.¹ When she contracts as if unmarried, she can be estopped as if sole.² Whatever she can do herself can estop her if done by her husband with her consent, his agency for her being implied.³ This is the case when she holds him out as her agent in her separate business.⁴ She is estopped by her contract binding on her equitable separate property;⁵ when she assents to the sale of her choses in action, she is estopped from applying for her equity of redemption out of them;⁶ in equity as to this property she is generally a feme sole, and is estopped as such. If she can contract, she can be estopped from denying a party's title to property which she has allowed him to improve under claim of title through her;⁷ if she cannot, she is not bound even for improvements put upon her own property with her consent.⁸ An apparent exception to the rule laid down in this section exists in the case where the property of a married woman is sold under void judicial proceedings; in such case if she has received the purchase money, she is estopped from setting up her title.⁹ There is a case in which a married woman was held estopped from claiming her dower by her mere statement made during coverture, at the sale of her husband's land, that she would not claim dower.¹⁰

6. Estoppels in Pais—False Representations.—In case of a party under the disability of coverture—a party who at common law is liable for her torts, but not on her contracts—it is necessary to determine whether the representation is in nature of a contract or tort. If there is no guilty knowledge or fraudulent intent, but the representation is a mere agreement or promise that a certain fact is true, and the other party, by acting on this promise to his than three years, and make improvements without protest, held that her conduct amounted to a ratification of the deed."

1. Dann v. Cudney, 13 Mich. 239, 242.

2. Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199; 27 Am. Rep. 38.

3. Early v. Rolfe, 95 Pa. St. 58. "Where a husband transacts the ordinary business of his wife's estate, such as the receipt of her rents, interest and the like, with her knowledge, her assent may be fairly inferred, and the jury may adopt the presumption that he was acting under her authority and hold her accordingly. Under such circumstances the wife will be estopped from claiming interest money thus received by the husband." Schwartz v. Saunders, 46 Ill. 18, 24.

4. Bodine v. Killeen, 53 N. Y. 93, 96.

5. Drake v. Glover, 30 Ala. 382, 390; Wood v. Terry, 30 Ark. 385, 393; Schwartz v. Saunders, 46 Ill. 18, 24; Dann v. Cudney, 13 Mich. 239, 242; Glidden v. Strupler, 52 Pa. St. 400, 406;

O'Brien v. Hilburn, 9 Tex. 297, 299.

6. Lush v. Lush, Law R., 4 Ch. App. 591, 602; Wright v. Arnold, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 513.

7. See note 12, preceding page.

8. Corning v. Fowler, 24 Iowa 584, 586. "But this rule can have no application where the husband makes with his own means improvements on the lands of the wife, without any contract that he acquired an interest thereby in the realty, or that she was to be liable or accountable to him for the value thereof. The expenditure was voluntary—not under any contract—and it would place at the disposal of an insolvent and spendthrift husband the entire real property of the wife, if his creditors could follow the means expended by him thus voluntarily thereon."

9. Shivers v. Simmons, 54 Miss. 520; 28 Am. Rep. 372; Smith v. Warden, 19 Pa. St. 424, 430; Freedman Void Judic. Sales, § 48.

10. Connolly v. Branstler, 3 Bush (Ky.) 702.

damage, has paid a consideration therefor, the representation can bind the wife only as a contract, and stop her only if she had the capacity to make such a contract;¹ thus, the covenant of a married woman in her deed, that the title is good, is not binding on her if she has no capacity to contract, and she is not estopped thereby from setting up a subsequent title.² If, on the other hand, there is guilty knowledge or fraudulent intent, her representation is a fraud, and she is estopped from denying its truth;³ thus, where in order to defraud her husband's creditors she represented that property of hers belonged to him, she was estopped from afterwards, as against these creditors, setting up her own title.⁴ But if the false representation relates to her capacity to contract, whether made in good faith or with fraudulent intent, she is not estopped thereby;⁵ she cannot by her statements give herself a capacity she does not possess—a rule which applies equally to parties under the disability of infancy;⁶ thus, she is not estopped by her representations that she is unmarried;⁷ or that she has separate property which she can charge,⁸ from setting up her coverture when sued on the contract, or from showing that she had no separate property to charge. This, however, as far as it applies to statements made with the intention to deceive, has been denied in California,⁹ Illinois¹⁰ and New Hampshire.¹¹ The representation by a feme sole that she is married is very different; she is sui juris, and is estopped from denying coverture.¹¹ These representations may be made by conduct as well as by words, and the intent to deceive may be inferred; so

1. Discussed in section 5, above.

2. Preston v. Evans, 56 Md. 476, 491. "The legislature clearly never intended to authorize a feme covert to convey what she did not own, and what was not, at the time of making the deed, the subject of conveyance; and to allow her to be barred of her future or after acquired estate by mere operation of her covenant of warranty, which was void by the common law, and not authorized by statute, would be in plain contravention of the policy and object of the whole legislation upon the subject of conveyances by femes covert."

3. See section 8, post.

4. Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164, 169.

5. Keen v. Hartman, 48 Pa. St. 497, 500. "The case was fully argued and decided after consideration and review of the authorities. POLLOCK, C. B., in delivering the judgment of the court, while admitting the general liability of the husband and wife for her torts, said: 'But when the fraud is directly connected with the contract of the wife, and is the means of effecting it, and parcel of the same transaction, the wife cannot be responsible, and the husband be sued for it together with the wife. If this were allowed it is obvious that the wife would lose the protection which the law gives her against contracts made by her during coverture, for there is not a contract of any kind which a feme covert could make whilst she knew her husband to be alive, that could not be treated as a fraud. For every such contract would involve in itself a representation of her capacity."

6. Brown v. Dunham, 1 Root (Conn.) 272; Conroe v. Birdsall, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 127; Keen v. Hartman, 48 Pa. St. 497; Houston v. Turk, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 13.

7. Keen v. Coleman, 39 Pa. St. 299, 302.

8. Patterson v. Frazer, 39 Pa. St. 299, 302.

9. Reis v. Lawrence, 63 Cal. 129, 135.

10. Patterson v. Lawrence, 90 Ill. 174, 179.

11. Read v. Hall, 57 N. H. 482, 483; Mace v. Cadell, Cowp. 232; Batthens v. Galindo, 1 Moore & P. 565.

that questions not discussed in this section may arise, and must be separately treated.

7. Estoppels in Pais—Silence.—Since such estoppels as arise out of a failure to assert a right, or out of silence and acquiescence in the right claimed by others, arise only because from such silence and acquiescence a representation is implied, it is clear that a married woman can be bound by her silence and acquiescence only in cases when she would have been bound had she expressly made the statement which is implied;¹ Thus, when a married woman makes an invalid deed she is not estopped by afterwards recognizing its validity and allowing the grantee to improve the property, from asserting her title, for she would not be estopped therefrom by expressly telling the grantee that she would never claim any title thereto;² but if she could contract as a feme sole, and allowed her grantee to improve property on the faith of a title given him by her, she could not deny the validity of that title.³ Nor, if she can grant a right of way only in the mode prescribed by statute, can she estop herself from closing up a way by allowing it to be used without complaint.⁴ When a party not her husband, in her presence, makes a claim of right inconsistent with her rights, and she allows another to act upon such claim of right without setting up her rights, she is or is not estopped from afterwards setting up her rights, just as she would have been had she expressly said that she had no rights. Thus, when another claims the right to collect money due to her, and such money is paid to him in her presence, she is estopped from denying his right to receive it: she has by her conduct made him her agent.⁵ In some cases silence can speak as loudly as words, and when it appears that a married woman was silent with respect to a matter not connected with her contract, knowing her right, and that her silence was relied on as a disclaimer of right in herself, and an assertion of right in another, her intention to deceive must be implied, and she is bound by her tort just as she would have been had she expressly asserted that the title was in such other person.⁶ The usual case in which these questions arise is where the wife is silent while her husband asserts rights inconsistent with her own, which is discussed below.

1. Farrar v. Bessey, 24 Vt. 89, 92. "But to authorize the implication of such new promise, from part payment, or other acknowledgment of a debt, the party whose promise is to be implied must be legally capable of making a valid and binding express promise. And as a feme covert cannot make such a promise in her own right, especially while living with her husband, it follows that no effectual promise of the wife can be implied in the present case, from the fact of this part payment of her debt. This is a legitimate and obvious conclusion, from the doctrine held in Pittam v. Foster, 8 C. L. R. 67." Marable v. Jordan, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 417.

2. Glidden v. Strupler, 52 Pa. St. 400, 404.

3. Spafford v. Warren, 47 Iowa 47, 51.

4. McBeth v. Trabue, 69 Mo. 642, 657; Todd v. Pittsburg etc. R. Co., 19 Ohio St. 514, 525.

5. Dann v. Cudney, 13 Mich. 239, 244; Lindner v. Lahler, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 322; City Council of Charleston v. Van Roven, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 465, 469.

6. Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill.

8. Estoppels in Pais—Pure Torts.—Coverture cannot be invoked as a cloak for wrong doing, and so, even at common law, a married woman is liable jointly with her husband for her torts.¹ But as her contracts were void, and as the law could not allow her by her mere statements to give herself capacity, it was held that she was not liable for torts consisting of false and fraudulent representations that she was unmarried and could contract, but only for pure torts.² Since an estoppel arising out of tort is founded on the person's liability for the tort, it has been held, generally, that married women are not estopped by their false and fraudulent representations that they are unmarried, or have property which they can charge by contract; though the contrary rule prevails in California, Illinois, and New Hampshire.³ But she is estopped by any tort unconnected with her contract,⁴ and by her tort connected therewith if the contract is valid.⁵ A representation that certain property of hers is her husband's, made for the purpose of deceiving builders, is a pure tort, and estops her;⁶ and so are any false and fraudulent representations of this kind.⁷ She is estopped by a statement that a bill of exchange has been accepted by her husband, which statement led to the discount of the bill,⁸ and by statements made under oath.⁹

9. Estoppels in Pais—Acts of Husband.—In considering the effect of a husband's acts and representations as estoppels against his wife, it must be remembered: (1) that at common law the wife was under control of her husband, and subject to his will;¹⁰ (2) that the husband is in some respects the agent in law of his wife;¹¹ and (3) that the husband is very commonly the wife's agent in fact.¹² In the first place, owing to this fiction of coercion, she is prima facie not bound by any statement made by her husband in her presence; it is presumed that she is silent through fear, and through deference to her husband as her husband; and 164, 169; Davis v. Tingle, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 539, 543.

1. Vaughan v. Vanderstegen, 2 Drew. 363, 378. "But notwithstanding the incapacity of a married woman to incur a debt merely by her contract, yet it is well established that a married woman is capable of committing a fraud, and is liable to be visited with the consequences of the commission of such fraud."

2. Adelphi v. Fairhurst, 9 Ex. 422, 429; Owens v. Snodgrass, 6 Dana (Ky.) 229; Keen v. Hartman, 48 Pa. St. 497, 499.

3. See notes 9, 10, 11, p. 642.

4. Wright v. Leonard, 8 Jur., N. S. 415; Jones v. Kearney, 1 Dru. & War. 134, 167; Lush v. Lush, L. R., 4 Ch. App. 591, 597; Matthews v. Murchison, 17 Fed. Rep. 760, 766; Oglesby

Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164; Davis v. Tingle, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 539; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 25 N. J. Eq. 194, 201; Towles v. Fisher, 77 N. Car. 437; McCullough v. Wilson, 21 Pa. St. 436, 442; Mason v. Jordan, 13 R. I. 193, 195.

5. Lathrop v. Soldiers' Loan etc. Assoc., 45 Ga. 483, 486.

6. Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164; O'Brien v. Hilburn, 9 Tex. 297.

7. See cases cited in note 4, above.

8. Wright v. Leonard, 8 Jur., N. S. 415.

9. Lathrop v. Soldiers' Loan etc. Assoc., 45 Ga. 483, 486; Cooley v. Steele, 2 Head (Tenn.) 605, 608.

10. Scarborough v. Watkins, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 540, 545; 50 Am. Dec. 528.

11. See article on HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, pp. 789, 837.

12. See reference in last note.

it must affirmatively appear that she was actuated by other motives—that is to say, that she intended to deceive, or that she voluntarily made her husband her agent and mouthpiece;¹ the question of motive, it seems, being a question of fact for the jury.² Since a married woman is liable for a tort committed in her husband's presence only if her active participation therein is affirmatively made to appear, it is clear that she should not be bound by his fraud simply on account of her noninterference.³ In the second place, leaving out of consideration the question of coercion, she is estopped by her husband's acts only when he is her agent in law or in fact. As to her personalty, if she stands by and allows her husband to sell it, and the purchaser relies on her silence, she is estopped from afterwards setting up her title, because at common law her husband had the right to sell it without her consent, and because, under the statutes, she has usually the right to sell her separate property, and therefore to sell it through an agent, and by her presence and silence she constitutes her husband her agent;⁴ and so, at common law, she was estopped from claiming her equity of a settlement out of her choses in action, if she allowed her husband to dispose of them in her presence without making any objection.⁵ Thus, she is estopped by her husband's sale of her horse,⁶ or of her negroes,⁷ or by his collection of her funds,⁸ if she was present and made no objection. But owing to the intimacy of the marriage relation, and to the fact that it is natural and proper that a husband should to some extent possess and manage his wife's property, it is not a fraud on his creditors for his wife merely to allow him to possess and manage her property, and she is not estopped, as a stranger would be, from setting up her title to the same.⁹ Her husband's creditors should enquire of her as to her rights, and in such case, if she or her husband, in her presence, should make any false statements, it is clear that this would be a fraud and she would be

1. Dann v. Cudney, 13 Mich. 239. "Where the husband of a woman sold a horse belonging to her, without her authority, and she was informed of the sale before payment had been made, and afterwards had ample opportunity to inform the purchaser of her rights, but neglected to do so until after he had made payment to the husband, it was held that she was estopped from thereafter asserting title to the horse against a mortgagee of the purchaser."

2. Early v. Rolfe, 95 Pa. St. 58, 61. "However this may be, we repeat such knowledge and want of dissent are evidence from which a jury may infer a power to the husband from the wife to transact the ordinary business of her estate, such as the receipt of her rents, interest and the like."

3. Carpenter v. Carpenter, 27 N. J. Eq. 502, 504. But see State v. Holloway, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 45, 47.

4. See note 5, above, and Wortman v. Price, 47 Ill. 22, 24; Lindner v. Lahler, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 322, 324; City Council of Charleston v. Van Raven, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 465, 469.

5. Lush, L. R., 4 Ch. App. 591, 597; Wright v. Arnold, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 513.

6. See note 1, above.

7. O'Brien v. Hilburn, 9 Tex. 297.

8. Early v. Rolfe, 95 Pa. St. 58, 60.

9. Jones v. Brandt, 59 Iowa 332. "Plaintiff is not estopped from asserting her title to the property in question because she might have enjoined the sale under which the defendant claims, but did not. She was not bound in law or estopped.¹ There is no reason why a married woman should not lend her property to her husband to use in his business, and no reason why, if she has made no express disclaimer of title, and has not knowingly allowed his creditors to give him credit supposing her to have no rights, she could be estopped from having back her own.² Of course, if she has made him her general agent with respect to property over which she has the rights of a feme sole, she is estopped from going behind his acts, so that she cannot claim the repayment of money paid to him as her recognized agent;³ and if she has put property in his hands to do business with, not as a loan but as capital, she cannot, as against the creditors of that business, claim the property back.⁴ With respect to her real estate, different considerations arise. The husband could not dispose of the wife's interest at common law, and even under most modern statutes she can dispose of it only in the mode prescribed by statute; but if she and he join in a contract which is void as to her, he is nevertheless bound, and is estopped thereby;⁵ and if he must join with her in order to enable her to set up her rights, the fact that he is estopped may deprive her of her remedy.⁶ By allowing him to take the title to her realty in his own name, she estops herself from setting up her title as against bona fide purchasers for value,⁷ or creditors with a lien;⁸ but not from accepting afterwards the legal title, even though the husband is insolvent.⁹ When she owns realty or personalty as a feme sole, and allows her husband to hold himself as owner thereof, she is estopped by all his acts with respect thereto.¹⁰

10. Estoppels in Pais—Acts While Sole.—Coverture does not destroy the effect of acts done before marriage. And by an act after the dissolution of coverture, a widow may estop herself from setting up the invalidity of an act done during coverture.¹¹ Thus, if a widow who has during coverture executed an invalid release equity to protect defendant by such injunction."

1. Oglesby Coal Co. v. Pasco, 79 Ill. 164, 169.

2. See previous sections of this article.

3. Early v. Rolfe, 95 Pa. St. 58, 60. "It follows that where, in ordinary transactions, as in those above enumerated, the husband receives the moneys of the wife and the circumstances are such that her assent may be fairly inferred, the jury may adopt the presumption that he was acting under her authority and hold her accordingly."

4. Wilson v. Loomis, 55 Ill. 352, 357.

5. See Stewart on H. & W., §§ 382, 408.

6. Huff v. Price, 50 Mo. 228.

7. Darnaby v. Darnaby, 14 Bush (Ky.) 485, 488. No possible notice could be obtained from the land records of the wife's claim in such a case as above by an innocent purchaser.

8. Besson v. Eveland, 26 N. J. Eq. 468, 478; Ready v. Bragg, 1 Head (Tenn.) 511, 515.

9. Summers v. Hoover, 42 Ind. 153, 157; Bancroft v. Curtis, 108 Mass. 47, 49; Payne v. Twyman, 68 Mo. 339; Syracuse Chilled Plow Co. v. Wing, 85 N. Y. 421, 426.

10. Anderson v. Armstead, 69 Ill. 452, 455.

11. Hart v. Giles, 79 Mo. 175. "A widow entitled to a dower interest in a city lot, and, although otherwise advised, believing that she had an interest therein, authorized proclamation to be made, at a public sale, for payment of debts by the administrator of her deceased husband, that she did not, and would not, claim dower in the lot, and that it was clear of dower. Relying of dower, stands by and allows her late husband's property to be sold clear of dower she is estopped from setting up her right to dower;¹ so if a widow continues to hold and enjoy the consideration of property disposed of by her during coverture by an invalid instrument, she is estopped from setting up her title to the property so disposed of.² But unless there is some new act—some new consideration or deed, a widow is not estopped by acts done during coverture which did not estop her as a married woman.³

VI. TORTS OF MARRIED WOMEN—1. Antenuptial Torts.—For torts of any kind, except those against the man she marries, committed before marriage,⁴ a woman remains liable after her marriage; and her husband is generally liable therefor with her.⁵

2. Postnuptial Torts.—For all torts committed by a married woman during coverture, in person, except such as are committed under the coercion of her husband,⁶ and such as are intimately connected with her invalid contracts,⁷ and such as are committed against her husband,⁸ she is liable as fully as if unmarried. Thus, she may be sued, and a judgment obtained may be satisfied out of all her property, for assault and battery,⁸ for trespass,⁹ for conversion,¹⁰ for slander,¹¹ for fraud and false and fraudulent representations unconnected with her invalid contracts,¹² for burning property,¹³ for poisoning geese,¹⁴ etc. But at common law she could not be held responsible for the act of another as her agent, because she could not contract, and therefore could not appoint an agent;¹⁵ still so far as she may, under statutes, appoint an agent, or act by agent, she may be responsible for agent's torts.¹⁶ When the act complained of was committed in the presence of her husband, the presumption is that it was committed by her through the authority and coercion of her husband, and that she is not liable at all;¹⁷ but this presumption may be rebutted by showing that she actively and voluntarily participated upon the truth of this public announcement, which was made in the hearing of the widow, the purchaser bid the full value of the lot. Held, in a suit by her for admeasurement of dower, that these facts amounted to an estoppel in pais and precluded her recovery." Reed v. Morrison, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 18, 24; Bullock v. Griffin, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 60, 65.

1. Case quoted in last note.

2. Bullock v. Griffin, 1 Strobb. (S. Car.) Eq. 60, 65.

3. Stewart on H. & W., §§ 366, 402.

4. See article on HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, pp. 795, 822, 823, etc.

5. See reference in above note. See vol. 9, pp. 822, 823, 824, etc., for discussion of this subject.

6. Nolan v. Traber, 49 Md. 460, 468.

7. Barnes v. Harris, Busbee (N. Car.) L. 15, 16.

8. Abbott v. Abbott, 67 Me. 304, 307.

9. Dailey v. Houston, 58 Mo. 361; Carter v. Jackson, 56 N. H. 364; Vanneman v. Powers, 56 N. Y. 39; Hawk v. Harman, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 43.

10. Heckle v. Lurvey, 101 Mass. 344; Kowing v. Manley, 49 N. Y. 192, 198.

11. See note 6, vol. 9, p. 824.

12. Baum v. Mullen, 47 N. Y. 577.

13. Ball v. Bennett, 21 Ind. 427.

14. Matthews v. Fiestel, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 90, 91.

15. Rawlings v. Bell, 1 Com. B. 959.

16. Ferguson v. Brooks, 67 Me. 251, 258; Vanneman v. Powers, 56 N. Y. 39, 43.

17. Nolan v. Traber, 49 Md. 460, 468.

in the wrong, and in such case she is as fully responsible as if her husband had been absent.¹

1. Carleton v. Haywood, 49 N. H. 314, 318.

Recent Cases Under Statutes in Various States on Married Women's Torts.

Florida.—A married woman is personally liable for her civil torts, including such frauds as do not grow out of, or are not directly connected with, or a part of, a contract which she has undertaken to make. Prentiss v. Paisley (Fla.), 7 L. R. A. 640.

Connecticut.—A qui tam action, under Conn. Gen. Stat., p. 253, § 1, for placing obstruction in a highway, is maintainable against a wife without joinder of her husband, provided the tort was committed by her without actual coercion by him. Blakeslee v. Tyler, 55 Conn. 397.

Where bars obstructing a highway enclosed the lands of the wife, and after they had been taken down she and her husband started together to put them up, and he said to her, as she was running ahead of him, "put them up," it is not actual coercion by him. Blakeslee v. Tyler, 55 Conn. 397.

Indiana.—By Statute (Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5120), married women are made liable to action for damages for their torts. Mayhew v. Burns, 103 Ind. 328; Blakeslee v. Tyler, 55 Conn. 397.

They take right to their separate estates with all its incidents, and must use their property with due regard to the rights of others. Blakeslee v. Tyler, 55 Conn. 397.

The statute which provides that a married woman is jointly liable with her husband for torts relates to mere personal torts of the wife and not to trespasses on real estate resulting in injury to others. Blakeslee v. Tyler, 55 Conn. 397.

Massachusetts.—Husband liable for sale of liquor by wife if near enough to influence wife. Com. v. Flaherty, 140 Mass. 454.

Michigan.—In an action of trespass for forcible disposition of one claiming as tenant, it was held that personal assaults made by defendant's wife in his presence were admissible, while those made while he was not present should have been excluded. Baumier v. Antiau, 65 Mich. 31.

The wife is not chargeable with the fraudulent intent of her husband, notwithstanding he may have been her agent in the management of her property and the conduct of her business. Plinsky v. Germania, F. & M. Ins. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 47.

New Jersey.—Since the enactment of the statutes empowering married women to transact business independently of their husbands, they will be held more amenable to the same rules as other persons in reference to what may amount to fraud. Silverthorne v. Troxall, 12 Atl. Rep. 614.

New York.—Under the statutes of New York, the husband must be joined as defendant in an action for the tort of the wife (having no relation to her separate property), and is liable for recovery had therein. Mongam v. Peck, 111 N. Y. 401; Fitzgerald v. Quann, 109 N. Y. 441. A wife who received property through the fraudulent acts of her husband acting as her agent is liable for the consequences of such acts to the persons injured. Rush v. Dilks, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 282.

A married woman may have such community of interest with her husband in relation to real estate as will render her liable for his frauds relating to it; and when he, professing to act as her agent, makes false representations although without her knowledge, and she receives the proceeds, she cannot retain the fruits of his fraud. Noel v. Kinney, 106 N. Y. 74.

Pennsylvania.—Since the passage of the Pennsylvania Married Persons Property act of June 3rd, 1887 (Pub. Laws, 333) a husband is no longer liable for torts committed by his wife alone. Vocht v. Kuklence, 119 Pa. St. 365.

That act does not deprive a married woman of her common law exemption from arrest on capias ad respondendum or capias ad satisfaciendum in a civil action for a tort committed by her. Vocht v. Kuklence, 119 Pa. St. 365, supra; Whalen v. Gabell, 120 Pa. St. 284.

A married woman is personally liable for a tort committed by her, unless her husband was personally present and directed the doing of it at the time. If directed by him, he alone is liable. Franklin's Appeal, 115 Pa. 534.

Where the evidence shows a wrongful conversion of trust funds by a married woman, her estate is liable in dam-

3. Torts Connected with Contracts.—For her torts so intimately connected with her invalid contracts that in order to hold her liable for them her invalid contract would have to be substantially enforced, a married woman is not responsible.¹ Thus, she cannot be sued for getting credit by false and fraudulent representations that she is unmarried,² or has property she can charge,³ or for misusing property of which she is a bailee,³ or for misappropriating money entrusted to her.⁴ But if her contract is valid, the rule does not apply; thus, she is liable for false and fraudulent representations made in effecting a valid sale of her separate property.⁵

VII. CRIMES OF MARRIED WOMEN—1. Liability of Married Women for Crime.—A married woman continues liable for any crime committed before her marriage,⁶ and during coverture may render herself liable to prosecution for any crime as if unmarried, with the following exceptions: (1) She cannot be guilty of conspiracy with her husband;⁷ (2) or of larceny for appropriating his goods;⁸ (3) she cannot be prosecuted for receiving goods her husband has stolen;⁹ (4) or for aiding him to escape detection in a crime he has committed.¹⁰

2. Proof and Presumption of Guilt.—To convict a married woman for an act which would be criminal were she unmarried when it was committed, it must affirmatively appear (1) that her husband was absent at the time, for from his presence his coercion is implied;¹¹ (2) or that being present he did not or could not coerce her;¹² (3) or that it is a crime malum in se (murder, robbery, treason, etc.);¹³ or peculiarly feminine (as keeping a bawdy house)¹⁴ or specially covered by a statute expressly referring to married women.¹⁵ ages although the trust funds be not identified as a part of her estate. There was no evidence of coercion by the husband. Franklin's Appeal, 115 Pa. 534. See also Wheeler v. Heil, 115 Pa. St. 487.

Virginia.—Where a wife is sued as a sole trader, under the Virginia Married Women's act, April 4th, 1877, in an action of unlawful detainer, the consent or nonconcurrence of her husband can have no effect whatever. Farley v. Tillar, 81 Va. 275.

Vermont.—Husband and wife jointly liable for her tort, but his liability terminates on her death. Southworth v. Kimball, 58 Vt. 337. See also Lombard v. Batchelder, 88 Vt. 558; Doherty v. Madgett, 58 Vt. 323.

1. See section 8 of division V, above, and Stewart on H. & W., § 424.

2. Liverpool v. Fairhurst, 9 Ex. 422, 429.

3. Patterson v. Frazer, 5 La. An. 586; Barnes v. Harris, Busbee (N. Car.) L. 15, 16; Barnes v. Harris, Busbee (N. Car. Law) 15, 16.

4. Andrews v. Ormsbee, 11 Mo. 400, 402; Carleton v. Haywood, 49 N. H. 314, 320.

5. Baum v. Mullen, 47 N. Y. 577, 579.

6. This had never been questioned.

7. People v. Mather, 4 Wend. (N. Y.)

229.

8. Com. v. Hartnett, 3 Gray (Mass.)

450.

9. Reg. v. Brooks, Dears. C. C. 184;

Desty Crim. Law, § 17a.

10. Desty Crim. Law, §§ 15a-17a. For the discussion of this subject see Vol.

9, pp. 796, 826, 827.

11. See note 2, p. 827, vol. 9.

12. Nolan v. Traber, 49 Md. 469. It is the right and duty of the husband to prevent his wife from doing wrong and he may use force if necessary. See note 1, p. 828, vol. 9.

13. Com. v. Neal, 10 Mass. 152; 6 Am. Dec. 105; Desty Crim. Law, § 16a.

14. Com. v. Cheney, 114 Mass. 281; Desty Crim. Law, § 16a.

15. See Md. Rev. Code 1878, art 12, § 42. See vol. 9, pp. 796, 826, 827.

VIII. SUITS OF MARRIED WOMEN—1. Rights and Remedies, How Connected.—The remedies by and against married women are peculiarly connected with their rights, and in any discussion of married women's suits the nature of the rights involved must be kept constantly in mind.¹

2. Effect of Marriage on Pending Suits.—The marriage of a woman does not, at common law, destroy her liability on her antenuptial contracts,² or for her antenuptial torts,³ but simply renders her husband jointly liable with her;⁴ nor does she by marriage entirely lose her rights of action, for, though her husband may reduce them to possession, if not so reduced during coverture they survive to her;⁵ so that if a suit is pending at the time of marriage, after marriage the husband has interests to be affected, and the opposing party stands in a new position, and the suit abates.⁶ But at present the effect of marriage on pending suits is almost entirely controlled by local statutes. In Alabama, for instance, the suit does not abate, but the marriage is suggested, and the husband is joined;⁷ while in Tennessee the suit abates, may be revived against her husband, and in case of his death survives against her.⁸ It is said a defendant may plead in abatement, or by scire facias have the husband made a party;⁹ and if he omits to do this, cannot allege coverture after judgment;¹⁰ or, if the woman is a defendant, and no plea is entered, the suit may proceed to execution without noticing the marriage,¹¹ and she may be taken in execution as if sole.¹² Generally speaking, if the husband is a necessary party to a suit brought during coverture, he should be joined upon his marriage in all his wife's antenuptial suits.¹³

3. Married Women's Suits at Common Law.—At common law, speaking generally, a married woman could neither sue nor be sued unless her husband was joined with her,¹⁴ and this is still prima facie the rule, and the causes which enable her to sue or render her liable to be sued at all must be alleged and proved.¹⁵ At common law the suit was treated as the suit of the husband

1. For rights and liabilities see article on HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9.

2. Discussed ante, III, § 7.

3. Discussed ante, VI, § 1.

4. Discussed vol. 9, p. 822.

5. Discussed vol. 9, p. 845.

6. See cases cited, infra.

7. Lamkin v. Dudley, 34 Ala. 116, 117.

8. Parker v. Steed, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 206.

9. James v. Tait, 8 Port. (Ala.) 476; Townshend v. Townshend, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 373; Bates v. Stevens, 4 Vt. 545.

10. Bates v. Stevens, 4 Vt. 545.

11. Evans v. Lipscomb, 28 Ga. 71; Sacket v. Wilson, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 85.

12. Haines v. Corliss, 4 Mass. 659.

13. Gibson v. Gibson, 43 Wis. 23, 28; 28 Am. Rep. 527.

14. Porter v. Bank of Rutland, 19 Vt. 410. "At law, as a general rule, a married woman can neither sue nor be sued, unless in connection with her husband. But in chancery, whenever the interests of the two are conflicting, the wife is allowed to bring a suit against her husband, and the husband against the wife, as if they were sole and unmarried." See page 798, vol. 9.

15. Smith v. New England Bank, 45 Conn. 416, 420; Durden v. McWilliams, 31 Ala. 438; Lewis v. Moore, 25 Ark. 63; Hyatt v. Cochran, 85 Ind. 231; Ridgely v. Crandall, 4 Md. 435; Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. 31.

and he could, as defendant, allow judgment to be entered,¹ or, as plaintiff, release the cause of action.² He employed the counsel³ and was liable for the costs.⁴

4. Married Women's Suits in Equity.—In equity, independently of statute, suits of married women, except those for enforcing her equity to a settlement and those concerning her equitable separate estate, are governed by the same rules which control suits at law.⁵ Still in equity, neither the husband's bill nor his answer is binding upon her.⁶ When applying for her settlement out of her choses in action, she sues by her next friend, generally making her husband one of the defendants.⁷ As to her equitable separate estate, she sues by her next friend and jointly with her trustee, if she has one, making her husband a defendant if his interests in any way conflict;⁸ and when she is sued, her trustee (if she has any) should be joined;⁹ and she may come in and give a separate answer by next friend.¹⁰

5. Married Women's Suits Under Statutes.—In the different States, statutes have so differently changed the procedure in suits of married women that no general statement can be given; the statutes of the State where the peculiar suit is brought must in each case be consulted.¹¹

6. Effect of Dissolution of Marriage on Pending Suits.—At common law, on the dissolution of marriage, the joint suit of husband and wife in her right abated;¹² at present, generally, the suit will either abate and have to be revived by her representatives, or may be amended and continued by her or her representatives.¹³ If the joinder of the husband is merely formal, there is usually no abatement.¹⁴ Thus, in case of her husband's death she has her right of action on her chose in action as survivor;¹⁵ and if she dies, he, at common law, prosecutes the suit as survivor or as administrator.¹⁶ Divorce has much the same effect as the husband's death.¹⁷

1. Vick v. Pope, 81 N. Car. 22, 26.

2. Southworth v. Packard, 7 Mass. 95, 96.

3. Frazier v. Felton, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 231, 237.

4. Discussed in section 7 to VIII, below.

5. Porter v. Bank of Rutland, 19 Vt. 410; Stewart on H. & W., §§ 210, 211, 431.

6. Bein v. Heath, 6 How. (U. S.) 228; Grant v. Van Schoonhoven, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 255, 257; Bird v. Davis, 14 N. J. Eq. 467, 479.

7. Bradley v. Emerson, 7 Vt. 369.

8. Johnson v. Vail, 14 N. J. Eq. 423.

9. Palmer v. Rankins, 30 Ark. 771.

10. Wolf v. Banning, 3 Minn. 202.

11. Powers v. Totten, 42 N. J. L. 442, 443.

12. Pattee v. Harrington, 11 Pick.

(Mass.) 221, 222. "By the common law the death of the wife would put an end to this suit."

13. Same case at 221. "If, pending an action brought by husband and wife to recover a debt due to the wife when sole, the wife dies and the husband takes out administration on her estate, he may come in and prosecute the suit as administrator." Tallmadge v. Grannis, 20 Conn. 296; Wass v. Plummer, 68 Me. 267; Wood v. Griffin, 46 N. H. 230; Armstrong v. Colby, 47 Vt. 360, 368; Meese v. Fond Du Lac, 48 Wis. 323.

14. Calderwood v. Pyser, 31 Cal. 333.

15. Story v. Baird, 14 N. J. L. 262, 268; King v. Little, 77 N. Car. 138; Little v. Keyes, 24 Vt. 118, 121.

16. Palter v. Harrington, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 221.

17. Tuttle v. Fowler, 22 Conn. 58, 63; Stewart on M. & D., § 430.

7. Costs in Suits of Married Women.—(1) Married Women Plaintiffs. At common law a married woman suing as plaintiff (except in cases in which she could sue alone) was an inactive party, the control of the suit being in her husband, and was not liable for costs;¹ nor could costs incurred in a suit at law be charged on her equitable separate estate in equity.² Owing to this immunity of a married woman from costs, she could not sue alone in equity even, but had to proceed by next friend, that someone might be responsible in case of loss of the suit;³ and some modern enabling acts have required the next friend to be joined, presumably for the same reason.⁴ But if the married woman has separate property, and the right to sue with respect thereto, it must bear the costs of an unsuccessful suit relating to it.⁵ If she can sue alone, her privilege is accompanied with the usual burdens and she is liable for costs.⁶

(2) Married Women Defendants.—If a judgment can be obtained against a married woman which will be binding on her property, the judgment is equally binding, though it includes costs.⁷ But when her husband is or should be joined with her, a decree for costs against her alone cannot be passed.⁸

8. Modes in Which Married Women's Suits May be Brought.—Under different laws and circumstances, married women's suits have been properly brought in the following modes: (1) By husband and wife jointly;⁹

1. Harper v. Whitehead, 33 Ga. 138, 144. "In equity a feme covert, being entitled to property separate and distinct from her husband, may sue in her own name, and in that case a person, or prochein ami, is required to be joined with her, only that he may be responsible for the costs of the proceedings in case it should appear that the suit is improperly instituted or conducted." Kimbro v. First Nat. Bank, 1 McArth. (D. C.) 61, 65; Musgrave v. Musgrave, 54 Ill. 186; Hubbard v. Barcus, 38 Md. 166, 174.

2. Kimbro v. First Nat. Bank, 1 McArth. (D. C.) 61, 66.

3. Harper v. Whitehead, 33 Ga. 138, 144; Baker v. Baker, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) Eq. 165.

4. Frazier v. White, 49 Md. 1, 8.

5. Musgrave v. Musgrave, 54 Ill. 186, 188.

6. Leonard v. Townsend, 26 Cal. 435; Moncrief v. Ward, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 354, n.

7. Post, § 17, part VIII.

8. Hubbard v. Barcus, 38 Md. 166. "A feme covert could not be decreed to pay the costs of the proceedings without joining her husband."

9. Suits by Husband and Wife Jointly.—At common law on all rights of action in which the wife had any interest, the husband and wife sued jointly. Howe's Parties to Actions, §§ 63-66.

They so sued for all damages to her property and for all debts due her. Berger v. Belsley, 45 Ill. 72, 74. See also Lignoski v. Bruce, 8 Fla. 269; Gee v. Lewis, 20 Ind. 149; Tribble v. Fryers, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 179; Petty v. Malier, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 246; Wyatt v. Simpson, 8 W. Va. 394.

The husband joined even in her suits as administratrix or guardian. Brick v. Fisher, 2 Colo. 709, 710; Byrne v. Van Hoesen, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 66; Mitchell v. Wright, 4 Tex. 283.

The suit was really the suit of the husband, as it was in his exclusive control—Vick v. Pope, 81 N. Car. 22, 26; and as he could employ the lawyers,—Frazier v. Felton, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 231, 237; and was alone responsible for the costs. Bellinger v. Thomson, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 30. All of which is separately discussed in this article.

In such suits the interest of the wife must affirmatively appear. Lewis v. Moore, 25 Ark. 63; Ridgely v. Crandall, 4 Md. 435; Pickering v. De Roche-mont, 45 N. H. 67. And the marriage must be alleged. Milton v. Haden, 32

(2) by the wife and her trustee;¹ (3) by the wife through her next friend,²

Ala. 30. If the wife sues alone, the declaration may be amended and the husband joined. Glick v. Hartman, 10 Iowa 410; Sherron v. Hall, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 498.

If she sued alone and no objection was made by plea, none could have been made afterward. Quarrier v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 20 W. Va. 424. Still a suit for partition brought by her alone would not pass a good title as her husband's estate would not be destroyed. Spring v. Sandford, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 550.

Husband need not be joined generally in suits respecting equitable separate property. Bradley v. Emerson, 7 Vt. 369, 371. Or statutory separate property. Emerson v. Clayton, 32 Ill. 493, 497.

Sometimes, however, husband's joinder is required "for conformity," but there is a question as to whether his joinder in suit respecting separate property would not be error. That it would be, see Hayner v. Smith, 63 Ill. 430, 432; Harris v. Webster, 58 N. H. 481. That it would not be, see Keys v. Phelan, 19 Cal. 128, 129; Herzberg v. Sachse, 60 Md. 426, 432; Burns v. Lynde, 6 Allen (Mass.) 305. Of course he should be joined whenever he has substantial rights. Wing v. Goodman, 75 Ill. 159; Henry v. Gregory, 29 Mich. 68; Armstrong v. Colby, 47 Vt. 360.

1. Suits of Married Women by Trustees.

—Where a suit affects separate property held by a trustee, the trustee should join with the married woman in the suit. See Friend v. Oliver, 27 Ala. 532, 534; Smith v. Chapell, 31 Conn. 589, 593; Schenk v. Ellingwood, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 175. Very generally the husband is the trustee, and the suit is therefore brought by the husband and wife jointly, but in such cases the husband has not the full control of the suit which he has when joined simply as husband. Riley v. Riley, 25 Conn. 154, 161.

2. Suit Through Next Friend.—The usual mode in which married women proceed in equity is by next friend. Bein v. Heath, 6 How. (U. S.) 228, 240; Harper v. Whitehead, 33 Ga. 138, 144; Kenley v. Kenley, 3 Miss. 751, 753; Srant v. Van Schoonhoven, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 255, 257; 37 Am. Dec. 393; Garlick v. Strong, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 440; Jordan v. Gray, 19 Ala. 618; Bel- linger v. Thomson, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 30; Baker v. Baker, 1 Bail. (S. Car.) Eq. 165; Leftwick v. Hamilton, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 310, 313; Bradley v. Emerson, 7 Vt. 369, 371.

The next friend is joined in order that the court may have a person sui juris subject to its orders. Leftwick v. Hamilton, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 310, 313. And in order that there may be some one responsible for costs. Harper v. Whitehead, 33 Ga. 138, 144; ante, § 7.

If wife has sued alone she may amend and join her next friend. Garlick v. Strong, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 440; Willis v. Underhill, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 396.

Her husband is generally her next friend. Bein v. Heath, 6 How. (U. S.) 228, 240. And in one case this is said to be his right if he has no conflicting interests. Bradley v. Emerson, 7 Vt. 369, 371.

But anyone may be her next friend. Leftwick v. Hamilton, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 310, 313; Garlick v. Strong, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 440. And husband cannot be such when he has conflicting interests. Bradley v. Emerson, 7 Vt. 369, 371.

Wife in suing husband must proceed by next friend. Hunt v. Booth, 1 Freem. (Miss.) Ch. 215; Kenley v. Kenley, 3 Miss. 751, 753.

She may sue trustees of her separate estate by next friend. Robert v. West, 15 Ga. 122, 148. And in same mode may file a bill for discovery in aid of suit, which she is maintaining alone at law. Bellinger v. Thomson, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 30.

A married woman is not bound by a bill filed by her husband, if filed for them jointly. Blackwell v. Bragg, 78 Va. 529. But she is if it was filed by him as next friend. Bein v. Heath, 6 How. (U. S.) 228, 239, 240.

The next friend may make affidavit to the bill. Leftwick v. Hamilton, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 310, 313.

The wife is the substantial party, and if she gives the next friend security for costs, may dismiss the bill against his wishes. Brawner v. Bell, 30 Ga. 334, 336.

Wife cannot sue at law by next friend. Jordan v. Gray, 19 Ala. 618. Except by statute. Smith v. Smith, 18 Fla. 789; Frazier v. White, 49 Md. 1, 8; Fox v. Tooke, 34 Mo. 509.

A statute enabling wife to sue by next and (4) by the wife alone.¹ The first mode was the only one at common law, unless the wife had for some reason the capacity of a feme sole;² the second and third were the usual modes of procedure in equity respecting equitable separate property;³ and the fourth was the mode in which a wife who, on account of her husband's civil death, etc., had the capacities of a feme sole, brought suit at common law⁴ and is the usual way in which she sues under modern statutes.⁵ Although many statutes giving married women modes of suits unknown at common law have been construed to supersede the common law modes, and to make a suit brought as at common law improper,⁶ a statute which enables a married woman to sue by next friend does not necessarily deprive her of the privilege of proceeding jointly with him as at common law;⁷ and in other cases, the common law mode has been held not wholly superseded.⁸ friend does not by implication destroy her right to sue jointly with her husband. Herzberg v. Sachse, 60 Md. 426, 432.

1. Suits by Wife Alone.—(1) At common law, a married woman could sue in her own name alone, in all cases where she had the capacities of a feme sole. See Clark v. Valentine, 41 Ga. 143, 145; Love v. Moynahan, 16 Ill. 279, 282; Berger v. Belsley, 45 Ill. 72, 74; Smith v. Silence, 4 Iowa 322, 324; Laughlin v. Eaton, 54 Me. 156, 159; Worthington v. Cooke, 52 Md. 297, 308; Gregory v. Pierce, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 478, 479; Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. 31, 32; Rose v. Bates, 12 Mo. 30; Osborn v. Nelson, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 375; Benadum v. Pratt, 1 Ohio St. 403, 405; Fallwickle v. Keith, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 360, 361; Cole v. Seeley, 25 Vt. 220; 60 Am. Dec. 258; ante, I, § 2.

She could do so when her husband was presumably dead. Smith v. Silence, 4 Iowa 321, 324. When he was civilly dead. Bradley v. Emerson, 7 Vt. 369, 370. When he was an alien residing abroad. Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. 31, 32. When he had permanently abandoned her and the country. Love v. Moynahan, 16 Ill. 279, 282. When he had been divorced a vinculo matrimonii. Webster v. Webster, 58 Me. 139, 145; 4 Am. Rep. 253; Berry v. Teel, 12 R. I. 267, 268. Or a mensa et thoro. Benadum v. Pratt, 1 Ohio St. 403, 405.

(2) Under statutes in many States married women are able to sue alone, and usually such statutes involve no great difficulties. The authority to sue alone in one class of cases does not, however, affect the procedure in other cases, the construction being strict.

Gerald v. McKenzie, 27 Ala. 166, 170. A statute authorizing suits alone as to "separate estate," has been held to refer only to statutory separate property. Gerald v. McKenzie, 27 Ala. 166, 170. There is more difficulty as to married women's capacity to sue alone derived by implication from statutes defining their rights. A statute enabling a wife to contract as if sole enables her to sue alone thereupon. Reynard v. Memphis Ins. Co., 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 279.

A statute enabling a wife to hold, etc., her separate property as a feme sole enables her to sue alone respecting it. Emerson v. Clayton, 32 Ill. 493, 497; Gibson v. Gibson, 43 Wis. 23, 26, 28; Am. Rep. 527. In replevin, for example. Waterman v. Matteson, 4 R. I. 539.

Many cases hold that when a married woman may sue alone it is error to join her husband in the suit. Hayner v. Smith, 63 Ill. 430, 432. To the contrary, Windsor v. Bell, 61 Ga. 671, 676.

If the husband has any interest he may of course join. Hayner v. Smith, 63 Ill. 430, 432 (to the contrary, Windsor v. Bell, 61 Ga. 671, 676); Henry v. Gregory, 29 Mich. 68, 69.

2. See ante, I, § 2.

3. See ante, I, §§ 3, 4.

4. Worthington v. Cooke, 52 Md. 297.

5. See supra, n. 1.

6. See Rockwell v. Clark, 44 Conn. 534; Alexanders v. Goodwin, 54 N. H. 423, 424; Palmer v. Davis, 28 N. Y. 242.

7. Abraham v. Tappe, 60 Md. 317, 323; Herzberg v. Sachse, 60 Md. 426, 432.

8. See Keys v. Phelan, 19 Cal. 128; East Tenn. R. Co. v. Cox, 57 Ga. 252;

9. Actions and Defences.—(1) The Causes of Action on Which Married Women May Sue.—The cause of action on which a suit of a married woman is brought may be an antenuptial or postnuptial injury to or contract with her, or a chose in action assigned to her before or after her marriage, and it may concern herself or her property; or the suit may be for relief respecting her property, general or separate. The mode of procedure in each case is elsewhere separately discussed; it depends very largely on the substantial rights of husband and wife, and therefore differs with circumstances and with respect to different kinds of property.¹

(2) The Defences in Suits Brought by Married Women.—The defence of the woman's coverture is, of course, a defence peculiar to married women's suits;² her disabilities to some extent affect the defence of limitations;³ and the fact of her husband's joinder to some degree complicates the principles relating to the defence of set off.⁴ As to other defences there seem to be no points peculiar to suits of married women.

10. The Plea of Coverture Against Married Women.—If the married woman has a right of action, but pursues the wrong remedy, as if she sues alone when her husband or her trustee or next friend should be joined, her coverture must be set up by a plea in abatement,⁵ likewise if her coverture appears on the face of the pleadings by demurrer;⁶ and in the absence of such plea or demurrer the objection is waived and cannot be made at all.⁷ If she sues jointly with a man who apparently has no interest, and does not allege their marriage, the declaration is demurrable;⁸ so if, though the marriage be alleged, the interest of the wife and her right to sue do not affirmatively appear, the declaration is demurrable;⁹ and in such cases the defect is not cured by verdict.¹⁰ But Windsor v. Bell, 61 Ga. 671, 676; supra, n. 1, p. 644.

1. See notes to § 2, part VIII, above, and § 429, Stewart on Husband and Wife.

2. See n. 5-10, infra; n. 1-5, p. 656.

3. See n. 6-12, p. 656; n. 1-15, p. 657.

4. McMahon v. Burchell, 5 Hare 322; Elibank v. Montohen, 5 Ves. 737; Carr v. Taylor, 10 Ves. 574; Carver v. Carver, 53 Ind. 241, 244; Lane v. Fallen, 16 Md. 352, 357; Carpenter v. Leonard, 5 Minn. 119; Pierce v. Dustin, 24 N. H. 117; Ferguson v. Lathrop, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 625; Hulby v. Camplin, 22 Tex. 582.

5. Dutton v. Rice, 53 N. H. 496, 499. "It is laid down as a general position, in Com. Dig., that coverture in a woman, when either plaintiff or defendant, must be pleaded in abatement. . . . Chitty says . . . her coverture can only be pleaded in abatement and cannot be given in evidence under the general issue, or pleaded in bar; at least this rule obtains in actions for torts. 1 Chitty Pl. 449; and see the precedent in 3 Chitty Pl. 899." Chirac v. Reinicker, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 280, 303; James v. Stewart, 9 Ala. 855; Young v. Ward, 21 Ill. 223, 225; Walker v. Gilman, 45 Me. 28, 30; Simmons v. Thomas, 43 Miss. 31; Quarrier v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 20 W. Va. 424.

6. Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533; Tapley v. Tapley, 10 Minn. 360; Kenley v. Kenley, 3 Miss. 751, 753.

7. Chirac v. Reinicker, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 280, 303; Surtell v. Brailsford, 2 Bay. (S. Car.) 333, 338; Ross v. Linder, 12 S. Car. 592.

8. See Milton v. Hayden, 32 Ala. 30; Tanner v. White, 15 Ala. 798; Stewart on H. & W., § 439.

9. Hyatt v. Cochran, 85 Ind. 231; Williams v. Brainard, 52 Vt. 392.

10. Smith v. Bank of New England, 45 Conn. 416.

if the wife has no right of action at all, the defendant may have a nonsuit;¹ and if this is apparent on the pleadings, it is fatal on demurrer,² or in arrest of judgment,³ or on error.⁴ Of course, if the wife has the right to sue alone and so sues, a plea of coverture is bad.⁵

11. Plea of Limitations Against Married Women.—Although long delay may raise a prima facie presumption of payment independently of statute,⁶ the plea of limitations as an absolute bar depends entirely on statute;⁷ and statutes of limitation are of equal force in equity and at law.⁸ By the British statute of James, and most of the American statutes based upon it, a special saving is made in favor of married women, so that as a general rule a married woman is not barred from prosecuting a right which accrues during coverture, by any lapse of time occurring before the dissolution of her marriage.⁹ Thus, when a party acquires property from a husband during coverture, the wife of such husband is not barred from claiming the property as hers by any lapse of time before his death;¹⁰ and against a wife who lends money to her husband, limitations begin to run only from the date of his death or divorce.¹¹ In the statutes of Iowa, Missouri, New York and Wisconsin, there seem to be no saving clauses in favor of married women; in Massachusetts the saving clause operates only if the wife is "under disability"; in California, Indiana and Kentucky, only if she cannot sue alone; and in West Virginia, cases in which she can sue alone are excepted from the saving operation of the clause. But whether statutes enabling married women to sue alone, by implication repeal the saving clause in the statute of limitation, is disputed; on the one hand, it is held that when a wife can sue as if unmarried, the reason for the exception is gone, and therefore the exception can no longer exist;¹² while it is, on the other hand, maintained that the privileges of married women can be removed only by express legislation, and that their safety from limitations secured by the general statute must continue to

1. Dutton v. Rice, 53 N. H. 496, 499; James v. Stewart, 9 Ala. 855; Kimbro v. First Nat. Bank, 1 McArthur (D. C.) 61, 66; Newton v. Robinson, 1 Tayl. (N. Car.) 72, 76.

2. Kenley v. Kenley, 3 Miss. 751, 753.

3. Kimbro v. First Nat. Bank, 1 McArthur (D. C.) 61.

4. Same case.

5. Farman v. Chamberlain, 74 Ind. 82, 83.

6. Plea of Limitations Against Married Women.—Piatt v. Smith, 12 Ohio St. 561; Meanor v. Hamilton, 27 Pa. St. 137, 143.

7. Hodges v. Darden, 51 Miss. 199. "This section protects the rights of married women as plaintiffs, if at the time the right accrued the disability existed; but there is no saving in behalf of a creditor of a married woman on account of her disability of coverture, and there is no power in the courts to make one."

8. Kutz's Appeal, 40 Pa. St. 90, 94.

9. Meegan v. Boyle, 19 How. 130, 135; Sledge v. Clopton, 6 Ala. 580, 606; Drenner v. Walker, 21 Ark. 539, 545; Flynt v. Hatchett, 9 Ga. 328; Burke v. Beveridge, 11 Minn. 205, 211.

10. Jones v. Reeves, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 132, 137.

11. Towers v. Hagner, 3 Whart. (Pa.) 48, 60; Bradley v. Sadler, 54 Ga. 681, 686; Oswald v. Hoover, 43 Md. 360, 368.

12. Geisen v. Heiderich, 104 Ill. 537. "The acts of 1861 and 1874, enlarging the rights and legal capacities of mar-exist until expressly taken away.¹ In coming to a determination on this point, the language of the particular statutes is of course of great importance. A statute which excepts persons "under legal disabilities," excepts married women so far as they are under disabilities only.² Coverture is not, however, the only ground for exception under the statutes; infancy is another common one; and a married woman cannot tack one of these disabilities to another.³ Thus, if an infant with a right of action marries, the statute begins to run in spite of her coverture, when she comes of full age,⁴ and so when limitations have not run against a married woman on account of her coverture, and she dies, her heirs cannot set up their infancy as a further reason why the statute should not run.⁵ But if, when the right accrues, the woman is both married and an infant, the statute begins to run only when both of the disabilities are removed.⁶ If the statute once begins to run, no subsequently incurred disability can stop it; therefore a wife is not saved from the operation of the statute if she had the right of action at the time of her marriage;⁷ and so, if her right accrues during coverture, and her husband dies, the statute begins to run on the day of his death, and does not stop when she marries again.⁸ The plea of limitations can be set up only by the parties or those claiming under them.⁹ The saving in favor of a married woman does not prevent limitations from running against her husband¹⁰ or her assignees;¹¹ the husband's delay may bar his right to the estate during coverture,¹² and to curtesy,¹³ and in case of her death, if he has curtesy, the statute does not run against her heirs until the estate of curtesy has terminated.¹⁴ Limitations do not run in favor of a husband's heirs against his widow's claim for dower.¹⁵

12. The Modes in Which Married Women May be Sued.—Under different laws and circumstances suits have been brought properly against married women in the following modes: (1) Jointly with husband;¹⁶

ried women, have, by implication, repealed all savings in their favor in existing limitation laws, including the one relating to the prosecution of writs of error." Brown v. Cousens, 51 Me. 301, 306; Dunham v. Sage, 52 N. Y. 230.

1. Morrison v. Norman, 47 Ill. 477, 481; Ball v. Bullard, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 141, 146; Westcott v. Miller, 42 Wis. 454, 464.

2. Bauman v. Grubbs, 26 Ind. 419, 421.

3. Blackwell v. Bragg, 78 Va. 529, 536; Carter v. Cantrell, 16 Ark. 154, 164; Henry v. Carson, 59 Pa. St. 297, 308.

4. Carter v. Cantrell, 16 Ark. 154, 164.

5. Henry v. Carson, 59 Pa. St. 297, 308.

6. Blackwell v. Bragg, 78 Va. 529, 536.

7. Welborn v. Weaver, 17 Ga. 267, 270.

8. McDonald v. McGuire, 8 Tex. 361, 365.

9. State v. Layton, 4 Har. (Del.) 8, 19; Watson v. Kelly, 16 N. J. L. 517, 524.

10. Neal v. Robertson, 2 Dana (Ky.) 86, 88; McDowell v. Potter, 8 Pa. St. 189, 194.

11. Thompson v. Peebles, 6 Dana (Ky.) 387, 390.

12. Murdoch v. Johnson, 7 Cold. (Tenn.) 605, 609.

13. See preceding note.

14. Marple v. Myers, 12 Pa. St. 122, 127.

15. Webb v. Smith, 40 Ark. 17, 24.

16. Married Women Sued Jointly with Husband.—As a rule, independently of

(2) jointly with trustee,¹ and (3) alone.² The first was the invariable mode at common law, not only because the husband was jointly liable with the wife on all her contracts and torts, but because he had present substantial interests in all her property which might be affected by the suit.³ The second was the mode when the wife had a trustee of equitable separate property.⁴ The third was the mode in which a wife with the capacities of a feme sole was sued,⁵ and is the usual mode under the statutes.⁶

13. The Service of Process on Married Women.—At common law, a married woman sued jointly with her husband did not have to be summoned personally—service on her husband was sufficient,⁷ unless the proceeding was one affecting her separate property.⁸ If the husband has complete control of the suit he can admit summons for her, otherwise not.⁹ It has been held that one copy statute, a husband must be joined in all suits against his wife, at law or equity. Marshall v. Oakes, 51 Me. 308; Porter v. Bank of Rutland, 19 Vt. 410, 417.

As to his joint liability see article HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9.

Under the statute he is usually joined when he is liable. Robinson v. Trofitter, 109 Mass. 478. But not when he is not. Hagebrush v. Ragland, 78 Ill. 40; Carothers v. McWese, 43 Tex. 221. Sometimes the husband is joined for conformity only. Cook v. Lyon, 54 Miss. 368, 372; Hamlin v. Bridge, 24 Me. 145. He should be joined in possessory actions against the wife, as her possession is his possession. Howard v. Valentine, 20 Cal. 282.

1. Suits Against Wife Jointly with Trustee.—Wherever there is a trustee he should be joined in suits affecting the trust property. Palmer v. Rankins, 30 Ark. 771. If no trustee is named the husband is joined as such. See Sears v. Brooks, 12 Ga. 195, 197. When the wife answers separately she does so by next friend. Wolf v. Barning, 3 Minn. 202; Phillips v. Burr, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 113. If an infant, a guardian ad litem should be appointed. Nicholson v. Wilborn, 13 Ga. 467.

2. Suits Against Married Women Alone.—Independently of statute, a married woman could be sued alone only in cases in which, by the common law, she enjoyed the status of a feme sole. Worthington v. Cooke, 52 Md. 297, 308; Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. 31, 34. Compare cases cited under VIII, § 8, showing she can be sued when her husband is dead, or civilly dead, or an alien residing abroad, or has abjured the realm, or is divorced. Even in equity her husband had to be joined unless there was a trustee. Porter v. Bank of Rutland, 19 Vt. 410, 417. Statutes authorizing suits against her alone are common. Statutes which destroy her husband's common law liability on her torts and contracts, or enable her to incur liabilities unknown at common law, impliedly authorize suits against her alone. Morrell v. Cawley, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 76.

3. See infra, VIII, 3.

4. See infra, VIII, 4.

5. See infra, VIII, 3, 5, etc.; IX.

6. See infra, VIII, 5.

7. Hollinger v. Bank of Mobile, 8 Ala. 605; Lord v. Strong, 1 Root (Conn.) 475; King v. McCampbell, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 435; Nicholson v. Cox, 83 N. Car. 44, 47.

8. Piggott v. Snell, 59 Ill. 106. "The common law rule, that service of summons against husband and wife, on the husband alone, is good against both, is so far changed by the legislation in this State in respect to the right of property of married women, that whenever it is sought by a judicial proceeding to affect the rights of property of a married woman, she must be served with process, and even at common law it has been held necessary, where the plaintiff is seeking relief out of the separate estate of the wife, that the wife should be served." Smith v. Taylor, 11 Ga. 20; Moore v. Wade, 8 Kan. 380, 385; Kerchner v. Kempton, 47 Md. 568, 590; Foot v. Lathrop, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 183, 185; Vick v. Pope, 81 N. Car. 22, 25; Shelby v. Perrin, 18 Tex. 515, 517.

9. Moore v. Wade, 8 Kan. 380, 385; Nicholson v. Cox, 83 N. Car. 44, 47.

of the summons left at the family residence is sufficient summons for both husband and wife,¹ and that they are presumed to have the same residence.² As personal service is necessary only to give personal jurisdiction,³ it has been held that service on a married woman is not necessary when the proceeding is one in rem against her separate property—a case of attachment.⁴ Service on a wife is not, however, service on her husband.⁵

14. Actions and Defences—(1) The Causes of Action on Which Married Women May be Sued.—At common law, a married woman was liable to be sued only on her antenuptial contracts or torts, and on her postnuptial torts which she voluntarily committed; on such causes of action judgment could be obtained against her jointly with her husband, and any property of hers could be seized in execution.⁶ In equity, her equitable separate estate could be made liable by a proceeding in rem against it for all sums of money which she had properly, in accordance with the rule prevailing in the particular State, charged upon it.⁷ Under statutes, she may render herself and her property liable on her contracts, and the only difficulty as to the procedure in such cases is whether the suit shall be brought at law or in equity, and whether the proceeding shall be in personam or in rem. When the contract is binding on statutory separate estate only because such property is treated as if it were secured to the woman by deed instead of by statute, the proceeding must be in equity and in rem, just as if it were equitable separate property.⁸ But when the contract is made under the express or implied powers given by the terms of the statute, the proceeding should be at law as if she were sole;⁹ except that when the contract is valid only by virtue of a power attached to an ownership of property, the operation of the judgment must be limited to such property.¹⁰

(2) The Defences of Married Women.—The peculiar defence of married women is, of course, the defence of coverture. The fact of coverture in some cases affects the defence of limitations; and the fact that the husband is joined sometimes raises the question as to how far a defence of one will be available to

1. Lord v. Strong, 1 Root (Conn.) 475.

2. Prieto v. Duncan, 22 Ill. 26.

3. Moore v. Wade, 8 Kan. 380, 385.

4. Brent v. Taylor, 6 Md. 58, 69.

5. Hess v. Cole, 23 N. J. L. 116, 123.

6. Zachary v. Cadenhead, 40 Ala. 236, 238. "To hold otherwise would be to allow her to change her relation and liability to her creditors by her own act, and to lessen their security; while at common law the act of marriage did change that relation and liability, but it increased the security of the creditor by making the husband also liable for the debt during marriage."

7. See § 4, part III, above.

8. Grissell, L. R., 12 Ch. D. 484; Stillwell v. Adams, 29 Ark. 346, 351; Carpenter v. Mitchell, 50 Ill. 470, 474; Worthington v. Cooke, 52 Md. 297, 308; Devries v. Conklin, 22 Mich. 255; Walker v. Deaver, 79 Mo. 664, 674; Dougherty v. Sprinkle, 88 N. Car. 300, 302; Phillips v. Graves, 20 Ohio St. 371, 382.

9. Leonard v. Rogan, 20 Wis. 540; Richmond v. Tibbles, 26 Iowa 474, 476; Miner v. Pearson, 16 Kan. 28; Smith v. Dunning, 61 N. Y. 249, 251.

10. Baldwin v. Kimmel, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 353, 361.

the other.¹ The wife's bankruptcy, for example, discharges both her husband and herself from liability for her debts,² while his bankruptcy discharges him alone.³ As to other defences, there are no special points relating to married women, except so far as the management of the suit is concerned.

15. The Plea of Coverture by Married Women.—If a married woman is sued on an obligation on which she is not liable at all, she may, if the defect is apparent on the pleadings, demur;⁴ or she may plead her coverture in bar,⁵ or prove it under the general issue,⁶ or set it up after judgment on a writ of error,⁷ or a motion to set the judgment aside;⁸ and it has been even held that a judgment obtained in such a case against a married woman is a mere nullity, and may be so treated in collateral proceedings.⁹ The plaintiff cannot cure the defect in his proceedings by entering a nolle prosequi against the wife, except in the case of torts, because in a suit in contract recovery must be had against all or none.¹⁰ If she is liable on the obligation, but is improperly sued, her husband, next friend, or trustee not being joined, she must set up her coverture by a plea in abatement¹¹ (which, of course, must be put in before any plea in bar),¹² or, if the defect is apparent on the pleadings, by demurrer,¹³ and in the absence of such plea or demurrer the defence is waived and cannot be made at all.¹⁴ It is, perhaps, from a failure to recognize the distinction between the cases where the married woman is liable and is improperly sued, and the cases where she is not liable at all, that the great difference of opinion as to the effect of a judgment against her has arisen. When husband and wife are jointly sued for her tort, a plea of coverture is not sufficient, she must plead coverture, and the duress of her husband.¹⁵ In cases where the plea is good at all, it may be made generally, for the complaint must set out the grounds of her liability, and she need not negative them.¹⁶ In

1. See §§ 15, 16, below; Floore v. Steigelmayer, 76 Ind. 479, 481; State v. Layton, Har. (Del.) 8, 19; McDowell v. Potter, 8 Pa. St. 189, 194.

2. Chadwick v. Starrett, 27 Me. 138, 141.

3. Jones v. Glass, 48 Iowa 345, 346; Allers v. Forbes, 59 Md. 374, 376.

4. Leslie v. Harlow, 18 N. H. 518. "A declaration which shows upon its face that the action is against husband and wife, and founded upon their joint promise during the coverture, is bad upon demurrer."

5. Kennard v. Sax, 3 Oreg. 263.

6. Thomas v. Lowry, 60 Ill. 512, 515; Painter v. Weatherford, 1 Greene (Iowa) 97, 103.

7. Kennard v. Sax, 3 Oreg. 263, 266.

8. Kennard v. Sax, 3 Oreg. 263, 266.

9. Griffith v. Clarke, 18 Md. 457, 463.

10. McLean v. Griswold, 22 Ill. 218, 220; Thomas v. Lowry, 60 Ill. 512, 514.

11. McLean v. Griswold, 22 Ill. 218; Painter v. Weatherford, 1 Greene (Iowa) 97, 103; Tracy v. Keith, 11 Allen (Mass.) 214; Powers v. Totten, 42 N. J. L. 442.

12. Thomas v. Lowry, 60 Ill. 512, 514.

13. Long v. Dixon, 55 Ind. 352; Gardner v. Moore, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 313; Hastings v. McKinley, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 273.

14. Work v. Cowhick, 81 Ill. 317; Emmett v. Yandes, 60 Ind. 548; Van Shrader v. Taylor, 7 Mo. App. 361, 365; Caldwell v. Brown, 43 Tex. 216, 217.

15. Stockwell v. Thomas, 76 Ind. 506, 508; Burnett v. Nicholson, 86 N. Car. 99, 106; Clark v. Bayer, 32 Ohio St. 299, 311.

16. Tracey v. Keith, 11 Allen (Mass.) 214; Huff v. Wright, 39 Ga. 41.

some States she must sign her plea of coverture herself.¹ For at common law she could not appear by attorney, but only in person.²

16. The Plea of Limitations by Married Women.—When a married woman is sued, whether alone or not, limitations can in general be pleaded just as if the suit were against a person under disability; for statutes of limitation do not usually make any exception as to claim against married women.³ And when a married woman is sued after coverture on an antenuptial debt, she can plead limitations, and neither her promise nor that of her husband made during coverture can be set up against her.⁴ But as to family supplies, where she and her husband are jointly liable by statute, he is her agent in law, and his promise may take the debt out of the statute.⁵

17. Effect of Judgment Against a Married Woman.—If the record in the case of a judgment against a married woman disclose the fact of her coverture, a cause of action on which a married woman might be liable, the joinder of all proper parties, and that the married woman has been duly summoned, and if the subject matter of the suit be one within the jurisdiction of the court, the married woman is bound thereby as if unmarried.⁶ If the record disclose the fact of coverture, but not grounds on which a married woman might be liable, the judgment is void, for the court has no jurisdiction to enter it;⁷ if though it appears that the grounds of action were such as might render a married woman liable, but that the suit was not properly brought, the defect is cured, and the judgment is valid.⁸ If the record do not disclose the fact of coverture, the married woman may in any proceeding show that owing to her coverture she was not liable at all,⁹ but she cannot show that she was liable but was improperly sued.¹⁰ Some cases hold more broadly that in any case where the court had jurisdiction of the parties (by summons or appearance¹¹), and of the subject matter,

1. Kidderlin v. Meyer, 2 Miles (Pa.) 292, 295.

2. Patton v. Stewart, 19 Ind. 233, 237.

3. Hodges v. Darden, 51 Miss. 199, 201. "The preceding section (2156) protects and saves the right of a feme covert, as plaintiff, if at the time the right accrued the disability existed. But there is no saving in behalf of a creditor of a feme covert, so long as the disability exists, and there is no power in the courts to make one."

4. Farrar v. Bessey, 24 Vt. 89, 92.

5. Lawrence v. Sinnamon, 24 Iowa 80, 84; Polly v. Walker, 60 Iowa 86; Clopton v. Mathews, 48 Miss. 285, 298.

6. Lewis v. Gunn, 63 Ga. 542, 545. "But when property which she claims is levied upon as his, and she has her day in court and it is adjudged his, with or without her consent, under circumstances which would conclude any other suitor, why is she not concluded?" And see Emmett v. Yandes, 60 Ind. 548, 550; Carey v. Dixon, 51 Miss. 593, 599; Baxter v. Dear, 24 Tex. 17, 21..

7. Emmett v. Yandes, 60 Ind. 548; Higgins v. Pellzer, 49 Mo. 152, 157; Hecker v. Haak, 88 Pa. St. 238, 242.

8. Kennard v. Sax, 3 Oreg. 263.

9. Griffith v. Clarke, 18 Md. 457, 463; Morse v. Toppan, 3 Gray (Mass.) 411. Contra, Burk v. Hill, 55 Ind. 419, 423.

10. Long v. Dixon, 55 Ind. 352.

11. Childress v. Taylor, 33 Ala. 185, 187; Vick v. Pope, 81 N. Car. 22, 25; Hecker v. Haak, 88 Pa. St. 238, 242.

the judgment is valid, and the wife estopped;¹ but the better rule is that a married woman is estopped only when the judgment is valid, and that a judgment on a contract is itself but a contract and not binding on a party not bound by the contract.² A void judgment may be enjoined in equity.³ For example, a personal judgment against a married woman alone is valid, if the cause of action were a contract made by her as a feme sole trader;⁴ but a personal judgment against a wife for the balance of a mortgage debt is not valid where she was not personally bound on the mortgage notes;⁵ so a judgment on a void note was held absolutely void⁶ by the same court which recognized the binding force of a judgment against a married woman by default on a tort committed by her.⁷ The cases cited in this paragraph, and those cited in the paragraph on estoppel by record of married women, process against married women, and the plea of coverture by married women, all of which bear on this subject, will be found to be irreconcilable. This paragraph attempts to give credit to the different authorities for the truth which they respectively contain.

On any valid general judgment against husband and wife jointly, execution could formerly be issued against the bodies of them both,⁸ and now can be issued against the property of them both,⁹ except in such cases as those where the property of the wife is exempt by the terms of some statute or deed,¹⁰ or where a statute expressly provides that a husband shall be only a formal party.¹¹ If the judgment is against the wife alone, her property alone is liable;¹² if the wife is not a party to the suit, her property is not liable at all.¹³ The judgment may be by its terms a lien only on her statutory separate estate.¹⁴

18. The Power of a Husband Over His Wife's Suit.—(1) At Common Law.—It must be remembered, a husband had the absolute right to reduce his wife's choses in action to possession, and was

1. Gambetta v. Brock, 41 Cal. 78, 82; Wagner v. Ewing, 44 Ind. 441; Goothrie v. Howard, 32 Iowa 54, 56.

2. Griffith v. Clarke, 18 Md. 457, 463; Morse v. Toppan, 3 Gray (Mass.) 411; Griffin v. Ragan, 52 Miss. 78, 81; Higgins v. Pellzer, 49 Mo. 152, 157; Freeman on Judgments, § 149.

3. Griffin v. Ragan, 52 Miss. 78; Bowman v. Kaufman, 30 La. An. 10, 21. And land sold under it may be recovered in ejectment. Caldwell v. Walters, 18 Pa. St. 79, 83.

4. Vosburgh v. Brown, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 421, 422.

5. Anderson v. Reed, 11 Iowa 177; Kirby v. Childs, 10 Kan. 630, 644. Aliter if her property is liable. McGlaughlin v. O'Rourke, 12 Iowa 459, 461; Rogers v. Weil, 12 Wis. 664.

6. Griffith v. Clarke, 18 Md. 457, 463.

7. Brown v. Kemper, 27 Md. 666, 672.

8. Hall v. White, 27 Conn. 488.

9. Gray v. Thacker, 4 Ala. 136; Ellis v. Clark, 19 Ark. 420; Bostic v. Love, 16 Cal. 69; Howard v. North, 5 Tex. 290, 299; Cole v. Hurt, 75 Va. 380; Platner v. Patchin, 19 Wis. 333.

10. Clark v. Valentine, 41 Ga. 143, 147.

11. See Md. Act 1880, ch. 253, §§ 31, 32.

12. This is self evident.

13. Phelps v. Morrison, 24 N. J. Eq. 195, 199; Read v. Allen, 56 Tex. 182, 194.

14. Baldwin v. Kimmel, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 353, 361.

liable with her on all her contracts and for all her torts; and as her legal existence was merged in his, he was the active party in all suits in which they were both joined. She could not appoint an attorney,¹ or release errors,² or confess judgment;³ she could only appear in person and plead her coverture, if that would do her any good.⁴ So that in all cases in which the common law procedure has not been superseded, the husband employs counsel and pleads and manages the case for himself and his wife.⁵ If they are plaintiffs, he can settle or dismiss the suit,⁶ and is alone liable for the costs;⁷ if they are defendants, he may allow the suit to go by default,⁸ or suffer judgment to be entered in favor of the plaintiff;⁹ and so long as there is no collusion between him and the plaintiff, the wife will be bound by his acts.¹⁰ But his right to act for his wife in this way has been questioned in cases where she was insane.¹¹ At common law, if a husband neglected to prosecute his wife's rights of action, or released them, his loss was even greater than hers, for he had the immediate right to the enjoyment of them, and if he allowed judgment to be obtained on her antenuptial contract or tort, or on her postnuptial tort (the only causes of action on which a judgment binding on her property could be obtained), the judgment was against himself as well; so that the control of the suit could be safely trusted to his charge. But as his said control of his wife's suit grows out of his substantial ownership of her rights of action, and his equal liability on her obligations, it does not exist where his said rights and obligations do not exist, and disappears as they are removed.¹² He could never, for example, through any suit of his, estop her from claiming property in which he had no rights by making her a co-complainant,¹³ nor could he, by allowing a judgment to be entered against them on a cause of action on which she was not liable, deprive her of her inheritance.¹⁴ He cannot control her suits respecting her equitable or statutory separate estate, unless by her consent and as her agent in fact;¹⁵ nor in such cases can he admit service for her.¹⁶ When he is a mere nominal party, he is entitled to all her defences.¹⁷

1. Hubbard v. Barcus, 38 Md. 166, 174.

2. Breckenridge v. Coleman, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 331, 334.

3. Patton v. Stewart, 19 Ind. 233, 237; Fox v. Tooke, 34 Mo. 509, 510; Phillips v. Burr, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 113.

4. Discussed § 15, above.

5. Foxwist v. Tremaine, 2 Saund. 212; Hayner v. Smith, 63 Ill. 430, 432; Ballard v. Russell, 33 Me. 196, 197; Southworth v. Packard, 7 Mass. 95; Wolf v. Banning, 3 Minn. 202, 204; Vick v. Pope, 81 N. Car. 22, 26.

6. Ballard v. Russell, 33 Me. 196; Southworth v. Packard, 7 Mass. 95, 96.

7. Bellinger v. Thomson, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 30.

8. Green v. Branton, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) Eq. 500.

9. Vick v. Pope, 81 N. Car. 22, 26.

10. Beach v. Beach, 2 Hill 260; Green v. Branton, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) Eq. 500, 504.

11. Stephens v. Porter, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 341, 347.

12. Brown v. Kemper, 27 Md. 666, 672; and §§ 66, 67 Stewart on Husband and Wife.

13. Danner v. Berthold, 11 Mo. App. 351, 360; Work v. Doyle, 3 Ind. 436.

14. Work v. Doyle, 3 Ind. 436.

15. Keith v. Keith, 26 Kan. 26, 36.

16. Rhodes v. Delaney, 50 Ind. 468, 471.

17. Floore v. Steigelmayer, 76 Ind. 479, 481.

(2) Wife's Separate Suit, Defence, etc.—Courts of equity have always recognized the separate existence of wives, and in all suits in which husband and wife are co-complainants or co-defendants, if they have separate and distinct interests, the bill or answer filed by the husband for both is regarded as prima facie the bill or answer of the husband alone, and the wife, if she requests it, is allowed to proceed separately.¹ As equitable separate estate is out of the control of the husband, so are suits relating thereto; and the wife sues by her next friend, if she does not desire to join her husband, simply because the question of her liability for costs might arise if she sued alone.² If she does sue by her husband and allows him to act for her, she is bound,³ but she is otherwise not bound by his declarations, nor are his statements evidence against her.⁴ If she files her separate answer by permission of court, she is bound by it;⁵ her answer filed without permission may be taken from the files, unless the court allows it nunc pro tunc.⁶ As a general rule, under the statutes she has the right to sue and be sued, independently of her husband; and just so far as her choses in action are made her statutory separate property can she control the reduction of them to possession;⁷ and just so far as his liability for her torts and contracts has been removed can she control suits against her.⁸

19. Appointment of Attorney at Law by Married Women.—At common law, a married woman could not appoint an attorney at law;⁹ her antenuptial appointment was revoked by marriage;¹⁰ she could not appear in a suit by attorney;¹¹ her plea or answer filed by an attorney was worthless;¹² a judgment entered against her on her warrant of attorney was a nullity;¹³ her agreement for alimony made by her attorney was void.¹⁴ In equity and under statutes, speaking generally, she may appoint an attorney at law whenever she has interests separate from her husband, with respect to which she needs legal assistance and advice, or

1. Kerchner v. Kempton, 47 Md. 568, 588; Wolf v. Banning, 3 Minn. 202, 204; Travis v. Willis, 55 Miss. 557, 566; Fox v. Tooke, 34 Mo. 509, 510; Collard v. Smith, 13 N. J. Eq. 43, 45; Blackwell v. Bragg, 78 Va. 529.

2. Harper v. Whitehead, 33 Ga. 138, 144.

3. Keith v. Keith, 26 Kan. 26, 36.

4. Work v. Doyle, 3 Ind. 436; Kerchner v. Kempton, 47 Md. 568, 589; Bird v. Davis, 14 N. J. Eq. 467.

5. Krone v. Linville, 31 Md. 138, 147; Wolf v. Banning, 3 Minn. 202, 204.

6. Krone v. Linville, 31 Md. 138, 147.

7. Beckton v. Selleck, 48 Ala. 226, 229; Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 315; Travis v. Willis, 55 Miss. 557; Dolloff v. Curran, 59 Wis. 332, 335.

8. Lowe v. Redgate, 42 Ohio St. 329.

9. Griffith v. Clark, 18 Md. 464, 467; Whitmore v. Delano, 6 N. H. 543, 546; First Nat. Bank of Canandaigua v. Garlinghouse, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 615; Phillips v. Burr, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 113, 114.

10. Wright v. Wright, 2 Harr. (Del.) 350; Templeton v. Crain, 5 Me. 417, 418.

11. Fox v. Tooke, 34 Mo. 509.

12. Phillips v. Burr, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 113; Kidderlin v. Meyer, 2 Miles (Pa.) 292.

13. Henchman v. Roberts, 2 Harr. (Del.) 74; Patton v. Stewart, 19 Ind. 233, 237; Buttin v. Wilder, 6 Hill 242; Shallcross v. Smith, 81 Pa. St. 132, 133; Stevens v. Dubarry, Minor (Ala.) 379.

14. Wallingsford v. Wallingsford, 6 Har. & J. (Md.) 485, 489.

with respect to which she can act by agent generally.¹ She can appoint an attorney to take care of litigation respecting her equitable separate property.² Under statutes expressly authorizing her to make an attorney or to contract generally, she can of course appoint an attorney.³ And statutes authorizing her to sue independently of her husband, or to contract with respect to her property, or securing to her the separate enjoyment of her property, by implication, give her the power to appoint an attorney to take charge of such suit or such property.⁴ It is necessary to the enjoyment of rights that one should be able to prosecute and defend them.⁵ In all cases where she can appoint an attorney, she is bound by his acts as an unmarried woman would be;⁶ by his laches;⁷ his withdrawal of pleas;⁸ his settlement or dismissal of suit, in North Carolina;⁹ and she is also bound to compensate him.¹⁰ A statute, however, which gives a married woman the power to appoint an attorney does not of itself destroy the husband's substantial rights in her choses in action.¹¹

20. Compensation of Married Women's Attorneys.—An attorney who has acted on behalf of a married woman may look for his fees, (1) to her husband, or (2) to her trustee or next friend, or (3) to her property or herself.

(1) Her Husband's Liability.—Since a wife always sued and was sued jointly with her husband at common law, and since he employed counsel for them both, the payment of the fees naturally fell upon him.¹² But when he by his conduct made it necessary for her to take proceedings against him, the question arose whether he was not liable for the expenses of the suit as necessities.¹³ It has been held that when a wife sues out a peace warrant against her husband,¹⁴ or defends herself against a similar proceeding by him,¹⁵ or when she sues for a separate maintenance,¹⁶ her legal expenses are necessities for which her husband is liable.

1. See article on HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, of this work.

2. Major v. Symmes, 19 Ind. 117; Porter v. Haley, 55 Miss. 66, 69; King v. Mittelberger, 50 Mo. 182, 185.

3. Myers v. Griffiths, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 560, 564.

4. Stevens v. Reed, 112 Mass. 515, 517; Porter v. Haley, 55 Miss. 66, 70; Powers v. Totten, 42 N. J. L. 442, 445; Owen v. Cawley, 36 N. Y. 600, 605; Leonard v. Rogan, 20 Wis. 540, 542.

5. Powers v. Totten, 42 N. J. L. 442, 445.

6. Glover v. Moore, 60 Ga. 189, 192; Keith v. Keith, 26 Kan. 26, 36; Hollingsworth v. Harman, 83 N. Car. 153; Cayce v. Powell, 20 Tex. 767, 771.

7. Cayce v. Powell, 20 Tex. 767.

8. Glover v. Moore, 60 Ga. 189, 192.

9. Hollingsworth v. Harman, 83 N.

Car. 153, 155. But see ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 1 hereof, page 956.

10. Discussed in next section below and in foot notes.

11. Myers v. Griffiths, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 560, 564.

12. Porter v. Bank of Rutland, 19 Vt. 410, 417; Frazier v. Felton, 1 Hawks (S. Car.) 231, 237.

13. See articles on DIVORCE, HUSBAND AND WIFE, and MARRIAGE; §§ 81, 95 Stewart on H. & W.; §§ 180, 389, 455 Stewart on M. & D.

14. Shepard v. MacKoul, 3 Camp. 326. Or for restitution of conjugal rights. Wilson v. Ford, L. R., 3 Ex. 63.

15. Warner v. Heiden, 28 Wis. 517, 519; 9 Am. Rep. 515; Stewart on M. & D., § 389.

16. Williams v. Monroe, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 514, 518.

So her expenses in bringing or defending a divorce suit are held to be necessities in England, Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, and Maryland,¹ while the contrary is the rule in Alabama, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Ohio, Tennessee, and Vermont.² Even where such expenses may be necessities they are not necessarily so; there must be a reasonable ground for bringing the suit, or some real defence in resisting it.³ Besides, the courts provide for counsel fees in divorce cases under their jurisdiction to award alimony, etc.⁴

(2) Her Trustee's or Next Friend's Liability.—The trustee of a married woman's separate property may employ an attorney; and though himself personally bound to compensate him, he may repay himself out of the estate.⁵ So the reason for the existence of a next friend is that there may be a person responsible for the expenses of the suit,⁶ and in those cases where a married woman sues by next friend he is liable for the counsel fees.⁷

(3) Her Liability, Personal and as to Her Property.—At common law, as a general rule, a married woman could make no contract at all, and could not appear by attorney in a suit, unless he were appointed by her husband; and therefore her contract to pay counsel fees was absolutely void, and she could not even, according to the better settled rule, ratify such a contract after the dissolution of her marriage.⁸ But if an attorney collected money belonging to her, he could keep a reasonable amount thereof as compensation for his services, though he could not have recovered anything in any kind of suit against her.⁹ She could, however, charge her equitable separate estate in equity for fees, just as she could charge it for any other debt of hers, provided she complied with the rule prevailing in the particular State as to the mode in which the charge had to be made; for example, that the contract was made with express reference to her said estate or was for its benefit, and provided that the property sought to be charged was property over which she had the power of disposition.¹⁰ Under a statute authorizing a married woman to contract generally, there is no reason why she should not contract for counsel fees; and

1. Ottaway v. Hamilton, L. R., 3 C. P. D.; Wilson v. Ford, L. R., 3 Ex. 63; Brown v. Ackroyd, 5 El. & B. 819, 827; Glen v. Hill, 50 Ga. 94, 96; Sprayberry v. Merk, 30 Ga. 81, 82; Porter v. Briggs, 38 Iowa 166. Compare Johnson v. Williams, 3 Greene (Iowa) 97, 99; Gossett v. Patten, 23 Kan. 340, 342; Handy v. McCurley, 62 Md. 422.

2. Pearsons v. Darrington, 32 Ala. 227, 255; Shelton v. Pendleton, 18 Conn. 417, 433; Dow v. Eyster, 79 Ill. 254, 256; McCullough v. Robinson, 2 Ind. 630; Williams v. Monroe, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 514, 517; Coffin v. Durham, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 404, 405; Morrison v. Holt, 42 N. H. 478; Ray v.

Raden, 50 N. H. 82, 85; Dorsey v. Goodenow, Wright (Ohio) 120; Thompson v. Thompson, 3 Head (Tenn.) 527, 529; Wing v. Hurlburt, 15 Vt. 607, 615.

3. Handy v. McCurley, 62 Md. 422.

4. Dow v. Eyster, 79 Ill. 254.

5. Noyes v. Blakeman, 3 Sand. (N. Y.) 531, 544.

6. Harper v. Whitehead, 33 Ga. 138, 144.

7. See preceding case.

8. Musick v. Dodson, 76 Mo. 624.

9. Davis v. Burnham, 27 Vt. 562, 568.

10. Cozzens v. Whitney, 3 R. I. 79, 83; Pfirshing v. Osman, 75 Ind. 259.

when she is authorized to contract with respect to her property, a contract for legal services respecting the same would be valid.¹ So would a similar contract be authorized by implication by a statute securing her property to her separate use and control.² So by implication a statute authorizing her to sue and be sued alone, empowers her to employ counsel to represent her.³ Whether when she may employ counsel she binds herself personally or binds only her property, and whether her obligation is to be enforced in equity or at law, are unsettled questions, contracts for counsel fees being governed in this respect by the same rules as other contracts.⁴ When a wife is liable for family expenses, how far counsel fees are a family expense must depend on the particular circumstances of the case.⁵

IX. MARRIED WOMEN TRADERS—1. Sources of Capacity to Trade.—The use of the words "trade" and "married woman trader" has been vague, and it is necessary, in a discussion of this subject, to bear in mind the different elements which may be involved in the capacity of a married woman to trade.

(1) At Common Law, Generally.—A married woman could make no contract whatever; all her time and labor belonged to her husband, as did all the present enjoyment of her property; she had, in fact, no legal existence apart from her husband; therefore she could not trade at all.⁶ If a female trader married, the trade became her husband's,⁷ and if she had been trading as partner, the partnership was dissolved by her marriage.⁸

(2) Her Earnings.—As a married woman could not contract at all by the common law, she could not enter into any kind of engagement or employment on her own account, but all her time, services, wages and earnings of every kind belonged to her husband.⁹ Still her husband could agree that she should have her earnings, just as he could invest her with any property of his, and his agreement would be enforced in equity;¹⁰ his agreement, however, gave her no personal capacity, but only the right to collect and keep the wages and rewards of her labors.¹¹ So by statute, in most States, the wife's earnings are secured to her separate use.¹² These statutes were passed to protect wives from shiftless, im-

1. Pfirshing v. Falsh, 87 Ill. 260; Owen v. Cawley, 36 N. Y. 600, 605.

2. Major v. Symmes, 19 Ind. 117; Porter v. Haley, 55 Miss. 66; Leonard v. Rogan, 20 Wis. 540, 542.

3. Stevens v. Reed, 112 Mass. 515; Glover v. Moore, 60 Ga. 189, 192; Powers v. Totten, 42 N. J. L. 442, 445.

4. Major v. Symmes, 19 Ind. 117, 120; Leonard v. Rogan, 20 Wis. 540, 542.

5. Fitzgerald v. Mcy, Cart 55 Iowa 702, 705.

6. Carey v. Burruss, 20 W. Va. 571, 575; 43 Am. Rep. 790; Bradstreet v. Baer, 41 Md. 19, 23; Netterville v. Bar- ber, 52 Miss. 168, 171; McKinnon v. McDonald, 4 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 1. See CONTRACTS OF MARRIED WOMEN, § 2, in this article.

7. This was a logical result of the common law doctrine of the merger of the wife's existence in that of her husband. See Ashworth v. Outram, L. R., 5 Ch. D. 923, 929.

8. Alexander v. Morgan, 31 Ohio St. 546, 550.

9. See vol. 9, pp. 789, 817.

10. See vol. 9, p. 818.

11. Uhrig v. Horstman, 8 Bush (Ky.) 172, 177.

12. See vol. 9, pp. 819, 820.

provident, and dissipated husbands, and were in form the earliest of the statutes relating to the trade of married women.

(3) The Increase of Her Separate Property.—Although at common law all the interest, profits, rents and increase of a married woman's property vested in the husband just as the property itself did,¹ except that the rents and profits of real estate vested in him as personalty,² she had her separate estate first in equity and then by statute, and the increase of such estate was also separate property;³ and therefore the products of all investments or uses of her separate property were her separate property, though such products were partly due to her efforts, and to the labor, skill and knowledge of her husband.⁴ In a sense, therefore, she could trade with her separate property.

(4) Resulting Capacities.—Although when a married woman's earnings or property are secured to her separate use, as above stated, the profits of her business or trade may be her separate property also, her personal incapacity to enter into trade is not necessarily removed;⁵ for equity recognizes her capacities only in connection with her property,⁶ and mere property acts do not affect personal status.⁷ So that to trade in the wider sense, a married woman must either have the capacities of a feme sole or be expressly authorized to enter into business.

2. Definitions—Trade, Business, etc.—Although the difference between earnings and increase of property is clear, and for this reason married women's separate property acts do not destroy a husband's rights to his wife's personal services,⁸ it is very hard to draw any line between earnings and the profits of trade. The terms used in the books dealing with the subject of married women traders are not sharply defined, but a few definitions may be given.

(1) Earnings.—Earnings means what is earned, gained or merited

1. See Stewart on Husband and Wife, §§ 137, 141-183.

2. See above references.

3. Stewart on Husband and Wife, §§ 209, 227.

4. Wheeler v. Raymond, 130 Mass. 247, 249. "In the case at bar, the jury have found, under instructions not excepted to, that the husband, and not the wife, was carrying on the livery stable. . . . The case presented, then, is one where a wife, owning separate property, permits her husband to use it in carrying on his business. . . . If it was done with the fraudulent purpose of deceiving the public and giving the husband a fictitious credit, perhaps she might be estopped by the fraud from claiming the property."

5. Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38, 41.

6. See Stewart on Husband and Wife, §§ 206, 207, 211.

7. Stewart on Husband and Wife, § 15. "Statutes relating to estates or property rights of husband and wife do not affect their personal status or relation." Sone v. Gazzam, 46 Ala. 275; Huff v. Wright, 39 Ga. 41.

8. Glover v. Alcott, 11 Mich. 470, 471. "The statute of this State, which provides that 'the real and personal estate of every married woman shall be and remain the estate and property of such married woman, and shall not be liable for the debts, obligations and engagements of her husband,' etc., does not empower a married woman to carry on, on credit, a general trade or business—like that of the purchase of wheat and the manufacture and sale of flour—so as to make the proceeds of the business her own."

by labor, services or performances; wages or reward;¹ and the earnings secured to a married woman by a statute are not confined to the results of manual labor, to wages for washing or sewing, but include the products of her trade also, if it is carried on with her separate property as capital;² and the stock in trade of a married woman owned at the time of her marriage, or afterwards bought with her earnings, is included in the term "earnings."³

(2) Trade and Business.—Trade or business means an employment to the carrying on of which the party devotes a considerable portion of her time, skill and means, a business that is continuing in its nature and embraces many transactions.⁴ Engaging in trade and business means not only trading in a commercial sense, but also being engaged in other employments which require time, labor and skill—time, attention, and labor.⁵ Trading means engaging in a business pursuit, mechanical, manufacturing or commercial.⁶ Thus, though a single transaction may be a business one, it does not make the party a trader;⁷ horse dealing may be a business, but a woman who buys or sells a single horse is not necessarily in that business;⁸ so farming may be a business, but employing a man to work on one's farm does not make one a farmer by trade;⁹ renting a house may be a business transaction and for the purpose of a business, but a lease of rooms is not necessarily a contract by a trader;¹⁰ so a married woman's receipt and disbursement of her rents and profits, though done in a business way does not constitute her a trader;¹¹ nor is she a trader when she is not acting generally with the public, but is simply taking care of her own property, or collecting or investing her income.¹² When she may trade she is not confined to any particular trade: she may not only engage in washing,¹³ sewing,¹⁴

1. Dayton v. Walsh, 47 Wis. 113, 120.

2. Duress v. Horneffer, 15 Wis. 195, 197.

3. Lovell v. Newton, L. R., 4 C. P. D. 7, 11, 12.

4. Holmes v. Holmes, 40 Conn. 117. "An act of 1869 provides that 'when ever any married woman shall carry on business, and shall incur any debt on account of the same,' she shall be liable therefor. Held, that the business must be pursued as a continuing and substantial employment, and that the mere renting of a few rooms by a married woman in the house in which she lived with her husband, was not a carrying on business within the meaning of the statute."

5. Netterville v. Barber, 52 Miss. 168, 171.

6. Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199, 203.

7. See note 4, above.

8. Holmes v. Holmes, 40 Conn. 117; Proper v. Cobb, 104 Mass. 589, 590.

9. See preceding note.

10. See note 7.

11. Proper v. Cobb, 104 Mass. 589, 590. "The use of a horse and carriage by herself, or the purchase of food and stabling for the horse, or the procuring of repairs for the carriage, or the raising and gathering of crops for her own use on her land, or the repair or erection of a dwelling on her land and the purchase of materials for it, or of materials and furniture for the use of herself and family, are not uses of property which come within the contemplation of the statute, and which require the designated certificate for the protection of the property."

12. Above note and Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199, 203.

13. Haight v. McVeagh, 69 Ill. 624, 628.

14. See preceding note.

dressmaking,¹ millinery,² in keeping a dairy,³ a boarding house,⁴ a grocery or provision store,⁵ and in other pursuits specially adapted to her sex,⁶ but she may be a farmer,⁷ a miller,² an army sutler,³ a saloon keeper or tavern keeper,⁴ a clothier,⁵ an ironmonger,⁶ she may work a mine or quarry,⁷ or may go into the lumber business,⁸ though if her trade is unsuited to her, this is a fact to be considered, if her husband's creditors are trying to show that the business is really his.⁹ So she may engage in the professions—may devote her talents to literature, acting, singing,¹⁰ and in fact, under a general power to trade, may follow any legitimate calling.¹¹

(3) Separate Trade.—The trade of a married woman is usually spoken of as her separate trade; the word "separate" refers rather to her status than to the mode in which she shall trade,¹² and it does not mean that she shall trade alone,¹³ or prevent her living with her husband while trading,¹⁴ or allowing him to join in the business.¹⁵ In Massachusetts and Indiana it has, however, been held that she must keep her business separate from her husband, and that their joint earnings are his property.¹⁶ The effect of the mingling of the wife's with the husband's property has already been discussed.

3. Capacity to Trade at Common Law.—When a married woman's husband is civilly dead, has finally abandoned her, etc., she has by

1. Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38, 40; Jassoy v. Delins, 65 Ill. 469, 471.

2. Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38, 40; Jassoy v. Delins, 65 Ill. 469, 471.

3. Krouskop v. Shontz, 51 Wis. 204.

4. Chapman v. Briggs, 11 Allen (Mass.) 546; Dawes v. Rodier, 125 Mass. 421, 423; Harnden v. Gould, 126 Mass. 411, 412.

5. Abbey v. Deyo, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 374; Haight v. McVeagh, 69 Ill. 624, 628.

6. Guttman v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455, 459.

7. Netterville v. Barber, 52 Miss. 168, 172.

8. Netterville v. Barber, 52 Miss. 168, 172.

9. Guttman v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455, 459. See note 11, below.

10. Dayton v. Walsh, 47 Wis. 113, 120.

11. Guttman v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455. "The act does not confine sole traders to any particular trade or occupation, nor prohibit the husband from being employed by, or acting for, his wife in the business. The fact that the business was unsuited to the sex of the wife, and the employment of the husband therein, would be circumstantial evidence tending to establish fraud, but not conclusive evidence of it." At p. 461 "The public prints have teemed with notices, on the part of married women, that they intend to carry on business in their own names; and the different kinds of business specified have included stock-raising, farming, blacksmithing, carpentering, brick-making, and almost all other kinds of business that are carried on most generally by men."

12. Zimmerman v. Ehrard, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 11, 14. "The words of the statute, 'on her sole and separate account,' refer to her marital status and are not intended to restrict her business ventures to those in which she shall alone be interested."

13. See post, § 10 of art. 9.

14. Lovell v. Newton, L. R., 4 C. P. D. 7, 12; Newbrick v. Dugan, 61 Ala. 251, 253; Parker v. Simonds, 1 Allen (Mass.) 258, 260.

15. Guttman v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455, 459.

16. Hawkins v. Providence etc. R. Co., 119 Mass. 596. "Personal apparel furnished by a husband to his wife, or purchased by the wife with the consent of her husband, with money given her by him from a fund, formed by their joint earnings, remains the property of the common law the capacities of a feme sole, and may trade as such.¹ In some States there are statutes to the same effect.² How far her husband's absence enables her to trade in his place has already been discussed.³

Custom of London.—By the custom of London a married woman who carried on a trade separate and apart from her husband had to the extent of such trade all the capacities of a feme sole.⁴ Such custom has never existed in the United States, except to some extent in South Carolina.⁵ The law recognized this custom not for the sake of wives, but to encourage trade and commerce, and therefore the custom did not apply, for example, to farming.⁶ When trading under such a custom the wife could be a bankrupt;⁷ but her suits were generally conducted jointly with her husband, for conformity.⁸

4. Capacity to Trade, in Equity.—In those States where a married woman is a feme sole as to her equitable separate estate, she may use the same in trade, and the profits of such trade are equitable separate property likewise;⁹ but in such trade she has no personal capacities; equity recognizes her separate existence only with respect to her property, and her contracts made in the course of her trade can be collected only if they have been properly charged on said property.¹⁰

Effect of Husband's Consent.—A husband cannot, by his consent, change the personal status of his wife, or enable her to trade with the capacities, rights and liabilities of a feme sole;¹¹ but he may allow her as his agent to engage in business and give her the profits,¹² or he may agree before or after marriage that she shall keep her earnings or carry on business for her own use, and give her, if he choose, the necessary capital to start with.¹³ Any such the husband, and the wife cannot maintain an action against a carrier for the loss thereof."

1. Carey v. Burruss, 20 W. Va. 571. For a married woman then is regarded very much as a feme sole.

2. Hannon v. Madden, 10 Bush (Ky.) 664, 667; Woodcock v. Reed, 5 Allen (Mass.) 207, 208.

3. See vol. 9, pp. 839, 840.

4. Petty v. Anderson, 2 Car & P. 38; Beard v. Webb, 2 Bos. & P. 93, 97; Lavie v. Phillips, 3 Burr 1776, 1783; Netterville v. Barber, 52 Miss. 168, 171; Carey v. Burruss, 20 W. Va. 571, 575; 2 Bright H. & W. 77.

5. M'Daniel v. Cornwell, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 428; Newbiggin v. Pillans, 2 Bay. (S. Car.) 162, 165.

6. M'Daniel v. Cornwell, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 428, 431.

7. Lavie v. Phillips, 3 Burr 1776, 1783.

8. Beard v. Webb, 2 Bos. & P. 93, 97.

9. Conkling v. Doull, 67 Ill 355, 357.

"In the absence of an estate created through the intervention of trustees, or derived from persons other than the husband so as to bring it within the act of 1861, the rights of husband and wife are precisely as at common law. If he consents that she may hold personal property and carry on business in her own name, or receive the rents and profits of her land, and that is all the record shows, still, if that consent is not based upon a sufficient consideration, it may be at any time withdrawn and his rights at common law asserted." Jenkins v. Flinn, 37 Ind. 349; Stevens v. Reed, 112 Mass. 515; Partridge v. Stocker, 36 Vt. 108.

10. Todd v. Lee, 16 Wis. 480.

11. That would be giving to the husband the power of the legislature. See Stewart on M. & D., § 181, and Uhrig v. Horstman, 8 Bush. 172, 177.

12. Ashworth v. Outram, Law R., 5 Ch. 923, 931.

13. Lockwood v. Cullin, 4 Robt. (N. Y.) 129, 136.

gift of earnings, profits or property to her is good against himself, and his heirs, voluntary assigns, etc., but not as against his creditors, unless on valuable consideration.¹ When a wife thus trades under a settlement from her husband, she trades in equity as with equitable separate property; the business, profits, etc., are the husband's absolutely at law.² But if the business is really hers and not carried on by her as his agent, he is not bound for the debts.³ If his consent to her carrying on business is by mere oral assent and without consideration, though he cannot ask back profits already made and collected by her, he can revoke his consent, and claim the business as his own.⁴ In all cases where she carries on business by his mere consent, the business is his, and he is liable for its debts, and may claim its profits.⁵ Whether the business is his or hers is a question of fact.⁶ Her agency for him may be proved directly or indirectly.⁷ But if a wife has engaged in business without authority of law, and without her husband's assent, he cannot be held liable for its debts,⁸ nor can she on her mere personal contracts;⁹ so if all the credit is given to her, her husband is not liable, whether she or her property is liable or not.¹⁰ Under the statutes usually, the husband's consent is not necessary to enable a wife to trade;¹¹ nor does his mere consent involve him in the liabilities of the business.¹²

5. Capacity Under Statutes.—Married women's separate property acts do not, by implication, destroy the husband's common law right to his wife's earnings,¹³ but they do usually, expressly or by implication, secure to the wife the natural increase of her prop-

1. Penn v. Whitehead, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 503, 512; Uhrig v. Horstman, 8 Bush (Ky.) 172, 176; Cropsey v. McKinney, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 47, 57.

2. Stimson v. White, 20 Wis. 562, 563.

3. Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38.

"In an action for goods sold and delivered to a married woman, it appearing in evidence that she was carrying on business in her own name; that plaintiff trusted her solely and that the husband had no connection with the business, and in the absence of proof that he ever in any manner gave his consent to her management of the business; held, that the husband would not be chargeable for the debt."

4. Conkling v. Doull, 67 Ill. 355, 357; Stimson v. White, 20 Wis. 262, 263.

5. Switzer v. Valentine, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 96, 99; Barlow v. Bishop, 1 East 432, 434; Partridge v. Stocker, 36 Vt. 108, 114.

6. Jarman v. Woolloton, 3 Term 618, 622; Glover v. Alcott, 11 Mich. 471, 479; Albey v. Devo, 44 N. Y. 343.

7. Godfred v. Brooks, 5 Har. (Del.) 396, 397.

8. Happek v. Hartly, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 411, 414.

9. Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38, 41; 2 Am. Rep. 481; Conkling v. Doull, 67 Ill. 355, 358.

10. Jenkins v. Flinn, 37 Ind. 349, 352.

11. See, however, Uhrig v. Horstman, 8 Bush (Ky.) 172, 177.

12. Haight v. McVeagh, 69 Ill. 624, 628.

13. Seitz v. Mitchell, 94 U.S. 580, 584.

"Section 727 of the Revised Statutes relating to the District of Columbia is as follows: 'In the district the right of any married woman to any property, personal or real, belonging to her at the time of marriage, or acquired during marriage in any other way than by gift or conveyance from her husband, shall be as absolute as if she were unmarried and shall not be subject to the disposal of her husband, nor be liable for his debts.' Section 729 gives a married woman power to contract, to sue and be sued in her own name in all matters having relation to her sole and separate property. No other power to contract is given to her. Her earnings while cohabiting with her husband are not made erty;¹ and since such increase belongs to her, even when largely due to her husband's efforts, there seems to be no reason why her own services to it, though these belonged to her husband, should injuriously affect her rights.² When a married woman has no powers by statute independent of her property, her dealings with her statutory separate property in the way of trade must be subject to limitations of the same character as those which control her trading with her equitable separate estate.³ She cannot, for example, under such a statute, carry on a business on her personal credit.⁴ Her right to manage her separate estate and her right to trade are quite distinct. A contract for furniture to be used in a boarding house which is her separate property, or for horses for her livery stable, may not be valid as the contracts of a trader, but valid as contracts with relation to her separate property.⁵

(1) Under Express Statutes.—A statute securing to a married woman her earnings, or the products of her skill and industry, by implication enables her to earn money and to trade, just as statutes securing to married women property acquired by purchase enable them to purchase on credit; thus alone are such statutes given a reasonable meaning.⁶ A statute enabling married women to trade, unless it contains restricting provisions, enables them to trade just as if they were sole, to use any of the usual means of trade, and to engage in any legitimate calling.⁷ A married woman may also trade under statutes giving her the capacities of a feme sole as to contracts.⁸

(2) Married Women's Capacities to Trade Under Statutes Containing Limitations.—Under a statute enabling married women to trade with a capital of one thousand dollars or less, and creating a special remedy against her property for her trade debts, it was held that she had no powers not expressly given; that the naming of one mode of trade was a negation of all other modes; and that she could not trade as a partner because not expressly authorized.⁹ In many States the statutes require a wife who wishes to her property. She can have them only by the gift of her husband, and such a gift is not protected against his creditors."

1. Stout v. Perry, 70 Ind. 501, 504.
2. Mitchell v. Sawyer, 21 Iowa 582, 583.

3. O'Daily v. Morris, 31 Ind. 111, 112; Todd v. Lee, 16 Wis. 480, 483.
4. Glover v. Alcott, 11 Mich. 470, 480, 485; Robinson v. Wallace, 39 Pa. St. 129, 133.

5. See Stewart on H. & W., §§ 239, 272.

6. Under Express Statutes.—Height v. McVeagh, 69 Ill. 624.
"Under the acts of 1861 and 1869, no reason is perceived why a married woman may not, at least with the consent of her husband, earn money in trade as well as by manual labor, or carry on the business of a grocery store, contract debts for goods to be used in trade as well as for animals and farming implements, or for lands and farm labor."

14 C. of L.—43

7. Preceding note and Adams v. Honness, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 326, 336; Krauskop v. Shontz, 51 Wis. 204, 215.

8. See Stewart on H. & W., § 372.

9. Broadstreet v. Baer, 41 Md. 19, 23. "Section 7 of article 45 of the Code empowers a married woman to carry on trade as a feme sole, with a capital not exceeding one thousand dollars, and makes her money and property to that extent liable to attachment for any claim or debt incurred by her. The grant of the power to carry on trade or engage in trade to comply with certain prerequisites, such as making a declaration of record, obtaining a licence, or decree of court, and such requirements must, it seems, be complied with to give her any new capacity.¹ But a statute providing that her husband shall not manage her business has for its sole object the protection of the husband's creditors, and when no question in which they are concerned is involved she has the same capacities to trade with as without her husband;² and the same would seem to apply to a statute requiring her to trade in her own name.³ When she can be declared a trader only when her husband cannot or refuses to support her, his mere temporary sickness will not suffice.⁴ Nor will a court of equity with a discretion decree her a trader when she would thus be enabled to commit a fraud.⁵ When a statute requires "a married woman doing business on her separate account" to file a certificate, this does not apply to married women making investments of their separate property.⁶ A married woman need file no inventory of her business unless this is required by statute;⁷ nor need she have separate property to start with.⁸

6. Incidents of Capacity to Trade.—The status, rights and liabilities of a married woman trader depend very largely on the source of her capacity to trade. Generally speaking, when she can trade only by virtue of her ownership of equitable or statutory separate estate, she cannot trade on her personal credit or act as a feme sole, but can only deal with the property so that the profits will enure to her own benefit, and can only render it liable for her debts by charging it, contracting with reference to it, etc., her contracts being valid not on account of her being a trader, but because made in such a way or for such a purpose as the law allows.⁹ So when she trades simply as her husband's agent, though she binds him she does not bind herself personally—she may have the profits if he chooses to let her keep them, but he and the business are liable for the debt contracted by her on its behalf.¹⁰ When, howbusiness in that mode and to that extent is by implication a denial of the power to carry on business in any other mode or to any greater extent. Married women have no power, under our laws, to enter into contracts of copartnership, nor as members thereof would their contracts be binding upon them, and consequently would not bind the other parties to them."

1. Uhrig v. Horstman, 8 Bush (Ky.) 172, 177; Elsley v. McDaniel, 95 Pa. St. 472, 474.

2. Porter v. Gamba, 43 Cal. 105, 109. See Youngworth v. Jewell, 15 Nev. 45.

3. But see Christensen v. Stumpf, 16 La. An. 50.

4. King v. Thompson, 87 Pa. St. 365, 368.

5. Moran v. Moran, 12 Bush (Ky.) 301.

6. Wheeler v. Raymond, 130 Mass. 247, 248.

7. Jarman v. Woolloton, 3 Term 618, 622.

8. Tallman v. Jones, 13 Kan. 438, 445.

9. Tillman v. Shackleton, 15 Mich. 447; Chapman v. Briggs, 11 Allen (Mass.) 546; Manderback v. Mock, 29 Pa. St. 43, 47; Todd v. Lee, 16 Wis. 480, 483.

10. Partridge v. Stocker, 36 Vt. 108, 114.

"He knew that his wife began this business without capital and must have known that she was procuring goods on credit. For the debt due to the ever, she may trade personally, by virtue of her husband's abandonment, by custom, or by statute, she can trade just as if she were unmarried, unless, of course, the statute limits her capacity.¹ In such case she, for the purposes connected with her business, has the status of a feme sole, the fullest rights to the enjoyment of the profits of the business, and the fullest liabilities for its debts.²

7. Express and Implied Powers of Married Women Traders.—Most of the statutes as to married women traders expressly provide that they shall trade as if sole, and under such statutes no special questions seem to have arisen; the main questions are as to the implied powers of married women traders. In one case it was held that the naming of certain powers of trade was a negation of all other powers,³ but the weight of authority seems to be to the contrary.⁴

Under statutes enabling a married woman to trade and not limiting her capacities, she may trade precisely as if unmarried; she is, as to her business, a feme sole, and may do all things incidental to trading in general, and all things usual and proper in the particular trade in which she is engaged.⁵ The object of these statutes is not only to do justice to wives, but also to encourage trade.⁶ Thus she may engage in any legitimate calling.⁷ She may conduct the business personally or by agent;⁸ she may have her salesmen and clerks;⁹ she may be a partner, silent or active;⁹ and she may, unless this is prohibited by statute, have her husband as her agent,¹⁰ or be a partner with him;¹¹ though this is in some States denied.¹² She need not, unless the statute so provides, have separate property to begin with;¹³ she may start out on credit,¹⁴ or use property given her by her husband,¹⁵ though in the lat-orators they have no remedy against either him or her at law, and by his acquiescence and consent they have been placed in a situation in which they can enforce no claim for the debt due to them except against the stock and proceeds of the business. He allowed this course of dealing, and this is sufficient to prevent him from holding the property against the claims of the creditors of the business."

1. Young v. Gori, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 13, 14 n.

2. Wallace v. Rowley, 91 Ind. 586.

3. Bradstreet v. Baer, 41 Md. 19, 23; Cruzen v. McKaig, 57 Md. 454, 462.

4. Inference from cases cited in following notes.

5. Trieber v. Stover, 30 Ark. 727, 730; Camden v. Mullen, 29 Cal. 564; Rockwell v. Clark, 44 Conn. 534, 536; Wallace v. Rowley, 91 Ind. 586; Tallman v. Jones, 13 Kan. 438, 445; Mitchell v. Sawyer, 21 Iowa 582; Snow v. Sheldon, 126 Mass. 332, 334; Rankin v.

West, 25 Mich. 195, 201; Netterville v. Barber, 52 Miss. 168, 172; Wheaton v. Phillips, 12 N. J. Eq. 221; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199, 203; Morgan v. Perhamus, 36 Ohio St. 517; Silvens v. Porter, 74 Pa. St. 448, 451.

6. M'Daniel v. Cornwell, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 428, 429.

7. Guttman v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455, 459.

8. Same case and Abbey v. Deyo, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 374, 381.

9. Above note.

10. Parshall v. Fisher, 43 Mich. 529, 534; Guttman v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455, 459; Bellows v. Rosenthal, 31 Ind. 116; Rankin v. West, 25 Mich. 195, 200.

11. See note 1.

12. Zimmerman v. Ehrhard, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 11, 13.

13. Tallman v. Jones, 13 Kan. 438, 445; Dayton v. Walsh, 47 Wis. 113, 120.

14. Young v. Gori, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 13, 14, n.

15. Lockwood v. Cullin, 4 Robt. (N. Y.) 129, 136.

ter case his creditors may have rights.¹ The capital and stock in trade of her business, as well as the profits, are entirely hers;² for instance, the bills due her as a boarding house keeper;³ and such property, though in the possession of her and her husband, is in her possession, the possession relating to the title.⁴ She may on credit purchase goods for her trade;⁵ or buy land or seed for farming purposes;⁶ or rent a store;⁷ or contract for her services; or contract for working a quarry—for the labor and mules;⁸ she may transfer a note received in the course of trade;⁹ she may even sell out her business;¹⁰ and agree not to use the same name again.¹¹ She is personally liable on all contracts which she executes in the conduct of her business, even as endorser of a note;¹² she is liable for the frauds of her employes,¹³ and is estopped as if sole from denying their right to represent her;¹⁴ she is liable for goods consigned to her.¹⁵ She may sue and be sued alone and at law,¹⁶ except, perhaps, as to suits with her husband;¹⁷ and a general judgment may be obtained against her.¹⁸ The question whether a particular transaction of hers was in the course of her business is one of fact.¹⁹ In suing, she must allege and prove this;²⁰ and when she is sued, the plaintiff must allege the grounds of the liability, must allege and prove affirmatively that she was engaged in business, and that the particular transaction was connected with such business.²¹ She may make a deed for the benefit of creditors,²² and take the benefit of the insolvent laws.²³

8. Rights of Creditors.—The business creditors of a married woman trader have, under the statutes generally, the same rights as if she were sole; they may sue her alone, and

1. Penn v. Whiteheads, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 74.

2. James v. Taylor, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 530, 531; Lovell v. Newton, L. R., 4 C. P. D. 7, 12; Mitchell v. Sawyer, 21 Iowa 582; Sammis v. McLaughlin, 35 N. Y. 647, 650; Silvens v. Porter, 74 Pa. St. 448, 451.

3. Dawes v. Rodier, 125 Mass. 421, 423.

4. Newbrick v. Dugan, 61 Ala. 251, 253.

5. Nispel v. Leparle, 74 Ill. 306, 308; Frecking v. Rolland, 53 N. Y. 422, 425.

6. Camden v. Mullen, 29 Cal. 564, 566; Chapman v. Foster, 6 Allen (Mass.) 136, 138.

7. Knowles v. Hall, 99 Mass. 562, 564.

8. Netterville v. Barber, 52 Miss. 168, 172.

9. Rockwell v. Clark, 44 Conn. 534, 536.

10. Morgan v. Perhamus, 36 Ohio St. 517.

11. See preceding case.

12. Wilthaus v. Ludecus, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 326, 327.

13. Baum v. Mullen, 47 N. Y. 577.

14. Bodine v. Killeen, 53 N. Y. 93, 96.

15. Newbiggin v. Pillans, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 162, 165.

16. Trieber v. Stover, 30 Ark. 727, 730; Rockwell v. Clark, 44 Conn. 534, 536;

Wheaton v. Phillips, 12 N. J. Eq. 221, 223; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199, 203; Meyers v. Rahte, 45 Wis. 655, 659.

17. Trieber v. Stover, 30 Ark. 727, 730.

18. Porter v. Gamba, 43 Cal. 105, 109.

19. Camden v. Mullen, 29 Cal. 564, 567.

20. Smith v. Bank of New England; 45 Conn. 416, 420.

21. Baum v. Mullen, 47 N. Y. 577, 579; Wood v. Sanchey, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 197,

198; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199, 203.

22. Shumann v. Peddicord, 50 Md. 560.

23. Holland v. Holland, Law R., 9 Ch. 307, 311. In re Kinkead, 3 Biss. (U. S.)

405, 410. But the law in Maryland is different. See Relief Build. Asso. v. Schmidt, 55 Md. 97.

obtain a general judgment against her.¹ If she is a partner, all the partners must be joined.² The husband cannot set up against them any rights that he might have against her in property he has suffered her to use in the business.³ If she is not trading with a personal capacity, but simply by virtue of her ownership of separate property, such creditors have generally no rights in personam against her.⁴ In some States her creditors are given special remedies.⁵ When she acts simply as her husband's agent, her creditors are really his creditors, and the business is really his business.⁶ Her creditors other than those of her business can proceed against her business only as they could against her other separate property.⁷

If the wife labors in her husband's business, or allows her property to be used therein, the profits are nevertheless subject to the rights of his creditors;⁸ but she is not personally liable to the creditors of the business if she has acted only as his agent, and has no capacity to contract.⁹ His creditors have the right to go against her separate business for any sums put into it by her husband in fraud of their rights;¹⁰ but it is doubtful whether this applies to a bona fide gift by him to her of his services;¹¹ in some cases an apportionment has been made, and this would of course be done if he and she were partners.¹² His creditors have no rights in the profits of her separate business, in cases where he has provided neither property nor services.¹³ Still, they have the right to treat the business as his when she has not complied with the requirements as to filing a declaration of record, etc.¹⁴ When

1. Nispel v. Laparle, 74 Ill. 306, 308. "The right of appellant to engage in business in her own name with her separate property necessarily implies the right to purchase goods, to bind herself by contract for the payment of such purchases, and it necessarily follows that the same law . . . will compel her to abide by and perform these contracts."

See Porter v. Gamba, 43 Cal. 105, 109, as to the right of getting general judgment against her.

2. Westphal v. Henney, 49 Iowa 542, 543.

3. Green v. Pallas, 12 N. J. Eq. 267; Partridge v. Stocker, 36 Vt. 108, 114.

4. O'Daly v. Morris, 31 Ind. 111; Glover v. Alcott, 11 Mich. 470, 485; Robinson v. Wallace, 39 Pa. St. 129, 133.

5. Brent v. Taylor, 6 Md. 58.

6. Conkling v. Doull, 67 Ill. 355, 359; Switzer v. Valentine, 4 Duer. (N. Y.) 96, 99; Swasey v. Antram, 24 Ohio St. 87, 95; Jacobs v. Featherstone, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 346, 349.

7. Wood v. Sanchey, 3 Daly. (N. Y.) 197, 198; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 199, 203.

8. Clinton etc. Mfg. Co. v. Hummell, 25 N. J. Eq. 45. "The avails of a wife's labor in her husband's business belong to him, and property purchased therewith, in the name of the wife, cannot be held by her against her husband's creditors." See Dumas v. Neal, 51 Ga. 563, 566.

9. Conkling v. Doull, 67 Ill. 355, 358; O'Daly v. Morris, 31 Ind. 111; Glover v. Alcott, 11 Mich. 470, 485; Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38, 41.

10. Thomas v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 426. "Separate property of the husband, though appropriated and used by the wife in carrying on business as a sole trader, is liable for his debts, and may be seized under process against him in favor of his creditors."

11. See note 7, p. 839, vol. 9.

12. See section 10, below.

13. Bellows v. Rosenthal, 31 Ind. 116, 117.

14. Porter v. Gamba, 43 Cal. 105, 109.

she cannot be his partner she incurs no liability by holding herself out as such.¹

9. Rights and Liabilities of Husband.—When a man married a woman engaged in trade, he at common law took the business with its assets and liabilities;² now he is liable only where he is still liable for her antenuptial debts,³ and has the right to the business only when such property is secured to her neither by settlement nor by statute.⁴ So at common law, all the profits of her business during coverture vested with her other earnings and the other increase of her property in him;⁵ but this, too, is generally changed. It is his business and he is fully liable, and need not give her any part of the profits if she is trading simply by his consent and has no other authority;⁶ she may even be a partner in his place.⁷ When all the credit is given to her he is not liable.⁸ Nor is he liable when she is trading independently of him under the statutes, unless he is a partner,⁹ or actually joins in the transaction.¹⁰

10. Married Women as Partners.—It has been held that a married woman trading in equity with her equitable separate property may enter into partnership;¹¹ but this statement must be taken with limitations. For the normal contract of partnership is a personal contract, involving a personal capacity, which a married woman does not have either in equity or under mere separate property acts. And therefore it is settled that statutes securing to married women their property with rents, profits, increase, etc., thereof, although they enable her to trade in a limited way, do not enable her to enter into partnership.¹² At common law, when a female partner married the partnership was dissolved,¹³ and now she cannot be a partner if she has no capacity to trade personally, or if she is expressly prohibited by the statute enabling her to

1. Montgomery v. Sprankle, 51 Ind. 113, 115; Lord v. Parker, 3 Allen (Mass.) 127.

2. Alexander v. Morgan, 31 Ohio St. 546, 550. "It is further contended by plaintiff in error that the husband is not liable for the partnership debts of the wife contracted before marriage. It is said that the husband by marrying one member of a firm does not thereby become liable for the partnership debts. No authorities are cited in support of this proposition, and we think it cannot be maintained on principle."

3. See page 821, vol. 9.

4. Rockwell v. Clark, 44 Conn. 534, 536.

5. Stimson v. White, 20 Wis. 562, 568.

6. See p. 839, vol. 9.

7. Swasey v. Antram, 24 Ohio St. 87, 95.

8. Jenkins v. Flinn, 37 Ind. 349, 352; Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38, 42.

9. See post, section 10, Married Women as Partners.

10. Krouskop v. Shontz, 51 Wis. 204, 217.

11. Penn v. Whitehead, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 503, 512. "A married woman may engage in trade on her separate account and enter into a partnership for that purpose, by the consent of her husband, and she will be entitled to the profits of the trade against her husband, even though his agreement be merely voluntary, and against his creditors (at least to some extent) if the agreement be founded on valuable consideration paid by or for the wife."

12. Bradstreet v. Baer, 41 Md. 19, 23;

Howard v. Stephens, 52 Miss. 239, 244;

Bradford v. Johnson, 44 Tex. 381, 383;

Carey v. Burruss, 20 W. Va. 571, 576.

13. Bassett v. Shepardson, 52 Mich. 3, trade, or so far as she is partially prohibited, as she is in some States.¹ But as she has, under the statutes giving her the capacity to trade generally, the personal capacity to trade as if sole, and the power to pursue all the usual methods of trade, she may, under such acts, trade in partnership;² she may even be held responsible as a secret partner.³ Still in a few cases, and on different grounds, this has been denied.⁴ So, as she is a feme sole in her trade, and may employ an agent, general or special, and may employ her husband as such, there seems to be no reason why she should not be able to form a partnership with her husband; and many cases hold, while others assume, that she may.⁵ But this is also strenuously denied, on the ground that even where a married woman may contract, she cannot, without express authority, contract with her husband,⁶ and that the particular statute enables her to trade on her separate account.⁷ To this it is replied, that if she may employ her husband as her agent, as all admit she can, it is not consistent to say that she cannot contract with him; and that the word "separate" in the statutes does not refer to the mode in which a married woman shall trade, but to her status as independent of her husband's marital control and marriage rights.⁸ In such cases, as she cannot be a partner or be liable on a partnership note signed by one of the other partners,⁹ she can, nevertheless, be liable on her individual acts;¹⁰ nor does she, in such cases, lose her property put into a firm business.¹¹ Though she may not join a firm of which her husband is a member, she may, after his retirement, go in, and on a new consideration become liable for the pre-existing partnership debts.¹² So, although she cannot be a partner, she may jointly lease and share the profits of joint property, and be bound by her husband's acts as her agent with respect thereto.¹³ If the husband has furnished part of her capital, her business may pro tanto be liable for his debts,¹⁴ and the courts have sometimes, without speaking of husband and wife as partners, ordered an apportionment of the profits of a business jointly carried on by them.¹⁵

7; Alexander v. Morgan, 31 Ohio St. 546, 550.

1. Porter v. Gamba, 43 Cal. 105, 109; Todd v. Clapp, 118 Mass. 495, 496.

2. In re Kinkead, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 405, 410; Camden v. Mullen, 29 Cal. 564; Francis v. Dickel, 68 Ga. 255, 258; Preusser v. Henshaw, 49 Iowa 41, 44; Plumer v. Lord, 5 Allen (Mass.) 460; Parshall v. Fisher, 43 Mich. 529; Newman v. Morris, 52 Miss. 402, 406; Bitter v. Rathman, 61 N. Y. 512.

3. Parshall v. Fisher, 43 Mich. 529, 534; Bitter v. Rathman, 61 N. Y. 512.

4. Haas v. Shaw, 91 Ind. 384; Bradstreet v. Baer, 41 Md. 19, 23; Carey v. Burruss, 20 W. Va. 571, 576.

5. See cases in note 2, above.

6. Pages 791, 792, 793, 794, vol. 9 of this work for a full discussion.

7. See preceding note.

8. Zimmerman v. Erhard, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 11, 13.

9. Carey v. Burruss, 20 W. Va. 571, 582; Plumer v. Lord, 7 Allen (Mass.) 481, 485.

10. Cruzeu v. McKaig, 57 Md. 454, 462.

11. Maghee v. Baker, 15 Ind. 254, 257.

12. Prensaur v. Henshaw, 49 Iowa 41,

44.

13. Reiman v. Hamilton, 111 Mass. 245, 247.

14. Horneffer v. Duress, 13 Wis. 603, 605.

15. Glidden v. Taylor, 16 Ohio St.

11. Married Women as Incorporators, Stockholders, etc.—Very nearly the same questions arise in considering a married woman's capacity to be an incorporator as those which are involved in her right to be a partner.¹ Corporators enter into a mutual and personal contract, which is concluded by the act of incorporation;² and therefore, without personal capacity to contract, a married woman could not be an incorporator. But as business is very commonly carried on by corporations, a married woman with capacity to trade would, it seems, have capacity to be an incorporator.³ The fact that the corporation laws provide that "any person" may be an incorporator would not affect a married woman under incapacity, by virtue of a rule already discussed.⁴ But a married woman may be a stockholder, holding her stock as any other chose in action;⁵ and it has been held that when she can hold stock as if sole, she is liable, as any other stockholder, for example, for assessments.⁶

A married woman's subscription to stock is an executory agreement, and, as such, void at common law;⁷ but a note given for stock has been held beneficial to her separate estate, and therefore a charge thereupon,⁸ and by statute. in some States, she may be a subscriber.⁹

X. MARRIED WOMEN IN REPRESENTATIVE CAPACITIES. 1. The Questions Involved.—Whether married women may act in representative capacities, whether they may be agents, trustees, administrators, executors, guardians, etc., and how far their acts in such capacities have the same effect as the acts of persons sui juris in similar capacities, are questions which are nowhere fully discussed; and much confusion is likely to result in such a discussion, unless the different points of view from which the subject may be approached be borne in mind. For example, a married woman may be an agent, in the sense that she may, just as if she were sole, bind a party who has authorized her to act for her, but not neces-509, 522; Penn v. Whitehead, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 503, 513.

1. Plumer v. Lord, 9 Allen (Mass.) 460, 462. "The fact that this contract (partnership) might make her liable for the acts and dealings of other persons constitutes no serious objection; for this fact would exist in regard to many ordinary kinds of investment, such as part ownership in ships, or in shares of corporations."

2. Taylor on Corporations, § 31.

3. In accordance with the spirit of § 7 of part IX, above.

4. Stewart on H. & W., § 369. "General statutes relating to contracts but not expressly referring to married women, do not affect the validity of married women's contracts, but apply to these only so far as they are valid under other statutes."

5. See Stewart on H. & W., § 173; Brown v. Bokee, 53 Md. 155, 164; Slaymaker v. Bank of Gettysburg, 10 Pa. St. 373, 376.

6. In re Reciprocity Book, 22 N. Y. 9. "A married woman holding stock in a bank is within the act (ch. 226 of 1849) to enforce the liability of stockholders, and is liable, as such, to assessments for its debts."

7. Stewart on H. & W., §§ 206, 380, 407.

8. At common law the promissory note of a married woman was void. Vance v. Wells, 6 Ala. 737; Taylor v. Boardman, 92 Ill. 566. For proposition in text see principles laid down in Hord v. Taubman, 79 Mo. 101, 103.

9. Cal. Civ. Code 1881, §§ 285-325; W. Va. Code 1878, ch. 122, § 9.

sarily at the same time, in the sense that she may recover compensation for her services, or be liable for money received to her principal's use, or be personally liable to third parties with whom she has dealt in her own name.¹ So she may be a trustee, in the sense that her husband cannot claim substantial rights in property of which she holds only the bare legal title, and that she may dispose of such property in accordance with the powers vested in her by the trust; and yet she would not therefore be liable personally for work done at her request, as a person sui juris would be, or be able to bind herself personally to execute the power of her trust.² And so she may be an administratrix, in the sense that once appointed she may act as such, and yet her appointment may depend on the consent of her husband.³ So as to

1. Married Women as Agents.—A married woman may be an agent in the sense that her principal and the party with whom she deals for him are bound by any transaction conducted by her just as if she were sole. Story Agency, § 7.

She may execute any power, whether appendant or in gross, without any reference to her coverture. Schley v. McCeney, 36 Md. 266, 273; Bouldin v. Reynolds, 58 Md. 491, 495.

She may act as her husband's agent. See title HUSBAND AND WIFE. She may thus dispose of his property inter vivos. Trestwick v. Marshall, 7 Bing. 555, 567. Or by will. Cutter v. Butler, 25 N. H. 343; 57 Am. Dec. 330. She may trade in his place. Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38, 42; 2 Am. Rep. 481. She may even be a partner for him. Swasey v. Antram, 24 Ohio St. 87, 95. And may bind him by her acts, omissions etc., Emerson v. Blonden, 1 Esp. 42, 143; Hopkins v. Mollineux, 4 Vend. (N. Y.) 465, 467.

But she is not personally liable for her acts except as a married woman. Tucker v. Cocke, 32 Miss. 184, 189; Andrews v. Ormsbee, 11 Mo. 400, 402; Carleton v. Haywood, 49 N. H. 314, 320. And only as a married woman can she acquire personal rights. See Ankerstein v. Clarke, 4 Term 616; Yard v. Ellard, Salk. 117; Jenkins v. Plombe, 6 Mod. 3, 94.

When she is agent before marriage her husband by marriage does not become jointly agent with her. Marder v. Lee, 3 Burr. 1469, 1471.

2. Married Women as Trustees.—Married women may become trustees by deed, gift, bequest, appointment, or by operation of law. Perry Trusts, § 48; Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 96 U. S. 304, 309; Springer v. Berry, 47 Me. 330, 335; Bouldin v. Reynolds, 58 Md. 491, 494; Still v. Ruby, 35 Pa. St. 373, 374.

One may, for example, be trustee under a mortgage. Bouldin v. Reynolds, 58 Md. 491, 495. A wife cannot, however, at law, be trustee for her husband. Mutual Ins. Co. v. Deale, 18 Md. 26, 46; Woodbeck v. Havens, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 66, 70. But in equity she can. Livingston v. Livingston, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 541; 1 Perry Trusts, § 48, 51.

Resulting trusts between husband and wife are discussed separately under title MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.

If an estate comes to a married woman in any way charged with a trust, her coverture cannot be pleaded in bar of the trust. Clarke v. Saxon, 1 Hill Ch. 60; Berry v. Morris, 1 Duval 302. She may be compelled to perform the duties of her trust. Dundas v. Biddle, 2 Pa. St. 160, 161.

Her husband has no estate in property of which she has the bare legal title. Claussen v. La Franz, 1 Iowa 226, 234.

She cannot, however, bind herself personally in dealing with her trust estate. Avery v. Griffin, Law R., 6 Eq. 606, 608; Still v. Ruby, 35 Pa. St. 373, 374.

She and her husband are both liable at common law for her breaches of trust. United States Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 309. See ante, part VI.

Still a court will not readily appoint a married woman trustee. Kaye v. Kaye, Law R., 1 Ch. 387; 1 Perry Trusts, § 51.

3. Married Women as Executrix, etc.—The law on this subject is complex and confused and depends greatly on local statutes.

At common law a married woman guardianships,¹ it thus plainly appears that a married woman who may act in a representative capacity does not, while so acting, have the same rights and liabilities as a feme sole and that the following questions may arise, namely: (1) How far do her conjugal obligations conflict with her right to act in a representative capacity—how far has her husband the right to control her in this respect? (2) How far do her personal disabilities—her coverture—affect her capacity to so act? (3) How far do her acts in a representative capacity affect her personally? (4) or her husband? (5) or her principal or estate? (6) or the third parties with whom she deals?

could be appointed executrix or administratrix. English v. McNair, 24 Ala. 40, 48; Stewart v. Stewart, 56 Me. 300, 301; Palmer v. Oakley, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 433, 466; 47 Am. Dec. 41; 1 Wms. Exec. 233.

But on account of the liabilities with which she might thereby invest her husband, she could not be appointed without his consent. Dye v. Dye, 2 Robt. Ec. 342, 344; Buffers v. Harby, 3 Curt. Ec. 50; Pemberton v. Chapman, 7 El. & Bl. 210, 218; El. B. & E. 1056, 1060; Clarke v. Clarke, Law R., 6 P. D. 103, 104; Adair v. Shaw, 1 Schoales & L. 243, 266; Hinds v. Jones, 48 Me. 348, 350; Woodruff v. Cox, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 153, 155.

His consent could be given before or after the granting of letters. Pemberton v. Chapman, 7 El. & B. 210, 219. And it would be presumed in the absence of evidence. English v. McNair, 34 Ala. 40, 48. By the ecclesiastical law it was not necessary. Palmer v. Oakley, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 433, 466; 47 Am. Dec. 41.

By statutes in many States a married woman may be appointed administratrix, but usually her husband must go on her bond. In Rhode Island, married women cannot be appointed. Hammond v. Wood, 15 R. I. 566.

By the common law a husband by marrying an executrix consented that she should act as such. Woodruff v. Cox, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 153, 154. And probably independently of statute the marriage of a woman acting in such a capacity in no way affects her authority. Yates v. Clark, 56 Miss. 212, 216.

It has, however, been said that by marriage the husband becomes co-executor with his wife. Murphree v. Singleton, 37 Ala. 412, 416; Stewart v. Stewart, 56 Me. 300, 301; Woodruff v. Cox, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 153, 155. That he administers in her right for his own protection. Kavanaugh v. Thompson, 16 Ala. 817, 823. That the rights of administration vest in him just as if he had been himself appointed. Wood v. Chetwood, 27 N. J. Eq. 311, 313; Gates v. Whetstone, 8 S. Car. 244; Airhart v. Murphy, 32 Tex. 131, 134. Also that marriage does not revoke letters, but is only a cause for revocation, even under a statute which requires a new bond when an administratrix marries. Gates v. Clark, 56 Miss. 212, 216; Cassidy v. Jackson, 45 Miss. 397, 401.

By statutes in many States the authority of a female administratrix ceases with her marriage, but such statutes are not retrospectively construed. Frye v. Kimball, 16 Mo. 9, 20.

When acting as administratrix a married woman has, as far as the estate is concerned, the capacities of a feme sole, but no additional personal rights or liabilities. Russel v. Russel, 5 Coke 27b; Pemberton v. Chapman, El. B. & El. 1056, 1068.

Her husband has no rights over the estates funds. Roberts v. Place, 18 N. H. 183, 184. If he takes possession of property of the estate it is a devastavit. Workford v. Workford, 1 Salk. 306.

For all defaults, devastavits, etc., the husband and wife are jointly liable by the common law as they are for all torts in which a wife takes part. Ante, VI; Smith v. Smith, 21 Beav. 385, 387; Bingham v. Lee, 15 Sim. 396, 401; Kearsley v. Okley, 2 Hurl. & C. 806, 900; Loody v. Turnbull, Law R., 1 Ch. App. 494, 498; Derbyshire v. Horne, 5 DeGex & S. 702, 709; Woodruff v. Cox, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 153, 154.

A wife may renounce her right to administer without her husband's consent. 1 Wms. Exec. 234.

1. Married Women as Guardians.—The questions involved under this head are much the same as those just discussed. When the husband's common

2. General Rules.—With regard to the questions already stated, certain general rules may be formulated, to wit.

(1) As to Husband's Consent.—At common law, a husband not only took his wife with all her accrued obligations, but he was also jointly liable with her for her torts, whether committed with his consent or not,¹ and was therefore liable for all her breaches of trust, devastavits, etc.;² so that for his own protection he had the right to say whether she should act in a representative capacity, and subject him to such additional risks.³ But his consent was necessary only so far as his liabilities were concerned,⁴—he could not, for example, object to her executing a power to convey property,⁵ and for this reason, it would seem that his right to object at all is removed by statutes destroying his marital liability for the acts of his wife.⁶

(2) As to Wife's Coverture.—The fact that a wife has no personal capacities, but is under the disabilities of coverture, does not prevent her acting in a representative capacity;⁷ she may be an agent, administratrix or executrix, trustee, or guardian; it only affects her personal rights and obligations while acting in such capacities.⁸ A married woman is not in this respect like an idiot; she has as much discretion after as before marriage.⁹

(3) As to Personal Rights and Obligations of Wife.—The fact law liabilities exist she cannot be appointed without his consent. Palmer v. Oakley, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 433, 469; 47 Am. Dec. 41. But once appointed her husband's consent is presumed. English v. McNair, 34 Ala. 40, 51; Fields v. Torrey, 7 Vt. 372, 387. And though her letters may therefore be revocable; until they have been revoked her authority is complete. Palmer v. Oakley, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 433, 460, 469; 47 Am. Dec. 41. Her common law incapacities do not affect her right to be appointed. Jarrett v. State, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 27, 28.

There seems to be no good reason for saying that the marriage of a female guardian revokes her appointment or works a substitution of her husband in her place. Allen v. McCullough, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 174, 193; 5 Am. Rep. 27.

1. Ferguson v. Collins, 8 Ark. 241, 252; ante, VI.

2. "A feme covert may be a trustee, but her husband is personally liable for any breach of trust she may commit, and hence she cannot act in the administration of the trust without his concurrence or consent. Hill Tr. 464; Phillips v. Richardson, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 212; United States Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304, 309. On the same point see McWilliams v. McWilliams, 1 Schoales & L. 169, 173; Adair v.

Shaw, 1 Schoales & L. 243, 263, 266, 272; Loody v. Turnbull, Law R., 1 Ch. App. 494, 498; Bohe v. Frowner, 18 Ala. 89, 95; Kavanaugh v. Thompson, 16 Ala. 817, 823; Carlisle v. Tuttle, 30 Ala. 613, 624; Maffit v. Commonwealth, 5 Pa. St. 359, 366; Tabb v. Boyd, 4 Call' (Va.) 453, 457; Moone v. Henderson, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) Eq. 459, 461; Knox v. Pickett, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) Eq. 92, 93; Allen v. McCullough, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 174, 193; 5 Am. Rep. 27.

McCready's Case, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 374, 376.

3. Cases last cited; Dye v. Dye, 2 Robt. 342, 344; Pemberton v. Chapman, 7 El. & B. 210, 218; English v. McNair, 34 Ala. 40, 48; Stewart v. Stewart, 56 Me. 300, 301; Palmer v. Oakley, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 433, 468.

4. Pemberton v. Chapman, El. B. & E. 1056, 1067.

5. See Claussen v. La Franz, 1 Iowa 226, 234.

6. Consult ante, VI.

7. 1 Perry Trusts, § 48; Story Agency, § 7; 2 Wms. Exec. 965.

8. See Pemberton v. Chapman, El. B. & E. 1056, 1068; Avery v. Griffin, Law R., 6 Eq. 606, 608; Tucker v. Cocke, 32 Miss. 184, 189; notes under last preceding section.

9. Bell v. Hyde, Prec. Ch. 350.

that a married woman may act in a representative capacity, and is so acting, does not enlarge her personal capacities, or remove, as far as she is herself concerned, her marriage disabilities, or affect her personal status.¹ Her contracts, though made in her own name, do not bind her personally, unless she has the capacity to contract personally;² so she may be unable to stipulate for any compensation.³ For her torts she is, of course, personally liable, for a married woman is not, even at common law, under disability to commit wrongs.⁴

(4) As to Her Husband's Rights and Obligations.—A husband has no property or estate in funds held by a married woman in a representative capacity.⁵ He generally sues and is sued with her for conformity,⁶ and on contracts on which if sole she could have declared in her own name, he could at common law sue alone.⁷ For all her devastavits and acts in the nature of tort he is jointly liable with her, in accordance with the rules already discussed relating to a husband's liability for his wife's torts.⁸ He is liable for her contracts only if she acted as his agent.⁹ He must account for any money which passes into his possession.¹⁰

(5) As to the Estate or Principal.—The estate or person whom the wife represents is bound, and receives the benefit of her acts just as if she were sole;¹¹ her conveyance in accordance with her powers,¹² or her receipt for funds,¹³ is binding as if by him.

(6) As to Third Parties.—The rights and obligations of the persons with whom she deals as representative are the same, as far as the person or estate which she represents is concerned, as if she were sole;¹⁴ but as far as she herself is concerned, they are simply such as may exist against any married woman.¹⁵

MARSHAL.—(a) An officer of the United States whose duty it is to execute the process of the courts of the United States. His duties within the district for which he is appointed are very similar to those of a sheriff.¹⁶ See title SHERIFF, MARSHAL AND CONSTABLE.

(b) In the western and southwestern States, a marshal is an

1. See Russel v. Russel, 5 Coke 27b; Pemberton v. Chapman, supra; Hazelbaker v. Goodfellow, 64 Ill. 238, 241; Abbey v. Deyo, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 374, 380; Tucker v. Cocke, 32 Miss. 184, 189; Andrews v. Ormsbee, 11 Mo. 400, 402; Carleton v. Haywood, 49 N. H. 314, 320; Still v. Ruby, 35 Pa. St. 373, 374.

2. Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38, 42; 2 Am. Rep. 481.

3. Hazelbaker v. Goodfellow, 64 Ill. 238, 241; ante, VIII, § 20.

4. Discussed ante, VI.

5. Workford v. Workford, 1 Salk. 306; Claussen v. La Franz, 1 Iowa 226, 234; Roberts v. Place, 18 N. H. 183, 184.

6. Still v. Ruby, 35 Pa. St. 373, 374; ante, VIII.

7. Ankerstein v. Clarke, 4 Term 616, 617; Yard v. Ellard, 1 Salk. 117; Jenkins v. Plombe, 6 Mod. 93, 94.

8. Cases supra; ante, VI.

9. Tuttle v. Hoag, 46 Mo. 38, 42; 2 Am. Rep. 481; ante, III; title HUSBAND AND WIFE.

10. Keister v. Howe, 3 Ind. 268, 269.

11. See Russel v. Russel, 5 Coke 276.

12. Bouldin v. Reynolds, 58 Md. 491, 495.

13. Pemberton v. Chapman, 7 El. & B. 210, 218.

14. See Russel v. Russel, 5 Coke 27b.

15. See Still v. Ruby, 35 Pa. St. 373, 374.

16. Bouv. Law Dict. See U. S. statutes at large; Serg. Const. Law, ch. 25; officer of the peace, appointed by authority of a city or borough, who holds himself in readiness to answer such calls as fall within the general duties of a constable or sheriff.¹

(c) To arrange; put in proper order.²

MARSHALLING ASSETS—(See also DEBTS OF DECEDENTS; EQUITY; LEGACIES; SUBROGATION).

- I. Definition, 685.
- II. Grounds of Equitable Interference, 685.
 1. Nature of the Equity, 686.
- III. Nature of the Funds to Which the Doctrine Is Applied, 688.
- IV. How the Equity of Marshalling Is Enforced, 692.
 1. Injunction, 692.
 2. Decree of Subrogation, 693.
 3. Decree of Distribution, 695.
 4. Case Stated, 696.
 5. Foreclosure, 696.
- V. Rights of the Paramount Creditor, 696.
- VI. Default of the Paramount Creditor After Notice, 698.
- VII. As Between Creditors of Different Persons, 699.
- III. Marshalling in Favor of Sureties, 701.
- IX. Marshalling in Favor of Legatees, 707.
- X. Marshalling in Admiralty, 707.
- XI. Inverse Order of Alienation, 707.
 1. General Principle, 707.
 2. Nature of the Encumbrance Immaterial, 711.
 3. Notice, 712.
 4. How the Equity of the Grantee Is Enforced, 713.
- XII. Partnership Assets, 713.
 1. The Rule Stated, 713.
 2. Reason of the Rule, 714.
 3. Appropriation of Firm Assets to Separate Debts, 715.
 4. Effect of Sale of One Partner's Interest to Another Partner, 718.
 5. Effect of Sale of Partner's Interest by Legal Process, 720.
 6. Rights of the Separate Creditors, 722.
- XIII. Decedents' Estates, 725.
 1. In Favor of Creditors, 725.
 2. In Aid of Legatees, 727.
 3. In Aid of Devisees, 738.
 4. Widow's Paraphernalia, 739.
 5. Jurisdiction of Probate Courts, 739.

I. DEFINITION.—Marshalling assets is such an arrangement of different funds as will enable all the parties having equities there- to receive their due proportions, notwithstanding the interven- g interests of particular persons to prior satisfaction out of a portion of the funds.³

II. GROUNDS OF EQUITABLE INTERFERENCE.—The doctrine of mar- alling depends upon the principle that a person having a right resort to two funds, in one of which alone another person has junior lien, shall be compelled to exhaust the fund to which the her cannot resort, before coming upon the one in which they th have an interest. The rule is said by CHANCELLOR KENT to st “on the basis of mere equity and benevolence,” and “is ognized in every cultivated system of jurisprudence.”⁴ rr's Trial 365; Anonymous Gall, 2. In the leading case of Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. 308; 2 White & Tudor, Lead. Cases in Eq. 228, LORD ELDON defines marshalling to be a case where “a person having two funds shall not, by his election, disappoint the party having only one fund.”

4. Cheesborough v. Millard, 1 Johns.

1. Nature of the Equity.—The equity of the junior creditor is not against the paramount creditor, but against the debtor himself. By its exercise the junior creditor prevents the debtor from retaining the singly charged estate free from both debts.¹

(N. Y.) Ch. 409, 412. JUDGE STORY, in Eq. Juris., § 633, says: "The general principle is, that if one party has a lien on, or interest in, two funds for a debt, and another party has a lien on, or interest in one only of the funds for another debt, the latter has a right in equity to compel the former to resort to the other fund in the first instance for satisfaction, if that course is necessary for the satisfaction of the claims of both parties, whenever it will not trench upon the rights or operate to the prejudice of the party entitled to the double fund. . . . If A has a mortgage upon two different estates for the same debt, and B has a mortgage upon one only of the estates for another debt, B has a right to throw A in the first instance, for satisfaction upon the security, which he, B, cannot touch, at least where it will not prejudice A's rights, or improperly control his remedies. . . . The reason is obvious, and has been already stated; for by compelling A, under such circumstances, to take satisfaction out of one of the funds, no injustice is done to him in point of security or payment. But it is the only way by which B can receive payment. And natural justice requires that one man should not be permitted, from wantonness, caprice or rashness, to do an injury to another. In short, we may here apply the common maxim, sic utere tuo ut alienum non ledas; and still more emphatically the christian maxim, 'Do unto others as you would they should do unto you.'" Kyner v. Kyner, 6 Watts (Pa.) 221; Hastings' Case, 10 Watts (Pa.) 303; National Savings Bank v. Creswell, 100 U. S. 641; Gilliam v. McCormack, 85 Tenn. 597; Turner v. Flinn, 67 Ala. 529.

Examples.—A gave two promissory notes dated alike and secured by a mortgage. One of the notes was also secured by a surety. On foreclosure, it was held that the one secured by mortgage only must be first satisfied before the proceeds of a sale of the land could be applied to the payment of the other. Hanford v. Robertson, 47 Mich. 100.

Were an estate is subject to a mortgage and is sold by the mortgagor in parcels at different times, as between the grantee and mortgagee, the latter being a creditor with two funds, is required to proceed primarily against the fund upon which the grantee has no claim. See Fasset v. Mulock, 5 Colo. 466.

A judgment creditor of a copartnership had a lien on the separate estate of the surviving partner and on that of the deceased partner. A certain unsecured creditor could go only against the estates of the latter, there being no partnership assets. It was held that equity would require the judgment creditor first to exhaust the estate of the survivor. Pitts v. Spotts (Va.), 9 S. E. Rep. 501.

In a foreclosure suit by a building association holding as security a mortgage and shares of its own stock, it was held that a second mortgagee of the same property was entitled to have plaintiff realize first upon the stock. Bishop Bailey B. & L. Assoc. v. Kennedy (N. J.), 12 Atl. Rep. 141.

1. Nature of the Equity.—The equity being against the debtor, it is equally against his judgment creditors whose liens were obtained subsequently to the lien of the junior creditor in whose favor the equity is enforced. Thus in Robeson's Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 628, the owner of a tract of land gave a judgment to A and then a mortgage to B. Subsequently the owner acquired a second tract, on which A by a revival of his judgment obtained a first lien. Subsequently the owner mortgaged this second tract to C. Upon a distribution of the proceeds of both tracts it was held that C, having had record notice of the other liens, B, under his superior equity, could require that the proceeds of the second tract should be applied to A's judgment in relief of his own lien upon the first. The court said: "This equity, we have said, was against the debtor, and it is equally such against his subsequent mortgage creditors with notice, who can have no greater rights than the debtor had at the time the mortgage was given. This equity existed in favor of the appellants before the appellees acquired their lien; prior in tempore potior in jure. The appellees must be considered to have taken their mortgage subject to the prior equity of the appellants."

In Delaware & Hudson Canal Co.'s Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 512, a mortgagor had other lands than those mortgaged, which, including the mortgaged premises, were bound by four earlier judgments. Subsequent to the mortgage were other judgments which were liens upon all the lands. Upon a distribution of the proceeds of a sale of all the lands the court subrogated the mortgagee to the rights of the senior judgment creditors in the lands not covered by the mortgage. It was distinctly held that the judgment creditors subsequent to the mortgage had no rights superior to those of their debtor. The same principle is recognized in Hastings' Case, 10 Watts (Pa.) 303. These cases and Robeson's Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 628, overrule Miller v. Jacobs, 3 Watts (Pa.) 477, where it was held that a creditor who has a lien on two funds may throw the whole burden on one of them, to the exclusion of a junior encumbrancer, if the other fund is subject to encumbrances, which, though posterior in date, are sufficient to absorb the whole, because the effect of such a course is merely to postpone one creditor to another, and it does not enable the debtor to get back the estate discharged of the lien. In Hoff's Appeal, 84 Pa. St. 40, it was held that a bona fide purchaser may be unaffected by an equity of which he had no notice in fact.

The general principle is explained by JUDGE HARE in a note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cases in Eq. 266, as follows: "The equity has its root in the obligation of the debtor, but is also an equity among the creditors, that each shall, when it can be done without loss or inconvenience, so use his right that all may, as far as the circumstances admit, be satisfied in the order in which their liens severally accrued. A has a paramount lien on two tracts of land, B a lien on one of them, and C a subsequent lien on both. If A exhausts the tract which is the subject of B's lien, B will be subrogated to A's lien on the other tract, although C is thereby excluded from the fund."

A writer in the American Law Register, vol. 27, p. 738, states the rule concisely as follows: "If a paramount encumbrancer of two funds, by his election of remedies, disappoints a junior creditor, who has a lien upon one of them only, the latter shall, to that extent, be substituted to the lien of the paramount encumbrance upon the other fund bound by it, as against the debtor and all claiming under him, by lien or title, subsequent in time." See Young v. Morgan, 89 Ill. 199; Crawford v. Richeson, 101 Ill. 351; Lyman v. Lyman, 32 Vt. 79; Fassett v. Mulock, 5 Colo. 466.

In England the rule is different. Thus in Averall v. Wade, L. & G. t. Sugd. 252, where a person who was seised of several estates, and, indebted by judgments, settled one of the estates for a valuable consideration with a covenant against encumbrances, and subsequently acknowledged other judgments, it was held that the subsequent judgment creditors had no equity to compel the prior judgment creditors to resort to the settled estates.

In Barnes v. Racster, 1 Y. & C. C. 401, Racster was seised of Foxhall Coppice and a piece of land known as No. 32. In 1792 he mortgaged Foxhall to Barnes; in 1795 Foxhall to Hartwright; in 1800 Foxhall and No. 32 to Barnes; and in 1804 Foxhall and No. 32 to Williams. The subsequent encumbrancers took with notice. The court held that as against Williams the securities ought not to be marshalled. Barnes v. Racster was approved in Gibson v. Seagrim, 20 Beav. 618, and In re Mower's Trusts, 8 L. R. Eq. 110.

In Wellesley v. Mornington, 17 W. R. 355, a mortgagor having two funds mortgaged, both to A, then one to B, then both to C. B claimed that A should pay himself first out of the one on which he, B, had no charge. C objected to B's claim, and it was refused.

In Gibson v. Seagrim, 24 L. J. Ch. 782, the court marshalled the proceeds arising from several mortgaged premises so as to prevent the first and second mortgagees of different estates from exhausting the proceeds of one estate upon which alone a third mortgagee had taken security.

The rule followed by most of the American cases is recognized in Ireland. In re Lynch's Case, 1 I. R. Eq. 396. In this case there was first a mortgage by deed of lands A and B; secondly, in 1856, two judgments registered as mortgages against the A lands; and thirdly, in 1857, a judgment registered as a mortgage against the entirety of the lands A and B. The mortgagees having sold applied in payment of their debt the whole of the lands A. It was held that the two judg-

III. NATURE OF THE FUNDS TO WHICH THE DOCTRINE IS APPLIED.

—In general the nature of the property which constitutes the funds is immaterial;¹ but the doctrine does not apply unless ment creditors of 1856 had a right to marshal as against the judgment creditor of 1857. See also Hamilton v. Royce, 2 Sch. & Lef. 315; Hartly v. O'Flaherty, D. & G. 208; Re Ford, 5 Ir. Ch. 541; Re Jones, 2 Ir. Ch. 544; Rorke's Estate, 15 Ir. Ch. 316. But see Lawder's Estate, 11 Ir. Ch. 346.

In Tennessee, the English rule is followed. In the recent case of Gilliam v. McCormack, 85 Tenn. 597, McCormack owned three town lots and gave six mortgages thereon at different dates, the first covering the entire property, and the others parcels thereof, less than the whole. All the lots were subsequently sold and their proceeds proved insufficient to pay all the mortgage debts. Upon a controversy among the junior mortgagees as to the application of the remaining proceeds of the lots after payment of the senior mortgagees, the court held that the several mortgages should be paid pro rata, in order of their priority, out of the proceeds of the parcel or parcels covered by each. The court laid it down as a rule that the equity to marshal does not fasten itself upon the situation as it existed at the date of the execution of the respective mortgages, but upon the situation existing at the time its enforcement is invoked; and that this equity becomes a fixed right only from the time proper steps are taken to enforce it, remaining until then subject to defeat or displacement by the creation of subsequent liens on the property or funds. This case, although very recently decided, does not seem to be in accord with the current of decision in America. But see Green v. Ramage, 18 Ohio 428; Leib v. Stribling, 51 Md. 285; Marr v. Lewis, 31 Ark. 203; McArthur v. Martin, 23 Minn. 74.

In Canada, it is held that the record of a paramount encumbrance is notice to a subsequent part purchaser of equities existing in favor of the intervening liens. Boucher v. Smith, 9 Grant (Can.) 347; Trust Co. v. Shaw, 16 Grant (Can.) 446.

Where the Equities Are Equal the Law Prevails.—In Ritter v. Cost, 99 Ind. 80, it was held that the equity of the purchaser for value of a judgment constituting a lien is equal to the equitable claim of the owner of the land to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee of a satisfied mortgage, of which the purchaser of the judgment had no actual knowledge; and this, on the ground that the equities being equal, the law must prevail.

A commissioner appointed to sell land under an order of court for the payment of the debts of a deceased person, made the sale and received one-third of the purchase money, but failed to give the required bond. He was ordered, upon confirmation of the sale, to pay from the funds reported in his hands certain debts of the deceased. This he failed to do, and, after the docketing of the decree against him, he conveyed his own land in trust for a creditor of his own. The court held that the rights of the parties to the decree were paramount to those of such creditor, and that the latter, moreover, had no claim to be subrogated to the rights of the creditors of the deceased against the purchaser at the sale, he having no equity superior to theirs. Lee v. Swepson, 76 Va. 173.

In Butler v. Stamback, 87 N. Car. 216, it was held that the doctrine of marshalling securities does not apply where one security is given and expressly declared to be in exoneration of another, though other interests are involved in the latter security, and it is insufficient to protect all of them.

1. In Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. 308; 2 White & Tudor's Lead. Cas. in Eq. 228 (Am. ed.), LORD ELDON gives a number of illustrations showing the character of the funds that may be affected by the doctrine of marshalling. He instances mortgaged estates, copyhold estates bound by mortgages, legacies, land specifically devised and made subject to debts, and paraphernalia. In England, the equity of marshalling is frequently invoked in contests between legatees and devisees; in America, more frequently between mortgagees and judgment creditors, or between judgment creditors.

Homestead Land.—In most of the States marshalling may take place where homestead land is involved. Thus in Parr v. Fumbanks, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 391, A conveyed two tracts of land to secure his debts to B and C. He afterwards conveyed one of these tracts—releasing his right of homestead therein—and personal property besides, to secure the debt due B. In a suit instituted by C it was held that B should be compelled, first, to look to the personalty, and next to the land first conveyed, leaving C to avail himself of B's rights in A's homestead exemption. See Hall v. Fulgham, 2 Pickle (Tenn.) 451.

In Virginia, where homestead has been set apart, and there is not sufficient property unexempt to pay the debts, all creditors must share ratably in such property, and then those creditors as to whom homestead is waived are entitled to satisfaction out of the homestead of the balance of their debts unpaid. Scott v. Cheatham, 78 Va. 82.

In Wisconsin, in a foreclosure sale under a mortgage which covered the mortgagor's homestead and other lands, the sheriff, contrary to the mortgagor's request, neglected to offer first the other land, and sold the homestead alone for the amount of the judgment. The court held that in view of the fact that there were judgment creditors, not parties to the suit, who had a lien on the unsold land, it was not an abuse of discretion to confirm the sale. CHIEF JUSTICE DIXON said: "However just and reasonable it might be for the court to compel a sale of the business lot first, and thus save the homestead, if that were the only question, yet we think the mortgagor's equity to hold his homestead fully countervailed by the equities of his creditors, who must look to the business lot for their satisfaction, and who have no lien upon the homestead. Until the legislature shall have declared the obligation to preserve the homestead superior to that of paying one's honest debts, we must hold the equity of the creditor at least equal to that of the debtor in cases like this." Ones v. Dow, 18 Wis. 241. See also White v. Polleys, 20 Wis. 503.

The same rule was applied in the United States court in the western district of Wisconsin, where it was held that the fact that a part of the property is a homestead does not change the rule requiring a party having security on two funds to first exhaust his remedy upon the fund he once was secured upon, where there is another party having security on the other alone. In re Santhoff, 7 Biss. (J. S.) 167. The legislature of Wisconsin subsequently passed an act protecting the equity of the homestead claimant.

In South Carolina, where a debtor mortgages his entire real estate, and subsequently a judgment is recovered against him, the judgment creditor has the equitable right to compel the mortgagor to first exhaust so much of the debtor's land as embraces the homestead. State Savings Bank v. Harbin, 18 S. Car. 425. See also Webster v. Bronston, 5 Bush (Ky.) 521.

In Hall v. Morgan, 79 Mo. 47, one of two parcels of land mortgaged by a husband and wife was conveyed by the husband by warranty to one who, during the pendency of foreclosure, sold the parcel with the understanding that it was to bear its proportion of the mortgage. This parcel alone was sold. It was held that the other was subject to its proportion of the mortgage even though it had been set aside as homestead. Hall v. Morgan, 79 Mo. 47.

Where a mortgage was made on two pieces of real estate, and a subsequent mortgage was made on one of them, and thereafter a homestead was declared in respect of the land not embraced in the second mortgage, it was held that the equitable right of the junior mortgagee to compel the first mortgagee to resort in the first instance to the property on which he had an exclusive claim, could not be taken away or impaired by a declaration of homestead, by either husband or wife, on the property exclusively mortgaged to the first mortgagee. Abbott v. Powell, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 91.

The fact that a mortgage covers a homestead and also other property which is subject to a subsequent judgment, does not give the debtor the right to have the latter property first applied to the payment of the mortgage, so that he may have his homestead. In Searle v. Chapman, 121 Mass. 19, CHIEF JUSTICE GRAY said: "The powers of a court of chancery to compel a mortgagee to resort in the first instance to one of several estates mortgaged, is exercised only for protection of the equities of different creditors, or encumbrancers, or of sureties, and not for the benefit of the mortgagor. As against him the mortgagee has the right to enforce the contract between them according to its terms, and is not obliged to elect between different remedies or securities."

The same rule was applied in White

v. Polleys, 20 Wis. 503, where it was held that where a mortgage covers the homestead and also other property, which is subject to the lien of a subsequent judgment, the debtor has no right to have the latter exhausted to satisfy the mortgage in order to preserve his homestead.

Where a creditor had two mortgages, the first covering only store property, the second, in which there was a waiver of homestead, covering both store and homestead, and also a junior judgment; held, that he was entitled to have the homestead property first sold, the principle of marshalling assets not applying as between debtor and creditor. Plain v. Roth, 107 Ill. 588.

The reason of the rule is explained by BREWER, J., in Chapman v. Lester, 12 Kan. 592, 595, as follows: "It is claimed that it was the mortgagee's duty to exhaust the other property before proceeding against the homestead, and inasmuch as the property released and received was ample to pay the debt, he cannot now be allowed to enforce any lien upon the homestead. It is said that the homestead belongs to and is designed by the law for the family, and that their rights are paramount to the rights of creditors. We cannot assent to the claim as thus broadly stated. It means that when a creditor takes a mortgage on the homestead and other property, though nothing is expressed, there is an implied agreement to consider the homestead as a sort of secondary security, a security for security; that the other property mortgaged is the primary security, and that, if that proves insufficient, and only when that proves insufficient, can the lien on the homestead be enforced. That partners may make such a contract is unquestionable; that the legislature may establish such a rule is probable. Such seems to have been done in Iowa. Code, original § 1249; § 2281 of the revision of 1860, cited in Dickson v. Chorn, 6 Iowa 19, and Twogood v. Stephens, 19 Iowa 405. But in the absence of legislation, and of express contract, we do not think the courts are warranted in interpolating such a stipulation. The creditor takes such security for his debt, and with such contract as the parties may agree upon."

In California it is held that the mortgagor can insist upon the property other than the homestead being sold first. McLaughlin v. Hart, 46 Cal.

638. The same rule prevails in Iowa. Equitable Life Ins. Co. v. Gleason, 62 Iowa 277.

In Grant v. Parsons, 67 Iowa 31, a senior mortgage embraced a homestead; a junior mortgage did not. It was held that while a literal construction of the Iowa statute would justify the junior mortgagee's right to an assignment that would cut off the homestead, such a construction should not be given.

In Armitage v. Toll, 64 Mich. 412, the facts were as follows: D owned a farm of one hundred acres divided by a road leaving about forty acres upon one side, upon which the buildings were erected, and which constituted his homestead, and sixty acres on the other. D and his wife executed a mortgage on the entire one hundred acres. Subsequently D, his wife not signing, executed a second mortgage on the same property which contained a clause to the effect that D selected the forty acres as his homestead. In a suit to foreclose the first mortgage the court held that the sixty acres must be first sold to satisfy the mortgage, and that the second mortgagee could not force the first mortgagee to sell the homestead for his claim.

In North Carolina, the doctrine of marshalling is not applied in cases where the homestead is involved. Wilson v. Patton, 87 N. Car. 318.

Exemption in Pennsylvania.—In the recent case of Hallman v. Hallman, 124 Pa. St. 347, the whole question of marshalling in cases where exemption has been waived, is carefully considered by JUDGE MITCHELL. In that case the facts were as follows: On February 23rd, 1888, the real estate of James T. Hallman was sold at sheriff's sale for $700. All of Hallman's personal property amounting to only $6, had been previously appraised to him on account of his claim under the exemption act. At the time of the sale there were two judgments against the property; the first, for $70, containing a waiver of exemption; the second, for $660 without a waiver of exemption. Hallman claimed out of the proceeds a balance of $294 under the $300 exemption act. On a case stated between Hallman and the second judgment creditor, the court below entered judgment for the judgment creditor. On a writ of error the supreme court reversed the judgment. After a consideration of the authorities in Pennsylvania JUDGE MITCHELL stated the following propositions as being established. First, a waiver as to any lien will enure to the benefit of all prior liens, on the principle that a debtor cannot alter the precedence settled by law. Secondly, a waiver as to any lien will enure to the benefit of subsequent creditors, so far as to compel the waiver-creditor to resort first to the exempted fund, on the principle of the equity of creditors having one and two funds, respectively, under their control. Thirdly, a waiver will not enure to the benefit of subsequent liens beyond its own amount; so that if the waiver-judgment is less than $300, the balance will go to the debtor claiming his exemption, and this on the broad ground that men may do what they will with their own, provided they do not contravene the settled rules of law, or impair the rights of others. The case of Johnston & Sutton's Appeal, 25 Pa. St. 116, was approved and followed. The following cases were cited: Bowyer's Appeal, 21 Pa. St. 210; Garrett's Appeal, 32 Pa. St. 160; McAfoose's Appeal, 32 Pa. St. 276; Shelly's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 373; Pittman's Appeal, 48 Pa. St. 315; and Jimmison's Appeal, 13 W. N. C. (Pa.) 25.

In New York, if a debtor waive the privilege in favor of a mortgagee, such waiver will render the premises liable to execution at the suit of a prior judgment-creditor, whose judgment is a lien. Smith v. Brackett, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 571.

Partnership and Separate Property.—By the doctrine of marshalling a joint creditor of a firm may be entitled to collect his claim from the separate estate of a partner. In ex parte Salting, L. R., 25 Ch. D. 148, a firm wrongtully pledged the goods of a customer to their bankers for an advance to the firm. One of the partners gave to the bankers a separate guarantee for the advance. The firm became bankrupt and the bankers sold the goods and applied the proceeds to their debt. They then proved for the residue against the separate estate of the partner who had given the guarantee. His separate estate was more than sufficient to pay the whole debt. It was held that the owner of the goods was entitled to have the banker's securities marshalled, and to have the benefit of the guarantee to the extent of the value of the goods which had been sold, and prove for that value against the separate estate of the partner who had given the guarantee.

In ex parte Alston the facts were as follows: A firm in Ceylon employed a firm in England as their agents and factors, the course of business being that the Ceylon firm consigned cargoes to the English firm for sale on their account, and drew bills on the English firm against the consignments. Consignments of coffee were made in this manner, and bills accepted by the English firm against them. The English firm then pledged the coffee, together with certain securities of their own, with a broker, to secure a debt due from them to him. The English firm became insolvent, and executed a creditor's deed under the Bankruptcy act, and then the broker sold the coffee (which produced more than sufficient to cover the bills drawn against it) and enough of the other securities to satisfy the debt. The court held that the Ceylon firm were entitled as against the English firm in liquidation, to have the remaining securities in the broker's hands marshalled, and to have a lien thereon for the balance due to them upon the coffee transaction.

Where a partner who gives a mortgage on land which belongs to him individually, for a partnership debt, and the mortgaged premises are taken for the debt, the mortgagor and his separate creditors may be subrogated to the remedy of the joint creditor against the assets of the partnership. Averill v. Loucks, 6 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 470. See also Frow's Estate, 73 Pa. St. 459; Morris v. Oakford, 9 Pa. St. 498; Cherry v. Monroe, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 168; McCormick v. Irwin, 35 Pa. St. 111.

Dower.—In Platt v. Brick, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 121, a curious case arose as to an inchoate dower interest. A purchased from B's assignee in bankruptcy an equity of redemption. There was also an outstanding mortgage of the land in which B's wife had joined. The court held that A could compel an assignment of the outstanding mortgage for the purpose of protecting himself against the inchoate right of dower of B's wife, she not having released her dower by the mortgage purchased by A.

Funds in Different Jurisdictions.—Where a judgment has been entered in two counties, it will not be enforced to the prejudice of a subsequent judgment creditor who has a lien in only one. Thus D owned land in Philadelphia and Chester county, Pennsylvania. C entered a judgment against him in Philadelphia on September 21st, which there are two funds already in existence before the question of marshalling is raised.¹

IV. HOW THE EQUITY OF MARSHALLING IS ENFORCED.—There are several remedies by which the equitable right of marshalling may be enforced.

1. Injunction.—If no delay or inconvenience will result to the senior creditor, a court of equity may restrain him by injunction from proceeding upon the doubly charged fund.²

by transfer became a lien in Chester county on September 22d, 1868. H entered a judgment in Philadelphia on December 26th, 1868. S recorded a mortgage in Chester county on December 9th, 1869. T entered a judgment in Philadelphia on December 15th, 1869, which on the following day by transfer became a lien in Chester county. On April 9th, 1870, C assigned his judgment with its liens to H. On June 6th, 1870, the sheriff sold D's land in Philadelphia for enough to pay C's judgment. On October 22d, 1870, the sheriff sold D's land in Chester county for enough to pay C's judgment. The proceeds of the sale in Philadelphia being in the sheriff's hands, the proceeds in Chester county were awarded to C's judgment assigned to H. McDevitt & Hay's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 373. See also McGinnis' Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 445.

A creditor may even be required to proceed upon property without the State. The Y. & J. Steamboat Co. v. The Jersey Co., 1 Hopkins 461. In such a case the court will not ordinarily go further than to grant a decree of subrogation on the payment of the debt. Woolcocks v. Hart, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 185.

1. In the case of In re Professional Life Assurance Company, 3 L. R., Eq. 668, the necessity of the actual existence of the two funds was enforced. By the deed of settlement of the company, and by the terms of the policies issued by the company, it was provided that the capital stock and funds of the company should alone be liable to claims in respect of the policies, and that no shareholder should be liable to such claims beyond the amount of the unpaid part of his share in the capital of the company. The company became insolvent, was wound up, and calls to the full amount of the unpaid capital were made, and the proceeds of such calls, together with the other assets of the company, were applied in paying part of the costs of the winding up, and in paying dividends on the debts due to policy holders and general creditors pari passu. It was held that the doctrine of marshalling did not apply, and that no further call could be made upon the share holders for the purpose of recouping to the policy holders the amount of the capital which had been paid to the general creditors, but that the costs of the winding up must be borne by the share holders, and not be paid out of the capital of the company, and consequently a further call must be made, not only to pay the balance of the debts of the general creditors, but also to replace the capital which had been applied in the payment of costs. LORD ROMILLY, M. R., said: "It is a settled principle of law that where there are two classes of creditors and two funds, and one class of creditors can only go against one fund, while the other class of creditors can go against both, the court will marshal the assets and restrict the creditors what have a double security from touching the fund applicable to payment of the first class of creditors, until they are paid in full. . . . The contest here is, whether that principle has any application to this case. The contributories deny that there are two funds; they argue that the contention of the policy holders, if successful, would be to create two funds in order to raise the question, or . . . it is admitted that there cannot be any marshalling of assets until the two funds exist, but you raise the question of marshalling, and claim a right to marshal in order to create a fund for that purpose which does not now exist. . . . If the question of marshalling could have arisen at all, it must have arisen at the moment of what I may call the death of the company, on the 11th day of May, 1861, but there were no two funds to marshal at that time; the fund then existing was applicable indiscriminately to pay all, and those who contracted that they would receive payment out of that fund and no other must go to that extent unpaid."

2. Thus where a creditor in New Jersey, in which State all the parties

2. Decree of Subrogation.—The more usual remedy, however, is a decree of subrogation, by which the junior creditor is given the benefit of another security in place of the one of which he has been disappointed.¹

resided, took from B, the holder of a promissory note endorsed by the plaintiff, on a loan of money alleged to be usurious, a bond and mortgage, which was ample security for the debt, and instead of resorting to the bond and mortgage, or to the principal debtor, sued the plaintiff at law in New York, the court granted an injunction to stay the suit at law until the creditor had pursued his remedy on the mortgage in New Jersey. Hayes v. Ward, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 123. See also Irick v. Black, 2 C. E. Green (N. J.) 189.

An injunction, however, is seldom granted, and then only under peculiar circumstances. Mr. Bispham, in his treatise on Equity, § 341, says: "It is true that there are many dicta to the effect that a creditor will be restrained from resorting to one of two sources of payment, and compelled to look to the other; but in practice the rule has been seldom applied (except under peculiar circumstances) because it would appear to be unjust that a creditor, who had taken pains to obtain ample security, should be limited in his rights of enforcement, and exposed to delay; more especially as the ends of justice can be completely attained by the application of the doctrine of subrogation. A paramount encumbrancer ought to be allowed to choose the method of collecting his debt, and all that a junior creditor can fairly ask is that he shall have liberty to resort to another source of payment in place of the one of which he has been deprived."

In Evertson v. Booth, 19 John. (N. Y.) 496, the court said: "But a court of equity will take care not to give the junior creditor this relief, if it will endanger thereby the prior creditor, or in the least impair his prior right to raise his debt out of both funds. The utmost that equity enjoins, in such a case, is that the creditor who has a prior right to two funds shall first exhaust that to which the junior creditor cannot resort; but, where there exists any doubt of the sufficiency of that fund, or even where the prior creditor is not willing to run the hazard of getting payment out of that fund, I know of no principle in equity which can take from him any part of his security until he is completely satisfied."

In Woolcocks v. Hart, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 185, a bill in equity was filed by a junior creditor against a prior judgment creditor, who had also an assignment of certain real and personal property of the debtor situated in New Jersey. The defendant filed an answer in which he averred that the New Jersey land was subject to a prior mortgage and that its title was defective. He offered to assign his judgment and the collateral to the junior creditor if he would pay the amount due on the senior judgment. This was declined, the bill was filed and an injunction obtained. The court subsequently ordered a decree dissolving the injunction, unless the complainant should pay to the defendant the amount of the defendant's execution on the terms of the offer contained in the answer. See also Arna's Appeal, 65 Pa. St. 72.

In Missouri, it was held that a judgment creditor could not, pending his appeal from an order setting aside the judgment, maintain a suit in equity to compel a mortgagee to sell that portion of the mortgaged premises to which he could not resort before proceeding to sell the remainder. Burgess v. Hitt, 21 Mo. App. 313.

In Illinois, it was held that the purchaser of a part of certain land, upon which there was a judgment against his vendor for purchase money, might enjoin the sale of his portion to satisfy the judgment until the land retained by his vendor was exhausted.

1. In Neff's Appeal, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 36, Mrs. Wilcox held a joint judgment against Miller and Neff, Neff being surety for Miller. On other judgments against Neff his land was sold and the proceeds brought into court. The junior encumbrancers claimed that Mrs. Wilcox should not be permitted to come in on the fund until she had exhausted her remedies against Miller, whom they averred was entirely responsible. The claim was refused and an appeal taken; the supreme court sustained the decision of the lower court, KENNEDY, J., saying, "the argument of the appellants would be irresistible, perhaps, if the real estate of the Millers had been converted into money and brought into court for appropriation as Isaac Neff's was. But this was not the case, and could not be effected without considerable delay, a delay most probably of six months at least, which might be very injurious to Mrs. Wilcox, who had an undoubted right to receive the amount of her judgment immediately out of the moneys in court arising from the sale of Isaac Neff's estate. Her right in this respect was not only legal and perfect, but likewise consistent with every principle of equity. It would therefore have been wrong to compel her to give up her right to receive the amount of her judgment out of the money in court, or to have postponed the payment of it a single day after it was judicially ascertained that she was clearly entitled to have it paid out of money in court. If the Messrs. Neffs [the junior encumbrancers] had any claim or right to have the appropriation made of the money in court which they requested it was purely equitable, and such as they could not ask to have carried into effect at the expense, or more properly, as it may be said, the sacrifice, of either the legal or equitable rights due to others. To entitle themselves to relief or any benefit on the ground of equity, it was incumbent upon them to do equity by placing Mrs. Wilcox immediately in the possession of the money due and coming to her on her judgment, that is by paying it, instead of asking that she should be delayed for some uncertain period of time in the receipt of it. Had they paid or tendered her the amount of her judgment, and in case of her refusal to accept have brought it into court, they might then have been said to stand on ground that would most probably have entitled them to an order or decree of the court giving them the benefit and control of Mrs. Wilcox's judgment."

In South Carolina, a creditor was secured by a mortgage of land and slaves, and the land was afterwards sold by the mortgagor, and one of the slaves was sold by the sheriff under executions issued part before and part after the mortgage. The sum received by the sheriff was sufficient to satisfy the senior executions, and the balance of the mortgage debt. The mortgagee, however, was not compelled to resort to this fund, because he might thereby incur the expense and risk of litigation. He was permitted to foreclose the mortgage, and the court held that the remedy of the purchaser of the land was to pay the mortgage debt and be subrogated to the rights of the mortgage creditor. Walker v. Covar, 2 S. Car. 16.

In Millsaps v. Bond, 64 Miss. 453. A filed a bill to foreclose a mortgage on two lots. M, who held a junior mortgage on one of the lots answered and insisted that the lot not covered by his mortgage should be first sold. A then moved to dismiss his bill as to the lot not covered by M's mortgage. The motion was not sustained, but a final decree was entered ordering that the lot covered by both mortgages be sold without any directions as to the other lot. M then appealed and the supreme court reversed the decree, holding that the land not included in the junior mortgage should be decreed to be sold first. See also Sternberg v. Valentine, 6 Mo. App. 176; Russell v. Howard, 2 McLean (U. S.) 489; Kendall v. New England Carpet Co., 13 Conn. 383, 394; Andreas v. Hubbard, 50 Conn. 351; Sibley v. Baker, 23 Mich. 312; Warner v. DeWitt Co., 4 Bradw. (Ill.) 305; Turner v. Flinn, 67 Ala. 529; Ramsey's Appeal, 2 Watts (Pa.) 228; United States Ins. Co. v. Shriver, 3 Md. Ch. 381; Nelson v. Dunn, 15 Ala. 501; Fassett v. Traber, 20 Ohio 540; Hannegan v. Hannah, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 353; Pallen v. The Agricultural Bank, 1 Freeman (Miss.) Ch. 419; Goss v. Lester, 1 Wis. 43; Thompson v. Murray, 2 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 10; Williams v. Washington, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) Eq. 137; Briggs v. The Planters Bank, 1 Freeman (Miss.) Ch. 575; Bruner's Appeal, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 269; Hastings' Case, 10 Watts (Pa.) 303.

In Sims v. Albee, 72 Ga. 751, a creditor had by suit and a compromise verdict subjected a part of the debtor's property to his judgment, relinquishing the rest as a part of the compromise. It was held that the other creditors were bound to look first to the part relinquished, it being equally accessible to them.

In Milmine v. Bass, 29 Fed. Rep. 632, an owner of land subject to the lien of a judgment, mortgaged a part of the land to one person and thereafter mortgaged the remainder, the value of which was more than the amount of the judgment. Afterwards the land conveyed by the first mortgage was levied on and sold under execution issued on the judgment, and was purchased at the execution sale by the mortgagee of the remainder of the land. It was held that the mortgagee of the land so sold might have compelled the sale of the land to satisfy the execution before the property covered by his mortgage was resorted to; and although, having failed to assert such right, he was not entitled to have the sale annulled, he might compel the purchaser to compensate him to the extent of the value of the property so sold, not exceeding the amount due upon his mortgage.

3. Decree of Distribution.—Where both funds have been brought into court they will be distributed according to equity.¹

Notice.—The prior encumbrancer is entitled to notice of the junior claim, and of the intention of the junior creditor to compel him to make his election. Ross v. Duggan, 5 Colo. 85.

In Hosmer v. Campbell, 98 Ill. 572. it was held that a purchaser of one of several tracts mortgaged must give actual notice of his interest to a prior mortgagee if he intends to insist that the property shall be sold in the reverse order of alienation. Such mortgagee is not bound to examine the records to ascertain if anyone will be affected by his action.

Horning's Appeal, 90 Pa. St. 388, turned on the question of notice. In that case the executors of A had a judgment which was a first lien upon several tracts of land belonging to B. The latter mortgaged one of these tracts to C, and under a judgment obtained upon the mortgage, the tract was sold. In the distribution of the proceeds, the executors declined to take their money and allowed it to be applied to the mortgage. Subsequently B conveyed another of his tracts to D, who gave a mortgage for the purchase money. The mortgage was accompanied by eleven bonds, upon one of which the mortgaged premises were subsequently sold, and the fund brought into court for distribution. The holders of the bonds contended that the executors of A having declined to take the fund on the previous distribution, must now be postponed to them. The supreme court held that the executors should have been allowed to participate in the fund; that if the interests of junior lien creditors require that a prior lien creditor shall do or omit to do a particular thing, they should give him notice thereof before they seek to hold him responsible for any such acts or omissions. JUDGE PAXSON in his opinion said: "I have discussed the point made by the appel-lees as though they were entitled to raise it. I seriously doubt their right to do so. There is nothing in this record to show that they gave notice to Horning's executors to take their money out of the fund created by the sale on the Moore, McWilliams & Co. mortgage or that the executors even knew of the existence of the appellee's mortgage. A lien creditor is not bound to search for subsequent encumbrances and is not affected with record notice of them. It was held in Taylor's Executor v. Morris, 5 Rawle 50, that 'the holder of a judgment, a lien on land, a portion of which is covered by a subsequent mortgage, does not, by releasing a part of the land bound by the judgment, impair his right to be paid out of the remainder, including the portion embraced in the mortgage, unless the mortgagee has distinctly notified him of his mortgage before the release, and cautioned him against doing an act by which the mortgagee's security may be diminished; and the recording the mortgage is not such notice.' This is a sound and reasonable rule." See also Uniontown Building & Loan Assoc. Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 200; Quakertown B. & L. Assoc. v. Server, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 532. In the latter case A, who had a judgment in Montgomery and also in Bucks county, agreed that the lien of his judgment in the former county should be postponed to the extent of $800 to B's judgment. The court held that this did not postpone or affect the lien of his judgment in Bucks county as against a subsequent judgment creditor in that county who did not notify A of his position.

1. In Hastings' Case, 10 Watts (Pa.) 303, H being the owner of lot No. 68, a judgment was obtained against him by E for $347.25. This judgment was afterwards revived, before which time H became the owner of lot No. 30. During this interval H mortgaged the first mentioned lot, No. 68, to S for $2,500. Afterwards H acquired a third tract, and then A obtained a judgment against him for $1,107.51. The three pieces of land were sold on an execution, and lot No. 68 brought $400, lot No. 30 $180, and the third tract $50—total $630. This money being brought into court, it was decreed that the price of lot No. 30 should be first applied to E's judgment, and the residue of that judgment should

4. Case Stated.—Subrogation may be effected by proceedings at law as by a judgment on a case stated.¹

5. Foreclosure.—Marshalling in case of mortgages is often effected through a decree of foreclosure.²

V. RIGHTS OF THE PARAMOUNT CREDITOR.—Marshalling will not be enforced if the paramount creditor is materially delayed or hindered thereby in the collection of his debt; nor will it be enforced if any part of the paramount debt remains unsatisfied.³

be satisfied out of lot No. 68; that the remainder of the price of lot No. 68 should be applied to S's mortgage; and lastly, that the price of the third tract should be applied to A's judgment.

In Anger's Succession, 36 La. An. 252, it was held that where two distinct immovables in a succession are subject to the same first mortgage and each subject to different second mortgages, the administrator cannot, by provoking a sale of one before the other, benefit the second mortgages on the immovable unsold, to the prejudice of those on that sold, by the distribution of the entire price of the latter to the extinguishment of the first mortgage. The court held that the proceeds of both should be marshalled for simultaneous distribution. See Robeson's Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 628.

In Thomas v. Moravia Foundry & Machine Co., 43 Hun (N. Y.) 487, there was a decree of distribution of a fund in court. In that case L and R gave to plaintiff two mortgages on four separate parcels of land, two of which parcels belonged to R, the others belonging to both. Subsequently L and R mortgaged one of the last named parcels to defendant; and afterwards they mortgaged the other to plaintiff. The court held that from the fund realized from the sale of R's land and from the sale of the lot carried by plaintiff's last mortgage should be satisfied plaintiff's two first mortgages, and that the balance of the fund should be applied to the payment of the mortgage given to defendant rather than to the payment of plaintiff's third mortgage.

1. Dunn v. Olney, 14 Pa. St. 219.

2. Thus in an action to foreclose a mortgage upon a city lot of 100 feet front, it appeared that a subsequent mortgage was executed covering the whole premises, but that the holders released from its lien the northerly 40 feet upon which a third mortgage was executed. The mortgagor died seized of the whole premises, leaving a will by which she devised the 60 feet and the 40 feet separately, in trust for different beneficiaries. The amount due upon the three mortgages exceeded the value of the whole lot. If the forty feet were first sold, and for full value, after payment of plaintiff's mortgage, only sufficient would be left to pay about one-third of the last mortgage, while the devisees of the sixty feet which were of value sufficient to pay the mortgage thereon, and leave a surplus of about $3,000, would hold the equity of redemption relieved of the lien of plaintiff's mortgage. The court decreed a sale of the whole lot and that the mortgages should be paid according to their priority out of the proceeds. Bernhardt v. Lymburner, 85 N. Y. 172.

3. A possible wrong that might be done to a creditor by an enforcement of this equity is noticed by JUDGE KENNEDY, in Kyner v. Kyner, 6 Watts (Pa.) 221, where he says: "A creditor having acquired by his judgment, a lien upon two tracts of land, it may be very material to him, whether he shall proceed by execution against the one or the other, in order to collect his debt, notwithstanding either may be of sufficient value to satisfy it; for if the rents, issues and profits beyond all reprises of the one be sufficient, within the space of seven years, to satisfy his debt, he cannot have it paid at once by a sale of the land, but must wait and take it out of the rents, issues and profits, which may prolong the payment thereof, for the space of seven years, but by proceeding against the other tract, which may bring as much money on a sale thereof being made as the first, but being wild and unimproved land, will yield no annual profit, and must, therefore, be sold, he is thus enabled to receive the whole of his claim in the course of seven or eight months. In such a case, therefore, it is not likely that the court would interfere on behalf of the younger judgment creditor, who had a lien only on the unimproved tract, though not of more value than sufficient to satisfy his claim, and compel the elder judgment creditor to proceed against the improved tract to make his claim out of it, because under such circumstances it would be doing great injustice to him, by hindering and delaying him in the collection of his debt, which he in justice had a right to receive as early as he could possibly obtain it from that portion of the debtor's estate within his reach, and most likely to produce it."

In Woolcocks v. Hart, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 185, the complainant was a judgment and execution creditor of one Dreamer. The defendant, Hart, had also an older judgment and execution against Dreamer, who had not sufficient property in the State to satisfy both judgments. Hart had also an assignment of certain real and personal property, in New Jersey as collateral security for his debt, which in his answer he alleged was subject to a prior mortgage, and that the title thereto was doubtful. The complainant applied to him to delay a sale under his execution, and apply the Jersey security in the first place in satisfaction of his debt. This was declined by Hart, but he offered to assign his judgment and all the collateral security which he held over to the complainant, if he would pay the amount due to him on the judgment. The complainant declined this offer, filed his bill and obtained an injunction. On a motion to dissolve the injunction, the court said: "Under the circumstances of this case the defendant was not obliged to delay the collection of his debt until he could apply the proceeds of the Jersey property. The assignment of the Jersey property, although absolute on its face, was only a mortgage, and of course no good title can be given until a foreclosure of the equity of redemption against Dreamer. It would be inequitable for this court to compel him to submit to that delay when he offers to give to the complainant all the benefit which can be derived from that collateral security." The court ordered that the injunction should be dissolved unless the complainant should make payment to the defendant on the terms of the offer contained in the answer.

In Evertson v. Booth, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 486, it was held that where the sufficiency of the fund to which the junior creditor cannot resort is doubtful, or the prior creditor refuses to run the hazard of obtaining satisfaction of his debt out of that fund, equity will not také from him any part of his security until his debt is paid.

In Francis v. Herren, 101 N. Car. 497, the holder of a contract for the conveyance of certain land registered the contract after certain judgments had become liens on the land. The judgment creditors proposed to sell under their executions, and the holder of the contract sought to have their sales postponed, and to have them required to exhaust first the other assets and property of the judgment debtor. It appeared, however, that this course would entail litigation and delay. The court accordingly held that the judgment creditors should not be restrained from enforcing their executions according to their strict legal right. See also Briggs v. The Planters' Bank, 1 Freeman (Mass.) Ch. 574; Ramsey's Appeal, 2 Watts (Pa.) 228; Herriman v. Skillman, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 378; Brinkerhoff v. Marvin, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 328; Westerville v. Haff, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) Ch. 98; Neff's Appeal, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 36; Plain v. Roth, 107 Ill. 588; Evans v. Duncan, 4 Watts (Pa.) 24; Gray v. Heynut, 32 Md. 552; Jones v. Zollicoffer, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 623; Kidder v. Page, 48 N. H. 380; Coker v. Shrophire, 59 Ala. 542; Clark v. Wright, 24 S. Car. 526.

Burden of Proof.—The burden of proof is upon the junior creditor who wishes to restrict the paramount creditor to a particular fund, to show that it affords a sure and adequate means of payment. Woolcocks v. Hart, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 185; Holditch v. Mist, 1 Peere Williams 695. In Wright v. Simpson, 6 Vesey 714, a bill in equity was dismissed under the following circumstances: Sir James Wright, an American loyalist, was compelled to leave his home in Georgia and his estate was confiscated by the State, and vested in commissioners for the public use, saving the rights of such of his creditors as were well disposed to the cause of American independence. One of his American creditors pursued him to England and there obtained judgment against him. Wright subsequently died and his representatives filed a bill against the American creditor praying that he might be directed to have recourse in the first instance to the fund which was open to him in the United States. The answer averred that the claim had been presented to the

If the assets of a debtor are insufficient to satisfy all of his debts, a creditor who has a right to resort to a fund open to himself alone is not precluded from claiming, from the fund of the estate which is open to all creditors, a dividend on the full amount of his debt. He is not limited merely to a dividend on the balance; but the total received by him cannot exceed the sum due.¹

VI. DEFAULT OF THE PARAMOUNT CREDITOR AFTER NOTICE.—If a paramount creditor, after notice, knowingly does any act by which the junior creditor is defeated in his right of subrogation, he will be liable to the extent of the injury. If he has knowingly put it out of his power to make an assignment of his rights in the singly charged fund, he may be precluded from so much of his demand as the junior creditor might have recovered if the assignment could have been made.²

Georgia commissioners, but had been disallowed. LORD ELDON dismissed the bill, holding that the evidence did not show that the creditor had any certain means of recovering his debt in Georgia or that he had committed any wilful default.

Holditch v. Mist, 1 Peere Williams 695, was somewhat similar. There, an act of parliament divested the estate of a South Sea director and vested in the hands of trustees for the payment of his debts. The court held that the act did not render it incumbent on a creditor to have recourse to the fund thus set apart, or warrant an injunction restraining him from proceeding according to the ordinary course of law.

1. Shunk's Appeal, 2 Pa. St. 304; Bair's Appeal, 82 Pa. St. 113; Findlay v. Hosmer, 2 Conn. 350; West v. The Bank of Rutland, 19 Vt. 103; Jarvis v. Smith, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 217; Logan v. Anderson, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 114; Moss v. Raulet, 2 N. H. 488. The rule seems to be different in Iowa. See Wurtz v. Hart, 13 Iowa 515. By the United States Bankruptcy Act of 1867 the creditors who held security had the option to prove for the balance of their claim, or to surrender the security and prove for their whole debt. See Wallace v. Conrad, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 329; Cook v. Farrington, 104 Mass. 212; Amory v. Francis, 48 Mass. 368; Wurtz v. Hart, 13 Iowa 515.

In Third National Bank of Baltimore v. Lanahan, 66 Md. 461, a firm made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. A bank, one of the creditors of the firm, held as security for its debts notes of third parties belonging to the firm, and collected a large sum therefrom. It was held that the bank was entitled to a dividend only on that part of its claim which remained unpaid after deducting the sums of money received from the collateral securities.

2. Cheesebrough v. Millard, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 409, 413. A mortgagee, who has released a vendee of the mortgagor for a valuable consideration, cannot recover against a prior vendee of the mortgagor, as between whom and the second vendee the land of the latter was primarily liable for the mortgage money. Paxton v. Harrier, 11 Pa. St. 312.

In Parkman v. Welch, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 231, a mortgage was made of two parcels of land as security for the payment of a sum of money, and the right in equity to redeem one parcel was transferred to A and the right to redeem the other to B. The mortgagee afterwards released A's parcel from the mortgage. The court held that B on redeeming could not compel A to contribute, but that B was entitled to have an abatement of such a proportion of the sum due on the mortgage as the value of A's parcel bore at the time of the execution of the mortgage, to the value of both parcels. See also Stevens v. Cooper, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 425; Berry v. Convention of the Episcopal Church, 7 Md. 564; Mount v. Potts, 8 C. E. Green (N. J.) 188; Teaff v. Ross, 1 Ohio St. 469; Welsh v. Beers, 8 Allen (Mass.) 151; Gaskell v. Sine, 2 Beasley (N. J.) 62.

In Groot v. Hitz, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 247, it was held that when a creditor by his laches has lost his right to pro-

VII. AS BETWEEN CREDITORS OF DIFFERENT PERSONS.—In general the doctrine of marshalling does not apply as between creditors of different persons. Thus if A has a joint judgment against B and C, and X has a separate judgment against B alone, X cannot require A to proceed against C in the first instance.¹

ceed against the real estate, the doctrine of marshalling the assets by which the proceeds of the real estate will be first applied in the payment of the other creditors is not applicable.

In Gusdorf v. Ikelheimer, 75 Ala. 148, it was held that an execution creditor who at the time of levy on property sufficient to satisfy his claim, held certain choses in action of his debtor as collateral, would be compelled in equity to apply them to the satisfaction of his claim, to that extent releasing the property on which another creditor had subsequently levied; and that an agreement between the debtor and judgment creditor, after the levy and transfer of the collateral, that the latter should be used only to supply any deficit under the execution, could not impair the other creditor's right to the marshalling.

In Depeyster v. Hildreth, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 109, S. S. & Co., certain creditors, had a prior judgment lien on premises which were mortgaged to the complainant. They subsequently levied on the personal property of the mortgagor to an amount sufficient to pay the debt. Subsequently they withdrew their execution, and all of the debtor's personal property was swept away by other judgments. The court held that it was inequitable as to the complainant for S. S. & Co. to consent to withdraw the first execution from the hands of the sheriff, so as to discharge the personal estate which the defendants in the judgment had at the time of issuing that execution, and to leave their judgment to be satisfied out of the real estate which had previously been mortgaged to the complainant; that the complainant's equity, to be paid out of the proceeds of the mortgaged premises, was greater than that of S. S. & Co., who had lost the opportunity to have their judgment satisfied out of other property of their judgment debtors by their own acts and by their negligence.

In Ingalls v. Morgan, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 578, where land, bound by the lien of a judgment, was sold, and the notes given for the price delivered to the judgment creditor with an agreement that he should collect them and apply the proceeds to the payment of the judgment debt, it was held that the creditor could not surrender the notes to the judgment debtor without losing the right to proceed against the land in the hands of the purchaser.

In Alexander v. Welch, 10 Ill. App. 181, it was decided that if one holding a first mortgage on land has additional security upon personalty, which he releases, or by his negligence loses, one holding a subsequent encumbrance on the land only may compel the first mortgagee, upon foreclosure, to deduct the value of the security so released or lost, provided the first mortgagee had notice actual or constructive of the subsequent encumbrance. It was further held that constructive notice will be presumed if, after the recording thereof, the first mortgagee, in taking a deed of or another mortgage upon a part of the same land, was driven to the record. See also Washington Building Assoc. v. Beaghn, 27 N. J. Eq. 98; Glass v. Pullen, 6 Bush (Ky.) 346; Ingalls v. Morgan, 10 N. Y. 178.

When the release is made in good faith the release of the primary fund, however, will not prejudice the prior creditor if made in good faith and without notice. Thus where a prior mortgagee has a second mortgage on another piece of land, but does not know of a subsequent mortgage on the first piece, he may release his mortgage on the other piece without being chargeable for the benefit of the subsequent mortgagee, with the value of that security upon his mortgage debt. See also Shields v. Kimbrough, 64 Ala. 504; Cheesebrough v. Millard, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 409; Kidder v. Page, 48 N. H. 380.

1. The principle is stated by LORD ELDON in Ex parte Kendall, 17 Vesey 520, as follows: "If A has a right to go upon two funds and B upon one, of the same debtor and the funds are the property of the same person, A shall take payment from that fund to which he can resort exclusively, so that both may be paid; but it was never said that if I have a demand against A and B, a creditor of B shall compel me to seek payment from A, if not founded in some equity giving B the right for his own sake to compel me to seek payment of A."

LORD ELDON's words were quoted in Meech v. Allen, 17 N. Y. 301, in which case it was decided that equity will not supersede the legal priority of a judgment for a partnership debt rendered after the death of one partner, upon the real estate of the survivor, held in his individual right, in favor of a junior judgment against such survivor for his individual debt, though there is no other property to satisfy the latter judgment, and there is sufficient estate of the deceased partner to satisfy the judgment of the partnership creditor. The court held that it must appear that the estate of the deceased partner is bound in equity to relieve that of the survivor before a creditor having a right to resort to both can be required by a separate creditor of the survivor to resort first to the estate of the deceased partner.

In Lloyd v. Galbraith, 32 Pa. St. 103, one of several tracts of land encumbered by a common lien was aliened by the debtor. A creditor having a lien upon all the tracts, levied on and sold those remaining in the debtor. A junior encumbrancer who had a lien on those levied on, but not on the one previously aliened, was held not to be entitled to subrogation as against the tract so aliened. The decision was based on the principle that if one of several tracts of land, encumbered by a common lien, be aliened by the debtor, the tracts still remaining in him are in equity first liable to discharge the encumbrance. The funds did not belong to the same debtor, and the one which had been aliened was exempt from seizure until the other had been exhausted.

In Dorr v. Shaw, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 17, the defendant had a judgment against a father and son, binding upon seventy-two acres of land owned by the father and thirty acres owned by the son. The plaintiff was the holder of a junior judgment on the father's land. He subsequently bought the father's land and the defendant became the purchaser of that which was owned by the son. The bill prayed that the defendant should be enjoined from levying on the seventy-two acre tract, or be compelled to assign his judgment to the plaintiff on receiving the debt, interest and costs. CHANCELLOR KENT said that if both judgments had been against the father only, "the rule that the prior creditor must be thrown first on the fund not reached by the second judgment might have applied. But here we have no means of knowing whether he or his son ought to pay the debt, and it might be very unjust, as between these two original debtors, if the court should interfere and charge the debt upon one of them instead of the other. They are not before the court and we have nothing in the case to guide us in making a selection between them, the consequence is that we cannot interfere." See also Lee v. Gregory, 12 Neb. 282; Lloyd v. Galbraith, 32 Pa. St. 103; Sanders v. Cook, 22 Ind. 436; Wise v. Shepherd, 13 Ill. 41; Ayers v. Husted, 15 Conn. 504; Cannon v. Hudson, 5 Del. Ch. 112.

Mr. J. M. GEST, a writer in 27 An. Law Reg. 761 (1888), writes the following ingenious criticism of the principle of Ex parte Kendall: "The rule of Ex parte Kendall has certainly been often misapplied, and even in itself deserves careful examination. It is acknowledged that if A has a lien upon funds B and C, and D has a lien upon fund B only, equity will compel A in favor of D and against the common debtor of both, to exhaust fund C before impairing D's security, or what is the same thing, to substitute D to A's rights against B. This rule LORD ELDON refused to apply to the case, where the two funds were the property of two different creditors; i. e., if A is a creditor of B and C, and D a creditor of B alone, A cannot be compelled to satisfy his debt from C's property in order that D may obtain payment from B's, because in such case C's property would be taken to pay B's debt to D. To this, however, there is the well recognized exception that if the relation of suretyship exists between B and C, so that B is a surety for C's debt, A may be compelled to make him pay who is primarily liable, and leave the surety's property to pay the surety's debts. Huston's Appeal, 69 Pa. St. 485. The thought, however, which naturally suggests itself, is that as between two joint debtors, he who pays the common debt is entitled to contribution from the other of his share. Considered relatively to each other, as to the one half of the debt, each is primarily liable; as to the other half, secondarily; as to one half, a principal; as to the other, a surety. Suppose then in the case put,

If, however, one of the joint debtors is primarily liable, marshalling may be enforced for the benefit of the creditors of the other, who is only secondarily liable for the debt.¹

VIII. MARSHALLING IN FAVOR OF SURETIES.—Wherever a person is liable to a charge which ought to be borne primarily by another person, the creditor should proceed in the first place against the person who is primarily liable, or at least assign his remedy to the person secondarily liable, on receiving the full amount of the demand. The creditor having two funds, equity will so marshal them as to do justice between the two debtors.² In accordance with this principle, if a surety is compelled to pay the debt of his principal he is equitably entitled to be subrogated to all the rights and remedies of the creditor as against the principal debtor.³

B pays the whole of B and C's debt to A, he may enforce contribution from C of his share, and there is no injustice, consequently, in making C's property pay that proportion of A's claim in the first instance."

1. Huston's Appeal, 69 Pa. 485.

2. Philadelphia & Reading R. Co. v. Little, 41 N. J. Eq. 519, it was held that in equity relief will be afforded to a surety for his indemnity out of the property of the principal, where the equitable rights of the surety may be protected without prejudicing the substantial rights of the creditor, either by an injunction bill to restrain the sale of the surety's property until the principal's property pledged for the same debt is first applied, or by a bill for subrogation to the creditor's rights against the principal's property, or by marshalling the securities and the application of them to the debt in the order in which they are equitably chargeable, according to the circumstances of the particular case.

In Moore v. Topliff, 107 Ill. 241, it was held that a surety is entitled to bring a bill for subrogation even before payment of the debt. See also Delaware, Lack. etc. R. Co. v. Oxford Iron Co., 38 N. J. Eq. 151.

In Marsh v. Pike, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 595, the complainant in the bill sold and conveyed certain property to McLean, subject to a mortgage, which McLean covenanted to pay in consideration of a corresponding deduction from the price. McLean subsequently sold the same premises to Towle, who entered into a like covenant. After the mortgage became due, the complainant filed a bill to compel McLean and Towle to pay the judgment. The court held that the complainant was a surety as regarded the mortgage, and that McLean and Towle were the principal debtors, Towle being primarily and McLean secondarily liable as between themselves; that the complainant was entitled to come into a court of chancery to compel the defendants, of whom he stood as a surety, to save him harmless by discharging the debt.

In Missouri, it was held that the holder of a note secured by collateral and by a surety cannot be compelled by the surety to look to his collateral before proceeding against him. Callaway County Savings Bank v. Terry, 13 Mo. App. 99.

Nor can a surety insist that security shall be exhausted before he is proceeded against. Roberts v. Jeffries, 80 Mo. 115.

3. In England, it has been held that a surety, when he has paid the principal's debt, is entitled to be subrogated to the collateral securities, but is not entitled to an assignment of the debt itself. Thus in Copis v. Middleton, 1 Turner & Russell, 229, two persons gave a bond, one as principal and the other as surety. The surety paid the bond. LORD ELDON decided that the surety, by paying the bond, did not become a specialty creditor, the bond being gone, but merely a simple contract debtor. Upon this principle a surety on payment is entitled to an assignment of the mortgage, but not of the bond.

JUDGE HARE, in his note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cases in Eq. 278, criticises the decision of Copis v. Middleton, as follows: "Such a distinction is hardly logical or just. It supposes that the accessory may exist, notwithstanding the extinguishment of the principal. If the bond be gone, how can a mortgage given for the bond be enforced? It may be said that although the debt is paid, the legal estate remains in the mortgagee, and that a court of equity will compel him to use it for the surety's benefit, or compel the principal to redeem on pain of being foreclosed. But this implies that a chancellor may regard a debt which has been extinguished as it regards the creditor, as subsisting for the indemnity of the surety, contrary to the view of LORD ELDON in Copis v. Middleton. The argument is, moreover, inapplicable throughout the greater part of the United States, where payment ipso facto divests a mortgage without the necessity for a reconveyance." The rule of Copis v. Middleton has been changed by Statutes 19 and 20 Vict., ch. 99, § 5.

In the United States, where a surety pays the principal's debt, he may insist on being subrogated to all the creditors' rights respecting the debt. Lochenmayer v. Fogarty, 112 Ill. 572; Hays v. Ward, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 123; Fleming v. Beaver, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 128; Torp v. Gulseth, 37 Minn. 135; Cuyler v. Ernsworth, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 32; Lower v. Buchanan Bank, 78 Mo. 67; Croft v. Moore, 9 Watts (Pa.) 451; Lumpkin v. Mills, 4 Ga. 343; Townsend v. Whitney, 75 N. Y. 425; Clason v. Morris, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 524; Brewer v. Franklin Mills, 42 N. H. 292; Rockingham Bank v. Claggett, 29 N. H. 292; Edgerly v. Emerson, 23 N. H. 555; Wilson v. Burney, 8 Neb. 39; Wright v. Grover & Baker S. M. Co., 82 Pa. St. 80; Cottrell's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 294; Richter v. Cummings, 60 Pa. St. 441; Merriken v. Godwin, 2 Del. Ch. 236; Hollingsworth v. Floyd, 2 Harr. & Gill (Md.) 87, 91; Grove v. Brien, 1 Md. 438; McClung v. Beirne, 10 Leigh (Va.) 394; Carr v. Glascock, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 343; Bledsoe v. Nixon, 68 N. Car. 521; Neal v. Nash, 23 Ohio St. 483; Dinkins v. Bailey, 23 Miss. 284; Smith v. Rumsay, 33 Mich. 183; Brought v. Griffith, 16 Iowa 26; Torp v. Gulseth, 37 Minn. 135; Bates v. Wiggin, 37 Kan. 44; Smith v. Gillam, 80 Ala. 296; Canaday v. Bolivar, 25 S. Car. 547; Friberg v. Donovan, 23 Ill. 58; German American Savings Bank v. Fritz, 68 Wis. 390; Armstrong v. Poole, 30 W. Va. 666; Philbrick v. Shaw, 61 N. H. 356; Lane v. Westmoreland, 79 Ala. 372; Schuessler v. Dudley, 80 Ala.

547; Fairchild v. Lynch, 99 N. Y. 359; Taylor v. Tarr, 84 Mo. 420; Cowgill v. Linville, 20 Mo. App. 138; Smith v. Harry, 91 Pa. St. 119; Bailey v. Niles, 1 Penny. (Pa.) 371; Ward's Appeal, 100 Pa. St. 289; Simmons v. Goodrich, 68 Ga. 750; Alabama Gold Life Ins. Co. v. Anderson, 67 Ala. 425; Galliher v. Galliher, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 23; Beattie v. Dickinson, 39 Ark. 205; Harris v. Frank, 29 Kan. 200; Scherer v. Schutz, 83 Ind. 543; Bodkin v. Merit, 86 Ind. 560; Hevener v. Berry, 17 W. Va. 474; Keith v. Hudson, 74 Ind. 333; Kane v. State, 78 Ind. 103; Crawford v. Richeson, 101 Ill. 351; Matter of Lawrence, 5 Fed. Rep. 349; Campbell v. Rothwell, 47 L. J., Q. B. Div. 144; Steel v. Dixon, L. R., 17 Ch. Div. 825; In re Cochran, L. R., 5 Eq. 209; Ewart v. Latta, 4 Macq. H. L. C. 983; Pearl v. Deacon, 24 Beav. 186; Goodwin v. Gray, 22 W. R. 212; Boyd v. Myers, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 175; Schoonover v. Allen, 40 Ark. 132; Johnson v. Amana Lodge, 92 Ind. 150; Rice v. Rice, 108 Ill. 109; Moore v. Toppliff, 107 Ill. 241; Allen v. Powell, 108 Ill. 584; Fishback v. Weaver, 34 Ark. 569; Gunel v. Cue, 72 Ind. 34; Hollingsworth v. Pearson, 53 Iowa 53.

Examples.—The right of the surety to subrogation extends to the principal's right of set-off, and to the benefit of any fund or collateral provided by the principal for the payment of the debt. Rubey v. Watson, 22 Mo. App. 428.

Payment by a surety of a note secured by a deed of trust operates in equity, as an assignment of the note and deed to the surety, and he is entitled to foreclose. Taylor v. Tarr, 84 Mo. 420.

Where a creditor accepts a draft from the surety as payment, the surety may sue the principal, although the surety may not otherwise have paid the debt. Sapp v. Aiken, 68 Iowa 699.

A surety on the official bond of a defaulting tax collector is entitled, on payment, to be subrogated to the rights of the State or county, against the property of the principal. Schuessler v. Dudley, 80 Ala. 547; Miller v. Woodward, 8 Mo. 169; Richeson v. Crawford, 94 Ill. 165.

Where plaintiffs, bound by a written guarantee to pay defendant's debt, paid the same without his knowledge, and took a written assignment of the debt from the creditor, it was held that they might recover from the defendant. Teberg v. Swenson, 32 Kan. 224.

Three separate judgments having been simultaneously entered against the maker and two of the endorsers of a promissory note, Y, for the accommodation of the respective defendants, and with their knowledge and assent, became bail for stay of execution upon each of the judgments: it was held that upon payment of the amount for which he became surety, Y was entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the plaintiff in each of the respective judgments. Yeager's Appeal (Pa.), 8 Atl. Rep. 225.

A surety on an accommodation note given for the purchase price of a buggy, which stipulated that the title to the property was to remain in the vendor until the note was fully paid, was compelled, through the default of the maker, to pay a balance due on the note. It was held that he might replevy the buggy from a third party to whom the vendor had with the consent of the maker, but without the surety's knowledge, sold it. Myers v. Yapple, 65 Mich. 403.

A surety against whom a judgment has been rendered for the whole debt, having, after the satisfaction of such judgment out of his estate, the right of subrogation, whether against his principal or cosurety, a junior creditor of such surety whose lien ranks next to that of such judgment, is likewise entitled to be subrogated to the surety against the cosurety. Bunting v. Riehl, 2 Pa. County Ct. 450.

Where a surety paid the judgment rendered against himself and principal, it was held that he was entitled to an assignment of the judgment. Searing v. Berry, 58 Iowa 20.

A having effected policies upon his own life with an assurance office, mortgaged them to the office as a security for successive loans. In one of these mortgages B was compelled as surety to pay part of the debt. Upon A's death, it was held as against his assignee in bankruptcy that B was entitled to marshal the securities so as to obtain repayment out of the balance of the several policy moneys of the amount which he had been compelled as surety to pay. Heyman v. Dubois, L. R., 13 Eq. 158.

A surety who has paid a judgment against himself and principal may, notwithstanding a formal assignment of the judgment, treat it as discharged and sue his principal for reimbursement. Katz v. Moessenger, 110 Ill. 372.

And a surety who has paid a judgment may have an assignment of it made to a third party, to be kept alive for his benefit. Chandler v. Higgins, 109 Ill. 602; Allen v. Powell, 108 Ill. 584. See also Sandford v. M'Lean, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 117, 122; Cottrell's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 294; Dozier v. Lewis, 27 Miss. 679; Dempsey v. Bush, 18 Ohio St. 376; Bailey v. Brownfield, 20 Pa. St. 41; Hess's Estate, 69 Pa. St. 272.

A surety can recover from his principal only the actual amount paid. Mathews v. Hall, 21 W. Va. 510; Delaware, Lac. etc. R. Co. v. Oxford Iron Co., 38 N. J. Eq. 151.

Where three of several sureties settled with the creditor by giving a new bond in which their principal did not appear, and one of them paid it, it was held that he was entitled in equity to recover from his principal, the second bond extinguishing liability on the first only as to the creditor, and the surety being subrogated to the rights of the creditor under the first bond. Dodd v. Wilson, 4 Del. Ch. 108, 399.

A fund set apart by a debtor for the indemnity of his surety will be applied by a court of equity to the payment of the debt; equity will not permit its diversion to satisfy other debts and the right of the surety is not affected, except as to the amount of his claim, by the fact that he himself has paid a part of the debt. Toole v. Bleckeler, 12 Mo. App. 54.

A owed B upon a note secured by lien on A's real estate. C executed to B a note of like amount as collateral security for A. It was held that if C paid the note executed by him, he was entitled to be substituted to the benefit of the lien, though the original note had been assigned by B to D with C's knowledge, and D had with B's consent paid the original debtor the consideration for the note, and C when he signed his note was ignorant of a lien on A's real estate. Hevener v. Berry, 17 W. Va. 474.

Notes given for the purchase money of chattels contained provisions that title to the chattels should not vest until the notes were fully paid, and that the vendor might resume possession whenever he deemed himself insecure. It was held that the defendant, who as surety upon the notes paid them, was subrogated to the rights of the payee. Torp v. Gulseth, 37 Minn. 135.

The right of subrogation may be enforced in favor of the surety against one claiming under the principal as a purchaser with notice. Thus sureties upon notes for the purchase money of land sold by title bond have an equity to have the land sold for the payment of the notes superior to any equity which a claimant under the vendee can have. Beattie v. Dickenson, 39 Ark. 205. See also Dempsey v. Bush, 18 Ohio St. 376.

In Cherry v. Monro, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 618, C and S purchased a lot of land from M in their joint names and gave a joint bond and mortgage for the purchase money. C subsequently conveyed to S his undivided half of the lot, subject to the payment of the mortgage, and S agreed to pay the amount due thereon and gave a bond of indemnity against the same. S subsequently conveyed the lot in question to B with covenants of seisin and warranty, and covenants against encumbrances. S became insolvent and left the State, failing to pay the amount due on the bond and mortgage given to M. When M was about to foreclose the mortgage, B induced him to bring suit against C upon the bond, instead of proceeding against the mortgaged premises. A rule nisi for judgment having been obtained against C in this suit, he tendered to M the amount due upon the bond and mortgage with interest and costs so that he might be enabled to enforce the collection thereof against the mortgaged premises. M in collusion with B refused to receive the money and make the assignment; C thereupon filed a bill in equity against M and B. The court held that the equitable rights of C and S under the agreement and conveyance were the same as though S had owned the whole lot originally and had mortgaged it to secure his own debt, and C had joined with him in the bond as a mere surety; that in such a case, as between the owner of the equity of redemption in the mortgaged premises and the surety in the bond, the land would be the primary fund for the payment of the debt; and that if the surety should be called upon by the mortgagees for payment, he would have the right to be subrogated, in their place, to their remedy against the land for the payment of the debt.

Where purchaser of land has taken it under an agreement that it shall be free from encumbrances, and subsequently it is swept away from him by an execution under a lien, he is entitled to a substitution to all the rights of the holder of the encumbrance. Thus, in Eddy v. Traver, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 521, one of four heirs sold to the complainant his undivided fourth part of his ancestor's estate with a covenant of warranty. This part was afterwards sold for the payment of the debts of the decedent. It was held that the complainant had an equitable lien upon the unsold portion of the estate, and had a right to come in upon the fund raised by the sale of that portion under proceedings in partition.

But where it is agreed that the encumbrance shall be deducted from the consideration or paid by the purchaser, the vendor is then in a position of a surety, and is entitled to have the encumbrance paid from the land. Skinner v. Starner, 24 Pa. St. 123; Atwood v. Vincent, 17 Conn. 575; Morris v. Oakford, 9 Pa. St. 498.

The same principle is applicable to the sale of an equity of redemption subject to the mortgage. Jumel v. Jumel, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 591; Hansell v. Lutz, 20 Pa. St. 284.

Case Where Subrogation Has Not Been Allowed.—Sureties on a note given for the purchase price of land, who have paid the balance due on the note, cannot be subjected to the vendor's equitable lien on the land against a subpurchaser of a portion of the tract when the purchase money paid by the latter has been applied in partial payment of the note on which the sureties were bound. Sawyers v. Baker, 72 Ala. 49.

A husband being indebted to his wife, borrowed money to pay her, for which he gave his note with two sureties. The wife used the money so received to discharge a purchase lien on her homestead. It was held that the sureties were not entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the holder of the purchase money lien. Flannarty v. Utley (Ky.), 5 S. W. Rep. 878.

Subrogation will not be enforced against a bona fide purchaser. Wise v. Shepherd, 13 Ill. 41; Reilly v. Mayer, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 351. In Orvis v. Newell, 17 Conn. 97, it was held that a surety who had mortgaged his own property as a security for the debt, could not be subrogated to the lien of the creditor on another tract, which had been mortgaged by the principal for the same debt, as against a purchaser from the principal without notice of the suretyship; the reason being that the purchaser is prima facie entitled to require that both tracts should contribute equally to the discharge of the obligation, and may have been influenced by that in buying.

The endorser as surety of a note, received a mortgage from a third person, stranger to the note, to indemnify him. The holder of the note obtained judgment upon the note against the maker and the surety, who were both insolvent. It was held that the surety having suffered no damage and the mortgagor being a stranger, that the judgment plaintiff had no right to be substituted to the rights of the surety or to subject the mortgage to the judgment. Macklin v. Ky. North Bank, 83 Ky. 314.

Where the sureties on an appeal bond paid the amount found due on a mortgage, in pursuance of their obligation—the court held that they were not entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee in the mortgage and decree, as against holders of encumbrances subsequent to the mortgage, but prior to the appeal. Powell v. Allen, 11 Ill. App. 129.

Subrogation will not be decreed until the creditor is paid in full. Magee v. Leggett, 38 Miss. 139; Field v. Hamilton, 45 Vt. 35; Hoover v. Epler, 52 Pa. St. 522; Ewart v. Latta, 4 Macq. H. L. C. 983.

In Miller v. Stout, 5 Del. Ch. 259, M held two mortgages on T's land. S held a judgment, intermediate between these mortgages, against A and T, A being the principal and T the surety. After the giving of the bond on which this judgment was found, A became surety for T; T became insolvent. The mortgages were foreclosed and a sum of money realized sufficient to pay the first mortgage, but not both the judgment and the second mortgage. M contended that as the judgment was payable from the proceeds partly of the land covered by the second mortgage, he was entitled to be subrogated to the judgment. A had not paid the liabilities on which he was surety for T. It was held that A's equities were such that the doctrine of subrogation could not be invoked to put M in the position sought by him.

The name of a person was signed as surety on a sheriff's bond in violation of the Kentucky statute providing that no person shall be bound as surety by the act of an agent unless the authority of the agent is in writing signed by his principal (Gen. St., ch. 22, § 20). The person whose name was so signed, supposing himself to be bound, paid the bond. It was held that he was not entitled to be subrogated to the right of the sheriff, his principal on the bond. Dawson v. Lee, 83 Ky. 49.

The judgment on which a replevin bail was liable was rendered on one of the several notes secured by mortgage or real estate, only a part of which were due when the judgment was rendered. It was held that the surety by paying such judgment could not be subrogated to the rights of the judgment creditor. Vert v. Voss, 74 Ind. 565.

Where two properties are mortgaged by A to B for distinct sums, and C is surety for the one only, the right of B to retain all the securities until repaid both debts overrides the right of C to have the benefit of the securities for that debt for which he is surety. Farebrother v. Wodenhouse, 23 Beav. 18.

The doctrine, Copes v. Middleton, has been followed in Vermont. Moore v. Campbell, 36 Vt. 361. In Alabama, it is held that after the payment of a judgment by a surety, the judgment is not kept alive for the surety's reimbursement. Morison v. Marvin, 6 Ala. 797; Preslar v. Stallworth, 37 Ala. 402; Smith v. Harrison, 33 Ala. 706.

In Nevada, a surety who has paid a note and had it assigned to himself, though he may maintain an action against the principal debtor for his payment, has no remedy upon the note itself. Frevert v. Henry, 14 Nev. 191. The same rule seems to prevail in Massachusetts. See Brackett v. Winslow, 17 Mass. 153; Adams v. Drake, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 504.

In Lynn v. Richardson, 78 Me. 367, a note upon which plaintiff was liable as surety, and which was also secured by a mortgage, was paid by the plaintiff, and the note and the mortgage were surrendered to him without cancellation or discharge executed thereon or on the record thereof, and without any assignment to him. The court held that a bill in equity asking that the mortgage might be decreed to be still subsisting, that he might be subrogated to the rights of the mortgage, and empowered to foreclose the same, could not be sustained upon general demurrer. See in general, on the question of subrogation, as to sureties—

Vermont.—Clay v. Severance, 55 Vt. 300; Morrill v. Morrill, 53 Vt. 74.

Missouri.—Lower v. Buchanan Bank, 78 Mo. 67; Berthold v. Berthold, 46 Mo. 557.

Iowa.—Coleman v. Riggs, 61 Iowa 543; Searing v. Berry, 58 Iowa 20;

This equity will be enforced even in favor of the creditor of a surety. Thus, where a creditor has a judgment against a principal and surety, and another person has a judgment against the surety alone, if the creditor who holds the joint judgment recovers from the surety, the other creditor is entitled to be subrogated to the joint judgment to enforce it against the principal.¹

Hollingsworth v. Pearson, 53 Iowa 53.
Tennessee.—Boyd v. Myers, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 175.

Indiana.—Johnson v. Amana Lodge, 92 Ind. 150; Stout v. Duncan, 87 Ind. 383; Scherer v. Schultz, 83 Ind. 543; Strong v. Taylor School Twp., 179 Ind. 208, 213.

West Virginia.—Mattingly v. Sutton, 19 W. Va. 19.

Massachusetts.—Stafford v. New Bedford Five Cents Savings Bank, 132 Mass. 315; Kelley v. Herrick, 131 Mass. 373; Talor v. Van Deusen, 3 Gray (Mass.) 498.

South Carolina.—Hellams v. Abercrombie, 15 S. Car. 110; Gourdin v. Trenholm, 25 S. Car. 362.

Pennsylvania.—Ward's Appeal, 100 Pa. St. 289; Yeager's Appeal (Pa.), 6 Cent. Rep. 587; Wallace's Estate, 59 Pa. St. 401.

Alabama.—Tyree v. Parham, 66 Ala. 424; Fearn v. Ward, 80 Ala. 555.

Georgia.—Simmons v. Goodrich, 68 Ga. 750.

Kansas.—Harris v. Frank, 29 Kan. 200; Rizer v. Callen, 27 Kan. 339.

Maryland.—Cresfield v. State, 55 Md. 192.

Virginia.—Coffman v. Hopkins, 75 Va. 645; Washington, O. & W. R. Co. v. Casenove, 3 S. E. Rep. 433.

Minnesota.—Kimmel v. Lowe, 28 Minn. 265.

Maine.—Re Fickett, 72 Me. 266; Scribner v. Adams, 73 Me. 541; Lynn v. Richardson, 78 Me. 367.

Illinois.—Crawford v. Richeson, 101 Ill. 351; Billings v. Sprague, 49 Ill. 509.

Ohio.—Butler v. Berkey, 13 Ohio St. 514.

North Carolina.—York v. Landis, 65 N. Car. 535.

Arkansas.—McGee v. Russell, 49 Ark. 104.

1. This is well illustrated by the interesting case of Huston's Appeal, 69 Pa. St. 485. In that case Sylvis obtained a judgment against Titterington and Hollen for $271.67, Hollen being surety for Titterington. Subsequently Huston and Huston obtained a judgment against Hollen for $2,235. At this time Clawson was endorser on a note for Hollen to a bank. The note was protested and the bank obtained judgment against Clawson for $1,200 and levied upon and sold his real estate. On April 2d, 1869, Hollen's real estate was sold by the sheriff. Out of the proceeds Sylvis received $302.79 in full of his judgment. The Hustons received but $1,425 of their judgment. Sylvis then assigned to the Hustons his judgment. Subsequently Hollen, in the suit of Sylvis v. Titterington and Hollen executed an assignment to Clawson of all his rights in the said judgment, arising from the sale and appropriation of his real estate to the payment of the note. Clawson then applied to the court to be subrogated to the rights of Sylvis. The Hustons resisted this application. The court entered a decree in favor of Clawson. On appeal the decree was reversed, the court, WILLIAMS, J., saying: "Why, then, were not the appellants entitled to be subrogated to the equitable rights of Hollen under the judgment for which he was surety. The proceeds of his real estate on which their judgment was a lien were appropriated to its payment, and as against their judgment debtor the appellants were clearly entitled to the proceeds thus applied, and would have received them but for the superior legal right of Sylvis under the prior lien of his judgment. It is true that the appellant's right of subrogation depends on the equity of Hollen, but, as between them, their equity is superior to his. If, then, the fund which they would otherwise have received has been applied to the payment of the judgment for which he was surety, on what principle of equity or justice could he claim subrogation to the judgment which has taken the fund to the prejudice of the appellants, and be allowed to pocket its fruits, leaving their judgment against him unpaid? If they had had no lien on the fund applied to the payment of the judgment, then they would have had no equity to be substituted to the rights of the surety under it. But having a lien on the fund, they would be entitled to subrogation as against Hollen on the plainest principles of equity, and to decree otherwise would shock all sense of justice."

IX. MARSHALLING IN FAVOR OF LEGACIES—(See title LEGACY).—The marshalling of the assets of a decedent's estate for the payment of debts is treated under the title DEBTS OF DECEDENTS.

X. MARSHALLING IN ADMIRALTY.—The doctrine of marshalling is enforced by the courts of admiralty in cases where there are two bondholders, one holding bonds against the ship, freight and cargo, while the other has bonds only against the ship and freight. In such a case the creditor who has a charge on the cargo will not be permitted to disappoint the creditor who has only a charge on the ship and freight.¹

XI. INVERSE ORDER OF ALIENATION—1. General Principle.—Where an estate is subject to a mortgage or other encumbrance and is sold by the owner in parcels at different times, the encumbrancer being a creditor with two funds, is required to proceed primarily against the fund upon which the grantee has no claim. It results from this principle that, as between purchasers of different parcels of land, the whole of which is subject to a prior lien, the land is chargeable in equity in the inverse order of alienation.²

1. The Arab, 5 Jur., N. S. 417; The Edward Oliver, L. R., 1 Ad. & Ecc. 383; The Trident Semson, 1 W. Rob. 29; La Constanca, 2 W. Rob. 404.

Marshalling in admiralty is sometimes enforced in favor of wages. The Eugenie, L. R., 4 Ad. & Ecc. 123; The Mary Ann, 9 Jur. 95; The Edward Oliver, L. R., 1 Ad. & Ecc. 379.

2. The principle is clearly explained by CHANCELLOR KENT in Clowes v. Dickenson, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 440, as follows: "If there be several purchasers in succession at different times, I apprehend that in that case there is no equality, and no contribution as between purchasers. Thus, for instance, if there be a judgment against a person owning, at the time, three acres of land, and he sells one acre to A, the remaining two acres are first chargeable in equity with the payment of the judgment debt; . . . and that, too, whether the land be in the hands of the debtor himself or of his heirs. If he sells another acre to B, the remaining acre is then chargeable, in the first instance, with the debt as against B, as well as against A, and if it should prove insufficient, then the acre sold to B ought to supply the deficiency, in preference to the acre sold to A: because when B purchased he took his land charged with the debt in the hands of the debtor, in preference to the land already sold to A. In this respect we may say of him as is said of the heirs, he sits in the seat of his grantor, and must take the land with all its equitable burdens; it cannot be in the power of the debtor, by the act of assigning or selling his remaining land, to throw the burden of the judgment, or ratable part of it, back upon A. It is to be observed that the debt in this case is the personal obligation of the debtor, and that the charge on the land is only by way of security; the case is not analogous to a rent charge, which grows out of the land itself, and every purchaser of distinct parcels of a tract of land, charged with the rent, takes it with a proportionable part of the charge. The owners of the land, in that case, all stand equal, and if the whole rent be levied upon one, he shall be eased in equity, by a contribution from the rest of the purchasers, because of the equity of right between them."

Examples.—A mortgaged a tract of land to B and divided the same into three lots. The first he mortgaged to C, the second he mortgaged to D, the third he conveyed to E. B entered judgment on the bond accompanying his mortgage, and D became the purchaser at sheriff's sale of the lot mortgaged to him. A became a bankrupt and the lot mortgaged to C was sold by his assignees in bankruptcy, free of all liens, for a sum sufficient to pay the mortgage of B, to whom the fund was awarded. C filed a bill against B, D and E, claiming to be subrogated to the rights of B as against D and E, and to realize his claim by a sale of their lots in the inverse order of their alienation. On demurrer to the bill it was held that when C took his mortgage, he had an equity to compel A to pay the paramount mortgage to B, out of the remaining portions of the property covered by it; and as C's security, by no act of his own or of B, had been taken to pay the common encumbrance, he had a right to be relieved as against D and E in the inverse order of the conveyances to them, and that, being subrogated herein to B's rights, he should be entitled to the lien of the paramount judgment for this purpose, although the same had been paid by process of law. Milligan's App., 104 Pa. 504.

Lands subject to mortgages had been sold by the mortgagor in parcels, and the proceeds of the last parcel sold were applied upon the first of the mortgages, and as a part of the same arrangement the mortgagee in the second, who was mortgagor in the first, and under obligation to pay it, assigned the second to a party who was to hold it for the protection of the fee against another specified claim, but who afterwards sold it for value to one who took it in good faith. It was held that under the rule that when mortgaged land is alienated in parcels, the parcels must be applied to the satisfaction of the mortgage in the inverse order of alienation, the mortgage was to be deemed satisfied in the first arrangement, and that as the second assignment was not made with the consent of the owner of the fee, the assignee took nothing thereby. McVeigh v. Sherwood, 47 Mich. 545.

After a mortgage had been executed to A on three parcels of land the first parcel was sold to B; afterwards the second to C, and finally the third to C and D, who mortgaged it to E. On foreclosure of A's mortgage it was held that equitably the undivided half of D in the third parcel should be first sold, then the second parcel, then the undivided half of C in the third parcel, and finally the first parcel. But as there would be a sacrifice in selling undivided interests, the whole of the second and third parcels should be first sold, and half of the proceeds of the third applied on A's mortgage, then those of the second, and lastly those of the other half of the third parcel; and that any surplus should be paid into court, and on its distribution, the rights of C and D, as to contribution should be determined. Van Slyke v. Van Loan, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 344.

A and B, the owners of land, mortgaged it to C, and afterwards sold part of it, taking back a purchase money mortgage. On foreclosure of the latter, A and certain of B's heirs purchased. B's heirs then proceeded to have a partition of that part of the land unsold by A and B, and a sale was made in the partition proceedings. Then A and certain of B's heirs bought C's mortgage. On their suit to foreclose the mortgage, it was held that the purchaser at the partition sale was not entitled to have the part sold by A and B sold under the foreclosure before his part was resorted to, the sale in partition creating no new equity, nor affecting that existing. Powles v. Griffith, 37 N. J. Eq. 384.

Where two buy land and give a joint purchase money note and mortgage and then divide the land, and one sells his part to a grantee who assumes his grantor's debt, the other having paid his share, the land so sold must first be looked to for the debt. Higham v. Harris, 108 Ind. 246.

Where the Land Is in Different States.

--The rule that one who has purchased and received a conveyance of a portion of mortgaged premises may require that all of the balance shall first be sold to satisfy the mortgage, before resort shall be had to his portion, applies although part of the residue is situated in another State. Welling v. Ryerson, 94 N. Y. 98. In this case the owner of land executed a mortgage upon his farm, a portion of which was situated in New York, the residue in New Jersey; he subsequently conveyed to R five acres of that portion situated in New York, and thereafter executed another mortgage upon the whole farm. The owner of the two mortgages commenced foreclosure suits, one in New York to foreclose the first mortgage, another in New Jersey to foreclose both. In the first suit judgment was rendered directing the sale of the land in New York, without reference to that in New Jersey, and providing that the portion not sold to R should be first sold. Pending proceedings to enforce the judgment, the grantee of R tendered to the plaintiff in the foreclosure suit the amount due on his mortgage with costs and demanded an assignment of the mortgage or a release of his land, which was refused. In an action brought to compel such an assignment it was held that the grantee was entitled to the relief sought and that he was entitled to have his land released and discharged from any liability.

After Acquired Lands.—The rule that lands subject to a lien which have been alienated should be applied to satisfy the lien in the inverse order of alienation, holds when part of the lands were acquired after the time when the lien attached. Crawford v. Richeson, 101 Ill. 351.

Where the Lands Conveyed Are Charged with the Debt.—Where a mortgagor sells part of the mortgaged land, and by the deed charges the payment of the mortgage debt thereon, the land so conveyed must be exhausted in satisfaction of the debt before any other part of the mortgaged lands can be resorted to for payment, whether they remain in the hands of the mortgagor himself or have been conveyed to other parties. Bunger v. Greif, 55 Md. 518. See also Pancoast v. Duval, 26 N. J. Eq. 445; Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Boughrum, 24 N. J. Eq. 44.

But where a part of a tract of land is granted subject to a mortgage which covers the whole, the purchaser does not take the entire burden of the mortgage, but he is entitled to require that the residue of the land shall contribute in proportion to its value to the discharge of the encumbrance. Hoy v. Bramhall, 4 C. E. Green (N. J.) 74. See also Zabriskie v. Salter, 80 N. Y. 555; Briscoe v. Power, 47 Ill. 447.

In Chapman v. Beardsley, 31 Conn. 115, the owner of land mortgaged his homestead and an adjacent lot to secure the payment of a note. He subsequently sold the lot to B, the consideration being a promise by B to pay the note. B subsequently conveyed the lot to C, at the same time informing C of the promise, and that it had not been fulfilled. C claimed that as he had not made the promise he was not bound by it. The court, however, held that the promise was obligatory on the purchaser with notice, and that the lot conveyed to C must be taken in execution before proceeding against the residue of the premises in the hands of the mortgagor or of a purchaser from him. See also Atwood v. Vincent, 17 Conn. 575; Engle v. Haines, 1 Halst. Ch. (N. J.) 86; Caruthers v. Hall, 10 Mich. 40;

Allen v. Clark, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 47.

Warranty—A mortgagor conveyed a portion of the premises by warranty, and afterwards another portion to another purchaser, and foreclosure was had against both. It was held that on redemption by the last purchaser he could not compel contribution from the first. Henderson v. Truitt, 95 Ind. 309.

A covenant of warranty, however, is not absolutely necessary to show the intent that the grantee is to be exempt from the paramount charge. Such an intent is deduced where the title is not warranted. Cooper v. Bigley, 13 Mich. 463, 474; Welch v. Beers, 8 Allen (Mass.) 151. But see Aiken v. Cole, 37 N. H. 50.

The Rule Not Applicable Where There Are Successive Sales Under Executions.

—In Carpenter v. Koons, 20 Pa. St. 222, two lots subject to a common mortgage were owned by A. On a judgment against A the sheriff sold one lot to B, and under a subsequent execution on the same judgment he sold the second lot to C. The court held that both purchasers must contribute. CHIEF JUSTICE BLACK said: "A man who purchases part of a tract covered by a mortgage, buying the title out and out, clear of encumbrances, and paying a full price for it, has a plain right to insist that his vendor shall allow the remainder of the mortgaged premises to be taken in satisfaction of the mortgage debt before the part sold is resorted to. This being the right of the vendee against the mortgagor himself, the latter cannot put the former in a worse condition by selling the remainder of the land to another person. The second purchaser sits in the seat of his grantor, and must pay the whole value of what he bought towards the extinguishment of the mortgage before he can call on the first purchaser to pay anything. The first sale having thrown the whole burden on the part reserved, it cannot be thrown back again by the second sale. In other words, the second purchaser takes the land he buys subject to all the liabilities under which the grantor held it. But if the rule is to cease when the reason of it ceases, it cannot extend to a case where the first sale was made subject to a mortgage; and that is the condition of the present one. The defendant's deed is older than his adversary's, but it conveys him nothing but the equity of redemption. The act of 1830 provides that if the oldest lien be a mortgage and the land be sold on a judgment, the sheriff's vendee shall take it subject to the mortgage. When the defendant made his purchase, therefore, he had manifestly no claim either on the mortgagor or on anybody else to pay off the whole mortgage and relieve him entirely from what was probably the most burdensome part of his contract. His share of the mortgage formed a part of the price he agreed to pay for the land. The statute of 1830 entered into and made one of the elements of his contract. There is a wide and palpable difference between one who buys land subject to a mortgage and has a reduction in the price equal to the amount of the lien, and another who pays its full value and stipulates for a title clear of encumbrances. Such a distinction is anything in the world but a 'theoretical subtlety.'

Two purchasers at a sheriff's sale, subject to a mortgage which is a common encumbrance on the land of both, stand on a level. Neither of them has done or suffered anything which entitles him to a preference over the other. Equality is equity. They must pay the mortgage in proportion to the value of their respective lots."

Land Contemporaneously Sold.—Where land is sold in parcels at the same time, and is subject to a mortgage, all the purchasers must contribute ratably to the common burden. Chase v. Woodbury, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 143; Brown v. Simons, 44 N. H. 475. In determining priority the date of the contract and not of the deed will be considered. James v. Hubbard, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 228; Chapman v. West, 17 N. Y. 125.

In Carpenter v. Koons, 20 Pa. St. 222, it was held that the principle did not apply to two or more purchasers at a sheriff's sale, who had bought subject to a common encumbrance. In such a case equality is equity.

The general principle has been applied in the following cases:

New Hampshire.—Gage v. McGregor, 61 N. H. 47; Mahagan v. Mead, 63 N. H. 570; Brown v. Simons, 44 N. H. 475.

Illinois.—Hosmer v. Campbell, 98 Ill. 572; Iglehart v. Crane, 42 Ill. 261; Niles v. Harmon, 80 Ill. 396.

Colorado.—Fassett v. Mulock, 5 Colo. 466.

Mississippi.—Georgia Pac. R. Co. v. Walker, 61 Miss. 481.

Pennsylvania.—Nackin v. Stanley,

10 S. & R. (Pa.) 450; Taylor v. Maris, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 51; Cowden's Estate, 1 Pa. St. 267; Merrey's Appeal, 4 Pa. St. 80; Phelps' Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 546; Milligan's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 503.

Michigan.—McVeigh v. Sherwood, 47 Mich. 545; Cooper v. Bigly, 13 Mich. 463.

Connecticut.—Hunt v. Mansfield, 31 Conn. 488.

New York.—James v. Hubbard, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 228; Gouverneur v. Lynch, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 300; Jenkins v. Freyer, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 47; Guion v. Knapp, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 35; Chapman v. West, 17 N. Y. 125; Clowes v. Dickenson, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 235; Welling v. Ryerson, 94 N. Y. 98; Howard Ins. Co. v. Halsey, 8 N. Y. 271; Burchell v. Osborne, 19 N. Y. St. Rep. 52; Pallen v. The Agricultural Bank, 1 Freeman (Miss.) Ch. 419.

Alabama.—Bank v. Dundas, 11 Ala. 661.

New Jersey.—Mount v. Potts, 8 C. E. Green (N. J.) 188; Powles v. Griffith, 37 N. J. Eq. 384.

Maine.—Holden v. Pike, 24 Me. 427; Cushing v. Ayer, 25 Me. 383; Shepard v. Adams, 32 Me. 63.

Massachusetts.—Allen v. Clark, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 47; Chase v. Woodbury, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 143; Bradley v. George, 2 Allen (Mass.) 392; George v. Wood, 9 Allen (Mass.) 80.

South Carolina.—Canaday v. Boliver, 25 S. Car. 547.

Ohio.—Sternberger v. Hanna, 42 Ohio St. 305; Green v. Ramage, 18 Ohio 428; Commercial Bank of Lake Erie v. Western Reserve Bank, 11 Ohio 444.

Vermont.—Gates v. Adams, 24 Vt. 71; Root v. Collins, 34 Vt. 173; Lyman v. Lyman, 32 Vt. 79.

Wisconsin.—Aiken v. Milwaukee & St. Paul R. Co., 37 Wis. 469; Worth v. Hill, 14 Wis. 559; State v. Titus, 17 Wis. 241; Ogden v. Glidden, 9 Wis. 46.

Texas.—Miller v. Rogers, 49 Tex. 398; Rippetoe v. Dwyer, 49 Tex. 498.

Florida.—Ritche v. Eichelberger, 13 Fla. 169.

Georgia.—Cumming v. Cumming, 3 Ga. 460.

Indiana.—Cissna v. Haines, 18 Ind. 496; Day v. Patterson, 18 Ind. 114; Williams v. Perry, 20 Ind. 437; Aiken v. Bruen, 21 Ind. 137; McCullum v. Turpie, 32 Ind. 146; McShirley v. Birt, 44 Ind. 382; Houston v. Houston, 67 Ind. 276; Hahn v. Behrman, 73 Ind. 120.

2. Nature of the Encumbrance Immaterial.—The principle is irrespective of the nature of the encumbrance, and is applicable to land encumbered by a mortgage, judgment, decedent's debts, legacies charged by will, or any lien charge whatever.¹ It is also immaterial by whom the paramount encumbrance was created.²

Minnesota.—Johnson v. Williams, 4 Minn. 260.

Nebraska.—Lausman v. Drahos, 8 Neb. 457.

In Iowa, the rule that the sale shall take place in the inverse order of alienation is rejected, a ratable contribution being considered more equitable. Bates v. Ruddick, 2 Iowa 423; Barney v. Myers, 28 Iowa 472; Tufts v. Stanley, 42 Iowa 628; Iowa L. & T. Co. v. Mowery, 67 Iowa 113; Huff v. Farwell, 67 Iowa 208; Massie v. Wilson, 16 Iowa 390; Windsor v. Evans, 72 Iowa 692.

In Kentucky, also, the rule is not followed. Dickey v. Thompson, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 312; Campbell v. Johnston, 4 Dana (Ky.) 179.

United States Courts.—It has been decided that the courts of the United States sitting in any State in which the rule is established will follow it. Orvis v. Powell, 98 U. S. 176. See also National Savings Bank v. Creswell, 100 U. S. 641.

Ireland.—The rule generally adopted in America has been followed in Ireland. In Hartley v. O'Flaherty, Lloyd & Gool Cases temp. Plunket 208, LORD PLUNKET said: "If afterwards the mortgagor sells a portion of his equity of redemption for valuable or good consideration, the entire residue undisposed of by him is applicable, in the first instance, to the discharge of the mortgage, and in case of the bona fide purchaser; and it is contrary to any principle of justice to say that a person afterward purchasing from that mortgagor shall be in a better situation than the mortgagor himself in respect to any of his rights." See also Harbert's Case, 3 Coke 11.

1. Mortgages.—Examples in which the rule has been applied in the cases of mortgages are given in the preceding note.

Judgments.—In Hurd v. Eaton, 28 Ill. 122, a judgment creditor was compelled to exhaust the property of the judgment debtor before levying on land, which, though subject to his judgment, had become the property of a third person. See also Woods v. Spalding, 45 Barb.

(N. Y.) 602; Lloyd v. Gilbraith, 32 Pa. St. 103.

Legacies Charged on Land.—In Jenkins v. Freyer, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 47, it was held that when lands charged with the payment of legacies have been sold by the devisee to different purchasers, such lands will be charged in the inverse order of their alienation.

Debts Charged on the Land of Decedents.—The principle has been applied to lands of decedents charged with the payments of debts in Re Clark, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 225; Eddy v. Traver, 6 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 521; 31 Am. Dec. 261; Succession of O'Laughlin 18 La. An. 142.

In Phelps' Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 546, the lien was a recognizance in partition. In Hunt v. Ewing, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 519, it was held that as between purchasers of different parcels of land, the whole of which is subject to a prior lien, the land is chargeable, in equity, in the inverse order of alienation, and that this rule applies as well where the lien is a creditor's lien as where it was created by contract.

2. In Guion v. Knapp, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 35, CHANCELLOR WALWORTH said: "The principle of charging different parcels of the mortgaged premises, which have been sold at different times subsequent to the mortgage, in the inverse order of their alienation, is not always confined to the original alienations by the mortgagor, who is personally liable for the payment of the debt. The principle is equally applicable to several conveyances at different times, by a grantee of the whole or a part of the mortgaged premises, where he conveys with warranty. Thus, if the mortgage is a lien upon 200 acres of land, and the mortgagor conveys 100 acres thereof to A, the 100 acres which remains in the hands of the mortgagor is to be first charged with the payment of the debt, and, if that is not sufficient, the other 100 acres is next to be resorted to. But, if A has subsequently conveyed one-half of his 100 acres to B with warranty, the 50 acres remaining in the hands of A, is, in equity, first chargeable with the payment of the balance of the debt, which cannot be raised by a sale of the 100 acres that still belong to the mortgagor or his subsequent grantee, before resort can be had to the 50 acres which A has conveyed with warranty. And if A conveys his remaining 50 acres to C, either with or without warranty, that portion of the premises is still liable for the balance of the mortgage debt, and must first be sold before a resort can be had to the 50 acres previously conveyed with warranty to B." See also Nellons v. Truax, 6 Ohio N. S. 97; Wikoff v. Davis, 3 Green Ch. (N. Y.) 224.

3. Notice.—It is not necessary that the second purchaser should have notice of the equity of the first purchaser; but the first purchaser must perfect his title so as not to mislead subsequent purchasers.¹

1. Where the record discloses an encumbrance on property of which a party is taking a conveyance, and also discloses the further fact that the encumbrance rests on other property, and on an examination directed to such other property it becomes apparent that a conveyance of the latter has been made, which creates an equitable right to throw the burden of the encumbrance on the first property, the purchaser will be presumed to have made such examination, and will be regarded as constructively notified of such equity. Hunt v. Mansfield, 31 Conn. 488.

The principle is illustrated in the leading case of Chase v. Woodbury, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 143, in which the facts were as follows: The owner of land, one Sibley, made a mortgage thereof, and subsequently conveyed one-half of the tract to his son Sylvester. On the same day he conveyed the other half to his son Reuben. Subsequently, in 1838, Sylvester conveyed his half to Sally B. Chase. Reuben did not place his deed on record until 1840. The question was, whether Sally B. Chase should contribute to the payment of the mortgage. CHIEF JUSTICE SHAW said: "It will be observed that after the making of both these deeds Nathaniel, the father, remained liable for the payment of the mortgage, and had he paid it, he would have been entitled to no contribution from either. So, had he made his deed to Sylvester of one-half, remaining himself owner of the other half, though the whole estate remained bound to the mortgagee, had Nathaniel, the mortgagor, redeemed the remaining half by paying the whole mortgage, he would have had no contribution. So, any other person, claiming merely Nathaniel's title and interest, on redeeming could have no contribution. Nathaniel or the person claiming only his interest, would have only paid his own debt, and although such payment would de facto discharge Sylvester's moiety from an encumbrance, it would be done because Nathaniel was bound to do it, and could have no contribution. But, in fact, these deeds bear date the same day; there is nothing in the terms of either which makes it subject to the other, and prima facie, therefore, they were in fact simultaneous, and both were subject to the whole mortgage. But Reuben did not put his deed on record till 1840, and in the meantime Sylvester conveyed to the demandant in 1838. Suppose a simultaneous deed would have been an encumbrance, it could not affect her without notice, and an unrecorded deed was no notice, actual or constructive. She knew undoubtedly of the encumbrance by the outstanding mortgage of $2,500; but by the record, one-half of the estate remaining apparently in the grantor, she knew that by law the other moiety was first liable, and if sufficient in value to pay the encumbrance, her moiety would be free from it. She had no notice of the specific lien on her moiety, arising from a liability to contribute to the owner of the other moiety, which would have existed had the two conveyances been simultaneous. Reuben, although he stood on an equal footing with Sylvester, in the first instance, as to the mortgage, by failing to put his deed on record, as notice to purchasers, enabled Sylvester to make an apparently good title to Sally B. Chase, without notice of the encumbrance, and therefore he could not set it up against her." It was accordingly held that Sylvester's grantee was not liable to contribute towards the payment of the mortgage. See also La Farge Fire Ins. Co. v. Bell, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 54; Brown v. Simons, 44 N. H. 475. Where there is actual notice, contribution enforced cannot be from the prior grantor. Thus in George v. Kent, 7 Allen (Mass.) 16, it was held that one who takes a deed of mortgage of a portion of a lot of ground, the whole of which is subject to a prior mortgage, with notice of a prior

4. How the Equity of the Grantee Is Enforced.—The courts enforce the equity of the grantee or grantees by controlling the execution, and directing the sale of the different parcels in the inverse order of their alienation.¹ After the sale has been made the equities of the parties may be enforced by a decree of subrogation.²

XII. PARTNERSHIP ASSETS—1. The Rule Stated.—When a partnership becomes insolvent, it is a general rule in equity that the firm debts shall be paid out of firm assets, and the separate debts of each partner out of his own separate estate.³

unrecorded deed of warranty of an adjoining portion of the same lot from the same grantor to a third person, cannot compel the latter to contribute towards the redemption of the first mortgage, and a direct reference in his deed of mortgage to such third person as the owner of the adjoining land will amount to such notice.

In Pike v. Goodnow, 12 Allen (Mass.) 472, the owner of land executed a mortgage on it to a hospital, and subsequently a second mortgage to one Abigail Willis, excepting from the second mortgage a small portion of the land which he subsequently conveyed to Steadman by a deed executed in 1840 but not recorded until 1866. In 1842 Abigail Willis purchased the equity of redemption to the land mortgaged to her, and this descended to the plaintiff, her heir, who subsequently, in February, 1865, took an assignment of the mortgage to the hospital. In March, 1865, Steadman conveyed the small tract to the defendant. The plaintiff had paid the interest on the paramount mortgage for twenty-six years without asking for contribution. The court held that when the plaintiff inherited "her rights and obligations, the duty of contributing towards the payment of the original mortgage stood thus: 1. The plaintiff, as owner of the equity of redemption of the second mortgage, was first liable for the full amount. 2. Steadman, as the next previous grantee, was liable to make good any deficiency in the value of that equity; and 3. The plaintiff as owner of the second mortgage, would be the last to be called on." As the plaintiff's deed described his land as bounded by "land of Francis Steadman," it was immaterial that Steadman's deed was not recovered.

In Chapman v. West, 17 N. Y. 125, it was held that the filing of notice of the pendency of an action against the vendor alone charges a subsequent purchaser of any part of the mortgaged premises with notice of all equities of the plaintiff, arising out of his right to a conveyance, in respect to the order of sale upon foreclosure or otherwise. See also James v. Hubbard, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 228.

1. Georgia Pac. R. Co. v. Walker, 61 Miss. 481; Welling v. Rverson, 94 N. Y. 98; Milligan's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 503.

In Pennsylvania, the act of April 23rd, 1856 (P. L. 534), provides that in cases where the real estate of several persons is subject to the lien of a judgment to which they should contribute, or to which one should be subrogated as against the others, the person having such right of contribution or subrogation may, upon suggestion thereof, obtain a rule on the plaintiff to show cause why he should not levy on and make sale of the real estate so liable in the proportion or in the succession in which the properties of the several owners shall be respectively liable. In Milligan's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 504, it was held that this act did not give the right of substitution, but merely provides a mode of enforcing it in certain cases, as, for example, where a plaintiff in a judgment which binds several properties is about to collect it, and there are equities to be adjusted between the terre-tenants. The act does not apply to cases where a sale had already been made, and in this Milligan's Appeal is distinguished from Arnes' Appeal, 65 Pa. St. 72, and Phillips' Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 546.

2. Milligan's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 503.

3. The rule was stated by LORD KING, in Ex parte Cook, 2 P. W. 500, as follows: "It is settled and is a resolution of convenience that the joint creditors shall be first paid out of the partnership or joint estate, and the separate creditors out of the separate estate of each partner; and if there be a surplus of the joint estate besides what will pay the joint creditors, the same shall be applied to pay the separate

2. Reason of the Rule.—The rule is based on the equity in each partner to have the firm assets applied to the payment of the firm debts, so that his own estate may, so far as possible, be relieved from liability of paying them. A partner is individually liable for all the firm debts; if, therefore, the creditors of another partner, who is insolvent, should be allowed to come upon the partnership assets, the firm creditors would then resort to the solvent partner's estate, and the latter would have no recourse except to the insolvent estate of the other partner. It follows from this that the right of a firm creditor to be paid out of the firm assets can only be worked out through the equity of the partners. If for any reason the equity of the partner shall cease, the prior right of the firm creditors to the firm assets also ceases.¹

creditors; and if there be, on the other hand, a surplus of the separate estate beyond what will satisfy the separate creditors, it shall go to supply any deficiency that may remain as to the joint creditors."

1. In Case v. Beauregard, 99 U. S. 119, JUSTICE STRONG said: "The effects of a partnership belong to it so long as it continues in existence, and not to the individuals who compose it. The right of each partner extends only to a share of what may remain after payment of the debts of the firm and the settlement of its accounts. Growing out of this right, or rather included in it, is the right to have the partnership property applied to the payment of the partnership debts in preference to those of any individual partner. This is an equity the partners have as between themselves, and in certain circumstances it enures to the benefit of the creditors of the firm. The latter are said to have a privilege or preference, sometimes loosely denominated a lien, to have the debts due to them paid out of the assets of a firm in course of liquidation, to the exclusion of the creditors of its several members; their equity, however, is a derivative one. It is not held or enforceable in their own right. It is practically a subrogation to the equity of the individual partner, to be made effective only through him. Hence, if he is not in a condition to enforce it, the creditors of the firm cannot be. But so long as the equity of the partner remains in him, so long as he retains an interest in the firm assets, as a partner, a court of equity will allow the creditors of the firm to avail themselves of his equity and enforce, through it, the application of those assets primarily to payment of the debts due them, whenever the property comes under its administration."

In Fitzpatrick v. Flannagan, 106 U. S. 648, 654, JUSTICE MATTHEWS said: "The legal right of a partnership creditor to subject the partnership property to the payment of his debt consists simply in the right to reduce his claim to judgment and to sell the goods of his debtors on execution. His right to appropriate the partnership property specifically to the payment of his debt, in equity, in preference to creditors of an individual partner, is derived through the other partner, whose original right is to have the partnership assets applied to the payment of partnership obligations. And this equity of the creditor subsists as long as that of the partner through which it is derived remains." See also Huiskamp v. Moline Wagon Co., 121 U. S. 310; Farley v. Moog, 79 Ala. 148; Rice v. Barnard, 20 Vt. 479; Couchman v. Moupin, 78 Ky. 33; Saunders v. Reilly, 105 N. Y. 12; Meech v. Allen, 17 N. Y. 300; Menagh v. Whitwell, 52 N. Y. 146; Deveaux v. Fowler, 2 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 400; Moody v. Downs, 63 N. H. 50; Waterman v. Hunt, 2 R. I. 298; Snodgrass Appeal, 13 Pa. St. 471; Brown v. Beecher, 120 Pa. St. 590; Coover's Appeal, 29 Pa. 9; Doner v. Stauffer, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 198; Page v. Thomas, 43 Ohio St. 38; Norwalk Nat. Bank v. Sawyer, 38 Ohio St. 339; Day v. Wetherby, 29 Wis. 363; Gwin v. Selbey, 5 Ohio St. 96; Smith v. Jones, 18 Neb. 481; Bowen v. Billings, 13 Neb. 439; Wilson v. Soper, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 411; Holloway v. Turner, 61 Md. 217; Glenn v. Gill, 2 Md. 1, 16; Thompson v. Frist, 15 Md. 24; Allen v. Grisom, 90 N. Car. 90; Talbott v. Pierce, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 195; Black v. Bush, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 210; Caussey v. Bailey,

3. Appropriation of Firm Assets to Separate Debts.—Where all the partners of a solvent firm agree, for a sufficient consideration and without fraudulent intent, to appropriate a portion of the partnership assets to the payment of a separate debt of one of the partners, the partners thereby abandon their equity, and the claim of the firm creditors, which cannot rise higher than that of their debtor, is also defeated.¹

57 Tex. 665; Hawk Eye Woolen Mills v. Conklin, 26 Iowa 422; Tillinghast v. Champlin, 4 R. I. 173; Fullam v. Abrahams, 29 Kan. 725; Golden State & Miners Iron Works v. Davidson, 73 Cal. 389; Schaeffer v. Fithian, 17 Ind. 463; Dunham v. Hanna, 18 Ind. 270; Dean v. Phillips, 17 Ind. 406; Hanover Nat. Bank v. Klein, 64 Miss. 141; Thompson v. Frist, 15 Md. 24; Tillinghast v. Champlin, 4 R. I. 173; Washburn v. Bank of Bellows Falls, 19 Vt. 278.

1. A complaint in an action by creditors to set aside chattel mortgages executed by defendants doing business under the name of "F Bros." alleged that defendants being indebted to plaintiffs, and for the purpose of defrauding their creditors, executed mortgages covering their stock, to relatives; that one mortgage was given to secure a debt of the old firm of "F Bros." and that the other was to secure an individual debt of one of the defendants, and that neither of the debts secured by the mortgages were those of the present firm to which plaintiffs gave credit; that since the execution of the mortgages defendants had made a voluntary assignment; and that the assignee was threatening to sell the property and pay off the mortgages. It was held in demurrer that the complaint was insufficient, it not being charged that the debts were not fairly owing to the mortgagees. Fisher v. Syfers, 109 Ind. 514.

A and B, partners, borrowed money of a bank, for part of which they gave their individual notes and for part the firm notes. The money, as the bank knew, was to be used to pay the individual indebtedness of A, and he was charged with the amount on the firm books. Afterwards, all the notes were taken up, and firm notes, secured by chattel mortgage, given for the whole loan. It was held that an assignee of the firm for the benefit of creditors was bound to pay the whole of the mortgage out of the firm assets. In re Assignment of Stewart, 62 Iowa 614.

One who has a lien against one partner individually is not entitled to a fund raised from partnership property, unless a portion of it comes into the hands of said partner as his share after the partnership debts are paid. Haines v. Millers, 61 Ga. 344.

In Snodgrass' Appeal, 13 Pa. St. 471, a promise by one of two partners to pay the amount of an execution which had been levied on the partnership effects under a judgment against the other partner, if the sheriff would forbear, was held to give the separate debt a preference over a subsequent levy for an obligation contracted by the firm. The promise was treated as an agreement to devote the joint property to the separate debt, which precluded the partners and consequently the joint creditors. See also Seigler v. Chidsey, 28 Pa. 279; notes to Selk v. Prune, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. 397.

In Case v. Beauregard, 99 U. S. 119, a member of a firm assigned and transferred in good faith his interest in the partnership property in payment of a just debt for which he was solely liable. The creditor took possession of it, and sold it to A, who, by an act of sale, in which the other member of the firm united, transferred it for a valuable consideration to B. The firm and the members of it were insolvent. C, claiming to be a simple-contract creditor of the firm, then filed his bill to subject the property to the payment of his debt; but the court held that C had no specific lien on the property, and there being no trust which a court of equity could enforce, the bill could not be sustained.

A member of an insolvent firm, with the consent of his partner, applied funds of the partnership to the payment of the premiums on insurance for the benefit of his wife, to whom he was largely indebted. It was held that the application was prima facie valid; and that partnership creditors having no lien upon the assets of the firm must show that it was fraudulent before they would be entitled to pursue the money paid for such premiums. Hanover Nat. Bank v. Klein, 64 Miss. 141.

The firm, however, must be solvent,¹

Members of an insolvent partnership in good faith and in ignorance of the true condition of its affairs, transferred the firm property to a corporation in exchange for shares of stock, to be divided between the partners according to their several interests. The transfer was not fully completed until after the death of one of the partners. It was held that the stock issued to the deceased partner was not partnership property, nor liable to the payment of the partnership debts in preference to his individual debts. Singer v. Carpenter, 125 Ill. 117.

The members of a firm executed their joint promissory notes, in their individual names, and on the same day conveyed their partnership property in trust to secure payment of the notes. A creditor holding acceptances given in the name of the firm, in the course of business, and for partnership purposes, but prior to the execution of the notes, filed a bill to have the trust conveyances set aside and to subject the property therein described to the payment of such acceptances. The court held that as there was no proof of an intention to defraud the creditors of the firm, and as ordinary creditors of a firm have no lien upon the property of the firm so as to be able to prevent a bona fide alienation of it, the beneficiary in the deed of trust was entitled to the payment of his debts out of the proceeds of the sale of the property conveyed, the surplus, if any, to be paid to the complainant. Carver Gin Co. v. Bannon, 85 Tenn. 712.

If the members of a firm mortgage its land for an individual debt of a member, and there is no fraud nor collusion, the lien of the mortgage is paramount to the claims of partnership creditors. Anderson v. Norton, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 14.

In New Hampshire, the appropriation of partnership property to the payment of the individual debts of a partner is valid against subsequent creditors of the firm. Farrell v. Metcalf, 63 N. H. 276.

In Kansas, it is held that during the existence of a solvent partnership, it may, upon a bona fide consideration, all the partners assenting, transfer and appropriate the partnership property in payment of the individual debt of one of its members. Woodmansie v. Hol- comb, 34 Kan. 35. See also Schmidlapp v. Currie, 55 Miss. 597; Reeves v. Ayers, 38 Ill. 418; Sexton v. Anderson, 95 Mo. 373; Priest v. Chouteau, 85 Mo. 398; Stebbins v. Williard, 53 Vt. 665; Van Rossum v. Walker, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 237; Jones v. Lusk, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 356; National Bank of the Metropolis v. Sprague, 5 C. E. Greene (N. J.) 13; Sigler v. Knox Co. Bank, 8 Ohio St. 511; Allen v. Center Valley Co., 21 Conn. 130; Bullitt v. The Methodist Church, 26 Pa. St. 108; Kimball v. Thompson, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 283; Wilson v. Soper, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 411.

1. Payment of an individual debt of one of the partners out of the partnership assets when the firm is insolvent, is considered in most of the States a fraud upon the firm creditors. Thus in Iowa, an insolvent firm sold their stock of goods to two of their creditors, who, in part payment therefor, canceled an individual debt of one of the partners. It was held that such a division of the firm property to the payment of the individual debt of a partner was a fraud upon creditors of the firm and invalidated the sale as to them. Patterson v. Seaton, 70 Iowa 689. See also Strauss v. Frederick, 91 N. Car. 121.

In Louisiana, it is held that the separate creditors of a member of a firm will not be allowed to apply the firm assets to pay his debt, to the prejudice of the partnership creditors, even though the other members have acquiesced therein. Carter v. Allen, 36 La. An. 473.

In Texas, in an action against the members of a firm, an attachment was issued, under which property was seized, which defendant claimed under an assignment of one of the partners, purporting to convey his individual interest in the property for the benefit of such of his creditors as would consent to take under it and release him. The court held that the assignment passes, only the interest of the assignor left after the partnership affairs were settled. Still v. Focke, 66 Tex. 715.

In Missouri, several parties hired a theatre for a term of years and carried it on under an agreement to divide the profits in a specified proportion at the end of each year, reserving a certain proportion to meet contingent losses. One of the parties mortgaged his interest in the leasehold to secure his private debt. It was held that the arrangement was a partnership; that the mortgage was subordinate to the partnership debts, and that the mortgagee, having notice of the equitable rights of the other parties, should not be protected as against their claims. Priest v. Chouteau, 85 Mo. 388.

and the conveyance without fraud.¹

In Rhode Island, one of two partners make an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. His copartner was insolvent, and there were no partnership assets. It was held that the partnership creditors were entitled to participate pro rata with the individual creditors in the distribution of the assigned estate. Alexander v. Gorman, 15 R. I. 421. See also Miller v. Creditors, 37 La. An. 604; Buckingham v. Ludlum, 37 N. J. Eq. 137.

In Goodbar v. Cary, 16 Fed. Rep. 316, it was held that where one lends money to the individual members of a firm, taking their individual notes therefor, a conveyance of land owned by the firm in part payment of such notes is an appropriation of partnership property to the payment of the debts of its members; and if at the time of such conveyance the firm is insolvent, it is fraudulent as to existing creditors, although valid as between the parties thereto, and will be set aside at the suit of a creditor who has obtained a judgment against such firm.

See also Wilson v. Robertson, 21 N. Y. 587; Menagh v. Whitwell, 52 N. Y. 146; Keith v. Fink, 47 Ill. 272; Cox v. Platt, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 126; French v. Lovejoy, 12 N. H. 458; National Bank of Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 13; Walker v. Marine Nat. Bank, 98 Pa. St. 574; Waterman v. Hunt, 2 R. I. 298; Bailey v. Kennedy, 2 Del. Ch. 12; Roop v. Herron, 15 Neb. 73; Crane v. Roosa, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 455; Vernon v. Upson, 60 Wis. 418; Black v. Bush, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 210; O'Connor v. Coats, 79 Ind. 596.

1. The Assignment Must be in Good Faith.—Thus, where a surviving partner has transferred or parted with his right to have the partnership effects applied to the payment of the firm debts, before proceedings by the partnership creditors to liquidate the affairs of the partnership are commenced, but his action has not been in good faith, he cannot afterward surrender it to the prejudice of the partnership creditors. Robinson v. Allen (Va.), 8 S. E. Rep. 835.

In Heineman v. Hart, 55 Mich. 64, it was held that a chattel mortgage given without consideration to secure the antecedent individual debt of one of the partners is fraudulent as against creditors of the firm, if at the time it was given, the firm was insolvent or would become so by such a shrinkage in outstanding accounts as might reasonably be expected.

In California, in an action of accounting between partners, firm creditors may join in an intervention for the purpose of sharing in a fund in the hands of one of the partners resulting from a fraudulent sale by him of the firm property. Grossini v. Perazzo, 66 Cal. 545.

A transfer by a partner of his interest in the copartnership property to pay the debts of the firm, cannot be adjudged fraudulent as against the individual creditors of the partner making the transfer in the absence of evidence that any surplus would remain after the payment of the firm debts. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Reddall, 18 N. Y. St. Rep. 471; s. c., 2 N. Y. Sup. 331.

An agreement by a partner with special experience to remain in the firm, though desiring to retire, was held a sufficient consideration for the payment of a debt of his out of the capital of the firm. George v. Wamsley, 64 Iowa 175.

Suits Against Separate Creditors to Recover Partnership Assets in Their Hands.

—A suit in equity to recover payments made by a partner to his individual creditors from the partnership funds cannot be maintained in the names of the other partners, or in the name of the firm for the use of firm creditors, without showing the insolvency of the firm, and that the money sought to be recovered was necessary for the payment of firm debts. Davis v. Atkinson, 124 Ill. 474.

Specific articles of partnership property were sold on execution for the individual debt of one of the partner. The supreme court of Indiana held that the firm could maintain an action to set aside the sale without tendering the money paid by the purchaser, and that declarations made by one of the partners in the absence of the others, that the property in question was the individual property of the partner for whose debt it was taken, were not within the scope of his powers as a partner, and did not estop the firm from asserting, as against the purchaser, that the prop-

4. Effect of Sale of One Partner's Interest to Another Partner.—So also where a partner retires from a firm and in good faith assigns his interest in the partnership to the other partners, the equities of the partners are extinguished, and the equities of the partnership creditors are also at an end.¹ But such a transfer when the firm erty belonged to the partnership. Williams v. Lewis, 115 Ind. 45.

A surviving partner in his individual name executed a mortgage on property described as formerly owned by the firm, but declared in the mortgage to be the separate property of the mortgagor. By a bill in equity alleging that the partnership owned an undivided interest in the property which constituted all of its assets, a partnership creditor sought to have the mortgage declared and foreclosed as a general assignment enuring to the equal benefit of the partnership creditors. The court held that the bill could not be maintained, for though complaint might have an equity as a partnership creditor founded on rights independent of the mortgage, he could not elect to accept the rights and benefits it conferred, and at the same time have its uses set aside, and the property appropriated to other and different uses. Espy v. Comer, 80 Ala. 333.

It is the duty of a partner, upon learning that his copartner has misappropriated the firm assets for the payment of his individual debts, to notify the persons so paid of his intention to hold them liable, so that they may take immediate steps to save themselves out of any individual estate such copartner then may have; and a delay of nearly two years in proceeding to collect from the creditors so paid, is unreasonable. Davies v. Atkinson, 124 Ill. 474.

Partnership property conveyed by the partners in payment of their individual debts, and subsequently conveyed to a bona fide purchaser, cannot be subjected to partnership debts. Jewett v. Meech, 101 Ind. 289; Case v. Beauregard, 99 U. S. 119; Jones v. Lusk, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 356; Sigler v. Knox Co Bank, 8 Ohio St. 511; Bullitt v. The Methodist Church, 26 Pa. St. 108.

1. In Baker's Appeal, 21 Pa. St. 76, LEWIS, C. J., said: "It is well settled that the right to confine each partner, or those who claim under him, to his interest in the surplus after the payment of the partnership debts, is an equity which rests in the other partners alone, and not in the creditors of the firm.

The latter have no lien on the property, and must work out their preference in the distribution of the partnership funds entirely through the medium of the partners, whose interests remain undisposed of. Story's Equity, § 1253. If they consent to a disposition of the assets, the preference of the creditors is at an end, and they must rely upon the personal responsibility of the partners who contracted the debts. Where one partner sells his interest to another, in consideration of an engagement by the latter to pay the partnership debts, the rule is the same. The engagement to pay them is but a personal contract. It creates no lien on the property. It follows as a necessary consequence that if the partner who has acquired the interests of his former associates, and in whom resides the right to appropriate the partnership assets to the payment of partnership liabilities, thinks proper to exercise his dominion, and to make a different disposition of them, he has a right to do so; and the preference of the partnership creditors engrafted upon them, and deriving its support from his equity, ceases to exist. The scion dies with the stock."

When a partner retires and transfers his interest to the other partners, the newly constituted firm may prefer the joint debts which are exclusively their own, or prefer the joint debts which they owe in common with the retiring partner. Frons' Estate, 73 Pa. St. 459; Robb v. Mudge, 14 Gray (Mass.) 534.

In Dimon v. Hazard, 32 N. Y. 65, it was held that when one of his partners retires from business, relinquishing to the other all his interest in the partnership property, the remaining partner acquires the same dominion as if it had always been his own separate property, and that he could consequently appropriate it to the payment of his separate debts.

In ex parte Ruffin, 6 Ves. 119, there was a partnership of two persons and one retired, assigning the partnership property to another, and taking a bond for the value and a covenant of indemnity against debts. LORD ELDON ruled that the joint creditors had no is insolvent is a fraud upon the partnership creditors, and is invalid.¹

equity attaching upon partnership effects even remaining in specie.

In Stanton v. Westover, 101 N. Y. 265, A and B, copartners, dissolved, each agreeing to pay one-half of the debts, and A transferring his interest to B. B was insolvent, but neither he nor A knew this, and the transfer was made in good faith, the firm being solvent. It was held that firm creditors could not impeach A's transfers in payment of his individual debts.

Where the members of a firm, acting in good faith, dissolve it, one member selling his interest to the other, the latter will not be deprived of the right to hold such property exempt from the payment of a partnership debt afterwards asserted against him. Mortley v. Flanagan, 38 Ohio St. 401.

A member of a partnership whose copartners had retired and left him sole owner of the partnership, confessed judgment in favor of his individual creditors. It was held that in the absence of any evidence of fraud such creditors were entitled to the proceeds of the firm property in preference to firm creditors. Brown v. Miller, 11 Colo. 431. See also Durfee v. Bump, 20 N. Y. St. Rep. 833; s. c., 3 N. Y. Supp. 505.

In Alabama, it is held that where one partner sells out his interest to the other, the effects become the exclusive property of the purchaser discharged from any lien on account of partnership debts, and that, if the sale was fair and valid, the continuing partner may claim an exemption in the partnership property as against a partnership creditor. Levy v. Williams, 79 Ala. 171. See also Jones v. Fletcher, 42 Ark. 422.

But in Indiana, if one buys out the interest of his copartners, assuming the debts of the firm, the partnership creditors may participate in the proceeds of his estate on equal terms with his individual creditors. Warren v. Farmer, 100 Ind. 593.

The general rule, however, is that a sale by one partner to another in good faith destroys the equities of the firm creditors. Hubbs v. Bancroft, 4 Ind. 388; Frank v. Peters, 9 Ind. 343; Reese v. Bradford, 13 Ala. 387; Rankin v. Jones, 2 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 169; McDonald v. Beach, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 55;

Dunham v. Hanna, 18 Ind. 270; Waterman v. Hunt, 2 R. I. 298; Bullitt v. The Methodist Church, 26 Pa. St. 108; Mayer v. Clark, 40 Ala. 259; Griffith v. Burke, 14 Md. 102; Robb v. Mudge, 14 Gray (Mass.) 534.

1. A transfer of the interest of a partner of an insolvent to his copartner does not enable the transferee as against the firm creditors, to apply the partnership property to the payment of his individual debts. Roop v. Herron, 15 Neb. 73.

A partner sold his interest in the firm to his copartner, who agreed to pay the firm debts. The firm was at the time insolvent. After the sale the continuing partner gave a deed of trust on all the assets of the late firm to secure the payment of an individual indebtedness of his own, which accrued prior to the dissolution. In a contest between a creditor of the firm and the individual creditor it was held that the right of the former to be paid out of the firm assets in preference to the latter, was not impaired by the dissolution, and as against him the deed of trust was a nullity. Phelps v. McNeeley, 66 Mo. 554. See also Atkins v. Saxton, 77 N. Y. 195.

A sold his partner B his interest in the firm. B assumed its liabilities, and gave a lien upon its effects to secure the price, and to indemnify A against firm debts that he might be called upon to pay. A conveyed his interest to C, an individual creditor. After A and B's insolvency, the partnership creditors filed a bill on which it was held that A's conveyance was void against them, and that they were entitled by subrogation to the benefit of the lien. Buck Stove Co. v. Johnson, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 282.

When the condition of the firm at the time of the transfer is such as to warrant the partners in supposing that a "necessity for marshalling assets" is likely to shortly arise, it is, under such circumstances, a fraud in the partners to make a transfer or division of the assets, and thus attempt to deprive firm creditors of their preference. Black's Appeal, 44 Pa. St. 503.

The case of Ex parte Mayou, 34 L. J. 25; s. c., 11 Jur., N. S. 433, was where a firm in insolvent circumstances dissolved, one partner assigning to the other his interest, and the continuing

5. Effect of Sale of Partner's Interest by Legal Process.—A similar rule prevails where the individual interests of the several partners are sold under executions and the partnership is thereby terminated. If, however, a levy is made by the partnership creditors before a sale of the interests of the partners by their separate creditors, the levy of the partnership creditors will prevail over the levy of the separate creditors, even though it be subsequent in date.¹

partner assuming the debts of the firm. In his opinion WESTBURY, L. C., said: "This case was very learnedly argued with reference to several decisions of LORD ELDON, but I take it that the principle of all the decisions is, that which is shortly stated by LORD ELDON, in the case of Ex parte Williams, 11 Ves. 3, in which he very concisely states that every one of these transactions must depend entirely upon the bona fides." And without considering the question of fraudulent intent he held, "that there was no bona fides in this transaction, that the assignment was fraudulent, that it was void, that it did not operate as a conversion of the bankrupt's property into the separate estate of Wood (the surviving partner), that it must be still considered as joint property and distributed as such among joint creditors."

In re Cook, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 122, was similar in facts to Ex parte Mayou. In that case HOPKINS, J., said: "I think where a firm is insolvent that partners should be considered rather in the light of trustees of the firm property for the benefit of creditors, and should not be allowed to sell to each other and so defeat the equitable priority of the firm creditors," and he decided that such an assignment is a "fraud in law" which "equity would at once set aside." See also In re Sauthoff, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 35; Ransom v. Van Deventer, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 307; Wilson v. Robertson, 21 N. Y. 587; Tenney v. Johnson, 43 N. H. 144; Phelps v. McNealy, 66 Miss. 554; Moline Wagon Co. v. Rummell, 14 Fed. Rep. 155; Flack v. Charron, 29 Md. 311; Sanderson v. Stockdale, 11 Md. 563; Collins v. Hood, 4 M'Lean (U. S.) 186; Burtus v. Tisdall, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 571; Deveau v. Fowler, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 400; Crooker v. Crooker, 46 Me. 250; Kirby v. Schoomaker, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 48.

In a few cases such transfers have been upheld. Allen v. The Center Valley Co., 21 Conn. 130.

1. This is well illustrated by Richard v. Allen, 117 Pa. St. 199. In this case Sargent and Holt were partners. Richard held a judgment against Sargent individually, and Henry a similar judgment against Holt. Executions were issued on both judgments, and on September 1st, 1883, a constable levied upon the partnership property. On September 4th, 1883, the firm confessed judgment to Copeland, and before the constable's sale, Allen, the sheriff, under the judgment, levied upon the same property previously levied upon by the constable. The constable sold the property to Richard, and subsequently the sheriff sold the same property to Copeland. Richard then brought suit against Allen for damages. The court decided that the sale to Copeland was valid and payment was entered in favor of the defendant. On a writ of error the judgment was sustained, GORDON, C. J., saying: "The constable's levies were necessarily confined to the property of the individuals against whom they were issued, qua individuals, and his seizure of the goods of the firm was a trespass and legally void. A partnership is a distinct entity, and the joint effects belong to it, and not to the several partners. Dover v. Stauffer, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 198. It follows that the levies on the goods of the firm of Sargent & Holt, for the several debts of the individual members of that firm, created no lien upon those goods, and were in fact as nugatory as though levied upon the property of a stranger. Admittedly had the sale been on but one of the writs, the purchaser would have taken no right in the firm assets, but only the right to compel an account with the continuing partner. . . . If, however, a levy on the interest of a single partner would have created no lien on the goods in controversy, we cannot see how a levy on the individual interests of both could alter the legal aspect of affairs, for in either case those interests were several, and the firm rights remained unaffected. The action of the constable did not deprive the partnership of the control of its own goods; the several partners still continued to be the agents of the firm, and it would not be proper to say that a sale by both or either of them, as such, would not have passed a good title to a purchaser of these goods regardless of the levies. But the sheriff's levy, made by virtue of an execution issued on a judgment against the partnership, was a lien on the goods themselves, and his sale was not the disposition of a mere right in the firm, but of the property itself, and therefore vested in his vendee the absolute ownership thereof, leaving to the constable's vendees the right to have so much of the proceeds of the sale as remained after the satisfaction of the sheriff's suit. Had there been no levy by the sheriff on the property in question until after the sale to the plaintiffs, their case would have been different. In that event, the interest of both parties having been disposed of, there would, thereafter, have been no partnership in existence, hence no firm goods on which to levy. Doner v. Stauffer, supra. The equities of partnership creditors depend on the equities of the partners, and as long as a partner continues to have an interest in the partnership, so long do the equities of the firm creditors continue; but when the rights of all the partners have been disposed of, either by judicial or private sale, neither partnership nor partnership rights remain, and consequently they, the creditors, have no longer anything to which they can look for a satisfaction of their claims except individual responsibility. But as a levy on the right of a partner, neither divests that right nor dissolves the partnership, clearly the power of the firm to dispose of its own goods is not thereby affected, and as a consequence the equities of the firm creditors remain. That the judgment was confessed by the firm subsequently to the levies by the constable, even though the debt for which it was given was contracted after those levies, is not of material consequence; it was nevertheless a debt of the firm for the payment of which the goods might have been assigned, or converted into cash; and as the levies by the constable created no lien, the property was entirely free for seizure on the execution against the partnership."

In Powers v. Large, 69 Wis. 621, a creditor of one partner in an insolvent firm recovered judgment against him and levied on the firm property. Before sale under the levy a creditor of the firm attached the property and obtained a judgment against the firm. It was held that he, having secured a lien on the property before it was appropriated to the payment of the separate debt, had a prior claim upon the proceeds of the sale made under the individual creditor's levy.

14 C. of L.—46

The seizure and actual removal of specific chattels of a partnership, on mesne process against one member thereof for his private debt, and the exclusion of the firm from the possession thereof, is a trespass. Sanborn v. Royce, 132 Mass. 594.

An attachment by a creditor of an individual partner will not affect the lien acquired by an earlier attachment in favor of a creditor of the partnership, and no different rule should prevail in equity in cases where the distribution of the partnership estate only, is proceeding on equitable principles in insolvency. Cunningham v. Gushee, 73 Me. 417.

Only the tangible personal property of a firm can be levied upon for the individual debt of a partner; an actual levy must be made. The property, at the time of the sale, must be in actual possession of the sheriff, and within view of those in attendance, and the sheriff must sell only the interest of the debtor. A sale of the partner's interest in the firm generally, pursuant to a mere constructive levy, does not pass title. Read v. McLanahan, 47 N. Y. Supr. Ct. 275.

But in Michigan it was held that an execution for an individual debt cannot be levied on specific articles of property in which defendant's only interest is that of a partner or joint owner. Hutchinson v. Dubois, 45 Mich. 143.

As a general rule, a levy for a separate debt will yield to a subsequent levy for a debt due by the firm. Morrissey v. Blodgett, 8 N. H. 238; Lovejoy v. Bowers, 11 N. H. 404; Tappan v. Blaisdell, 5 N. H. 189; Pierce v. Jackson, 6 Mass. 242; Rice v. Austin, 17 Mass. 197; Matlack v. Matlack, 5 Ind. 403; Holland v. Fuller, 13 Ind. 195; Coover's Appeal, 29 Pa. St. 9; Hoskins v. Johnson, 24 Ga. 625; Crane v. French, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 311; Dunham v. Murdock, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 553; Douglas v. Winslow, 20 Me. 89; Trowbridge v. Cushman, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 310; Rainey

6. Rights of the Separate Creditors.—As a general rule, when a firm is insolvent the separate creditors have a prior claim upon the separate estates of the partners, but where the firm is solvent each partner may apply his individual property to the payment of the partnership debts.¹ Where, however, a partner first mort-

v. Nance, 54 Ill. 29; Houseal's Appeal, 45 Pa. St. 484; Witter v. Richards, 10 Conn. 37; Crooker v. Crooker, 46 Me. 250; Lancaster Bank v. Myley, 13 Pa. St. 544; Peck v. Fisher, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 386; Jarvis v. Brooks, 27 N. H. 37; Matlack v. James, 2 Beasley (N. J.) 26; Shedd v. Wilson, 27 Vt. 478; Russ v. Fay, 3 Williams (Vt.) 191; Boro v. Harris, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 36; Harris v. Phillips, 49 Ark. 58; Commercial Bank v. Mitchell, 58 Cal. 42; Hershfield v. Clafin, 25 Kan. 166.

A sale of a partner's interest can confer upon the purchaser no greater interest than the partner has himself, that is, his share of the partnership funds after the partnership debts are paid. Book v. McIntyre, 31 Ala. 532; Menagh v. Whitwell, 52 N. Y. 146; Nicoll v. Mumford, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 522; Horton's Appeal, 13 Pa. 67; Christian v. Ellis, 1 Gratt. (Va.) 396; Sanders v. Young, 31 Miss. 111; Smith v. Barker, 10 Me. 458; Crooker v. Crooker, 46 Me. 250; Newman v. Bean, 21 N. H. 93.

1. In Gallagher's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 353, JUSTICE PAXSON said: "It is conceded law that one partner may not pay his private debt out of the assets of his firm, and it was contended by the appellants that the converse of this proposition is true; that is to say, that one member of a firm may not pay the debt of his firm out of his individual assets until his private debts are first paid. If the appellants' contention amounts to anything it amounts to just this. This position is so palpably unsound that it does not require extended discussion. The difference between the two propositions is obvious to the dullest understanding. To pay a private debt out of firm assets is a fraud—an actual fraud. It is taking the money of one person to pay the debt of another, and being an unlawful act, may be restrained by an injunction. But who ever heard of restraining by injunction a man from paying his own debts with his own money, which precisely what a man does when he pays a debt of his firm out of his private means? Not only will the law not interfere in such case, but it will lend its aid to compel him to do this very thing. For a debt of the firm the creditor may levy upon and sell the private property of one partner." See Bowyer v. Knapp, 15 W. Va. 277; Reese v. Bradford, 13 Ala. 837; Reeves v. Ayres, 38 Ill. 418; Robertson v. Baker, 11 Fla. 192; National Bank of the Metropolis v. Sprague, 5 C. E. Green (N. J.) 13.

Where a partner advances his individual property to pay a firm indebtedness, the general partnership creditors must be paid before the advance can be repaid to the partner. Gordon's Estate, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 136.

A partnership creditor is not entitled to share pro rata with individual creditors in individual property. New Market Nat. Bank v. Locke, 89 Ind. 428.

But where a judgment against a partnership becomes a lien on private property before a private debt is contrasted, on which a judgment is subsequently obtained, the first judgment will not be displaced in equity so as to give place to the second. Louden v. Ball, 93 Ind. 232.

Where land of one partner is set off on execution for a debt of the firm, and afterwards the same land is set off for a separate debt of the partner, the separate creditor will hold the land. Jarvis v. Brooks, 23 N. H. 136; Crockett v. Crain, 33 N. H. 542; Holton v. Holton, 40 N. H. 77; Treadwell v. Brown, 41 N. H. 12.

The equity of a dormant partner will not be enforced against persons who have had no notice of its existence. Ex parte Norfolk, 19 Ves. 458; Brown's Appeal, 17 Pa. St. 480; Van Valen v. Russell, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 590.

In some of the States the levy of a separate creditor on the assets of a firm is confined to the right, title and interest of the defendant. The sheriff cannot take possession of the goods to the exclusion of the firm. Treadwell v. Brown, 43 N. H. 290; Reinheimer v. Hemingway, 35 Pa. St. 432; Deal v. Bogue, 20 Pa. 228; In re Smith, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 102; Zoller v. Grant, 19 N. Y. State Rep. 311; Newman v.

Bean, 21 N. H. 93; Garvin v. Paul, 47 N. H. 158; Sanborn v. Royce, 132 Mass. 594.

In other States the sheriff levies upon and takes possession of the partnership property, but the plaintiff on the execution is liable to account to the partnership creditors. Gerard v. Bates, 124 Ill. 150; Newhall v. Buckingham, 14 Ill. 405; Sanders v. Young, 31 Miss. 111; Witter v. Richards, 10 Conn. 37; White v. Woodward, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 484; Harris v. Phillips, 49 Ark. 58. In the States where this rule prevails the court will stay the execution if it appears that the partnership is insolvent. Place v. Sweitzer, 16 Ohio 142; Hubbard v. Curtis, 8 Iowa 1.

Upon an assignment for benefit of creditors, claims against a firm of which the assignor was formerly a member, cannot be allowed against his individual estate, where the latter is insufficient to pay his individual debts. Fox's Appeal (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 228.

In Missouri, it is held that the separate estate of a deceased partner must be applied in payment of all principal and interest due to his separate creditors, before any part of such estate can be touched by the creditors of the firm, and the creditors of the firm are first paid out of the partnership assets. Level v. Farris, 24 Mo. App. 445.

A firm made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, by which they assigned all their partnership and individual property to plaintiff to be applied to the payment of partnership debts prior to the payment of their individual debts. It was held that the assignment was void for preferring partnership creditors over individual creditors as to the individual property. O'Kane v. Hyde, 70 Cal. 6.

Members of a copartnership executed an assignment of all their property for the benefit of creditors, which provided that after the payment of the copartnership debts the residue should be applied to the payment of the individual and private debts of the assignors or either of them, and if insufficient for that purpose, then the same should be applied pro rata to the payment of such debts. The individual assets and liabilities of the assignors were largely unequal. It was held that in the absence of proof of an intent to defraud, the assignment would not be held void by reason of the provision in regard to the payment of individual assets and indebtedness of the assignor, but the provision would be construed as expressing only the individual wishes of the assignors with reference to their individual property and liabilities. Crook v. Rindskopf, 105 N. Y. 476.

Members of an insolvent firm assigned the partnership and their individual estates for the benefit of creditors. The individual estate of one of the firm was more than enough to pay his individual debts. It was held that the individual debts of this member were to be paid with interest to the date of distribution. Re Duncan, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 95.

A creditor of A only, as to A's separate property, has no priority over a creditor of A & B where there are no firm assets and B is insolvent. Shackelford v. Clark, 78 Mo. 91.

An insolvent firm mortgaged its property to a trustee to secure seven claims, the separate debts being clearly stated, but one of them being an individual and not a partnership debt. No fraud was intended. The court held that the mortgage was void as to the last claim, as against an attaching creditor, but not as to the other six. Walker v. White, 60 Mich. 427. See also Pritchett v. Pollock, 82 Ala. 169.

Where, at the time a debt is contracted for the benefit of a firm, the creditor requires and receives the joint and several obligations of the copartners, individually, it thereby becomes the several debt of each of them, and the holder is entitled to prove the obligation against the separate estate of a deceased member of the firm, and to share pro rata with the other separate creditors in the distribution. Matter of Gray, 111 N. Y. 404.

A surviving partner assumed a partnership debt and gave his individual notes in payment thereof. It was held that the partnership debt was thereby converted into a separate demand, and the partnership creditor became the individual creditor of the surviving partner. Espy v. Comer, 80 Ala. 333.

In New Jersey, it is held that on marshalling the assets of both partnership and individual estates, under separate assignments for the benefit of creditors, the partnership creditors are not entitled, after exhausting the partnership assets, to resort to the individual assets until the individual creditor's claims have been satisfied. Davis v. Howell, 33 N. J. Eq. 72.

In South Carolina, joint creditors, after exhausting firm assets, come in for balance on partner's separate real estate pari passu with his separate creditors. Thus B, C and D traded as B & Sons. B borrowed $5,000 of E and title deeds of land held by B and contract for purchase of land were deposited for preparation of mortgage to secure loan. B died before the mortgage was executed. Then C died. The heirs of B and C executed the mortgage to E. A et al. firm creditors enjoined D, and prayed for a receiver to take the land bargained for. The court said: "We think the true doctrine is, . . .

with respect to the right of the separate creditor, if any equity exists in his behalf, such as two funds . . . to throw the copartnership creditors on the partnership assets in the first instance, but after the partnership assets have been fully and fairly exhausted, to come in pro rata with the separate creditor. This seems to be the weight of authority with us. Besides a debt contracted by a copartnership is not only a debt of the firm, but a debt in substance of each individual member of the firm, and the property of the firm, and of each member, is liable for it. But the property of the firm is not liable for the separate debt of a member; only the interest of the member is liable, which is nothing until the firm debts are paid. So that, because a copartnership creditor has an exclusive claim upon the firm property, it does not follow that a separate creditor should have an exclusive claim upon the separate property. In the first place, the effect of the contract is to pledge, as a basis of credit, both partnership and private property; in the second case, the separate property alone gives the credit. And as to partnership property, there is no separate property until the debts are paid, which is liable to both partnership and separate debts by contract." Hutzler v. Phillips, 26 S. Car. 136.

In Kentucky, an exceptional rule of distribution prevails. It is there held that where partnership creditors exhaust the firm assets without being paid in full, the individual creditors must receive a like sum from the individual assets; and when this is done the individual estate remaining will be distributed between all the creditors, partnership and individual, in proportion to the amount of their respective debts. Fayette Nat. Bank v. Kenney, 79 Ky.

133.

It has been held in a number of cases that where there is no joint estate, and the firm and all the partners are insolvent, the creditor who first obtains a lien upon a fund is entitled to priority. Scull's Appeal, 19 W. N. C. (Pa.) 70; Schackelford v. Clark, 78 Mo. 491; Curtis v. Woodward, 58 Wis. 499; Sanguoit etc. Co's. Appeal (Pa.), 9 Atl. Rep. 77; Alexander v. Gorman, 15 R. I. 421; Harris v. Peabody, 73 Me. 262; Curtis v. Woodward, 58 Wis. 499; Higgins v. Rector, 47 Tex. 361; Emanuel v. Bird, 19 Ala. 596; Brock v. Bateman, 25 Ohio St. 609.

Right of Separate Creditors in the Estate of a Deceased Partner.—Partnership creditors are entitled to payment from the estate of a deceased partner only after his individual creditors are paid. Warren v. Able, 91 Ind. 107; Bake v. Smiley, 84 Ind. 212.

But a partnership creditor may demand the allowance of his claim by the probate court from the estate of a deceased partner, although the surviving partners are solvent, where the rights of the individual creditors will not be prejudiced. Doggett v. Dill, 108 Ill. 560.

Individual creditors are entitled to a preference over partnership creditors in the distribution of individual assets of one of the firm, when the firm creditors have not shown the nonexistence of firm assets at the time of the decease. D'Invellor's Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 362.

In Illinois, it is held that a partnership debt is joint and several, and the creditor has the right to elect whether he will proceed against the assets in the hands of the surviving partner, or against the estate of the deceased partner. Silverman v. Chase, 90 Ill. 37. See also ex parte Rowlandson, 3 P. W. 405; Ex parte Bond, 1 Atkyns; Morris v. Morris, 4 Gratt. (Va.) 293; Wilder v. Keeler, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 167; Bouser v. Cox, 6 Beavan 84.

In Arnold v. Hamer, 1 Freem. (Miss.) Ch. 509, the court said: "It is well settled that upon the death of one of several partners, a joint creditor has no claim for the payment of his debt out of the separate estate of the deceased partner, until the claims of the separate creditors have been first satisfied. It is true that joint creditors may come into equity to enforce their claim against the estate of a deceased partner, and equity will then consider the claim as it is considered at law, both joint and several; but this can only be done where the claims of the joint creditors gages his land to secure an antecedent partnership debt and afterwards mortgages the same land to secure an individual debt, the holder of the latter mortgage cannot invoke the principle that individual property is to be applied to individual debts.¹

XIII. DECEDENTS' ESTATES—1. In Favor of Creditors.—Before the

do not come in conflict with those of the separate creditors. In such case, the priority of the separate creditors is always preserved. Upon the death of one partner, the claim of the joint creditors survives against the surviving partner, and is extinguished at law against the estate of the deceased partner, to which they can only resort through the aid of a court of equity, where the advantage thus thrown by accident upon the separate creditors, will be preserved. And in such case it makes no difference that the surviving partner is insolvent. If the assets to be administered are purely legal, the separate creditors having acquired a priority at law, and having equal equity, that priority will be preserved. For where the equities are equal, the legal right must prevail. A different rule obtains where the assets are purely equitable, and where, therefore, both joint and separate creditors would have to seek the aid of a court of equity. In such case neither party having a legal preference, and the surviving partner being insolvent, the claimants would be decreed to take pari passu. It may, I think, be hence laid down, that in administering upon the legal assets of an insolvent partner his property should be applied to the payment of his private debts, and partnership claims should not, be reported for a pro rata dividend."

In a note to 3 Kent 65, MR. JUSTICE HOLMES says: "The exclusion of the joint creditors from the separate fund in case of the death of one partner has been thought to rest on the ground that the law cast all firm obligations on the survivor, and the partnership creditors had no claim against the estate of the deceased partner except in equity, wherefore they were postponed to the separate creditors, who had a right at law." See Harris v. Peabody, 73 Me. 262; Fellows v. Greenleaf, 43 N. H. 421; Weaver v. Weaver, 46 N. H. 188; Davis v. Howell, 33 N. J. Eq. 72; Lord v. Davendorf, 54 Wis. 491; Bridge v. McCullough, 27 Ala. 661; Evans v. Winston, 74 Ala. 349; Bush v. Clark, 127 Mass. 111; McIntire v. Yates, 104

Ill. 491; Doggett v. Dill, 108 Ill. 560; Warren v. Able, 91 Ind. 107; Huff v. Lutz, 87 Ind. 471; Miller v. Clarke, 37 Iowa 325; Thornton v. Bussey, 27 Ga. 302.

Practice.—Where a fund to be distributed is in the hands of the court under a sale of property, upon its order, belonging to an insolvent firm, and no persons are interested in it except the individual creditor under whose levy the property was sold, and petitioning firm creditors, the court cannot determine their rights without a resort to equity. Powers v. Large, 69 Wis. 621.

A creditor of a dissolved partnership being nonresident of the State may proceed at once in equity in the United States circuit court to have the assets marshalled and distributed. Fiske v. Gould, 12 Fed. Rep. 372.

Where a separate creditor of a partner levied upon and sold an undivided half of the partnership property, without bringing an action to determine said partner's interest in the property as provided by the Iowa Code, § 3054, it was held that a creditor of the firm, who subsequently levied upon the property, might maintain an action in equity to determine the conflicting claims of the two creditors. Aultman v. Fuller, 53 Iowa 60.

In Delaware, it was held on a question of distribution between individual and partnership creditors by an assignee under a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, that the court would go behind a judgment to ascertain whether the debt on which the judgment was founded was a partnership or an individual debt. Green v. Walker, 5 Del. Ch. 26.

In Virginia, it was held that the pendency of an action by a creditor to have the estate of a deceased partner administered for the benefit of the separate creditors, will not suspend an action to administer the partnership property for the benefit of the partnership creditors, the object of the two suits not being the same. Robinson v. Allen, 8 (Va.) S. E. Rep. 835. See also Ross v. Titsworth, 37 N. J. Eq. 333.

1. McIntire v. Yates, 104 Ill. 491.

passage of statutes subjecting the real estate of a decedent to his simple contract debts,¹ it was held that where the deceased left both specialty and simple contract creditors, and the former, instead of resorting to the realty which they alone could reach, proceeded against the personalty to the exclusion of the simple contract creditors who had no other fund, the latter, under the equitable doctrine of marshalling, so far as the personalty had been exhausted to satisfy the specialty debts, should stand against the realty whether devised or descended, in the place of the specialty creditors.² So where the testator dies leaving an uncompleted contract for the purchase of realty, and purchase money is afterwards paid out of the personal assets, simple contract creditors of the testator are entitled to stand in the place of the vendor with respect to his heir on the estate sold, as against the devisee of that estate.³ The same principle obviously applies where the personalty has been exhausted by the payment of mortgages.⁴ The

1. DEBTS OF DECEDENTS, section IV.

2. Wms. Exrs. (7th Eng. ed.) 1713; Sagetary v. Hyde, 1 Vern. (Eng.) 455; Neave v. Alderton, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. (Eng.) 144; Wilson v. Fielding, 2 Vern. (Eng.) 763; Galton v. Hancock, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 436; Selby v. Selby, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 341; Torr's State, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 250, 252; Story Eq., § 561 et seq.

So where the specialty debts had been paid out of the personalty, and at the time of the payment the personalty was sufficient to pay also the simple contract debts, and the executor subsequently committed a devastavit by which the personalty became insufficient for that purpose, it was held that the simple contract creditors were entitled to be paid out of the realty so far as the personalty had been applied in payment of the specialty debts. Ellard v. Cooper, 81 Ir. Ch. Rep. 376. But see Kearnan v. Fitzsimons, 3 Ridg. C. C. (Eq.) 16.

But the simple contract creditors are not entitled to have a larger fund for payment of their debts than they had originally, and hence cannot stand in the place of the specialty creditors as to the interest which would have accrued on the specialty debts if they had remained unpaid. Cradock v. Piper, 15 Sim. (Eng.) 301.

Equity Marshals the Assets by Subrogation.—"When a person may get satisfaction out of either of two funds, and another can get satisfaction only out of one of them, and they are both equally convenient and accessible to him who may get satisfaction out of either, and nothing but mere caprice governs him in making the selection then equity will restrain him to the fund not operated by the claims of the other; but if convenience and not caprice is his motive, the most that equity does is to substitute the disappointed claimant to his rights. The first is rarely done; for it is a matter of extreme delicacy to restrain a person in the exercise of a legitimate right, in favor of one who has no claim upon him by contract, and whose only connection with him arises from being interested in the same common fund; yet where there is a fraud, moral or legal, or mere caprice, he will be restrained. The latter, to wit, subordination, is very frequently done, and is the foundation of marshalling assets in favor of legatees and simple contract creditors, and applies in cases where there is neither fraud nor caprice; it is sufficient that his fund has been exhausted by one who had a double means of satisfaction." HENDERSON, J., in Jones v. Zollicoffer, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 623, 642; s. c., 11 Am. Dec. 795, 797, and note p. 799.

3. Selby v. Selby, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 336, 340. See Kimmell v. Burns, 84 Ind. 370, 374.

Of course in States in which the doctrine of vendor's lien is not recognized, simple contract creditors have no equity. See Com. v. Shelby, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 348, 353.

For a full discussion of the doctrine of vendor's lien for prepaid purchase money, see Mackreth v. Symmons, 1 Ld. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 447.

4. Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. (Eng.)

assets will not be marshalled against judgment creditors.¹ Statutes subjecting the lands of the deceased to his simple contract debts have diminished the importance of the doctrine of marshalling by enabling simple contract creditors to resort to the realty without invoking its aid;² on the other hand the same statutes, as will hereafter appear, have greatly increased the number of instances in which it will be applied in favor of legatees.

2. Marshalling in Aid of Legatees.—Legatees may invoke the aid of the equitable doctrine of marshalling against the heir or devisee where personal assets applicable to the payment of their legacies have been exhausted by a mortgagee³ or vendor holding a lien on 382; s. c., 2 Ld. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) *78; Gwynne v. Edwards, 2 Russ. (Eng.) 289, note; Lornas v. Wright, 2 My. & K. (Eng.) 769; Hales v. Cox, 32 Beav. (Eng.) 118. See Post v. Mackall, 3 Bland Ch. (Md.) 518; Debts of Decedents, § 3, pp. 256, 257.

In Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. (Eng.) 382, it was held that where a mortgagee of freehold and copyhold estates, who was also a specialty creditor, had exhausted the personal assets, simple contract creditors were entitled to stand in his place against both the freehold and copyhold estates so far as the personal estate had been taken away from them by such specialty creditor, although at the time of the decision the copyhold estates were not liable to either specialty or simple contract debts unless secured by specific liens or testamentary charge.

So covenantors, who claim under a merely voluntary covenant, have been held entitled as against devisees to stand in the place of mortgagees, who have exhausted the fund provided by the testator for the payment of debts. Lornas v. Wright, 2 My. & K. (Eng.) 769; Hales v. Cox, 32 Beav. (Eng.) 118.

In Greenwood v. Taylor, 1 R. & M. (Eng.) 185, SIR JOHN LEACH, M. R., following the English bankrupt practice, held that under the equitable doctrine of marshalling a specialty creditor, whose debt was also secured by a mortgage, could only prove under a decree in a creditor's suit for so much of the debt as the mortgaged estate did not extend to pay. But in Mason v. Boy, 2 My. & Cr. (Eng.) 448, overruling Greenwood v. Taylor, LORD COTTENHAM held that in an administration suit a mortgagee might prove his whole debt and afterwards realize his security for the deficiency.

See further upon this point Trower's Prevalence of Equity, 1-6; Davis v. Dowding, 2 Keen (Eng.) 245; Brocklehurst v. Jessop, 7 Sim. (Eng.) 438; Tipping v. Power, 1 Hare (Eng.) 410; King v. Smith, 2 Hare (Eng.) 239; Greenwood v. Firth, 2 Hare (Eng.) 241 note; Aldridge v. Westbrook, 5 Beav. (Eng.) 193; Bouser v. Cox, 6 Beav. (Eng.) 84; Lockhart v. Hardy, 9 Beav. (Eng.) 349; Armstrong v. Storer, 14 Beav. (Eng.) 535; Rome v. Young, 3 Y. & C. Exch. (Eng.) 199; Wickenden v. Payson, 6 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 210; Tuckley v. Thompson, 1 J. & H. (Eng.) 130; Cockerell v. Dickens, 3 Mo. P. C. C. (Eng.) 112; Marshall v. M'Asadey, 3 Dr. & W. (Eng.) 232; Pinchard v. Fellows, L. B., 17 Eq. (Eng.) 422.

The English Judicature Act 1875 (38 and 39 Vict., ch. 77, § 10) enacts that in the administration of the assets of any person who may die after the commencement of this act, and whose estate may prove to be insufficient for the payment in full of his debts and liabilities . . . the same rules shall prevail and be observed as to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors as may be in force for the time being under the law of bankruptcy with respect to the estates of persons adjudged bankrupt.

A devisee of mortgaged property is not entitled to exoneration out of the personal estate as against creditors. Crecy v. Pierce, 69 N. Car. 67; Moore v. Dunn, 92 N. Car. 63, 67.

1. Sharpe v. Lord Scarborough, 4 Ves. (Eng.) 538.

2. See Post v. Mackall, 3 Bland (Md.) Ch. 518.

3. Wms. Exrs. (7th Eng. ed.) 1719; Rop. Leg. (20th Am. ed.) *957-*961; Ludkins v. Leigh, Forrest (Eng.) 53; s. c., Cas. t. Talb. 54. See Rider v.

the land so descending or devised,¹ or by creditors whose debts

Wager, 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) 329, 335; Tipping v. Tipping, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 729; Howell v. Price, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 294; Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. (Eng.) 397; Wythe v. Henniker, 2 Myl. & K. (Eng.) 635; Johnson v. Child, 4 Hare (Eng.) 87; Selby v. Selby, 4 Russ. (Eng.) 341; Romilly, M. R., in Middleton v. Middleton, 15 Beav. (Eng.) 450, 453. Anon. Chan. Cas., part 2, 4; Lucy v. Gardiner, Bunb. (Eng.) 137; Mason's Estate, 1 Pars. Eq. (Pa.) 129; Mollan v. Griffith, 3 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 402, 404; Rice v. Harbison, 63 N. Y. 493. Compare Gibson v. McCormick, 10 G. & J. (Md.) 65; Mollan v. Griffith, 3 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 402, 404.

Although the natural fund for the payment of debts is the personal estate and the heir or devisee is in general entitled to have the personal estate applied in exoneration of encumbrances affecting the realty; yet the court of chancery will not permit such arrangement to take place, when it would defeat specific or general legatees of their legacies. Rop. Leg. (20th Am. ed.) *960. See Rider v. Wager, 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) 329, 335; Gonto v. Winthrop, 5 R. I. 319, 323; Mason's Estate, 1 Pars. Eq. (Pa.) 129, 132; Hoff's Appeal, 24 Pa. St. 200, 206; Thomas v. Thomas, 2 C. E. Green (N. J.) 356.

In O'Neal v. Mead, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 693, the principle is exemplified in favor of a specific legatee.

Devisee "Subject to a Mortgage."—"The rule of law is clear that a testator by devising lands expressly subject to a mortgage, does not thereby declare any intention that the devisee shall take cum onere, as against the testator's personal estate. (See Wills.) It is equally well settled that the amount of a testator's general personal estate is not a circumstance from which any inference can be legitimately drawn as to the construction of his will. Yet if the amount of a testator's personal estate be insufficient for the payment of his debts and legacies, the court discovers an intention on the part of the testator, that the devisee of his real estate, subject to a mortgage, should take it cum onere. If the court in that state of circumstances, had decided upon apportioning the deficiency between the pecuniary legatees and the devisee of the land, a reason might have been found for the determination, in the consideration that the court was dividing a burthen which the caprice of the creditor might otherwise have thrown wholly upon either. But that is not the determination of the court. The court is active in throwing the burthen wholly upon the devisee of the land, upon the party apparently and upon the ordinary principles of the court entitled to be exonerated. And it is remarkable that in Forrester v. Lord Leigh (Amb. 171), the possibility of this very circumstance is stated as the reason why the court will not in favor of a pecuniary legatee marshal the assets by compelling a bond creditor to proceed against devised estates." WIGRAM, V. C., in Johnson v. Child, 4 Hare (Eng.) 87, 94.

Leaseholds.—On the same principle, if a leasehold estate subject to a mortgage be specifically bequeathed, the specific legatee must take the legacy cum onere, if the testator's personal estate be insufficient for the payment of his debts and legacies; and consequently the pecuniary legatees are entitled to have the assets marshalled and to stand in the place of the mortgagee as against the leasehold estate. Johnson v. Child, 4 Hare (Eng.) 87.

1. Sproule v. Prior, 8 Sim. (Eng.) 189; Birds v. Askey, 24 Beav. (Eng.) 618; Lord Lilford v. Powys Keck, L. R., 1 Eq. (Eng.) 347; Barnwell v. Ironmonger, 1 Dr. & Sm. (Eng.) 255.

In Wythe v. Henniker, 2 My. & K. (Eng.) 635, SIR J. LEACH, M. R., held that pecuniary legatees could not stand in the place of the vendor upon land devised, although if the estate purchased had descended they would have been so entitled. This distinction was rejected by LORD ROMILLY in Birds v. Askey, 24 Beav. (Eng.) 618, and in Lord Lilford v. Powys Keck, 1 L. R., 1 Eq. (Eng.) 347, and by KINDERSLEY, V. C., in Barnwell v. Ironmonger, 1 Dr. & Sm. (Eng.) 255.

In Pennsylvania, the doctrine of vendor's lien is not recognized. Commonwealth v. Shelby, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 348, 353.

Effect of Legislation.—Under 17 and 18 Vict., ch. 113 (Locke King's Act) and its amending acts, 30 and 31 Vict., ch. 69, and 40 and 41 Vict., ch. 34, lands or hereditaments upon which there is a mortgage or vendor's lien, are primarily chargeable therewith, so that the necessity for marshalling does not arise. The corresponding New York statute applies only to the lien of a mortgage.

have been charged on the realty.¹ So, at common law, where a specialty creditor, who had a general lien on the real estate, as a creditor by bond in which the testator bound himself and his heirs, received payment out of the personalty and thereby exhausted it, so as to leave nothing for the payment of legacies, a general legatee was entitled to stand in the place of such

3 Banks & Bro. (7th ed.), p. 2205, § 4; Wright v. Holbrook, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 516, 522; s. c., 32 N. Y. 587. See, as to construction, Harrington v. True, L. R., 33 Ch. D. (Eng.) 195; Sackville v. Smyth, L. R., 17 Eq. (Eng.) 153; Brownson v. Lawrence, L. R., 6 Eq. (Eng.) 1, 6; Gibbons v. Eyden, L. R., 7 Eq. (Eng.) 371; Rice v. Harbeson, 2 T. & C. (Eng.) 4, 6; Re Gray, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 455; Erwin v. Loper, 43 N. Y. 521, 524; Taylor v. Wendel, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 324, 330; Rogers v. Rogers, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 188; note to 1 Lead. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 183.

In California, Kansas and Missouri, "it is provided that the encumbrance of any land devised shall not be deemed a revocation of the devise, but the devisee shall take the same subject to the encumbrance.

These words on first impression might seem to imply that the onus of discharging the encumbrance is thereby thrown upon the land. No adjudications of the point have come to the knowledge of the writer; but a number of considerations suggest that the legislature meant simply to abrogate the rule existing at common law, whereby an encumbrance of lands previously devised worked a revocation of such devise." Woerner's Am. L. of Adm., § 407, p. 1112, n. (6). See Woodworth's Estate 31 Cal. 595, 607. A similar statute in Indiana is followed by explicit directions out of what funds such mortgage is payable.

Indiana Revised Statutes, §§ 2564, 2573.

1. Foster v. Cook, 3 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 347; Knight Bruce, V. C., in Tombs v. Roch, 2 Coll. (Eng.) 407; Patterson v. Scott, 2 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 531; Surtees v. Calkin, 19 Beav. (Eng.) 406; Hoover v. Hoover, 5 Pa. St. 351, 357.

Thus if land be devised for or made subject to the payment of debts, assets will be marshalled in favor of legatees, or annuitants who will stand in the place of the creditors who may have been satisfied out of the personal assets. Foster v. Cook, 3 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 347; Bradford v. Foley, 3 Bro. C. C. (Eng.)

351, n.; Webster v. Alsop, 3 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 352, n.; Arnold v. Chapman, 1 Ves. (Eng.) 110; Norman v. Morrell, 4 Ves. (Eng.) 769; Hanby v. Fisher, 2 Coll. (Eng.) 515; Rickard v. Barrett, 3 K. & J. (Eng.) 289; Patterson v. Scott, 1 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 531.

"The legatees not being charged with the payment of debts while the real estate devised is so charged, the legatees will be regarded as more the objects of the testator's bounty than the devisee; and where the personal estate is not sufficient to pay both the creditors and the legatees, the latter will be entitled to charge the real estate devised so far as the personal estate has been applied in payment of debts. Foster v. Cook, 3 Bro. C. C. 347; Lutkins v. Cas. temp. Talb. 53; Forrester v. Leigh, Amb. R. 171; Norman v. Morrell, 4 Ves. 769; Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. 381, 396; Livingston v. Livingston, 3 Johns. Ch. 148, 153. Nor is there any distinction in this regard between specific legatees and pecuniary legatees, the right to marshal the assets in the case supposed being affirmed equally in favor of the latter as of the former. Forrester v. Leigh, Amb. 171; Wythe v. Henniker, 2 Myl. & K. 365." See J. in Elliott v. Carter, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 541, 550.

This language, if confined to cases in which the land is charged in exoneration of the personalty, is perfectly intelligible, but unfortunately for logical consistency the doctrine is equally applicable to cases in which the land is merely charged in aid of the personalty. Surtees v. Parkin, 19 Beav. (Eng.) 408; Paterson v. Scott, 1 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 535.

The effect of the doctrine so applied appears paradoxical. Thus, suppose testator charges his realty with his debts in aid of his personalty, and bequeaths legacies to the amount of £500 and dies leaving £500 personal estate, real estate of the value of £500, and debts £500. The consequence would be that though the personal estate is the primary fund for the payment of debts, and though the testator has manifested no intention to relieve it from its primary liabilities specialty creditor, as against real assets descended,¹ but not (LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section IV, 4); yet by the application of the doctrine of marshalling, the debts would be primarily thrown upon the realty, so that in the result the pecuniary legatees would be paid in full, and the devisees get nothing. See note to Surtees v. Parkin, 19 Beav. (Eng.) 408.

It is immaterial whether there is an express trust or only a charge; nor has the law upon the subject been affected by the passage of statute 3 and 4 W. IV, ch. 104, by which real estate was made liable to simple contract debts. Rickard v. Barrett, 3 K. & J. (Eng.) 289.

For a decree where estates devised, charged with debts and an annuity, were marshalled in favor of annuities and legacies so charged, see Kerrison v. Earl of Stradbroke 2 Set. Dec. (Eng.) 985, 986.

Whether a general charge binds lands specifically devised, LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section IV, 7.

1. Wms. Exrs. (7th Eng. ed.) 1717; Rop. Leg. (2nd Am. ed.) 969, 970, 971; Bowman v. Reeve, Pre. Ch. (Eng.) 578; Lutkins v. Leigh, Cas. temp. Talb. (Eng.) 54; Hanby v. Roberts, Amb. (Eng.) 128; s. c., Dick. (Eng.) 105; Binns v. Nicholls, L. R., 2 Eq. (Eng.) 256. See Culpepper v. Ashton, 2 Ch. Cas. (Eng.) 117; Tipping v. Tipping, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 734; Lucy v. Gardner, Bunb. (Eng.) 137; Herne v. Mayrick, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 202; Robards v. Wortham, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 173; S. P. 22 Am. Dec. 738; Chase v. Lockerman, 11 G. & J. (Md.) 185, 186; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 277, 283, 284.

"In the cases of legatees against assets descended a legatee has not so strong a claim to this species of equity as a creditor. But the mere bounty of the testator enables the legatee to call for this species of marshalling; that if those creditors having a right to the real estate descended will go to the personal estate, the choice of the creditors shall not determine whether the legatees shall be paid or not. That in some measure is upon the doctrine of assets; but with relation to the fact of a double fund, both are in law liable to the creditors; and therefore by making the option to go against the one they shall not disappoint another person who the testator intended should be satisfied." LORD ELDON, in Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. 382, 396. s. c., 2 Ld. Cas. Eq. (2nd Am. ed.) 228, 237.

Lands in Foreign Jurisdiction.—Land in a foreign country is governed by the lex loci rei sitæ, and is only liable to such debts as would be cast upon it by the law of that country. Hence legatees cannot marshal the assets against lands descended which lie in a foreign jurisdiction unless by the law of that jurisdiction their right to do so would be recognized. Thus where a testator domiciled in England died possessed of personal estate and also of real estates in Scotland, and the Scotch estates descended to the heir at law, and the personal estate was exhausted in payment of the debts, it was held that the Scotch law threw the debts primarily on the personalty, there could be no marshalling in an English court against the Scotch heir in favor of pecuniary legatees. "The legatees ask that by virtue of the English doctrine of equity applicable to the administration of English real estates descended, where personal legatees would be disappointed by the payment of creditors out of their fund, these legatees may be declared entitled to acquire the rights of creditors against the Scotch real estate. It is clear that in Scotland they would have no such right, and to me it seems equally clear that unless they have such a right in Scotland, the law of England cannot give it to them. It is admitted, as I understand, that the burthen of liability to debts, so far as relates to real estate, can only be created by the lex loci rei sitæ; but it is suggested that the burthen may be laid on real estate on which it is not imposed by the lex loci rei sitæ by an indirect equity in favor of the legatees, because the creditors who have been paid might have pursued their own rights against the real estate without waiting, in the first instance, to see whether there was personal estate or not. It seems quite impossible that this can be correct, because, in the first place, as against the real estate in Scotland the courts of England have no jurisdiction at all. Any jurisdiction which they can exercise as to the real estate is Scotland, can only be through the medium of some personal equity attaching to the owner in Scotland of that real estate, who in this case is the Scotch heir. What is that personal equity? There is no fiduciary relation. What right have these legatees, upon the footing of personal equity, to say that the heir shall not against real assets devised,¹ although devised to the heir taking as devisee.² Since the passage of statutes subjecting real estate to liability to simple contract debts,³ it would seem clear upon principle that if a simple contract creditor should receive satisfaction out of the personal estate and thereby exhaust it, the general legatees would be entitled to stand in his place against lands descended,⁴ enjoy the Scotch real estate as the law of Scotland gives it to him, or that any burthen shall directly or indirectly be thrown upon that real estate in their own favor, which would not be imposed by the law of Scotland? It seems to me quite clear that this court cannot found any such equity upon the accident of this heir at law being before it as a party to the suit. The equity must be founded upon some higher principle. The fallacy which pervaded the whole of Mr. Anderson's [counsel for legatee] argument was this, that he assumed that the Scotch estate was properly brought into this court as the forum of administration. But without first showing what this court has to do, with respect to Scotch real estate, and why it ought to be done, the proposition is not made out. There are, in point of fact, no debts to be paid out of the Scotch real estate; there are no trusts to be executed as to the Scotch real estate; there is no contract to be enforced as to the Scotch real estate; and unless this point is settled in Mr. Anderson's favor, that the indirect burthen is to be thrown upon the real estate in Scotland in favor of these legatees, which is the very matter in controversy, it is not here in the proper forms of administration." LORD SELBORNE in Harrison v. Harrison, L. R., 8 Ch. App. (Eng.) 342, 349, 350. See also Brown v. Bashford, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 67; 52 Am. Dec. 559; Salmond v. Price, 13 Ohio St. 368; 42 Am. Dec. 204; McLawrin v. Salmons, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 96; 52 Am. Dec. 563; Post v. Mackall, 3 Bland (Md.) Ch. 486, 515. But see Rice v. Harbeson, 63 N. Y. 493.

DEBTS OF DECEDENTS, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc., section III, pp. 254, 255.

1. Rop. Leg. (2nd Am. ed.) 973; Hanby v. Roberts, Amb. (Eng.) 128; s. c., Dick, (Eng.) 105; Scott v. Scott, Amb. (Eng.) 383; s. c., 1 Eden (Eng.) 458; Keeling v. Brown, 5 Ves. (Eng.) 359; Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. (Eng.) 397; Clifton v. Burt, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 678.

If one devises his real estate, and gives general pecuniary legacies not charged on that real estate, and dies, leaving specialty debts, and the specialty creditors exhaust the personal estate, the legatees shall not stand in their place and come on the realty, because it was the intention of the testator that the devisees should have the real estate as well as the legatees be paid. Hanby v. Roberts, Amb. (Eng.) 127, 128.

Nor will a specific legatee be allowed to stand in the place of specialty creditors as against real estate devised. Hashwood v. Pope, 3 P. Wms. (Eng.) 324, 5th resolution. Compare Skidmore v. Romaine, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 122, 132.

Nor a residuary devisee in States in which such devise is specific. But specific and demonstrative legacies and devisees, whether specific or residuary, contribute pro rata. Nor for the same reason can a pecuniary legatee in such States marshal the assets against residuary devisees, unless the land is charged with debts or legacies, or subject to a specific lien. Nor can such pecuniary legatee demand contribution. LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section V, 3.

2. Wms. Exrs. (7th Eng. ed.) 1717. See Biedesman v. Seymour, 3 Beav. (Eng.) 368; Scott v. Scott, Amb. (Eng.) 383; Chaplin v. Lerond, 5 M. & S. (Eng.) 114. See Ellis v. Page, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 161.

Under 3 and 4 Wm. IV, ch. 106, § 3, an heir to whom lands are devised by his ancestor takes as devisee for all purposes. Strickland v. Strickland, 10 Sim. (Eng.) 374.

For further discussion see LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section V, 3, note.

3. DEBTS OF DECEDENTS, section IV.

4. Wms. Exrs. (7th Eng. ed.) 1717. See Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 620 627; Knight Bruce, V. C., in Tombs v. Roch, 2 Coll. (Eng.) 490, 498, 499; Hoover v. Hoover, 5 Pa. St. 351, 357; Lightfoot v. Lightfoot, 27 Ala. 351; Warley v. Warley, Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 397; Hope v. Wilkinson, 14 Lea (Tenn.)

but not lands devised.¹ Where the general personal estate is exhausted, by the payment of one or more legacies charged on the 21. See Brown v. James, 3 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 24; Dunlap v. Dunlap, 4 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 305.

If creditors seize and apply specific legacies to the satisfaction of their claims, the legatees are entitled to stand in the place of such creditors against lands descended. Trumbo v. Sorrencey, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 284; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 103; Com. v. Shelby, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 348.

So where the heir is in by descent and not by purchase, although the estate be devised. Ellis v. Page, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 161.

In some cases the right of legatees to marshal the assets under such statutes has been denied substantially for the following reasons: "A specialty creditor has a common law right to bring suit against the heir, and hence, if, instead of adopting this course, he exhausts the personal estate, the specific legatees may claim the benefit of the principle on which a court of equity marshals assets. Such is not the position of a simple contract creditor. He has no direct remedy against the land, and can only have recourse to it in the event of the insufficiency of the personal estate. Such a decree would be at variance with the rule that a creditor shall not be satisfied at the expense of one who is interested in a fund which is secondarily liable for the sake of leaving the primary fund open to another claimant. This is conceded as regards creditors, and should apply a fortiori to a legatee, whose claim depends exclusively on the bounty of the testator." Note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 328. See Alston v. Munford, 1 Brock. (U. S.) 266; Chase v. Lockerman, 11 G. & J. (Md.) 185, 186; 35 Am. Dec. 277; Dugan v. Hollins, 4 Md. Ch. 139; Elliott v. Carter, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 541; Robards v. Wortham, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 173; 22 Am. Dec. 738; Miller v. Harwell, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 104; Miller v. Johnson, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 194. Compare Thomas v. Thomas, 2 C. E. Green (N. J.) 356.

Had such a course of reasoning been adopted in Pennsylvania, where the right of a specialty creditor to bring suit against the heir has become obsolete, and the personalty is the primary fund for the payment of all debts, the assets could not be marshalled in any case in aid of a legatee. Note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 329, 330; citing Torr's Estate, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 250.

1. Note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 327; citing Livingston v. Livingston, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 148, 158; Hennes v. Wood, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 478; Woodworth's Estate, 31 Cal. 595. See also Hoover v. Hoover, 5 Pa. St. 351, 357; Hope v. Wilkinson, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 21; Graham v. Dickinson, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 169, 181; Wallace v. Wallace, 21 N. H. 149.

"Where the estate is neither charged with debts nor legacies, nor subject to a specific lien, and it does not descend but is devised to a stranger or the heir, a chancellor refuses to marshal the assets in favor of a general legatee, because there is no reason to think he was as near the testator's heart as was the specific devisee." Gibson, C. J., in Barklay's Estate, Loomis's Appeal, 10 Pa. St. 387, 389.

But in States in which a residuary or general devise has ceased to be specific, there would seem to be no reason why general pecuniary legatees should not be allowed to marshal the assets as against a residuary devisee. See LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section V, 3; Blaney v. Blaney, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 107. Compare Woodworth's Estate, 31 Cal. 595.

In Pennsylvania, it has been said, "the residuary devisee and legatee of the whole estate would seem to stand precisely in the condition of the heir at law upon whom a part of the estate has been allowed to descend; and it seems that he cannot take so long as there are general legacies remaining unsatisfied." Lowrie, J., in McGlaughlin v. McGlaughlin, 24 Pa. St. 20, 23.

If this position is correct, a residuary devise is no longer specific, and lapsed devises should pass ipso facto under the residuary clause independently of any further legislation. But in Massey's Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 470, it was held that a lapsed devise went to the heir, and to carry such devise to the residuary devisee required the passage of the act of June 4th, 1879, P. L. 88. Hence it would seem that the dictum of Justice Lowrie must be considered virtually overruled by Massey's Appeal, and a residuary devise in Pennsylvania is land, general legacies not so charged are entitled to stand in their place as a charge upon the land.¹

But where the charge fails in consequence of an event happening subsequent to the death of the testator, as the death of the legatee before the time of payment, the court will not marshal the assets in favor of the legatee's representative so as to turn such legacy upon the personal estate, in which case it would be vested and transmissible, whereas; as against the real estate, it still specific. See LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section II, 1, f.

It has also been held in this State that by virtue of the liability of the land to simple contract debts the testator is to be presumed to have made his will in contemplation of such liability, and hence to have devised his lands subject to a general charge. Nevertheless, the doctrine is not carried so far as to allow legatees to marshal the assets against lands devised unless there is an expression of intention to charge the devised lands with his debts, in which case assets will be marshalled in favor of specific and pecuniary legatees. BELL, J., in Hoover v. Hoover, 5 Pa. St. 351, 357. See Walker's Estate, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 229, 241; Com. v. Selby, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 348, 353; Scott's Intestate Law (2nd ed.) 765.

Effect of the Doctrine Upon the Order of Application of Assets.—The effect of marshalling the assets in favor of legatees against lands descended is to make such lands liable to the payment of debts before general pecuniary legacies. This applies only to the mutual relations of the heir and legatees, and does not affect the mode by which the creditors must proceed to enforce their obligations against the land, since under the statutory procedure in nearly all the States the exhaustion or insufficiency of the personalty is essential to an order for the sale of the realty. DEBTS OF DECEDENTS, sections III and IV. See also Hope v. Wikinson, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 21, 23-29; Mollan v. Griffith, 3 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 404; Butts v. Genung, 5 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 254; Gere v. Clarke, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 350; Parsons v. Bowne, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 354; Roe v. Swezey, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 247; Stuart v. Kisson, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 271, 282; Blossom v. Hatfield, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 275; Selover v. Coe, 63 N. Y. 438; Laughlin v. Har. 89 Ill. 119; Hoffman v. Wilding 85 Ill. 453; McLean v. McBean, 74 Ill. 134; Bishop v. O'Conner, 69 Ill. 431; Ryan v. Jones, 15 Ill.

1; Crocker v. Smith, 10 Ill. App. 376; Laidley v. Kline, 8 W. Va. 218, 229; Gibson v. McCormick, 10 G. & J. (Md.) 65, 66; McCloud v. Roberts, 4 H. & M. (Va.) 443. Compare Ticknor v. Davies, 14 N. H. 272; Lucy v. Lucy, 55 N. H. 9; Newby v. Skinner, 1 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) Eq. 488; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 397; Hudgin v. Hudgin, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 320; McGik v. Wells, 54 Miss. 137, 149; KENT, C. J., in Lupton v. Lupton, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 614, 628; Rogers v. Rogers, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 503; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 716; Skidmore v. Romaine, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 122, 152; Bray v. Neill, 21 N. J. Eq. 343, 350; Gross v. Howard, 52 Me. 192.

1. Wms. Exrs. (7th Eng. ed.) 1720; Rop. Leg. (2nd Am. ed.) 953; Hanby v. Roberts, Amb. (Eng.) 127; Masters v. Masters, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 421; Bligh v. Lord Darnley, 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) 619; Bonner v. Bonner, 13 Ves. (Eng.) 379; s. c., 2 My. & Cr. (Eng.) 700; Scales v. Collins, 9 Hare (Eng.) 656; Sellon v. Watts, 9 Week. Rep. (Eng.) 847; Set. Dec. (4th ed.) 987. See Patterson v. Scott, 1 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 531; BELL, C. J., in Perry v. Hale, 44 N. H. 363, 367; Lockwood v. Stockholm, 11 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 87; Cryder's Appeal, 11 Pa. St. 72. Compare Com. v. Shelby, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 348, 354; Elliott v. Carter, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 541, 550.

Though a legatee may elect, or may be compelled to resort to the personal estate as the fund first liable to the payment of the legacy, yet the legatees of the personal estate thus applied will in equity be entitled to stand in the place of the legatees, whose legacies were charged on the land as against the land itself. Adams Equity, 263, note.

"The principle of the court is this: that where one legatee has two funds to resort to for the payment of his legacy in full, and the legatee has only the personal estate, or one fund to resort to, the court presumes that the intenwould sink by the death of the legatee.¹ Real assets will not be marshalled in aid of a residuary legatee, although the land be subject to a mortgage or other specific lien,² nor on behalf of a charity, whether the bequest is general or residuary, since to do so would in effect evade the statutes of mortmain.³ In jurisdictions in which aliens cannot hold real estate, courts of equity tion of the testator is that all should be paid in full, and therefore marshals the assets, throwing the particular legacy upon the real estate." There is no distinction in the application of the principle between the case of a class of legacies and the case of individual legacies. Scales v. Collins, 9 Hare (Eng.) 656, 658.

1. Rop. Leg. (2nd Am. ed.) *979; note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (6th Eng. ed.) 181; Prowse v. Abington, 1 Atk. (Eng.) 482. See Pearce v. Loman, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 135. Compare Tombs v. Roch, 2 Coll. (Eng.) 504.

"There is a singularity in the doctrine as it now stands, that as far as it affects one fund it is good; as far as it affects the other, bad; but it would be still more singular if it shall sink in one case and not in the other, but the land making good the personal estate shall be charged." LORD ROSELYN in Pearce v. Loman, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 135, 139.

2. Rider v. McGee, 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) 328, 335. See LORD LOUGHBOROUGH, in Hamilton v. Worley, 4 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 204; Ruston v. Ruston, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 54, 63; Walker's Estate, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 229. Chase v. Lockerman, 11 G. & J. (Md.) 185, 203.

The very terms of such a bequest imply that the legatee is to take only what remains after debts and legacies are satisfied. So where the bequest is of the whole personal estate, although not in terms residuary unless there are words of demonstration or description to render it specific or unless the land is charged in exoneration of the personality. Howe v. Lord Dartmouth, 7 Ves. (Eng.) 137; Ancaster v. Mayer, 1 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 454; Keiling v. Brown, 5 Ves. (Eng.) 359. See Chase v. Lockerman, 11 G. & J. (Md.) 185, 203; Morris v. Mowatt, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 586, 591. As to whether a bequest is specific or residuary, see LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section II, 1, e.

As to what will exonerate the personality, see LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section IV, 4. See further Waineright v.

Bendlowes, 2 Vern. (Eng.) 718; Adams v. Meyrick, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. (Eng.) 271; Webb v. Jones, 2 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 60; Bardwell v. Bardwell, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 19. See Appellant, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 285. Spraker v. VanAlstyne, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 200.

M'Fait's Appeal, 8 Pa. St. 290.

3. Rop. Leg. (2nd Am. ed.) *981; Wms. Exrs. (7th Eng. ed.) 1720. Mogg v. Hodges, 2 Ves. Sr. (Eng.) 52; Att. Gen. v. Tyndall, Amb. (Eng.) 614; Foster v. Blagden, Amb. (Eng.) 704; Hillegard v. Taylor, Amb. (Eng.) 713; Makeham v. Hooper, 4 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 153; Foy v. Foy, 1 Cox (Eng.) 163; Ridges v. Morrison, 1 Cox (Eng.) 180; Att. Gen. v. Hurst, 2 Cox (Eng.) 364; Hobson v. Blackburn, 1 Keen (Eng.) 273; Williams v. Kershaw, 1 Keen (Eng.) 274, n.; Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. (Eng.) 581; Sturge v. Dimsdale, 6 Beav. (Eng.) 462.

Thus, if a testator gave his real and personal estate, consisting of personality savoring of realty, as leaseholds and mortgage securities, and also pure personality, to trustees upon trust to sell and pay his debts and legacies, and bequeathed the residue to a charity, equity will not marshal the assets by throwing the debts and ordinary legacies upon the proceeds of the real estate and the personality savoring of the realty in order to leave the pure personality for the charity. Note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (6th Eng. ed.) 186; citing Mogg v. Hodges, 2 Ves. (Eng.) 52; Att. Gen. v. Tyndall, 2 Eden (Eng.) 257; s. c., Amb. 614; Foster v. Blagden, Amb. (Eng.) 704; Middleton v. Spicer, 1 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 201; Att. Gen. v. Earl of Winchelsea, 3 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 373; Makeham v. Hooper, 4 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 153; Crosbie v. Earl of Liverpool, 1 R. M. (Eng.) 761, n.; Fowdrin v. Gowdey, 2 L. R. Eq. (Eng.) 284; Wigg v. Mitchell, 14 L. R. Eq. (Eng.) 92.

"The preceding authorities clearly settle the rule that the court of chancery will not marshal the assets so as to throw the debts upon the real estate, and have the personal a clear fund for the charity; but it will be proper in this place to notice a rule of the court in the administration of the general residue bequeathed to a charity, and consisting partly of mortgage securities and leaseholds which savored of the realty and partly of assets purely personal. In such case the bequest of the residue, so far as regards the mortgage securities and leaseholds, fails, as being within the statute of mortmain, and lapsed for the benefit of the next of kin. As between such next of kin who are considered in the light of legatees of the mortgage securities and leaseholds, and the charities which have an indisputable right as legatees of the other personalty not partaking of the nature of real estate, the court will not allow a creditor or general legatee to resort exclusively to the assets purely personal, to the disappointment of the charity, but will direct a ratable contribution by the charities and next of kin, in proportion to their respective interests, for the satisfaction of the debts and legacies. In the exercise of this branch of equitable jurisdiction, the court adopts a rule well established by the cases on marshalling, namely: that a person having two funds to resort to for the satisfaction of his demand shall not, by his option of resorting to either of those funds, determine whether one of two parties whose equities are equal shall be paid or not." Rop. Leg. (2d Am. ed.) *985. See Theobald on Wills (2nd ed.) 619. Att. Gen. v. Winchelsea, 3 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 373; s. c., Nom. Att. Gen. v. Hurst, 2 Cox (Eng.) 364; Curtis v. Hutton, 14 Ves. (Eng.) 537; Crosbie v. Mayor of Liverpool, 1 R. & M. (Eng.) 761, n.; Howse v. Chapman, 4 Ves. (Eng.) 542; Paice v. Archbishop of Canterbury, 14 Ves. (Eng.) 372, 1 R. & M. (Eng.) 759, note; Blann v. Bell, L. R., 7 Ch. D. (Eng.) 382. Compare Williams v. Kershaw, 1 Keene (Eng.) 274, n. Hobson v. Blackburn, 1 Keene (Eng.) 274, n. Hobson v. Blackburn, 1 Keene (Eng.) 273; Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. (Eng.) 581; Sturge v. Dimsdale, 6 Beav. (Eng.) 462.

So if a simple pecuniary legacy is given out of two sorts of personalty, there must be an abatement in the proportion of the mixed to the pure personalty. Ridges v. Morrison, 1 Cox (Eng.) 180; Walker v. Childs, Amb. (Eng.) 524; Att. Gen. v. Tyndall, Amb. (Eng.) 624; s. c., 2 Eden (Eng.) 207; Foster v. Blaten, Amb. (Eng.)

704; Wakeham v. Hooper, 4 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 153; Hobson v. Blackburn, 1 Keene (Eng.) 273. See also Williams v. Kershaw, 1 Keene (Eng.) 274, n; Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. (Eng.) 581.

Or, as LORD COTTENHAM has expressed himself: "The rule of the court adopted in all such cases is, to appropriate the fund as if no legal objection existed as to applying any part of it to the charity legacies, then holding so much of the charity legacies to fail as would in that way be paid out of the prohibited fund." Williams v. Kershaw, 1 Keene (Eng.) 275, n. See also Waite v. Webb, 6 Mad. (Eng.) 71, Johnson v. Lord Harrowby, Johns. (Eng.) 425; Janne v. Att. Gen., 3 Giff. (Eng.) 308; Scott v. Forrestall, 13 W. R. (Eng.) 37. Compare Baker v. Sutton, 1 Keene (Eng.) 224; Hobson v. Blackburn, 1 Keene 273.

And this apportionment should be made according to the respective values of the pure and impure personalty at the testator's death. Colvert v. Armitage, New Rep. (Eng.) 60. Overruling on this point Robinson, the Governor of London Hospital, 10 Hare (Eng.) 19; Luckcraft v. Pridham, 48 L. J. Ch. (Eng.) 636, 639; Brook v. Badley, 3 L. R., Ch. App. (Eng.) 675.

Note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (6th Eng. ed.) 186, 187.

"The reader will observe the distinction between the rule of contribution established by the class of cases just discussed and the case of marshalling. By marshalling the court would indirectly allow the charge upon the real estate for the benefit of a charity, contrary to the statute of mortmain, and the practical result would, in most cases, be that of excluding the next of kin wholly, or in part, from that portion of the residue which falls by the statute and to which by law they have an equal right with legatees, to whom legacies are effectually given. On the other hand, the court, in adopting the rule of contribution before stated, considers the equities of the next of kin and the charities equal, and therefore directs a ratable contribution from each toward the payment of debts and legacies." Rop. Leg. (2nd Am. ed.) *989.

Effect of Direction to Pay Legacies to Charities Out of Pure Personalty.—Although equity will not marshal the assets for a charity, the testator may in effect do so himself by directing the charitable legacies to be paid exclusively out of his pure personality. In such case the charitable bequests partake of the nature of demonstrative legacies in that the pure personality is the fund, in the first instance, applicable to their payment; on the other hand, they differ from demonstrative legacies to individuals since if the particular fund fails they cannot (under the Mortmain act, 9 Geo. II, ch. 36) be paid out of the personality savoring of realty. In such case the court may with perfect propriety carry out the intention provided the personality savoring of realty is sufficient to pay the legacies to individuals, and the will does not purport to make the legacies to individuals payable out of the pure personality as well as out of the personality savoring of realty. "Where there is no direction as to the payment of any legacy out of a particular fund, it may be admitted, for the purpose of the present question, that the different legacies may fairly be regarded as intended to be paid out of the different funds ratably. Roberts v. Walker, 2 Y. & C. (Eng.) 50. And where there is a deficiency of personality savoring of realty to pay the legacies to individuals, then, in furtherance of the general or paramount intention that all the legacies should be paid, the legacies to individuals may be paid partly out of the pure personality, even although the legacies to charities may be expressly made payable out of the pure personality; and this will more especially be the case where the will purports to make the legacies to individuals also payable out of the pure personality as well as out of the personality savoring of realty, as in The Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. (Eng.) 58. Where, however, the testator expressly directs charitable legacies to be paid exclusively out of his pure personality, and the personality savoring of realty is sufficient for the payment of the legacies to individuals; and the will does not purport to make those legacies payable out of the pure personality as well as out of the personality savoring of realty, and the pure personality is not sufficient or only sufficient for the payment of the charitable legacies, then, it appears to me, that to direct that the legacies to individuals should be paid partly out of the pure personality, to the partial defeasance of the charitable legacies, would be a complete and unjustifiable invasion of the rule that charities are favored in law, and an utter violation of the general or paramount intention of the testator as to the payment itself, and probably, also, of the particular or subordinate intention as to the mode of payment.

"As regards the rule that charities are favored in law, it cannot be reasonably contended for one moment that an exception to this rule is called for in the present case, in order to prevent the mischiefs intended to be guarded against by the statute of mortmain. The charitable legacies are expressly made payable out of pure personality, and no legacy of pure personality, however large, however unjust towards relations who have the strongest moral claims on the testator, however 'languishing' or near death the testator may be at the time of making his will, is contrary to the provisions of the statute of Mortmain, for that statute does not affect to prohibit dispositions of pure personality at all. The cases in which the court has refused to marshal assets have, in truth, nothing whatever to do with the present case. In those cases, a testator had affected to do what he could not lawfully do; he had attempted to make charitable bequests payable wholly or partly out of real estate or personality savoring of realty, and the court refused to marshal his assets in favor of the charities, and thereby caused the legacies to be paid in a different way from that which he intended. But in the present case the testator has himself marshalled or arranged his assets by directing the charitable legacies to be paid exclusively out of the pure personality, and there can be no reasonable doubt of the lawfulness of his intention. He gives charitable legacies out of his pure personality; it cannot be said that it would have been a contravention of the Mortmain act if he had merely made charitable bequests out of the pure personality and had made no other bequests, and it can make no difference that he happens to have left other legacies. It may, however, be said that if the charitable legacies be allowed to exhaust the whole of the pure personality, the diminution of personality savoring of realty caused by the payment thereof of legacies to individuals is indirectly occasioned by the charitable legacies. Now, this argument, if it proved anything, would prove too much, for it would prove that the legacies to individuals ought to be entirely paid out of the pure personality so far as it would extend, rather than out of personality savoring of realty, and that will not marshal the assets on their behalf any more than for the charitable legacies ought to take no part of the pure personality until after the other legacies were satisfied; but that would never be contended. And again, this argument is founded on mere conjecture, for non constat, but that the testator, if he had not given legacies to charities, would have given as much more to individuals, so that the parties interested in the personality savoring of realty after payment of legacies would take no more than if the charitable legacies had not been given, and therefore it cannot be said with any certainty that by allowing the charitable legacies to exhaust the pure personality the parties interested in the personality savoring of realty are injured by the bequests being made in favor of charities, for they would equally have been injured if additional bequests had been made in favor of individuals."

LORD TRURO, in Robinson v. Geldard, 3 Mac. & G. (Eng.) 735, 746, 749; approved by LORD CRANWORTH, in Tempest v. Tempest, 7 De G., M. & G. (Eng.) 470, 474, and LORD SELWYN, Ch. J., in Beaumont v. Oliveiga, L. R., 4 Ch. App. (Eng.) 309, 316. See Williams on Personal Property (5th ed.) *321. See, however, The Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. (Eng.) 581; s. c., 1 New Rep., H. L. (Eng.) 452; McKisson v. Cockill, 32 L. J., N. S. Ch. (Eng.) 753; s. c., 3 De G., J. & S. (Eng.) 622; Ligg v. Nicholl, L. R., 14 Eq. (Eng.) 92; Wills v. Bonne, 9 L. R., 16 Eq. (Eng.) 487; Miles v. Harrison, L. R., 9 Ch. App. (Eng.) 316; In re Pitt, Lacy v. Stone, Week. Notes (Eng.) (March 21st, 1885), p. 61, n.; Gaskin v. Rogers, L. R., 2 Eq. (Eng.) 284.

A bequest of a residue of pure and impure personality to trustees upon trust to divide the same among such charities in England as they should think proper, has been held equivalent to a direction to the trustees in effect to marshal the residue by applying the impure personality to charities exempt from the Mortmain act, and the pure personality to other charities. Lewis v. Allenky, L. R., 10 Eq. (Eng.) 668.

Where testator by his will charged his real estate with the payment of his debts and legacies, except three legacies given for charitable purposes, which three legacies he directed to be paid out of his personal estate, LORD WORTHINGTON, apparently upon analogous principles, decreed the charity legacies to stand in the place of the specialty creditors, for what this should exhaust of the personal estate. Att. Gen. v. Lord Mountmorris, 1 Dick (Eng.) 379. But although the testator may have directed his charity legacies to be paid out of his pure personality in priority to other legacies, if he has given no direction as to the funds out of which his debts, funeral and testamentary expenses and costs of administration are to be paid, the pure personality must contribute with the other personal estate to their payment before it can be applied in satisfaction of the charity legacies. In such cases the principle of Robinson v. Geldard, 3 Mac. & G. (Eng.) 735, is inapplicable. In other words, a direction to pay charitable legacies out of pure personality does not make them so far demonstrative as to entitle them to preference in abatement over other general legacies. Tempest v. Tempest, 7 De G., M. & G. (Eng.) 470, 474; Beaumont v. Oliveiga, L. R., 4 Ch. App. (Eng.) 309, 317, 319; Lewis v. Boetefer, 38 L. T., N. S. (Eng.) 93.

The testator may, of course, exonerate his pure personality from debts by throwing them expressly or by implication upon some other fund as the realty, or impure personality in default of realty. Wills v. Bourne, L. R., 16 Eq. (Eng.) 487; Miles v. Harrison, L. R., 9 Ch. App. (Eng.) 316.

But in England, exonerating the pure personality from debts does not relieve it from bearing its full share of the costs of administration unless they are otherwise provided for. In re Fitzgerald, Adolph v. Dolman, 26 W. R. (Eng.) 53. Compare Bassett v. McKenna, 52 Conn. 437, 442.

STATUTES IN WHICH STATUTES OF MORTMAIN ARE NOT IN FORCE.—Since the only reason that a court of equity will not marshal the assets in aid of charitable legacies is that the practice, if adopted, would lead to the evasion of the statutes of mortmain, it would seem to follow that in no jurisdiction in which neither the statutes of mortmain nor the policy upon which they are founded is recognized, charities would have the same right to marshal the assets as any other class of legatees. See McDonald v. McDonald, L. R., 14 Eq. (Eng.) 60, 67.

So a charity expressly authorized to take in mortmain may marshal the assets. Makeham v. Hooper, 4 Bro. C.

charities, since to do so would in effect change the law indirectly.¹ Where one of several legatees incurs an expense in protecting their joint interest, the others have been held liable to contribution.²

3. Marshalling in Aid of Devisees.—Where lands not chargeable with the payment of debts are sold for that purpose, the devisee thereof may subject lands devised to pay debts to reimbursement.³ So where one of several devisees of a tract of land liable to be made assets to pay legacies and other liabilities of the testator pays them off even after partition, and thereby relieves the land, the other devisees are liable for contribution though they protested against the payment.⁴ Devisees of land sold to pay debts before exhausting the personalty,⁵ or where the personalty was exhausted and other personal property came into the executor's hands after sale of the realty, are entitled to be subrogated to the rights of creditors who were paid from the proceeds against the personal estate, provided such reimbursement will not prejudice other parties having a more favored claim.⁶ A widow taking a devise in lieu of her dower right has been subrogated to the rights of a creditor against the land taken by him to the extent to which her dower was thereby diminished.⁷ The right of a devisee to marshal the assets as against the heir is not less established than that of a specific legatee, and depends upon the same

C. (Eng.) 53; s. c., Rop. Leg. (Eng.) (Am. ed.) *984.

1. Rop. Leg. (2nd Am. ed.) *990; Fourdrin v. Gowdey, 3 M. & K. (Eng.) 383.

They, however, adopt the principle of contribution explained in the preceding note. The proper course in such cases is for the master to enquire how much of the general produce of the testator's estate had arisen from real estate and chattels real, and how much from pure personalty, and then to set a value on the two portions of the estate respectively, and the legacies and charges must be borne by each in proportion to its value. Fourdrin v. Gowdey, 3 M. & K. (Eng.) 383, 397, 408.

2. New Orleans v. Baltimore, 15 La. An. 625; see McC Campbell v. McC Campbell, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 92, 97.

3. Cranmer v. McSnords, 24 W. Va. 594, 600.

4. Cook v. Cook, 92 Ind. 398.

A similar rule applies where one of several heirs pays the debt of his ancestor. Taylor v. Taylor, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 419.

Where land subject to pay a debt of the testator is devised one-fourth to one devisee and three-fourths to another, a judgment against them should be separately against each for his pro rata share of the debt with a reservation to the plaintiff to proceed against the interest of either for any deficiency after exhausting the interest of the other. Pugh v. Russell, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 789, 802.

Under the Michigan statutes (How. St. 1882, § 5, 820) contribution between devisees in the probate court must be by execution and not by an order to sell land to pay debts. Atwood v. Frost, 59 Mich. 409.

5. Chase v. Lockerman, 11 G. & J. (Md.) 185, 203; Morris v. Mowatt, 2 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 586, 591. See Wms. Exrs. (7th Eng. ed.) 1694.

Judgment creditors of the heirs or devisees have a right to ask for the application of the personal estate in the first place to the satisfaction of the debts due by the testator, or that they be substituted in the place of the creditors of the testator as to such personal estate. Morris v. Mowatt, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 586, 591.

6. Graham v. Dickinson, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 169, 181. See Wms. Exrs. (7th Eng. ed.) 1694.

7. Durham v. Rhodes, 23 Md. 233, 242.

principle.¹ Devisees and specific legatees contribute pro rata.²

4. Widow's Paraphernalia.—A widow's claim to paraphernalia is preferred to a general legacy, and hence she will be entitled to marshal the assets whenever a general legatee could do so.³

5. Jurisdiction of Probate Courts.—In the United States, the probate, orphans' or surrogates' courts, possess about the same powers formerly exercised in England by the ecclesiastical and chancery courts, and hence have jurisdiction to enforce the principles of the equitable doctrine of marshalling in the settlement of

1. Note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 339. See Livingston v. Newkirk, 3 Johns. Ch. (N.Y.) 312; Brooks v. Dent, 1 Md. Ch. 523; Dugan v. Hollins, 11 Md. 41; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 21 Md. 244.

A charge of debts on lands specifically devised does not preclude the right of the devisee to exoneration from land taken by descent. Livingston v. Newkirk, 3 Johns. Ch. (N.Y.) 312; Stiers v. Stiers, 1 Hall Ch. (N.J.) 224.

A legacy charged generally on the real estate is payable out of land descended before recourse is had to land devised. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 21 Md. 244.

As to whether a general charge of legacies affects lands specifically devised, see LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section IV. 7.

2. LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section V. 3.

But a devisee is not entitled to contribution from another devisee to a mortgage, which is peculiar to the land bestowed on himself, unless such was the intention of the testator, which will not be inferred from a general charge of debts on the real estate. Note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 340. Citing Gibson v. McCormick, 10 G. & J. (Md.) 65; Thomas v. Thomas, 2 C. E. Green (N.J.) 356.

As to the exoneration of mortgaged property, see WILLS.

As to effect of blending real and personal property in residuary clause, see LEGACIES AND DEVISES, section IV. 6.

3. Note to Aldrich v. Cooper, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (6th Eng. ed.) 185.

The case of paraphernalia is a very strong one for this proposition, that, wherever there is a double fund, though this court will not restrain the party, yet he shall not so operate his payment as to disappoint another claim, whether arising by the law or by the act of the testator." LORD ELDON, in Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. (Eng.) 382; s. c., 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 237.

Thus she could marshal the assets against real estate devised, if subject to a mortgage or other specific lien by throwing the charge upon the land as a general legatee could have done. Neal v. Mead, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 693; Ludkins v. Leigh, Cas. temp. Talb. (Eng.) 53.

Or where the real estate is devised subject to a general charge of debts. Inclendon v. Northcote, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 438; Boynton v. Parkhurst, 1 Bro. C. C. (Eng.) 576; s. c., 1 Cox (Eng.) 106.

Or as against real assets descended, where the property subject to her claim has been exhausted by specialty creditors, the land is subject neither to a specific lien nor general testamentary charge. Tipping v. Tipping, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 730; Tynt v. Tynt, 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) 542; Probert v. Clifford, 1 Atk. (Eng.) 440; s. c., Amb. 6, 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) § 44, note.

But not, as it seems, against a devisee in the absence of a specific lien, or general charge. Probert v. Clifford, Amb. (Eng.) 6; s. c., 1 Atk. (Eng.) 440; 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) 540, note. See Forrester v. Leigh, Amb. (Eng.) 171.

As to the nature of widow's claim to paraphernalia, see Northey v. Northey, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 77; Ridout v. Plymouth, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 104. Note to Hulme v. Tenant, 1 Lead. Cas. Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 679; (6th Eng. ed.), pt. 2, p. 88. See PARAPHERNALIA.

In some instances the claim to paraphernalia has been held to have priority over specific legacies. Graham v. Londonderre, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 395; Snelson v. Corbet, 3 Atk. (Eng.) 369; Northey v. Northey, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 77, 78; Tipping v. Tipping, 1 P. Wms. (Eng.) 731. Contra, Burton v. Pierpoint, 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) 79. Her claim to paraphernalia, with the exception of necessary wearing apparel, is inferior to the claims of her husband's creditors. Townshend v. Windham, 2 Ves. Sr (Eng.) 7; Burton v. Pierpoint, 2 P. Wms. (Eng.) 79.

estates, although their mode of procedure under the local statute may differ from that pursued by courts of chancery.¹

MASONIC LODGES.—See SOCIETIES.

MASTER AND SERVANT—(See AGENCY; APPRENTICES; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS; COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE; COUPLING CARS; DOMESTIC; EMPLOY; EMPLOYEE; FELLOW SERVANTS; LATENT DEFECTS; LIBEL AND SLANDER; NEGLIGENCE; PARENT AND CHILD; SEDUCTION).

I. Master—Definition, 745.

II. Servant—Definition, 745.

1. Menial Servants; English Rule, 750.

2. Presumption from Appearances, 751.

3. Volunteers, 751.

4. Independent Contractors, 751.

5. Persons Engaging in Work Upon False Representations, 751.

6. Signification of the Term Servant in Bequests, 751.

III. The Relation—Its Inception—Contract of Service, 752.

1. How Relation Is Created, 752.

2. When It Exists, 752.

3. Question of Law and Fact, 752.

4. Rule as to Public Officers, 753.

5. Municipal Employees, 753.

IV. Apprentices (see vol. 1, p. 636), 753.

V. Parties—Who May Enter Into Relation, 753.

1. Generally, 753.

2. Infants, 753.

(a) Generally, Common Law Rule, 753.

(b) The American Rule, 754.

(c) Avoiding Contract, 755.

(d) Consent or Contract of Parents, 755.

(e) Ratification After Majority, 755.

(f) Existence of Relation Between Parent and Child, 755.

(g) Emancipation, Generally, 756.

(h) How Emancipation Is Effected, 757.

(i) Contract of Emancipated Minor, 758.

(j) Revocation of Emancipation, 758.

(k) Duty and Liability of Hirer of Infant, 758.

(l) Step, Adopted and Illegitimate Children, 759.

(m) Infant as a Master, 759.

3. Married Women, 759.

4. Persons of Unsound Mind, 759.

5. Corporations, 760.

6. Partners, 760.

7. Agents, 761.

VI. Contract of Service, 761.

1. Generally, 761.

2. The Consideration, 761.

3. Necessity for Mutual Obligation, 761.

4. Term of Service, 762.

5. Evidence, 763.

6. Fixed Compensation, Entire Time, 763.

VII. Statute of Frauds, 763.

1. Written and Parol Contracts Generally, 763.

2. Contract for More than One Year, 764.

3. Presumption as to Commencement of Contract, 766.

4. The Memorandum, 766.

VIII. Implied Contracts, 767.

1. Generally, 767.

2. Gratuitous Services, 768.

3. Members of a Family, 768.

4. Services with View to Legacy, 770.

5. Unsolicited Services, 770.

6. Compulsory Services, 770.

7. Termination of Contract;

1. Woerner Am. Law Adm., § 495.

See GIBSON, C. J., in Barklay's Estate, Loomis's Appeal, 10 Pa. St. 387, 390, 391; HOUGH, J., in Titterington v. Hooker, 58 Mo. 593, 597; WAGNER, J., in Pearce v. Calhoun, 59 Mo. 271, 274. See also Me. Rev. St. 1883, p. 609, § 14; Mass. Pub. St. 1882, p. 752, § 33;

How. St. 1882 (Mich.), § 5820; Minn. Gen. St. 1878, p. 571, § 33; Neb. Comp. St. 1887, ch. 23, § 159; Nev. Gen. St. 1885, § 2850; N. H. Gen. L. 1878, p. 478, § 14; Wis. Rev. St. 1878, § 3868; Mich. How. St. 1882, § 5820; Atwood v. Frost, 59 Mich. 409.

For further discussion see PROBATE, ORPHANS' and SURROGATES' COURTS.

Continuance in Service, 770.
IX. Express Contracts, 771.

1. Obligation to Furnish Work, 771.
2. Wages, When Due and Payable, 771.
3. Failure to Demand Wages, 771.
4. Destruction of Building, 772.
5. Extra Pay and Extra Work, 772.
6. Payment for Services Rendered Another, 772.
7. Husband and Wife, 773.
8. Agreement to Pay Reasonable Worth, 773.
9. Agreement to Pay Same Wages as Paid to Others, 773.
10. Disagreement as to Wages, 773.
11. Disposal of Business Unknown to Employee, 774.
12. Employer's Partnership Relations, 774.
13. Employer's Insolvency or Death, 775.
14. Services Rendered Third Person, 775.
15. Cumulative Compensations; Different Positions, 775.
16. Notice of Reduction of Wages, 775.
17. Absence of Servant, 775.
18. Contract Depending on Satisfaction or Discretion, 776.
19. Abandonment by Servant, 776.
 - (a) Quantum Meruit, 776.
 - (b) Justification, 778.
 - (c) Imprisonment of Employee, 778.
 - (d) Relation of Servant; Condonation, 778.
 - (e) Leaving Without Notice, 779.
 - (f) Disablement Through Accident; Death, 780.
20. Services Under Void Contract, 781.
21. Unskilful Employer, 781.
22. Payment in Particular Way, 781.
23. Payment to Third Person, 782.
24. Running of Account; Statute of Limitations, 782.
25. Set-off and Defences in Action for Wages, 782.
26. Services Rendered in Obstruction of Justice, 783.
27. Loss of Time; Additional Services, 784.
28. Servant Once Settled with, 784.
29. Passage Money, 784.
30. Evidence as to Compensation, 784.
31. Interest, 785.
32. Wages Payable in Cash, 785.

X. Illegal Contracts, 785.

1. Generally; Sunday Laws, 785.
2. Requirement of Licences, 785.

3. Labor on Object of Illegal Character, 786.

4. Law Governing Contract; Change, 786.

5. One of Several Considerations Illegal, 786.

XI. Immoral Contracts, 787.

- XII. Enforcement of Contract for Services, 787.

- XIII. Master's Right of Action for Injuries to Servant, 788.

- XIV. Termination of Relation by Will of Master, 788.

1. Rightful Discharge, Sufficient Cause, 788.
 2. Term of Service, 790.
 3. Condonation by Master, 791.
 4. Breach by Anticipation; Executory Contract, 791.
 5. The Discharge, What Constitutes, 792.
 6. Assignment of Cause, 792.
 7. Partnerships, 793.
 8. Recovery for Work Done; Damages for Discharge, 793.
 9. Obligation of Discharged Servant to Seek Employment, 795.
 10. Offer of Continuance at Lower Rate, 796.
 11. Servant Receiving Share of Profits, 796.
 12. Recalling Discharged Servant, 797.
 13. Evidence; Burden of Proof, 797.
 14. New Contract After Breach, 797.
 15. Remedies for Wrongful Discharge, 797.
 16. Death of Employer, 799.
 17. Arising of Unexpected Conditions, 799.
 18. Labor During Unreasonable Hours, 799.
 19. Discharge of Domestic Servants Without Notice, 799.
 20. Giving Character to Servant, 799.
 - (a) Obligation to Give Character, 799.
 - (b) Privileged Communications; Libel, 799.
 - (c) Knowingly Giving False Character, 800.
 - (d) Forged Testimonial, 800.
 21. Malicious Procurement of Discharge, 800.
- XV. Enticing Servant Away, 800.
1. General Rule, 800.
 2. Harboring Servant, 801.
 3. Notice to Defendant, 802.
 4. Sufficiency of Contract, 802.

5. Malice, 802.
6. Evidence of Enticement, 802.
7. Measure of Damages, 802.
8. Injunction, 803.
- XVI. Combinations and Coercion of Servants, 803.
- XVII. Seduction of Servant (see Seduction). 804.
- XVIII. Liability of Master on Servant's Contracts (see Agency, 804).
- XIX. Liability of Master for Negligence or Unskilfulness of Servant, 804.
 1. General Rule, 804.
 2. Existence of Relation, 804.
 3. Scope of Employment, 807.
 4. Improper Execution of Lawful Act, 808.
 5. Acts Beyond Scope of Employment, 809.
 6. Servant Employed by Compulsion, 809.
 7. Protection of Master's Interests, 810.
 8. Employment of Assistant by Servant, 810.
 9. Servant Deviating from Instructions, 810.
 10. Carriers of Passengers (see vol. 2, p. 738). 810.
 11. Driving on Highway; Injury to Horses, 810.
 12. Servants of Charitable Institutions, 813.
 13. Servants of Municipality, 813.
 14. Servants of School Districts, 813.
 15. Servants of Unsound Mind, 813.
 16. Evidence; Reputation of Servant, 814.
 17. Liability of Servants Personally, 814.
 18. Joint Liability of Master and Servant, 814.
 19. Criminal Liability of Master, 814.
 20. Master's Remedy Against Servant 815.
- XX. Liability for Wilful and Malicious Acts of Servants, 815.
 1. General Rule, 815.
 2. Disobedient and Unnecessary Acts, 816.
 3. Servant Failing to Act Within Reasonable Bounds, 817.
 4. Torts in Furtherance of Master's Business, 817.
 5. Acts Outside Scope of Employment, 818.
6. Rule as to Passengers, 819.
 - (a) Generally, 819.
 - (b) Offensive Conduct Towards Passenger, 819.
 - (c) Wanton Assault, Excuse for, 820.
 - (d) Passengers on Vessels, 821.
 - (e) Removal of Trespassers from Train, 821.
7. Trespasses of Servants, 824.
8. Joint Liability, 824.
9. Honest Trespasses, 825.
10. Fraudulent Acts, 825.
11. Servants of Municipality, 825.
12. Torts Involving Wrongful Intention, 825.
13. Criminal Acts, 826.
14. Ratification and Repudiation, 826.
15. Punitive Damages, 827.
- XXI. Fellow Servants, Negligence of (see Fellow Servants), 829.
- XXII. Liability for Acts of Independent Contractor, 829.
 1. Definition, 829.
 2. General Rule of Liability, 830.
 3. Exceptions to Rule of Nonliability, 832.
 - (a) Work Necessarily Attended by Nuisance, 832.
 - (b) Work Improperly Prosecuted or Wrongfully Undertaken, 832.
 - (c) Where Employer Prescribes Means, 833.
 - (d) Reservation of Right to Protect Employees, 833. [834.
 - (e) Personal Interference, (f) Injury Directly from Authorized Act, 834.
 - (g) Deputing Performance of Legal Obligation, 834.
 - (h) Defective Plans, 835.
 - (i) Unskilful Arrangement of Work, 835.
 - (j) Injury Naturally Resulting, 836.
 - (k) Incompetent Contractor, 836.
 - (l) Defective Appliances Furnished, 836.

- (m) Contractor and Overseer Combined, 836.
- (n) Direction of Architect, 836.
- (o) Abandonment of Work, 836.
- (p) Work Completed and Turned Over, 837.
- (q) Notice of Danger Not Apparent, 837.
- (r) Employer Furnishing Machinery and Servants, 837.
- 4. Application of Rule to Railways, 837.
 - (a) Generally, 837.
 - (b) Acts with Reference to Real Estate, 839.
 - (c) Contractor Exercising Right of Eminent Domain, 840.
 - (d) Dangerous Employment, 840.
 - (e) Direct Superintendence of Company, 840.
- 5. Liability of Municipalities, 841.

XXIII. Assumption of Risks of Employment, 842.

- 1. General Rule, 842.
- 2. Burden of Proving Servant's Knowledge, 844.
- 3. Latent Defects, 844.
- 4. Master's Business Methods, 845.
- 5. Test as to Liability, 845.
- 6. Servant Remaining at Work Without Complaint, 845.
- 7. Cause of Injury; Question for Jury, 854.
- 8. Servant and Master Not on Same Footing as to Duty of Inspection, 854.
- 9. Assumption that Machinery Is Suitable, 855.
- 10. Master's Duty to Protect Servant, 855.
- 11. Dangers Subsequently Arising, 856.
- 12. Work Outside Scope of Employment, 856.
- 13. Using Defective Machinery After Promise of Repair, 856.
- 14. Servant Ordered Into Place of Danger, 857.
- 15. Employee Voluntarily Assuming Place More Dangerous than Necessary, 857.

- 16. Accident Before Completion of Repairs, 858.
- 17. Risks Attendant on Shipmaster's Orders, 858.
- 18. Appliance of Which Servant Has Optional Use, 858.
- 19. Inappropriate and Defective Tool, 858.
- 20. Labor Undertaken through Fear of Dismissal, 858.
- 21. Accidental Injury from Unexpected Cause, 859.
- 22. Action Authorized by Statute, 859.

XXIV. Work Outside Scope of Servant's Employment, 859.

XXV. Contributory Negligence, 861.

- 1. General Rule, 861.
- 2. Servant Must Have Been in Fault, 862.
- 3. Recovery Notwithstanding Servant's Negligence, 867.
- 4. Reasonable Diligence of Employee as to Tools and Machinery, 867.
- 5. Negligence Through Terror, 868.
- 6. Questions for Court and Jury, 868.
- 7. Burden of Proof, 869.
- 8. Proof Necessary to Establish, 869.
- 9. Failure to Look for Hidden Danger, 870.
- 10. Knowledge of Danger Not Usually Incident, 870.
- 11. Slight Want of Care, 870.
- 12. Care Required in Use of Appliances, 870. [871.]
- 13. Due Care Must be Shown.
- 14. Presumption Where Servant is Killed While on Duty, 871.

XXVI. Liability of Servant to Master, 872.

- 1. In Cases of Contracts, 872.
- 2. In Cases of Wrongful Acts, 872.
- 3. Suit Against Servant; Defence by Master, 872.
- 4. Double Employment, 873.
- 5. Servant Known to be Incompetent, 873.

XXVII. Liability of Servant to Third Person, 873.

- XXVIII. Liability to Coservant, 873.
- XXIX. Master's Liability to Servant for Negligence, 873.

1. Generally, 873.
 - (a) General Rule, 874.
 - (b) Relation of Master and Servant Must Exist, 875.
 - (c) Pivotal Point in Such Actions, 877.
 - (d) Performance of Personal Service for Superior Officer, 877.
 - (e) Injury from Master's Direct Personal Act, 877.
2. Master's Duty to Furnish Machinery, 877.
3. Liability of Railroad Companies, 879.
 - (a) Rule of Liability; Passengers and Employees, 879.
 - (b) Suitable Track and Roadbed, 879.
 - (a) Liability Generally, 879.
 - (b) Evidence to Prove Negligence, 880.
 - (c) Use of Track by Several Companies, 880.
 - (d) Obstructions on Track; Adjacent Structures, 881.
 - (e) Failure to Block Switches and Frogs, 882.
 - (c) Engines, 882.
 - (d) Cars, 883.
 - (e) Buffers, Poles, Ladders, Brakes, etc., 884.
 - (f) Allowing Disobedience of Orders, 886.
 - (g) Running Trains; Speed, 886.
4. Duty to Protect Servant, 887.
5. Duty to Fence Machinery, 889.
6. Ropes, Chains, Mine Machinery, Rails and Nuts, 889.
7. Accidental and Improbable Injuries, 890.
8. Latent Defects, 891.
9. Use of Machinery for Improper Purpose, 891.
10. Exposure to Hidden Danger, 892.
11. Introduction of Unusual Machinery, 892.
12. Selection of Machinery, 892.
13. Evidence as to Sufficiency, 894.
14. Sufficiency Not Warranted, 894.
15. Repairs and Inspections, 894.
16. Master's Duty to Instruct Inexperienced and Minor Servants, 897.
 - (a) Generally, 897.
 - (b) Duty to Compel Obedience, 898.
 - (c) Ordinary Processes, 898.
 - (d) Danger from Extraneous Causes, 899.
 - (e) Patent Dangers, 899.
17. Minor Servants, 899.
 - (a) Work More Dangerous than Agreed Upon, 899.
 - (b) Employment of Minors, Recovery by Parent, 900.
 - (c) Where Minor Is Instructed, 901.
 - (d) Permanent Injury, 902.
 - (e) Failure to Instruct; Negligence of Co-employee, 902.
18. Safe Place to Work, 902.
19. Particular Customs, 903.
20. Proximate and Remote Cause, 904.
21. Burden of Proof, 904.
22. Questions for Court and Jury, 904.
23. Knowledge of Master, 905.
24. Competency and Qualification of Servant, 906.
25. Recovery by Trespasser, 907.
26. Obedience to Orders, 907.
27. Rules and Regulations, 907.
 - (a) Duty to Promulgate, 907.
 - (b) Disobedience of Rule, 908.
 - (c) Evidence of Rules, 909.
 - (d) Agreement to Obey Rules, 909.
28. Contributory Negligence in Use of Appliances; Notice of Defects, 909.
29. Selection and Retention of Competent Servants (see Fellow Servants, vol. 7, p. 844, et seq.), 910.
30. Contractors Absolving Master; Compromises and Releases, 910.
31. Injury to which Servant Consents, 911.
32. Liability for Negligence

- | | |
|---|--|
| of Vice Principal (see
Fellow Servants, vol.
7), 911. 33. Neglect of Statutory Duty, 911. [912.] 34. Requisites of Petition, 35. Evidence, 913. (a) Declarations; Res
Gestæ, 913. (b) Submission of Person to Inspection, 915. 36. Damages for Personal Injuries, 915. (a) Measure and Ele- | ments Generally, 915. (b) Life Tables, 917. (c) Exemplary Damages, 917. (d) Amount of Damages;
Question for Jury,
917. 37. Food, Lodging and Medical Attention, 918. 38. Joint Liability of Employers, 919. 39. Indemnification of Servant for Loss or Damage, 919. |
|---|--|

I. MASTER—DEFINITION.—The master is one who has the superior choice, control and direction; whose will is represented, not merely in the ultimate result of the work in hand, but in all its details; one who is the responsible head of a given industry;¹ one who has the power to discharge;² one who has in his employment one or more persons hired by contract to serve him, either as domestic or common laborers;³ one who not only prescribes the end, but directs, or may at any time direct, the means and methods of doing the work;⁴ a head or chief, an instructor, an employer;⁵ a director, a governor.⁶

II. SERVANT—DEFINITION.—A servant is one who is employed to render personal service to his employer otherwise than in the pursuit of an independent calling, and who in such service remains entirely under the control and direction of the latter.⁷

Servants Under the Common Law.—The first sort of servants acknowledged by the law of England were menial; so called from their being intra mœnia, or domestic. The relation arising from the contract of hiring was construed, no time of service being named, to be for a year.⁸

Under an early statute all single men between twelve years old and sixty, and married men under thirty years of age, and all single women between twelve and forty, not having any visible livelihood, were compellable, by two justices to go out to service in husbandry, or certain specific trades, for the promotion of honest industry, and no master could put away his servant, or servant leave his master, after being so retained,

- | | |
|--|---|
| 1. Shear & Redf. on Neg., § 160. 2. Gen. Steam Nav. Co. v. British etc. Nav. Co., L. R., 3 Exch. 330; Dalyell v. Tyrer, El. B. & El. 899; Michael v. Stanton, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 462; Robinson v. Webb, 11 Bush (Ky.) 477. 3. 2 Bouv. L. Dict. 112. 4. Bailey v. Troy etc. R. Co., 57 Vt. 252. 5. 2 Burrill's L. Dict. 187. 6. Rapalje & Lawrence's L. Dict. 801. Mine Owner.—The owner of a mine who furnishes the operating ma- | chinery and engages another to open the mine sustains the relation of master to persons employed by him. Fell v. Rich Hill Coal Mining Co., 23 Mo. App. 216. See Gibbs and Sterrett's Appeal, 100 Pa. St. 528. 7. 1 Parsons on Contracts 101; Gravatt v. State, 25 Ohio St. 168; Morgan v. Bowman, 22 Mo. 545; Boniface v. Scott, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 353; Ex parte Meason, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 167; Heygood v. State, 59 Ala. 51. 8. 1 Comm. 425; Poor, IV, 8. | either before or at the end of his term, without a quarter's warning, unless upon reasonable cause, to be allowed by a justice of the peace.¹
|--|---|

Another species of servants were called laborers, who were only hired by the day or week, concerning whom statutes were enacted, making many good regulations, such as defining how long they must continue at work in summer and winter, punishing such as left or deserted their work; and others of a similar character.

Another species of servants were of a superior character, such as stewards, factors and bailiffs. They were considered by the law as servants pro tempore, with regard to such of their acts as affected their masters' property.²

Classification.—Blackstone comprehends under this head slaves, menial servants, apprentices, hired laborers, and servants pro tempore.³

Reeve carries the discussion still further, as to factors, brokers, attorneys, and agents generally.⁴

Kent, writing for later readers, classifies servants as slaves, hired servants and apprentices.⁵

1. Stat. 5 Eliz., ch. 6.

2. Jacob's Law Dict. 51.

3. 1 Bl. Com., ch. 16.

4. Reeve Dom. Rel. 339.

5. 2 Kent Com. 32.

In the Affirmative—Convicts.—A convict is the servant of the person employing him, even though his wages go to the county in which he is imprisoned. Hartwig v. Bay State S. & L. Co., 43 Hun (N. Y.) 425.

A convict placed in charge of penitentiary premises by the lessee thereof, who instructs him to keep the same free from trespassers, is the servant of the lessee. Ward v. Young, 42 Ark. 542. Compare Cunningham v. Bay State S. & L. Co., 25 Hun (N. Y.) 210.

Employee on Poor Farm.—An employee on a town farm maintained for the support of paupers and under the management of the overseers of the poor, is the servant of the town. Neff v. Wellesley, 148 Mass. 487.

Toll Gate Keeper.—Likewise a toll gate keeper after business hours. Noblesville etc. R. Co. v. Gause, 76 Ind. 142; 40 Am. Rep. 224.

Driver of Horse Car.—Likewise the driver of a horse car after yielding up the reins to the substitute who ordinarily takes his place to allow him to go to his meals. Com. v. Brockton St. R. Co., 143 Mass. 501.

Engine Wiper.—Likewise an engine wiper employed in a railroad company's round house, while passing through the yards on his way to work. Ewald v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 70 Wis. 420; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 326; McQueen v. Central Branch U. P. R. Co., 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226; 30 Kan. 689.

Station Agent.—The defendant made a contract with one M, by which he was to take entire charge and control of defendant's freight business at the St. Louis station, loading and unloading cars, switching them back and forth in the yard, making up freight trains, and doing all other yard service necessary in the transaction of defendant's freight business. He was also, when requested, to haul freight from the levee for defendant; to prepare, execute and receive all necessary freight bills; to keep all necessary books of accounts, collect freight money, and generally act as, and discharge all duties of, a station agent. To enable him to properly discharge his duties, he was to have control over the grounds, yards and buildings, engines and cars of defendant at the station. Defendant was to furnish the necessary engines, and keep them in repair, and supplied with fuel, etc., and to employ the engineers and firemen, who were to be under M's control, and were to be paid by him. For his services M was to be paid monthly, at the rate of fifteen cents for each ton of freight received or delivered, and fifty cents for each car hauled from the levee. The contract was to continue for five years. The business was to be under control of defendant's superintendent, and done to his satisfaction, and if not so done, defendant could revoke the contract on twenty-four hours' notice. M performed no service for any other person than defendant. In an action to recover damages for injuries alleged to have been occasioned through the negligence of train men in the employ of M, it was held that he was not an independent contractor but a servant of the company. Speed v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77; 71 Mo. 303.

Civil Engineer.—A civil engineer, employed by a railroad company at a fixed salary, and subject in his duties to the company's orders, is a servant of the company within a statute declaring stockholders liable for debts to laborers and servants. Conant v. Vanschaick, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 87; Williamson v. Wadsworth, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 294; and see Richardson v. Abendroth, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 162; Aiken v. Wasson, 24 N. Y. 462.

Railroad Engineer.—A railroad company employed M, a contractor, to do certain work upon its road, and paid him therefor a stipulated price, and furnished him a construction train and an engineer to run the same. The company prohibited the running of this train at a greater rate of speed than thirteen miles per hour, and required that it should be on a side-track fifteen minutes before the schedule time for each of the company's trains. Subject to these regulations, the control, management and direction of the construction train was given wholly to M. The engineer was selected by the company, and it alone had the right to discharge him, though bound to go so upon the complaint of M, and to supply his place. The company paid the engineer's wages, but charged the same to M, and deducted the amount thereof from the sum due him for his work. A mule having been killed by the negligent running of this construction train, the owner sued the railroad company for the value thereof. The defendant resisted the action on the ground that the train was not run by its servant, but by M's. Held, that such engineer was the servant of the railroad company. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Norwood, 62 Miss. 565; 52 Am. Rep. 191.

Porter.—The porter and other employes of the Pullman Palace Car Company, where a car of such company forms a part of a regular train, will be considered as the servants of the company running such train. Williams v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 414; s. c., 40 La. An. 417; Pennsylvania Co. v. Roy, 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 225; 102 U. S. 451; Thorpe v. New York Cent. etc. R. Co., 76 N. Y. 402.

Detective.—A detective employed by a railroad company is its servant. Pool v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Wis. 657; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 332; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 360; 56 Wis. 227.

Working Overseer.—One who was employed by a manufacturing company to perform a variety of services, who was an overseer and yet worked with the men, who worked in the mills of the company, and had a general supervision of their business, and kept their books, was held entitled to recover against stockholders as a servant of the company on the ground that, while the word laborer must probably be restricted to mean manual work, servant cannot be confined to mere menial service. Hovey v. Ten Broeck, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 315; Vincent v. Bainford, 12 Abb. R., N. S. (N. Y.) 252. See MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 14.

Surveyors' Assistants.—It has been held in Minnesota that the employment of a chief engineer to "survey and establish" a railroad line, clothes him on behalf of the railroad company, with authority to employ such subordinates as are reasonably suitable to that end, and such subordinates will become, by such act of hiring, the servants of the company. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Reese, 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., 110; 61 Miss. 581; Gillis v. Duluth etc. R. Co. (Minn.), 25 N. W. Rep. 603.

Coal Shovellers.—Whether shovellers engaged in transferring coal from a vessel at a dock into the cars of a railroad company, the apparatus used belonging to such company and controlled by its servants, and the shovellers being paid from money received by the company from the shipowners for unloading, are servants of such company, held a question of fact to be decided by the jury. Daley v. Boston etc. R. Co. (Mass.), 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208; 47 Mass. 101; and see Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Price, 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234; 96 Pa. St. 256.

Driver of Team Supplied by Hirer.—

Where the hirer of a team supplies his own driver, such driver is his servant. Hafer v. Hodge, 52 Mich. 372; 50 Am. Rep. 256.

—Supplied by Owner.—Where a person hires the personal property of another who furnishes a servant to manage the same, though the hirer acquires the right to superintend and direct the conduct of the servant, the latter continues to be the servant of the owner of the property, who is responsible for any negligence of the servant in the performance of his service for the hirer, even where the hirer only is interested in such service. Hafer v. Hodge, 52 Mich. 372; 50 Am. Rep. 256; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Norwood, 62 Miss. 565; 52 Am. Rep. 191; Huff v. Ford, 126 Mass. 24; 30 Am. Rep. 645.

Ferryman.—A ferryman, transferring a stage and its passengers across a stream, is, as to a passenger contracting with the stage owner only to be carried over its route, to be considered the servant of the stage owner. McLean v. Burbank, 11 Minn. 277; and see McElroy v. Nashua R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 402; Hooper v. Wells, 27 Cal. 11; Campbell v. Perkins, 8 N. Y. 433; Fairchild v. Slocum, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 331.

Stage Driver.—A stage driver, entrusted by his employers to carry money from one place to another, is a "servant, who has obtained possession of property by virtue of his employment," within the meaning of an act making embezzlement of property punishable as for felonious stealing. People v. Sherman, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 299.

Crew of Vessel Chartered by the Day.—Where a vessel and crew are chartered by the day or for a voyage the crew are the servants of the owner, even though, as a part of the contract, the hirer is to pay to the owner the wages of the crew. Dalyell v. Tyrer, El. Bl. & El. 899; Fenton v. Dublin Packet Co., 8 Ad. & Ell. 825.

Pilot.—A pilot, while he has charge of a vessel, although he holds a commission under public authority, is the servant of the owner who employs him. Yates v. Brown, 25 Mass. 23.

Master and Crew of Steam Tug.—But where a vessel is being towed by a steam tug, its master and crew are not the servants of the owner of the vessel. Spraul v. Hemmingway, 31 Mass. 1.

Stevedore.—Neither is a stevedore employed in part to unload a vessel for a gross sum the servant of the owner. Sinton v. Street, 26 Mass. 147; Pingree v. Leyland, 135 Mass. 398.

Workman Engaged in Removing Debris.—Workmen employed in removing debris after a fire, by the owner of the building injured, are his servants. Dillon v. Hunt, 82 Mo. 150.

Minor Child Living with Parent.—The presumption is that a minor son living with his father and using his team and conveyance, in and about the business of the father, is acting in his behalf and upon his direction until the contrary is made to appear by the evidence. Schaefer v. Osterbrink, 67 Wis. 495.

Agent of Insurance Company—Employee of.—In an action for money had and received the facts were as follows: Defendant was employed as agent for plaintiff, in the city of New York, under a contract, by which he was to receive a certain sum in full for his services. The company provided an office, and the contract contained this clause. "Rent of desk room equivalent of clerk hire." Defendant employed a clerk, who abstracted $939.13. Defendant took a note from him, upon which small amounts were paid. Defendant, in July, 1867, being about to retire from the company's service, rendered an account and credited himself with the balance of the note. In August, 1867, he took a new note in the company's name and sent it to the company. The latter immediately returned it and notified defendant to pay the loss. Defendant claimed that the clerk was plaintiff's servant and that the July account was an account stated. Held, that the clerk was servant of defendant, who was responsible for the sum embezzled; that even if the July account was an account stated, it simply imposed upon the plaintiff the onus of proving the charge erroneous, and this having been done the right of recovery was established. The M. M. L. I. Co. v. Carpenter, 49 N. Y. 668.

Agricultural Laborer.—An employee who is to receive a part of the crop as compensation for his services is a laborer for hire. Richey v. DuPre, 20 S. Car. 6; Daniel v. Swearengen, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 297; McCutcheon v. Taylor, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 259. Compare Burgess v. Carpenter, 2 S. Car. 7; Huff v. Watkins, 5 S. Car. 82; 40 Am. Rep. 680.

Wharf Contractor.—A contractor agreed to build a new wharf for a railway company and rebuild an old one. He agreed to furnish all materials and labor, to put in piles and posts, etc., as the company should require, to make the old wharf as good as new and build the new one in the most substantial manner, to submit to the directions of the company's engineer, and do all work to his satisfaction. Held, that under the contract the contractor was the agent and servant of the company, and that it was liable for his negligence. R. R. Co. v. Hanning, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 656.

Change in Grade of Employment.—And where a servant accepted a different employment from the one first entered upon, he is his employer's servant, in the new employment, the same as in the old. May v. Ontario etc. R. Co., 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 337; 10 Ont. Rep. 70.

Free Transportation.—Free transportation to and from work where part of employee's contract of service included the same, does not affect his standing as a servant. Vick v. New York etc. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 267; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 609; McQueen v. Central Branch M. F. R. Co., 30 Kan. 689; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226; McKinney on Fellow Servants, § 142, and cases cited.

Gateman.—A company accepting services of gateman employed by company owning road used by it, recognizes such person as its servant. Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Schneider, 45 Ohio St. 678; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 334.

Teamster.—A teamster hauling iron to cars and injured at crossing, held, under Pennsylvania statute, to be in same position as an employe and bound to exercise care proportionate to risks. Baltimore R. Co. v. Colvin, 118 Pa. St. 230; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 160.

Passenger Assisting.—Passenger assisting to push street car on side track and injured through carelessness of driver of another car, held not to have engaged in service as a mere volunteer. McIntire R. Co. v. Bolton, 43 Ohio St. 224; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 501.

In the Negative—Boy Fifteen Years Old.—A boy fifteen years old not having sufficient discretion to comprehend and guard against dangers when fully explained to him is not a servant. Hamilton v. Galveston etc. R. Co., 54 Tex. 556; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 528.

Newsboys on Car.—Newsboys permitted to pass in and out of a car not engaged or employed by company is not an employe on or about the road within the meaning of the Philadelphia statute. Philadelphia Traction Co. v. Orbann, 119 Pa. St. 37; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 432.

Contractor Agreeing to Furnish Certain Work.—A contractor agreeing to furnish certain work was to be paid what work and materials cost and certain per cent in addition. Held, that he was not a servant of the company so that latter was liable for his torts. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Reese, 61 Miss. 581; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 110. And see Hittle v. Republican V. R. Co., 19 Neb. 620; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 586; Hughes v. Railway Co., 39 Ohio St. 461; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 100; Hunt v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 51 Pa. St. 495; McCafferty v. Spuyten Duyvil etc. R. Co., 61 N. Y. 178.

Order of Party Having No Authority.—An order of a party having no authority over injured employee will not serve as basis on which to consider the latter the former's servant. Nashville etc. R. Co. v. McDaniel, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 386; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 604.

Postal Clerks.—A postal clerk is not the servant of the road on whose trains he runs. Muster v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 61 Wis. 325; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 113. See MAIL.

Secretary of Corporation.—The secretary of a corporation, being an officer or agent of the company, is not a servant. Caffin v. Reynolds, 37 N. Y. 640. Compare Richardson v. Abendrath, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 162. See MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 14.

Police Officer.—Nor is a police officer, in any such sense as to take away his right of action, against the city which appoints him, for an injury sustained by reason of a defective highway. Kimball v. Boston, 1 Allen (Mass.) 417.

Conductor on Another Road.—The mere fact that defendant company paid the conductor of a train belonging to another company, running over its road under contracts, does not necessarily make him its servant. Sullivan v. Oregon R. & M. Co., 12 Oregon 392; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391.

Superintendent.—Nor is one employed as a superintendent or boss. Bryan v. State, 44 Ga. 328.

Licencee of Right to Sell Lunches.—A lessee or licensee of the exclusive privilege of entering the cars or upon the right of way to sell or supply lunches, is not a servant or agent of the corporation, so as to render it liable for Scope of the Present Article.—An attempt will be made in the present article to treat generally of the relations of employers and employees of every description.

1. Menial Servants—English Rule.—Servants are menial or not so, the term meaning such as are employed about the house of the employer or within its walls.¹ This doctrine, however, has obtained but the slightest hold in this country.²

an assault and battery, committed by such lessee or licensee upon a competitor who seeks lawfully, on his own premises, to obtain the patronage of passengers. Fluker v. Georgia R. & B. Co., 81 Ga. 461.

Teamster in Certain Cases.—A teamster, through whose negligence in delivering coal one falls into a coal hole and is injured, is, in an action therefor, to be considered as the servant of the occupant of the building, if such occupant had the right to control the manner of delivery. Clapp v. Kemp, 122 Mass. 481.

Driver of Coach.—New York etc. R. Co. v. Steinbrenner, 47 N. J. L. 161; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 330; 54 Am. Rep. 126.

Licensed Carman.—McMullen v. Hoyt, 2 Daly. (N. Y.) 221.

Drover.—Carroll v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 88 Mo. 239; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 268; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Ivey, 71 Tex. 409; Gulf etc. R. Co. v. McGowan, 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274; 65 Tex. 643.

Employee of Mine Contractor as to Owner.—Plymouth Coal Co. v. Kominsky, 116 Pa. St. 365; Haddock v. Rodkalfaki, 9 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 653.

Employees of Corporation as to its Members.—Bullock v. Gaffigan, 100 Pa. St. 276.

Inmate of Hospital as to its Superintendent.—Schraffe v. Connell, 65 Wis. 476.

Servant of One Merchant as to Another.—McCullough v. Shoneman, 105 Pa. St. 169; 51 Am. Rep. 194; Stevens v. Armstrong, 6 N. Y. 435.

Municipal Contractor as to Third Person.—Corbin v. The American Mills, 27 Conn. 274.

Overseer of Roads as to County.—Crowell v. Sonoma Co., 25 Cal. 313. And see Sherburne v. Yuba Co., 21 Cal. 113; Hoffman v. Sangooquin Co., 21 Cal. 426.

Laborers as to Chairman of Street Committee.—McGuire v. Grant, 1 Dutch. N. Y. 357.

Health and Police Officers as to Town.—Mitchell v. Rockland, 52 Me. 118; Morgan v. Hallowell, 57 Me. 375.

Or Lamp Lighters.—Eaton v. Woburn, 127 Mass. 170; Kimball v. Cushman, 103 Mass. 194; Galman v. Boston, 118 Mass. 114.

Parties to Speculative Venture.—H made an agreement with E whereby he was to lock up desirable lands and bid them in at tax sales, E furnishing the money to pay for them. Both were to control alike the subsequent disposition of the lands, and after E had been repaid what he had advanced, they were to divide the profits equally. Their community of interest extended to both profit and loss. On a bill by H to wind up the partnership, this arrangement was admitted by demurrer. Held, that it constituted a partnership, if the parties stood to each other in the relation of principals, and not of master and servant, and the fact that the title was taken in E's name was immaterial. Hunt v. Erikson, 57 Mich. 330.

1. Wood's Inst., 51; Heygood v. State, 59 Ala. 51; Long v. Simmons, 64 Wis. 529; Boniface v. Scott, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 351; Turner v. Mason, 14 M. & W. 112; Rex v. Buckingham, 3 N. & M. 72; Nowlan v. Ablett, 2 C. M. & R. 54; Nicholl v. Greaves, 17 C. B. & N. S. 27. Compare Todd v. Kerrick, 8 Exch. 15.

2. Burgess v. Carpenter, 2 S. Car. 7; Haskins v. Rayster, 70 N. Car. 601; Ex parte Meason, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 167.

Domestic Servant—Burglary by.—Burglary by a domestic servant means burglary by a servant who resides in the house with the master he serves, and does not include a servant whose employment is outside, and not in the house. A farm hand, who sleeps and eats outside of the master's house, though he performs chores inside of the house, when directed, does not come within the meaning of the term. Waterhouse v. State, 21 Tex. App. 663. And see Wakefield v. State, 41 Tex. 558.

2. Presumption from Appearance.—The presumption is that a person found doing service for another is the latter's servant.¹

3. Volunteers.—Where a person undertakes voluntarily to perform service for another, who assents thereto, he stands in the relation of a servant to the latter.²

4. Independent Contractors.—An independent contractor is not a servant.³ Neither are his assistants servants of the party with whom he contracts.⁴

5. Persons Engaging in Work Upon False Representations.—Where a servant engages in a temporary work for another, on the false representation that the master had directed it, he does not become the servant of that other so as to be remediless for an injury by the negligence of the latter's servant.⁵

6. Signification of Term Servant in Bequests.—It is well settled that the word servants in bequests ordinarily means only those that are employed in and immediately around the homestead of the deviser.⁶

1. Perry v. Ford, 17 Mo. App. 212.
2. Barstow v. Old Colony R. Co., 143 Mass. 535; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 473; Sloan v. Central Iowa R. Co., 62 Iowa 728; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145; Union R. & T. Co. v. Gallaher, 114 Ill. 325; St. Louis etc. Co. v. Hendricks, 48 Ark. 177; McIntire R. Co. v. Balton (Ohio), 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 501. McKinney on Fellow Servants, § 19, and cases cited.

3. McCafferty v. Spuyten Duyvil etc. R. Co., 61 N. Y. 178; 19 Am. Rep. 267; Blake v. Ferris, 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 267; Allen v. Haywood, 7 A. & E. (N. S.) 974; Laugher v. Painter, 5 B. & C. 547; Reedie v. London & N. W. R. Co., 4 Exch. 244; Habbitt v. London & N. W. R. Co., 4 Exch. 253; Peck v. Mayor etc. of New York, 8 N. Y. 222; Kelley v. Mayor etc. of New York, 11 N. Y. 432; King v. N. Y. C. & H. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 181; 23 Am. Rep. 321; McCafferty v. Spuyten Duyvil etc. R. Co., 61 N. Y. 178; 19 Am. Rep. 267; Storrs v. Utica, 17 N. Y. 104; Coughly v. Globe Woolen Co., 56 N. Y. 124; Corby v. Hill, 4 C. B., N. S. 586; Chapman v. Rothwell, El. Bl. & El., 168; Haunsell v. Smith, 7 C. B., N. S. 738; Addison on Torts 197. See CONTRACTOR.

4. Coughly v. Globe Woolen Co., 56 N. Y. 124; 15 Am. Rep. 387; Barrett v. Singer Mfg. Co., 1 Sweeny (N. Y.) 545; Svenson v. Atlantic Mail S. S. Co., 57 N. Y. 108; Devlin v. Smith, 89 N. Y. 470; 42 Am. Rep. 311; Smith v. New York etc. R. Co., 19 N. Y. 127; Hass v. Philadelphia etc. S. Co., 88

Pa. St. 269; 32 Am. Rep. 462; Cunningham v. International R. Co., 51 Tex. 503; 32 Am. Rep. 632; Riley v. State Line S. S. Co., 29 La. An. 791; Goodfellow v. Boston etc. R. Co., 106 Mass. 461; Burke v. Norwich etc. R. Co., 34 Conn. 474; Lake Superior Iron Co. v. Erickson, 39 Mich. 402; Coggin v. Central etc. R. Co., 62 Ga. 685; McKinney on Fellow Servants, § 17.

Service of Contractor for Driving Logs.—A provision in a contract under which T was to drive the logs of W, that his men were to be paid off by W or his agent at the end of the drive, does not make the men employees of W. Wright v. Terry, 23 Fla. 160.

5. Kelly v. Johnson, 128 Mass. 530.
6. Nicoll v. Greaves, 17 C. B., N. S. 27; Rex v. Buckingham, 2 N. & M. 72; Nowlan v. Ablett, 2 C. M. & R. 54; Todd v. Kerrick, 8 Exch. 151; Turner v. Mason, 14 M. & W. 112; Townsend v. Windham, 2 Vern. 546; Chilcoth v. Bromley, 12 Ves. 114; Howard v. Wilson, 4 Hagg. 107; Ogle v. Morgan, 19 L. J., N. S. 531; Blackwell v. Pen-nant, 9 Hare 551; 16 Jur. 420; Booth v. Dean, 1 Myl. & K. 560; Herbert v. Reid, 16 Ves. 481; Vaughan v. Booth, 16 Jur. 808; 1 De G. M. & G. 359; 16 Jur. 277.

Rule in Pennsylvania.—It was held in an early Pennsylvania case that the term servants whose wages were by a legislative act to be paid out of an intestate's estate, in the same rank with physic and funeral expenses, embraced those only who, in common parlance, were domestics, persons who made a part of a man's family, and whose

III. THE RELATION—ITS INCEPTION—CONTRACT OF SERVICE—

1. How Relation Is Created.—The relation of master and servant is created by contract, either express or implied, where both parties have the requisite qualifications for entering into a valid contract. The most usual mode is by an express contract for services, usually termed a hiring.¹

2. When It Exists.—The relation exists only where the person sought to be charged as master employs or controls the person in question, or has the right of control over him at the time in question, or expressly or tacitly assents to the rendition of the particular service by him. He must, at the time, have the right to direct the action of the servant, and to accept or reject its rendition by him.² Such relation does not cease so long as the master retains his control or right of control over the methods and manner of doing the work or the agencies by which it is effected.³ Furthermore the relation exists where the latter is employed, not by the master directly, but by an employee in charge of a part of the master's business, with authority to engage assistance therein; and the fact that the subordinate employee receives compensation proportioned to the work done does not alter the case.⁴

3. Question of Law and Fact.—Where the question as to the existence of the relation is a mixed one of law and fact, it must be left to the jury.⁵ Likewise when a question of fact alone.⁶

business it is to assist in the economy of the family, or in matters connected with it, and that it did not comprehend workmen, employed at iron works, and the like. Ex parte Meason, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 167, and see Hart v. Aldridge, Cowp. 54.

1. Rapalje, & Lawrence's L. Dict. 801; Browne's Dom. Rel. 122. See in this connection prize essay, The Legal Relations of Capital and Labor, by Walter Howe, Esq., 1 N. Y. St. Bar Assoc. 105; Addison on Contracts 52; Minno v. Walker, 14 La. An. 581; Baxter v. Gray, 4 Scott H. R. 374.

2. Mound City Paint and Color Co. v. Conlon, 92 Mo. 221.

An agreed understanding is not essential to create the relation, it may be implied from circumstances; as where the master induces the belief that a certain person is his servant and thereby leads another to act upon such belief to his injury. Growcock v. Hall, 82 Ind. 202.

Evidence Admissible to Prove Existence.—Ordinarily any evidence tending to throw light on the question whether the master exercised control over the servant is competent, where the employment is not such as establishes the same as a matter of law. Fink v. Mis- souri Furnace Co., 10 Mo. App. 61.

The mode of payment is a circumstance of much weight in solving the question. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Reese, 61 Miss. 581; Corbin v. American Mills, 27 Conn. 274.

3. Fell v. Rich Hill Coal Mining Co., 23 Mo. App. 434.

4. Rummel Admr. v. Dilworth, 3 Pa. St. 343.

5. Brophy v. Bartlett, 108 N. Y. 632, reversing 37 Hun (N. Y.) 642.

6. Where a person was injured while leaving a boat on which he had been employed, held, it was for the jury to say, from the nature of the employment, the manner of engaging the hands, the usual mode of transacting such a business, and the other circumstances of the case, whether the relation of master and servant had or had not ceased at the time of the accident. North Western etc. Packet Co. v. McCue, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 508.

While in Charge of Horse.—And whether one in charge of a horse, with the owner's assent, and engaged on his business, but in the general employment of a third person, is the servant of the former or of the latter, depends upon the question whether the relation of the latter to the business was such

4. Rule as to Public Officers.—A public officer elected in a city or town, or appointed by the authorities thereof, pursuant to a statute, to perform duties of a public character, prescribed by the statute and not for the benefit of the city or town in its corporate capacity, is neither servant nor agent of the city or town.¹

5. Municipal Employees.—On the other hand, persons employed by municipalities to perform services in furtherance of the objects for which they were constituted, are their servants.²

IV. APPRENTICES—(See 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, p. 636).

V. PARTIES—WHO MAY ENTER INTO RELATION—1. Generally.—As a general rule, every person of the full age of twenty-one years, and not under any legal disability, is capable of becoming either a master or a servant.³ But where either of the parties entering into a contract for services is laboring under any legal disability, such as infancy, idiocy, lunacy, or, in case of a female the married relation, the contract cannot ordinarily be enforced, and the relation of master and servant in its full sense does not exist.⁴

2. Infants—(a) Generally—Common Law Rule.—According to the English rule, contracts of hiring and service by infants—that is, by persons who have not attained the age of twenty-one—are voidable at their option, unless they be for necessities or for their benefit.⁵ Contracts of hiring and service and apprenticeship are prima facie regarded as for the benefit of as to give him exclusive control and direction; and upon that question the jury are to pass. Kimball v. Cushman, 103 Mass. 194; Preston v. Knight, 120 Mass. 5.

1. See PUBLIC OFFICERS AND AGENTS.

Hafford v. New Bedford, 82 Mass. 297; Walcott v. Swamp Scott, 83 Mass. 101; D. v. Boston, 112 Mass. 75; Alger v. Easton, 119 Mass. 77; Sikes v. Hatfield, 79 Mass. 347; White v. Philipston, 51 Mass. 108; Buttrick v. Lowell, 83 Mass. 172; Trimball v. Boston, 83 Mass. 417; Baker v. Allen, 38 Mass. 382; Rossire v. Boston, 86 Mass. 57; Loud v. Charlestown, 99 Mass. 208.

Public Office—True Test.—The true test of a public office is that it is as parcel of the administration of government or is itself created by a law making power. Eliason v. Coleman, 86 N. Car. 235; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 433. See generally PUBLIC OFFICERS AND AGENTS.

2. Lloyd v. Mayor etc. of New York, 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 369; McCullough v. Mayor etc. of Brooklyn, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 458; Clayburg v. Chicago, 25 Ill. 535; Sexton v. St. Joseph, 60 Mo. 153;

Sterrett v. Houston, 14 Tex. 153; McLaughlin v. Municipality, 5 La. An. 504; Richmond v. Long, 17 Pratt (Va.) 230; Lacour v. Mayor, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 406; Conrad v. Ithica, 16 N. Y. 158; Boston v. Syracuse, 36 N. Y. 54; Mayor v. Thompson, 29 Ark. 569; Franklin Mfg. Co. v. Portland, 67 Me. 46; Skinkle v. Covington, 1 Bush (Ky.) 617; Carleton v. Iron Co., 99 Mass. 216; Pittsburg v. Grier, 22 Pa. St. 54; Farrrell v. Mayor, 12 Up. Can. Q. B. 313; Reeves v. Toronto, 21 Up. Can. Q. B. 157; Perdue v. Corporation etc., 25 Up. Can. 61. See PUBLIC OFFICERS AND AGENTS, this work.

3. Smith's Master and Servant 1; Fraser's Master and Servant 3; McDonell's Master and Servant 83.

4. Wood's Master and Servant, § 5.
5. Coke on Litt. 786.

Necessary Meats and Drink.—"And an infant shall be bounden by all acts done by him during his nonage, which acts are for his advantage, if not in some special cases; and therefore, if an infant, at the years of discretion, make a bond for his necessary meats and drink, or for his necessary apparel, or for his infants.¹ If, however, a contract of hiring and service between a minor and a person of full age be inequitable and prejudicial to the former, it will not bind him,² such as a contract which subjects an infant to a penalty or forfeiture.³

(b) The American Rule.—But such is not the law in this country; for it is certain that here an infant is not bound by a contract of hiring for a term, whether the same is beneficial to him or not, but such contract is voidable if he chooses so to regard it.⁴ Even should an infant decline to carry out a contract entered into by him, he may recover compensation for what he did, the same as if no contract had been made,⁵ schooling, he shall not avoid the same." Perkins C. I. S. 14.

1. Pollock on Contracts, p. 65.

Where Servant Has Bound Himself as Apprentice.—An infant who has bound himself as apprentice to one master cannot before the expiration of the period of service transfer his services to another. R. v. Arundel, 5 M. & S. 257; R. v. Chilesford, 4 B. & C. 102; Wood v. Fenwick, 10 M. & W. 195; Cooper v. Simmons, 31 L. G., M. C. 138; R. v. Wigston, 3 B. & C. 484.

2. Where a Servant Bargains Away All Rights.—As where an infant binds himself for twelve months not to engage in any other service or business during the whole time; the master free to stop work and wages when he thought fit; the servant liable to be dismissed for misconduct or disobedience, and in the event of dismissal to forfeit his wages. Taylor on Infancy and Coverture 43; Leslie v. Fitzpatrick, L. R., 3 Q. B. D. 229; 47 L. G., M. C. 22; 37 L. T. 461; Keene v. Boycott, 2 H. B. R. 515. See also R. v. St. Petrax, 4 T. R. 196; R. v. Ripon, 9 East 295; R. v. Cromford, 8 East 25; R. v. Arnesley, 3 B. & A. 584; R. v. Lyngnar, 4 B. & Ad. 647.

3. Co. Litt. 172 a; Bacon's Abridg., Infancy I, 1, 356; Ayliff v. Archdale, Cro. Eliz. 920; Russell v. Lee, 1 Lev. 86; Fisher v. Mawbray, 8 East 330; Baylis v. Dineley, 3 M. & S. 477.

4. Noxie v. Lincoln, 25 Vt. 206; Thomas v. Dike, 11 Vt. 273; Oaks v. Oaks, 27 Vt. 410; Judkins v. Walker, 17 Me. 38; Lowe v. Sinklear, 27 Mo. 308; Craighead v. Wells, 21 Mo. 404; Harine v. Harine, 11 Mo. 649; Kendall v. Lawrence, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 540; Vent v. Osgood, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 572; Thompson v. Hamilton, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 424; Arnold v. Richmond I. Works, 1 Gray (Mass.) 434; Sloan v. Hayden, 110 Mass. 161; Francis v. Felmit, 4

Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 498; Whitmarsh v. Hall, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 375; Boal v. Mix, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 119; Matter of McDowle, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 328; Ray v. Haines, 52 Ill. 485; Ingraham v. Baldwin, 9 N. Y. 45; Wheatly v. Miscal, 5 Ind. 142; Crouse v. Halman, 19 Ind. 30; Lufkin v. Mayall, 25 N. H. 82; Balch v. Smith, 12 N. H. 437; Hanson v. Cooper, 3 N. J. L. 866; Ivins v. Norcross, 2 N. J. L. 977; Oliver v. Hondlett, 13 Mass. 237; Pitcher v. Plank Road Co., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 436; Wheaton v. East, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 41; Bradford v. Westcott, 1 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 596; Grace v. Hale, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 27; Bryan v. Walton, 14 Ga. 185; Baker v. Lovett, 6 Mass. 48; Jenkins v. Jenkins, 12 Ga. 895; State v. Plaisted, 43 N. H. 413; Hardy v. Waters, 38 Me. 450; Slocum v. Hooker, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 536; Van Pelt v. Corwine, 6 Ind. 363; Garner v. Board, 27 Ind. 323; Lufkin v. Mayall, 25 N. H. 82; Medbury v. Watrous, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 110; Moses v. Stevens, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 332; Corpe v. Overton, 10 Bing. 252; Breed v. Judd, 1 Gray (Mass.) 655; Taft v. Pike, 14 Vt. 405; Stone v. Dennison, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Francis v. Felmit, 4 D. & B. (N. Car.) 408; Defrance v. Austin, 9 Pa. St. 309; Wilhelm v. Hardman, 13 Md. 40; Com. v. Moore, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 123; Cook v. Parker, 5 Phil. (Pa.) 265; Pierce v. Massenburg, 4 Leigh (Va.) 493; Clark v. Godard, 39 Ala. 164. Wood's Master and Servant, p. 7, n.

5. Rex v. Hindringham, 6 T. R. 557; Rex v. Wooton, 9 East 206; Rex v. Beaulieu, 3 M. & S. 229; Medbury v. Watrous, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 110; McCoy v. Huffman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 84; Van Pelt v. Corwine, 6 Ind. 363; Moses v. Stevens, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 332; Weeks v. Leighton, 5 N. H. 343; Derocher v. Continental Mills, 58 Me. 217; Noxie v. Lincoln, 25 Vt. 206, 4 Am. Rep. 286; and without deduction for damages for breach of the contract.¹

(c) Avoiding Contract.—While a contract entered into by an infant with an adult may be avoided by the former, the latter is bound until such act of avoidance occurs.²

(d) Consent or Contract of Parents.—A contract for services made with a minor is not invalid simply because it is not entered into with the parent or guardian; it is only voidable at the election of the parent or guardian.³ Employment of a minor without the parent's consent will, in the absence of other evidence, be presumed to be against the parent's will.⁴

A contract of service made by the father of an infant to be rendered by such infant to a third person, may be repudiated by him if the same is only partially carried out upon the death of his parent, or it may be carried out, in which event he can recover the whole amount due thereunder.⁵

(e) Ratification After Majority.—Where an infant enters into a contract for services, which will not expire until after he becomes of age, and he continues to perform his duties under the same after he has attained his majority, such continuance is looked upon by the law as an affirmation, and he cannot in such case recover anything whatever for his services, should he decline to carry out the contract to completion.⁶

(f) Existence of Relation Between Parent and Child.—The duty of a father to educate and maintain his minor children entitles him to their services, and creates the relation of master and servant between them.⁷ And this, though the child may be in the actual service of another, provided the father has the right at any time to reclaim his services.⁸

Thomas v. Dike, 11 Vt. 273; Nones v. Homer, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 116.

1. Meeker v. Hurd, 31 Vt. 639.

2. Nightingale v. Withington, 15 Mass. 272; Thompson v. Hamilton, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 425; Warwick v. Bruce, 2 M. & S. 205; Bruce v. Warwick, 6 Taunt. 118; Holt v. Clarencieux, 2 Stra. 937.

3. See Johnson v. Bicknell, 23 Me. 54; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Elliott, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 611; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Miller, 49 Tex. 322.

4. Pennsylvania Co v. Long, 94 Ind. 250.

Necessary Employment, Minor May Contract for.—While it may be wrongful as to the parent to employ a minor aged eighteen years in a business contrary to the wish of the parent, yet this does not deprive the son of the power to make a contract by which he may obtain necessary employment, and a contract so made creates between a railway company making it, with the son, and the son, the relation of master and servant. The duty of the former, however, in reference to care towards the latter, increases in proportion to his want of capacity. Texas etc. R. Co. v. Carlton, 60 Tex. 397, following 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 350; R. Co. v. Miller, 51 Tex. 274; Hamilton v. Galveston etc. R. Co., 54 Tex. 556, 562; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 528.

5. Campbell v. Cooper, 34 N. H. 49.

6. Forsyth v. Hastings, 27 Vt. 646; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Elliott, 1 Cold. (Tenn.) 611.

7. Louisville R. Co. v. Willis, 83 Ky. 58. In this case it was held that a father is entitled to recover of a railroad company for an injury received by his minor son while rendering the company services as brakeman on a train, under the direction of the conductor, although the son was not employed for wages.

8. Bolton v. Miller, 6 Ind. 262. And see The Ætna, Ware (U. S.) 674; McGinnis v. The Grand Turk, Ware (U. S.) 474; Coffin v. Shaw, 3 Ware (U. S.) 82; Plummer v. Webb, 4 Mas.

The parent cannot, however, recover on the contract entered into by his minor son the wages therein specified unless the same was carried out, or broken for good reason. And where an infant enters into a contract unknown to his father, the parent, upon discovery of the same, must either prohibit its continuance, in which event he may recover what the services were worth, or he must see that the contract is carried out; which done, the compensation agreed upon may be recovered.¹

(g) Emancipation, Generally.—The father may sell his infant children their time during minority, either in writing or by parol, or may give them their time, or may authorize them to make contracts for their services, and receive their pay therefor; and when such authority is once given it cannot be withdrawn so as to affect a contract made in pursuance of it, and in such cases the minor may sue for and recover his wages.² Or the parent may authorize his infant son to have half his earnings, in which case they may be paid to or recovered by him.³

(U. S.) 360; Gifford v. Hallock, 3 Ware (U. S.) 45; Roby v. Lyndall, 4 Cranch, C. C. (U. S.) 351; Stone v. Pulsipher, 16 Vt. 428; Luscom v. Osgood, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 82; Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 204; Latts v. Brooks, H. & D.'s Sup. (N. Y.) 36.

Mother's Rights.—A mother who discharges her parental duties toward her children according to her means is entitled, if a widow, to the earnings of her minor children. Matthewson v. Perry, 37 Conn. 435; Simpson v. Buck, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 337; Cain v. De Vilt, 8 Iowa 116; Kerwin v. Wright, 59 Ind. 369; Hammond v. Corbett, 50 N. H. 501.

But a mother may part with the custody and control of her child by written contract, which will bind her although the child may not itself be bound. Dumain v. Gwynne, 10 Allen (Mass.) 272; Curtis v. Curtis, 5 Gray (Mass.) 535; Osborn v. Allen, 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 388.

1. Rogers v. Steele, 24 Vt. 513.

2. Wood's Master and Servant (2nd ed.), § 25; Chase v. Elkins, 2 Vt. 290; Chase v. Smith, 5 Vt. 556; Tillotson v. McCrellis, 11 Vt. 477; Winn v. Sprague, 35 Vt. 243; Jenny v. Alden, 12 Mass. 375; Wood v. Corcoran, 1 Allen (Mass.) 405; Abbott v. Converse, 4 Allen (Mass.) 530; McCay v. Huffman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 84; Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 204; Burlingame v. Burlingame, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 92; Luscom v. Osgood, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 82; Gifford v. Hallock, 3 Ware (U. S.) 45; Coffin v. Shaw, 3 Ware (U. S.) 82; Roby v. Lyndall, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 351; Plummer v. Webb,

4 Mass. 380; McGinnis v. The Grand Trunk, 9 Pittsb. L. J. (Pa.) 257; Stone v. Pulsipher, 16 Vt. 428; Farrell v. Farrell, 3 Houst. (Del.) 633; Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 204; White v. Henry, 24 Me. 531.

Where Parent is a Pauper.—Where, however, the parent is a pauper, his minor child is considered by the law to be emancipated. Jenness v. Emerson, 15 N. H. 486; Sanford v. Lebanon, 31 Me. 240.

See generally Conover v. Cooper, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 115; Rush v. Vaught, 55 Pa. St. 437; McCloskey v. Cyphert, 3 Casey (Pa.) 220; McGinnis v. The Grand Trunk R. Co., 9 Pittsb. L. J. (Pa.) 257; U. S. v. Mertz, 2 Watts (Pa.) 406; Ream v. Watkins, 27 Mo. 516; Smith v. Knowlton, 11 N. H. 191; Gale v. Parrott, 1 N. H. 28; Lord v. Poor, 23 Me. 569; Atwood v. Holcomb, 39 Conn. 270; Marse v. Welton, 6 Conn. 547; Bobo v. Bryson, 21 Ark. 387; Fairhurst v. Lewis, 23 Ark. 435; Lyon v. Balling, 14 Ala. 753; Everett v. Sherply, 1 Iowa 356; Eubanks v. Peak, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 497; Nightingale v. Withington, 15 Mass. 272; Wodell v. Coggeshall, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 89; Abbott v. Converse, 4 Allen (Mass.) 530; Dumain v. Gwynne, 10 Allen (Mass.) 270; The Ætina, 1 Ware (U. S.) 462; Stansbury v. Bertron, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 362; West v. Platt, 127 Mass. 367; Ford v. Ford, 143 Mass. 577; O'Donnell v. Clinton, 145 Mass. 461.

3. Winn v. Sprague, 35 Vt. 243.

Emancipation in Consideration of Certain Sum per Annum.—An agreement

(4) How Emancipation Is Effected.—A parent may emancipate his child by refusing him support, or denying him a home, or compelling him to labor abroad for his own living, as well as by selling him his time.¹ The emancipation may be by writing or by parol.² It is furthermore true that there may be emancipation by implication.³

It has been held in some States that the legal marriage of a minor operates as an emancipation.⁴

between father and son, by which the former agrees to relinquish his right to the services of the latter during his minority, for a certain sum per annum, reserving a claim upon his wages to that amount, and the right to treat the agreement as void in case that sum is not paid, and also to have the care of the son, and the control of his affairs during his minority, so far as to see that he gets his pay from those for whom he works, and that his wages are kept for his use and benefit, is not such an agreement of emancipation as divests the father of his right to sue and collect pay for his son's services. Mason v. Hutchins, 32 Vt. 780.

1. Tyler's Infancy and Coverture 201, citing Lochman v. Wood, 25 Cal. 167; Campbell v. Campbell, 3 Stock. (Md.) 218; Galbraith v. Black, 4 S. & R. Pa. 209, 211; Monaghan v. School Dist., 38 Wis. 100; Wambald v. Vick, 50 Wis. 456; Jenison v. Granes, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 449; Atwood v. Holcomb, 39 Conn. 270; Morse v. Welton, 6 Conn. 543; Tillotson v. McCrellis, 11 Vt. 477; Gale v. Parrot, 1 N. H. 28; Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 204; King v. Brown, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 485; Eubanks v. Peak, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 497; Wood v. Corcoran, 1 Allen (Mass.) 605.

Legislative Emancipation.—As to legislation in Louisiana see Succession of Lyne, 12 La. An. 155. Gordon v. Gilfoil, 99 U. S. 168; State v. Bunce, 65 Mo. 349.

2. Ream v. Watkins, 27 Mo. 516; Farrell v. Farrell, 3 Houst. (Del.) 633; Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 206; Chase v. Elkins, 2 Vt. 290; Chase v. Smith, 5 Vt. 556; Hall v. Hall, 44 N. H. 293; Dennysville v. Tuscott, 30 Me. 470.

3. Dodge v. Favor, 15 Gray (Mass.) 82. This was an action brought by a parent to recover for the services of a minor son. There was evidence that the son began to work for the defendants against the father's wishes, and that he requested his son to tell the defendants that he claimed the son's wages, but that neither of these facts was known to the defendants; that the father knew that his son was in the defendant's employ, and never demanded his wages of them, did not offer to pay for his board, and furnished him with only inconsiderable sums of money. Held, that the plaintiff had no ground for exception, because the judge declined to instruct the jury that there was no evidence that he had waived his right to his son's wages, and that the law would not raise a presumption that the father had emancipated his son, or waived his right to his wages, against the father's positive declarations to the contrary.

Likewise where a parent does not in any way interfere with them or their contracts. Farrell v. Farrell, 3 Houst. (Del.) 633. See also Manchester v. Smith, 72 Pick. (Mass.) 115; Nightingale v. Withington, 15 Mass. 272; Benson v. Remington, 2 Mass. 113; Whiting v. Erle, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 201; Galbraith v. Black, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 207; Sumner v. Sebec, 3 Me. 223; The Ætna, Ware (U. S.) 474; Steele v. Thatcher, Ware (U. S.) 91; Godfrey v. Hays, 6 Ala. 501; Lord v. Poor, 23 Me. 569; Stone v. Pulsifer, 16 Vt. 428; Benson v. Remington, 2 Mass. 113; Jenney v. Alden, 12 Mass. 375; Angel v. McClellan, 16 Mass. 28; Woodell v. Coggeshall, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 89; Dierker v. Hess, 54 Mo. 246.

4. Dicks v. Grisson, 1 Freem. (Miss.) Ch. 428; Burr v. Wilson, 18 Tex. 367; Sherburne v. Hartland, 37 Vt. 528; Northfield v. Brookfield, 50 Vt. 62.

We find it laid down in one State, however, that such would not be the effect unless the parent consented to the ceremony. White v. Henry, 24 Me. 531; Bucksport v. Rockland, 56 Me. 22.

Marriage of Female Minor.—And a female minor is emancipated by marriage on the ground that her husband is in law entitled to her society. Woods Inst. 64. Jenney v. Alden, 12 Mass.

(i) Contract of Emancipated Minor.—A minor, therefore, who is released from his father's service stands, as to his contracts for labor either with strangers or with him, upon the same footing as if he had arrived at full age; and the father may himself contract to employ and pay the child for his services, and be bound in consequence like any stranger to fulfil his agreement.¹

(j) Revocation of Emancipation.—It is furthermore true that where the emancipation arises from neglect on the part of the parent, he may subsequently offer to provide for the wants of the minor and reclaim his services.²

For the consent of a parent that his minor child may work and receive pay for himself, is but a licence, revocable at will, as between him and the child. It is only when the implied emancipation has been acted upon by some third party, dealing with the child in good faith, that the parent will be estopped to assert his customary right against such third person.³ And furthermore, when the emancipation is by parol and without consideration it may be revoked before it is acted upon.⁴

(k) Duty and Liability of Hirer of Infant.—A person hires and pays a minor at his peril. If he fails to ascertain the status of the child he must take what consequence may arise.⁵ But where a minor absconds from his father's house and enters the service of one who, for his labor, furnishes the infant a reasonable support, the father can only recover in an action against the employer the value of the services rendered less the worth of the necessities supplied.⁶

375; McCoy v. Huffman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 84; Rush v. Vought, 55 Pa. St. 437; McCloskey v. Cyphert, 3 Casey (Pa.) 220; Steele v. Thatcher, Ware (U. S.) 91; Roby v. Lyndall, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 351; McGinnis v. The Grand Trunk, 9 Pittsb. L. J., 257; Conover v. Cooper, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 115; Dicks v. Grisson, 1 Freem. (Miss.) Ch. 428; Aldrich v. Bennett, 63 N. H. 415.

Enlistment.—It has been held in England that a minor was not emancipated by his enlistment. Rex v. Rotherfield, Grays 1 B. & C. 347.

The Parent's Intention—Question of.—And where a parent by his acts shows an implied emancipation he cannot afterwards testify in a suit brought by him for damages for loss of his son's wages, that it had not been his intention to emancipate the son. McCarthy v. Boston etc. R. Co., 148 Mass. 550.

1. Schouler's Dom. Rel., § 268.

2. Keen v. Sprague, 3 Me. 77; Sumner v. Sebec, 3 Me. 223; State v. Smith, 6 Me. 462; Johnson v. Terry, 34 Conn. 259; Com. v. Demott, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 624.

3. Saldanels v. Mo. Pac. R. Co., 23 Mo. App. 516.

4. Abbott v. Converse, 6 Allen (Mass.) 530. And see Jenney v. Alden, 12 Mass. 375; Nightingale v. Withington, 15 Mass. 271; Whiting v. Earle, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 29; Cahill v. Bigelow, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 268; Sumner v. Sebec, 3 Greenl. (Me.) 167; Bray v. Wheeler, 29 Vt. 514; Kauffelt v. Moderswell, 21 Pa. St. 222; Stimson's Am. Stat. Law, §§ 4110-4147-6600.

5. James v. Le Roy, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 274; Conaub v. Raymond, 2 Aiken (Vt.) 243; Munsey v. Goodwin, 3 N. H. 272; Bowes v. Tibbetts, 7 Me. 457; Roby v. Lyndall, 4 Cranch, C. C. (U. S.) 351; Dufield v. Cross, 12 Ill. 397; Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 206; Benson v. Remington, 2 Mass. 113; White v. Henry, 26 Me. 531.

Wages Earned by Minor in Unlawful Employment.—A father may recover wages earned by his infant son in an unlawful business if he knew nothing of its nature during the continuance of such employment. Emery v. Kempton, 2 Gray (Mass.) 257.

6. Huntoon v. Hazleton, 20 N. H. 388; Pidgin v. Cram, 8 N. H. 352; Rawlins v. Van Dyke, 3 Esp. 250.

A false statement, made by a son to his employer that he has been emancipated by his father, will not estop a recovery by the father of the wages of the son, where the employer did, or neglected to do, anything on the faith of the communication.¹

(l) Step, Adopted and Illegitimate Children.—A stepfather has no control over the earnings of his stepchildren.²

In default of a legislative enactment giving persons adopting children the rights of parents, such persons have no claim to the earnings of infants as against parents.³

The mother of an illegitimate child is entitled to its earnings so long as she has the right to its custody or control, and discharges her parental duties toward it.⁴

(m) Infant, as a Master.—There is no reason why an infant should not be a master.⁵

3. Married Women.—At common law a married woman could not enter into a contract of hiring and service which would bind her.⁶ But statutes both in England and America have done much to qualify the above doctrine. And where, under the law, a married woman may manage her own property, carry on trades in her own name and upon her own account, there can be no question that she may hire servants and bind herself for the payment of their wages.⁷

4. Persons of Unsound Mind.—The position of a lunatic or person of unsound mind is considered in general to bear same analogy to that of an infant in regard to his liability upon contracts. For although, strictly speaking, a person of unsound mind is incompetent to contract, yet there can be no doubt that a lunatic would be held liable to pay for any services which had been rendered to him, provided they were such as might reasonably be considered necessary for a person in his station in life. In such a case the

1. Mason v. Hutchins, 32 Vt. 780.

2. Worcester v. Marchant, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 510; Com. v. Hamilton, 6 Mass. 273; Freto v. Brown, 4 Mass. 675; Williams v. Hutchinson, 3 N. Y. 312.

3. Rives v. Sneed, 25 Ga. 612.

4. Robalina v. Armstrong, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 247; People v. Kling, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 366; Carpenter v. Whitman, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 208; People v. Landt, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 375; Matter of Dodge, 1 Clark's Ch. (N. Y.) 184; Wright v. Wright, 2 Mass. 109; Com. v. Fee, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 255; Com. v. Anderson, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 55; Matter of Celina, 7 La. An. 162.

5. Macdonell's Master and Servant 80; Hands v. Slaney, 8 T. R. 578; Chapple v. Cooper, 13 M. & W. 252, 258; Rex v. St. Petrax, 4 T. R. 196; 2 Batt. 377; and Cald. 444. See generally Titman v. Titman, 64 Pa. St. 480;

Hall v. Hall, 44 N. H. 293; Eustace v. Peak, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 497; Dunley v. Rector, 5 Eng. (Ark.) 211; Dierker v. Hess, 54 Mo. 246; Dodge v. Favor, 15 Gray (Mass.) 82; Reg. v. Selborne, 2 El. & Cl. 275; The King v. Wilmington, 5 B. & Ald. 525; Rex v. Hardwick, 5 B. & Ald. 179. See also INFANCY.

6. Bidgood v. Way, 2 W. Bl. 12, 36; Marshall v. Rutton, 8 T. R. 545; Lambert v. Atkins, 2 Camp. 272; Liverpool Adelphi Loan Assoc. v. Fairhurst, 9 Exch. 422.

7. Wood's Master and Servant, § 35; See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 289; Stimson's Stat. Law; Liabilities of Married Women, §§ 1974, 6402-4, 6410-4; Powers of Married Women, §§ 1869, 2607, 3245, 4110, 6353, 6450-6, 6470-1, 6480-3, 6500-1, 6520-2; Rights of Married Women, §§ 27, 6017, 6350-9.

law would imply a promise to pay for them. And modern cases show that when a party entering into a contract is a lunatic, but the state of his mind is unknown to the other party, who has taken no advantage of the lunatic, he would not be allowed to set up his lunacy as a defence to an action on the contract, especially in a case where the contract was not merely executory, but executed in the whole or in part, and the parties could not be restored altogether to their original position.¹ A lunatic may also be bound by contracts involving services suitable to his rank and station.²

5. Corporations.—Corporations, municipal, public or private may ordinarily employ and discharge servants the same as a private individual.³

The president and superintendent of a corporation have, unless restrained by the articles or bylaws, the authority to hire men to carry on the company's business.⁴

6. Partners.—Each partner, in the prosecution of this business, has the implied power to employ labor or engage services, such as are necessary to conduct the ordinary business of joint enterprise.⁵

1. Smith's Master and Servant 16; Macdonell's Master and Servant, § 106. And see Wentworth v. Tubb, 1 Y. & C. N. C. 171; Malton v. Camroux, 2 Exch. 487; Read v. Legard, 6 Exch. 626; Beavan v. M'Donnell, 9 Exch. 309; Hassard v. Smith, 6 Ir. Eq. 429; Maddox v. Simmons, 31 Ga. 512; Ingraham v. Baldwin, 9 N. Y. 45; Crowther v. Rowlandson, 27 Cal. 376.

2. Baxter v. Earl of Portsmouth, 5 B. & C. 170.

In this case carriages were furnished a man of rank. And see Skidmore v. Romaine, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 122; Richardson v. Strong, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 106; Pearl v. McDowell, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 658; Crowther v. Rowlandson, 27 Cal. 376; Lincoln v. Buckminster, 32 Vt. 652; Maddox v. Simmons, 31 Ga. 512; Ingraham v. Baldwin, 9 N. Y. 45; Sims v. McClure, 8 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 286; Dodds v. Wilson, 1 Treadw. (S. Car.) 448; Pearl v. McDowell, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 658; Richardson v. Strong, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 106; Skidmore v. Romaine, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 122.

3. See CORPORATIONS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 184.

4. Hardy v. Tittabawassee Boom Co. (Mich.), 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 228.

And it was likewise held in above case that a resolution by the board of directors authorizing the employment of a certain class of men at a certain rate of compensation was in no sense a restriction of the power of the company through its officers to hire other men than those alluded to on the same terms. See OFFICERS AND AGENTS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

5. Beckham v. Drake, 9 M. & W. 79; Carley v. Jenkins, 46 Vt. 721; Mead v. Shepard, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 474; Smith v. Cisson, 1 Colo. 29.

Members of Mining Partnership.—Nolan v. Lavelock, 1 Mont. 224; Burgan v. Lyell, 2 Mich. 102; Potter v. Moses, 1 R. I. 430. And see Charles v. Eshelman, 5 Colo. 107.

Of Partnership to Cut Timber.—Mead v. Shepard, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 474; Coons v. Renick, 11 Tex. 134, 138. See generally Durgin v. Somers, 117 Mass. 55; Tobacco Co. v. Jenison, 48 Mich. 459; Wheatley v. Tutt, 4 Kan. 240; Frye v. Sanders, 21 Kan. 26; Swan v. Stedman, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 548; Wills v. Cutler, 61 N. H. 405; Harvey v. McAdams, 32 Mich. 472; Bank v. Embury, 21 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 14; Tillier v. Whitehead, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 269; Emerson v. Hat Co., 12 Mass. 237. See Bates on Partnership, 334-5. See also article PARTNERSHIP.

One partner may incur the necessary expenses for the employment of assistants in the closing up of the partnership relation. 2 Bates on Partnership 692; Holloway v. Turner, 61 Md. 217; Bradley v. Camp, Kirby (Conn.) 77.

7. Agents.—An agent, like any other person, may act by the hand of a servant as well as by his own hand, in cases where the act is merely physical, or where mind enters into it so little that it would be absurd to say that the difference between one mind and another could be of any moment.¹

VI. THE CONTRACT OF SERVICE—1. Generally.—The contract of employment is a contract by which one who is called the employer engages another, who is called the employee, to do something for the benefit of the employer or of a third person. The authority to employ an agent or servant includes, in the absence of restrictive words, authority to make a complete contract, definite as to amount of wages, as well as to all other terms.²

2. The Consideration.—The ordinary presumption of law is that contracts are based upon a full and sufficient consideration.³ But in many contracts of service the consideration is not expressed. The parties have in mind certain usages. They do not state that which they assume need not be stated, and they are content to take for granted many of the terms of their agreement. Questions of difficulty frequently arise as to whether there exists a contract the consideration of which is implied, or may be fairly inferred, or whether there is a mere promise which is not binding owing to the absence of consideration.⁴

3. Necessity for Mutual Obligations.—The courts will not allow

And he can retain a person already in charge of partnership property, although the other partner orders his discharge. Holloway v. Turner, 61 Md. 217. See PARTNERSHIP.

1. Mason v. Joseph, 1 Smith (Pa.) 406; Powell v. Tuttle, 3 Comst. (N. Y.) 396; Moore v. Wilson, 6 Fost. (N. H.) 332; Com. Bank of Pa. v. Union Bank of N. Y., 1 Kern (N. Y.) 203; Williams v. Woods, 16 Md. 220. See AGENCY, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 331.

The assent of the minds of both parties is necessary to constitute a contract, and, if one makes a proposition, he may recall it at any time before its acceptance; but it is not necessary that the mutual consent of the two minds should occur at the same time. Sanford v. Howard, 29 Ala. 684; Haltzman v. Millaudon, 18 La. An. 29.

Construction of Contracts.—A contract for service is construed and governed only by the general principles of the law of contracts. 1 Parsons on Contracts 112.

2. AGENCY, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 364, which see for all the cases.

Party Hiring Primarily Liable.—A party who employs another to do work is primarily liable to the employee for his wages, although he was under contract with others to do the same work. McFadden v. Crawford, 39 Cal. 662.

3. Macdonell's Master and Servant 126.

As to what constitutes a valid consideration, see CONTRACTS, vol. 3, p. 831.

Need Not be Adequate.—The consideration need not be such as in fairness would be adequate; that is a matter for the parties to the agreement. The courts will not, for example, enquire whether a servant's wages are too low, or whether the agreement of hiring is too much to the advantage of one of the parties. Hitchcock v. Coker, 6 A. & E. 438.

4. Whittle v. Frankland, 2 B. & S. 55; Mayor of Kidderminster v. Hardwick, L. R., 9 Ex. 13; Arnold v. Mayor of Poole, 4 M. & G. 896.

Time and Wages Not Stated.—Where one person enters into the employment of another without an express agreement as to the time of service or measure of compensation, in the absence of any proof of usage, it is to be considered as a general hiring. Matter of Application of Gardner, 103 N. Y. 533.

an action where A is not bound to serve, and B to retain him in service, although it is well settled that if A enter upon certain duties and performs them, the law will in some cases imply a promise by B to pay, and A will be entitled under those circumstances to recover.¹ But where B seeks to compel A to fulfil an agreement to work, it must be shown that there is an obligation on the part of B to retain him in service.²

4. Term of Service.—A servant is presumed to have been hired for such length of time as the parties adopt for the estimation of wages. A hiring at a yearly rate is presumed to be for one year; a hiring at a daily rate, for one day; a hiring by piece work, for no specified term.³ But such fact does not, in the absence of other evidence, fix the period of hiring.⁴

1. Elsee v. Gatward, 5 T. R. 143.

2. Thorn v. Mayor of London, L. R., 10 Ex. 123; 44 L. J., Ex. 70; Lees v. Whitcomb, 5 Bing. 34; Sykes v. Dixon, 9 A. & E. 963; Aspdin v. Austin, 2 Q. B. 671; Dunn v. Sayles, 5 Q. B. 685.

See, however, McIntyre v. Belcher, 32 L. J., C. P. 254; Worthington v. Ludlaw, 31 L. J., Q. B. 134; Emmens v. Elderton, H. of L. Cas. 624.

Agreement with Owner of Colliery.—Defendants, owners of a colliery, hired plaintiff to hew coals at certain rates, according to work done, and plaintiff agreed to continue defendant's servant all the time the pit should be laid off work, and when required to do a full day's work on every working day. Held, defendants were not obliged to employ plaintiff for a reasonable number of working days during the term. Williamson v. Taylor, 5 Q. B. 175.

Lack of Obligation to Serve.—Defendants agreed that plaintiffs should have defendant's ship brokerage business at Sydney upon certain terms, and that defendants would provide plaintiffs with free passage to that port. Held void, plaintiffs not being bound to serve defendants. Payne v. New South Wales etc. Co., 10 Ex. 283.

Undertaking to Employ for Seven Years.—Where plaintiff agreed with L that he should serve them for seven years; that he should not during that term work for any other person without the licence of the plaintiff; that it should be lawful for the plaintiffs to deduct from his wages any fines, etc., and that the plaintiffs should have the option of dismissing him on giving a month's notice or a month's wages; it was held that, looking to the provisions of the agreement, there was an undertaking to employ L for seven years. Pickington v. Scott, 15 M. & W. 657.

Agreement to Serve Exclusively—Restraint of Trade—Mutuality.—Where there was an agreement between plaintiff and A, that A should serve for seven years at a given rate of wages, and not work for or serve any other person without his master's consent, in consideration of which plaintiff agreed to pay A 24s. per week for certain work; plaintiff to be at liberty, if Q were sick, or if A discontinued the trade, to retain any other person in A's place, without paying him wages. The court held the agreement not void for want of mutuality, or for being in unreasonable restraint of trade. Hartley v. Cummings, 5 C. B. 247.

And where one R. Whittaker, in consideration of £3, lent or advanced to him by certain persons mentioned in the agreement and of wages to be paid by them, agreed to serve them and no one else with their consent for twelve months, and during and until the expiration of three months from notice of his desire to terminate the service. The employers agreed to pay on Saturday night in every week during the term all such wages as the articles made by Whittaker amounted to. There was a proviso that either party to the agreement might, after twelve months give three months' notice. Held, that the contract was not void for want of mutuality. Rex v. Welch, 2 E. & B. 357.

3. Beach v. Mullin, 34 N. J. L. 343; Cal. Civ. Code, 2010.

4. Patterson v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., 106 Mass. 56; Evans v. St. Louis I. M. & S. R. Co., 24 Mo. App. 114; Prentiss v. Ledyard, 28 Wis. 131; Thomas v. Hatch, 53 Wis. 206.

An offer was made by letter to give

5. Written Contract—Parol Proof.—Where the contract is in writing, parol proof is inadmissible to vary the terms thereof.¹ But upon all questions bearing upon the interpretation of contracts, custom has a strong bearing.²

Where one is hired to work by the week or month, the burden of proof is upon him to show any change in the contract of hiring, as to the term of service.³

6. Fixed Compensation—Entire Time.—Where one enters into a contract of service for a fixed compensation, he, prima facie, agrees to give his employer his entire time.⁴ But this, it seems, is not an inflexible rule.⁵

VII. STATUTE OF FRAUDS.—1. Written and Parol Contracts Generally.—By the common law, a servant might be hired, either by deed or by a parol contract;⁶ and when hired or retained by deed, he could only be discharged from the contract by an equally employment to the person to whom the letter was addressed, upon terms which were fully stated; and the letter concluded, "and if you give me satisfaction at the end of the first year, I will increase your salary accordingly." The proposal contained in the letter was accepted. Held, that the letter, and its acceptance, by legal construction, constituted a contract of hiring for one year. Norton v. Cornell, 65 Md. 359.

Salary for a Year Payable Weekly.—A general engagement of a servant "at a salary of $1,500 a year, payable weekly," unaffected by any other considerations growing out of the custom of the place, the conduct of the parties, or other extraneous evidence disclosing a contrary intention, constitutes a contract of hiring for the year. Bleeker v. Johnson, 51 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 380.

Contract Providing for Semi-annual Payments.—Where one was under monthly employment, and told his employer that he wished it more permanent, and an amount per year was agreed upon payable semi-annually, a hiring for a year may be inferred. Bascom v. Shillito, 37 Ohio St. 431.

Salary Payable Quarterly.—A hiring for personal services, for which payment is made quarterly, is not necessarily a hiring by the quarter, or terminable by a quarter's notice. Tatterson v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., 106 Mass. 56.

Continuance in Business Under Agreement.—A agreed to work for B for a year, and for a second year at an advanced rate if B should continue in the business. Held, that if B continued with A as partner he continued in business within the meaning of the contract. Collett v. Smith, 143 Mass. 473.

Contract for Certain Sum per Annum.—A contract for service "at a salary of $2,500 per annum," is not a contract for any definite time, and at a fixed price, the complete performance of which is a condition precedent to the right of compensation. The employee is not bound to serve for any definite time to entitle him to compensation. Haney v. Caldwell, 35 Ark. 156.

Contract Conditioned Upon Servants Suiting.—D was employed by S for a week, and if she suited to continue during the summer months. Before the end of the week S declared that D suited, and D said, "Then as long as I suit you there is no fear for the summer months;" to which S replied affirmatively. Held, that the employment remained conditional on D's continuing to suit S. Daveny v. Shattuck, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 66.

1. A written contract to labor at $90 per month cannot be varied by parol proof that board was included. Lennard v. Vischer, 2 Cal. 37.

2. Lyon v. George, 44 Md. 295.

3. State v. Fisher Varnish Co., 43 N. J. L. 151.

4. Leach v. Hannibal etc., R. Co., 86 Mo. 27.

An insurance agent contracting to devote his entire time and energy to the company's business is bound to devote his time and energies with that degree of diligence and attention usual among industrious business men engaged in like business and pursuing no other occupation. Ehrlich v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 88 Mo. 249.

5. See Goffroy v. King, 34 Md. 207; Geiger v. Harris, 19 Md. 209.

6. Beckham v. Drake, 9 M. & W. 79.

formal instrument,¹ but when hired by parol he could, of course, be discharged by parol.²

Since the passing of the statute of frauds, however, it has become necessary, in many cases, that contracts of hiring should be in writing.³

2. Contract for More than One Year.—A contract for service running for a longer term than one year is within the statute and to be valid must be in writing;⁴ and a verbal contract involving services of one to another for a year to commence in the future is void; for such contract is operative from the day when made, and the year ends with the ending of one year from that day.⁵

1. Pawlet v. Burnham, 1 Sess. Ca. 71, 2 Batt. 424.

2. Dalt. Just., ch. 58; R. v. Daniel, 6 Mod. 182.

3. In interpretation of the English statute of frauds see Carrington v. Roots, 2 M. & W. 248; Reade v. Lamb, 28 M. & P. 67, 69. Compare Leroux v. Brown, 17 C. B. 801; also see Souch v. Strawberrybridge, 2 C. B. 815; Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East 142; Peter v. Compton, 1 Sm. L. C. 296 and note; Cherry v. Heming, 4 Exch. 631; 19 L. J. Exch. 63. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, 8 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 686.

Oral Contracts Made Abroad.—No oral contract made abroad can be enforced in this country, if such contract is within the statute of frauds. It was so held in an English case, where an oral agreement was entered into at Calais, France, between the plaintiff and defendant, under which the latter, who resided in England, contracted to employ the former, who was a British subject resident at Calais, at a salary of £100 per annum, to collect poultry and eggs in that neighborhood for transmission to England, the employment to commence at a future day, and to continue for one year certain, the contract being broken by the defendant. Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801.

4. McElroy v. Ludlum, 32 N. Y. Eq. 828; Dickson v. Frisbee, 52 Ala. 165. And see Owen v. Slatter, 26 Ala. 547; Cawthorne v. Cowdrey, 13 Com. Bench Rep. (N. S.) 406; Levison v. Stix, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 229; Britain v. Rossiter, 11 L. R., Q. B. Div. 123; 48 L. J., Exch. Div. 262; 40 L. J., N. S. 240; 27 W. R. 482 C. A.; Bracegirdle v. Heald, 1 B. & Ald. 722; Dobson v. Collins, 1 H. & N. 81; Cawthorn v. Cowdrey, 32 L. J., C. P. 125; Barstow v. Gray, 3 Moe. 409; Getchell v. Jewett, 4 Me. 35, 366; Atwood v. Cobb, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 227; Bernier v. Cabot Manuf. Co., 71 Me. 506; 36 Am. Rep. 343; Doyle v. Dixon, 97 Mass. 208; Drummond v. Burrell, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 358.

Labor to be Begun as Soon as Convenient.—August 20th an oral contract was made between A and B by which A was to enter B's service for one year, A to begin the term of service as soon as he could. A began work August 27th. Held, that the contract was within the statute, being an oral contract not to be performed within a year. Sutcliffe v. Atlantic Mills, 13 R. I. 480; 43 Am. Rep. 39. See Russell v. Slade, 12 Conn. 455; Snelling v. Lord Huntingfield, 1 Crompt. M. & R. 19.

Or to be Terminated After Eleven Months by Three Months' Notice.—Also where a verbal agreement on the 2nd October, 1854, between A and B, provided that A should employ B as a traveller, until the 1st of September, 1855, and for a year thereafter, unless the employment were determined by three months' notice. Dobson v. Collins, 1 H. & N. 81. See Langbon v. Carleton, L. R., 9 Exch. 57; Brown v. Symons, 8 C. B. (N. S.) 208; Thompson v. Maberly, 3 Camp. 573.

5. McAleer v. Corning, 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 63. And see Scoggin v. Blackwell, 36 Ala. 351; Crommelin v. Thiess, 31 Ala. 412; Philbrook v. Belknap, 6 Vt. 383; Amburger v. Marvin, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 393; Taggard v. Roosevelt, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 111; Little v. Wilson, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 422; Frank v. Miller, 38 Md. 450; Long v. Henry, 54 N. H. 57; Squire v. Whipple, 1 Vt. 69; Hinckley v. Southgate, 11 Vt. 429; Tuttle v. Sweet, 31 Me. 555. And see generally Currie v. McLean, 2 Macph. (Sc.) 1076; Halloway v. Hampton, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 415; Kleeman v. Collins, 9 Bush (Ky.) 460; Hinckley v. Southgate, 11 Vt. 428; Footte v. Emerson, 10 Vt. 738; Comstock v. Ward, 22

But where one person orally agrees to labor for another for a year, does so, and begins a new year without a new bargain, the original contract is competent evidence of the terms of an implied new contract, and the statute of frauds does not bar the action.¹ And where the contract is such that the whole may be performed within a year, the statute does not apply.²

Ill. 248; Herrin v. Butters, 20 Me. 119; Norris v. Porter, 2 Har. (Del.) 27; Nones v. Homer, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 116; Scoggin v. Blackwell, 36 Ala. 351; Little v. Wilson, 4 E. D. S. (N. Y.) 422; Amburger v. Marvin, 4 E. D. S. (N. Y.) 393; Taggard v. Roosevelt, 4 E. D. S. (N. Y.) 422; Squire v. Whipple, 1 Vt. 69; Kelly v. Terrell, 26 Ga. 551; Frank v. Miller, 38 Md. 450; Long v. Neury, 54 N. H. 57; Wilson v. Martin, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 602; Comas v. Lamson, 16 Conn. 246; Tuttle v. Sweet, 31 Me. 555; Drummond v. Burrell, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 307; Russell v. Slade, 12 Conn. 455.

But where there were negotiations between a company and one T, for his employment as superintendent prior to April 1st, 1884, and subsequently he commenced work for the company as superintendent, and on April 10th, 1884, entered into a verbal contract with the company to serve as superintendent for the period of one year from April 1st, 1884, for $1,200, payable monthly; held, that the contract need not be in writing. Franklin Sugar Co. v. Taylor, 37 Kan. 435.

Discharge Within Twelve Months from Date of Contract.—Where the defendant, on 20th July, proposed to hire the plaintiff as bailiff for one year, to commence on the 24th July, but before the expiration of the year the defendant, being displeased with the plaintiff, gave him a month's warning to quit his service and the plaintiff left before the expiration of the year, it was held that he could not maintain an action against the defendant for not continuing the plaintiff for the year. Snelling v. Lord Huntingfield, 1 C. M. & R. 20.

Contract to Employ Infant.—Where one verbally agrees to employ an infant five years, and to pay his father certain sums semi-annually for his services, the contract is within the statute. Hill v. Hooper, 1 Gray (Mass.) 131. And see Birch v. Earl of Liverpool, 9 B. & C. 392; Sweet v. Lee, 4 Scott N. R. 77; Roberts v. Tucker, 3 Exchequer Rep. 632; Girard v. Richmond, 2 C. B. 835; Drummond v. Burrell, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 307; Mavor v. Pyne, 2 Car. & P.

71; 3 Bing. 285; Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 204.

Likewise where by a parol agreement by a parent that his child, aged sixteen, shall serve a third person until he arrives at the age of twenty-one, when his master is to pay him one hundred dollars. Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 204; citing 1 Comyn on Contracts 87; Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East 142.

Contract to Run One Year After Date.—And where a contract is to be performed "one year after date" it is within the statute. Kimmius v. Oldham, 27 W. Va. 258; citing Lower v. Winters, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 203; Hendrick v. Hern, 4 W. Va. 626; Lowry v. Buffington, 6 W. Va. 255; Tracy v. Tracy, 14 W. Va. 243; Marcy v. Marcy, 9 Allen (Mass.) 8; Young v. Drake, 1 Seld. 463; Pierce v. Paine, 28 Vt. 34.

Contracts Which May be Completed Within One Year.—And where the parties to a verbal contract knew at the time it was made that it was not to be carried out within one year, though it might, and was in fact, partially performed within that time, it cannot be enforced. Tuttle v. Sweet, 31 Me. 555; Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East 142; Mavor v. Payne, 11 Moore 2.

Promise to Employ—Inability to Accept Within Year.—Where an agreement by one to employ another is made as a part of the compromise of an action, the promisee having been disabled at the time of the promise by reason of injuries for which the action compromised was brought, a demand for employment, made as soon as he is able to discharge the duties of it, is in time, though made more than two years after the promise. East Line etc. R. Co. v. Scott, 68 Tex. 694; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 16.

1. Tatterson v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., 106 Mass. 56; Lines v. Supt. of Poor, 58 Mich. 503; Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801.

2. Souch v. Strawbridge, 2 C. B. 815; Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East 142; McPherson v. Cox, 6 Otto (96 U. S.) 404; Walker v. Johnson, 6 Otto (96 U. S.) 424; Roberts v. Rock-bottom Co., 7 Metc. (Mass.) 46; Rus-

3. Presumption as to Commencement of Contract.—When no time is fixed for the commencement of a contract of service, the presumption is that it is to begin at once.¹ But evidence will be admitted to prove that such service was not to commence immediately but at a future date.²

4. The Memorandum.—The note or memorandum of the oral contract which the statute requires is some writing authenticated by the signature of the party to be charged, or his agent, and containing, either in terms or by incorporation of other writings referred to in it, a statement of the terms of the contract of the parties to it.³ A note, letter or telegram may be sufficient to bring a case within the provisions of the statute.⁴

sell v. Slade, 12 Conn. 455; Clark v. Pendleton, 20 Conn. 508; Barney v. Ball, 24 Ga. 505; Linscott v. McIntire, 15 Me. 201; Ellicott v. Peterson, 4 Md. 476; Foster v. McO'Brien, 18 Mo. 88; Loggins v. Heard, 31 Miss. 426; Moore v. Fox, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 244; Esty v. Holdrich, 46 N. H. 127; Thouvenin v. Lea, 26 Tex. 612; Sherman v. Champ, Trans. Co., 31 Vt. 162; Blanchard v. Weeks, 34 Vt. 589; Smith v. Conlin, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 234; Greene v. Harris, 9 R. I. 401; Jilson v. Gilbert, 26 Wis. 637; Fenton v. Emblers, 3 Burr. 1278; Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 46 Me. 154; Updike v. Ten Broeck, 32 N. J. L. 105; Riddle v. Backus, 38 Iowa 81; Smith v. Smith, 4 Dutch. (N. J.) 216.

1. Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East 142; Moore v. Fox, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 244; Lower v. Winter, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 263; McLees v. Hale, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 426; Williams v. Jones, 5 Barn. & Ald. 103; Thomas v. Williams, 10 B. & C. 664; Charter v. Beckett, 7 T. R. 201; Wood v. Benson, 2 Cr. & J. 95; Russell v. Slade, 12 Conn. 455; Hearne v. Chadbourne, 65 Me. 302.

Where one agreed to labor in a woolen mill for another for one year, it was held that the person so contracting had a right to proffer his services at once. Russell v. Slade, 12 Conn. 455; see Bacon v. Page, 1 Conn. 404; Williams v. Jones, 5 Barn. & Ald. 108.

2. Thus, where a verbal contract was made, Friday, that the plaintiff, who was then in the employment of defendant, should work a year for him at an increase of wages, and was silent as to the time when the year was to commence, it was held that the fact that the defendant credited the plaintiff with wages at the increased rate from the subsequent Monday only, and that partial settlements were made by the parties on that basis, was admissible in evidence, and sufficient to warrant the inference that the understanding was that the year was to commence on Monday, and not on Friday, and that the contract, therefore, being one not to be performed within a year from the making thereof, was within the statute of frauds. Hearne v. Chadbourne, 65 Me. 303. See Herrin v. Butters, 20 Me. 119; Peters v. Westborough, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 364; Williams v. Jones, 5 Barn. & Cres. 108.

3. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, vol. 8, p. 710, et seq.

4. Barry v. Coombe, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 640; Case v. Worthington, 1 Root (Conn.) 172; Trevor v. Woods, 36 N. Y. 207; Macher v. Fritz, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 103; Vassar v. Camp, 1 Kern (N. Y.) 432; Foster v. Lepper, 29 Ga. 294; Smith v. Jones, 66 Ga. 328; 42 Am. Rep. 72; Kleeman v. Collins, 9 Bush (Ky.) 460.

Contract with Clergyman.—The secretary of a religious society communicated in writing to a minister the vote of the parish inviting him to become their pastor on certain terms at a salary at $1,200 per annum, to begin on the first day of January. The minister accepted the proposition in a letter, but proposed that the year should begin February 1st, and his salary should be paid quarterly and entered upon his duties. Subsequently, in December, a vote was passed by the parish, and recorded, requesting him to withdraw, and enumerating, among other things, that, on the first of October preceding, "the society were not indebted to him in the least, and would not become so indebted to him by the terms of the agreement until November following." The letter was held to be a sufficient memorandum of the contract as be-

The memorandum should state the term of service.¹

VIII. IMPLIED CONTRACTS—1. Generally.—In default of a contract of hiring, a person may recover compensation for services, where the same were rendered under such circumstances as to show that he looks to be paid as a matter of right, and such that the person for whom they were rendered was bound to know that he claimed compensation therefor or was legally entitled thereto.²

And where one person performs labor for another, the law presumes a request, and a promise to pay what such labor is reasonably worth, unless it is understood that it is to be performed gratuitously, or it is performed under circumstances which repel the presumption of a promise that compensation shall be made.³

ginning and ending February 1st.
Johnson v. Trinity Church, 11 Allen (Mass.) 123.

1. A telegram reading as follows:

"Chicago, Aug. 7, 1872.

To Dwight Palmer: You may come on at once at salary of two thousand, conditional only upon satisfactory discharge of business.

(Signed) H. A. BURT, Agent.

was held insufficient as fixing no time for the continuance of the employment. Palmer v. Marquette & Pacific Rolling Mill Co., 32 Mich. 274. See Hall v. Soule, 11 Mich. 494; Abell v. Munson, 18 Mich. 306.

2. Wiggins v. Hopkins, 3 Exch. 166; Angulo v. Sunoe, 16 Cal. 402; Fraylor v. Sonora etc. Co., 17 Cal. 594; Schwartz, 26 Ill. 81; Chiniquy v. Deliere, 37 Ill. 237; Bennett v. Robinson, 18 La. An. 204; Dougherty v. Whitehead, 31 Mo. 255; Morris v. Barnes, 35 Mo. 412; Watkins v. Richmond College, 41 Mo. 302; Hart v. Hess, 41 Mo. 441; Ryan v. Lynch, 9 Mo. App. 18; Robinson v. Cushman, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 169; Woodward v. Busbee, 4 T. & C. (N. Y.) 393; Lipe v. Eisenlard, 32 N. Y. 229; Tucker v. Virginia, 4 Nev. 20; Hertzog v. Hertzog, 29 Pa. St. 465; Ames v. Potter, 2 R. I. 265; Ross v. Mitchell, 28 Tex. 150.

Plaintiff, when a young girl, entered defendant's house as a hired servant for a fixed period, and for years afterward remained in his family, and performed heavy work in the house and in the field without receiving other compensation than board and clothing. Held, that the law would imply a promise by defendant to pay what her services were reasonably worth, in the absence of an express agreement that the services were to be rendered in return for a home and support only. McMillan v. Page, 71 Wis. 655.

Where an action for compensation for services rendered has, to support it, no evidence of any promise to pay except the plaintiff's own testimony, it must be clear and explicit. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Flanigan, 112 Pa. St. 558; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 88.

Person Laboring Round Railroad Station.—Plaintiff testified that before a railroad company's station agent was appointed, he was told by its civil engineer to look after the freight and about the station until the company discharged him, that he delivered goods and collected freight until the agent was appointed; that the agent did not agree to employ him, but said that he would write to, the company and have his name put on the pay roll. Plaintiff remained and worked about the depot. There was no evidence that the superintendent knew that plaintiff was at work, except that he was in the pay car when plaintiff demanded pay. Held, insufficient to show a cause of action against the company. Willis v. Toledo etc. R. Co., 72 Mich. 160.

8. Lewis v. Trickey, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 387; Weston v. Davis, 24 Me. 374; Martin v. Fox & Co., 19 Wis. 552; Mooreland v. Davidson, 71 Pa. St. 371; Hurley v. Van Wagner, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 109; Jones v. Jincey, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 708; Law v. Connecticut etc. R. Co., 45 N. H. 370; Hughes v. Lenny, 5 M. & W. 183.

It is well settled that if one man labors for another, or renders him service in his business, and that other, knowing all the facts, stands by and sees what is done, and makes no objection, he is estopped to deny that such services were rendered at his request. Academy v. Allen, 14 Mass. 176; Guild v. Guild, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 130.

But if the party benefited knew nothing

2. Gratuitous Services.—A person rendering services with no intention of charging for the time cannot subsequently recover, the party benefited having accepted them upon the understanding that they were gratuitous; for all contracts must be good or valid at their original creation, and must not depend upon subsequent contingencies.¹

3. Members of a Family.—The law does not imply a contract to pay for services between members of a family, unless such was the expectation of the parties concerned.²

The family relation necessary to rebut the presumption of a contract may exist between grandparents and grandchildren;³

ing of the work while the same was being done he is not liable. Caldwell v. Eneas, 2 Mill (S. Car.) 348; Bartholomew v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 28; Watson v. Ladoux, 8 La. An. 68; Fox v. Sloo, 10 La. An. 11; Morris v. Barnes, 35 Mo. 412; Belt v. Cook, Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 666.

Gratuitous Services.—McAtee v. United States, 15 Leg. Int. 355; Godard v. Foster, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 123.

1. James v. O'Driscoll, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 101. But where the plaintiff, when a young girl, entered defendant's home as a hired servant for a fixed period, and for years afterward remained in his family, and performed heavy work in the house and in the field, receiving only board and clothing in way of compensation, it was held that the law would imply a reasonable compensation in the absence of an agreement to the contrary. McMillan v. Page, 71 Wis. 655.

Person Set to Work Through Charity.

—If a destitute person is received from charity, provided with necessities and set to work, he is under no obligation to remain, nor has he any claim for wages, unless there be some express agreement, or one may be implied from the peculiar circumstances of the case. 2 Parsons on Contracts 52.

Guests.—Neither can a guest ordinarily recover for services rendered while in the home of another. Moulin v. Columbit, 22 Cal. 508.

2. Murdock v. Murdock, 7 Cal. 511; Guenther v. Birkicht, 22 Mo. 439; Angalo v. Sunal, 14 Cal. 402; Moulin v. Columbit, 22 Cal. 509; Friermuth v. Friermuth, 46 Cal. 42; Ryan v. Lynch, 9 Mo. An. 18; Cowell v. Roberts, 79 Mo. 218; Andrews v. Foster, 17 Vt. 560; Williams v. Hutchinson, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 122; Dye v. Kerr, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 444; Defranc v. Austin, 9

Penn. 310; Keegan v. Melone, 62 Iowa 208.

A stepmother in loco parentis cannot recover for services. Murdock v. Murdock, 7 Cal. 511. Nor anyone treated as a member of the family. Moulin v. Columbit, 22 Cal. 510.

In an action against her father by a daughter who, though of age, was living with him, for compensation for domestic services, evidence that the defendant expressly agreed to pay for such services, though no rate of wages was agreed upon, is sufficient to support a verdict for plaintiff. Geary v. Geary, 67 Wis. 248; Tyler v. Burrington, 39 Wis. 376; Burgess v. Burgess, 109 Pa. St. 312; Faloon v. McIntyre, 118 Ill. 292; Geary v. Geary, 67 Wis. 248; Byrnes v. Clark, 57 Wis. 13; Chadwick v. Devore, 69 Iowa 637; Traver v. Slimmer, 65 Iowa 57; Allen v. Allen, 60 Mich. 635; Johnson v. Ghost, 11 Neb. 414; Hillebrands v. Nibbelink, 44 Mich. 413; Wall's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 460; Moyer's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 290; Bonney v. Haydock, 40 N. J. Eq. 513; Sawyer v. Hebard, 58 Vt. 375; Heegan v. Malone, 62 Iowa 208; Coe v. Wager, 42 Mich. 49.

Stepdaughter and Divorced Stepmother.—Where a woman of twenty-five years of age lives for six years with her stepmother, from whom her father had been divorced, working as a dressmaker, and was in the habit of giving some of her earnings to her stepmother, and doing some of the household work; held, she could not recover from her stepmother for services rendered. Feiertag v. Feiertag, 73 Mich. 297; See Bostwick v. Bostwick, 71 Wis. 273; Cooper v. Cooper, 147 Mass. 370; Havens v. Havens, 3 N. Y. Supp. 219.

3. Moyer's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 290. Where the facts were as follows—A also between a father or mother in law and son in law;¹ or uncle and niece by marriage.²

A stepfather who receives his stepchildren into his family stands in loco parentis to them, and in default of an agreement no presumption will arise that he is under obligations to pay them for services rendered by them.³

But the relationship of brother and sister does not overcome the legal presumption that a promise to pay is intended when personal services are rendered.⁴ An action in cases of this sort, however, may be maintained on an express promise.⁵

went to live with B as a domestic in 1872, at certain wages per week; in 1875 she married C, a grandson of B, who had lived with and been cared for by B, since he had been a boy; A continued to serve B until his death in 1881, and after his death C brought suit to recover from the estate of B the wages due his wife from 1877 to 1881;—the question as to whether or not there was a contract was left to the jury. Neale v. Engle (Pa.), 7 Atl. Rep. 60.

1. Bonney v. Haydock, 40 N. J. Eq. 513; Sawyer v. Hebard, 58 Vt. 375; Coe v. Wager, 42 Mich. 49.

2. Wall's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 460.

Where a girl came from another State, at the request of her uncle to stay in his family and work for him, under a promise that she should be taught to play the organ and sent to school, and she came and performed not only the ordinary duties of the household, but other work in addition thereto for her uncle, the usual presumption that where a near relative is taken into the family of another no compensation was intended to be made for services by one to the other, beyond that received during the time they were rendered, was held to be overcome by such promise. Shane v. Smith, 37 Kan. 55. See Stone v. Stone, 43 Vt. 180; Ayres v. Hull, 5 Kan. 419; Greenwell v. Greenwell, 28 Kan. 413, 675; Hall v. Finch, 29 Wis. 278; Williams v. Hutchinson, 3 N. Y. 319.

Where a young man, at the request of his uncle, went to live with him, and the uncle promised to do by him as his own child, and he lived and worked for him above eleven years, and the uncle said that the nephew should be one of his heirs, and spoke of advancing a sum of money to purchase a farm for him, as a compensation for his services, but died without devising anything to the nephew or making him any compensation, it was held that he could recover for his work and labor. Jacobson v. Le Grange, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 199.

3. Brown's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 18; Gerdes v. Weiser, 54 Iowa 591.

4. Smith v. Milligan, 43 Pa. St. 107; Curry v. Curry, 114 Pa. St. 367. But see Taintly v. Taintly, 13 Mo. Ann. 444.

Brother and Deaf Mute Sister.—But in a Missouri case, where a deaf mute sister resided with a brother for twenty years, and upon his death filed a claim for services, it was held there could be no recovery. Morris v. Barnes, 35 Mo. 412. See Hertzog v. Hertzog, 29 Pa. St. 465; Tascott v. Grace, 12 Ill. App. 639. 5. Brown's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 18; Price v. Jones, 105 Ind. 543; Damell v. Applegate, 15 Fed. Rep. 419; Collier v. French, 64 Iowa 577; Wence v. Wykoff, 52 Iowa 644; Howard v. Rynearson, 50 Mich. 307; Hillebrands v. Nibelink, 44 Mich. 413.

Express contracts under this rule can be established only by direct, clear and positive evidence. Burgess v. Burgess, 109 Pa. St. 312; Geary v. Geary, 67 Wis. 248.

Though it is immaterial that there was no agreement as to rate of wages or time of payment. Byrnes v. Clark, 57 Wis. 13; Geary v. Geary, 67 Wis. 248.

Where decedent lived with claimant and his family for a long time before her death, during which time she was an invalid, requiring much care and attention, which she received from claimant's wife (her sister), and from other members of the family, she repeatedly said to claimant and his wife that she had no money then, but that they were to be paid for all their work; it was held sufficient to support an implied promise to pay. Appeal of Lindsey (Pa.), 15 Atl. Rep. 434.

4. Services with View to Legacy.—No action will lie to recover compensation for services performed where, with a view to a voluntary legacy, the services were rendered by the plaintiff without any expectation of being paid the value thereof, or any promise of remuneration, express or implied.¹ Yet, although a person serves another from expectation of a legacy, in which he is disappointed, if the person for whom the service was done promises to pay for it, an action can be maintained for the value of such service, whether the promise be made before or after the service was performed.² But if one does service for another at his request, no matter what his expectations were, assumpsit may be brought to recover compensation.³

5. Unsolicited Services.—The mere acceptance of services rendered by another without the request of the party to be charged, and without any subsequent promise to pay for the same, creates no obligation to pay, even though the services rendered be beneficial to the person accepting them. There must be either a previous request or a subsequent promise, express or implied, to create a liability.⁴

6. Compulsory Service.—Where one does work for another by compulsion, whom he is under no legal or moral obligation to serve, the law will imply and raise a promise on the part of the person benefited thereby to make him a reasonable compensation.⁵

7. Termination of Contract—Continuance in Service.—Where parties have entered into a contract of service for a certain period, which has elapsed, and their connection still continues, et sic de anno in annum

1. Lee v. Lee, 6 G. & J. (Md.) 316; Le Sage v. Coussmaker, 1 Esp. Rep. 108; Little v. Dawson, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 111; Walker's Estate, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 243; Neal v. Gilmore, 79 Pa. St. 421; Hartman's Appeal, 3 Grant (Up. Can.) 271; O'Kane's Estate, 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 115; Thompson v. Stevens, 71 Pa. St. 161; Pollock v. Ray, 85 Pa. St. 428; Osborn v. Governors of Guy's Hospital, 2 Stra. 728; Davison v. Davison, 13 N. J. Eq. 246; Dougherty v. Whitehead, 31 Mo. 255; Grandin v. Reading, 10 N. Y. Eq. 370; Campbell v. Campbell, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 645; Eaton v. Benton, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 576; Martin v. Wright, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 460; Patterson v. Patterson, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 379.

2. Snyder v. Castor, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 358; Allen v. Richmond College, 41 Mo. 302; Patterson v. Patterson, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 379; Le Sage v. Coussmaker, 1 Esp. N. P. 187; Bowen v. Bowen, 4 C. & P. 93; Bryant v. Flight, 5 M. & W. 114; Alsager v. Rowley, 6 Ves. 748; Platamore v. Staple, Cooper's Ch. Cas. 252.

3. Roberts v. Swift, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 209; Van Annan v. Byington, 38 Ill. 443; Weeks v. Holmes, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 215.

4. Tascoit v. Grace, 12 Ill. App. 641; DeWolf v. Chicago, 26 Ill. 443; Bartholomew v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 28; Caldwell v. Eneas, 2 Const. Rep. (S. Car.) 348; Doane v. Badger, 12 Mass. 65; Loring v. Bacon, 4 Mass. 575; Mumford v. Brown, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 475; Pinchon v. Delaney, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 22; Hort v. Norton, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 22; Jones v. Jincey, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 708; Roberts v. Swift, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 209; Long v. Kaiser, 34 Mich. 317; Stakes v. Lewis, 1 T. R. 20; B. E. Shipping Co. v. Somes, E. B. & E. 353; 30 L. J., Q. B. 229; Nicholson v. Chapman, 2 H. Bl. 354; 1 Esp. 86; Peake's Ad. C. 226; 1 C. & P. 434; Taylor v. Brewer, 1 M. & S. 290; Roberts v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 315; 28 L. J., Exch. 164. See supra, 1, generally.

5. Peter v. Steel, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 250; Cook v. Husted, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 188; Phillip v. Kirkpatrick, 2 Yeates (Pa.)

quandiu ambabus partibus placuerit, they are held to have renewed the contract by tacit relocation, without any new agreement being entered into. But of course, as has been before observed, the period of renewal cannot be longer than one year, because the implied contract is a verbal, not a written one.¹

IX. EXPRESS CONTRACTS—1. Obligation to Furnish Work.—Work must be furnished by the master during the period covered by the contract.²

2. Wages—When Due and Payable.—Where by contract one is employed by another to do work by the day or month or year, and nothing is said as to the time of payment for the services to be rendered, his wages are due and may be demanded at the close of each day, month or year, as the case may be.³

But a contract to serve a year at a fixed sum, payable in regular weekly instalments, is divisible as to the remedy; the stipulations as to payments are several obligations.⁴

Payment Depending on Contingency.—Where under the agreement payment is to depend upon the arising of a certain contingency, there can be no recovery if the contingency does not occur.⁵

3. Failure to Demand Wages.—Where a person serves in the capacity of a domestic servant, and no demand for wages is made until a considerable period after such service has terminated, the inference is, either that the wages have been paid, or that the service was performed on the footing that no payment was to be made.⁶ But this presumption may be rebutted.⁷

444; Black v. Meaux, 4 Dana (Ky.) 188; Patterson v. Crawford, 12 Ind. 241.

1. Fraser's Master and Servant 17; Moline Plow Co. v. Booth, 17 Ill. App. 574; McCullough Iron Co. v. Carpenter, 67 Md. 554; Nicholson v. Patchin, 5 Cal. 476; Reed v. Swift, 45 Cal. 255; Machine Co. v. Buckley, 48 Ill. 189; Sinco v. Supt. of Poor, 58 Mich. 503; Heise v. Milwaukee Co., 51 Wis. 564.

In a contract between a planter and an overseer, under which the latter was employed for a series of years at a stipulated salary, the fact that the overseer begins a new year without express agreement or renewal of terms will be held as a tacit reconstruction of the contract for the same term, and at the same salary. Leland v. Aldrich (La.), 6 So. Rep. 28.

County Physician's Failure to Appoint Successor.—A county physician employed for a year at a fixed salary, who renders services for some time after his year is up, his successor not being promptly appointed, can recover for such additional period of service only at the rate of compensation fixed by his contract of the previous year. Weise v. Milwaukee Co. Supervisors, 51 Wis. 564.

2. Bromley v. School Dist., 47 Vt. 381. See also Pilkington v. Scott, 15 M. & W. 657; Hartley v. Cummings, 5 C. B. 247; Nations v. Cudd, 22 Tex. 550.

3. Delappe v. Sullivan, 7 Colo. 182; Jennings v. Lyons, 35 Wis. 553.

4. Chiles v. Belleville Nail Mill Co., 68 Ill. 123.

5. Zerrahn v. Ditson, 117 Mass. 553.

6. Houck v. Houck, 99 Pa. St. 552.

7. McConnell's Appeal, 97 Pa. St. 31. And see Gough v. Findon, 7 Exch. 49; Sellen v. Norman, 4 C. & P. 80; Couch v. Ingersoll, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 292; White v. Atkins, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 367; Kane v. Hood, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 281.

Under the Louisiana code domestics must demand their wages within one year from the time they leave their service. Sec. 320, 5-70.

Demand for Increase of Wages—Implication from Silence.—The plaintiff, an employee of the defendant, demanded

4. Destruction of Building.—Where one is employed to do work in a particular building for a series of days, the burning of the building by inevitable accident will stop the employer's liability for wages. In such cases wages can only be recovered for the work actually performed.¹

5. Extra Pay and Extra Work.—An employee must show an express agreement in order to recover extra pay.²

6. Payment for Services Rendered Another.—Where a person is sought to be charged with liability for services rendered for and under the employment of another, upon a parol promise to pay therefor, the promise must be shown to have been made as an original undertaking, and the labor must have been rendered upon his promise and credit.³ No transfer of liability, however, can be made subsequent to the entering upon the service. B's promise to pay C what may become due to him from A must be in writing to bind him.⁴

an increase of wages, to commence January 1st, 1885, and gave due notice to defendant's agent that he would leave unless such increase was made. The agent promised to give an answer in two or three days, but failed to do so for several months, allowing the plaintiff in the meanwhile to continue work. The plaintiff was finally told that his salary would be increased as demanded, but to commence May 1st, 1885. It was held that the silence of the agent did not raise the implication of assent on the part of the defendant, and that plaintiff was not entitled to the increase from January 1st to May 1st, 1885. Raysor v. Berkeley Co. Ry. & Lumber Co., 26 S. Car. 610.

1. Hall v. School Dist. No 10, 24 Mo. App. 213. And see Lord Raym. 1477; Davis v. Smith, 15 Mo. 469; School Dist. v. Dauchy, 25 Conn. 530; Adams v. Nichols, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 275; Taylor v. Caldwell, 113 E. C. R. 824; Dexter v. Norton, 47 N. Y. 65; Wharton on Contracts, § 322.

2. Cany v. Holleck, 9 Cal. 198. And see Gill v. New York Cab Co., 55 Hun (N. Y.) 524; Bradbury v. Helms, 92 Ill. 35; Turnell's succession, 34 La. An. 888; Fraser v. U. S., 16 Ct. of Cl. 507; Case of Bell v. Drummond, Peake 45.

Voluntary performance by a servant of extra work does not entitle him to extra pay. Kablitz v. Rowell, 56 Wis. 671; E. T. V. & G. R. Co. v. McKnight, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 336; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 355; Best v. Byrne, 51 Wis. 531.

New York Eight Hour Law.—An employer is not made liable, under and by the "Eight Hour Law" (ch. 385, Laws of 1870), to an employee hired by the day, for labor beyond the statutory time, unless it was provided for in the contract of employment. The intent of the act was to place the control of the hours of labor within the discretion of the employee, giving him the privilege, at his option, to refuse to work beyond the eight hours, or to secure extra compensation for extra work by stipulation in the contract of employment. In the absence of any such stipulation the language of the act repels any inference of an intent to confer a right upon an employee to charge for more than one day's labor for services rendered in any calendar day; and for such services he may not demand any extra compensation. McCarthy v. Mayor etc., 96 N. Y. 1; 48 Am. Rep. 601.

Where an employee in the public service works twelve hours a day, is paid by the day, and accepts the payment, he is excluded from maintaining that every eight hours constituted a day's work under the provisions of the eight hour law, and that he is entitled to extra pay. Averill v. U. S., 14 Ct. of Cl. 200.

Extra for Labor Done on Sunday.—Where a party is employed at a certain price per month to work on a farm, and his employment contemplates certain work to be done by him on Sunday, and he afterwards makes a final settlement without claiming additional pay for his Sunday work, he cannot then recover for such work. Lowe v. Marlowe, 4 Ill. App. 420.

3. Wood's Master and Servant, § 197.

4. Gill v. Herrick, 111 Mass. 501;

7. Husband and Wife.—A wife is not responsible for the wages of an employee of her husband, although such wages are sometimes paid by her.¹

A man can contract to furnish his own services and those of his wife, and, if his wife makes no separate claim, can sue for them. And if the wife gives evidence in support of his demand, upon the trial, it is a sufficient ratification of his contract, if necessary to ratify it.²

8. Agreement to Pay Reasonable Worth.—An agreement to pay a servant what the master considers him to be reasonably worth binds the master to pay what his services are worth.³

9. Agreement to Pay Same Wages as Paid to Others.—Where an employer contracts to pay an employee "the same wages as shall be paid to other men in his employ, filling similar positions, and the laborer sues for compensation, and there is no showing that the company has other employees in similar positions, plaintiff is entitled to prove what his services are worth.⁴

10. Disagreement as to Wages.—Where master and servant agree as to the existence of a contract, but differ as to the wages to be paid, the question of compensation must be left to the jury.⁵

Thatcher v. Rockwell, 4 Colo. 375; Ames v. Foster, 106 Mass. 400; Brightman v. Hicks, 108 Mass. 246; Morrissey v. Kinsey, 16 Neb. 17; Aldrich v. Jewell, 12 Vt. 125.

In Skinner v. Conant, 2 Vt. 453, the defendant in error, Conant, went into the employ of one Andrus, under the following circumstances: Andrus was running a distillery belonging to the plaintiffs in error, and being in need of help, they told the defendant that if Andrus employed him they would see him paid. The court held that this was not an original but a collateral undertaking, and not being in writing was within the statute of frauds.

Payment by Foreman.—Where a foreman in a mine, charged with the employment, management and discharge of laborers in such mine, pays such laborers out of his own funds, in an action against his employer to recover the amounts thus advanced, the time account of the laborers thus paid by the foreman, and the receipts given by them to him therefor, are admissible in evidence. Martin v. Victor M. & M. Co., 19 Nev. 197. And see Bartlett v. Smith, 13 Fed. Rep. 263; Minnesota Linseed Oil Co. v. Montague, 32 Minn. 193.

1. State etc. v. Brokaw, 43 N. J. Law 587; Wilson v. Herbert, 12 Vroom (N. J. L.) 454.

2. Harrington v. Gils, 45 Mich. 374. See Gay v. Rogers, 18 Vt. 343; Bickley v. Collier, 4 Mod. 156.

3. Millar v. Cuddy, 43 Mich. 273; Butler v. Winona Mill Co., 28 Minn. 205.

Under such a contract the measure fixed by the master is presumptively the measure of compensation, and although considerably less than the reasonable value of the services, it is still conclusive in the absence of proof of fraud. Butler v. Winona Mill Co., 28 Minn. 205; 41 Am. Rep. 277. And see Millar v. Cuddy, 43 Mich. 273; 38 Am. Rep. 181.

Resolution Limiting Pay Unknown to Servant.—A resolution of a board of directors, limiting the pay of an employee, not made known to him, and there being no express agreement for compensation, will not prevent the recovery on a quantum meruit. Darach v. Hanover Junction etc. R. Co., 9 L. Bar. (Penn.) 141.

4. Kent Furniture Mfg. Co. v. Ransom, 46 Mich. 416. And see Jordan v. Foxworth, 48 Miss. 607.

5. Rocco v. Parczyx, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 328.

And it is immaterial that, about the time of the hiring, plaintiff offered to work for some other person at the same price that defendant contends was agreed on between him and plaintiff. Roles

11. Disposal of Business Unknown to Employee.—Where a master disposes of his business, and his employee, in ignorance thereof, continues his labors, the master is liable for the wages earned by him so long as he knows nothing of the change.¹

12. Employer's Partnership Relations.—Where a merchant employs a clerk, and pending his term of service the merchant forms a partnership in the same character of business, and the clerk enters the service of the firm, the contract with the original employer as an individual is at an end.²

An action lies against a surviving partner for work and labor performed for the firm, both before and after the decease of a copartner.³ And where the contract of an employee with a firm is for a specified time, dissolution does not release the partnership.⁴ Contracts of employment by the firm have been held to be conditioned on the firm not being dissolved by death, and in case of the death of a partner the survivor is not obliged to carry out the contract.⁵

If the contract is a personal one in reliance upon a particular partner, his disability or retirement will release the other contracting party.⁶ Likewise, where the dissolution disables the firm to carry out its contract.⁷

v. Wintzer, 27 Minn. 31; citing Kumler v. Ferguson, 7 Minn. 351; Schwerin v. De Graff, 21 Minn. 354; Miller v. Lamb, 22 Minn. 43.

1. Perry v. S. W. Mfg. Co., 37 Conn. 533.

Where the agent of the Marietta and North Georgia Railroad employed one to act as a guard for convicts, and subsequently hired the convicts to a firm, the latter assuming the responsibility of guarding them, the employee having no notice or knowledge of such change, the company was not thereby discharged from its liability to him, and he would be entitled to recover from the company for his services until he was notified of the change in the contract. And it would make no difference that the agent of the company who contracted with plaintiff afterwards became the agent of the firm. Marietta & N. Ga. R. Co. v. Hilburn, 75 Ga. 379.

2. Anderson v. Freeman, 75 Ga. 93. It is also laid down in above case that if under these circumstances he has been paid by the original employer up to the formation of the firm and after entering the service of the firm he refuses to continue his employment with them at the same rate, but retains as payment to himself funds of the firm at a higher rate and is discharged, he cannot recover from the original employer.

Continuance in Business.—In a suit on a mutual written agreement, by which plaintiff was to work for defendant for a year at a certain rate per day, and for a second year at an increased rate, if defendant "continued the business," plaintiff is entitled to recover, if defendant in fact carried on the same business during the second year, but with a partner. Collett v. Smith, 143 Mass. 473.

3. Friermuth v. Friermuth, 46 Cal. 42.

4. 2 Bates on Partnership 709. Thus a contract with an employee is not rescinded by the employment of a receiver, and the transfer of all the assets to him. Bird v. Austin, 8 Jones & Sp. (N. Y.) 109.

5. Tasker v. Shepard, 6 H. & N. 575; Burnett v. Hope, 9 Ontario Rep. 10; Hoey v. McEwan, 5 McPher. (S. Car.) 814. Compare Ferreira v. Sayres, 40 Am. Dec. 496.

6. Robson v. Drummond, 2 B. & Ad. 303; Stevens v. Benning, 1 K. & J. 168; Fulton v. Thompson, 18 Tex. 278.

7. Refusal of Employee to Work.—Thus a contract to work for a firm for a year as an employee is not broken by the employee's refusal to work after the retirement of one partner and the addition of another, for the contract is not assignable, and he can recover a pro-

But persons not partners performing separate work under joint contract must pay laborers employed by each separately.¹

13. Employers' Insolvency.—The fact that employers, who have agreed to hire an employee for a year, and pay him a certain salary, become insolvent, and are obliged to cease business, and notify the employee that his services will not be required thereafter, does not absolve them from their obligation to pay according to the terms of the agreement, unless the employee assents thereto.²

Where the master dies, but the servant keeps on until the termination of the contractual period, he can recover full compensation.³

14. Services Rendered a Third Person.—A servant may recover for services rendered another during business hours, with the consent of his master, when entitled to his entire time.⁴

15. Cumulative Compensations—Different Positions.—Two compensations provided by contract are cumulative, unless the contract shows that one is in lieu of the other.⁵

But where an employee entitled to certain pay obeys an order directing him to perform the duties of an inferior position at less pay, he is estopped from claiming the pay attached to his original position.⁶

16. Notice of Reduction of Wages.—Where a master notifies his servant that he will thereafter pay him less, and the servant continues work without notifying his master that he will claim more, it constitutes a new arrangement.⁷

17. Absence of Servant.—A servant who is kept away from his labor through sickness may recover for the work he has done, if he is willing to return when able.⁸

A public officer whose salary is fixed cannot be deprived thereof without sufficient cause. While sickness may, in some cases, be a good ground for his removal, yet where it appears that his absence on account thereof has been permitted, his right to the salary is not affected thereby until some action is taken by the proper authorities.⁹

portion of the compensation. Red-heffer v. Leather, 15 Mo. App. 12.

1. Smith v. Moynihan, 44 Cal. 54. See PARTNERSHIP.

2. Fanaxem v. Bostwick (Pa.), 7 Atl. Rep. 598.

Nor would a servant in such case be justified in leaving the employment, when the contract he was under was in nowise affected, as where the master becomes insolvent during the term of an entire contract. Pritchard v. Martin, 27 Miss. 305; Frazer's Master and Servant 240.

3. Hill v. Robeson, 2 S. & M. (Miss.) 541.

4. Wallace v. De Young, 98 Ill. 638; 38 Am. Rep. 108.

Servants' Fees as Notary.—On a contract for services for a fixed compensation, as agent in settling claims, the master is prima facie entitled to notary's fees earned by the servant in the employment. Leach v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 86 Mo. 27; 56 Am. Rep. 408.

5. Brady v. Wilcoxson, 46 Colo. 239.

6. O'Brien v. N. Y. City, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 258; Monroe v. N. Y. City, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 258; People's Co-operative Assoc. v. Lloyd, 77 Ala. 387.

7. Spicer v. Earl, 41 Mich. 191.

8. Fuller v. Brown (11 Metc.), 52 Mass. 440; Harrington v. Fall R. I. Works, 119 Mass. 82.

9. O'Leary v. Board of Education,

18. Contract Depending on Satisfaction or Discretion.—One who agrees to work for another at a fixed rate per month, only so long as both are satisfied with the arrangement, may quit at any time, and recover at the contract rates for the time he has worked.¹

Where services are rendered upon an understanding that the remuneration is to be at the entire discretion of the employer, no action is maintainable.²

19. Abandonment by Servant—(a) Quantum Meruit.—Where parties enter into a contract by which the amount of labor to be performed by the one, and the consideration to be paid by the other, are made certain and fixed, such a contract cannot be apportioned, and if in such a case the employee leaves before completing his term of service, he is not entitled to recover anything on the contract.³ But an employee is not in all cases of this sort without remedy. For though he can have no remedy on the contract as originally made, the circumstances may be such that the law will raise a new contract and give him a remedy on a quantum meruit.⁴

93 N. Y. 1. See People v. Jackson, 85 N. Y. 541.

Upon the trial of an action brought to recover the salary of James Devlin, the plaintiff's intestate, for the years 1879 and 1880, it appeared that Devlin was employed in the finance department of the city of New York as doorkeeper, and that from the commencement of his employment until the end of the year 1878, he was regularly paid, although he was absent by reason of sickness and on leave for some months of that year. During the years 1879 and 1880 he was sick and only occasionally appeared at the office. His name, however, appeared upon the pay roll each month, but the amount of the salary was erased by having a line drawn through it in red ink, pursuant to an order of the comptroller, and on the margin of the roll were written the words "absent all the month, sick without pay." This fact was not communicated to Devlin, nor was he ever notified that his services were no longer required. Held, that he was entitled to receive his salary for the years named. Devlin v. Mayor, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 281.

1. Evans v. Bennett, 7 Wis. 404.

2. Taylor v. Brewer, 1 Maule & Selwyn 290.

3. 2 Parsons on Contracts 521.

4. Until the last fifty years it was quite generally held to be the law, both in England and America, that where a person, having agreed to work for another for a definite period of time, voluntarily leaves such service without any fault on the part of the employer, and without his consent, before the expiration of the term, he could not recover in any form of action for the services actually rendered; the ground being taken that the plaintiff could not recover on his express contract, because he had not executed it on his part, and that performance was a condition precedent to the payment, and that no recovery could be had under a quantum meruit, because an express contract always excludes an implied one in relation to the same matter. Olmstead v. Beale, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 528.

But in a New Hampshire case decided in 1834, Britton v. Turner, 6 N. H. 481, the doctrine of which has quite generally been adopted, a marked departure was taken from the former line of decisions. In that case it was held that where a contract is made of such a character a party actually receives labor or materials, and thereby derives a benefit and advantage over and above the damage which has resulted from the breach of the contract by the other party. The labor actually done and the value received furnish a new consideration, and the law thereupon raises a promise to pay to the extent of the reasonable worth of such excess. See Parcell v. McComber, 11 Neb. 209.

The stern rule of the common law has been relaxed in many of the States, and the doctrine now generally recognized is, that if the employer accepts of

In none of the cases on either side of the question is the integrity of the original contract and the rights and obligations of the parties thereunder assailed. All the courts disclaim any purpose of making contracts for the parties. But the difference in the result is owing chiefly, if not entirely, to the diverse views of facts and circumstances relating to the performance, or part performance, of the contract, as a waiver of strict compliance therewith, and to a difference in construction of the original contract.¹

But a servant who agrees to work for a definite term at an entire price and leaves before his time is up has no claim against his master.² Sickness or death is an act of God in such a sense as generally to excuse full performance of an entire contract, and the benefit of what has been done, whether voluntarily or from the necessity of the case, the employee may recover according to the contract price for what has been done; or if he was to receive a fixed sum for the whole work, then in the proportion which the work done bears to the whole work; or where there is no price fixed, then upon a quantum meruit, from which, however, there must be deducted whatever damages may have resulted to the employer from the failure to fully perform the contract by the employee. Duncan v. Baker, 21 Kan. 99; Pixler v. Nichols, 8 Iowa 106; McCloy v. Hedge, 18 Iowa 66; McCafferty v. Hale, 24 Iowa 356; Byerlee v. Mendel, 39 Iowa 382; Wolf v. Gerr, 43 Iowa 339; Burkholder v. Burkholder, 25 Neb. 270; Hillyard v. Crabtree, 11 Tex. 264; Carroll v. Welch, 26 Tex. 149; Hollis v. Chapman, 36 Tex. 1, 5; Lamb v. Brolaski, 38 Mo. 51, 53; Ryan v. Dayton, 25 Conn. 188; Epperly v. Bailey, 3 Ind. 73; Coe v. Smith, 4 Ind. 82; Ricks v. Yates, 5 Ind. 115; Prentiss v. Ledyard, 28 Wis. 131; Bennett v. Stephens, 8 Oreg. 444; Carter v. Lilbman, 26 Daily Reg. 853; Powers v. Wilson, 47 Iowa 666; Chamblee v. Baker, 95 N. Car. 98; Wiley v. School Dist., 25 Mich. 419; Bishop v. Price, 24 Wis. 580; Trowbridge v. Barrett, 30 Wis. 661. Compare Diefenback v. Stark, 56 Wis. 462; and see Jones v. Jones, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 605; Edgington v. Pickle, 1 Smed. (Tenn.) 122; Allen v. McKibbin, 5 Mich. 449; Davis v. Barrington, 10 Fost. (N. H.) 517; Sinclair v. Talmadge, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 602; Nibbe v. Brauhn, 24 Ill. 268; McKinney v. Springer, 3 Ind. 59; Dermott v. Jones, 23 How. (U. S.) 220; Western v. Sharp, 14 B. Mon. (Kv.) 177; Newman v. McGregor, 5 Ohio

349. Compare Allen v. Curles, 6 Ohio St. 505.

1. Field on Damages, § 334. See Wood's Master and Servant, § 147, in support of the ancient rule.

Where Servant Leaves for Being Reprimanded.—A foreman at a tailor's shop who goes on a spree has no cause of action for future wages if he is discharged or reprimanded so that he leaves. Physioc v. Shea, 75 Ga. 466.

Desire of Master that Servant Quit.—It has been held in Indiana that an apparent desire on the master's part that the servant leave, does not justify such action on his part. DeCamp v. Stevens, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 24; and see Parcell v. McComber, 11 Neb. 209.

Breach of Contract by Master, as Cause for Abandonment.—Though an employer's breach of a contract of service for one year at a stated price per month may justify the employee in abandoning the work, and entitle him to recover for the services performed, it will not authorize recovery for the work unperformed. Weber v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 5 Mo. App. 51. Compare Brent v. Shelley, 5 Mo. App. 580.

2. Nelichka v. Esterly, 29 Minn. 146; Kahn v. Fandel, 29 Minn. 470.

Seamen Employed in Harbor Navigation.—Though the practice in New York harbor upon hiring a seaman "by the month" in harbor navigation permits an employer to discharge, or the employed to leave, at the termination of any trip during the month on pro rata wages, neither can terminate the employment in the midst of a trip without legal cause, and an employee so quitting forfeits his wages. Disleraw et al. v. The Walsh Brothers (N. Y.), 36 Fed. Rep. 607; and see The Minna, 11 Fed. Rep. 759; Moore v. Neapie, 3 permit a recovery on a quantum meruit; but otherwise where the sickness is one which should have been foreseen and provided against by the party in default.¹

(b) Justification.—An assault without a battery may or may not be a sufficient justification for a servant in leaving his master's service; but where a master, without any provocation, commits an assault upon his servant, and thereby causes him to fear injury, it is a justification.²

Sufficiency of Ill Usage Question for the Jury.—Where ill usage is set up as a justification for such abandonment, its sufficiency is a question for the jury, under proper instructions from the court.³

A servant is justified in leaving his master, when the latter refuses to allow him to carry out his contract.⁴

(c) Imprisonment of Employee.—Where an employee is imprisoned the employer has a right to treat the contract as abandoned.⁵

(d) Return of Servant—Condonation.—Where an employee for a fixed period, without any fault of his employer, absents himself for a short time, and then the employer, with knowledge of the fact, receives him back into his service without objection, and retains him until the termination of the contract, he thereby waives the right to declare the contract forfeited as to the services actually rendered.⁶ But no recovery can be had for the time he was absent.⁷

Fed. Rep. 650; The City of New Orleans, 33 Fed. Rep. 683.

1. Confinement of Female Servant.—Jennings v. Lyons, 39 Wis. 554. In this case plaintiff contracted to render to defendant the domestic services of himself and wife for one year at a specified price. Four months and ten days thereafter the wife left the service in anticipation of her confinement; both were then discharged from the service, and the wife was confined four or six weeks thereafter. Held, that plaintiff was not excused by such sickness, which he should have foreseen.

2. Bishop v. Ranney, 59 Vt. 316.

Assault Unconnected with Employment.—The fact that an employer, in a quarrel unconnected with the contract of service, struck the laborer and knocked him down, was held not to justify the latter in abandoning his engagement, so that he could recover wages up to that time. Morgan v. Shelton, 28 La. An. 822.

Assault Upon Child of Employee by Third Person Unknown.—An assault upon child of an employee not residing on the employer's premises—by one not under control of employer, and not by his direction, knowledge or consent—is not a justifiable cause for leaving the employment before the expiration of the term for which he was employed. Mathew v. Brokaw, 43 N. J. L. 587.

3. Erving v. Ingram, 24 N. J. L. 520.

4. Butts v. Huntley, 1 Scam. (Ill.) 410; James v. Graham, 21 Ala. 654; Johnson v. Trinity Church, 11 Allen (Mass.) 173; Carroll v. Welch, 26 Tex. 147; Lemp v. Streiblein, 12 Mo. 456.

5. Leopold v. Salkey, 89 Ill. 413. In the above case the imprisonment was for two weeks.

6. Ridgway v. Hungerford Market Co., 3 Adol. & El. 171; Prentiss v. Ledyard, 28 Wis. 131; McGrath v. Bell, 33 N. Y. Super. Ct. 195.

7. Thwing v. United States, 16 Ct. of Cl. 13.

Continued Retention Evidence of Condonation.—If there has been an actual forgiveness of a breach of contract on the part of a master to a defaulting servant, he cannot afterwards rely upon such breach in discharging the servant; and furthermore such condonation can in no respect extend to subsequent offences, or to a continued deficiency. And it is also true that such breach is

(e) Leaving Without Notice.—If the terms of a contract of hiring require that a written notice must be given by the servant before leaving, failing which he is not entitled to the wages due him on the next pay day, and the servant leaves without notice, he cannot recover any of the wages then unpaid, although there is no corresponding provision that he shall not be discharged without notice.¹

A person entering into a contract of service is not bound by the usage of a particular business in this respect unless it is so general as to furnish a presumption of knowledge, or it is proved that he was acquainted with it.²

prima facie condoned by the continued retention of the servant; but the question is one of fact, to be determined by a jury. Leatherberry v. Odell (N. Car.). 7 Fed. Rep. 642.

1. Preston v. American Linen Co., 119 Mass. 400. Also see Noon v. Salisbury Mills, 85 Mass. 340; Potter v. Cain, 117 Mass. 238; and see Gregon v. Watson, 34 L. T., N. S. 143, decided under Factory act; Walsh v. Walley, L. R., 9 Q. B. 367; Saunders v. Whittle, 33 L. T., N. S. 816; Fowler v. Gt. Falls Ice Co., 1 McA. (D. C.) 14. But see Warburton v. Hayworth, 44 J. P. 298; 45 J. P. 138; Margerison v. Bertwhistle, 36 J. P. 100.

But an arrest, conviction and imprisonment for crime will exonerate a workman from this duty. Hughes v. Wamsutta Mills, 11 Allen (Mass.) 201. See Fuller v. Brown, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 440.

2. Stevens v. Reeves, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 197. Also see Wood v. Hickok, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 501; Naylor v. Semmes, 4 G. & J. (Md.) 274; Donnell v. Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Sumn. 366.

Employee Having Knowledge of Regulation.—Where one enters into the service of employers under no express agreement to continue in their service for any definite time, but with a knowledge of a regulation adopted by them requiring that all persons employed by them shall give a certain number of days' notice of an intention to quit their service, he does not forfeit his wages by quitting their service without giving such notice; but he is liable to them for all damages caused by his not giving the notice; and in a suit against them for his wages the amount of such damage may be deducted therefrom. Hunt v. The Otis Co., 4 Metc. (45 Mass.) 464; Batterman v. Pierce, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 174.

Regulation Printed on Pay Envelope.—

Where such a provision was not expressly made in a contract of hiring in a mill, but was printed on an envelope, in which the plaintiff regularly received his pay for a long time, the question whether he assented to it is for the jury. Preston v. American Linen Co., 119 Mass. 400; Noon v. Salisbury Mills, 3 Allen (Mass.) 340; Hughes v. Wamsutta Mills, 11 Allen (Mass.) 201; Potter v. Cain, 117 Mass. 238; Com. v. Galavan, 9 Allen (Mass.) 271; Brigham v. Clark, 100 Mass. 430.

Printed Notice Hung Up in Shop.—And likewise where such a provision is contained in a printed notice hung up in a shop. Collins v. N. E. Iron Co., 115 Mass. 23; Stevens v. Reeves, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 198; Dodge v. Favor, 15 Gray (Mass.) 82.

Regulation in Receipt for Pay.—A was employed by B at a fixed sum per week, but for no definite time. When the first payment of wages was made A signed a receipt containing the following provision: "Employees must give fourteen days' notice when they want to leave our employ. If they do not give the notice required it is agreed and understood that they forfeit all that is due them at the time they so quit work without the required fourteen days' notice." A left upon giving one and a half days' notice. Held, that A having notice of the regulation was bound thereby. Pottsville Iron & Steel Co. v. Good, 116 Pa. St. 385.

Absence Longer than Stated in Notice.—In an English case the facts were as follows: One of the rules of a cotton mill stated that any person absenting himself on account of sickness or any other cause was immediately to give notice to the overlooker, and in default thereof all wages then earned were to be forfeited. A female weaver in the mill in the middle of the day asked the overlooker for leave of absence for half

A minor servant, however, under a contract for a specified time who agrees not to leave his employment without giving previous notice of his intention to do so, but does leave without giving such notice, is not liable to have the damages sustained deducted from the amount he would otherwise have been entitled to recover for his labor.¹ But where a servant quits his employment with the consent of his employer, such act cannot be construed as a breach of the contract.²

An agreement to give notice before quitting does not apply to a temporary absence; for such absence an operative may be discharged but his wages are not forfeited.³

(f) Disablement Through Accident.—A person contracting to render personal services after part performance becomes disabled by inevitable casualty, and is thereby prevented from fully completing his contract, is entitled to recover for the services actually rendered on a quantum meruit.⁴

a day, promising to return to work the next morning at six. The weaver did not return the next day till half-past one in the afternoon. The court held that she did not forfeit her wages under the rule, for she could not be said to be absent without notice merely by continuing her absence longer than the period which she had mentioned. Taylor v. Carr, 30 L. J. (U. C.) 201.

Forfeiture of Wages Due as Liquidated Damages.—A clause in a contract of employment by which the servant agrees to give two weeks' notice of his intention to quit, and that if he fails to do so "whatever may be due at the time of leaving is an indebtedness to the company to be considered as liquidated damages for such failure" is void. Schimpf v. Tenn. Mfg. Co. (Tenn.), 6 S. W. Rep. 131.

Notification of Proposed Reduction of Pay.—A master who notifies his servant that on the next day he shall cut down his wages, whereupon the servant leaves at once, cannot avail himself of a rule that servants leaving without giving two weeks' notice forfeit their wages. Schietenger v. Bridgeport Knife Co., 54 Conn. 64.

1. Derschero Continental Mills, 58 Me. 217; 4 Am. Rep. 286; citing Moses v. Stevens, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 332; Vent. v. Osgood, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 572; Robinson v. Weeks, 56 Me. 102.

2. Boyles v. Parker, 46 Vt. 343. And see De Camp v. Stevens, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 24.

3. Heber v. United States Flax Mfg. Co., 13 R. I. 303.

Yet where the servant leaves without notice, and remains away so long as to warrant the master in regarding his absence as an abandonment of his work, and procured another person to supply his place, although his intention is to be absent only temporarily, he forfeits all that may be due him at the time. Naylor v. Fall River Iron Works Co., 118 Mass. 317; Partington v. Wamsutta Mills, 110 Mass. 467.

4. Fenton v. Clark, 11 Vt. 557; Hubbard v. Belden, 27 Vt. 645; Dickey v. Linscott, 20 Me. 453; Wolfe v. Howes, 20 N. Y. 197; Mounsey v. Drake, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 27, 29; 1 Shep. Touchstone 180; Gilbert on Covenants 472; People v. Manning, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 297; People v. Bartlett, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 570; Parsons on Contracts 524; Story on Bailments, § 36 and notes; Jones v. Judd, 4 N. Y. 412; Beebe v. Johnson, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 502.

Death of Employee.—It was held in Pennsylvania that an old contract between employer and employee, providing for the payment to the latter of a per cent. of the profits of each year as wages, and, in case of the death of either during the year, at the rate for the expired term of a certain sum per annum, having been found by the jury to have been in force at the death of the employee, his executrix might recover the proportionate part of the sum agreed to the date of his death, though by reason of sickness he stopped work some time before. Dunlap v. Montgomery (Pa.) 1888, 16 Atl. Rep. 41.

20. Services Under Void Contract.—The fact that a servant has fully performed a contract for services void under the statute of frauds does not entitle him to recover upon the contract, but his remedy is upon a quantum meruit, and in most States the measure of his recovery would be the contract price, the law implying a promise to pay according to the terms of the agreement.¹ And notwithstanding the ancient rule to the contrary.²

A recovery may be had for services rendered by a servant up to the time of his death, although the same occur before the termination of the contract of employment.³ And generally the value of services rendered under a void or unauthorized contract may be recovered.⁴

21. Unskilful Employee.—The unskilfulness of an employee does not prevent his recovering the real value of his services.⁵

22. Payment in Particular Way.—Where one performs services for another, to be paid for in a particular way, upon refusal to pay in the manner agreed upon, the one performing such services is entitled to compensation in money for what such services are reasonably worth.⁶

1. Wood's Master and Servant, § 193; Stone v. Dennison, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 1; King v. Brown, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 485; overruling 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 92; La Du Mfg. Co. v. La Du, 36 Minn. 473. See Browne St. Frauds, § 131; King v. Welcome, 5 Gray (Mass.) 41; Stone v. Dennison, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Shute v. Door, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 204; Cornes v. Lamson, 16 Conn. 246; Coughlin v. Knowles, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 57; Collier v. Coates, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 471; Abbott v. Draper, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 51; Clark v. Gilbert, 26 N. Y. 279; Wolfe v. Howes, 20 N. Y. 197; Clark v. Terry, 25 Conn. 395; Ryan v. Dayton, 25 Conn. 188; Philbrook v. Belknap, 6 Vt. 383; Seymour v. Cogger, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 32; Fuller v. Brown, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 440.

2. Countess of Plymouth v. Throgmorton, Salk. 67.

3. Wolfe v. Howes, 20 N. Y. 197; Clark v. Gilbert, 26 N. Y. 279; Yerrington v. Greene, 7 R. I. 589. Compare Givhan v. Dailey, 4 Ala. 336; Towsley v. Moor, 30 Ohio St. 185; 27 Am. Rep. 434; Hidden v. Gordon, 21 Colo. 92; Sandfoss v. Flausburg, 35 Colo. 481; Stone v. Dennison, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 1; King v. Welcome, 5 Gray (Mass.) 41; Davenport v. Mason, 15 Mass. 85; Lapham v. Whipple, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 59; Marcy v. Marcy, 9 Allen (Mass.) 8; Frary v. Sterling, 99 Mass. 461; Hill v. Hooper, 1 Gray (Mass.) 131; Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. 204; Pierce v. Paine, 28 Vt. 34; Noyes

v. Moor, 1 Root (Conn., 142; Randall v. Turner, 17 Ohio St. 262; Abbott v. Inskip, 29 Ohio St. 59; Sturges v. Burton, 8 Ohio St. 423; Souch v. Strawbridge, 2 C. B. 808; Whipple v. Parker, 29 Mich. 374; Patten v. Hicks, 43 Cal. 509; Moore v. Aldrich, 25 Tex. 276; Swanzey v. Moore, 22 Ill. 63; Sherman v. Transportation Co., 31 Vt. 182; Suggett v. Cason, 26 Mo. 221; Emery v. Smith, 46 N. H. 151; Green v. Saddington, 7 El. & Bl. 593; Lane v. Shackford, 5 N. H. 130; Thomas v. Dickinson, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 90; McCue v. Smith, 9 Minn. 252; Watrous v. Chalker, 7 Conn. 224; Ray v. Young, 3 Tex. 550.

4. As where a deceit was practiced on the servant, one company hiring him to work for another of similar name, he believing both to be the same. In such case there could be no recovery under the contract but for work and labor. Morrison v. Bradley, 5 Cal. 503; S. F. Gas Co. v. S. Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Argenti v. S. Francisco, 16 Cal. 256; Pixley v. Western Pacific R. Co., 33 Cal. 195; Fuller v. Reed, 38 Cal. 99; Patten v. Hicks, 43 Cal. 509; Wetmore v. S. Francisco, 44 Cal. 295; Foulke v. San Diego S. P. R. Co., 51 Cal. 365.

5. McCormick v. Ketchum, 48 Wis. 643; Cole v. Clarke, 3 Wis. 323; Taylor v. Williams, 6 Wis. 363; Jackson v. Cleveland, 15 Wis. 108.

6. Shane v. Smith, 37 Kan. 56; Stone v. Stone, 43 Vt. 180.

23. Payment to Third Person.—Where an employer agrees to render an equivalent for services performed, it is no defence to an action against him to recover compensation that he agreed to pay some third party, who has no legal claim to the service or right to the compensation; especially where the defendant does not show that he has in fact paid such third person; for where payment for labor is to be made, the law will give it to him who performs the labor, unless some other person can show better title.¹

24. Running Account—Statute of Limitations.—Where a servant continues in an employment many years, without any express agreement as to the term of service or the compensation, payments being made from time to time in various sums, the presumption is that the payments apply on the balance unpaid, and not upon the wages of any particular year; thus taking the entire balance out of the statute of limitations.²

25. Set-off and Defences in Action for Wages.—In an action for wages defendant may set off damages occasioned him by negligence of the plaintiff in his employment, and may have judgment for any balance due him;³ or any loss of custom caused by the servant's bad conduct;⁴ or lack of diligence on the part of the servant may be shown in reduction or bar of damages;⁵ and expressions of confidence in an employee based on his own reports may be shown in an action by him upon his contract of employment, but they do not estop the employer from showing his default, or explaining what he did or neglected.⁶ The master may also recoup damages for the seduction of his daughter by his servant.⁷ But it is no defence that the employee had misconducted himself in his employment by negligently injuring a third

1. Lewis v. Trickey, 20 Barb. (N.Y.) 387.

2. Smith v. Velie, 60 N. Y. 106.

Long Term of Service—Absence of Mutual Accounts.—But in such a case no agreement can be implied that compensation shall be postponed until the termination of the employment; and where the employment has continued for a long space of time, and there are no mutual accounts between the parties, the statute of limitations is a bar to a claim for more than six years of service in such employment, unless it appear that payments have been made to apply thereon within the six years, in which case a recovery is proper for a period beginning six years prior to the first of said payments. Matter of application of Gardner, 103 N. Y. 533; Davis v. Gorton, 16 N. Y. 255; Gilbert v. Comstock, 93 N. Y. 484.

3. Harlan v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 130; Eaton v. Wooly, 28 Wis. 628. And see Emery v.

St. Louis etc. R. Co., 77 Mo. 339; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 122.

4. Newman v. Reagan, 63 Ga. 755.

In Case of Seamen.—Debts or liabilities of seamen to the master or owner of a vessel for other cause than for misfeasance or nonperformance in the duties of their position, cannot be set up against their demand of wages. Admiralty does not take cognizance of set off; but allowances may be made to the master or owner by rebate of wages in compensation of losses or injuries incurred by them in consequence of negligence or fault of the mariner in the performance of his duties. The Steamboat Hudson, Olc. (U. S. C. C. N. Y.) 396.

5. Alberts v. Stearns, 50 Mich. 349.

6. Alberts v. Stearns, 50 Mich. 349.

7. Bixby v. Parsons, 49 Conn. 483; 44 Am. Rep. 246. See article SEDUCTION, this work.

Attempt to Ravish Female Servant.—

It has been held in England that the person, thereby exposing the employer to liability for damages; unless the employer has actually paid, or at least has been adjudged liable to pay, damages for such negligence of the employee.¹ While flagrant acts of dishonesty seriously affecting the master's interest might bar a recovery in such an action, although the amount fraudulently appropriated was much less than the amount of wages, a failure to pay over caused by mistake or neglect, in the absence of any provision in the contract covering it, will not defeat a recovery of the contract price less the sum retained.²

Where a servant, whose wages are due and payable periodically, refuses to serve in the manner contracted for, or is rightfully discharged at any intervening period between the days when his wages are due, he can recover nothing for that portion of time during which he has served since the last periodical payment.³

26. Services Rendered in Obstruction of Justice.—An action will not lie for a claim based upon services rendered in obstruction of public justice.⁴

master is absolved from payment of wages due a male servant who has attempted to ravish his female servant. Atkins v. Acton, 4 C. & P. 208.

1. Merlette v. North & East R. St. Co., 13 Daly (N. Y.) 114; Green v. New River Co., 4 Tenn. 589; Zulker v. Wing, 20 Wis. 408; Thompson on Neg. 1061.

But faithful service is a condition precedent to the right of a servant to recover his wages; and if during the time for which he agrees to serve he commits a criminal offence, although not immediately injurious to the person or property of his master, he will not be entitled to recover any part of his wages. Callo v. Brouncker, 4 C. & P. 518; Ridgway v. Market Co., 3 Ad. & El. 171; Turner v. Robinson, 6 C. & P. 15; Spain v. Arnot, 2 Stark. 256; Wise v. Wilson, 1 Car. & Kir. 662; Lomax v. Arding, 10 Exch. 734; Libhart v. Wood, 1 W. & S. 265; Singer v. McCormick, 4 W. & S. 265; Bixby v. Parsons, 49 Conn. 483; 44 Am. Rep. 246; Britton v. Turner, 6 N. H. 481; Kearney v. Holmes, 6 La. An. 323.

2. Turner v. Kouwenhoven, 100 N. Y. 115; Brown v. Craft, 6 C. & P. 16, 17; Libhart v. Wood, 1 Watts & Serg. (Pa.) 265.

Teller of Bank Under Bond to Pay Over.—A bank teller being dismissed from his office in March, retained of the funds in his hands $1,500, claimed by him as his salary for the whole year. In April the bank, claiming that his salary had been reduced to $1,000 per annum, brought suit upon the teller's official bond, alleging refusal to turn over $1,250 of the funds of the bank, and the only issue raised by the answer was that defendant was entitled to retain the said sum of $1,250 for his salary as teller. Held, that defendant had treated the contract as entire, and could not, therefore, assert his claim until the time when it became payable. That the teller having given bond to deliver up to the bank all moneys, etc., when required to do so, the bank might demand of him at any time, with or without dismissal, the assets in his hands; and a refusal to deliver was a breach of the bond, and that against the demand of the bank the defendant could set off nothing more than was due him by the bank at the time of action brought. See Union Bank v. Hayward, 15 S. Car. 296; Jennery v. Olmstead, 90 N. Y. 363.

3. Beach v. Mullen, 34 N. J. L. 343; Spain v. Arnot, 2 Stark. 256; Turner v. Robinson, 6 C. & P. 15; Ridgway v. Hungerford Market Co., 3 Ad. & El. 171; Lilley v. Elwin, 11 Q. B. 742, 755, 757; Turner v. Mason, 14 M. & W. 112; Libhart v. Wood, 1 Watts & Serg. (Pa.) 265; Singer v. McCormick, 4 Watts & Serg. (Pa.) 266; Blodgett v. Berlin Mills Co., 52 N. H. 215; 2 Parsons on Contracts 40; 2 Smith's Leading Cases 43.

4. Bierbauer v. Wirth (Wis.), 5 Fed. Rep. 336. A case where a book-keeper

27. Loss of Time—Additional Services.—One who contracts to labor for a limited time cannot be required, after the expiration of the period, to render additional services, merely because he has lost certain days during the term.¹

28. Servant Once Settled with.—A servant satisfied with what he had received upon leaving his employer cannot subsequently recover a further sum for services rendered.²

29. Passage Money.—A party employed to perform work at a place distant from that at which he was when employed cannot recover his passage money to such place on failure to show consideration for promise to pay therefor.³

30. Evidence as to Compensation.—In a suit for wages a conversation between one of the defendants and a third party is admissible if it belongs to the negotiation which led to hiring the defendant and tended to show that a fixed amount was to be paid him.⁴ Nor is it error in a suit for wages per contract to show in support of plaintiff's understanding of the contract, that when he went to work for defendant he was receiving from another person, whom he voluntarily left, a much larger sum than the amount defendant insisted he was to receive.⁵

The testimony of experts is admissible to prove the value of a servant's services.⁶ And what it is worth to put a certain quantity of lumber into a house may be shown by the opinion of a carpenter and builder.⁷

was sent away so as not to be reached by process, in anticipation of criminal prosecution for violation of revenue laws. And see, in the same line, Wight v. Rindskopf, 43 Wis. 348; Badger v. Williams, 1 Chip. (Vt.) 137; Valentine v. Stewart, 15 Cal. 387.

1. Bast v. Byrne, 51 Wis. 531; Ridgway v. Hungerford Market Co., 3 Ad. & El. 171; Prentiss v. Ledyard, 28 Wis. 131; McGrath v. Bell, 33 N. Y. Super. Ct. 195. But see Pa. R. Co. v. Boot, 104 Pa. St. 26, a case of a contract with a minor. And see Gaudell v. Poutegny, 4 Camp. 375; Thompson v. Wood, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 96; Fowler v. Armour, 24 Ala. 194; Armfield v. Nash, 31 Miss. 361; Gordon v. Brewster, 7 Wis. 355; Booge v. P. R. Co., 33 Mo. 212.

2. Stanley v. Barringer, 74 Iowa 34.

In above action, brought to recover for services rendered on a farm, when plaintiff testified that during the time he worked for defendant he had a good home, good and sufficient clothing, medicine and doctor's attendance, and had spending money, and that when he left he was satisfied with what he had got, a verdict in favor of plaintiff is against the evidence.

3. McFadden v. Crawford, 39 Cal. 662.

4. MiNar v. Cuddy, 43 Mich. 273.

5. Rocco v. Parczyk, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 328.

6. Hatton v. Weems, 12 G. & J. 83; Lee v. Pindle, 12 G. & J. 288; Eldridge v. Smith, 13 Allen (Mass.) 140; Kendall v. May, 10 Allen (Mass.) 59; Fitchburg R. Co. v. Freeman, 12 Gray (Mass.) 401.

The admission of the opinion of a witness living in one place as to the value of services performed at another, is not error where there is nothing to show that he did not know the value of labor at the latter place, or the comparative value of wages at both. The Kent Furn. Mfg. Co. v. Ransom, 46 Mich. 416.

Labor of Mechanic or Builder.—The value of the services and labor of a mechanic may be proved by the opinion of another mechanic. McCollum v. Seward, 62 N. Y. 316; Shafer v. Dean, 29 Iowa 144; Crawford v. Wolf, 29 Iowa 568; Eagle etc. Mfg. Co. v. Browne, 58 Ga. 240; Mercer v. Vose, 67 N. Y. 36.

7. Hough v. Cook, 69 Ill. 581; Moore v. Lea, 32 Ala. 375.

Real Estate Broker.—Where a party sued for services in purchasing a mill for the defendant the opinion of a real estate broker as to the value of his services was admitted.¹

Book Keeper.—The value of services of a book keeper may be proved by another book keeper.²

31. Interest.—In an action to recover for work and labor interest can only be recovered from the time of filing the complaint.³

32. Wages Payable in Cash.—Unless otherwise agreed a servant must be paid in cash. The master has no right to handle or invest such compensation or apply it in any manner, whether beneficial to the servant or not.⁴

X. ILLEGAL CONTRACTS—1. Generally—Sunday Laws.—A contract to do what the law forbids cannot be enforced, whether it be malum in se or only malum prohibitum.⁵

But, to fall within the rule, contracts of service must be done directly in furtherance of an illegal or immoral object; it must be the inevitable result of the labor or the party must have done the act in furtherance of the illegal purpose.⁶

Where a statute prohibits labor of any sort on the Sabbath, no recovery can be had for work done on that day.⁷ Most, if not all, of the statutes, however, except from the prohibition matters of necessity, charity or mercy. Being in derogation of the common law these statutes must be construed strictly, and where all work save that of a necessary character is prohibited on that day, compensation can be recovered for doing that sort of work only.⁸

2. Requirement of Licences.—Where the law requires that a particular business shall be licenced, employees of unlicenced establishments can recover nothing for services rendered therein.⁹

1. Etting v. Sturtevant, 41 Conn. 176.

2. Scott v. Lillenthal, 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 224.

3. McFadden v. Crawford, 39 Cal. 662.

4. Sellen v. Halt, 4 C. & P. 104. And see Hedgly v. Halt, 4 C. & P. 104.

A statute providing for the payment of miners in money has been held unconstitutional, as preventing parties from making their own contracts. Godcharles v. Migeman (Pa.), 6 Atl. Rep. 354.

Articles Broken—Deduction.—Nor deduction for articles broken unless in conformity with the terms of the contract. Leheair v. Bristow, 4 Camp. 134. See Still v. Hall, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 51; Wilson v. Wall, 34 Ala. 301; Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 294; Pixler v. Nichols, 8 Iowa 106.

5. See ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 879.

It makes no difference if the act is not prohibited in terms; it is enough if a penalty is prescribed for doing such act. Milton v. Haden, 32 Ala. 30; Coburn v. Odell, 30 N. H. 540; Mitchell v. Smith, 1 Binney (Pa.) 118; Elkins v. Parkhurst, 17 Vt. 105; Chitty on Contracts 694; Bartlett v. Vinor, Carth. 252; Laughton v. Hughes, 1 M. & S. 596; De Begnis v. Armistead, 10 Bing. N. C. 107; Ferguson v. Norman, 5 Bing. N. C. 86; Cope v. Rowlands, 2 M. & W. 149; Wheeler v. Russell, 17 Mass. 258; Mitchell v. Smith, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 118.

6. Wood's Master and Servant 210.

7. Bernard v. Luppig, 32 Mo. 341; State v. Goff, 20 Ark. 289; Jones v. Andover, 10 Allen (Mass.) 18. See SUNDAY.

8. State v. Goff, 20 Ark. 289.

As to what are works of necessity, charity or mercy, see SUNDAY.

9. As an actor in an unlicenced theatre. De Begnis v. Armistead, 10

Neither can an unlicensed steamboat engineer recover wages due, where the law requires such persons to be licensed.¹

3. Labor on Object of Illegal Character.—And while one cannot recover for labor upon an article or object of illegal character, the case is different where the same is susceptible of innocent use.² But the rule that mere knowledge by the servant of the master's intention to use the object in question for an unlawful purpose does not invalidate the contract, does not apply to a case where the contract is so connected with an illegal transaction or purpose as to be inseparable from it.³

4. Law Governing Contract—Change.—The validity of a contract rests upon the law as it existed at the time the same was entered into.⁴ But of course where, after a contract is closed, a legislative act is passed making that unlawful which before was innocent, the person contracting will be excused from carrying out his agreement.⁵ But if the contract has been partly performed, a recovery can be had for labor, etc., up to the time of the passage of the act, but for nothing done afterward.⁶

5. One of Several Considerations Is Illegal.—And it is furthermore Bing. N. C. 107. Or a bar tender in an unlicensed saloon. Badgley v. Beale, 3 Watts (Pa.) 263.

1. The Pioneer, Deady (U. S.) 72.

2. Labor on House to be Used for Gambling.—It has been held in Missouri that it is no defence to an action for work and labor done and material furnished in fitting up a house that plaintiff knew at the time that the house was to be used for gambling purposes. Michael v. Bacon, 49 Mo. 476; citing Hodgson v. Temple, 5 Taunt. 181; Cheney v. Duke, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 11; Lightfoot v. Tennant, 1 Bos. & Pul. 551; Corenan v. Boyce, 3 Barn. & Ald. 179; McKendall v. Robinson, 3 Mees. & W. 424; Faikney v. Reynolds, 4 Burr. 269; Halman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341; Pellecot v. Angell, 2 Cromp. Mees. & Rosc. 311; Hodgson v. Temple, 5 Taunt. 181; Tracy v. Talmage, 4 Kern. (N. Y.) 169; Bowery v. Bennett, 1 Camp. 348.

Bowling Alley.—And in Ohio it has been held that a carpenter is entitled to recover for time, labor and materials in erecting a building to be used as a bowling alley, where bowling alleys are prohibited by statute, because the building may be used for lawful purposes, and the mere fact that the carpenter knows that it is to be devoted to an unlawful purpose does not make his labor unlawful; but for labor and materials entered in building the alley itself, or the balls to be used therein, no recovery could be had, for these are unlawful instruments per se, and produce the very elements that produce the violation of the law. Spurgeon v. McElwain, 6 Ohio 442.

3. Tatum v. Kelley, 25 Ark. 211; The Branch Bank of Montgomery v. Cochran, 5 Ala. 250; Beach v. Kezar, 1 N. H. 184; Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 615; McGavock v. Puryear, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 35; Steele v. Carll, 4 Dana (N. Y.) 381; Armstrong v. Toller, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 258; Girardy v. Richardson, 1 Esp. 13; Langton v. Hughes, 1 Maule & Selwyn 593; Lightfoot v. Tennant, 1 Bos. & Pull. 551; Farmer v. Russell, 1 Bos. & Pull. 295.

4. McCauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 11; Murrill v. Jones, 40 Miss. 565; Brick Church v. Mayor of New York, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 538; Central Bank v. Empire Stone Dressing Co., 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 23; Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9; Mays v. Williams, 27 Ala. 267.

5. Bradford v. Jenkins, 21 Miss. 328. Compare Mays v. Williams, 27 Ala. 267.

6. Mays v. Williams, 27 Ala. 267; McCauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 11; Bennett v. Woolfolk, 15 Ga. 213; Bailey v. Milner, 35 Ga. 330; Bogg v. Jerome, 7 Mich. 145; Judah v. Trustees, 16 Ind. 56; Brown v. Dillahunty, 12 Miss. 713; Bradford v. Jenkins, 21 Miss. 328; Darling v. Rogers, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 483.

true that where one of several considerations is illegal, the whole contract is void.¹

XI. IMMORAL CONTRACTS.—Contracts of hiring and service will not be enforced if they are entered into for immoral purposes.² Thus a contract for service and cohabitation would be void, and could not be enforced in a court of law.³ Parol evidence is admissible to show that the consideration of a contract is of an immoral character.⁴

XII. ENFORCEMENT OF CONTRACT FOR SERVICES.—Contracts for personal services are subject to the implied condition that the person shall be able at the time appointed to perform them; and if he dies, or, without fault on the part of the covenantor, becomes disabled, the obligation to perform becomes extinguished.⁵

As a general rule covenants for personal service cannot be specifically enforced either by common law or by statute; exceptional cases of apprentices depend on parental authority; that of soldiers and sailors on national policy.⁶ And contracts of hiring and service cannot be transferred or assigned without the consent of the parties thereto.⁷ Master and servant both contract with regard to the personal qualities of each other; the relation is one of per-

1. Jones v. Waite, 1 Bing. N. C. 656; Schockell v. Rosier, 2 Bing. N. C. 634; Hopkins v. Prescott, 4 C. B. 578; Nichols v. Strelton, 10 Q. B. 346.

2. Woods' Master and Servant, § 212. See ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 921.

Expense of Printing Immoral Book.—Thus where the plaintiff sued for the expense of printing an immoral book called "The Memoirs of Harriette Wilson," containing the history of a celebrated prostitute, the court refused to assist the plaintiff, taking the ground that "every servant, to the lowest, engaged in such a transaction, is prevented from receiving compensation." Poplett v. Stockdale, R. & Moo. 377; 2 C. & P. 198.

3. R. v. Northwingfield, 1 B. & Ad. 912; Bradshaw v. Hayward, Carr. & M. 591.

4. Collins v. Blantern, 2 Wils. 350; Holman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341; Abbott v. Hendricks, 1 M. & G. 791; Gas L. & Coke Co. v. Turner, 6 Bing. N. C. 327.

5. People v. Manning, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 297; Jones v. Judd, 4 N. Y. 411; Clark v. Gilbert, 26 Iowa 279; Wolfe v. Howes, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 174; 20 N. Y. 197; Gray v. Murray, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 167; Robinson v. Davison, L. R., 6 Exch. 269; Boast v. Firth, L. R., 4 Com. Pl. 1; see Wise v. Wilson, 1 C. & K. 662; Hobson v. Cowley, 27 L. J., Exch. 205.

Illness of Opera Singer.—The defendants agreed with the plaintiffs, proprietors of a theatre, to furnish the "Wachtel Opera Troupe" to give a number of performances in their theatre, the receipts to be provided in a specified manner. Wachtel, from whom the company took its name, and by whose name it was known, was the leader and chief attraction, and his connection with the company was the inducement that led the plaintiffs to make the agreement. Wachtel became unable to sing in consequence of illness, and the defendants consequently did not furnish the troupe. In an action for breach of the agreement, held, that Wachtel's appearance was the principal thing contracted for, and was of the essence of the contract; that plaintiff would not have been bound to accept the services of the company without him; and that his sickness and inability to sing constituted a good excuse for nonperformance of the agreement. Spalding v. Rosa, 71 N. Y. 40; 27 Am. Rep. 7.

6. Mary Clark's Case, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 122.

Agreement Between Actor and Manager of Theatre.—Kemble v. Kean, 6 Sim. 334; Kimberly v. Jennings, 6 Sim. 340; Lumley v. Wagner, 1 De G. M. & G. 604; Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 178.

7. Addison on Contracts 311; Pollock on Contracts 411; Fitch v. Brockman, 3 Cal. 348.

sonal confidence, and the one cannot compel the other to accept a third person in substitution.¹

XIII. MASTER'S RIGHT OF ACTION FOR INJURIES TO SERVANT.—The right of action to the master for personal injuries sustained by his servant is fully recognized.² This right grows out of the loss of service sustained by the master.³ The existence of the relation of master and servant must be shown in order to support the action.⁴

It was an ancient rule of law that the master could not recover where the injury in question caused the immediate death of the servant, on the ground that the civil remedy is merged in the felony.⁵ Yet the rule would have no application in cases where the injury resulted from a negligent act that did not amount to a felony; nor in America, where the felony is not regarded as swallowing or destroying the civil remedy.⁶ This is an action on the case, generally called a per quod servitum amisit.⁷

The servant may likewise maintain an action against the aggressor.⁸ And the action may likewise be enforced by a parent for injury to a minor child.⁹

XIV. TERMINATION OF THE RELATION BY THE WILL OF THE MASTER.
—1. Rightful Discharge—Sufficient Cause.—An employer may discharge his servant before the expiration of the term of service, for good and sufficient cause.¹⁰

1. Campbell v. Price, 9 S. 264; Schmaling v. Tomlinson, 6 Taunt. 147; Stevens v. Benning, 1 K. & J. 168; 6 D. M. & G. 223.

Contract to Do Housework.—A contract to do ordinary housework is one for personal service, and cannot be fulfilled by another. Jennings v. Lyons, 39 Wis. 553.

2. Duel v. Harding, Stra. 595; Hall v. Hollander, 4 B. & C. 660; Hodsall v. Stallebrass, 11 Ad. & El. 301; Dixon v. Bell, 1 Stark. 287; Ames v. Union Co., 117 Mass. 541; Kennedy v. Shea, 110 Mass. 147; Martin v. Payne, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 387; Rice v. Nickerson, 9 Allen (Mass.) 478; Dennis v. Clark, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 347; McCarthy v. Guild, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 291; Woodward v. Washburn, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 369.

3. Voss v. Howard, 1 Cr. (U. S.) 251; Fluker v. Georgia R. & B. Co., 81 Ga. 461. Compare Dennis v. Clark, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 347.

4. Smith on Master and Servant 83, 85; and see Bartley v. Richtmeyer, 4 N. Y. 38; Ingersoll v. Jones, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 661.

5. Osborn v. Gillett, L. R., 8 Ex. 88; Reeves Dom. Rel. 486; Schouler's Dom. Rel. 727.

6. Reeves Dom. Rel. 486.

7. 1 Comm. 429; 3 Comm. 142.

8. Woodward v. Walton, 2 N. R. 483; Robert Mary's Case, 9 Coke 113. See generally Combes v. The Hundred, Holt 27; Savil v. Kirby, 10 Mod. 386; Rogers v. Smith, 17 Ind. 323.

9. Dennis v. Clark, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 347; Durden v. Barnett, 7 Ala. 169. See INFANCY, 10 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of L.

10. Drunkennes—Such as habit of becoming intoxicated. Gonsolis v. Gearhart, 31 Mo. 585; Speck v. Phillips, 5 M. & W. 279; Huntington v. Clafflin, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 262; Beggs v. Fowler, 82 Mo. 599; McCormick v. Demary, 10 Neb. 515; Wise v. Wilson, 1 Car. & K. 662.

But not where the duties of the employment are not affected thereby. 1 Hagg. Adm. 198; McKellar v. McFarlane, 15 D. (Sc.) 246. Compare Bass Furnace Co. v. Glasscock, 82 Ala. 452.

Improper Deportment Toward Patrons.—A master is justified in discharging a servant before the expiration of the term of the employment when his disposition and deportment are such as to seriously injure the custom and business of the master. But slight discourtesies, hasty words, and occasional exhibitions of irritation, or even ill temper, are not sufficient cause for a discharge where there are many petty causes of annoyance and irritation in the business. Leatherberry v. Odell (N. Car.), 7 Fed. Rep. 642.

The conduct of an overseer, who impedes by rudeness, and otherwise reprehensible conduct, the inspection of the plantation under his charge by persons who are thereto authorized by his employer, and thereby jeopardizes the latter's interests, is a just cause for his discharge before the expiration of the term of his employment. Lalande v. Aldrich (La. 1889), 6 So. Rep. 28.

Insubordination.—Where one servant violates or fails to comply with any express or implied condition of the contract of service, which results in material injury to the business of the master, or which amounts to insubordination or disregard of his feelings and proper authority, the contract may be determined before the expiration of the term of service. Leatherberry v. Odell, 7 Fed. Rep. 642.

As where a farm servant was ordered to go with the horses a mile off just as dinner was ready, and he said he would not go until he had had his dinner. Spain v. Arnott, 2 Stark. 256.

Also where a farm servant refused to work during harvest without beer. Lilly v. Elwin, 11 Q. B. 742.

As to seamen, see The Richard Mott, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 440; Johnson v. The Barque Crane, 1 Saw. (U. S.) 150; Smith v. Schooner J. C. King, 10 Pitts. L. J. 274.

Also where a housemaid persisted in leaving the house without permission to visit a dying mother. Turner v. Mason, 14 M. & W. 112. And where a salesman wilfully sells goods at a loss. Newman v. Reagan, 65 Ga. 512.

It has also been held that the absence of a plantation overseer for one day warranted his discharge. Ford v. Danks, 16 La. An. 119. Also the following cases: Edwards v. Levy, 2 Fost. & Fin. 94; Calls v. Brouncker, 4 C. & P. 518; Turner v. Mason, 14 M. & W. 112; Shaver v. Ingham, 58 Mich. 649; Drayton v. Reid, 5 Daly (N. Y. C. P.) 442.

But an employer has no arbitrary power to dismiss his employee for a disobedience of orders that involves no serious consequences and is not wilful in the sense of being perverse, insubordinate or unreasonable; and its reasonableness is for the jury. Nor can disobedience be made a pretext for dismissal apart from the injury it causes. Schouler's Dom. Rel., § 462; Shaver v. Ingham, 58 Mich. 649; 55 Am. Rep. 712; citing Turner v. Mason, 14 M. & W. 112; Fillieul v. Armstrong, 7 Ad. & El. 557; Calls v. Brouncker, 4 C. & P. 518; Edwards v. Levy, 2 Fost. & Fin. 94; Cressons v. Skinner, 11 M. & W. 161; Smith v. Allen, 3 Fost. & Fin. 157; Jones v. Graham etc. Trans. Co., 51 Mich. 539; Ford v. Danks, 16 La. An. 119.

Disrespectful Conduct.—If a servant is disrespectful in his conduct he may be discharged. Railey v. Lanahan, 34 La. An. 426.

Taking Bribes.—If a foreman takes bribes from workmen to obtain favors, he may be discharged. Engel v. Schooherr, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 417.

Unnecessarily Suing Master.—Or repeatedly sues his master for salary not due. Brink v. Fay, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 562; McCormick v. Demary, 10 Neb. 515.

Competing with Master in Business.—Or engages in a calling or business that tends to injure the business of the master. Dieringer v. Meyer, 42 Wis. 311; Jaffray v. King, 34 Md. 217; Gower v. Andrews, 59 Cal. 119.

Adams Ex. Co. v. Trega, 35 Md. 47; Spencer v. Trafford, 42 Md. 1. See Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 732; Lacy v. Osbaldiston, 8 C. & P. 80; Jaffray v. King, 34 Md. 220.

A servant, hired for a year to work in the lumber trade, engaged during the year in the same trade on his own account, without his master's consent, though he continued to give his time and attention to his master's business. Held, that this master could discharge him before the expiration of the year. Dieringer v. Meyer, 42 Wis. 311; 24 Am. Rep. 415; citing Singer v. McCormick, 4 W. & S. 265; Jaffray v. King, 34 Md. 217; Adams Ex. Co. v. Trego, 35 Md. 47; Lacy v. Osbaldiston, 8 Car. & P. 80; Read v. Dunsmore, 9 Car. & P. 588; Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 732; Gardner v. McCutcheon, 4 Beav. 534; Ridgway v. Market Co., 3 Ad. & El. 171; Amor v. Fearon, 9 Ad. & E. 548; Horton v. McMurty, 5 Hurl. & N. 667.

Obscene and Improper Language.—Likewise where the employee uses obscene and improper language while performing his duties, particularly where the master is not in the habit of using language of similar character. Mattheson v. McKinnon, 10 S. (Sc.) 825; Weaver v. Halsey, 1 Ill. App. 558.

Incompetency.—There is an implied contract upon the part of a servant that he is competent to discharge the duties of the employment entered into, and a breach of such contract will, therefore, warrant his discharge before the term of service has expired.¹

2. Term of Service.—But a contract of employment for a certain Immoral Conduct.—Or is guilty of immoral conduct, so held in an English case where a female servant became pregnant during the term of employment. Rex v. Brampton, Cald. 11.

A person engaged as a theatrical performer may be lawfully discharged for indecent and immoral conduct so gross as to cause the other members of the company to refuse to associate with her, and so open as to become matter of public scandal, even although she fully performed all her theatrical duties. Drayton v. Reid, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 442.

Directing Others to Do Work for Which He Was Hired.—It is presumed, where a person is employed to perform a certain duty, that he will do so personally; and in many cases, if not invariably, if the servant deposes such duty to another it will justify his dismissal. Wise v. Wilson, 1 C. & K. 662; Stanton v. Bell, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 145.

1. Leatherberry v. Odell, 7 Fed. Rep. 641.

Base Ball Player.—Winship v. Portland League B. B. & A. Assoc. 78 Me. 571.

Continued Illness of Servant.—The continued illness of a servant releases the employer likewise. Tebo v. Ballard, 36 Vt. 612; Hubbard v. Belden, 27 Vt. 645; Deaver v. Morse, 20 Vt. 620; Fenton v. Clark, 11 Vt. 557; Hunter v. Waldron, 7 Ala. 753; Green v. Gilbert, 21 Wis. 395; Ryan v. Dayton, 25 Conn. 188; Hillyard v. Crabtree, 11 Tex. 264; Wennall v. Adney, 3 B. & P. 246.

False Representations as to Capacity.—Or false representations by the servant as to his capacity. Anstee v. Ober, 26 Mo. App. 665.

Failure to Keep Time Correctly.—Sickness for half a month, together with failure to keep the time of employees correctly, is sufficient cause for discharge. Miller v. Gidder, 36 La. An. 201. See Jenkins v. Betham, 15 C. B. 189.

Dealing with Certain Person.—An employee may be discharged for dealing with certain tradesmen named by his employer. Payne v. Western etc. R. Co., 13 Lea (Tenn.) 507; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 119.

Renting Certain Premises.—Or renting premises named, even when such prohibition arises from malice or ill will. Heywood v. Tillson, 75 Me. 225. But see 1 Wait's Act. & Def. 35, 36. Addison on Torts 20. Gilbert v. Mickie, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 357; Springhead Spinning Co. v. Riley, Law Rep., 6th Eq. Cas. 539.

Trading with Merchant Named.—Or trading with merchant duly designated. Payne v. Western etc. R. Co. (Tenn.), 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 119.

Fraudulent Conduct.—Likewise for fraudulent conduct toward master. Libhart v. Woods, 1 Watts & S. 265; Singer v. McCormick, 4 Watts & S. 266; Horton v. McMurtry, 5 Hurl. & N. 667.

Habitual Negligence.—Or his habitual negligence. Callo v. Brouncker, 4 C. & P. 518; Newman v. Reagan, 63 Ga. 755.

Disclosure of Secrets—Tattling.—Tattling or disclosing family secrets is a good cause for turning servant away. Beeston v. Caller, 2 C. & P. 607. So held where clerk of a railroad company disclosed the secrets of his employer's business. Drayton v. Reid, 5 Daly (N. Y. C. P.) 442; Filliél v. Armstrong, 7 Ad. & El. 557.

Robbery of another than the master. Libhart v. Woods, 1 Watts & S. 265; Trotman v. Dunn, 4 Camp. 211.

Embezzlement from Master or Third Person.—And embezzlement from the master or from a stranger. Spotswood v. Barrow, 5 Ex. 110; Libhart v. Wood, 1 Watts & S. 265. And see Brown v. Craft, 6 C. & P. 16; Turner v. Robinson, 6 C. & P. 16.

Challenging Master.—Sending or bearing a challenge to fight a duel. Dolby v. Kinnear, 1 Kerr 480; King v. Rice, 3 East 581.

Unprofitable Business.—On the other hand an employer has no right to discharge his employee merely because the relation is not likely to be a profitable one. Jaffray v. King, 34 Md. 222; Dugan v. Anderson, 36 Md. 567; Greene v. Washburn, 7 Allen (Mass.) 390.

The fact that the efforts of a travelling salesman to make sales are not very successful, and that another person who is afterwards employed in the same capacity succeeds in making larger sales, is no evidence that he did not serve his firm faithfully and to the best of his number of years, "unless sooner terminated," cannot be terminated by either party alone within the terms.¹ And where the employee is to be retained so long as he satisfies the master, he may be discharged at any time without assigning any reason.²

3. Condonation by Master.—Where the master excuses the servant's breach of the contract of service by retaining him in employment, he waives all right to subsequently complain thereof.³ But not so the right of action arising through the servant's tortious or negligent acts.⁴

Whether delay is a waiver by an employer of his right to discharge an employee for a fault committed is a question for the jury where there are facts indicating an excuse for the delay.⁵

4. Breach by Anticipation—Executory Contract.—While a contract of employment remains executory, the principal may rescind it, especially if the employee was not acting in good faith toward him. And the party claiming the right of rescission must give notice to the other party of the fact that he does withdraw, and this before the other party has performed.⁶

ability. Hamill v. Foute, 51 Md. 419.

Plaintiff alleged that defendant employed him for a year at a certain salary as commercial traveller, and wrongfully discharged him at the end of seven months. Defendant, under a plea of the general issue, offered to prove that plaintiff had represented to him that he could sell $20,000 worth of goods per annum; that agents who had preceded plaintiff in the same route in duller seasons had sold much larger quantities than he in the same length of time, as also had agents who succeeded him. Held, that the evidence was properly excluded. Champlain v. Detroit Stamping Co., 68 Mich. 238.

1. Term of Service.—The employer may also discharge the servant where there is no particular term of service, and may eject him by force if necessary. De Briar v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 450; Niagara Fire Ins. Co. v. Whittaker, 21 Wis. 329.

2. Spring v. Ansonia Glock Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 175. And see Tyler v. Ames, 8 Lans. (N. Y.) 280; Hart v. Hart, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 606.

Contract with Ball Player.—A contract for employment provided that if the employee failed to comply with the agreements or rules of certain baseball clubs, or became careless or indifferent, or conducted himself in such a manner as to injure the employer, or became ill or otherwise unfit from any cause whatever, in the judgment of the employer, to fulfil in a satisfactory manner his duties, then the employer should have the right to discipline, suspend or discharge him, and should be the sole judge of the sufficiency of the reason for so doing. Held, that his discharge without the existence, or an adjudication of the existence of a reason, and without alleging any reason, was a breach of the contract. Winship v. Portland League etc. Assoc., 78 Me. 571. And see generally Spain v. Arnot, 2 Starkie 227; 14 M. & W. 116; Lilly v. Elwin, 11 Q. B. 742; Amor v. Fearon, 9 Ad. & E. 543; 1 P. & D. 398; 14 M. & W. 42; Marsh v. Ruleson, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 514. Compare Winstone v. Linn, 1 B. & C. 460. And see Turner v. Mason, 14 M. & W. 112; Fillieul v. Armstrong, 7 Ad. & E. 557; Beach v. Mullen, 5 Vr. (N. J.) 343; Lacy v. Osbaldistan, 8 C. & P. 80; Read v. Dunsmore, 9 C. & P. 588; Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 732; Gardner v. McCutcheon, 4 Beav. 543; Ridgway v. Market Co., 3 Ad. & E. 171; Horton v. Murtry, 5 H. & M. 667; Thompson v. Havelock, 1 Camp. 527.

3. Brown v. Kimball, 12 Vt. 617; Harrington v. Bank, 1 T. & C. (N. Y.) 363; Hunter v. Gibbons, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 161. See also ante, IV, 19 d. RETURN OF SERVANT—CONDONATION.

4. Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 294.

5. Jones v. Field, 83 Ala. 445. See Stoddard v. Treadwell, 29 Cal. 294.

6. Gaty v. Sack, 19 Mo. App. 470.

But where a contract is made for future employment and service, and upon the arrival of the time specified for the commencement of the service, the employee is ready and willing to perform, but the employer absolutely repudiates the contract, this is equivalent to a refusal to allow the employee to enter upon the service, and is a breach of the contract. In such a case the employee need not tender his services or keep himself in readiness to perform.¹ But the words or conduct relied upon as a breach of the contract by anticipation must amount to a total refusal to perform it, and that does not, by itself, amount to a breach of the contract, unless so adopted, and acted upon by the other party.²

Where a servant is wrongfully prevented from entering upon the performance of the duties for which he was engaged he is entitled to the damages suffered by him.³

5. The Discharge—What Constitutes.—A discharge must, of course, be couched in such terms as to leave no doubt in the mind of the employee of the employer's desire to terminate the relation. No set form of words is necessary.⁴

6. Assignment of Cause.—An adequate cause for the dismissal of the employee existing and known to the employer at the time of

A master may repudiate a contract with a hired servant, if he ascertains that he is a drunkard before the term of service begins. Nolan v. Thompson, 11 Daly (N. Y.) 314; Johnson v. Gorman, 30 Ga. 612.

Or mentally incapable of performing the duties in question. Lyon v. Pollard, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 403.

1. Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362.

Accommodations Offered.—In a suit brought by a teacher against a college, for breach of contract to employ her and to furnish her with a room, it was held, it appearing that she refused to occupy the room assigned to her, that she could not recover. Illinois etc. College v. Perry, 8 Ill. App. 188.

2. Dingley v. Oler, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; following Johnston v. Willing, 16 Q. B. Div. 460; Smoat v. U. S., 15 Wall. (U. S.) 36; Benj. Sales, 9 568.

3. Wilcox v. Plummer, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 172; Miller v. Ward, 2 Conn. 494; Davis v. Ayres, 9 Ala. 292; Whitney v. Brooklyn, 5 Conn. 405.

4. The words "I am very sorry to have to ask you to resign your position," in a letter from an employer to an employee, are properly construed as a peremptory discharge. Jones v. Graham etc. Transp. Co., 51 Mich. 539.

Discharge by Letter.—A letter from

C, the president of a railroad company, to S, the superintendent, informing S that C had written to M, the vice-president, to superintend everything, and adding: "I presume you will prefer to retire by means of resignation. It is hereby understood that the same is accepted, and you will please telegraph me of its transmission, as I have instructed M to take charge of the railroad immediately on the receipt of my letter. Please confer with M in turning over the papers in the supt's office," followed by a letter next day from S, resigning the position to take effect at once. Held as a positive dismissal of S from the service of the company. The letter from S could not change its character or construction. Cumberland etc. R. Co. v. Slack, 45 Md. 161.

Letter Rescinding Contract—Assent of Employee.—A was employed by B, a firm, to sell goods for them for one year from January 1st, 1884, at an annual salary of $1,800. About the middle of the year B became insolvent and made an assignment, and later wrote A that his services would not be required after July 1st. Held, in an action by A to recover, that the notice would not have the effect of rescinding the contract without the assent of A. Vanuxem v. Bostwick (Pa.), 7 Alt. Rep. 598.

such dismissal, excuses and justifies the discharge, though it may not have been specially assigned at the time.¹

7. Partnerships.—As to the transaction of the ordinary business of a firm and the carrying out of the declared objects of its formation, in the usual way, within the scope of the business, it follows of necessity that the majority must control, and that the minority cannot arrest the business or suspend its operations. As where the majority insist upon the discharge of a servant objectionable to the rest.² Where the firm consists of two partners only, each has the power, in the absence of dissent by the other, to discharge a person employed by the other.³

8. Recovery for Work Done.—In the majority of the American States, servants' contracts, though for a specified time, are deemed apportionable, and a servant who has been discharged for cause is still entitled to recover for the work actually done.⁴

It was formerly laid down that where one contracted to employ another a certain time at a specified price for the entire time, and discharged him wrongfully before the expiration thereof, the servant could recover his wages for the entire period.⁵

It may be laid down as the modern rule, however, that the true measure of damages, in such cases, is an amount equal to the stipulated wages for the whole period covered by the contract,

1. Thus, if the want of business be assigned as the cause of the dismissal, the employer is not thereby estopped, when sued, from showing misconduct or other adequate cause, existing and known to him at the time of the discharge. Strauss v. Meertief, 64 Ala. 299.

2. Bates on Partnership 431; Kirk v. Hodgson, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 400.

3. Holloway v. Turner, 61 Md. 217; Bests v. His Creditors, 15 La. An. 55.

4. Newman v. Reagan, 63 Ga. 755; Du Quoin Star Coal M. Co. v. Thorwell, 3 Ill. App. 394; Foster v. Watson, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 377; Kessee v. Mayfield, 14 La. An. 90; Lawrence v. Gullifer, 38 Me. 532; Jones v. Jones, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 605; Massey v. Taylor, 5 Swan. (Tenn.) 447. See ante, IX, 19, a, QUANTUM MERUIT.

In such case suit must be brought by the servant on the contract for the wages provided for therein, or for damages for its breach. The dismissal does not operate as a rescission of the contract so as to justify suit upon a quantum meruit. Woods' Master and Servant, § 128.

See generally Beach v. Mullen, 34 N. J. L. 343; Britton v. Turner, 6 N. H. 481; Elliott v. Heath, 14 N. H. 131;

Laton v. King, 19 N. H. 280; Davis v. Barrington, 30 N. H. 517; Pixler v. Nichols, 8 Iowa 106; Byerlee v. Mendel, 39 Iowa 382; Fenton v. Clarke, 11 Vt. 560; Gilman v. Hall, 11 Vt. 510; Blood v. Enos, 12 Vt. 625. Compare De Camp v. Hewitt, 43 Am. Dec. 207.

5. Gandell v. Pontigny, 4 Camp. 374, 376; 1 Starkie's Rep. 198, 199; Collins v. Price, 5 Bing. 132; Pagani v. Gandolphi, 2 Car. & P. 370; Smith v. Kingsford, 3 Scott 279; Fawcett v. Cash, 5 Barn. & Ad. 904; Williams v. Byrne, 7 Ad. & El. 177; Callo v. Brouncker, 4 Car. & P. 518; Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Esp. 235. And see 19 Cent. L. J. 342; Bennett v. St. Louis Car Roofing Co., 23 Mo. App. 587; James v. Allen Co., 44 Ohio St. 226; Hogan v. Titlow, 14 Cal. 255; Diefenback v. Stark, 56 Wis. 462; Hutchinson v. Wetmore, 2 Cal. 311; Olmstead v. Beale, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 528; Henson v. Hampton, 32 Mo. 408; Brown v. Fitch, 33 N. J. L. 418; Langtry v. Parks, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 63; Smith v. Brady, 17 N. Y. 173; Bragg v. Bradford, 33 Vt. 35; Patnole v. Sanders, 41 Vt. 60; Earp v. Tyler, 73 Mo. 617; Britton v. Turner, 6 N. H. 481; Hayward v. Leonard, 19 Am. Dec. 272, 275; Chamblee v. Baker, 95 N. Car. 98.

less the sum earned, or which might have been earned, in other employment during the time covered by the breach.¹

1. Shannon v. Comstock, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 457; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362; Colburn v. Woodworth, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 381; Decker v. Hassel, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 528; Bromley v. School Dist. 47 Vt. 381; Prentiss v. Ledyard, 28 Wis. 131; Barker v. Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co., 24 Wis. 630; Fowler v. Armour, 24 Ala. 194; Daniel v. Parks, 19 Ark. 671; Blun v. Holitzer, 53 Ga. 82; Utter v. Chapman, 38 Cal. 659; Ry. Co. v. Slack, 45 Md. 161; Alger v. Alger, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 235; Sprague v. Morgan, 7 Ala. 952; Koenig Kraemer v. Mo. Glass Co., 24 Mo. App. 124; Holloway v. Talbot, 70 Ala. 389; Heim v. Wolf, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 70; Miller v. Goddard, 34 Me. 102; McDaniel v. Parks, 19 Ark. 671; Jones v. Jones, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 605; Bradshaw v. Branan, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 465; Baron v. Placide, 7 La. An. 229; De Leon v. Echeverria, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 610; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362; Chamberlin v. Morgan, 68 Pa. St. 168; King v. Steirer, 44 Pa. St. 99; Fowler v. Armour, 24 Ala. 194; Booge v. Pacific R. Co., 33 Mo. 212; Steinberg v. Gebhart, 44 Mo. 520; Armfield v. Nash, 31 Miss. 361; Sutherland v. Dyer, 67 Me. 64; Benziger v. Miller, 50 Ala. 206; Williams v. Chicago Coal Co., 60 Ill. 149; Gazette Printing Co. v. Morse, 60 Ind. 153; Gillis v. Space, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; Pond v. Wyman, 15 Mo. 175; Hearns v. Herbert, 25 Mo. 352; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 371; Gillis v. Space, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; Hearne v. Garrett, 49 Tex. 619; Byrd v. Boyd, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 246; French v. Brooks, 6 Bing. 304; Ricks v. Yates, 5 Ind. 115; Webster v. Wade, 19 Cal. 291; Smith v. Thompson, 8 M. & S. 44; Decker v. Hassel, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 528; Miller v. Goddard, 34 Me. 102; Sherman v. Trans. Co., 31 Vt. 162; Meade v. Rutledge, 11 Tex. 44; Money v. Taylor, 5 Swan (Tenn.) 447; Costigan v. Mohawk etc. R. Co., 2 Den. (N. Y.) 609.

The measure of damages against a party who has employed another to do certain mechanical work at a price agreed upon, and who has countermanded his directions, and forbidden the further execution of the work, after it had been commenced, is not the whole amount agreed to be paid, but a just recompense for such injury as the party employed has sustained on account of the breach of the agreement. Clark v. Marsiglia, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 317.

Discharge Before End of Month Without Reason.—One hiring another to work one month for a stipulated sum, and discharging him before the end of the month without sufficient cause, is liable to pay him for the month. Dunn v. Hereford, 1 Wy. T. 206. See Liddell v. Chidester, 84 Ala. 508.

Servant to Have Been Furnished Board.—Where a master undertook to board a servant and wrongfully dismissed him, and it appeared in a suit by the servant that he was boarded by his new employers, it was held that as he was re-employed directly after his dismissal, he could not recover for board; there being no suggestion that the board furnished by his new employer was inferior to that furnished by defendant. Ansley v. Jordan, 61 Ga. 482.

Evidence as to Special Damage.—In an action by an employee against his employer for wrongful discharge, the declaration containing no allegation of malice or of special damage beyond the loss of position and wages, the admission of evidence of special damage by loss of character is reversible error. Lee v. Hill (Va.), 1888, 6 S. E. Rep. 473.

Check for Amount Less than Claimed.—Where a person hired for a year was discharged by letter before his time was up, the letter containing a check for a certain amount, and requesting the return of the check if the amount was not satisfactory, it was held, upon suit brought by the employee after the year was up for the balance, over and above the amount of the check that the action could not be maintained. Hutton v. Stoddart, 83 Ind. 539.

Cultivation of Land for Share of Crop.—A contract between one to furnish land, team and tools, to make a crop, and another to work the land and make the crop for a specified portion of it, fixes a rule whereby to compensate the laborer for his services, and if the former discharge the laborer without cause before the crop is made and gathered, the laborer may then sue and recover the value of his services to that time, or he may wait until after the time for gathering the crop, and

Where a person employed for a term of service seeks to recover on the contract without full performance, on the ground that his employer refused to allow him to serve out his time, he must aver and prove his ability, readiness, and an offer to perform on his part, as to the subsequent time, or he cannot recover beyond the service actually rendered.¹ But where the master agrees to pay the servant a certain salary whether he serves the whole time or not, in case of discharge, the measure of damage will be the full amount of the same.²

9. Obligation of Discharged Servant to Seek Employment.—As we have before seen, master may show in mitigation of damages what the servant did earn, or could have earned, between the time of his discharge and the commencement of suit.³ For upon dismissal a servant under the law must seek other employment.⁴

then sue and recover the value of his agreed portion of the crop, less what he had an opportunity to make by like service after his dismissal. Gardenhire v. Smith, 39 Ark. 280. See Christian v. Crocker, 25 Ark. 330; Bengie v. Davis, 34 Ark. 179; Sentell v. Moore, 34 Ark. 690.

1. Leopold v. Salkey, 89 Ill. 413; Bodgley v. Heald, 4 Gilm. (Ill.) 64; Swanzy v. Moore, 22 Ill. 63; Cunningham v. Morrell, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 203; Tompkins v. Elliott, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 406; Blan v. Atwater, 4 Conn. 3; McClure v. Rush, 9 Dana (Ky.) 64.

Servant Was Locked Out of the Premises.—A plaintiff, employed to work in defendant's glass factory from September to July, testified that he went to work in September and worked until December 22nd, and was then discharged, and ordered not to come around the factory; that the gates were all locked up the next day, and another man was put in his place, so that he could not get in. Held, that the evidence should have been submitted to the jury on the questions whether the plaintiff was discharged by competent authority, and whether he was willing to continue in defendant's employ, and that a nonsuit for want of evidence on this point was erroneous. Syncar v. Wharton, 48 N. J. L. 97.

2. Wachs v. Friedman, 11 Mo. App. 602; Goldman v. Wolff, 6 Mo. App. 490, 496; Clancy v. Robertson, 2 Mills' Const. Rep. (S. Car.) 404; Smith v. Thompson, 8 C. B. 44; Ex parte Clark, L. R., 7 Eq. 550; Yelland's Case, L. R., 4 Eq. 350.

3. 2 Greenleaf on Ev., § 261a. 2 Sutherland on Damages 475. Wilkinson v. Black, 80 Ala. 329.

4. Dillon v. Anderson, 43 N. Y. 231; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 370; Emmons v. Elderton, 4 H. L. 645; Beckman v. Drake, 2 H. L. 606; Chamberlain v. Morgan, 68 Pa. St. 168; King v. Steiren, 44 Pa. St. 99; 1 Sedgwick on Dam. 93-4.

It was laid down in an early case that "idleness" in a servant discharged is in itself a breach of moral obligation; and furthermore, that 'if he continues idle for the purpose of charging another, he superadds a fraud which the law had rather punish than countenance.'

Shannon v. Comstock, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 457. And see Miller v. Mariner's Church, 7 Greenleaf 55; Heckscher v. McCrea, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 304; Wilson v. Martin, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 605; Taylor v. Read, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 572; Costigan v. R. Co., 2 Den. (N. Y.) 616; Heim v. Wolf, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 70; Bradley v. Denton, 3 Wis. 557.

Minor Servant—Obligation of Father.—In actions by a father for wages on a contract for employment of his minor son for a certain term, the son having been prematurely dismissed, the father may recover for every instalment as it falls due, and he is not bound to accept employment for his son by others, unless in the same or a similar employment in the same place and by persons of unobjectionable capacity, reputation, habits, morals, and mode of conducting their business; and the burden of showing such an opportunity is on the defendant; but, if the latter shows that the offer was rejected by the father, simply on the ground that the acceptance might prejudice his right of recovery, then the burden is on the plaintiff to show that some just objection to the

But extraordinary diligence is not required of him in this regard.¹ He must simply use reasonable efforts.²

The servant is not bound to seek employment or perform service of a different kind from that which he was engaged to perform.³ That is, the service must be of equal grade, not of a more menial kind, even if the compensation is greater in the latter service.⁴ Neither is a servant bound to seek work in another neighborhood.⁵ But if he fails to obtain it, and does work of his own, its value cannot be deducted from the amount of his claim.⁶

There is this distinction, however, to be considered; when one is employed to do a single specific piece of work, and is wrongfully discharged, and prevented from carrying it out, the obtaining of other work by him will not affect his recovery in full the damages suffered by him.⁷

10. Offer of Continuance at Lower Rate.—Where an employee discharged before the expiration of his term of service, refuses continued employment except at reduced wages, his refusal neither prejudices his right of action under the contract, nor reduces the amount of his recovery.⁸

11. Servant Receiving Share of Profits.—Where a servant is to offer existed. Strauss v. Meertief, 64 Ala. 299.

1. Byrd v. Boyd, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 246; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362; Gillis v. Space, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; Polk v. Daly, 14 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 156; Moore v. Leverich, 14 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 146.

2. What is reasonable diligence depends upon all the circumstances of each particular case. Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362; Byrd v. Boyd, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 246; Meade v. Rutledge, 11 Tex. 44.

3. Wilkinson v. Black, 80 Ala. 329; Strauss v. Meertief, 64 Ala. 299; Fuschs v. Koerner, 107 N. Y. 529; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 370; Beckham v. Drake, 2 H. L. Cas. 606; Costigan v. R. Co., 2 Den. (N. Y.) 609; Walworth v. Pool, 9 Ark. 394; Perry v. Simpson Waterproof Co., 37 Conn. 540.

4. A superintendent of a railroad company need not accept the work of a conductor. Costigan v. R. Co., 2 Den. (N. Y.) 609.

Nor an overseer the work of a laborer. Walworth v. Pool, 9 Ark. 394.

Nor the foreman of a type foundry the work of a common hand. Gillis v. Space, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 177.

Nor an actor the labor of a clerk. Polk v. Daly, 14 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 156.

5. Gillis v. Space, 63 Barb. (N. Y.)

177; Costigan v. R. Co., 2 Den. (N. Y.) 609; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 371; Hamilton v. McPherson, 28 N. Y. 72; Walworth v. Pool, 9 Ark. 394.

6. Harrington v. Gies, 45 Mich. 374.

That an employee after his discharge has engaged in business for himself in competition with his late employer is no defence to the former's action for a breach of the contract of hiring. Stone v. Vimont, 7 Mo. App. 277.

7. Wolf v. Studebaker, 65 Pa. St. 459; Hoy v. Gronoble, 34 Pa. St. 1; 2 Greenleaf Ev., § 261.

8. People's Co-operative Assoc. v. Lloyd, 77 Ala. 387; Strauss v. Meertief, 64 Ala. 297; Holloway v. Talbot, 70 Ala. 389; Whitmarsh v. Littlefield, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 418.

Offer of Same Wage for Less than Time.

—But a master cannot, while repudiating the contract to serve for a definite period of time, reduce the servant's right of recovery to merely nominal damages, by showing that he offered the servant the same work at the same price for a less period than that for which he was hired. Thus where one is hired for a year and discharged, but the master offers the servant the same work at the same price, but by the week, the servant is not bound to accept it. Wachs v. Friedman, 11 Mo. App. 602.

receive a certain portion of the profits of a business and is discharged before the time for which he was hired has run, he may recover such share of the profits for the stipulated period less what he could or did earn during the time between the date of his discharge and the date of the expiration of the contract.¹

12. Recalling Discharged Servant.—A master having discharged a servant has no right to recall him on pain of forfeiting all claim for compensation, but if the servant is not otherwise employed he may recall him to do a part of the stipulated work without restoring him to his former position.²

13. Evidence—Burden of Proof.—All relevant facts transpiring between the wrongful discharge of a servant and the trial of his action therefor may be considered in estimating the damages.³ In such actions the burden of proof is on the master to show that the discharge was for good cause.⁴ And furthermore the rule is that where the defendant alleges the ability of the plaintiff to get employment, or the fact that he did get it, in mitigation of damages, the burden of proof is upon him to show it.⁵

14. New Contract After Breach.—Where a contract has been broken by one party and the parties make thereafter a new contract, it does not necessarily take away the action for damages for the breach.⁶

15. Remedies of Servant for Wrongful Discharge.—Where an employee for a fixed period, at a salary for the period, payable at intervals, is wrongfully discharged, he may pursue any one of four courses:

1. He may sue at once for a breach of contract, in which case he can only recover his damages up to the time of bringing suit.⁷

1. Goldman v. Wolff, 6 Mo. App. 490, 496; Fox v. Harding, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 516; Philadelphia R. Co. v. Howard, 13 How. (U. S.) 344; Lewis v. Ins. Co., 61 Mo. 535; Alfaro v. Davidson, 40 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 87; Burrell v. Saginaw etc. Co., 14 Mich. 35; Hoy v. Gronoble, 34 Pa. St. 1; Masterton v. Mayor, 17 Hill (N. Y.) 62; Cox v. McLaughlin, 54 Cal. 605; Blair v. Laffin, 127 Mass. 518.

2. Mitchell v. Toole, 25 S. Car. 238. See Saunders v. Anderson, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 486.

3. Roberts v. Crowley, 81 Ga. 429.

4. Koenigkraemer v. Mo. Glass Co., 24 Mo. App. 124; Green v. Washburn, 7 Allen (Mass.) 390.

5. Barker v. K. L. Ins. Co., 24 Wis. 630; Holloway v. Talbot, 70 Ala. 389; Costigan v. R. Co., 2 Den. (N. Y.) 609; Kirk v. Hartman, 63 Pa. St. 97; Cong v. Peeres, 2 Cald. 620; King v. Steiren, 44 Pa. St. 99; Walworth v. Poole, 9 Ark. 394; Saxonia M. & R.

Co. v. Cook, 7 Colo. 569. Compare Hunt v. Crane, 33 Miss. 669; Hearne v. Garrett, 49 Tex. 619.

See generally Underhill v. N. Am. etc. Co., 36 Barb. 354; Thompson v. Wood, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 93; Hoy v. Gronoble, 34 Pa. St. 9; Allen v. Thrall, 36 Vt. 711; Dibol v. Minott, 9 Iowa 403; Richmond v. Dubuque etc. R. Co., 26 Iowa 191; Western v. Sharp, 14 Mon. (Ky.) 177; Hosmer v. Wilson, 7 Mich. 294; Hunt v. Crane, 33 Miss. 669; Steinberger v. Gebhart, 41 Mo. 520; Nearns v. Harbert, 25 Mo. 352; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362; Hochster v. DeLaTour, 3 El. & B. 678; Clossman v. Lacoste, 28 Eng. L. & Eq. 130; Frost v. Knight, L. & R., 5 Exch. 322; L. R., 7 E. Ch. 111.

6. McKnight v. Dunlap, 5 N. Y. 537; 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 309; 1 Hill (N. Y.) 486; 5 Hill (N. Y.) 77; Wilmington v. Backhouse, 2 Barn. & Cres. 821.

7. Colburn v. Woodworth, 31 Barb.

2. He may wait until the end of the contract period, and then sue for the breach.¹

3. He may treat the contract as existing and sue at each period of payment for the salary then due.²

(N. Y.) 381; Booge v. R. Co., 33 Mo. 212.

Nations v. Cudd, 22 Tex. 550; Gordon v. Brewster, 7 Wis. 355; Lewis v. Atlas Mut. Life Ins. Co., 61 Mo. 534; Washburn v. Hubbard, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 11; Wright v. Falkner, 37 Ala. 274; Hartland v. Gen'l Ex. Bank, 14 L. T., N. S. 863; Alfaro v. Davidson, 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 87; Sutherland v. Wyer, 67 Me. 64; Fowler v. Armour, 24 Ala. 194; Gifford v. Waters, 67 N. Y. 80; Pritchard v. Martin, 27 Miss. 305; Howe Machine Co. v. Bryson, 44 Iowa 159; Squire v. Wright, 1 Mo. App. 172; Sprague v. Morgan, 7 Ala. 952; Martin v. Everett, 11 Ala. 375; Bromley v. School Dist., 47 Vt. 381; Hendrickson v. Anderson, 5 Jones L. (N. Car.) 246; Williams v. Anderson, 9 Minn. 50; Horn v. Wes. L. Assoc., 22 Minn. 233; Utter v. Chapman, 38 Cal. 659; Jeffray v. King, 34 Md. 217; Cumberland R. Co. v. Stack, 45 Md. 161; Congregation etc. v. Hassel, 24 How. P. (N. Y.) 528; Blun v. Holitzer, 53 Ga. 82; Fereira v. Sayres, 5 W. & S. 210; Baker v. Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co., 24 Wis. 630; Prentiss v. Ledyard, 28 Wis. 131; McDaniel v. Parks, 19 Ark. 671; Alger v. Alger, 10 S. & R. 235; Whitaker v. Landifer, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 261; Colburn v. Woodworth, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 381; Booge v. R. Co., 33 Mo. 212; Fish v. Folly, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 54; Bendernagle v. Cocks, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 207; Richardson v. Eagle Machine Works, 78 Ind. 422; 4 Am. Rep. 584; Crosby v. Jerolman, 37 Ind. 264; Camp v. Morgan, 21 Ill. 256; Lucas v. Le Compte, 42 Ill. 303; Casselberry v. Forquer, 27 Ill. 170; Secor v. Sturges, 16 N. Y. 548; Guernsey v. Carver, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 492; Bendernagle v. Cocks, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 207; Borgnesser v. Harrison, 12 Wis. 544; Admr. of Whitney v. Clarendon, 18 Vt. 253.

In Rosenmueller v. Lampe, 89 Ill. 212, the facts were: Church trustees employed plaintiff as a teacher and sexton for a year at a fixed compensation, and at request of the priest he performed similar services a second year on the promise of the same compensation. After all the services had been rendered he recovered judgment against the trustees for a balance due on the first year. Held, a bar to an action for the second year's services.

Two Suits Under Same Discharge.—A entered into a contract with B by which he agreed to serve B for the term of one year for a salary of $1,500. Before the expiration of the year B discharged him without cause. After the expiration of a couple of months, A being unable to secure employment elsewhere, brought an action for the wages accrued after the discharge. Judgment was rendered in his favor. He afterwards brought another suit for similar wages alleged to have accrued after the commencement of the first suit. The judgment in the first action was pleaded in bar of a recovery in the second. It was held that the second action could not be maintained, plaintiff having exhausted his remedy in the first. Kahn v. Kahn, 24 Neb. 709. See James v. Allen Co., 44 Ohio St. 228.

1. Holloway v. Talbot, 70 Ala. 389; Thompson v. Wood, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 93; Taylor v. Read, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 572; Costigan v. R. Co., 2 Den. (N. Y.) 616; Gordon v. Brewster, 7 Wis. 355; Fowler v. Prout, 24 Ala. 194; Strauss v. Meertief, 64 Ala. 299; Rogers v. Parham, 8 Ga. 190; Colburn v. Woodworth, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 381; Heim v. Wolf, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 70; Weed v. Burt, 78 N. Y. 191; DeCamp v. Hewitt, 43 Am. Dec. 205.

Where One Partner Buys Out Another.—Where a travelling salesman contracted with a partnership at so much a year, and notified one of them that he would not engage for less than a year, which partner subsequently bought out his associate, it was held that such salesman, upon being discharged shortly after having begun on his second year, could maintain an action for his entire salary for the second year. Alba v. Moriarty, 36 La. An. 680.

2. Wilkinson v. Black, 80 Ala. 329; Cutter v. Powell, 2 Sm. L. Cas. 39 and note. Huntington v. Ogdensburgh etc. R. Co. (N. Y. Supr. Ct. 1868), 7 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 148; Cook v. Wharwood, 2 Saund. 337; Badger v. Titcomb, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 409; Thompson v. Wood, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 93; Colburn v. Woodworth, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 381; Secor v.

4. He may treat the contract as rescinded and sue immediately on a quantum meruit for the services performed. But in this case he can recover only for the time he actually served.¹

16. Death of Employer—Refusal of Administrator to Carry Out the Contract of Service.—Death of an employer excuses further performance of the contract, and no recovery can be had by the servant against the administrator for refusing to carry out the same.²

17. Arising of Unexpected Conditions.—Where the failure to perform a contract is in respect to matters which would render the performance of the residue a thing different in substance from what was contracted for the party not in default may abandon the contract.³

18. Labor During Unseasonable Hours.—A servant is not required to work during unseasonable hours unless the contract or the nature of the employment makes it reasonable that he should do so. But if he voluntarily does so, it is no ground for claiming that there is a breach of the contract by the employer.⁴

19. Discharge of Domestic Servants Without Notice.—In England, a domestic servant who is turned away without notice, and without fault, is entitled to one month's wages, although there is no agreement to that effect.⁵

20. Giving Character to Servant—(a) Obligation to Give Character.—It is not legally compulsory on a master or mistress to give a discharged servant any character, it matters not how much the servant is entitled to a character in fairness or how cruel the refusal may be.⁶

(b) Privileged Communications—Libel.—But where such char-

Sturges, 16 N. Y. 548; Perkins v. Hart, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 251.

1. Huntington v. Ogdensburg etc. R. Co. (N. Y. Supr. Ct. 1868), 7 Am. L. Reg., U. S. 148; Ryan v. Dayton, 25 Conn. 188; Rogers v. Parham, 8 Ga. 190; Britt v. Hayes, 21 Ga. 157; Clark v. Manchester, 51 N. H. 564; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362; Hearne v. Garrett, 49 Tex. 619.

A contract of service at a fixed rate for a certain time, providing that, in case of breach or nonfulfilment, the balance due "shall be payable at the end of the contract period," applies only to a breach by the employee; hence, if he is properly discharged before the end of the time, he cannot sue for the amount due till the end of the time; but if he is improperly discharged he can sue at once. Knutson v. Knapp, 35 Wis. 86.

2. Herrington v. Greene, 7 R. I. 589.

3. Leopold v. Salkey, 89 Ill. 413.

4. Koplitz v. Powell, 56 Wis. 671.

5. Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Esp. 235.

And this is on the ground that a general hiring, that is, a hiring without any engagement as to the duration of the service, is presumed to be a hiring for a year, and it will be construed in a court of law to be a hiring on the terms that either party might determine the engagement upon giving a month's notice, and the law implies a promise by the master to pay a month's wages if he dismiss his servant without cause without giving such notice. Parsons on Contracts 35; citing Fawcett v. Cash, 5 B. & Ad. 904; Lilly v. Elwin, 11 Q. B. 754; Nowlan v. Ablett, 2 C. M. & R. 54; Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 309, 2 C. & P. 607; Spain v. Arnott, 2 Stark. 257; Huttman v. Boulnois, 2 C. & P. 511; Halcraft v. Barber, 1 Car. & K. 4; Baxter v. Nurse, 1 Car. & K. 10.

But this presumption of a yearly hiring may be rebutted by evidence showing that such was not the intention of the parties. Bayley v. Rimmell, 1 M. & W. 506; Baxter v. Nurse, 6 Man. & J. 935; Rex v. Christ's Parish, 3 B. & C. 459.

6. Carrol v. Bird, 3 Esp. 201; Handley v. Moffatt, Ir. R. C. L. 104.

acter is given it is looked upon as a privileged communication and no action whatever can be maintained by the servant against him on account of it.¹

(c) Knowingly Giving False Character.—If a master knowingly give a false character of a servant to a person about to hire him, and the servant afterwards rob or injure his new master, he may, in an action for the deceit, recover from the former master the damages he has sustained in consequence of such false character having been given.²

(d) Forged Testimonial.—And furthermore, knowingly uttering a forged testimonial to character with intent to deceive, and thereby obtain a situation of emolument, is a forgery at common law.³

21. Malicious Procurement of Discharge.—An employee can maintain an action against one who maliciously procures his discharge, provided he can prove damages resulting from such discharge.⁴

Damages—Proposed Partnership.—Where the defendant knew or believed, or had reason to believe, that the employer had promised or did actually intend to admit the plaintiff into partnership with him, the fact of such knowledge or belief, or reason to believe such promise or intention, may be considered by the jury in passing upon the motive of the defendant and in fixing exemplary damages. But speculative profits of a proposed business cannot be the basis of the assessment of actual damages.⁵

XV. ENTICING SERVANT AWAY—1. General Rule.—An action at law will lie in behalf of an employer against anyone who knowingly entices away his servant, or wrongfully prevents him from performing his duty during the existence of the relation.⁶ A

1. Cooke v. Wildes, 5 E. & B. 335; Gardner v. Slade, 13 Q. B. 801; Weatherstone v. Hawkins, 1 T. R. 110.

For a complete discussion of the subject of privileged communications between master and servant and third persons, in their relation to the law of libel and slander, see LIBEL AND SLANDER, vol. 13.

2. Foster v. Charles, 6 Bing. 396; Wilkin v. Read, 15 C. B. 192; Pasley v. Freeman, 3 T. R. 51; 2 Smith L. C. 71.

3. Rex v. Sharman, 23 L. J., M. C. 51; Rex v. Moah, 27 L. J., M. C. 205; 1 Dears. & Bell C. C. 550; 4 Jur. N. S. 464.

4. Chipley v. Atkinson, 23 Fla. 206.

Discharge Is Essential to Recovery.—But a discharge by the employer is essential to recovery. If the employee was not discharged, but voluntarily left the employment on account of the conduct of the party charged with having procured his discharge, the action cannot be maintained. Chipley v. Atkinson, 23 Fla. 206.

5. Chipley v. Atkinson, 23 Fla. 206.

6. Hudson v. State, 46 Ga. 624; Lee v. West, 47 Ga. 311; Jeter v. Blocker, 43 Ga. 331; Butterfield v. Ashley, 60 Mass. 249; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555; Ames v. Union R. Co., 117 Mass. 541; Stowe v. Heywood, 7 Allen (Mass.) 118; Boston Glass Co. v. Binney, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 425; Bixby v. Dunlap, 56 N. H. 456; Noice v. Brown, 39 N. J. L. 569; Hoskins v. Royster, 70 N. Car. 601; Woodward v. Washburn, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 369; Daniel v. Swearingen, 6 S. Car. 297; Hoff v. Watkins, 15 S. Car. 82; Sherwood v. Hall, 3 Sumn. (U. S. C. C.) 127; Plummer v. Webb, 4 Mason (U. S. C. C.) 380; Lumley v. Gye, 2 El. & Bl. 216; Jones v. Blocker, 43 Ga. 331; Salter v. Howard, 43 Ga. 601; Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 1; Melburne v. Byrne, 1 Cranch C. C. 239; Haight v. Badgeley, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 499. Compare Burgess v. Carpenter, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 7.

master may maintain an action even if the service is only one at will, if subsisting when interrupted.¹

So an action lies for procuring the breach of a subsisting contract, even though the relation of master and servant has not been entered into under it,² and it has been so held that the action would lie where a person employed on piece work quits his employment and hires out to another, leaving a portion of his work unfinished.³ So also, where one who employs the servant of another without notice of his contract, continues to employ him after notice has been given.⁴

2. Harboring Servant.—A person is also liable in damages to an employer, if he permits such employer's servant to stay with him, intending to deprive the master of his services, even though he derives no benefit therefrom;⁵ and under a count for harboring or

1. Schouler on Domestic Relations, § 487. Lykes v. Dixon, 9 Ad. & E. 693; Salter v. Howard, 43 Ga. 601.

2. Lumley v. Gye, 2 El. & Bl. 216. The former rule was to the contrary. Butterfield v. Ashley, 2 Gray (Mass.) 254; Coughey v. Smith, 47 N. Y. 244.

3. Blake v. Lanyon, 6 T. R. 221; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555; Gunter v. Astor, 4 Moore 12.

Where Laborers Leave Through Threats.—An action likewise lies against a person who, to force another to give up a lease, persuades and threatens his laborers so that they leave him. Dickson v. Dickson, 33 La. An. 1261.

Engineer Maliciously Arrested.—And on behalf of a railway company, where a person maliciously causes the arrest of an engineer running one of its trains. St. Johnsbury etc. R. Co. v. Hunt, 55 Vt. 570; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 113.

Person Enticed to Share in Crop.—And where the person enticed away was to receive from his employer a share in certain crops for his services. Haskins v. Royster, 70 N. Car. 601.

Trespass Quare Clausum Against Person Entering Upon Premises.—And it has been laid down in New York that trespass quare clausum will lie where a person wrongfully enters upon the plaintiff's premises for the purpose of enticing his servant away. Haight v. Badgeley, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 499.

4. Butterfield v. Ashley (6 Cush.), 60 Mass. 249.

But, of course, no action lies where a third person merely induces a servant to leave his employer at the end of the contract term, even though such employer might desire to re-employ him. Nichols v. Martin, 2 Esp. 732;

Boston Glass Co. v. Binney, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 425.

Or where such person employed him after leaving an employment under a voidable contract. Sykes v. Dixon, 9 Ad. & El. 693.

Or where the employment was entered into after the servant had paid a penalty provided for in the contract broken by him. Bird v. Randall, 3 Burr. 1345.

Nor where after an infant has disaffirmed his voidable contract for personal services and leaves his employer he is hired by another. Langham v. State, 55 Ala. 114.

But to the contrary where he is persuaded to so disaffirm. Keane v. Boycott, 2 H. Bl. 511.

Nor (in Alabama) against a father who having hired his minor son to another person for a specified time, induces him to leave the service before the expiration of the term. Driscoll v. State, 77 Ala. 84.

Nor where the contract of service was made in a foreign country. Parsons v. Trask, 7 Gray (Mass.) 473.

Nor where, although a third person attempts to entice a servant to leave, he does not succeed. Bird v. Randall, 3 Burr. 1352.

Unless damage results from such endeavor. Carew v. Rutherford, 126 Mass. 1.

Nor where servant had previously broken his contract with or without cause. Morris v. Neville, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 271.

5. Woods v. Master and Servant, § 240; Dubois v. Allen, Anth. (N. Y.) 94; Sargeant v. Matthewson, 38 N. H. 54; Campbell v. Cooper, 34 N. H. 49.

entertaining a servant, evidence of enticement is not necessary.¹

3. Notice to Defendant.—Before an action is brought for enticing away, or retaining or employing a servant, it is advisable to give notice to the intended defendant that the party is servant to the plaintiff, and to demand him; and proving such notice and a subsequent employment during the time for which the plaintiff hired, retained, took and engaged the servant, will entitle the plaintiff to a verdict. To this proof must be added proof of the contract between the plaintiff and the servant, and that the time was not expired. In order to prevail it must be shown that the servant was retained after the new employer was informed of the existence of a previous contract of service;² for this action cannot be maintained unless the defendant knew that the servant was bound under contract to serve the plaintiff.³

4. Sufficiency of Contract.—There is no rule requiring a written contract between master and servant in order to sustain such action;⁴ nor that it be made in presence of witnesses.⁵

5. Malice.—It must also be shown that the defendant acted maliciously, not in the sense of actual ill will to the plaintiff, but in the sense of an act done to the apparent damage of another without legal excuse.⁶

6. Evidence of Enticement.—The employment of one's servant by another is prima facie evidence of enticement.⁷

7. Measure of Damages.—The measure of damages for enticing away the servant of another is the direct loss suffered, and the average net profits that were made by men of fair business ca-

But of course not where he does not know that such servant has absconded. Gale v. Parrott, 1 N. H. 33; Huntoon v. Hazleton, 20 N. H. 388; Coughey v. Smith, 46 N. Y. 244.

1. Dubois v. Allen, Anth. (N. Y.) 128.

2. New Nat. Brev. 374, 375; 6 Term Rep. K. B. 221; 1 Comm. 429.

3. Fores v. Wilson, Peake 55; Butterfield v. Ashley, 2 Gray (Mass.) 254.

4. Salter v. Howard, 43 Ga. 601. Compare Hightower v. State, 72 Ga. 482.

5. Huff v. Watkins, 18 S. Car. 510. Compare Hightower v. State, 72 Ga. 482; Sargent v. Matthewson, 38 N. H. 54; Caughey v. Smith, 47 N. Y. 250; Everett v. Sherpey, 1 Iowa 356.

6. Morgan v. Smith, 77 N. Car. 37.

But it was laid down in the above case that proof of defendant's lending servants a wagon with which to remove from plaintiff's premises, or employing them after they left, is not enough, standing alone, to warrant a verdict for damages.

7. Wilburn v. Byrne, 1 Cr. C. C. (U. S.) 239.

Under the Alabama Code.—Code Ala., §§ 3757, 3758, provide that where a laborer has entered into a written contract of service for a period not exceeding a year, it shall be a criminal offence to knowingly induce such laborer to leave his employer before the expiration of his time of service without the consent of his employer; and that the fact that such laborer having so contracted is afterwards found in the service of another before the termination of the contract, shall be prima facie evidence of such offence. Held, that it was a defence to a prosecution under such statute that the defendant had, prior to the written contract entered into between the prosecuting witness and the laborer, verbally employed the latter for a period which had not expired, although the contract with the defendant was voidable under the statute of frauds the parties to it electing to treat it as valid. Tartt v. State, 86 Ala. 26.

capacity, out of the labor of such a servant during the year for which the enticed servant was hired.¹

A master may recover damages of anyone who, after demand made, detains a servant.²

8. Injunction.—Where, in cases of this sort, there is no adequate remedy at law, relief may be had in equity by injunction.³

XVI. COMBINATIONS AND COERCION OF SERVANTS.—Every man has a right to work for whom he pleases, and on what terms he pleases. He may refuse to deal with a particular man or class of men. It is perfectly legal for any number of persons, without an unlawful object in view, to agree that they will not work for or deal with certain persons, or under a fixed price, or without certain conditions.⁴ The test is the legality of the intent.⁵

On the other hand, a conspiracy to obtain a sum of money from an employer by inducing his workmen to leave him, and deterring others from engaging with him, is illegal. Any association designed to coerce workmen to become members, or to dictate terms to employers on which their business shall be conducted, by means of threats of loss, interference with their traffic, or lawful employment of other persons, is pro tanto an illegal combination, and any doings in furtherance of such design accompanied by damage are actionable.⁶

1. Lee v. West, 47 Ga. 311. Compare Hudson v. State, 46 Ga. 624.

Share of Crop.—Upon a suit for decoying away hands under an agreement to give a part of the crop in consideration of the labor of tillage, will be competent to look to everything resulting from the loss of labor, such as the reasonable cost of procuring other labor, the damage to crops from delay in planting or failure to work them, and such kindred damages as plaintiff by reasonable diligence could not have prevented. McCutchin v. Taylor, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 259.

Cases of an Aggravated Character.—Where, in such a case, aggravating circumstances in both the act and intention exist, the jury will not be confined to actual damages, but may give an additional sum to deter the wrong doer from repeating the trespass, or as compensation for the wounded feelings of the plaintiff. Smith v. Goodman & Co., 75 Ga. 198.

2. Ferrell v. Boykin, Phill. (N. Car.) 9.

3. The leading case taking this view shows the following facts: One Johanna Wagner, an opera singer, engaged to sing at the theatre of one Lumley for three months and not at any other during that time, subsequently contracting to do so; a bill was filed against her and her new employer asking for an injunction against her singing at his theatre, which was granted, and sustained upon appeal. Lumley v. Wagner, 5 De G. & Sm. 485; 1 De G. M. & G. 604; 13 Eng. Law & Eq. R. 252, and see Webster v. Dillon, 3 Jur., N. S. 432; Cook v. Taunton Cooper Mfg. Co., 24 Boston L. Rep. 547; Daly v. Smith, 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 150; Hayes v. Willio, 11 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 157. Compare Kimble v. Kean, 6 Sim. 333; Kimberley v. Jennings, 6 Sim. 340; Sanguirico v. Benedetti, Barb. (N. Y.) 315; Haight v. Badgeley, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 409; Fredricks v. Mayer, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 566; Butler v. Jalletti, 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 465; Burton v. Marshall, 4 Gill (Md.) 487.

4. Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 1; Boston Glass Co. v. Binney, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 425; Bowen v. Matthewson 14 Allen (Mass.) 499; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555.

5. Brown v. Matthewson, 14 Allen (Mass.) 503; Snow v. Wheeler, 113 Mass. 185.

6. Old Dominion Steamship Co. v. McKenna, 30 Fed. Rep. (N. Y.) 48; Com. v. Curren, 3 Pitts. (Pa.) 143; Com. v. Hunt, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 111; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555; Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 1; State

Where the employer is a railroad company in the hands of a receiver, interfering with the running of the same is contempt of court, and persons guilty of interference may be punished therefor.¹

Damages suffered may of course be recovered by the person whose business has been thus affected.²

XVII. SEDUCTION OF SERVANT.—See SEDUCTION.

XVIII. LIABILITY OF MASTER ON SERVANT'S CONTRACTS.—The relation of master and servant per se invests the latter with no authority to bind the former, but the servant may readily have, from the particular duties assigned to him, the right to bind his master in regard to contracts. The question is properly one of agency and will be found treated under that title.³

XIX. LIABILITY OF THE MASTER FOR THE NEGLIGENCE OR UNSKILFULNESS OF SERVANT—1. General Rule.—A master is ordinarily liable to a third person injured through the negligence of his servant while acting within the scope of his employment. This is so because every master is bound to employ servants that are both skilful and careful, and is answerable to third persons for loss or injury sustained by them through his failure to do so.⁴

Whether an act constituting negligence was such on common law principles or is made such by statute, the doctrine of the master's liability applies to cases of injury to third persons through his servant's negligent acts.⁵

2. Existence of Relation.—The right of selection is the basis of the responsibility of a master for the acts of his servant. No one can be held responsible as master who has not the right to choose the servant from whose act the injury flows.⁶ And in order to establish the liability of an employer for an injury caused by the carelessness or negligence of a servant, it is not enough to

v. Stewart, 59 Vt. 273; BOYCOTT, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 512; CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 582.

1. United States v. Kane, 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. (Colo.) 608, and note.

2. Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 1.

3. See AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331.

4. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Galins, 36 Kan. 749; McIntire R. Co. v. Bolton, 43 Ohio St. 224; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 501; Conlon v. Eastern R. Co., 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 99; 135 Mass. 195; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 407; Reeve 517; 1 Salk. 441; 1 Black. Com. 431; Pothier on Obligations 453, 456; Story on Bailment 400, 406; Wanstall v. Pooley, 6 Cl. & F. 910; Anderson v. Brownell, 1 Shaw (S. Car.) 474; Sashern v. How, Cro. Jac. 471; Adams v. Cole, 1 Daly (N. Y. C. P.) 147.

Owner of Ship.—The owner of a vessel is responsible for damages resulting from the lack of proper skill and knowledge on the part of those in charge of her. St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557; Chamberlain v. Ward, 21 How. (U. S.) 548; Ward v. Chamberlain, 21 How. (U. S.) 572; Germania Ins. Co. v. The Lady Pike, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 1.

The commander of a ship is responsible for the acts of those under his command. The Eleanor, 2 Wheat. U. S. 345.

Mortgagees of a Railroad.—And the mortgagees of a railroad, who are in possession and who manage the road, are likewise liable for the negligence of their servants. Ballou v. Farnum, 9 Allen (Mass.) 47.

5. Osborne v. McMasters, 40 Minn. 103.

6. Boswell v. Laird, 8 Cal. 469; Du Pratt v. Lick, 38 Cal. 691; Kelley v. Mayor, 1 Kernan (N. Y.) 436; Blake show that the latter was at the time acting under an employment by the former; it must be shown in addition that the employment created the relation of master and servant.¹

Corporations are liable for the acts of their servants while engaged in the business of their employment to the same extent and in the same manner that individuals are liable under like circumstances.²

v. Ferris, 1 Selden (N. Y.) 48; Stevens v. Armstrong, 2 Selden R. 493; Sproul v. Hemmingway, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Story on Agency, § 453.

1. Hexamer v. Webb, 101 N. Y. 377; 54 Am. Rep. 703; King v. New York etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 181; 23 Am. Rep. 317; Pickens v. Diercker, 21 Ohio St. 212; Brown v. Purviance, 2 H. & G. (Md.) 316; Norton v. Wiswall, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 618; Laugher v. Painter, 5 B. & C. 547; Knight v. Fox, 5 Exch. 721; Stables v. Eley, 1 C. & P. 614; Kimball v. Cushman, 103 Mass. 194; Norris v. Koehler, 41 N. Y. 42; Wood v. Cobb, 13 Allen (Mass.) 58; Cincinnati v. Stone, 5 Ohio St. 38; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604; Wightman v. Washington, 1 Black 39; Moore v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Miss.), 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 401.

2. Ranger v. The Great Western Ry. Co., 5 H. L. Cas. 72; Thayer v. Boston, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 571; Frankfort Bank v. Johnson, 24 Me. 490; Muster v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 61 Wis. 325; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 113; Angell v. Ames on Corp., §§ 382, 388; Com. v. Brockton St. Ry. Co. (Mass.), 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 632.

Negligence of Third Persons—Legislative Act.—Under the provisions of Mass. Pub. St., ch. 112, § 212, that, certain cases of death occasioned by the negligence of a corporation, etc., the damages shall be "assessed with reference to the degree of culpability of the corporation, or of its agents or servants," the corporation is not rendered liable by showing that it had assumed a contractual or quasi contractual responsibility for third persons who were not its servants, but through whose negligence the injury happened. Littlejohn v. Fitchburg R. Co. (Mass.), 2 L. R. A. 502.

Acceptance of Services Without Previous Contract.—A contract or for a job, by accepting and paying for work done thereon by a mechanic without his prior order or authority, does not render himself liable for injuries caused to a third person by a negligent act committed by the mechanic while doing the work, not a part or result of the work itself, such as carelessly letting fall a brick. Coomes v. Houghton, 102 Mass. 211; Hilliard v. Richardson, 3 Gray (Mass.) 349; Linton v. Smith, 8 Gray (Mass.) 147; Forsyth v. Hooper, 11 Allen (Mass.) 419; Wood v. Cobb, 13 Allen (Mass.) 58.

Person in Temporary Charge of Team.

—Defendant was boarding with his father in law, who took charge also of his horses. Defendant's brother in law took more or less care of the same and drove them frequently, it not appearing that he was paid for so doing. One day while riding one of them violently on the highway he injured a third person, while on his way to purchase hay for said horses. Held, that he was to be considered sufficiently in the employ of the defendant to render him liable for the injury. Kimball v. Cushman, 103 Mass. 194; Norris v. Kohler, 41 N. Y. 42; Cincinnati v. Stone, 5 Ohio St. 38; Wood v. Cobb, 13 Allen (Mass.) 58; Brackett v. Lubke, 4 Allen (Mass.) 138; Forsyth v. Hooper, 11 Allen (Mass.) 419; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 20 Ill. 385; Schwartz v. Gilmore, 45 Ill. 455; McGuire v. Grant, 25 N. J. L. 356; Clark v. Vermont etc. R. Co., 28 Vt. 103; Pawlet v. R. & W. R. Co., 28 Vt. 298; Norton v. Wiswall, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 610; Gilbert v. Black, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 423; Boswell v. Laird, 8 Cal. 469.

Injury Arising from Disobedience.—

H sent his servant and team to deliver a load of paper to T, four miles distant, directing him to return thence by a particular route, getting a load of wood on the way. When he arrived T requested him to go on with the paper to a station four miles farther, and there get some freight, pay the freight bill, and bring the freight to him. The servant drove to the station, and while there left his horses unhitched, and they ran away and injured the property. It was held that the servant was not to be regarded as at the time in the employment of H, and that H was not liable. Stone v. Hills, 45 Conn. 44.

Negligence.—Instruction held erroneous as indicating that term "negligence"

But generally a lessor railway company is not liable to its servant for an injury caused by the negligence of the servants of the lessee railway company.¹

If a person who is bound to perform a duty leaves that duty to be performed by another, by himself neglecting to perform it, when its performance becomes a necessity, the person discharging the duty, although voluntarily and gratuitously, is in law regarded as the servant of him upon whom the duty is imposed, to the extent of charging him with liability for the improper execution of the work.²

is to be considered as synonymous with intention on servant's part to inflict injury. Hays v. Gainesville Street R. Co. (Tex.), 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 97.

Railroad in Hands of Contractors.—In a suit against a railway company for damages caused from personal injuries inflicted by the alleged negligence of the employees on a railway train, it was shown that both the train and the road belonged to the company, though the road had not been formally received from the contractors who constructed it. The engineer, conductor and employees were, when the accident occurred, employed and paid by the company, and could be discharged on complaint of the contractor. Held: (1) That these facts, unexplained, would make the company liable for the negligence of the engineer and its other employees on the train. (2) That if the train was run by the company with its own employees, for the purpose of transporting construction material for the contractors, the company would be responsible to anyone not an employee for injury received by the negligence of those operating the train, even though the contractors had the right to determine when, where and to what extent supplies should be transported, and to that extent had the control of the company's train and employees. (3) It would seem that, even if the employees operating the train, who were employed and could be discharged by the company alone, were yet operating the train in transporting supplies according to the directions, and subject to the will, of the contractors, they would still be the servants of the company, which would be responsible in damages for their negligence. Citing Quarman v. Burnett, 6 M. & W. 499; Michael v. Stanton, 3 Hun 462, and other cases cited in the opinion; Burton

v. G. H. & S. A. R. Co., 61 Tex. 526. This case distinguished from Cunningham v. Railroad Co., 51 Tex. 509.

1. Clark v. C. B. & Q. R. Co., 92 Ill. 43.

Servant of Lessor Railway Company.

—Where one railway company acquires the right to run its trains over a portion of the road of another company by a contract, in which it is agreed, its trains, while on such leased road, shall be under the control and direction of the yard master of the latter road, at such place and for the time being will be the servant of the lessee company, and it will become liable for an injury caused to another from the negligent acts of such yard master, the same as if he was its own employee on its own road. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Peyton, 106 Ill. 534; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1.

Sleeping Car Porters.—In cases involving the responsibility of railroad companies for injuries sustained by passengers, the porter and other employees of a sleeping car company, forming part of a railway company's train, will be considered as the servants and employees of the railway company, and such company will be liable for the negligence of such persons whereby a passenger is injured. Williams v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 40 La. An. 417; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 414; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Roy, 102 U. S. 451; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 225; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Walroth, 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 371; 38 Ohio St. 461. And see Nevin v. The Pullman Palace Car Co., 106 Ill. 222; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 93.

2. Wood's Master and Servant, § 305; Oil Creek etc. R. Co. v. Keighron, 74 Penn. St. 316; Quarman v. Burnett, 6 M. & W. 499, 509, 510; Randleson v. Murray, 8 Ad. & El. 109; Laugher v.

3. Scope of Employment.—In all cases, in order to recover, it must be shown that the act committed was within the scope of the servant's employment.¹ And a master cannot be relieved from respon-

Pointer, 5 B. & C. 547; Dalyell v. Tyrer, 1 E. B. & E. 899; Spoone v. Hemmingway, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Brady v. Giles, 1 M. & R. 494; Milligan v. Wedge, 4 P. & D. 714; 1 Q. B. 714; Murphy v. Caralli, 10 Jur., N. S. 1207; 13 W. R. 165.

1. In illustration of this principle see the following cases, in which the master was held liable:

Servant of railroad company arresting robber of company. Allen v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 6 Q. B. 65; Paulton v. G. W. R. Co., L. R., 2 Q. B. 534; Goff v. Great Northern R. Co., 3 E. & E. 672; Edwards v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 445; Porter v. C. R. I. & P. R. Co., 41 Iowa 358; Mali v. Lord, 39 N. Y. 381.

Servant of lumber yard piling wood in highway. Harlow v. Humiston, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 189.

Farm servant burning house while cleaning chimney. McKenzie v. McLeod, 10 Bing. 385; Keith v. Kier, 19 C. (Sc.) 679; Simons v. Monier, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 419; Serandat v. Saisse, L. R., 1 C. P. 152; Woodman v. Joiner, 10 Jur., N. S. 852; Williams v. Jones, 3 H. & C. 256.

Inn keeper's servant neglecting to fully harness horse. Hall v. Warner, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 198.

Servant of ferry company towing burning barge. Aycrigg v. Erie R. Co., 30 N. J. L. 460.

Servant of railroad company leaving fence bars down. Chapman v. New York etc. R. Co., 33 N. Y. 369.

Servant of railroad company cutting loose burning boat. Thames Steamboat Co. v. R. Co., 24 Conn. 40.

Farm servant violently riding strayed horse. Dalrymple v. McGill, Hume (Sc.) 387; Goodman v. Kennell, 3 C. & P. 168; Weldon v. New York etc. Co., 5 Bos. (N. Y.) 596.

Servant of railroad company assaulting passenger. Walker v. The South Eastern R. Co., C. P., 23 L. T. R. 14.

Servant of railroad company maliciously frightening horse. Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Harmon, 47 Ill. 298.

Servant of municipality negligently removing flag staff. Gilmartin v. New York City, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 239.

Servant of railroad company removing trespasser. Ramsden v. Bost. etc. R. Co., 104 Mass. 117; Bayley v. The Manchester etc. R. Co., L. R., 7 C. P. 415; Goff v. The Great Northern R. Co., 3 El. & El. 672; Jeffersonville R. Co. v. Rogers, 38 Ind. 116; Holmes v. Wakefield, 12 Allen (Mass.) 580; Lovett v. Salem etc. R. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.) 557; Kline v. C. P. R. Co., 37 Cal. 400; Sanford v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 343.

Farm servant stabling horse afflicted with glanders on the premises of another. Baird v. Graham, 1 Stuart (Sc.) 578.

Farm servant setting dog on cattle. Steele v. Smith, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 321.

Toll keeper; injury by dog of. Baker v. Kinsey, 38 Cal. 631.

Servant Removing Debris.—A master is liable for injuries that may be done neighboring property while workmen hired by him are engaged in removing debris from a building damaged by fire belonging to him. Dillon v. Hunt, 82 Mo. 150.

Stretching of Telephone Wire.—Telephone company held liable in damages for the death of a person driving along a highway caused by a wire left stretched across the same by one of its servants. Pennsylvania Tel. Co. v. Varnau (Pa.), 1888, 5 Atl. Rep. 624.

Servant of Gas Company.—Appellant, the Louisville Gas Company, sent its agent with directions to turn off the gas from appellee's premises. By means of a key he proceeded to do so, but in such manner as that when appellee's wife went into the cellar of the building with a lighted candle, an explosion occurred which burned her so badly as to endanger her life. Held, that the negligent act of the company's agent was the proximate and necessary cause of the injury, and the company was properly held bound for his negligence. Louisville Gas Co. v. Gutenkuntz, 82 Ky. 433.

Guard Dangerous Spot.—Likewise where a master directed his servant to receive bags of shavings thrown from an upper floor, and the servant undertook to guard the place, but did it so inefficiently that plaintiff, who was passing by, was struck by a bag thrown down.

sibility by ordering a servant to be cautious while performing an act within the scope of his employment;¹ nor where the servant is guilty of an abuse of authority.²

Where a servant is engaged in accomplishing an end which is within the scope of his employment, and while so engaged adopts means reasonably intended and directed to the end, which result in injury to another, the master is answerable for the consequences, regardless of the motives which induced the adoption of the means; and this, too, even though the means employed are outside of his authority.³

4. Improper Execution of Lawful Act.—Where an injury occurs to a third person through the improper execution by a servant of a lawful act, the master alone is liable therefor.⁴

Post v. Stockwell, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 28.

Servant of Upper Tenant Allowing Water to Overflow.—The occupant of an upper tenement is liable for damage done to the lower one by an overflow of water, caused by the negligence of his servant in leaving a faucet open. Simonton v. Loring, 68 Me. 164.

See in this connection Fletcher v. Rylands, L. R., 3 H. L. 340; Ross v. Fedden, L. R., 7 Q. B. 661; Eakin v. Brown, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 42; Losee v. Buchanan, 51 N. Y. 476; 1 Thompson on Neg. 105.

Scope of Employment—Instructions.—Instructions that if employees permitted engine to be moved without consent of engineer, whether within scope of their employment or not, company would be liable, held not a ground for reversal. Lakin v. Oregon Pac. R. Co., 15 Oreg. 220; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500.

1. Tuberville v. Stamp, 1 Salk. 13; Baird v. Hamilton, 4 Shaw (S. Car.) 790.

2. Higgins v. Watervliet Turnpike Co., 46 N. Y. 23; Shea v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 62 N. Y. 180; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Philadelphia etc. Tow Boat Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 209; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Capps (Tex.), 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 118; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Conklin, 32 Kan. 55; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 116; Isaacson v. New York etc. R. Co., 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 188; 94 N. Y. 278.

3. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Hanning, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 649; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Kirk, 102 Ind. 399. In the latter case, where a section foreman, returning with his crew and hand car from work, encountered obstructions on the line of his employer's road, and thereupon directed the car to be transferred to the track of a parallel line operated by another company, as occasionally had been done before, but without the knowledge or consent of either company, and while proceeding on such track his car was negligently propelled against the car containing the section men of such road, whereby one of its employees was injured.

4. Denny v. Manhattan Co., 5 Den. (N. Y.) 639; Colvin v. Holbrook, 2 N. Y. 126; Blockstock v. R. R. Co., 20 N. Y. 48; Wanstall v. Pooley, 6 Cl. & F. 910; Anderson v. Brownell, 1 Shaw (S. Car.) 474; Isaacson v. New York etc. R. Co., 94 N. Y. 278; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 278; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Marshall, 78 Mo. 610; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248; Harriman v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 45 Ohio St. 11; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 37; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Thul, 32 Kan. 255.

Defendant was the owner of a ferry boat running across the Hudson River between H and A. When the boat was making its regular trip across from A to H, the pilot in charge took on at A a boatman, agreeing without compensation to put him on board his boat, which was part of a tow passing up the river. Similar acts had occasionally been done before, but without the knowledge or consent of the defendant. The ferry boat diverged from its course to reach the tow, and, through the negligence of those in charge, collided with a canal boat attached thereto, upon which was plaintiff's intestate, who was thrown by the collision into the river and drowned. In an action to recover damages for the death, held that those in charge of the ferry boat were,

5. Acts Beyond Scope of Employment.—(See post, 11, DRIVING ON HIGHWAY).—Beyond the scope of his employment the servant is as much a stranger to his master as any third person, and the act of the servant not done in the execution of the service for which he was engaged cannot be regarded as the act of the master.¹

And if the servant step aside from his master's business, for however short a time, to do an act not connected with such business, the relation of master and servant is for the time suspended, and an act of the servant during such interval is his own.²

Thus it has been held that where proper care has been observed in selecting honest and faithful officers, a bank is not responsible for a loss resulting from carelessness not in the course of the officer's business.³

Whether a servant was acting in the course of his employment when he committed a negligent or tortious act is a question of fact for the jury.⁴

6. Servant Employed by Compulsion.—But where a person, or corporation, is compelled by law to employ an individual in a given at the time of the accident, engaged in the defendant's business, and he was responsible for their negligent acts; and that, therefore, a direction of a verdict for him was error. Quinn v. Power, 87 N. Y. 535; 41 Am. Rep. 392, overruling 17 Hun (N. Y.) 102.

1. Little Miami etc. R. Co. v. Wetmore, 19 Ohio St. 110.

A corporation owning a parlor car in use on a railroad, under an agreement between it and the railroad corporation, is not liable for an injury caused to a person not a passenger by the porter of the car, who was in its employ, throwing from the car a bundle, containing his soiled clothing and other personal property, solely for his own convenience. Walton v. New York Central Sleeping Car Co., 139 Mass. 556.

The defendant was a corporation owning and maintaining a toll bridge. The bridge extended across the river, and a toll house was near one end of it. The toll keeper lived there, and one day some of his furniture was removed to the yard in front of his house. The day was windy; the horse of the plaintiff while passing the house took fright at a portion of the drapery of a lounge fluttering in the wind. He was thrown out and injured, and brought suit against the bridge company to recover damages. Held, that the company was not liable, the premises being leased to the toll keeper, and beyond their control. Wiltse v. State Bridge Co., 63 Mich. 639; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 118.

2. 2 Thompson on Neg. 885, 886; Shearm. & R. Neg., §§ 62, 63; Cooley on Torts 533; Little Miami R. Co. v. Wetmore, 19 Ohio St. 110; Storey v. Ashton, L. R., 4 Q. B. 476; Mitchell v. Cresswell, 13 C. B. 237; McClenaghan v. Brock, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 17; Sheridan v. Charlick, 4 Daly (N. Y.) 338; Courtney v. Baker, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 249.

Servant Acting in His Own Affairs.—Owners of a foundry, who give the ashes to their engineer in consideration of his taking them from the furnace after working hours, are not liable for damage to a child who falls into them and is burned, although the engineer, for years before the accident, deposits them without guards in a town on an open lot, which he obtains for the purpose, opposite the foundry. Burke v. Shaw, 59 Miss. 445; 42 Am. Rep. 390.

Permission of Conductor to Ride in Baggage Car.—A conductor cannot authorize a passenger to ride in a baggage car contrary to rules. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Langdon, 92 Pa. St. 21; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 87.

3. White v. Bank, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 234. In this case it was also held that a bank is responsible for securities delivered to a wrong person by a default, mistake, carelessness or misconduct of any officer of such bank.

4. Redding v. South Carolina R. Co., 3 S. Car. 1.

matter, no liability attaches for his tortious or negligent acts.⁻¹

7. Protection of Master's Interests.—It is also well settled that a master is ordinarily liable for injuries caused by his servant in preventing damage or loss to property of the master.²

8. Employment of Assistant by Servant.—And where a servant employs a third person to perform an act within the servant's employment, and injury results to another, the master is liable the same as though his servant employed no agent.³

9. Servant Deviating from Instructions.—The master is also liable where the employee or servant, while engaged in the prosecution of the master's business, deviates from his instructions as to the manner of doing it.⁴

10. Carriers of Passengers—(See vol. 2, p. 738).⁵

11. Driving Upon Highway—Injury to Horses.—Where a servant drives his master's horse so negligently as to injure the person or property of another, the master is liable for the damage.⁶ No lia-

1. James v. San Francisco, 6 Cal. 530; De Forrest v. Wright, 2 Mich. 368; Milligen v. Wedge, 12 Ad. & El. 237. As where, as in above case, a municipal corporation is obliged to let a contract to the lowest bidder. Boswell v. Laird, 8 Cal. 492.

2. Estes v. Southwick, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 385; Wolf v. Mersereau, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 473; Johnson v. Barber, 5 Gilm. (Ill.) 425; Limpus v. Omnibus Co., 1 H. & C. (Exch.) 528; Croft v. Allison, 4 B. & Ald. 590.

3. Althorff v. Wolfe, 22 N. Y. 355; Mayor v. Bailey, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 433; Suydam v. Moore, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 358; Simons v. Monier, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 419; Wichtrecht v. Fasnacht, 17 La. An. 166; Booth v. Mister, 7 C. & P. 66; Quarman v. Burnett, 6 M. & W. 499; Rapson v. Cubitt, 9 M. & W. 710; Huzzey v. Field, 2 C. M. & R. 432; Chandler v. Broughton, 1 C. & M. 29; Randleson v. Murray, 8 Ad. & El. 109; Wheatley v. Patrick, 2 M & W. 650; Bush v. Steinman, 1 B. & P. 404.

4. Atchinson etc. R. Co. v. Randall, 40 Kan. 421; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Newman v. Jones, 20 Ir. L. T. 303; Ochenbein v. Shapley, 85 N. Y. 214.

So held where a car company let a pistol, which he was carrying for a passenger, fall, although he was expressly forbidden to carry any baggage for passengers. Heenrich v. Pullman etc. Co. (Oreg.), 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 379; 20 Fed. 100. And see Ramsden v. Bost. etc. R. Co., 104 Mass. 117; Fuller v. Voght, 13 Ill. 285; Oxford v. Peters, 28 Ill. 435; Foster v.

Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 508; Mate v. Lord, 39 N. Y. 381; Wharton on Neg., § 157; Cooley on Torts, § 539; McClenaghan v. Brock, 5 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 17; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468.

Where a salesman in a gun and ammunition store was requested by a customer to load a gun that he might see its working, and refused to purchase unless he did load it, whereupon the salesman loaded the gun, which was accidentally discharged, wounding the plaintiff, it was held that the employer was liable for the injury, and that the fact that the salesman disobeyed the instructions of his employer in loading the gun made no difference. Garretzen v. Duenckel, 50 Mo. 104.

Where a passenger is injured in a collision, it is no defence on the part of the railroad company that the engineer in charge of the train disobeyed orders in using the track where the accident occurred. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 469.

5. Smith v. Consumers' Ice Co., 52 N. Y. Superior Ct. 430; Schaefer v. Osterbrink, 67 Wis. 495; 58 Am. Rep. 875; Molbus v. Herrmann, 108 N. Y. 349; Bartons Hill Coal Co. v. Reid, 3 McQueen (S. Car.) 283; Russell v. Gray, 13 Ala. 131; Paulton v. Great Western R. Co., L. R., 2 Q. B. 534.

Where a cab owner furnishes team to drivers for a certain sum per day, the relation of master and servant exists between them as to third persons. Powles v. Hider, 6 E. & B. 207; Fowler v. Locke, L. R., 7 C. P. 272.

Parent and Child.—The relation of bility attaches, however, where the servant was blameless, as where a horse becomes frightened and does an injury while being driven.¹

If one agrees to furnish another with a team and suitable driver, he is guilty of negligence if he does not furnish such a driver, and he must bear all loss or damage occasioned to the team in consequence of the incapacity and negligence of the driver.² And it is immaterial that the person hiring expressly asked for the services of the particular driver.³

the defendants was that of father and son. The son was twenty-eight years old, and, while living with his father as a hired man on his farm, took his father's horse and drove three miles to the railroad depot to get one of his own friends. The father did not know that the son took the horse until after he was gone; but expected and was willing that he should do so. The son had driven the team before without permission. The horse, tied to a post in the rear of the depot, where the defendants were accustomed to hitch, broke away, ran into the plaintiff's team and injured him. The referee found that the son in tying the horse "did not exercise the prudence of an average prudent man." Held, that the father was not liable, but that the son was; that licence to use the horse could not be inferred from the fact of former use without leave. Way v. Powers, 57 Vt. 135.

Evidence showing, among other things, that a minor son was in the habit of driving his father's team to convey members of the family to and from church, in accordance with the custom of the family, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the father and afterwards of an older daughter, who, in the father's absence, was left in general charge of his family, business, and property, is held sufficient to charge the father with liability for the negligence or wilful misconduct of the son in the management of the team while so driving it. Schaefer v. Osterbrink, 67 Wis. 495; 58 Am. Rep. 875.

The liability of the servant under a statute relating to the law of the road is no bar to an action against the master at common law to recover for his servant's negligence. Reynolds v. Hanrahan, 100 Mass. 313.

1. Holmes v. Mather, L. R., 10 Exch. 261; Weldon v. Harlem etc. R. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 576.

2. Ames v. Jordan, 71 Me. 540; 36 Am. Rep. 352.

3. Joslin v. Grand Rapids Ice Co., 50 Mich. 516; 45 Am. Rep. 54.

G and S occasionally exchanged labor with their teams. On one occasion G sent a driver with a team to draw some material for S. It was held that while so employed the driver was the servant of G, and S was not liable for the negligence of such driver. Michael v. Stanton, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 462; Huff v. Ford, 126 Mass. 24.

Team and Driver Let to City.—The defendant's horse kicked a loose shoe through the plaintiff's window glass. The horse was being driven by a person paid by the defendant, and by the latter let with a wagon by the day to a city in the work of paving streets. It was under the sole management of that person whose duty it was to keep it properly shod. Held, that the defendant was liable for the injury. Huff v. Ford, 126 Mass. 24; 30 Am. Rep. 645. And see Crockett v. Calvert, 8 Ind. 127.

Hirer Agreeing to Furnish Driver.—But where the owner of a team, after hiring it out and binding himself to furnish a driver, makes a temporary arrangement with the other party whereby the latter takes the team into his own charge and promises to furnish a driver himself if he has occasion to use it, the transaction being for the benefit of both, amounts to a bailment for hire, and the party in possession of the team is bound to take such ordinary care of it as a prudent owner would take. And the driver whom he furnishes is his servant and not that of the owner of the team. Hofer v. Hodge, 52 Mich. 372; 50 Am. Rep. 256.

Negligence of Servant of Inn Keeper.—As where the hirer of a horse and buggy entrusted the horse to the servant of an inn keeper to be fed, by whose negligence the bit was not replaced, and the horse, becoming unmanageable, damaged himself and the buggy, in this case it was held that the hirer was liable to the owner for the damage, and as between them the servant of the inn keeper must be regarded as the servant of the hirer. Hall v. Warner, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 198.

It may be laid down as a general rule that while the hirer of a team with driver is liable for the acts of the driver done in pursuance of his orders, the owner of the team is liable for the results of his incompetency.¹

A hirer of a horse is liable where an injury occurs to a third person while being driven by a friend of the hirer.²

And it has been held in England that a passenger by one line of public conveyances injured by collision with the vehicle of another and opposition line, the drivers of both carriages, being negligent, can proceed against either line, or both of them.³

When a servant in driving his master's team, not in the master's business, but for private purposes of his own, carelessly does an injury, the master is not liable.⁴ But the contrary is the rule where the same is entrusted to the servant generally to be used at his discretion, he doing such business as he can in the employment of the same.⁵ As to law of the road, and liability of master where servant violates rules, see LAW OF THE ROAD.

Where a person placed his mare at livery, and instructed a servant of the proprietors of the stable to take her out for exercise, such, however, being no part of the contract of livery, and while the servant had her out for such purpose she died, the proprietors of the stable cannot be held liable to the owner, though the mare was injured by, and died in consequence of, the immoderate riding, and carelessness of their servant. Adams v. Cost, 62 Md. 264; 50 Am. Rep. 264.

Unskilful Driver—Instructions.—Instructions as to failure of defendant to employ prudent street car drivers, held argumentative and improper. Hays v. Gainesville etc. R. Co. (Tex.), 70 Tex. 602; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 97.

Team Let to Travelling Salesman.—Where a traveling agent of a firm, to solicit goods, paid by salary, though not under particular instructions as to route, without disclosing his employers, hired, at a livery stable, a team and buggy to go to a neighboring town in the prosecution of his business, and the team and buggy were injured through his negligence, it was held that he was the servant or agent of the defendants in the hiring and use of the team, and for the damages resulting from his negligence they were responsible. Pickens v. Diecker, 21 Ohio St. 212.

1. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Norwood, 62 Miss. 565; Ames v. Jordan, 71 Me. 540; Crockett v. Colvert, 8 Ind. 127; De Voin v. Michigan Lumber Co., 64 Wis. 616; 54 Am. Rep. 649;

Quarman v. Burnett, 6 M. & W. 499; Laugher v. Pointer, 5 B. & C. 572; Fenton v. Packet Co., 8 Ad. & El. 835; Dalyell v. Tyrer, El. Bl. & El. 899; Kimball v. Cushman, 103 Mass. 194; Hall v. Pickard, 3 Camp. 187; Croft v. Allison, 4 B. & Ald. 590; McLaughlin v. Pryor, 4 Sc. (N. R.) 665.

2. Wheatley v. Patrick, 2 M. & W. 650.

3. Rigby v. Hewitt, 5 Exch. 240; Greenland v. Chaplin, 5 Exch. 244.

Driver of Hack in Exclusive Control.—But a person who hires a public hack and gives the driver directions as to the place to which he wishes to be conveyed, but exercises no other control over the conduct of the driver, is not responsible for his acts or negligence. Little v. Hackett, 116 U. S. 366.

4. Kuhn v. Singer Mfg. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 912; Cavanagh v. Dinsmore, 19 N. Y. 465; Sheridan v. Charlick, 4 Daly (N. Y.) 338.

But if the servant, when doing the wrong, was employed in the service of the master, it is no defence for the master that he was also, and in some degree, acting in his own business. Patton v. Rea, 2 C. & B. 605. And see in this connection Mitchell v. Crassweller, 13 C. B. 237; Morier v. St. Paul M. & M. R. Co., 31 Minn. 364; Sleath v. Wilson, 9 C. & P. 607; Whatman v. Pearson, L. R., 2 C. P. 422; Storey v. Ashton, L. R., 4 Q. B. 476.

5. Mulvehill v. Bates, 31 Minn. 364; 47 Am. Rep. 796; Venables v. Smith, L. R., 2 Q. B. Div. 279.

12. Servants of Charitable Institutions.—A charitable corporation, having no funds which have not been contributed for the purposes of charity cannot be rendered liable for injuries occasioned by the negligence of its servants or agents.¹

13. Servants of Municipality.—When a municipal corporation elects or appoints an officer, in obedience to or by authority of an act of legislature, to perform a public service in which such corporation has no particular interest, and from which it derives no special benefit or advantage in its corporate capacity, but which it is bound to see performed for the general welfare of the inhabitants, or of the community, such officer cannot be regarded as a servant or agent for whose negligence or want of skill in the performance of his duties the city will be liable.²

14. Servants of School Districts.—Upon the ground that a school district is a public charity, such institutions cannot ordinarily be held for the negligence of their employees.³

15. Servant of Unsound Mind.—While as a rule any mental disease or infirmity which will excuse the servant from criminal responsibility, will also excuse the master from civil responsibility, this

1. Fire Ins. Patrol v. Boyd (Pa.), 112 Pa. St. 269; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 466.

Hospital.—Corporation, established for the maintenance of a public charitable hospital, which has exercised due care in the selection of its agents, is not liable for injury to a patient caused by their negligence. McDonald v. Massachusetts General Hospital, 120 Mass. 432; 21 Am. Rep. 529.

2. Dillon's Mun. Corp., §§ 39, 754, 758, 760, 773, 776; Hafford v. New Bedford, 16 Gray (Mass.) 297; Fisher v. Boston, 104 Mass. 187; Buttrick v. Lowell, 1 Allen (Mass.) 172; Jewett v. New Haven, 38 Conn. 368; Torbush v. Norwich, 38 Conn. 225; Small v. Danville, 51 Me. 359; Mitchell v. Rockland, 52 Me. 118; Underhill v. Manchester, 45 N. H. 214; Painter v. Pittsburgh, 46 Pa. St. 213; Elliott v. Philadelphia, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 128; Wheeler v. Cincinnati, 19 Ohio St. 19; Western College v. Cleveland, 12 Ohio St. 375; Detroit v. Corey, 9 Mich. 165, 184; Brinkmeyer v. Evansville, 29 Ind. 187; Harrison v. Baltimore, 1 Gill (Md.) 264; Baltimore v. Poultney, 25 Md. 107; Richmond v. Long, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 375; White v. Charleston, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 571; Dargan v. Mobile, 31 Ala. 469; Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 La. An. 330; Stewart v. New Orleans, 9 La. An. 461; Lewis v. New Orleans, 12 La. An. 190; Wilde v. New Orleans, 24 La. An. 15; Fauvia v. New Orleans, 20 La. An. 410; Prather v. Lexington, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 559; Ward v. Louisville, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 184; Patch v. Covington, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 722; Murtaugh v. St. Louis, 44 Mo. 479; McDonald v. Redwing, 13 Minn. 38; Sherbourne v. Yuba Co., 21 Cal. 113; Weber v. San Francisco, 1 Cal. 455. See PUBLIC OFFICERS AND AGENTS.

Thus a city is not liable for an injury sustained by reason of the negligence of a laborer employed by its highway surveyor to aid him in performing the duties of his office. Walcott v. Swampscott, 1 Allen (Mass.) 101.

Nor for an injury caused by the negligence of a teamster employed in transporting stone to repair a highway by the superintendent of streets, who is charged with the duty of keeping the streets in repair. Barney v. Lowell, 98 Mass. 570.

Nor for the negligence of an employee of the commissioners of public charities in driving an ambulance wagon belonging to the city. Maxmillian v. Mayor of New York, 62 N. Y. 160. And see Condict v. Jersey City, 46 N. J. L. 157; 4 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 645; article MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, this work.

3. School District v. Fuess, 98 Pa. St. 600; Ford v. School Dist. of Kendall Borough, 121 Pa. St. 543. And see Elliott v. City, 75 Pa. St. 347; Boyd v. Insurance Patrol, 112 Pa. St. 269; 16 will not be the case if the master employed the servant and assigned him to duty, with knowledge of his insane condition or of his being subject to sudden fits of insanity.¹

16. Evidence—Reputation of Servant.—General reputation of a servant for carelessness is inadmissible where it is sought to charge his master;² the issue in such cases being confined to the question of negligence at the time of the occurrence in question.³ And furthermore the mere fact that an accident occurred, though evidence of negligence in that particular is not, by itself, sufficient evidence to authorize a jury to find that the party so negligent is not a careful and competent man for the service in which he was engaged.⁴

17. Liability of Servants Personally.—A servant is to be deemed the agent of his employer in all matters within the scope of his employment, and so long as no unlawful act is done by him, the authority of the master is a complete defence to an action against him therefor; but if he commits a trespass, or converts the goods of another, or commits any unlawful act, whether within the scope of his employment or by the express command of his master even, he is liable personally therefor.⁵

18. Joint Liability of Master and Servant.—For an injury resulting to a third person from the carelessness or negligence of a servant, while in the performance of his master's business, both the master and the servant may be joined as defendants in an action to recover damages for the injury.⁶ But a servant cannot be joined with his master in an action to recover for the owner's negligence.⁷

19. Criminal Liability of Master.—Where a master, owing a duty to the public, entrusts its performance to a servant, he is responsible criminally for the failure of his servant to discharge that duty, if its nonperformance is a crime.⁸

Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 466. Compare School Dist. v. Fuess, 98 Pa. St. 600.

1. Christian v. Columbus etc. R. Co., 79 Ga. 460.

2. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. v. Colvin (Pa.), 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 160; 118 Pa. St. 230. In this case it was sought to introduce evidence of the general reputation of a flagman at a crossing for carelessness in an action against a railroad company, where it was alleged that the accident was caused by carelessness on his part.

Evidence of a servant's long continued and notorious habit of leaving his horse unhitched in the street is inadmissible in an action against the master as tending to show that it was done with the master's knowledge and permission. Schulte v. Holiday, 54 Mich. 73.

3. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. v. Colvin, 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 163; 118 Pa. St. 230.

4. Buckley v. Gould & Curry etc. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 833.

5. Wood's Master and Servant, § 324; McClanathan v. Oswego etc. R. Co., 1 T. & C. (N. Y.) 501; Harriman v. Stowe, 57 Mo. 93; Johnson v. Barber, 5 Gilm. (Ill.) 425; Hawksworth v. Thompson, 98 Mass. 77; Bennett v. Joes, 30 Conn. 329; Mitchell v. Harmony, 13 How. (U. S.) 115; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Latham, 63 Me. 177.

6. Wright v. Compton, 53 Ind. 337; Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Baum, 26 Ind. 70. Compare Bailey v. Bussing, 37 Conn. 351.

7. Mulchey v. Methodist Religious Society, 125 Mass. 487.

8. United States v. Buchanan (N. Car.), 9 Fed. Rep. 689.

20. Master's Remedy Against Servant.—While a master is liable to third persons for injuries arising through his servant's negligence within the scope of his employment, if the master is free from fault as to the negligence in question, he may have his remedy against the servant for the damages to which he is thereby subjected.¹ And the measure of damages in such cases is the amount of the recovery against the master.²

XX. LIABILITY FOR WILFUL AND MALICIOUS ACTS OF SERVANT—

1. General Rule.—The responsibility of a master for the malicious and tortious acts of his servant, grows out of, is measured by, and begins and ends with, his control over them.³ And whether a municipal or private corporation, the lessee of a corporation, or a private individual, the master is liable to third persons, when the same are committed in the course and within the scope of the employment;⁴ although such employer did not directly author-

1. Arnott v. Pittstown etc. Coal Co., 5 T. & C. (N. Y.) 143.

2. Green v. New River Co., 4 T. R. 389; Pritchard v. Hitchcock, 6 M. & G. 165.

3. McGuire v. Grant, 25 N. J. L. 356; Robinson v. Webb, 11 Bush (Ky.) 464; Allegheny Valley R. Co. v. McLain, 91 Pa. St. 442; Sullivan v. Oregon River etc. Co., 12 Oreg. 392; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391.

Persons employed by and put upon pay roll of company and paid by it are its servants, and the latter is liable for their torts. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Reese (Miss.), 61 Miss. 581; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 110.

In order to fasten liability on a railroad company for the act of its conductor it must be shown that he was a servant of the road. The mere fact that he was paid by the defendant does not make him its servant if he ran the train of another company. Sullivan v. Oregon River etc. Co., 12 Oreg. 392; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391.

4. Cawthorn v. Deas, 2 Port. (Ala.) 276; Blackburn v. Baker, 1 Ala. 173; Lindsay v. Griffin, 22 Ala. 629; Smith v. Causey, 22 Ala. 568; Alabama etc. R. Co. v. Waller, 48 Ala. 459; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 59 Ala. 245; Tyson v. South etc. R. Co., 61 Ala. 554; Smoot v. Mobile etc. R. Co., 67 Ala. 13; Gilliam v. South etc. R. Co., 70 Ala. 268; Baker v. Kinsey, 38 Cal. 631; Denver etc. R. Co. v. Conway, 8 Colo. 1; Burton v. Philadelphia etc. R. Co., 4 Hafr. (Del.) 252; McDougal v. Bellamy, 18 Ga. 411; Kipp v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 149; Crawfordsville etc. R. Co. v. Wright, 5 Ind. 252; Evans- ville etc. R. Co. v. Baum, 26 Ind. 70; Bannister v. Pennsylvania Co., 98 Ind. 220; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Jackson, 81 Ind. 19; Donaldson v. Mississippi etc. R. Co., 18 Iowa 280; Hudson v. M. K. & T. R. Co., 16 Kan. 470; The Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. Forbes, 37 Kan. 445; Robinson v. Webb, 11 Bush (Ky.) 482; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Moore v. Fitchburg R. Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 65; Lowell v. Boston etc. R. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 24; Ramsden v. Boston etc. R. Co., 104 Mass. 117; Great Western etc. R. Co. v. Miller, 19 Mich. 305; Eckert v. St. Louis Transfer Co., 2 Mo. 36; McKeon v. Citizens R. Co., 42 Mo. 79; Reilly v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 94 Mo. 600; Brokaw v. New Jersey etc. R. Co., 32 N. J. L. 328; Isaacs v. Third Ave. R. Co., 47 N. Y. 122; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Mott v. Consumers' Ice Co., 73 N. Y. 543; P. W. & B. R. Co. v. Quigley, 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 202; Priest v. Hudson River R. Co., 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 456; Parker v. Erie etc. R. Co., 5 Hun (N. Y.) 57; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Keary, 3 Ohio St. 201; Little Miami etc. R. Co. v. Wetmore, 19 Ohio St. 110; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Vandever, 42 Pa. St. 365; Harrisburg v. Taylor, 87 Pa. St. 216; Mayor v. Brown, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 1; Milwaukee v. Davis, 6 Wis. 377; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Watts, 63 Tex. 549; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 278; Moore v. Richmond R. Co., 28 Va. 745; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 531; Baltimore R. v. McKenzie, 81 Va. 71; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 395; Weed v. Panama R.

ize the wrong action, or subsequently ratify it.¹ And furthermore the master is liable for such acts without regard to the character of the servant for care and skill.²

2. Disobedient and Unnecessary Acts.—Such, also, is the rule where the acts in question were in disobedience to the master's orders,³ for it is not sufficient for the master to give proper instructions to his servants to avoid liability, but he must also see that they are obeyed;⁴

Co., 17 N. Y. 362; Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Finney, 10 Wis. 388; Quigley v. Central Pac. R. Co., 11 Nev. 350; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Sherley v. Billings, 8 Bush (Ky.) 147; Isaacs v. Third Ave. R. Co., 47 N. Y. 122; Jackson v. Second Ave. R. Co., 47 N. Y. 274; De Camp v. Mississippi R. Co., 12 Ga. 348; Evansville R. Co. v. Baum, 26 Ind. 70; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Wilt, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 43; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Toomey, 37 Leg. Int. 105; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Harrison, 48 Miss. 112; Little Miami R. Co. v. Wetmore, 19 Ohio St. 110; Thames Steamboat Co. v. Housatonic R. Co., 24 Conn. 40; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bayfield, 37 Mich. 204, 205; Snyder v. Hannibal R. Co., 60 Mo. 413; Bayley v. Manchester etc. R. Co., L. R., 7 C. P. 415; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Poulton v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 2 Q. B. 534.

Sufficiency of Allegation as to Scope of Employment.—A declaration alleged that "the defendant's servant, B, who was at the time watching and guarding the defendant's lumber yard and had charge thereof, unlawfully, without cause and maliciously, made an assault upon" the plaintiff to an extent specified, "all of which the said defendant's servant did wrongfully and without cause, in an unjustifiable attack upon the plaintiff, under an assumption that the plaintiff was trespassing upon the defendant's land, and without notice to leave." Held, on demurrer, that the declaration did not sufficiently allege that the assault was committed by B while acting within the scope of his employment as the defendant's servant. McCann v. Tillinghast, 140 Mass. 327.

Assault by Stranger.—A person knocked off a platform and robbed by one not shown to be a servant of a railroad company, is not entitled to recover under a petition charging assault by employees. Sachrowitz v. Atchison etc. R. Co., 37 Kan. 212; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 382.

Assault by Conductor of Train.—Where the complaint averred that the plaintiff had been called from the car, beaten, bruised, and ejected by the conductor, it was held unnecessary also to aver that the conductor was acting in the line of his duty. People v. B. & A. R. Co., 60 Ga. 281.

Corporations Engaged in Ultra Vires Business.—Corporations likewise which engage in ultra vires business are likewise liable for torts of agents committed in the course of their employment in such business, but not where officers thereof engage therein unless the transaction was authorized or ratified. C. R. & B. Co. v. Smith, 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 25; 76 Ala. 572.

1. Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Boyce, 36 Kan. 350. And see Denver etc. R. Co. v. Harris, 122 U. S. 597; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 592; McGlothlin v. Madden, 16 Kan. 466; Robinson v. Webb, 11 Bush (Ky.) 464; Snyder v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 60 Mo. 413; Gilmartin v. New York, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 239.

2. Hays v. Miller, 77 Pa. St. 238.

3. Philadelphia R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Schmidt v. Adams, 18 Mo. App. 432. See also Savings Bank v. Ward, 10 Abb. (U. S.) 203; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Hanning, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 649; Cohen v. Dry Docks etc. R. Co., 69 N. Y. 170; Mott v. Consumers' Ice Co., 73 N. Y. 543, 547; Pendleton v. Kinsley, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 416; The R. F. Cahill, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 354; D. S. R. Co. v. Harris, 67 Ala. 9; Memphis etc. Packet Co. v. McCord, 83 Ind. 298; George v. Gobey, 128 Mass. 290; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Scurr, 59 Miss. 464; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Heenrich v. Pullman etc. P. Car Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 100; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 379.

4. Johnson v. Central Vermont R. Co., 56 Vt. 707; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 169.

or unnecessary to the prosecution of the master's business.¹

3. Servant Failing to Act Within Reasonable Bounds.—And this liability exists although the servant is reckless in the performance of his duty, or through lack of judgment or discretion, or from infirmity of temper, or under the influence of passion aroused by the circumstances, goes beyond the strict line of his duty and inflicts unnecessary and unjustifiable injury.²

4. Torts in Furtherance of Master's Business.—A master is also responsible for torts of his servant, done with a view to the furtherance of the master's business, whether the same be done negligently, wantonly, or even wilfully, but within the scope of his employment.³

So held where an engineer of a colliding engine had been forbidden to run on a certain track at the time, and has acted in disobedience of such orders. Philadelphia etc. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Quinn v. Power, 87 N. Y. 539; Siegrist v. Arnot, 10 Mo. App. 201; French v. Cresswell, 13 Oreg. 418; Pennsylvania etc. R. Co. v. Langdon, 92 Pa. St. 21, 32.

1. Minter v. Pacific R. Co., 41 Mo. 503; Craft v. Allison, 4 B. & Ald. 590; Baltimore R. Co. v. McKenzie, 81 Va. 71; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 395; Pierce v. O'Keefe, 11 Wis. 180.

2. Wade v. Thayer, 40 Cal. 578; Bank of California v. Western Union Tel. Co., 52 Cal. 282, 287; Rounds v. Del. etc. R. Co., 64 N. Y. 129; Cohen v. Dry Dock etc. R. Co., 69 N. Y. 170; Holmes v. Wakefield, 12 Allen (Mass.) 580; Lovett v. Salem etc. R. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.) 557; Kline v. Central Pacific R. Co., 37 Cal. 400; Sanford v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 343; Shea v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 62 N. Y. 180; Garretzen v. Duenckel, 50 Mo. 104; Heenrich v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 100.

3. Arasmith v. Temple, 11 Ill. App. 39; Buffalo Oil Co. v. Standard Oil Co., 3 N. Y. St. Rep. 571; Limpus v. General Omnibus Co., 1 H. & C. Exch. 528; Higgins v. Watervliet Turnpike Co., 46 N. Y. 23; Duggins v. Watson, 15 Ark. 118; Howe v. Newmarch, 12 Allen (Mass.) 49; Campbell v. City of Providence, 9 R. I. 262; Seymour v. Greenwood, 6 H. & N. Exch. 359; 7 H. & N. Exch. 356; Goff v. Great Northern R. Co., 30 L. J., Q. B. 148; Poulton v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 2 Q. B. 534; Murphy v. Central Park etc. R. Co., 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 96; Chapman v. New York etc. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 369; Pickens v. Diecker, 2 Ohio 212; Black- burn v. Baker, 1 Ala. 173; Lindsay v. Griffin, 22 Ala. 629; Puryear v. Thompson, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 397; Priester v. Angley, 5 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 44; Hewitt v. Swift, 3 Allen (Mass.) 423; Croft v. Allison, 4 B. & Ald. 590; Southwick v. Ellis, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 385; Andrus v. Howard, 36 Vt. 248; Crocker v. New London etc. R. Co., 24 Conn. 266; French v. Cresswell, 13 Oreg. 418; Wolfe v. Mersereau, 4 Duer (N. Y. Sup. Ct.) 473; Weed v. Panama R. Co., 17 N. Y. 362; Fuller v. Voight, 13 Ill. 277; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Flexman, 103 Ill. 546; Jackson v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 422; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 327; Coleyer v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 49 N. J. L. 59; Hewett v. Swift, 3 Allen (Mass.) 420; Howe v. Newmarch, 12 Allen (Mass.) 49; Moore v. Fitchburg R. Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 465; Sherley v. Billings, 8 Bush (Ky.) 147; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Pennsylvania Co. v. Toomey, 91 Pa. St. 256; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 461; Seymour v. Greenwood, 6 H. & N. 359.

Where the plaintiff was run over and hurt by a railroad train at a crossing, it was held, in an action against the company, that the mere fact that the engineer had been actuated by personal malice and revenge did not relieve the company from liability. Georgia R. Co. v. Newsome, 60 Ga. 492; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Graham, 46 Ind. 239; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. McClaren, 62 Ind. 566.

Racehorse Intentionally Fouled.—If a horse is intentionally fouled in a race, or purposely run against or interfered with by the rider of another horse, the employer of such rider is liable for the damages resulting. McKay v. Irvine, 11 Biss. C. Ct. (U. S.) 168.

Car Conductor.—It was so held in a

But where the employee is not acting in the course of his employment the mere purpose to serve his employer has no tendency to bring the act within its scope.¹

5. Acts Outside Scope of Employment.—On the other hand, a master is not liable for the wilful and malicious acts of his servant when they happen outside of the scope of his employment and are in no way connected with the execution of his master's business or orders.² As where a servant, in doing a particular act in a particular manner, departs from the appointed mode of performance to inflict a wanton injury.³

New York case, where a conductor of a horse car refused to stop his car fully, and threw a passenger on the ground with great violence, whereby she was seriously injured. Isaacs v. Third Ave. R. Co., 47 N. Y. 122.

Persuading Witnesses to Remain Away.—Where a clerk of a city railway company, who has assigned to him the general and special duty of looking for and arranging the evidence in cases where the company is sued by persons injured, wrongfully and without authority offers money to a witness to keep him from testifying against the company, or to influence his testimony, the company must be held responsible for his act. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. McMahon, 105 Ill. 485; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 68. Compare Green v. Town of Woodbury, 48 Vt. 5.

1. Morrison v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 59 Iowa 428; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 177.

Lawless Acts Adverse to Employer's Interests.—Lawless acts of employees, adverse to interests and contrary to orders of employer cannot be imputed to it as having been done by its agents and servants. Greisner v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 102 N. Y. 563; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 287; Marion v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 59 Iowa 428; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 177; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Kelley, 92 Ind. 371; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1.

2. Lyons v. Martin, 8 A. & E. 512; Coleman v. Riches, 16 C. B. 104; Frazer v. Freeman, 43 N. Y. 566; Greisner v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 102 N. Y. 563; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 287.

Unwarrantable Assault.—A railroad company is not liable for an unwarrantable assault by its servant upon a passenger. International etc. R. Co. v. Kentle (Tex. 1883), 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 337.

Conductor of Train Carrying Off Boy.—A railroad company is not liable for the act of a conductor in wrongfully chasing and seizing a boy and carrying him off on a railroad train. Gilliam v. South etc. R. Co., 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138; 70 Ala. 268.

Placing of Torpedoes on Track.—It was held in an Illinois case that when a locomotive fireman, from wantonness and a desire to help celebrate the fourth of July, placed torpedoes upon the track over which his train was to pass, whereby an injury occurred, that such act was an abandonment by him of the service of the company, and that the latter was not liable for the consequences of the act. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Epperson, 26 E. B. Smith (Ill. App.) 79.

3. The owner of a building instructed his servant to throw the snow from the roof into a vacant adjoining lot, where no one would be endangered. The servant disregarded the instruction and carelessly threw it into the street and injured a person. It was held that the master would be liable if the servant intentionally threw it on the passer; otherwise, not. Cosgrove v. Ogden, 49 N. Y. 255; King v. N. Y. Cent. etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 181; Althorf v. Wolfe, 22 N. Y. 355.

Wilful Driving Into Another.—In Wright v. Wilcox, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 343, the defendant's son driving a wagon wilfully and designedly drove over and injured the plaintiff's son, a minor. Held, that it was an independent tort and that the defendant was in nowise liable. See Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Baum, 26 Ind. 70; Croft v. Alison, 4 B. & Ald. 590.

Likewise where the driver of a street car ran into a vehicle with an oath, exclaiming that he could smash it anyhow. Wood v. Detroit City St. R. Co., 52 Mich. 402; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 129.

Porter of a Sleeping Car.—The obligation of a sleeping car company for injury to a stranger, who enters the car

6. Rule as to Passengers—(a) Generally.—This rule does not obtain, however, where there is a contract or obligation between the master and the injured party,¹ as between a common carrier of passengers and a passenger; for such a carrier undertakes to protect the passenger against any injury arising from the negligence or wilful misconduct of its servants while engaged in performing a duty which the carrier owes to the passenger.²

(b) Offensive Conduct Towards Passenger by Servant.—A passenger upon a railroad is entitled to recover damages from the company for insolent, abusive and offensive words spoken by its servants, under the purpose of asking the privilege of washing his hands, and is there wantonly and without provocation assaulted and beaten by the porter of the car, is not governed by the principles regulating the liability of common carriers, under the contract of carriage, for like assaults committed by servants on their passengers; being a menial servant, and having no police authority whatever, and no connection with the enforcement of the rules of the service. A servant of this sort has no authority to use violence toward any person whatever, such conduct being entirely foreign to the functions of his employment. The company employing him is not responsible. Williams v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 40 La. An. 87, 417; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 407.

Arrest by Clerk Upon Suspicion.—It was held in Allen v. London etc. R. Co., E. L. R., 6 Q. B. 65, where a clerk on suspicion had a person arrested for abstracting money from a till, that the defendant was not liable, as it was not at all within the business of the clerk to do the act.

Assault Upon Passenger by Employee Not in Charge of Car.—Likewise where a wilful and violent assault was made upon a passenger by a servant of the company not in charge of the car conveying such person, that no recovery could be had of the company. Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Baum, 26 Ind. 70; Pennsylvania Co. v. Toomey, 91 Pa. St. 256; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 461.

Shooting Trespasser.—Where an armed watchman fatally shot a trespasser, it was held that his employer was not responsible. Golden v. Newbrand, 52 Iowa 59.

Assault by Servant of Inn Keeper.—An inn keeper is not liable for an assault and battery committed on a guest by one of his servants, where the assault was not within the line of the servant's duty, and was not advised or countenanced by the master. Curtis v. Dinneen (Dak. 1886), 30 N. W. Rep. 148.

Fire negligently set by section men of railroad company in order to warm dinner; company held not responsible for damage done. Morier v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 31 Minn. 351; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 135; 47 Am. Rep. 793.

Distraining Nontrespassing Cattle.—In Lyons v. Martin, 8 Ad. & El. 512, a servant was authorized merely to distract cattle damage feasant, but he deliberately drove the cattle from the highway into his master's close, and there distrained them. Held, the master could not be liable, as the act was entirely unauthorized and unlawful and out of the course and scope of his employment. See Wood v. Detroit R. Co., 52 Mich. 402; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 129.

1. Weed v. Panama R. Co., 17 N. Y. 362; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Angell & Ames on Corp. 404. Howe v. Newmarch, 12 Allen (Mass.) 55; Moore v. Fitchburg R. Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 465; Seymour v. Greenwood, 7 Hurl. & Norm. 354.

2. Stewart v. Brooklyn etc. R. Co., 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 127; 90 N. Y. 588; 43 Am. Rep. 185; Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657.

International etc. R. Co. v. Kentle (Tex. 1883), 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 337. Goddard's Case, 57 Me. 202; Wab. R. Co. v. Savage, 110 Ind. 156; Williams v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 414; Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Baum, 26 Ind. 70; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Kelley, 92 Ind. 371; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1; Western etc. R. Co. v. Turner, 72 Ga. 292; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 455.

The liability of the carrier does not, however, depend entirely on its duty to its passengers. Johnson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 58 Iowa 348; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 206.

less the company can show justification or other defence.¹ For it is a well established principle of law that it is obligatory upon a carrier to treat its passengers respectfully, and that if he entrusts this duty to his servant the law holds him responsible.²

(c) Wanton Assault, Excuse for.—No degree of carelessness or negligence on the part of a passenger will excuse a wanton and malicious assault on him by the conductor or other servant of the transportation company.³

1. Bryan v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 464; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 339; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Kelley, 92 Ind. 371; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1.

Actionable Language.—If, in giving reasons why certain regulations were made, an agent of a railroad uses actionable language, he, and not the company, will be liable. Donovan v. T. & P. R. Co. (Tex.), 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 320. But see Bryan v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 464; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 335.

2. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Flexman, 103 Ill. 546; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 354.

3. Wat. etc. R. Co. v. Rector, 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 264; Shultz v. Third Ave. R. Co., 89 N. Y. 242; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Flexman, 103 Ill. 546; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 354; 42 Am. Rep. 33. And see Dillingham v. Anthony (Tex.), 1889, 11 S. W. Rep. 139; Central R. Co. v. Peacock, 69 Md. 257; Cain v. Minneapolis R. Co., 39 Minn. 297; Stewart v. Brooklyn etc. R. Co., 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 127; 90 N. Y. 588.

But where a person, after purchasing a ticket as a passenger, got into an altercation with an employee of the company, who assaulted him, it was held that no recovery could be had of the company. Little Miami R. Co. v. Wetmore, 19 Ohio St. 110.

Assault by Conductor Upon Demand of Ticket.—Where conductor assaulted passenger on demanding his ticket. Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Chamberlin v. Chandler, 3 Mas. (U. S.) 242; Jeffersonville R. Co. v. Rogers, 38 Ind. 116; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Vandiver, 42 Pa. St. 365; Moore v. Fitchburgh R. Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 465; Ramsden v. Boston etc. R. Co., 104 (Mass.) 117; Western etc. R. Co. v. Turner, 72 Ga. 292; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 455; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Sykes, 96 Ill. 162; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254; Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Rice, 38 Kan. 398; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 316.

Kissing Female Passenger.—Where

conductor kissed female passenger against her will. Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657.

Arrest of Passenger.—It is competent to prove that conductor is acting within scope of his authority in ordering passenger to be arrested. Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Donahoe, 56 Tex. 162; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 287. See Lynch v. Metropolitan etc. R. Co. (N. Y.), 90 N. Y. 77; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 119.

Person Asking Passage on Freight Train.—An assault by a conductor on a person asking for passage on a freight train, held to have been done within scope of his business and company held liable. Western etc. R. Co. v. Turner, 72 Ga. 292; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 455. See Shultz v. Third Ave. R. Co., 89 N. Y. 242; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412.

Ejection of Colored Person.—Redding v. South Carolina R. Co., 3 S. Car. 1. And see Shultz v. Third Ave. R. Co., 89 N. Y. 242; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412; Coger v. Northwestern etc. Co., 37 Iowa 145.

By Brakeman—Removal of Dog.—The company was likewise held liable where a brakeman assaulted a passenger who resented the removal of his dog from the car, the passenger having first laid hands on the brakeman. Hanson v. European etc. R. Co., 62 Me. 84.

In Carrying Out Supposed Order.—Likewise where a malicious and criminal assault was committed on a passenger while carrying out a supposed order. McKinley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 44 Iowa 314; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Flexman, 103 Ill. 546; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 354.

Pushing Passenger from Car.—Likewise where such employee wantonly pushes a passenger from a train. Wabash R. Co. v. Savage, 110 Ind. 156; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 288.

Dashing Water Upon Passenger.—Where a brakeman wilfully dashed a jet of water upon a passenger, who had refused to pay the brakeman for watering his hogs, it was held that the com-

(d) Passengers on Vessels.—The owners of vessels are likewise liable for the torts of the master, officers and crew when they involve a breach of the passenger contract, and are done while acting within the scope of the employment.¹

(e) Removal of Trespassers from Train.—The conductor of, or a brakeman upon, a railroad passenger train has authority to remove, in a lawful manner, trespasser upon the platform of a car, whether the authority is conferred by the rules of the company or not; it is implied and is incident to his position.²

pany was liable. Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Jackson, 81 Ind. 19; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 178. And see Hanson v. European etc. R. Co., 62 Me. 84; McKinley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 44 Iowa 314.

Engineer Sounding Whistle.—Likewise where an engineer maliciously sounds a whistle. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Dickson, 63 Ill. 151.

Baggage Master—Quarrel About Baggage.—Likewise where a baggage master struck a passenger with a hatchet in a quarrel about baggage. Little Miami R. Co. v. Wetmore, 17 Ohio St. 110.

Injury Through Fight in Car.—Likewise where a passenger was injured through fight in car. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Hinds, 53 Pa. St. 512. And see Flint v. Transportation Co., 34 Conn. 554; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Bryant v. Rich, 106 Mass. 180.

Assault Because of Expostulation as to Treatment of Another.—A common carrier of passengers is liable for a malicious assault by his servant on a passenger in his charge, the moving cause of the assault being the passenger's expostulation with the servant for an assault on a third person outside the vehicle. Stewart v. Brooklyn etc. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 588; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 127; 43 Am. Rep. 185.

Ticket Agent—Dispute About Change.—In an action against railroad company for an assault committed on plaintiff by one of its employees acting as ticket agent, it appearing that the regular ticket agent was absent at the time, having left another employee, who was employed in a different line of work, in charge of the office, who got into a dispute with plaintiff about making change upon the sale of a ticket, and in course thereof, struck the plaintiff; held, that the railroad company was liable. Fick v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 68 Wis. 469; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 378.

Malicious Treatment of Invalid.—

Where the conductor on a train pretended to help an invalid passenger to search for a ticket, but in reality made no search, being actuated by malicious motives, it was held that the company would be liable in exemplary damages. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Fleming, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 128; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 347.

Driver of Street Car.—A street car company is liable for an assault by its driver upon a passenger. Winnegar v. Central Passenger R. Co., 85 Ky. 547; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462.

False Arrest by Detective.—A false arrest by a detective employed to arrest and prosecute persons unlawfully obstructing track makes company liable. Evansville etc. R. Co. v. McKee, 99 Ind. 519; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 366.

1. Chitty on Carriers, § 335; McGuire & Place v. The Golden Gate, 1 McAll. (U. S.) 104; Gibbons v. Morse, 7 N. J. L. 253; Block v. Bannerman, 10 La. An. 1; Malpica v. McKown, 1 La. 92; Loy v. The Steamboat F. N. Aubury, 28 Ill. 412; Sunday v. Gordon, Blatchf. & H., Adm. 569; Abbott v. Bradstreet, 55 Me. 530.

It was held in a Massachusetts case that common carriers of passengers by water are liable for an assault and battery committed by their steward and table waiters on a passenger upon his interference, by a proper remark, with their rude treatment of his relative, a fellow passenger, with reference to a meal which he had taken on the boat. Bryant v. Rich, 106 Mass. 180. See Coger v. North Western etc. Co., 37 Iowa 146; Pendleton v. Kingsley, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 416.

An employer is likewise liable where his employee, the steward of a ship, insults a female passenger. Nieto v. Clark, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 145. And see Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Blocher, 27 Md. 277.

2. Hoffman v. New York etc. R. Co., 87 N. Y. 25; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas.

But where such servant, acting in the line of his duty, ejects a trespasser, the company is liable if he does it in a careless, negligent, reckless or malicious manner only.¹

537; 41 Am. Rep. 37; Kansas City etc. R. Co. v. Kelly, 36 Kan. 655; Marion v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 59 Iowa 428; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 177; Johnson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 58 Iowa 348; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 206; Allegheny V. R. Co. v. McLain, 91 Pa. St. 442.

So have servants of engine engaged in switching. Carter v. Letc. R. Co. (Ind.); 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 360.

Authority to Remove Trespasser—Evidence.—The testimony of one who had for fourteen years been in defendant's employ as fireman, engineer, brakeman and conductor, and who at the time of the injury complained of was a conductor on the branch of defendant's road where the injury occurred, to the effect that brakemen were subject to the orders of the conductors, and that the conductors' orders to their brakemen were to eject trespassers from trains, and that such were the orders of the conductor to the brakeman who did the wrong complained of, was held competent to show the authority of the brakeman to remove a trespasser from the train; and so was the testimony of other witnesses to the effect that they had many times seen brakemen eject trespassers from trains. Marion v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Iowa 569. And see St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Hendricks, 48 Ark. 177.

1. Pennsylvania Co. v. Toomey, 91 Pa. St. 442; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 461; Kentucky etc. R. Co. v. Gastineau, 83 Ky. 119; Rounds v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 4 Hun (N. Y.) 329; New York L. etc. R. Co. v. Haring, 47 N. J. L. 137; Carter v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 98 Ind. 552; 169 Am. Rep. 780; Perkins v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 55 Mo. 201; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 347; Cain v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 39 Minn. 297; Eastern etc. R. Co. v. Brown, 6 Exch. 327; Goff v. Great Northern R. Co., 3 E. & E. 672; Seymour v. Greenwood, 7 H. & N. 355; Bailey v. Manchester etc. R. Co., L. R., 7 C. P. 415; Moore v. Metropolitan R. Co., L. R., 8 Q. B. 36; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Blocher, 27 Md. 277; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Moore v. Fitchburg R. Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 465.

And see in this connection Ramsden

v. Boston etc. R. Co., 104 Mass. 117; Drew v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 26 N. Y. 49; Brand v. Iron etc. R. Co., 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 368; Passenger etc. R. Co. v. Young, 21 Ohio St. 518; Hanson v. European etc. R. Co., 62 Me. 84; Pennsylvania etc. R. Co. v. Vandiver, 42 Pa. St. 365; Bryant v. Rich, 106 Mass. 180; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Donahue, 70 Pa. St. 119; Ramsden v. Boston etc. R. Co., 104 Mass. 117; Healey v. City R. Co., 28 Ohio St. 23; Pendleton v. Kinsey, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 416; Springer Transportation Co. v. Smith, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 408; Rounds v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 64 N. Y. 129; Coggins v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 18 Ill. App. 620; Shea v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 62 N. Y. 180; Stewart v. Brooklyn etc. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 588; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Jackson (Ind.), 81 Ind. 19; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 178; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Savage, 110 Ind. 156; Johnson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 6; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Flexman, 103 Ill. 546; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Rector, 104 Ill. 296; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 264; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Jackson, 81 Ind. 19; Schultz v. Third Ave. R. Co. (N. Y.), 89 N. Y. 242; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412; McKinley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 44 Iowa 314; Townsend v. N. Y. Central etc. R. Co., 56 N. Y. 295; Hamilton v. Third Ave. R. Co., 53 N. Y. 25; Hays v. Houston etc. R. Co., 46 Tex. 272; Hogan v. Providence etc. R. Co., 3 R. I. 88.

Assault While Attempting to Seize Baggage.—And so where a conductor committed an assault and battery in attempting to seize the baggage of a passenger in order to enforce the payment of illegal fare. Ramsden v. Boston etc. R. Co., 104 Mass. 117.

Refusal of Passenger to Assume Certain Position.—So where a passenger was ejected for refusing to comply with the arbitrary direction of the conductor as to the position he should assume in a car. Passenger R. Co. v. Young, 21 Ohio St. 518.

False Accusation of Improper Conduct.—Where a conductor ejected a passenger for alleged improper behavior toward a woman in the car, when he had not been guilty of such behavior, the company was held liable. Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Anthony, 43 Ind. 183.

It may be stated as a general rule that if a person who is illegally attempting to board a train is assaulted by a servant duly authorized to remove trespassers, the company is liable, but if the person assaulted is not attempting to board the train, the corporation is not liable.¹

Of Being Drunk and Disorderly.—So where a conductor ejected a passenger on a false charge of being drunk and disorderly. Higgins v. Watervliet etc. R. Co., 46 N. Y. 23. See in this connection Passenger R. Co. v. Young, 21 Ohio St. 518; Cain v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 39 Minn. 297.

Dragging Passenger from Carriage.—It was held in an English case, a railroad porter having acted under the erroneous impression that plaintiff was in the wrong carriage, whereupon he dragged him therefrom with violence, that such act was within the scope of his employment, and that the company was liable. Bayley v. The Manchester etc. R. Co., L. R., 7 C. P. 415.

Kicking Boy from Platform.—The conductor of a railroad car kicked a boy, who was a trespasser, from the platform while the car was in motion. The company was held to be liable. Hoffman v. New York etc. R. Co., 44 N. Y. Super Ct. 1. Compare Pennsylvania etc. R. Co. v. Donahoe, 70 Pa. St. 119.

Off Engine.—Carter v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 98 Ind. 552; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 347.

Jumping Through Fear of Being Thrown Off.—Where a boy, fifteen years old, gets upon a freight train wrongfully, and as a trespasser, for the purpose of riding without paying his fare, and is commanded by the brakeman to jump off the train while in dangerous motion, in the night time, and in obedience to that command, and in fear of being thrown off, jumps off the train and is run over and injured, the company is liable. Kansas City etc. R. Co. v. Kelly, 36 Kan. 655. And see Wabash R. Co. v. Savage, 110 Ind. 156; Higgins v. Turnpike Co., 46 N. Y. 203; North Western R. Co. v. Hack, 66 Ill. 238; Kline v. Central Pac. R. Co., 37 Cal. 400; Beems v. C. R. etc. R. Co., 58 Iowa 150; Keffe v. Milwaukee etc. R. Co., 21 Minn. 207; Kansas City R. Co. v. Pitzsimmons, 22 Kan. 686.

Throwing Coal at Boy.—And in an action against a company for its brakeman's expulsion of a boy from a coal train by throwing coal at him and causing him to fall, whereby his leg was crushed, the company was held liable in damages. Towanda Coal Co. v. Heeman, 86 Pa. St. 418.

Under Legislative Act.—Under a legislative act providing "that every corporation and person owning and operating a railroad shall be liable for all damages sustained by any person in consequence of the wilful wrongs, whether of commission or omission, of their agents and employees, when such wrongs are in any manner connected with the use and operation of any railroad so owned or operated, on or about which they shall be employed," a railroad company is liable for the tort of a brakeman committed in removing a trespasser from a train, whether the wrongful act be merely one of negligence or a wilful and criminal wrong. Marion v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Iowa 568; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 177.

A railroad company is liable in damages for the wrongful homicide of its customer committed by its depot agent in his office while the customer was lawfully there for the transaction of business with such agent appertaining to his agency, under a legislative act which renders all railroad companies liable for damages done by any person in their employment and service, unless their agents have exercised all ordinary care and diligence. Christian v. Columbus etc. R. Co., 79 Ga. 460.

Ejectment by Brakeman Without Orders.—Where a brakeman, who had authority to remove persons from the train only upon orders of the conductor, did so without such orders, it was held that the act was not in the scope of his employment, and consequently the railroad company was not liable for the injury caused thereby. Marion v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 59 Iowa 428; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 177.

Knocking Boy from Street Car.—A street railway company has been held not liable for the act of a driver in wilfully knocking a small boy from the platform while the car was in motion, but has been held liable for the negligent act of the same employee in driving over him. Pennsylvania etc. R. Co. v. Donahoe, 70 Pa. St. 119.

1. Malloy v. New York etc. R. Co., 10 Daly (N. Y.) 453.

7. Trespasses of Servants.—A master is ordinarily liable for the trespasses of his servants;¹ but not if the trespass be criminal and felonious.²

8. Joint Liability.—Where a wilful injury is done by an agent, by the command or authority of the principal, both are, in law, principal trespassers, and therefore liable jointly.³ In other words, both the master who commands the doing, and the servant who commits an act of trespass, may be made responsible as principals, and may be sued jointly or severally.⁴

Assault on Passenger Attempting to Board Train.—In an action for damages against a railway company, the proof showed that the plaintiff, having a ticket, delayed getting upon the train until it had started and got under considerable speed, when he caught hold of the railing at the end of the rear car and stepped upon the bottom step, when he was swung round to the rear of the car, with his back toward it, and in an effort to recover himself swung back, and with his right hand took hold of the other guard rail, and while in that position it was claimed he was wantonly and maliciously assaulted by the conductor. The court instructed the jury that if they believed, from the evidence, that plaintiff, under all the circumstances, in attempting to board the train acted as a reasonably prudent man would have done under like circumstances, without negligence, and used ordinary care to prevent accident, and that injuries were sustained by him resulting from the wilful or wantonly malicious conduct of the servant of defendant acting in the line of his duty, the defendant was liable for such injuries. Held, that while under some circumstances the principles of the instruction might be applicable, it was calculated to mislead the jury under the facts of the case tried. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Rector, 104 Ill. 296; 9 Am. Eng. R. Cas. 264.

1. Luttrell v. Hazen, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 20; Barden v. Felch, 109 Mass. 154; Bath v. Caton, 37 Mich. 199; Smith v. Webster, 23 Mich. 290; Gregory v. Pifer, 9 Barn. & C. 591; Walker v. R. Co., 37 L. J., C. P. 346; Green v. Omnibus Co., 7 C. B., N. S. 290; Mackay v. Commercial Bank, L. R., 5 P. C. 394; Patulin v. Saunders, 37 Minn. 517. Compare Lyons v. Martin, 8 Ad. & E. 512; Lord Bolingbroke v. Swinden, L. R., 9 C. P. 575.

Trespass by Servant in Master's Presence or by His Command.—If a trespass, however wilful and wanton, is committed by the servant in the presence of his master, with knowledge on his part that the servant was about to commit it, or if it is committed in pursuance of the master's orders in defence of the master's property or possession, which he has been directed to protect, or to aid in protecting, the master will be liable for an assault committed by the servant in such employment. Woods' Master and Servant 589. But it is also true that in some cases the master, although present, would not be liable for his servant's trespass, as where it was impossible for him to prevent an entirely unauthorized act. Vanderbilt Transportation Co., 2 Comst. (N. Y.) 479.

2. Golden v. Newbrand, 52 Iowa 59. Attack by Command of Master.—Where servant of a railroad Company, under command of its vice president and assistant general manager, attacked servants of another road and took forcible possession thereof, it was held that there was evidence to go to a jury to establish the liability of the company for a personal injury inflicted by said servants in such attack. Denver etc. R. Co. v. Harris, 122 U. S. 597; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 142; Denver etc. R. Co. v. Harris, 122 U. S. 597; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 592.

3. Hewett v. Swift, 3 Allen (Mass.) 420; Parsons v. Winchell, 59 Mass. 592; Barden v. Felch, 109 Mass. 154; Mulchey v. Methodist Society etc., 125 Mass. 487; Regina v. Stevens, 1 Bl. Comm. 431; Tuberville v. Stamp, 1 Ld. Raym. 264; Reedie v. London etc. R. Co., 4 Exch. 244; Rex v. Pease, 4 B. & Ad. 30; Rex v. Pedly, 1 Ad. & El. 822; Rich v. Basterfield, 4 C. B. 783; Clark v. Fry, 8 Ohio St. 358.

It has been held in Tennessee, however, that when a servant wantonly and designedly injures or destroys the property of another under an arrangement with his master, the master is not liable therefor. Diehl v. Ottenville, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 191.

4. Lightner v. Brooks, 2 Cliff. (U. S.)

9. Honest Trespasses.—A master is likewise liable for the trespasses of his servant done honestly in the course of his employment.¹

10. Fraudulent Acts.—The master is also liable for the wrongful, fraudulent or deceitful act of the servant committed within the scope of his authority.²

11. Servants of Municipality.—A municipality is liable for the torts of its agents in the performance of a public duty, if they are specially employed to superintend a particular work for the city, and are not acting generally in the capacity of public officers.³

12. Torts Involving a Wrongful Intention.—An employer, even though a corporation, may also be held liable for torts involving a wrongful intention, such as false imprisonment.⁴ And it is com-

287; Herring v. Hoppock, 15 N. Y. 409, 413; Castle v. Bullard, 23 How. (U. S.) 185; Baker v. Lovett, 6 Mass. 80; Smith v. Rines, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 348; Murray v. Lovejoy, 26 Lowell's U. S. Rep. 428.

1. Timber Cutting.—As the cutting of timber on the land of an adjoining proprietor. Smith v. Webster, 23 Mich. 298; Carman v. Mayor, 14 Abb. Pr. 301; Luttrell v. Hazen, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 20; Hilt v. Morey, 26 Vt. 178; Bath v. Caton, 37 Mich. 199.

Where rubbish falls or where he directs his servant to pile rubbish in a certain place and it accidentally falls and injures another. Gregory v. Piper, 9 Barn. & C. 591. And see Fairchild v. New Orleans R. Co., 60 Miss. 931.

Removal of barge, or where a servant, in order to move his master's barge to a dock, removes the plaintiff's therefrom and so injures it. Page v. Defries, 7 Best & S. 137.

Obstruction of Highway.—Or where a servant obstructs a highway whereby a stranger is injured. Harlow v. Humiston, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 189.

Assault Upon Alleged Spy.—Plaintiff went to defendant's store to purchase an ulster. A floor walker accused her of not desiring to purchase, but of being a spy, and a cloak which she was examining was taken from her. Held, to be an assault for which the proprietor was liable. Geraty v. Stern, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 476.

Killing the Wrong Beef.—Where a master instructed his servant to go to a certain place at a certain time and kill a beef, and the servant went to such place at such time, and, finding no animal there except plaintiff's bull, killed the bull, skinned him, dressed him, and hung his carcass up in the slaughter house as a beef, honestly attempting to carry out his master's orders; held, that the master was liable. Maier v. Randolph, 33 Kan. 340.

Arrest of Wrong Person.—Or where servant engaged in the pursuit of a criminal illegally arrests the wrong person. Harris v. Louisville etc. R. Co. (Ky.), 35 Fed. Rep. 116.

Taking Hay to Feed Master's Horses.—Defendant employed a servant to drive his team (it not appearing whether the employer made provision of hay for servant to feed the team), and the servant, without express authority from the defendant, took by trespass plaintiff's hay and fed to the team. Held, that it was within the line of the servant's employment, and defendant is liable for the trespass. Potulni v. Saunders, 37 Minn. 517.

2. Johnson v. Barber, 10 Ill. 425; Armstrong v. Cooley, 10 Ill. 509; Sherman v. Dutch, 16 Ill. 285; Moir v. Hopkins, 16 Ill. 315; Keedy v. Howe, 72 Ill. 136; Locke v. Stearns, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 560; Reynolds v. Witte, 13 S. Car. 5.

3. Mulcairns v. Janesville, 67 Wis. 24; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 269; Toledo v. Cone, 41 Ohio St. 149.

4. Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Boyce, 36 Kan. 350; Clark v. Storm, 54 Hun (N. Y.) 345; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Slusser, 19 Ohio St. 157; Atlantic etc. R. Co. v. Dunn, 19 Ohio St. 162; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Quigley, 21 How. (U. S.) 213; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 489; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Bailey, 40 Miss. 395; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Blocher, 27 Md. 277; Hopkins v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 36 N. H. 9; Illinois R. Co. v. Hammer, 72 Ill. 307; Reid v.

petent to prove that an employee is acting within the scope of his authority in ordering the arrest of a third person.¹ But a railroad company is not liable to an action for a malicious prosecution, instituted by its officers against a servant, charging embezzlement of funds.²

13. Criminal Acts.—(See CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, pp. 703-704).—A master is not liable for the criminal acts of his servants not authorized or sanctioned by him.³ And to maintain an action against the master for the criminal act of an employee, it must appear that the particular injury or act of trespass was done by his command or with his assent.⁴ But if a crime is committed through the medium of an innocent servant or agent, the master is liable, the same as if it had been committed by his own hand,⁵ although absent when the crime was committed.⁶

14. Ratification and Repudiation.—(See post, 15, PUNITIVE DAMAGES).—A master may ordinarily ratify an unauthorized act in his behalf on the part of his servant.⁷ Ratification can only be inferred from acts which evince clearly and unequivocally, the intention to ratify and not from acts which may be readily and satisfac-

Home Savings Bank, 130 Mass. 443; Fenton v. Sewing Machine Co., 9 Phila. (Pa.) 189; Goodspeed v. E. Haddam Bank, 22 Conn. 530; Boogher v. Life Assoc. of America, 75 Mo. 319; Wheelless v. Second Nat. Bank, 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 469; Jordan v. Alabama etc. R. Co., 74 Ala. 85; Williams v. Planters' Ins. Co., 57 Miss. 759; Vance v. R. Co., 32 N. J. L. 334; Cooley on Torts 119; 3 Sutherlandon Damages 270; 2 Wait's Act. & Def. 447; Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. Rice, 10 Kan. 437; M. K. etc. R. Co. v. Weaver, 16 Kan. 456; Kansas etc. R. Co. v. Kessler, 18 Kan. 523; Kansas etc. R. Co. v. Little, 19 Kan. 269; Western News Co. v. Wilmarth, 33 Kan. 570; Mallach v. Ridley, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 336; Mali v. Lord, 29 N. Y. 381.

1. Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Donahoe, 56 Tex. 162; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 287.

Arrest of Passenger at Instance of Gate Keeper.—A railroad company is liable where a gate keeper causes the arrest and detention of a passenger for failing to give up a ticket on leaving station. Lynch v. Metropolitan etc. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 77; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 119.

2. Gillett v. Missouri R. Co., 55 Mo. 315.

As to liability of master for libel published by servant see LIBEL AND SLANDER.

3. Jackson v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 422; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas.

327; State v. Prevention etc. Soc., 47 N. J. L. 237.

Cruelty to Animals.—A complaint for cruelty to an animal will not lie against one whose servant did the act, unless direct agency be shown by presence, order or direction. State v. Prevention etc. Soc., 47 N. J. L. 237.

4. Allegheny R. Co. v. McLain, 91 Pa. St. 442; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Wilt, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 142; Yerger v. Warren, 31 Pa. St. 319; Rex v. Hug-gins, 2 Strange 882; Rex v. Michael, 9 Carr & P. 357; Rex v. Bleasdale, 2 C. & R. 766.

5. Rex v. Giles, 1 Moo. C. C. 166; Rex v. Clifford, 2 C. & K. 202.

6. Foster's Crown Cas. 349.

As to illegal sale of intoxicating liquors by servants see INTOXICATING LIQUORS, vol. 11, 714, et seq.

A master has also been held liable, though ignorant thereof, in the following criminal cases, viz:

Concealing Tobacco.—For concealing tobacco upon which the duty was unpaid. Atty. Gen. v. Siddons, Cr. & J. 120.

Adulteration of Bread.—In adulterating bread with alum. Rex v. Dixon, 4 Camp. 12.

Pollution of Stream.—In polluting a stream with refuse from gas works. Rex v. Medley, 6 C. & P. 292. And see Rex v. Pease, 4 B. & Ad. 30; Reg. v. Gt. Northern R. Co., 9 Ad. & El., Q. B. 315; Rex v. Ivens, 7 C. & P. 213.

7. Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Hammer, 72

torily explained without involving such intention;¹ such as subsequent promotion,² or retention in service.³ But the discharge of the servant and repudiation of his act excludes the right of the person injured to recover additional damages, "to deter the wrong doer from repeating the trespass."⁴

15. Punitive Damages.—Although the authorities are not agreed, it may be laid down as the better doctrine that a master is liable in punitive damages for the wrongful act of a servant, in cases where punitive damages could be recovered against a master performing a similar act.⁵

Ill. 347; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Starnes, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 52; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Finney, 10 Wis. 388; Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657; Bass v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 654; Hull v. Pickersgill, 1 B. & B. 282; Lewis v. Read, 13 M. & W. 834; Wilson v. Tummam, 6 M. & G. 236; Woolen v. Wright, 1 H. & C. 554; Freeman v. Rosher, 13 Ad. & El. Q. B. 780; Burow v. Denman, 2 Exch. 167; Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 510.

1. Williams v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 40 La. An. 87, 417; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 414.

2. Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202; Perkins v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 55 Mo. 201. Compare Edelman v. St. Louis Transfer Co., 3 Mo. App. 503.

3. Bass v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 654.

It has been held in one State at least that ratification of the act of the porter of a sleeping car company in assaulting a stranger could not be inferred from his retention after his criminal conviction. Williams v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 40 La. An. 87, 417; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 407.

4. Western etc. R. Co. v. Turner, 72 Ga. 292; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 455.

But where a malicious and unprovoked assault was made by a railroad train hand upon a passenger, it is error to charge that if the company, with "knowledge of the act and its character, still continued to employ a servant in his former position, such retention is a ratification of the act, and warrants a recovery of exemplary damages against the company." Dillingham v. Anthony, 73 Tex. 47. And see Ramsden v. Boston etc. R. Co., 104 Mass. 120; Bryant v. Rich, 106 Mass. 180; Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657; Stewart v. Brooklyn etc. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 588; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 127; Sherley v. Billings, 8 Bush (Ky.) 147;

Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Flexman, 103 Ill. 546; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Rector, 104 Ill. 296; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202.

5. Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Ill. 202.

In support of the doctrine that an employer is punishable with punitive damages for the act of his servant, where no moral responsibility for the act rested on the master where the act was unauthorized and unsatisfied, and the master was in nowise negligent in his selecting or retention, see dissenting opinion of TAPLEY, J., same case.

Punitive Damages Not Allowed.—The following cases take the view that punitive damages are not collectible. Mendelsohn v. Anaheim Lighter Co., 40 Cal. 657; Turner v. North Beach etc. R. Co., 34 Cal. 594; Wardrobe v. California Stage Co., 7 Cal. 118; Keene v. Lizardi, 8 La. Rep., O. S. 32; Boulard v. Calhoun, 13 La. An. 445; Hill v. New Orleans etc. R. Co., 11 La. An. 292; McKeon v. Citizens' R. Co., 42 Mo. 79; Detroit Daily Post Co. v. McArthur, 16 Mich. 446; Great Western R. Co. v. Miller, 19 Mich. 205; Ackerson v. Erie R. Co., 32 N. J. L. 254; Hogan v. Providence etc. R. Co., 3 R. I. 88; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Starnes, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 52; Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Finney, 10 Wis. 388; Jones v. Burgett, 46 Tex. 272; The Amiable Nancy, 3 Wheat. 546; Parsons v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 94 Mo. 286; Chicago v. Jones, 66 Ill. 349; Chicago v. Langloss, 52 Ill. 246; Sullivan v. Oregon etc. R. Co., 12 Oreg. 392; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391; Galveston H. & Sa. R. Co. v. Donahoe, 56 Tex. 287.

In Illinois it is apparently held that a corporation is liable in punitive damages for the wanton and wilful acts of its servants, but not for the servant's negligent act, however grossly negligent it may be. Illinois Cent. R. Co.

v. Hammer, 72 Ill. 347; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Holdford, 56 Ill. 455.

Texas Rule.—A railroad company is not liable in exemplary damages for injuries caused by the malicious acts of its agents engaged in running a train, unless such acts were authorized by the company, or subsequently ratified by it with full knowledge of the facts. Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Moore, 69 Tex. 157.

A passenger unable to get off at his point of destination because the car was beset by others endeavoring to get on, and who, in consequence, was carried six miles and detained an hour, and had to pay sixty cents to get back, is not entitled to punitive damages because the conductor refused to let him get off after the train had started, and failed to arrange for his return passage as he promised to do. Mississippi & T. R. Co. v. Gill (Miss.), 1889, 5 So. 393.

The New York rule is as follows: For injuries by the negligence of a servant while engaged in the business of the master within the scope of his employment, the latter is liable for compensation damages; but for such negligence, however gross or culpable, he is not liable to be punished in punitive damages, unless he is also chargeable with gross misconduct. Something more than ordinary negligence is necessary; it must be reckless and of a criminal nature and clearly established. Cleg-horn v. New York etc. R. Co., 56 N.Y. 44. Of the servant see Western Union Tel. Co. v. Eyser, 2 Colo. 142; Gasway v. Atlanta etc. R. Co., 58 Ga. 216; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bryan, 90 Ill. 126; Jeffersonville R. Co. v. Rogers, 28 Ind. 1; 38 Ind. 116; Wheeler & W. Mfg. Co. v. Boyce, 36 Kan. 350; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Blocher, 27 Md. 277; Malecek v. Tower Grove etc. R. Co., 57 Mo. 17; Perkins v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 55 Mo. 201; Graham v. Pac. R. Co., 66 Mo. 536; Evans v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 11 Mo. App. 463; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Burke, 53 Miss. 200; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Hurst, 26 Miss. 660; Hopkins v. Atlantic R. Co., 36 N. H. 9; Atlantic etc. R. Co. v. Dunn, 19 Ohio St. 162; Quigley v. C. P. R. Co., 11 Nev. 350; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Bayley, 40 Miss. 395; Gasway v. Atlanta etc. R. Co., 58 Ga. 216; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 489; Howe v. New March, 12 Allen (Mass.) 49; Ramsden v. B. & O. R. Co., 104 Mass. 117; Byram v. McGuire, 3 Head (Tenn.) 530; Cleg-horn v. New York etc. R.

Co., 56 N. Y. 44; Warner v. New York etc. R. Co., 44 N. Y. 465.

In Kentucky, by statute, in actions against a railroad company for the killing of a person by the railway or its servants, punitive damages are allowed where the act resulting in the killing was wilful. Jacobs v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 263; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 7 Bush (Ky.) 235; Bowen v. Lane, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 311. See also Haley v. Mobile etc. R. Co., 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 239.

Exemplary Damages Not Given as a Matter of Right.—Where an injury is wantonly and wilfully inflicted, the jury may, in addition to the actual damages sustained, visit upon the wrong doer vindictive or punitive damages, by way of punishment for the wrongful act, but the party is not entitled to such damages as a matter of right, and it is error to so instruct in any case. Whether the party may have such damages rests largely in the discretion of the jury, under all the circumstances, and they should be left free to exercise their judgment in this respect. Wabash R. Co. v. Rector, 104 Ill. 206; Hawes v. Knowles, 114 Mass. 518.

Drunken Driver.—Where a stage coach proprietor employed a known drunkard as a driver, through whose negligence, while intoxicated, a passenger receives injury, it was held that it was not error to instruct the jury that they might give exemplary damages. Wiley v. Keokuk, 6 Kan. 94; Sawyer v. Sauer, 10 Kan. 466. And see Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Hammer, 72 Ill. 347.

Expulsion from Train.—The injured feelings of a passenger wrongfully compelled to leave a train and suffer insult and abuse, and the indignity, humiliation, wounded pride and mental suffering endured, may be considered in estimating his damages; and such an allowance is merely compensatory, and does not constitute exemplary damages. Shepard v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. (Iowa), 1889, 41 N. W. 564.

Expulsion of Newsboy from Street Car.—Newsboy was expelled from street car and run over and injured. Evidence held not to authorize recovery of exemplary damages. Philadelphia Traction Co. v. Orbann, 119 Pa. St. 37; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 432.

Killing Animals.—Animals were killed through wilful act of servant. Held, that there could be no recovery of exemplary damages. Chicago etc. R. Co.

It is generally held that where the servants of a corporation have committed a tort punishable with punitive damages the corporation may by ratification of such act make itself liable in punitive damages.¹

XXI. FELLOW SERVANTS, NEGLIGENCE OF—See FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 7, p. 821.

XXII. LIABILITY FOR ACTS OF INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR—1. Definition.—An independent contractor is one who renders service in the course of an occupation representing the will of the employer only as to the result of the work, and not as to the means by which it is accomplished.² But the mere fact that one works by

v. Jarrett, 59 Miss. 470; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 455.

Seizure of Railroad.—Punitive damages are recoverable in action of trespass on the case against a corporation to recover damages for injuries inflicted by its servants in a forcible seizure of a railroad. Denver etc. R. Co. v. Harris, 122 U. S. 597; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 592.

1. Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Starnes, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 52; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Finney, 10 Wis. 388; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Hammer, 72 Ill. 347; Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657; Bass v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 654; Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Donahoe, 56 Tex. 162; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 287.

Retention of the employee, who was guilty of the wanton or grossly negligent act, and especially his promotion by the company after it knew of such act, are evidence of such a ratification of his act as will make the company liable for punitive damages. Bass v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 654; Godard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202. Compare Edelman v. St. Louis Transfer Co., 3 Mo. App. 503.

A municipal corporation is not liable in exemplary damages for the wanton or malicious act of its servant. Chicago v. Jones, 66 Ill. 349; Chicago v. Langloss, 52 Ill. 256.

2. Harrison v. Collins, 86 Pa. St. 123; 27 Am. Rep. 699; Painter v. Mayor etc., of Pittsburgh, 46 Pa. St. 213; Wray v. Evans, 80 Pa. St. 102; Edmundson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 111 Pa. St. 316; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 423; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Farver, 111 Ind. 195; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 134. See also CONTRACTOR, vol. 3, p. 822, and cases cited in following notes.

Agreement to Complete Another's Job.—Where one H contracted with a railroad company provided that he should complete the job which M had undertaken, and was to be paid for it what the material and labor to be procured and furnished by him should cost and ten per cent. additional to that as his compensation, it was held that said K was not a servant but an independent contractor. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Reese, 61 Miss. 581; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 110.

Person in Charge of Car Yards.—Defendant, a railway corporation, made a contract with A whereby he was to have entire charge in defendant's freight car yard of the work of making up freight trains, etc., and to be paid a certain sum per ton of freight and for each car hauled from the yard. Defendant's superintendent was authorized to see that the work was done satisfactorily, and if it were not, defendant could terminate the work at twenty-four hours' notice. The men employed in the yard were paid by A. B sued the company for injuries received through the negligence of trainmen in the employ of A. It was held that A was a servant of defendant, and not an independent contractor. Speed v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 303; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77.

Man Employed to Pump Water.—Man employed by railroad to furnish and superintend steam engine to pump water held an independent contractor for whose negligence company was held not liable. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Farver, 111 Ind. 195; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 134.

A slater by trade, who carried on the business of slater in Portland (Me.), and had done so for more than twenty years, keeping a shop and a slate on which to receive orders, and men constantly in his employ to assist in executing such orders as he should receive, the piece or job, and not by the day or week, is not conclusive as to whether he is a servant or an independent contractor.¹

The question as to whether a person was a servant or contractor is for the jury.²

2. General Rule of Liability.—Where a person contracts with another, exercising an independent calling, to do a work for him, according to the contractor's own methods and not subject to his control or orders except as to results to be obtained, the former is not liable for the wrongful acts of such contractor or his servants.³

was held to be carrying on what the law denominates an independent business. McCarthy v. Second Parish, 71 Me. 318; 36 Am. Rep. 320. And see Hass v. Philadelphia etc. Steamship Co., 88 Pa. St. 269; 32 Am. Rep. 462.

Employee of Roofer.—Defendant employed one B, who was engaged in "the roofing and cornice business," to make some repairs to the cornice of his hotel in the city of New York. The defect was pointed out, but no price or plan for doing the work was specified; the method of repair and the means to be employed being left entirely to the judgment of B, who agreed simply to remedy the defect. In doing the work the employees of B suspended a ladder from the roof of the hotel, upon which planks were placed to serve as a scaffold. A gust of wind caused one of these planks to fall; it struck and injured plaintiff, who was passing at the time. Defendant was not in the city while the repairs were in progress, and had no knowledge of the manner in which the work was being done. In an action to recover damages for alleged negligence causing the injury, held that the complaint was properly dismissed; that the relation of master and servant did not exist between the defendant and B, but the latter was an independent contractor, and the men employed were his, not defendant's servants; also that it was immaterial that the work was charged for by the day. Hexamer v. Webb, 54 Am. Rep. 703.

1. Fink v. Missouri Furnace Co., 10 Mo. App. 61; Corbin v. American Mills, 27 Conn. 274.

2. Hass v. Philadelphia etc. Steamship Co., 88 Pa. St. 269; 32 Am. Rep. 462; following Mullan v. Steamship Co., 78 Pa. St. 25; 21 Am. Rep. 2. Also see Riley v. State Line Steamship Co., 29 La. An. 791; 29 Am. Rep. 349.

3. McCarthy v. Second Parish, 71 Me. 318; 36 Am. Rep. 320; Du Pratt

v. Lick, 38 Cal. 691; Aston v. Nolan, 63 Cal. 269; Ryan v. Curran, 64 Ind. 345; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Farver, 111 Ind. 195; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 134; Prairie State etc. Co. v. Doig, 70 Ill. 52; Rale v. Johnson, 80 Ill. 185; Brown v. McLeish, 71 Iowa 381; Wattmeyer v. Wisconsin etc. R. Co., 71 Iowa 626; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 384; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Willes, 38 Kan. 330; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 397; Gallagher v. S.W. Ex. Assn., 28 La. An. 943; Sweeney v. Murphy, 32 La. An. 628; Davie v. Levy, 39 La. An. 551; Eaton v. European etc. R. Co., 59 Me. 520; Tibbetts v. Knox etc. R. Co., 62 Me. 437; Hilliard v. Richardson, 3 Gray (Mass.) 349; Linton v. Smith, 8 Gray (Mass.) 147; Sweeney v. Boston etc. R. Co., 128 Mass. 5; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138; Forsyth v. Hooper, 11 Gray (Mass.) 419; Brackett v. Lubke, 4 Allen (Mass.) 138; Barry v. St. Louis, 17 Mo. 121; Deford v. State, 30 Md. 179; Speed v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 303; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77; Brown v. Werner, 40 Md. 15; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Reese, 61 Miss. 581; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 110; King v. Livermore, 16 N. Y. 298; Slater v. Mesereau, 64 N. Y. 138; King v. New York etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 298; Barrett v. Singer Mfg. Co., 1 Sweeney (N. Y.) 545; Devlin v. Smith, 89 N. Y. 470; Young v. New York etc. R. Co., 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 229; Murtfeldt v. New York etc. R. Co., 102 N. Y. 703; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 144; Benedict v. Martin, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 288; Schular v. Hudson etc. R. Co., 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 653; McGatrick v. Wasson, 4 Ohio St. 566; Hughes v. Cincinnati etc. R. Co., 39 Ohio St. 461; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 100; Carman v. Steubenville, 4 Ohio St. 399; Edmundson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 111 Pa. St. 316; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 423; Painter v. Pittsburgh, 46 Pa. St. 213; Runt v. Pennsylvania etc. R. Co., 51 Pa. St. 475; Allen v. Willard, 58 Pa. St. 374; Wray

It is clear, also, that the same rule holds true as between a contractor and subcontractor.¹

The liability of the employer depends upon whether he retains direction and control of the work, or has given it to the contractor.²

v. Evans, 80 Pa. St. 102; Mansfield etc. Co. v. McEnery, 91 Pa. St. 185; Burton v. Galveston etc. R. Co., 61 Tex. 526; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 218; Pierce v. O'Keefe, 11 Wis. 180; Hitte v. Republican V. R. Co., 19 Neb. 620; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 566; Quarman v. Burnett, 6 M. & W. 499; Blake v. Ferris, 1 Selden's (Am.) Rep. 58; Milligan v. Wedge, 12 A. & E. 737; Rapson v. Cubitt, 9 M. & W. 710; Gayford v. Nichols, 9 Exch. 702; Cuthbertson v. Parsons, 12 C. B. 304. And see Robinson v. Blake Mfg. Co., 143 Mass. 528. Compare Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Hahn (Pa.), 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 24.

Guaranty by Employer.—Where one employs a contractor to erect a building, the contractor is the principal of those whom he employs, and it is for them to enquire into his character for skillfulness and carefulness; the employer of the contractor is not a guarantor for his skill and care. Hunt v. Pennsylvania etc. R. Co., 51 Pa. St. 445.

Performance of Work in Lawful Manner—Presumption.—A person employing another to do a lawful act is presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary to have employed him to do it in a lawful and reasonable manner; and, therefore, unless the parties stand in the relation of master and servant, the employer is not responsible for damages occasioned by the negligent mode in which the work is done. 1 Redfield on Railways 542; Butler v. Hunter, 7 Ill. & N. 826; Eaton v. European etc. R. Co., 59 Me. 520.

1. Rapson v. Cubitt, 9 M. & W. 710. Compare McClary v. Kent, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 27. And see McLean v. Russell, 22 Jur. 394; Shield v. Edinburgh R. Co., 28 Jur. 539; Knight v. Fox, 5 Ex. 721; Devlin v. Smith, 89 N. Y. 470; Hilliard v. Richardson, 3 Gray (Mass.) 349.

2. Andrews v. Boedecker, 17 Ill. App. 213; Hefferman v. Benkard, 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 432; Corbin v. American Mills Co., 27 Conn. 274; Sprout v. Hemmingway, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 1;

Lawyer v. McLean, 10 Mo. App. 591; Sadler v. Henlock, 4 E. & B. 570; Serandad v. Saisse, 35 L. J. Pr. C. C. 17; Peachy v. Rowland, 13 C. B. 187; Overton v. Freeman, 11 C. B. 833.

Contractor Running Mill.—The owner of a mill is not liable where an employee of an independent contractor running it is injured through a defect in a machine frequently inspected by the contractor's servants. Knoxville Iron Co. v. Dobson, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 367.

Plumber.—An owner of a building employing a plumber to repair the water pipes in his own way, is not liable for an injury produced to a third person by his negligence in that work. Bennett v. Truebody, 66 Cal. 509; 56 Am. Rep. 117.

Operator of Steam Shovel on Lands of Another.—A person who is injured through the running of his horse, caused by the noise of a steam shovel operated on defendant's lands by an independent contractor, cannot recover from the owner of such lands. Bailey v. Troy etc. R. Co., 57 Vt. 252; 52 Am. Rep. 129; Harrington v. Lansingburg (N. Y.), 16 Wash. L. Rep. 719; Fuller v. Citizens' Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 875.

Operator of Shingle Machine.—A person operating a shingle machine to manufacture shingles by the thousand for the owners or lessees of a mill is a contractor, and not an employee for whose acts the owners or lessees are liable. State v. Emerson, 72 Me. 455.

Excavator of Earth.—Where a coterminal land owner contracts with one to excavate a lot for the purpose of erecting a building, and the contract is silent as to the mode of doing the work, he is not liable for damages occasioned by the acts of such person or his servants. Aston v. Nolan, 63 Cal. 269.

Contractor to Construct Gas Main.—Where an independent contractor for the construction of a gas main is required by the contract to brace and protect all water and other pipes, and by his neglect in not sufficiently bracing the pipe of another company the same breaks, causing an explosion, the company for which the main is constructed

3. Exceptions to Rule of Nonliability—(a) Work Necessarily Attended by a Nuisance.—A master is liable although he employs an independent contractor to perform a certain piece of work when such performance is necessarily attended by a nuisance.¹

(b) Work Improperly Prosecuted or Wrongfully Undertaken.—Also where work, of a kind in the ordinary doing of which a nuisance occurs, being lawfully undertaken, has been negligently or improperly prosecuted, or if it was ordered without lawful authority, a third person who has sustained injuries thereby, without fault on his own side, may recover from the employer notwithstanding the performance was entrusted to a contractor rather than to hired laborers. And furthermore, the liability of the em-is not liable for the damage caused thereby where there is no evidence of acceptance of the work and notice of its faulty performance. Nor would it be made liable by a statute providing that any company laying a pipe line under its provisions should be liable for all damages occasioned by such company's negligence. Chartiers etc. Gas Co. v. Waters, 123 Pa. St. 220.

Steam Pipe Contractor.—A master who is not shown to have employed two competent persons to put in a steam pipe, and who neither knew nor was likely to know that it was insecurely put in, is not liable to a servant injured by its pulling out. Hobbs v. Stauer, 62 Wis. 108.

Laying Water Pipe.—A having obtained a licence from the borough authorities to lay water pipe in a street, contracted with B, for $25, to dig a ditch in a borough street and lay the pipe, A to furnish the pipe and boxing, but to have no further connection with the work. In an action against A to recover damages for an injury caused by B's negligence in leaving the ditch unprotected, held, that B was an independent contractor, and that A was not liable for B's negligence in performing his contract. Smith v. Simmons, 103 Pa. St. 32.

Delivering Sand.—One who contracts with a furnace company to take sand from its land and to deliver it at its furnace at an agreed price per load, there being no stipulation as to the manner of digging the sand, is an independent contractor, and the company is, therefore, not liable for his negligence in conducting the work. Fink v. The Missouri Furnace Co. 82 Mo. 276; 52 Am. Rep. 376.

Loading Ship.—A transportation company paid a stevedore to load a ship. Through the stevedore's negligence one of his men received an injury. It was held that he could not recover against the company. Rankin v. Merchants etc. Transportation Co., 73 Ga. 229; 54 Am. Rep. 874.

Clearing Land—Damage by Fire.—The owner of land is not liable for injury by communication of a fire negligently set on his land by one contracting to clear the same. Ferguson v. Hubbell, 97 N. Y. 507. See Harrison v. Collins, 86 Pa. St. 153; Callahan v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 23 Iowa 562; Kellogg v. Payne, 21 Iowa 575; Earle v. Hall, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 353; Williams v. Jones, 3 H. & C. 602; Woodman v. Jonier, 10 Jur., N. S. 852; Bartlett v. Baker, 3 H. & C. 153; Blake v. Thirst, 2 H. & C. 20. Compare Serandaty v. Saisse, L. R., 1 P. C. 152; 12 Jur., N. S. 301.

Cutting Timber—Improper Use of Contractor's Dam.—The defendant contracted to have T cut timber from his land at a specified price per foot and deliver it at the mouth of a certain river, using the defendant's dams in the driving of the logs if he chose. T used the defendants' dam in the business in an unreasonable manner to the plaintiff's injury, but the defendant had nothing to do with the cutting, hauling or driving of the logs. Held, that the defendant was not liable. Carter v. Berlin Mills, 58 N. H. 52; 42 Am. Rep. 573.

¹ Clark v. Fry, 8 Ohio St. 358; Carman v. Steubenville R. Co., 4 Ohio St. 399; Dygert v. Schenck, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 446; Congreve v. Morgan, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 495; Vanderpool v. Husson, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 106; Carman v. R. Co., 4 Ohio (N. S.) 399; Matheny v. Wolffs, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 137; Storrs v. Utica, 17 N. Y. 108; Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 566; ployer under such circumstances is not limited to cases where an incompetent or unsuitable person has been employed as contractor.¹

(c) Where Employer Prescribes Means.—But where work which does not necessarily create a nuisance, and is in itself harmless and lawful when carefully conducted, is let to another by the employer, who merely prescribes means to accomplish the end which he is to employ at his discretion, the latter is, as to the means prescribed, the master; and if during the progress of the work a third person sustains injury by the negligent use of the means employed and controlled by the contractor, the employer is not liable.² No liability attaches, however, where the employer simply reserves the right to prescribe what shall be done, but not how it shall be done, or who shall do it.³

(d) Reservation of Right to Protect Employees.—Where, however, an employer makes a contract to have certain work done, but reserves to itself such arrangements as are necessary for the protection of workmen, he is liable for such injuries as happen to employees of the contractors without their fault.⁴

Mayor v. Furze, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 616; Creed v. Hartman, 29 N. Y. 591; Milford v. Holbrook, 9 Allen (Mass.) 21; Brower v. Peate, L. R., 1 Q. B. D. 321; Ellis v. The Sheffield Gas Co., 23 L. J., Q. B., N. S. 42.

1. Ware v. St. Paul Water Co., 2 Abb. (U. S.) 261; Sabin v. Vt. Central R. Co., 25 Vt. 363.

Use by Contractors of Boom of Contractors.—In an action against a boom company for damages caused by flooding plaintiff's land, it appeared that defendant, at the time the damage occurred, had let to contractors the work of driving and delivering to defendant at the mouth of the "R" river, in which the defendant had built a series of dams, a large quantity of defendant's logs, and that the flooding was caused by their operations. Defendant contended that it had no control over the contractors, and was not liable for their acts. The court instructed the jury that if in order to fulfil these contracts it was necessary that such quantities of logs should be kept below the lower dam as would cause a solid jam of several miles in length, and by so doing the water was backed upon plaintiff's land, defendant was liable; but that if, under the terms of the contract, it was not necessary to so flood the river as to damage plaintiff, the contractors would alone be liable. Held, as favorable as defendant could ask. McDonell v. Rifle Boom Co., 71 Mich. 61.

14 C. of L.—53

2. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Farver, 111 Ind. 195; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 134; McCafferty v. Spuyten Duyvel R. Co., 61 N. Y. 178; Robinson v. Webb, 11 Bush (Ky.) 464; Reid v. Allegheny City, 79 Pa. St. 300; Scammon v. Chicago, 25 Ill. 424; Clark v. Frye, 8 Ohio St. 379; Gilbert v. Beach, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 423; Boswell v. Laird, 8 Cal. 469; Cuthbertson v. Parsons, 12 C. B. 304; Murphy v. Curalli, 34 L. J., Exch. 14; Vanderpool v. Husson, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 196; Cincinnati v. Stone, 5 Ohio St. 38.

3. Wood's Master and Servant 620; Allen v. Willard, 57 Pa. St. 374; Hunt v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 51 Pa. St. 475; Kelley v. Mayor, 11 N. Y. 432; Pack v. Mayor, 8 N. Y. 222; Schwartz v. Gilmore, 45 Ill. 455; Blake v. Thirst, 2 H. & C. 20.

4. Lake Superior Iron Co. v. Erickson, 39 Mich. 492.

Taking Down Building.—Where a contractor agreed to take down a building under the owner's directions and subject to his approval, such owner is responsible for any injury to a third person resulting therefrom. Linnehan v. Rollins, 137 Mass. 123; 50 Am. Rep. 287.

Under Directions and to Satisfaction of Superintendent.—On the other hand, it has been laid down in an Ohio case that the mere employment of another to do an act in itself innocent and lawful, but from the doing of which, by

(e) Personal Interference.—And where a person employing a contractor personally interferes, the rule as to independent contractors does not apply.¹

(f) Injury Directly from Authorized Act.—And this is true where the injury arises directly from the act the contractor is authorized to do.²

(g) Deputing Performance of Legal Obligation.—As where an individual or a corporation, who, under a legal obligation to do a certain thing, contracts with another to perform the duty in question to the injury of a third person, they cannot escape liability thereby.³ Thus where a statutory duty is cast upon a railroad want of proper care, injury may result to a third person, does not make the employer responsible for such injury, the contract being that certain work should be done "according to the directions and perfect satisfaction of the superintendent." Chambers v. Ohio L. J. & T. Co., 1 Dis. (Ohio) 329.

In Accordance with Plans, Specifications, etc.—And where in a Pennsylvania case the work was to be done "in a substantial and workmanlike manner," and "in accordance with the plans, specifications and instructions furnished" by the company, it was held that the word "instructions" referred to the kind of structure, etc., but the mode of accomplishing the work was left to his own skill and judgment. Hunt v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 51 Pa. St. 475.

1. Leaving Earth Piled in Road.—Thus where the defendant was the proprietor of some newly built houses which he had employed P to build for him, and P, in forming a drain from premises belonging to the defendant at the back of the new houses to the common sewer, had, by his servants, caused a quantity of gravel to be deposited by the roadside. The drain being finished, P employed a person to carry away the gravel, and paid him so much a load, which he charged to the defendant, but the person so employed left some on the road, and the plaintiff, whilst driving in the evening along the road, ran upon the gravel left in the road, was upset and injured. The defendant's attention had been called to the gravel left in the road by a policeman, and he had promised to remove it as soon as he could, and, after the accident, had said it was caused by the plaintiff's carelessness. It was held that the defendant was liable in damages. Burgess v. Gray, 1 C. B. 578.

And see Schwartz v. Gilmore, 45 Ill. 456.

2. The rule in such cases has been laid down as follows: Where the obstruction or defect causing the injury is purely collateral to the work contracted to be done, and is entirely the result of the wrongful acts of the contractor or his workmen, the employer is not liable; but where the obstruction or defect which occasioned the injury results directly from the acts which the contractor agrees and is authorized to do, the person who employs the contractor and authorizes him to do those acts is equally liable to the injured party. Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 679; Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 418; Stone v. Cheshire R. Co., 19 N. H. 42; Palmer v. City of Lincoln, 5 Neb. 136.

3. Bridge.—As where a statute imposed on the defendants the duty of making a bridge that would open, and they employed a contractor who made a bridge that would not open. Hole v. Sittingbourne etc. R. Co., 30 L. J., Exch. 81; 6 H. & N. 488.

Drain Required by Statute.—So where a statute requiring a drain to be made by the owner of a house authorized him to make a cutting in the road, but also required him to fill up the cutting properly afterwards, and he employed a contractor to make the drain whose men neglected to so properly fill it. Gray v. Pullen, 34 L. J., Q. B. 265; Hyams v. Webster, 36 L. J., Q. B. 166; R. R. Co. v. Board of Health, 33 L. J., M. C. 174.

Water Company Making Excavations.—The city of St. Paul, Minn., passed an ordinance authorizing the St. Paul Water Company to lay pipes in its streets; in the ordinance authorizing such laying it was provided that such company should "protect persons company, it cannot escape liability on the ground that the road has been in the possession of a contractor at the time who has neglected the duty in question.¹

(h) Defective Plans.—Where the improvements undertaken by the master are based upon defective plans, the delegation of the work to an independent contractor will not relieve the employer.²

(i) Unskilful Arrangement of Work.—An employer is likewise liable where there has been unskilful or negligent arrangement of the work in question.³

against damages by reason of excavations made by them in said streets, and to keep the excavations properly guarded by day and night, and to become responsible for all damages which might accrue by reason of the neglect of their employees in the premises, and that the streets and highways should not be unnecessarily encumbered or obstructed in laying said pipes. The ordinance was accepted and contract let. An accident occurred through failure to guard an excavation. It was held that the water company was liable in damages, it having contracted to protect all persons. Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 566.

1. Duty to Fence.—The company therefore cannot escape from liability for a failure to perform the statutory duty to fence on the ground that a contractor had possession of the road at the time in question. Nelson v. Vermont etc. R. Co., 26 Vt. 717; H. & J. R. Co. v. Meador, 50 Tex. 77; Bay City etc. R. Co. v. Austin, 21 Mich. 390.

Barriers at Crossings.—Nor can it on the same ground escape responsibility for a failure to discharge the statutory duty of providing barriers for the protection of travellers at street crossings. Lowell v. Boston etc. R. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 24. See generally Pound v. Port Huron etc. R. Co., 54 Mich. 13; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 640; Huey v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co., 45 Ind. 320; Rockford etc. R. Co. v. Heflin, 65 Ill. 367; Illinois etc. R. v. Finnigan, 21 Ill. 646; Ft. Wayne etc. R. Co. v. Hinebough, 43 Ind. 354; Gardner v. Smith, 7 Mich. 410. Compare Griggs v. Houston, 104 U. S. 553; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 359. Also see Clement v. Canfield, 28 Vt. 302; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Whipple, 22 Ill. 105; Whitney v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 44 Me. 362; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Hannon, 60 Ind. 417.

Injury to Crops by Cattle—Defective Fence.—Dean v. Sullivan R. Co., 22 N.

H. 316; Holden v. Rutland etc. R. Co., 30 Vt. 208; Smith v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 38 Iowa 518; Donald v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 44 Iowa 157; Cumings v. H. etc. R. Co., 48 Mo. 512; Trice v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 49 Mo. 440; Grau v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 54 Mo. 240; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Sharp, 27 Kan. 134; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 595. Compare Clark v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 36 Mo. 203.

2. By reason of defendant's building operations plaintiff's adjoining property is injured, as, for example, by the insertion of a girder into an old and weak party wall. Defendant, although he has entrusted the work to independent contractors, cannot escape liability if the injury was occasioned, not by poor workmanship or materials, but by the use of defective plans and specifications. Lancaster v. Conn. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 92 Mo. 460.

Reasonable Care in the Procurement of Plans.—Where part of a building falls without apparent reason, the owner is not relieved from liability for resulting damages because he used reasonable care in obtaining plans and employing a contractor to do his work. A building so defectively constructed as to be dangerous is a nuisance, and the doctrine of independent contractors does not apply. Wilkinson v. Detroit Steel and Spring Works, 73 Mich. 405.

3. Altering Old Building.—A builder is liable for injuries to his employee from the fall of a wall occasioned by the builders' unskilful or negligent arrangement of the work of altering an old building, although at the time of the casualty the work had been let out to a contractor, and was being carried on under his management and control. Horner v. Nicholson, 56 Mo. 220.

But it was held in an English case, where plaintiff and defendant were owners of adjoining ancient houses, and a contract was made by de-

(j) Injury Naturally Resulting.—Or where, in the natural course of things, injurious consequences will arise unless means are adopted by which such consequences may be prevented. In such case the master is bound to see to the doing of that which is necessary to prevent the mischief.¹

(k) Incompetent Contractor.—Or where the master knowingly selects an incompetent contractor.²

(l) Defective Appliances Furnished.—Or defective appliances are furnished for the contractor's use.³

(m) Contractor and Overseer Combined.—Or where the injury results from the carelessness of an overseer, who has a contract for one branch of the work only.⁴

(n) Directions of Architect.—Or where the contractor obligates himself to act according to the directions of an architect.⁵

(o) Abandonment of Work.—Where an independent contractor is obliged to discontinue work entered upon, the same being defendant with a third person to tear down the front wall of his house for a given price, and the workmen of the contractor, in doing this, removed a timber which was inserted in the party wall between the defendant's and plaintiff's house, without taking any precautions by shoring or otherwise, in consequence of which the front wall of the plaintiff's house fell, that the defendant was not liable. Butler v. Hunter, 7 How. 826. And see Bonomi v. Backhouse, 9 H. L. C. 503; 34 L. J., Q. B. 181; Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Co., 2 E. & B. 767; Knight v. Fox, 5 Exch. 721; Hole v. Sittingbourne R. Co., 6 H. & N. 488.

1. Bower v. Peate, L. R., 1 Q. B. Div. 321. See Butler v. Hunter, 7 H. & N. 826.

2. 2 Thompson on Neg., § 29, page 907. And see Horne v. Nicholson, 56 Mo. 220; Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 657; Homan v. Stanley, 66 Pa. St. 464; McCleary v. Kent, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 27; Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B., N. S. 470; Jones v. Chanton, 4 Thomp. & C. 63.

3. Scaffolding.—O and M contracted with defendant to put a cornice on the mill, any scaffolding required for that purpose to be erected free of cost to them. Plaintiff's intestate, a workman in the employ of O and M, while engaged in the work, was killed by the fall of the scaffold erected by the defendant for that purpose. In an action to recover damages, plaintiff was nonsuited upon the ground that defendant owed no duty to deceased in respect to the construction of the scaffold. This upon appeal was held error, that the scaffold being erected by defendant upon its own premises for the express purpose of accommodating the workmen, a duty was imposed upon it toward them to use proper diligence in constructing and maintaining the structure. Coughtry v. Glove Woolen Co., 56 N. Y. 124; King v. N. Y. C. etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 181.

4. Contractor for Carpenter Work.—If S engages C to do the carpenter work of a building at a fixed price, and to superintend the other work on the building, employing the hands and certifying their bills to S, who pays them, and C is guilty of negligence in not sufficiently guarding a pit or vault opened in the sidewalk of the premises on which the building is erected, S will be responsible for damage sustained by a person falling into the opening, in consequence of such negligence, C being the contractor for the carpenter work only. Sawyer v. McClosky, 20 S. 536.

5. Schwartz v. Gilmore, 45 Ill. 455. Demolishment of Building.—Under a written contract to demolish a building, containing a clause that the "work of demolition is to be carried out according to the directions of the supervising architect, whose decisions on all points I agree to accept as final," held that this operated such a reservation of control over the work as prevented the contractor from being independent, and created the relation of master and servant. Faren v. Seliers, 39 La. An. 1011 abandoned by the employer, for injuries to a third person arising therefrom, the master is solely liable.¹

(p) Work Completed and Turned Over.—After a contract has been properly completed, and the work turned over and accepted, for any subsequent injury caused by the natural result of the work, the employer is responsible.²

(q) Notice of Dangers Not Apparent—Where one is doing work under a contract, upon the land of another, the primary obligation to protect his laborers rests upon the contractor rather than the landowner, but this is liable to be controlled by circumstances. The obligation to give warning of all dangers not apparent is one the employer owes to the contractor as much as to his own servants, and to those employed by the contractor to the same extent and for the same reasons.³

(r) Employer Furnishing Machinery and Servants.—So if the principal was by the terms of the contract under obligation to the contractor to furnish the necessary machinery or appliances, or to supply a portion of the labor, he would be liable to the agent or servant of the contractor for an injury sustained by reason of his neglect to use due and reasonable care in selecting and keeping in repair the proper machinery or appliances, or in employing and retaining competent servants.⁴

4. *Application of Rule to Railways*⁵—(a) Generally.—The general doctrine now seems firmly established that a railway company is not liable for the act of a contractor's servant where the contractor has independent control, although subordinate in some sense, to the general design of the work.⁶

1. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Philadelphia etc. Towboat Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 209.

2. Hyams v. Webster, L. R., 2 Q. B. 262; Bartlet v. Barker, 34 L. J., Exch. 8; Regina v. Watts, 1 Salk. 357; Mullen v. St. John, 57 N. Y. 567; Church of etc. v. Buckhart, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 193.

3. Burdick v. Cheadle, 26 Ohio St. 393; Campbell v. Sugar Co., 62 Me. 552; Owings v. Jones, 9 Mo. 108; Grady v. Walsner, 46 Ala. 381.

Owner of Mine.—A contractor agreed with the owners of a mine to do certain work therein, the owners engaging to furnish and put up such props or supports for the roof of the mine as would render the miners secure, whenever notified by the contractor that the same were necessary. Held, that although such notice from the contractor may not have been received by the owners, the owners, if they had actual knowledge that such supports were necessary, became liable in damages to an employee of the contractor who, without negligence on his own part, had been injured while at work in the mine through the want of such supports for the roof. Kelly v. Howell, 41 Ohio St. 438.

4. Mechem on Agency, § 666; citing Samuelson v. Iron Co., 49 Mich. 164; Elliott v. Bray, 10 Allen (Mass.) 378; Coughty v. Woollen Co., 56 N. Y. 124; Tobin v. Portland etc. R. Co., 59 Me. 183; Latham v. Roach, 72 Ill. 179; Malone v. Hawley, 46 Cal. 409; Deford v. Keyser, 30 Md. 179; Pierce v. Whitcomb, 48 Vt. 127. And see King v. New York etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 181; 23 Am. Rep. 37.

5. See ante, 3 g, DEPUTING PERFORMANCE OF LEGAL OBLIGATION.

6. Redfield on Railways, 537; Quarman v. Burnett, 6 M. & W. 499; Milligan v. Wedge, 12 A. & E. 737; Knight v. Fox, 5 Exch. 221; Burgess v. Gray, 1 C. B. 578; Overton v. Freeman, 11 C. B. 867; Peachey v. Rowland, 13 C. B. 182; Rapson v. Cubitt, 9 M. & W. 710; Reddie v. London etc. R. Co., 6 Railw. Cas. 184; Steele v. South East R. Co., 16 C. B. 550; Young v. New York R.

Thus where a railroad is being constructed and is in the exclusive possession of and operated by a contractor for its construction, and the railroad company, at the time of the injuries complained of are committed, has no control thereof, such company is not liable for the damages resulting from the operation of such railroad.¹

Nor is a railroad company liable for damages resulting from the negligent management of one of its trains used and controlled by construction contractors for construction purposes on a portion of its road built under construction contract and not yet turned over to the railroad company.²

Co., 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 229; Cincinnati v. Stone, 5 Ohio St. 38.

Thus, a contractor who employs his own means and pays his own workmen in building a railroad is as to third persons independent of the railway company, although its engineer has general supervision in respect of the time of doing the work; and furthermore there is no difference in this respect between corporations and natural persons who employ independent contractors. Edmundson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 111 Pa. St. 316; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 423. See Hughes v. Cincinnati etc. R. Co., 39 Ohio St. 461; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 100; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Reese, 61 Wis. 581; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 110; Kelly v. New York, 11 N. Y. 432; Blake v. Ferris, 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 48; Pack v. New York, 4 Seld. (N. Y.) 222; Hutchinson v. York etc. R. Co., 5 Exch. 343. And see Griggs v. Houston, 104 U. S. 553; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 359.

The question to be considered in cases of this character is whether the person causing the injury was the servant of the contractor, or of a contractor who was the undertaker for accomplishing the work, and having a separate and independent control of the employees engaged in the labor. Blackwell v. Wiswell, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 355. And see McCafferty v. Spuyten Duyvel etc. R. Co., 61 N. Y. 178; Kansas City R. Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 18 Kan. 34; Cuff v. Newark R. Co., 6 Vroom (N. J.) 17; Pawlett v. Rutland etc. R. Co., 28 Vt. 297; West v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 63 Ill. 545.

Funds Retained from Contract Price.

—A provision in the contract that the contractor shall be liable to the company for all negligent acts, and that the company may retain from his compensation a sum sufficient to make amends for all injury done, does not enure to the benefit of outside persons injured by the negligence of the contractor so as to render the company liable to them. Tibbetts v. Knox & L. R. Co., 62 Me. 437.

1. Kansas City R. Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 18 Kan. 34; Painter v. Pittsburgh, 46 Pa. St. 213; Carman v. Steuben etc. R. Co., 4 Ohio St. 399; Morgan v. Bowman, 22 Mo. 538; Barry v. St. Louis, 17 Mo. 121; Hillard v. Richardson, 3 Gray (Mass.) 349; Hunt v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 51 Pa. St. 475; Schular v. Hudson etc. R. Co., 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 653; Burke v. Norwich etc. R. Co., 34 Conn. 474; Murray v. Currie, L. R., 6 C. P. 24; Weynant v. New York etc. R. Co., 3 Duer (N. Y.) 360.

Assignment to President.—A contractor assigned contract to president of company, who proceeded to construct road. Held, that corporation was liable for injury to servant caused by negligence in course of construction. Solomon R. Co. v. Jones, 30 Kan. 601; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 207; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Willis, 38 Kan. 330; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 397.

2. Cunningham v. The International R. Co., 51 Tex. 503; West v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 63 Ill. 545; Guardier v. Cormack, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 254; Salter v. Masereau, 64 N. Y. 138; Camp v. Church Warden, 7 La. An 321; C. R. & B. Co. v. Grant, 46 Ga. 417; Union Pacific R. Co. v. House, 1 Wyo. 27; Meyer v. Midland Pac. R. Co., 2 Neb. 319; Cunningham v. International R. Co., 51 Tex. 503; Schular v. Hudson etc. R. Co., 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 653.

Retention of Power to Discharge.

—The fact that the company retains the power to discharge incompetent workmen does not render it responsible for the contractor's negligence. Reddie v.

nor for personal injuries arising from rock blasting.¹

Not even when nitro-glycerine is used, providing that its use is not stipulated in the contract;² nor by the falling of stones on highway;³ nor from leaving of stones in highway.⁴

(b) Acts with Reference to Real Estate.—Where the work itself which the contractor is employed to do is not a nuisance the com-

London etc. R. Co., 4 Exch. 244; Hobbett v. London etc. R. Co., 4 Exch. 254; Cuff v. Newark etc. R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 17.

Work According to Specifications.—Neither does the fact that the contractor is working in accordance with specifications take away the independent character of the employment. Hunt v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 51 Pa. St. 475; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Willis, 38 Kan. 330; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 397.

Right to Supervise.—Nor the retention of the right to supervise generally. Eaton v. E. & N. J. R. Co., 59 Me. 20.

Or Give General Directions.—Schular v. Hudson etc. R. Co., 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 653; Callahan v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 23 Iowa 562.

Where Employer Furnished Motive Power.—A railroad company employed a contractor to build its road, and agreed to furnish the motive power and operate the construction trains. The contractor was to handle all material, and build a certain number of miles per month. It was held that the company's engineer on a construction train was not under the contract of the company, but under that of the contractor, and that the company was not liable for injuries caused by the negligence of the engineer in too rapidly operating the train. Miller v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 76 Iowa 655.

It has been held, in Nebraska, that when a railroad corporation enters into an agreement with a contractor to build a portion of its railroad, the locomotives, cars, etc., used in such construction to be run exclusively under the direction and control of the contractor until the road is completed and turned over to the corporation, the railroad company will not be liable for damages occasioned by the negligence of the persons running such locomotives and cars. Hitte Admr. v. R. V. R. Co., 19 Neb. 620; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 586.

And such is the general rule. West v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 63 Ill. 545; Camp v. Church Warden, 7 La. An. 321; Guardier v. Cormack, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 254; Salter v. Mersereau, 64 N. Y. 138.

On the other hand, the facts that being a railroad company employed a contractor to do certain work upon its road, and paid him therefor a stipulated price, and furnished him a construction train and an engineer to run the same. The company prohibited the running of this train at a greater rate of speed than thirteen miles per hour, and required that it should be on a side track fifteen minutes before the schedule time for each of the company's trains. Subject to these regulations, the control, management and direction of the construction train was given wholly to the contractor. The engineer was selected by the company, and it alone had the right to discharge him, though bound to do so upon the complaint of the contractor, and to supply his place. The company paid the engineer's wages, but charged the same to the contractor, and deducted the amount thereof from the sum due him for his work. A mule was killed by the negligent running of this train.

Held, that the engineer was the servant of the company, and that it was liable. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Norwood, 62 Miss. 565; Burton v. Galveston etc. R. Co., 61 Tex. 526; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 218.

1. McCafferty v. Spuyten Duyvel etc. R. Co., 61 N. Y. 178; Tibbetts v. Knox etc. Co., 62 Me. 437; Edmundson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 111 Pa. St. 316; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Co. 423. Compare Stone v. Cheshire R. Corp., 19 N. H. 427; Cannon v. Steubenville etc. R. Co., 4 Ohio St. 339.

2. Cuff v. Newark etc. R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 17.

3. Reddie v. London etc. R. Co., 4 Exch. 244; Hobbett v. London & N. W. R. Co., 4 Exch. 254.

4. Pawlet v. Rutland etc. R. Co., 28 Vt. 297.

Poisonous Grease.—An employer is not liable for an injury occasioned to the servant of the contractor in consequence of the use by the latter of a pany will not be liable for the contractor's negligent or unlawful acts on or about real estate.¹

(c) Contractor Exercising Right of Eminent Domain.—There are many authorities that hold that where a contractor, in the course of constructing a railroad, is using the right of eminent domain vested in the company and abuses that right by making an improper entry on land or doing unnecessary damage thereto, the company is not absolved from liability. It is said to be contrary to public policy in such case to allow the company by delegating its rights to escape responsibility for the misuser of them.²

(d) Dangerous Employment.—But where the work upon which the contractor is employed is in its nature dangerous, so that the company could reasonably foresee that damages would ensue, it cannot shelter itself from liability by throwing the blame on the contractor.³

(e) Direct Superintendence of Company.—Where the railroad company has direct superintendence and direction of the work in hand, both as regards the methods employed and the result at-poisonous mixture applied to the timber upon which the servant is working, to prevent decay. West v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 63 Ill. 545.

1. McCafferty v. Spuyten Duyvel etc. R. Co., 61 N. Y. 178; King v. New York etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 181; Cuff v. Newark etc. R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 17; Reedie v. London etc. R. Co., 4 Exch. 244; Steel v. South Eastern R. Co., 16 C. B. 550.

Unlawful Entry Upon Land.—Eaton v. European etc. R. Co., 59 Me. 520, 529; Clark v. Vermont etc. R. Co., 28 Vt. 103.

Injury Through Raising Embankment.—Steel v. South Eastern R. Co., 16 C. B. 550.

Through Pulling Down Fence.—Clark v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 36 Mo. 202; Clark v. Vermont etc. R. Co., 28 Vt. 103.

Cutting Trees.—A railroad company is not liable for wrongful act of contractor in taking trees from the land of another to build a railroad. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Reese, 61 Miss. 381; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 110.

Where Land Owner Stands by.—Where land owners stand by and permit contractors constructing road to enter upon and waste soil adjacent to right of way without objection, a court of equity may refuse to award them damages. Murtfeldt v. New York etc. R. Co., 102 N. Y. 703; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 144.

Appropriation of Uncondemned Land.

—Company not liable if same was not authorized or assented to. Wattmeyer v. Wisconsin etc. R. Co., 71 Iowa 626; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 384.

Kindling of Fires.—Callahan v. B. & M. R. R. Co., 23 Iowa 562; Eaton v. European etc. R. Co., 59 Me. 520.

2. Leshner v. Wabash Navigation Co., 14 Ill. 85; Hindee v. Wabash Navigation Co., 15 Ill. 72; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 20 Ill. 385; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Whipple, 22 Ill. 105; West v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 63 Ill. 545; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Woolsey, 85 Ill. 370; Veazie v. Penobscot R. Co., 49 Me. 119; Vermont etc. R. Co. v. Baxter, 22 Vt. 365; M. & A. R. Co. v. Mayes, 49 Ga. 355; H. & G. N. R. Co. v. Meador, 50 Tex. 77; Cunningham v. Int. R. Co., 51 Tex. 503.

Bridge Over Navigable Stream.—Where, therefore, the company had acquired the right to construct a bridge across a navigable stream, so nevertheless that navigation was not interfered with, it was held responsible for the detention of a vessel in the stream caused by the negligence of the contractor who had been employed to build the bridge in question. Hole v. Sittingborne etc. R. Co., 6 H. & N. 488.

3. Carman v. Steubenville etc. R. Co., 4 Ohio St. 399; Stone v. Cheshire R. Co., 19 N. H. 427.

This would not be the case, however, where the act in question was not called for by the contract, or the result of the same could have been foreseen.

tained, the employment of the contractor ceases to be an independent employment. He sinks to the position of a servant and the company is therefore liable for his negligence.¹

5. Liability of Municipalities.—Municipal corporations fall within the general rule of law that the act done which is injurious to others must be within the scope of the employment, and furthermore that it relates to matters about which the corporation is authorized to contract.²

A stipulation in a contract between a municipality and an independent contractor, that its engineer shall have power to direct changes in the time and manner of conducting the work, is not such a reservation of power as will make it liable for the injury occasioned by the negligence of the contractor.³

Tibbetts v. Knox etc. R. Co., 62 Me. 437; McCafferty v. Spuyten Duyvel etc. R. Co., 61 N. Y. 178.

1. Carman v. Steubenville etc. R. Co., 4 Ohio St. 399; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Hanning, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 649; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Philadelphia etc. Towboat Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 209.

2. 2 Dillon's Mun. Corp., §§ 953, 968.

3. Erie v. Caulkins, 85 Pa. St. 247; Painter v. Mayor, 46 Pa. St. 213; Reed v. Allegheny, 79 Pa. St. 300; Murphy v. Ottawa, 13 Ont. —; 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 379; Clark v. Fry, 8 Ohio 359; Congreve v. Morgan, 18 N. Y. 84. And see ShIPLEY v. Fifty Associates, 106 Mass. 194; Grove v. Ft. Wayne, 45 Ind. 429; Burgess v. Gray, 1 C. B. 578; Pickard v. Smith, 4 L. T., N. S. 470; Buffalo v. Holloway, 7 N. Y. 493; Storrs v. Utica, 17 N. Y. 104; Gouedier v. Cormack, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 254; Creed v. Hardman, 29 N. Y. 591; Gilbert v. Beach, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 445; McCleary v. Kent, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 27; St. Paul v. Seitz, 3 Minn. 297; Painter v. Pittsburgh, 46 Pa. St. 213; Allen v. Willard, 57 Pa. St. 374; Homan v. Stanley, 66 Pa. St. 464.

Negligent Grading Under Directions of Surveyor.—A city is liable for injuries occasioned by negligent grading of street by contractor working under directions of city surveyor. Seattle v. Busby, 2 Wash. Ter. 25; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 503.

City Employee Acting Under Direction of Street Commissioner.—It was held in Vermont that an incorporated village was not liable for injuries resulting from negligence of one of its employees in piling tiles, at the direction of the village street commission, in a yard occupied in storing property, when the village was not the owner of the tiles, and they were not in its custody or control, and the commissioner was acting as an individual for his private gain; the act not amounting to a nuisance, and the public trust not being involved. Palmer v. St. Albans (Vt.), 60 Vt. 427; 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 392.

Brick Left in Street by Contractor.—A city is liable for personal injury occasioned by falling of bricks in street erected by contractor and constituting unlawful obstruction, of which city had notice, even though city did not know that obstruction was dangerous. Rehberg v. New York, 91 N. Y. 137; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 529.

Neglect of Servant of Contractor to Replace Barriers in Highway.—Where the facts were, that a railroad corporation was authorized to construct its railway, and in the progress of its work it became necessary from time to time to remove certain barriers, which were placed by the corporation across the highway for the protection of travellers, but were adopted by the town in which the highway was situated, and in consequence of the neglect of the workmen to replace the barriers at night a traveller sustained injury; it was held that the corporation was responsible for the negligence of such workmen, although they were employed by an individual who had contracted to construct this portion of the railroad for a stipulated sum, the work being done by direction of the corporation. Lowell v. Boston etc. R. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 24; For-syth v. Harper, 11 Allen (Mass.) 419; Hillard v. Richardson, 3 Gray (Mass.) 349; Linton v. Smith, 8 Gray (Mass.) 147; Carter v. Berlin Mills Co., 58 N.

A municipal corporation, owing to the public the duty of keeping its streets in a safe condition for travel, is liable to persons receiving injury from the neglect to keep proper lights and guards at night around an excavation which it has caused to be made in the street, whether it has or has not contracted for such precautions with the persons executing the work. For the danger arises from the very nature of the improvement, and if it can be averted only by special precautions the corporation which has authorized the work is bound to take those precautions.¹

XXIII. ASSUMPTION OF RISKS OF EMPLOYMENT—1. General Rule.—

Where an employee, after having the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the risks of his situation, accepts them, he cannot complain if subsequently injured by such exposure. By contracting for the performance of hazardous duties he assumes such risks as are incident to their discharge.² In performing the duties of his place, a servant is bound to take notice of the ordinary operation of familiar natural laws, and to govern himself accordingly. If he fails to do so, the risk is his own. He is bound to use his eyes to see that which is open and apparent to any person using his eyes, and if he fails to do so he cannot charge the

H. 52; Wright v. Holbrook, 52 N. H. 120; Blake v. Ferris, 5 N. Y. 48; Vt. Cent. R. Co. v. Baxter, 22 Vt. 366.

1. Storrs v. Utica, 17 N. Y. 104. See HIGHWAYS, vol. 9, p. 362.

2. Wharton on Neg., § 1214; Farrow v. Kelley, 108 U. S. 288; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Duffy, 35 Ark. 602; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 638; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Townsend, 41 Ark. 382; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 619; McGlynn v. Brodie, 31 Cal. 377; Baxter v. Roberts, 44 Cal. 187; Malone v. Hawley, 46 Cal. 409; Sweeney v. Central Pacific R. Co., 57 Cal. 15, 20; Palmer v. Denver etc. R. Co. (Colo.), 12 Fed. Rep. 392; Hall v. Union Pacific R. Co. (Colo.), 16 Fed. Rep. 744; Summerhays v. Kansas Pacific R. Co., 2 Colo. 484; Hayden v. Smithfield Mfg. Co., 29 Conn. 548; Stafford v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 114 Ill. 244; Moline Plow Co. v. Anderson, 19 Ill. App. 417; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Clark, Admx., 11 Ill. App. 104; Simmons v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 11 Ill. App. 147; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Gregory, 58 Ill. 272; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Flanagan, 77 Ill. 365; Pennsylvania Co. v. Lynch, 90 Ill. 334; Missouri Furnace Co. v. Abend, 107 Ill. 44; Abend v. T. H. & G. R. Co., 111 Ill. 202; Houser v. Chicago etc. R. Co. Co., 60 Iowa 230; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500; Money v. Lower Vein Coal Co., 55 Iowa 671; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Mayes, 63 Iowa 562; Union Pacific

R. Co. v. Estis, 37 Kan. 715; Smith v. Sellers, 40 La. An. 527; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 4 Ill. App. 262; Camp Point Mfg. Co. v. Baillou, 71 Ill. 417; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Munroe, 80 Ill. 25; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Asbury, 84 Ill. 430; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Woodward, 41 Md. 208; Lovejoy v. Boston etc. R. Co., 125 Mass. 79; Yeaton v. B. & L. R. Co., 135 Mass. 418; Leary v. Boston etc. R. Co., 139 Mass. 580; Russell v. Tillotson, 140 Mass. 201; Michigan etc. R. Co. v. Smithson, 45 Mich. 212; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101; Patterson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Mich. 125; Smith v. Peninsular Car Works, 60 Mich. 502; McGinnis v. Canada etc. Bridge Co., 49 Mich. 466; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 135; Berger v. St. Paul Minn. & M. R. Co., 39 Minn. 78; Woods v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 39 Minn. 435; Olsen v. McMullen, 34 Minn. 94; Porter v. Hannibal R. Co., 71 Mo. 66; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 44; Laning v. New York etc. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 521; Owen v. New York etc. R. Co., 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 108; Hickey v. Taaffe, 105 N. Y. 26; Mad River etc. R. Co. v. Barber, 5 Ohio St. 541; Walsh v. Oregon Ry. & Nav. Co., 10 Oreg. 250; Pennsylvania etc. R. Co. v. Sentmeyer, 92 Pa. St. 276; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 508; Rummell v. Dilworth, 111 Pa. St. 343; Sykes v. Packer, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 494; Pande v. Reese, 12 W. N. C. (Pa.) 97; Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., consequences upon the master.¹ And this rule applies to minor servants.² But a servant does not, of course, assume the risk of any dangers arising from unsafe or defective methods, surroundings, machinery, or other instrumentalities, unless he has, or may be presumed to have, knowledge or notice thereof.³

76 Pa. St. 390; Kelley v. Silver Spring Bleaching Co., 12 R. I. 112; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Elliott, 1 Cold. (Tenn.) 612; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Fowler, 56 Tex. 452; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 504; H. F. & C. R. Co. v. Conrad, 62 Tex. 627; Strahlendorf v. Rosenthal, 30 Wis. 674; Naylor v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Wis. 661; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 460; Behm v. Armour, 58 Wis. 1; Hobbs v. Stauer, 62 Wis. 108; Noves v. Smith, 28 Vt. 59; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. McKenzie, 81 Va. 71; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 395. And see the following English decisions in the same line: Bartonshill Coal Co. v. Reed, 3 Macq. 266; Priestly v. Fowler, 3 M. & W. 1; Britton v. Great Western Co., L. R., 7 Exch. 130; Assop v. Yates, 2 H. & N. 768; Couch v. Steel, 24 Eng. Law & Eq. 77; Hutchinson v. York etc. R. Co., 5 Exch. 343; Clarke v. Holmes, 7 H. & N. 937; Seymour v. Maddox, 16 Q. B. 326; Griffiths v. Gidlow, 3 H. & N. 648.

1. Walsh v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 27 Minn. 367; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 144.

2. Gartland v. Toledo etc. R. Co., 67 Ill. 498; Pennsylvania Co. v. Lynch, 90 Ill. 333; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Harney, 28 Ind. 28; Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Hammersly, 28 Ind. 371; King v. Boston etc. R. Co., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 112; McGinnis v. Canada etc. Bridge Co., 49 Mich. 466; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 135; Veits v. Toledo etc. R. Co., 55 Mich. 120; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 11; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Elliott, 1 Cold. (Tenn.) 611. But see Hamilton v. Galveston etc. R. Co., 54 Tex. 556; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 528; Fish v. Central Pacific R. Co., 72 Cal. 38; Gilbert v. Guild, 144 Mass. 601; De Graff v. New York etc. R. Co., 76 N. Y. 125; Jones v. Florence Mining Co., 25 Am. L. Reg. 580, 591; Andersson v. Morison, 22 Minn. 274; Reardon v. New York etc. Co., 51 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 134.

3. Clapp v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 36 Minn. 6. See generally Smith v. Peninsular Car Works, 60 Mich. 508; Cook v. St. P. M. & M. R. Co., 34 Minn. 45; Hobbs v. Stauer, 62 Wis. 108; Behm v. Armour (Wis.), 58 Wis. 1; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 407;

6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Frawley, 110 Ind. 13; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308; Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Lempe, 59 Tex. 19; Pittsburg etc. Co. v. Adams, 105 Ind. 151; Cole v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 67 Wis. 272; Lopez v. Central Arizona Mfg. Co., 1 Ariz. 464; Malone v. Hamley, 46 Cal. 409; Sanborn v. Madeira etc. Co., 70 Cal. 261; Wells v. Cole, 9 Colo. 159; Central etc. Co. v. Haslett, 74 Ga. 59; Camp Point Mfg. Co. v. Ballou, 71 Ill. 417; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Eddy, 72 Ill. 138; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Britz, 72 Ill. 257; Chicago R. Co. v. Munroe, 85 Ill. 25; Morris v. Gleason, 4 Ill. App. 395; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Clark, 11 Ill. App. 104; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Simmons, 11 Ill. App. 147. Compare Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 11 Ill. App. 324. Also see Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Lonergan, 118 Ill. 41; Coal Run etc. Co. v. Jones, 19 Ill. App. 365; Umbach v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 83 Ind. 191; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. Stupak, 108 Ind. 1; Kitteringham v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 62 Iowa 285; Heath v. Whitebreast etc. Min. Co., 65 Iowa 737; Perigo v. C. R. I. & P. R. Co., 55 Iowa 326; Money v. Lower View etc. Co., 55 Iowa 671; Wells v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 56 Iowa 520; Mayes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 562; Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 69 Iowa 161; Lane v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69 Iowa 443; Kansas etc. R. Co. v. Peavey, 34 Kan. 472; Sanborn v. Atchinson etc. R. Co., 35 Kan. 292; McQueen v. Central Branch etc. R. Co., 30 Kan. 689; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226; Bogenshutz v. Smith (Ky.), 15 W. Rep. 578; Ladd v. New Bedford R. Co., 119 Mass. 412; Lovejoy v. Boston etc. R. Co., 125 Mass. 79; Pingree v. Leyland, 135 Mass. 398; Clarke v. Soule, 137 Mass. 380; Russell v. Tillotson, 140 Mass. 201; Buzzell v. Laconia Mfg. Co., 48 Me. 113; Davis v. Detroit etc. R. Co., 20 Mich. 205; McGinnis v. Canada etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 466; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 135; Gates v. Southern etc. R. Co., 28 Minn. 110; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 237; Clark v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 28 Minn. 128; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 240; Fraker v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 32 Minn. 54; 15 Am. &

2., Burden of Proving Servant's Knowledge.—The burden of proving that an injured servant had knowledge of an obstruction or defect before an accident is on the employer.¹

3. Latent Defects.—On the other hand, the servant does assume all risk of latent defects in machinery and appliances unknown to the master unless the master was negligent in not discovering the same.² And the question whether or not a defect is discoverable is for the jury.³ Where defects are not open and obvious, the experience, or lack of it, of the employee should be considered in determining whether or not he should be charged with knowledge of

Eng. R. Cas. 256; Russell v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 32 Minn. 230; Olson v. McMullen, 39 Minn. 94; Kelley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 35 Minn. 490; Laning v. New York etc. R. Co., 39 N. Y. 521; Monaghan v. New York etc. R. Co., 45 Hun (N. Y.) 118; Bahn v. Hanemeyer, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 557; Shaw v. Sheldon, 103 N. Y. 667; Mad River etc. R. Co. v. Barber, 5 Ohio St. 541; Wells v. Coe, 9 Colo. 159; Shaffer v. Haish, 110 Pa. St. 575; Rummell v. Dillworth, 111 Pa. St. 343; Wanamaker v. Burke, 111 Pa. St. 425; Drew v. Gaylord Coal Co. (Pa.), 1886, 4 Atl. Rep. 214; Brassman v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 113 Pa. St. 491.

And it may be observed in this connection, that it is one thing to be aware of defects in the instrumentalities or plan furnished by the master for the performance of his services, and another thing to know or appreciate the risks resulting or which may follow from such defects. The mere fact that the servant knows the defects, may not charge him with contributory negligence or the assumption of the risks growing out of them. The question is, did he know, or ought he to have known, in the exercise of ordinary common sense and prudence, that the risks, and not merely the defects, existed. Cook v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 34 Minn. 45; Russell v. Minn. etc. R. Co., 32 Minn. 230.

Acquaintance with Machinery for Ten or Fifteen Months.—The fact that the plaintiff worked habitually with machinery in question for ten or fifteen months is competent evidence from which a jury may infer that plaintiff was acquainted with its dangerous character, but it is not conclusive. McDade v. Washington etc. R. Co., 5 Mackey (D. C.) 144; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 325.

1. Hullehan v. Green Bay etc. R. Co.,

68 Wis. 520; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 322. See Wells v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 56 Iowa 520; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243.

2. Ballou v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 257; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480; Wedgwood v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 41 Wis. 478; Smith v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 520; Morrison v. Phillips etc. Cons. Co., 44 Wis. 405; Steffen v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 46 Wis. 265; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Toy, 91 Ill. 474; East St. Louis etc. Packing Co. v. Hightower, 92 Ill. 139; DeGraff v. New York etc. R. Co., 76 N. Y. 125; Warner v. Erie etc. R. Co., 39 N. Y. 468.

Cause of Accident Uncertain.—D, plaintiff's intestate, was an engineer in the service of defendant, who was operating a railroad; while running a train D's engine was derailed, and he received injuries causing his death. In an action to recover damages, plaintiff's evidence tended to show that the track was defective at the place of derailment; the evidence upon this point was conflicting. Defendant proved without dispute that the flange of one of the wheels of the locomotive was broken at the time of the accident, and that the fracture was due to an undiscoverable flaw. The court refused a motion to dismiss the complaint, and left it to the jury to determine whether the derailment was caused by the defects in the track or the breaking of the wheel, charging them that if the death of D was caused by the latter plaintiff could not recover. Held, no error. Durkin v. Sharp, 88 N. Y. 225.

3. Rummell v. Dillworth, 111 Pa. St. 343; Bunnell v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 29 Minn. 305; Leahy v. Southern Pacific R. Co., 65 Cal. 150; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 230; Baker v. Alleghany etc. R. Co., 95 Pa. St. 211; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 141; 40 Am. Rep. 634.

them, and of the dangers arising therefrom; and the question is one of fact for the jury and not one of law for the court.¹ And so likewise is the question as to whether or not the defect was such an one as threatened the safety of the employee.²

Where plaintiff's right of action depends upon his ignorance of certain latent conditions, the complaint need not aver such ignorance, but, in order to escape liability, defendant must aver and prove knowledge on plaintiff's part.³

4. Master's Business Methods.—Furthermore the servant takes the risk of the master's mode of conducting his business, though a safer one might be followed, if the servant fully knows the risk and continues to work.⁴ But a single instance, or any number of instances (not amounting to a custom or mode of doing business), of culpable negligence of the master, will not cast upon the servant the risk of subsequent or other similar acts of negligence.⁵ Nor is a servant bound to investigate for himself a department of work with which he has nothing to do, and to set up his judgment against that of his master as to the safety of appliances in use.⁶

5. Test as to Liability.—A servant is not necessarily chargeable in remaining in the master's employment, with having assumed dangers incident to the carrying on of the business, if the danger or risk is not such that, as a prudent man, he is bound not to assume them, and to refuse to continue in the service.⁷

6. Servant Remaining at Work Without Complaint.—When a servant employed by a railroad company plainly perceives the risks

1. Silliman v. Marsden, 9 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 639; Mayes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 562; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 527.

2. Thorpe v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 89 Mo. 652.

3. Cole v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Wis. 272; Porter v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 66; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 44.

4. Hewitt v. Flint etc. R. Co., 67 Mich. 61; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 249; Kelley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Wis. 74; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 469; Naylor v. Chicago etc., 53 Wis. 661; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 460; Behm v. Armour, 58 Wis. 1.

Dangerous Premises.—Gen. St. Ky., ch. 7, § 3, provides that if the life of any person is lost by the wilful neglect of any other person or corporation, or of their agents or servants, punitive damages may be recovered therefor. Held, that where a servant is killed in working on dangerous premises, furnished by the master, and he knew the condition of the premises, and continued to use them without objection, the master is not liable, as he is not guilty of wilful neglect. Needham v. Louisville etc. R. Co. (Ky.), 1887, 11 S. W. Rep. 306.

5. Sherman v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 34 Minn. 259.

6. Devlin v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 545; Moran v. Harris, 63 Ga. 390; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 524.

7. Thorpe v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 89 Mo. 650.

Defective Track.—So held with reference to an engineer's continuing to run over a defective track. Devlin v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 545; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 524. And see Mayes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 562; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 527; Flynn v. Kansas City etc. R. Co., 78 Mo. 195; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 23.

Defective Boiler.—Servant using an engine with defective boiler, in obedience to requirements of officer, does not necessarily assume risk of employment, although he knows of defect, where same is not so gross but that with proper skill and care the engine might be safely used. Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 68.

which he runs, and nevertheless remains performing the same services without complaint and without suggesting how his employment could be made less hazardous, he will be deemed to have undertaken to run the risks incident thereto.¹

1. Davis v. Detroit etc. R. Co., 20 Mich. 105; McMillan v. Saratoga etc. R. Co., 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 449; Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389; Crutchfield v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 76 N. Car. 320; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Jewell, 46 Ill. 99; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Eddy, 72 Ill. 138; Green v. Coates Street etc. R. Co. v. Bresmer, 97 Pa. St. 103; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 647; Covey v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 86 Mo. 635; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 382; Naylor v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Wis.), 53 Wis. 661; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 460; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Myers, 55 Tex. 110; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 114; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Orr, 84 Ind. 50; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; Umbach v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 83 Ind. 191; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 98; Sweeney v. Central Pacific R. Co., 57 Cal. 15; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 151; Rains v. St. L. etc. R. Co. (Mo.), 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 610; Phila. R. Co. v. Hughes (Pa.), 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 348.

In Virginia, however, this doctrine is criticized and apparently not accepted. Richmond etc. R. Co. v. Norment, 84 Va. 167.

Risks Assumed by Employee--Defective Roadbed and Track.—Servant riding on a gravel train is deemed to consent to and accept risk incident to such train and side tracks. Rosenbaum v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 38 Minn. 173; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274. See Meloy v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Iowa, 1888); 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 358.

Belated Train.—Section man on hand car killed by passenger train behind time held to have assumed risk. Railway Co. v. Leech, 41 Ohio St. 388.

Lateness of Preceding Train.—Where by the rules of a railroad company an engineer is required to approach stations with great care, and is not entitled to notice that a preceding train is late, he must be presumed to have incurred the hazard and risk involved as an incident of the employment. Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Neer, 26 Ill. App. 356.

Extra Trains.—Repair man injured while on hand car, by being run over by extra train run without any warning, held to have assumed risk. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Wachter, 60 Md. 395. And see Stricker's Case, 51 Md. 47;

Woodward's Case, 41 Md. 298; Wonder's Case, 32 Md. 420; Woody v. R. Co., L. R., 2 Ex. Div. 389; McGrath v. New York etc. R. Co., 14 R. I. 357; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 5; Olsen v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 38 Minn. 117; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 386.

But in another case it appeared that plaintiff alleged that her intestate, who was employed by the defendant railroad company as a section hand, was directed, along with others with whom he was working, by a special order, to go to a certain place and repair a portion of defendant's track; that, while proceeding to the designated place on a hand car, they were met near a curve by a wild train running at a high rate of speed, of which no notice had been sent out, and whose approach was not indicated by any signals; and that a collision resulted, in which the intestate was injured. Held, that as the intestate had been assigned to a special duty by a special order, the danger resulting from the running of the wild train in the manner alleged was not one of the ordinary risks of the service which he assumed, and that the facts stated by plaintiff constituted a cause of action. Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Long, 112 Ind. 166; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138.

Lack of Push Pole Socket.—Plaintiff's intestate and a fellow servant, employees of defendant railroad company, in obeying an order, adjusted a "push pole" from the corner of a tender to the corner of a car on a parallel track, for the purpose of pushing the car, but as the engine started one end of the pole slipped, throwing intestate under the wheels, whereby he was killed. Held, that plaintiff could not recover on the ground that defendant was negligent in not supplying the corners of the tender and car with "sockets" in which to place the pole, when plaintiff's evidence showed that such "sockets" were a new invention, not in common use; that their absence was obvious to intestate, and that he had been in defendant's employ in the same capacity several years, the presumption being that he knew that the "sockets" were not used by the defendant when he entered its service. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Jackson (Va.), 1888. S. S. E. Rep. 370.

Voluntary and Unnecessary Riding on Train.—A servant of a railway company, employed by the month to watch its ties along the road, to prevent their destruction, went in obedience to orders from his employer to procure a deed in favor of the company, and voluntarily got on its train, and after performing the duty was voluntarily returning on its train, when it was thrown from the track and the employee injured. Held, the company was not liable. Dallas v. Gulf etc. R. Co., 61 Tex. 196; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 575.

Engine Step of Unusual Height.—A brakeman assumes the risk of injury from using the step of an engine known by him to be higher than is usually the case. New York etc. R. Co. v. Lyons, 119 Pa. St. 324.

Dilapidated Track—Track Repairers.—Laborers on a railroad, who are repairing the track, take all the risk incident to its dilapidated condition. Brick v. Rochester etc. R. Co., 98 N. Y. 211; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 605; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Schertle, 97 Pa. St. 450.

Curves in Track.—Brakemen and other persons employed by a railroad company within the freight stations and yards of the company, when they accept the employment assume the risks arising from the nature of the curves existing in the track. Tuttle v. Detroit etc. R. Co., 122 U. S. 189; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 216.

Defective Steam Cock.—A fireman assumes the risk incident to the possible bursting of a steam cock having no defect, the same occurring through his letting steam into pipes containing water, known by him to be a dangerous operation. Linch v. Sagamore Mfg. Co., 143 Mass. 206. See Russell v. Tillitson, 140 Mass. 201; Taylor v. Carew Mfg. Co. 140 Mass. 150; Leary v. Boston etc. R. Co., 139 Mass. 580.

Defect in Boiler.—It was laid down in another case that although the explosion of a boiler was not caused by the fault of the deceased, yet if he was aware that the boiler was defective in those particulars which caused it to explode, there could be no recovery, even though the deceased might have exercised the greatest care to prevent the explosion, or to have kept out of reach of its injurious effects. Morris v. Gleason, 1 Ill. App. 510; Compare Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 68.

Roller in Railway Shops.—Where plaintiff's hand was crushed under a roller which he had seen worked for a long time and had worked himself for a month, and where the danger was apparent to the senses, and no skill beyond that possessed by plaintiff was necessary to avoid it, it was held that he could not recover of his employer for the injury. Berger v. St. P. etc. R. Co., 39 Minn. 78.

Throwing of Mail Bags—Station Hands.—Station hands take the risk of injury from throwing mail bags into moving trains. Coolbroth v. Maine etc. R. Co., 77 Me. 165; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 599.

Laboring at night without lantern by a night watchman in a freight yard who is aware of dangers he encounters. Risk of injury held to be assumed. Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Watson, 114 Ind. 20; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 314.

Unusual Use of Platform in Night Time.—Where a watchman in a railroad yard uses a platform appropriated to the transfer of freight for the purpose of running along at night in the dark, he does so at his own risk. Hamilton v. Richmond etc. R. Co. (Ga.) 1889; 9 S. E. Rep. 670.

A car repairer under a car was killed by another car switched on same track. The company had failed to provide him with a flag for danger signal. He had worked for several weeks without a flag. Held, that he had assumed the risk. O'Rourke v. Union Pacific R. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 189; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 19; Campbell v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.), 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 427. Compare Luebke v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 59 Wis. 127; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 183; North Chicago Rolling Mill Co. v. Johnson, 114 Ill. 244; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. Lavalley, 36 Ohio St. 221; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 549; Vose v. Lancashire R. Co., 2 Hurl. & N. 728; Wedgewood v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 41 Wis. 483; Bessex v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 45 Wis. 477; Smith v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 526.

Sleeping in Round House.—A railroad employee going to sleep in a round house takes the risk of being injured and cannot recover if run over, while so sleeping. Price v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 77 Mo. 508; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 168. See Keegan v. Kavanaugh, 62 Mo. 232; Porter v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 67.

Falling of Coal from Tender.—A railroad track walker, who knew that coal was customarily overloaded on tenders, must be deemed to have assumed the risk of injury by the fall of a piece. Schultz v. Chicago etc. R. Co. 67 Wis. 616.

Open Waterway and Switches.—Where a section hand, while pushing a hand car under orders from the foreman, fell into a waterway, of which he was not specially warned, and which was properly constructed, it was held that the risk was incident to the employment. Koontz v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 65 Iowa 224; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 85; Couch v. Charlotte etc. R. Co., 22 S. Car. 557; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 331. So held also in cases of servant falling into open ditches. Deforest v. Jewett, 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 495; Gibson v. Erie R. Co., 63 N. Y. 449.

Overturning of Engine "Bucking" Snow.—A fireman was killed by the overturning of an engine engaged in "bucking" snow. Held, that it was a risk incident to his employment. Bryant v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 66 Ga. 305; 55 Am. Rep. 275; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 593. See in the same line Naylor v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Wis. 661; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 460; Howland v. Milwaukee etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 226; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 578; Morse v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 30 Minn. 465; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 168.

Banks of Snow by Side of Track Left by Plough.—The being struck by snow banks left along the side of a railway track by a snow plough is a risk assumed by a railway brakeman. Dowell v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 62 Iowa 629; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 153; Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 69 Iowa 161; Piquegno v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 52 Mich. 40; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 210.

Improper Use of Side Track.—From the way and manner in which the side tracks are used with the knowledge of and without complaint from the train men. Hewett v. Flint etc. R. Co., 67 Mich. 61; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 249.

Double Headers.—And a person who takes service with a railway company that uses double headers assumes all risks incident to such use. Hawk v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.), 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 268.

Formation of Ice on Car.—Injury caused by the formation of ice on a car is a risk assumed by a railway employee. O'Bannon v. Louisville etc. R. Co. (Ky.), 1888; 6 S. W. Rep. 434; Adkins v. Atlanta etc. R. Co. (S. Car.), 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 281.

Cattle Upon Track.—Encountering cattle upon the track. Sweeney v. Central Pacific R. Co., 57 Cal. 16; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 151; Patton v. Central Iowa etc. R. Co., 73 Iowa 306.

Trains Upon Adjacent Track.—A track laborer, who, to avoid a passing train, steps from one track to another instead of to the side of the track, assumes the risk of injury from trains on the other track. Shea v. Pa. R. Co. (Pa.), 11 Cent. Rep. 769.

Unblocked Frogs and Rails.—Railway employees held to assume risk of. Wilson v. Winona etc. R. Co., 37 Minn. 326; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 244. And see Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. McCormick, 74 Ind. 440; Rush v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 36 Kan. 129; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 484; Haas v. Buffalo etc. R. Co., 40 Hun (N. Y.) 145; Mayes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Ga. 563; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 527; Carroll v. Penna. Coal Co. (Pa.), 1888, 15 Atl. Rep. 688.

But it has been held that whether or not it is the custom or mode of doing business of the defendant to leave frogs unprotected, so that its employees might be presumed to know that such was the custom or mode of doing business, and by continuing in the employment, to have taken on themselves the risk incident to that way of doing it, is a question for the jury. Sherman v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 34 Minn. 259.

Plaintiff's husband, a yard master, owing to the fact that a guard rail in defendant's yards was unlocked, caught his foot, was run down by the train and killed. It was held that the jury must determine whether, at the time, having knowledge of the absence of the block to the said guard rail, the deceased was acting as a prudent man would under similar circumstances, and the knowledge of the deceased of the unsafe condition of the guard rail, if it was unsafe, would not defeat a recovery, if it was not so dangerous as to threaten immediate injury, or if he might have reasonably supposed that he could safely work about it by the use of care, and caution, and that he did use all the care incident to the situation in which he was placed. Huhn v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 92 Mo. 440; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 221; Snow v. Housatonic R. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.) 441; Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389; Stoddard v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 65 Mo. 514; Dewlin v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 545; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 524; Colorado etc. R. Co. v. Ogden, 3.

Colo. 500; Losure v. Graniteville Mfg. Co., 18 S. Car. 276; Perigo v. Chicago R. Co., 55 Iowa 386; Hawley v. Northern Central R. Co., 82 N. Y. 370; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248.

Knowledge of inexperienced brakeman of danger resulting from absence of blocks is question of fact for the jury. Mayes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 527; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 527.

If brakeman has waived right to recover for negligence of company in not blocking rails, such waiver must be pleaded as a defence or it cannot be relied on. Mayes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 563; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 527.

Being Run Down While Cleaning Ash Pan of Engine.—A fireman was killed while cleaning the ash pan of his engine, being run into by another; held, that his administrator could not recover. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Conkling, 15 Ill. App. 157.

Switches of a Certain Color.—A railroad employee assumes such risk as may be incident to switches painted green rather than red. Naylor v. New York etc. R. Co. (N. Y.), 33 Fed. Rep. 801.

Handling Freight.—Train hands assume the risk of injury from handling heavy freight. Walsh v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 27 Minn. 367; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 144.

Handling of Cars Out of Elevator.—A man employed about an elevator by a railroad company, to handle cars which it is the custom to run unattended out of the elevator and on the tracks, cannot recover for an injury by a collision of two cars running alone on the track, which he is trying to prevent. Kelley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Wis. 74; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 469.

Excavating Earth.—A servant injured while digging a well cannot recover. Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Lempe (Tex.), 59 Tex. 19; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 201. Compare Mulcairus v. Janesville, 67 Wis. 24. A laborer employed to wheel earth along the edge of a bank is presumed to know the danger and take all risks. Olson v. McMullen, 34 Minn. 94; Rasmussen's Admr. v. C. R. I. & P. R. Co., 65 Iowa 236; Walsh v. St. P. & D. R. Co., 27 Minn. 367.

A servant engaged in excavating earth assumes the risk of an embankment giving way. Simmons v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 110 Ill. 340; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 50.

A workman engaged in excavating a tunnel was injured by landslide. Held, that he could not recover of his employer, although he was ordered there by a foreman, who also knew of the danger. Anderson v. Winston, 31 Fed. Rep. 528.

Where a laborer, shovelling dirt, stood between the tail of his cart and the edge of a bank, and owing to a defect in a hook in the harness, the horse got his head cramped, which made him back, forcing the laborer over the bank, it was held that on no theory could the master be charged with liability. Kerrigan v. Hart, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 389.

Removal of Form from Oven.—Plaintiff was employed by defendant to remove the sand or "form" from a large oven recently built by defendant's lessor. The oven fell in, injuring plaintiff. There was no evidence of knowledge on defendant's part of the dangerous condition of the oven, and there was nothing charging defendant with negligence in not possessing knowledge. Held, that a verdict for plaintiff must be set aside. Nason v. West, 78 Me. 253. See Griffiths v. London etc. Co., 12 Q. B. Div. 495; 13 Q. B. Div. 259.

Running Engine Backward.—Fireman taking employment with knowledge of custom; no recovery for death caused by. Kuhns v. Wisconsin etc. Co., 70 Iowa 561. Distinguishing Mayes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 563; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 527.

Removal of Damaged Cars to Shop.—Employee engaged in, assumes risk of injury. Flannagan v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 50 Wis. 462; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 150; Watson v. Houston etc. R. Co., 58 Tex. 434; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 213; Fraker v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 32 Minn. 54; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 256.

A railroad company is not liable to its employee for injuries received by him while running a defective engine to a machine shop for repair, if he knows of the defect which made repair necessary. When the employee is not chargeable with the knowledge of such defect, the question of negligence in the use of the defective engine is for the jury. Houston etc. R. Co. v. O'Hare, 64 Tex. 600; Yeaton v. Boston etc. R. Co., 135 Mass. 418; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253.

Removal of Cars for Inspection.—Company held not liable for injury to servant removing train of unloaded cars for inspection when acting under orders of foreman. Flannagan v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 50 Wis. 462; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 150.

Running of Trains Reversed.—Trackman injured by, held to have assumed risk. Kennedy v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (Pa.) 1889; 17 Atl. Rep. 7.

Structure Dangerously Near Track.—A servant knowing of its existence assumes risk of injury by oil house within eight inches of a railroad track. Kelley v. Baltimore etc. R. Co. (Pa.) 1887, 11 Atl. Rep. 659. Or lumber piled near the track. Gaffney v. New York etc. R. Co., 15 R. I. 456; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265.

Where the defendant's neglect consisted in the erection and maintenance of a dangerous structure obvious to the senses long before the accident, it was held that it was not liable, whether the structure could have been differently built or not. Rains v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 164; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 610. Following Nelson v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 68 Mo. 593.

The danger of being struck by a signal post known by a railroad engineer to exist, is a risk incident to his employment. Lovejoy v. Boston etc. R. Co., 125 Mass. 79.

And likewise in case of a projecting awning. Clark v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 28 Minn. 128; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 240. Or projecting water pipe. Wilson v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 85 Ala. 269; Baylor v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 40 N. J. L. 23. Or a projecting roof. Gibson v. Erie R. Co., 63 N. Y. 449; 23 Am. Rep. 552. See Dorsey v. Philipps etc. Construction Co., 42 Wis. 583.

Overhead Bridges.—A railroad employee injured by an over headbridge known by him to be too low, cannot recover from the company. Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Rowan, 104 Ind. 88; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 390; Wells v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 56 Iowa 520; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243; Riley v. Connecticut River R. Co., 135 Mass. 292; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Stricker, 51 Md. 47; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 181; Illick v. Flint etc. R. Co., 67 Mich. 632; Baylor v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 40 N. J. L. 20; Owen v. New York etc. R. Co., 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 108; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Sentemeyer, 92 Pa. St. 276; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 508; Brossman v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 113 Pa. St. 490; 57 Am. Rep. 479. Compare Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Wright, 115 Ind. 378; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Corp. Cas. 370; St.

Louis etc. R. Co. v. Irwin, 37 Kan. 701. And see Goff v. Norfolk etc. R. Co. (Va.), 36 Fed. Rep. 299; Hooper v. Columbia etc. R. Co., 21 S. Car. 541; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 433; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Wright, 115 Ind. 378; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 370; Brossman v. Lehigh etc. R. Co., 113 Pa. St. 490; 57 Am. Rep. 479. Ballou v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 257; 51 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Schertle, 97 Pa. St. 450; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 158; Wells v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 56 Iowa 520; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243.

In an action by a brakeman for damages for personal injuries caused by coming in contact with a highway bridge across the railroad track while he was riding on the top of a freight car. Code Ala. 1886, section 1144, requiring railroad companies "to blow the whistle or ring the bell at short intervals at least one-fourth of a mile before reaching a public road crossing," had no bearing on the case, and it was error to consider it. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Hall (Ala.), 1889; 6 So. Rep. 277.

Jerk of Train.—When a gravel or repair train is managed as usual, and the jerk complained of is only such as would be expected to occur on a train of that character in doing its work, the employees engaged on it, or attached to it, take the risk as incident to the service, and if injured by the jerk cannot recover of the company. Central R. Co. v. Sims (Ga.), 1888; 7 So. E. Rep. 176; Youll v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 66 Iowa 346; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 589.

Negligent Operation of Train—Conductors.—Where the conductor in charge of a train knew every circumstance which tended to render the operation of his train hazardous, and if, in his judgment, it was not being operated in the safest manner, he had full authority to direct that such changes be made in the manner of its operation as would render it safe. Held, that if by its negligent operation he was killed, his administrator could not recover against the railroad company. Lane v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69 Iowa 443. Compare Dewey v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 31 Iowa 373.

Transportation of Explosives—Dangers Incident to.—Are assumed by servants. Foley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 48 Mich. 622; 42 Am. Rep. 481; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 161.

Defective Dump Car.—Where a section master on a railroad was injured by using a dump car, which it was necessary for him to use in the prosecution of his work, after he knew that it was out of order and in a dangerous condition, although he had been ordered by his superior to get another car, it was held that he could not recover. Pleasants v. R. R. Co., 95 N. Car. 195.

Hand Car.—Servant using hand car handle, the walking beam of which was broken, and injured thereby, held to have assumed risk of injury resulting therefrom. New York etc. R. Co. v. Powers, 98 N. Y. 274; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 609.

Fireman on Locomotive After Twenty Trips.—A person of mature age and experience, who has been engaged in the employment of fireman on a locomotive twenty times for three hours at a time, is presumed to know the danger of the employment. Leary v. Boston etc. R. Co., 139 Mass. 580; 52 Am. Rep. 733.

Well in Cellar.—An employee was engaged at some work in a dark cellar. He knew that there was in the cellar a deep well hole, but did not know whether or not it was protected by a railing. While being ordered by the foreman to "hurry the work," he fell into the well hole and was injured. In an action against his master for the damages, it was held that he had taken the risk of injury from the presence of the well hole, and that he was guilty of such a want of care as would prevent him from recovering. Taylor v. Carrow Mfg. Co., 140 Mass. 150; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 277.

Hole in Floor.—If there is a hole in the floor over which the servant passes in the dark, and it is not guarded or lighted, and he knows its condition, but chooses to pass in the dark, he does so at his own risk. Seymour v. Maddox, 16 Q. B. 326. See Hoffman v. Clough (Pa.), 23 W. N. C. 399; Murphey v. Greeley, 146 Mass. 96.

Open Hatchway.—A servant whose duty is partly to keep hatchways closed, and who enters the employment knowing that such hatchways are unguarded, assumes the risk incident thereto. Gleason v. Excelsior Mfg. Co., 94 Mo. 201. See Taylor v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 86 Mo. 458; Price v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 77 Mo. 508; Porter v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 66.

Laundry Machinery.—And it was held in a New York case that a servant accustomed to using machinery cannot recover for an injury received while putting in order a machine she was using by putting her hand too near rollers which she knew to be revolving 3,000 times a minute. Caffey v. Chapal, 2 N. Y. Supp. 648.

Uncovered Coupling in Rolling Mill.—Employee in mill held to have assumed risk of injury from. Shaw v. Sheldon, 3 N. Y. St. Rep. 679.

Rolling Mill Machinery.—Where the person injured was twenty-eight years of age, had performed many times the work in doing which he suffered the injury complained of, and was familiar with the machine and the danger, attending such work on the dangerous side is apparent on ordinary observation, the plaintiff must be taken to have assumed the risk, even if he acted by order of the foreman, and even if such risk was never explained to him. Kean v. Detroit etc. Rolling Mills, 66 Mich. 277.

Unnecessary obstruction in tannery, causing servant to fall into vat. Servant held to have assumed risk. Balle v. Detroit Leather Co. (Mich.), 1889, 41 N. W. Rep. 216.

Defective Ladder.—Employee knowing of, but injured thereby, is not entitled to recover. Jenney Electric Light & Power Co. v. Murphy, 115 Ind. 566.

Defective Telephone Pole.—In an action for injuries sustained by plaintiff by the breaking of a post on which he was sent to work, where it is a disputed question whether plaintiff was or was not the employee whose duty it was to serve as inspector for defendant, a telephone company, it is error to charge that plaintiff had a right to assume that "the pole upon which he was ordered to work . . . was safe and suitable," and that it was not his duty "to inspect the pole." Cumberland Telegraph etc. Co. v. Loomis, 87 Tenn. 504.

Uncovered Saw.—The risk from an uncovered saw projecting over its frame and partly across a narrow passageway, over which a servant is obliged to go in the performance of his duties being apparent, is assumed by the servant in accepting and remaining in the service. Stephenson v. Duncan, 73 Wis. 404.

Upsetting of Derrick.—A laborer, employed by a city to work on a sewer, was injured by the upsetting of a derrick, one of the legs of which he was holding, and which was being used to draw out the earth by means of power applied by a steam engine, the planks which protected the sides of the trench excavated for the sewer. Held, that the risk was assumed. Joyce v. Worcester, 140 Mass. 245; citing Pingree v. Leyland, 135 Mass. 398; Yeaton v. Boston etc. R. Co., 135 Mass. 418; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253.

Stamping Machine in Shingle Mill.—A boy about fourteen years old was employed in a tin shingle factory, and was injured by having his hand caught under the stamping machine. Held, that no recovery could be had for the injury, it appearing that the machine was not dangerous when properly used. O'Keefe v. Thorn, 16 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 1889, 737.

Shaft in Emery Mill.—Engineer caught in and injured, held not entitled to recover, having assumed risk of employment. Goodnow v. Walpole Emery Mills, 146 Mass. 261.

Defective machinery in charcoal works, consisting of uneven track on which carriage ran, employee injured having knowledge of defect, held to have assumed risk. Yates v. McCuillough Iron Co., 69 Md. 370.

Janitor in Planing Mill.—An intelligent servant of sixteen had his hand mutilated by the jointer in a planing mill. The danger was obvious, and the injury would not have happened had he not placed his hand on the table without looking. He had worked there for two weeks only, and was without previous experience with machinery. Held, that a verdict for defendant was properly directed. Palmer v. Harrison, 57 Mich. 182.

Familiar Machine Near Point of Labor.—The plaintiff had been in the employment of the defendant for two months when he was caught in a machine and injured. It was shown that he had passed the machine many times, that there was in it no peculiar or secret source of danger, and the machine was such that anyone seeing it must have seen the danger of coming in contact with it. Held, that there was no sufficient evidence of negligence on the part of the defendant to render it liable. Ciriack v. Merchants Woolen Co., 146 Mass. 182. And see Wuotilla v. Duluth Lumber Co., 33 Minn. 551; Russell v. Minn. & St. L. R. Co., 32 Minn. 230; Cook v. St. P. M. & M. R. Co., 34 Minn. 45; Smith v. Peninsular Car Works (Mich.), 27 N. W. Rep. 662; Colbert v. Rankin, 72 Cal. 197.

Slippery Floor in Printing Office.—An employer is not liable where an employee slips upon the floor and is injured by falling against the unprotected cog wheel of a press. Clark v. Barnes, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 389; Loftus v. Union Ferry Co., 84 N. Y. 455; Dougan v. Champlain Transportation Co., 56 N. Y. 1.

Exposed Cogs—Planing Machine.—A workman caught his sleeve in the exposed cogs of an ordinary planing machine and hurt his hand. He had run the machine for only a day or two, but he had worked within a few feet of it for two years or more, and among similar machinery for twenty-five years. Held, that the injury was accidental, and the workman, who must have been familiar with the machine, could not recover on the ground that his employer was negligent in setting him to work at it without having the cogs covered. Schroeder v. Michigan Car Co., 56 Mich. 132.

Defective winch on board vessel. Servant injured while using, being a machinist by trade and having knowledge of condition of winch, held to have assumed risk. Purgree v. Leyland, 135 Mass. 398.

Blasting Stone.—A workman engaged in blasting at a quarry assumes the risk of his employment, and cannot maintain an action against his employer for an injury sustained in consequence of his obeying an order of another workman who superintends the blasting. Kenney v. Shaw, 133 Mass. 501.

Explosion of Powder in Mine.—The owners of a mine are not liable for an injury sustained by a miner from the explosion of a piece of giant powder which he struck with his pick while digging among loose rock, where it was impossible for them to have guarded against the accident, and neither the foreman of the mine nor those engaged with him could have known of the presence of the powder in the rock. Kelley v. Cable Co., 7 Mont. 70.

Hostler—Vicious Horse.—A person employed as a hostler, who, knowing that a certain horse is vicious, attempts to groom him without using the strap ordinarily used to prevent kicking, cannot recover damages for injuries suffered through such neglect. Green v. Coates Street etc. R. Co., Bresmer, 97 Pa. St. 103.

Unrailed Platform.—A servant assumes risk incident to unrailed platform. Moulton v. Gage, 138 Mass. 390.

Improper Scaffold.—A owned a building on which B agreed, for a lump sum, to trim certain stone work, and to furnish his own scaffold, but as he did not do so, A allowed him to use one which had been hung by painters over a rotten cornice. It gave way and injured B. The court held that A was not liable: Matthes v. Kerrigan, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 431.

Incompetent Foreman.—If a workman knows that a foreman under whom he works is incompetent, but continues to work under him, making no complaint to the master, he must be held to have assumed the risk arising therefrom. Hatt v. Nay, 144 Mass. 186; Davis v. Detroit etc. R. Co., 20 Mich. 105; McDermott v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 285; 28 Am. & Eng. 528. As to running risk of injuries from incompetent fellow servants, see FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 7, p. 851.

Iron Covers to Ash Pit.—Plaintiff was employed in taking cinders and ashes from a pit under a boiler and furnace. The pit was covered with two loose plates of iron, each weighing from two to three hundred pounds. He placed one of the plates on its edge and propped it on the outside with a stick. The plate fell, injuring him. He had worked there six weeks, and knew of the condition of the plate covers, and had full opportunity to know of any defects which would render the plate thus secured dangerous. Held, that he could not recover for the injury. Brown v. Brown, 71 Tex. 355.

Defective Span Rope.—It has been held that the putting up of an imperfect span rope was not such a failure of duty on the part of a ship master in the furnishing of a ship as would give a right of action against a ship, defendant having full opportunity to discover the same. The Aglesemd, 9 Ben. (U. S. C. Ct.) 203. And see Coughtry v. Globe Works, cited in Wharton on Neg., § 441; Loop v. Litchfield, 42 N. Y. 351.

Truckman Acting as Fireman.—A truckman acting as fireman, while standing on foot board of engine waiting for it to slacken speed so that he could get off, was jolted off and injured. Held, that the injury was caused by one of the risks assumed by plaintiff. Leary v. Boston etc. R. Co., 139 Mass. 580; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 383.

Absence of Footboards.—Where the plaintiff accepted service as a brakeman, knowing that defendant did not usually provide footboards over open cars loaded with machinery, and it not appearing to be defendant's custom to so arrange such cars in a train so that brakemen would have to pass over them, it was held that plaintiff did not assume that risk. Hosic v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 75 Iowa 683.

Defective Frog.—It has been held that although a railroad switchman knew that the point of a frog was broken, yet such knowledge would not bar recovery on his part if he did not know that the plate was broken, and would not have been injured but for the broken plate, provided a person of ordinary care and prudence would have worked about the frog with a broken point. The fact of the plate being out of repair, having caused the plaintiff to stumble, was the proximate cause of the injury. Waldheir v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 37.

Iron Maul.—It was laid down in a Tennessee case that a railroad company is liable for injury to servant caused by patent defect in iron maul furnished to him by section boss. Guthrie v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 11 Lea (Tenn.) 372; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 209.

Running of Construction Train Off Track.—The running of a construction train off the track by reason of the roughness of the road is not one of the risks assumed by a railroad laborer. Trask v. California etc. R. Co., 63 Cal. 96; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 192.

An injury to a civil engineer employed by a railroad company in laying track on a new line of road, caused by the derailment of a train while passing over the road to the front of operations, owing to a defective roadbed, is not a risk incident to his employment, and he is entitled to recover. Meloy v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Iowa), 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 358.

A detective having nothing to do with those branches of the company's service does not assume risks of the service assumed by an ordinary employee. Pool v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Wis. 657; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 332; 56 Wis. 227; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 360.

Rotten Ties.—Rotten railroad ties are not risks assumed by a railroad brakeman. Houston etc. R. Co. v. McNamara, 59 Tex. 255.

Dangerous Premises.—Where a boy of nineteen, whose ordinary work was spiking rails and shovelling, was sent to the second story of a building, to shovel ashes, the building having been badly burned the night before. The

7. Cause of Injury—Question for Jury.—The question in cases of this character as to the cause of the injury is for the jury.¹

8. Servant and Master Not on Same Footing as to Duty of Inspection.—While the servant assumes the ordinary risks of his employment, and, as a general rule, such extraordinary risks as he may knowingly and voluntarily see fit to encounter, he does not stand upon the same footing as the master, as respects the matter of care in inspecting and investigating the risks to which he may be exposed.²

floor fell and he was injured. It was held that this was not a risk incident to his employment. Cook v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 34 Minn. 45.

Untimbered Mine.—A coal miner is not precluded from recovering for an injury caused by the falling of a rock from the roof of the mine, simply because he knew the general nature of the roof, and that there were no timbers in the entry. Kelley v. Wilson, 21 Ill. App. 141.

Insecurity of Building in Process of Construction.—A carpenter working on the roof of a building in process of construction is not bound to inspect the condition of the walls, and does not take the risk of the building falling in consequence of their insufficiency. Giles v. Diamond State etc. Co. (Del.) 1887, 8 Atl. Rep. 368.

Uncovered Machinery.—Where the machinery in a flour mill was extensive and complicated, and certain parts of it shown to be dangerous; had been covered to plaintiff's knowledge, but from some of which such covering had been removed, and for several days before he was injured had been running in that condition, in an action to recover damages for injuries caused by such machinery, it was held that he could not be presumed to have assumed the risk, it not being clear that in the exercise of ordinary prudence he must necessarily have seen or ought to have known the condition of the machinery and the risk to which he was exposed. Craver v. Christian, 36 Minn. 413.

Obvious Defects—No Threat of Injury. A servant does not assume risk of defects in machinery or premises, the same not seeming to be fraught with danger. Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Lempe, 59 Tex. 19; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 204.

Boiler.—Servant using engine with defective boiler in obedience to requirement of officer does not necessarily assume risk, though he knows of defect, when same is not so gross but engine may be safely used. Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 68. See Kansas City R. Co. v. Flynn, 78 Mo. 195; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 23.

1. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Bluhm, 109 Ill. 20; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 87.

Derricks.—As to injuries from defective derricks, see Holden v. Fitchburg R. Co., 129 Mass. 268; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; Derrenbacher v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 87 N. Y. 636; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 624; Baker v. Alleghany etc. R. Co., 95 Pa. St. 211; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 141; Union Pacific R. Co. v. Fray, 31 Kan. 739; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 158.

2. Cook v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 34 Minn. 45.

Switch Stand.—The peril arising from a switch stand, which extends to within nine or ten inches of a passing car, is not one assumed by a brakeman on entering the employment of a railroad company. Pedcock v. Union Pacific R. Co. (Utah), 1888, 19 Pac. Rep. 191. See Boss v. North Pacific R. Co., 5 Dak. 308; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Welch, 52 Ill. 183.

Hoisting Apparatus in Mine.—A workman in a mine does not assume risks incident to defects in the hoisting apparatus used for lowering him to the place where he works. Moran v. Harris, 63 Iowa 390.

Unsuitable Rails and Defective Road-bed.—An engineer of a railroad, which is in general use, although having knowledge that the rails of the track were old, light and well worn, is not bound to pursue the enquiry, and to determine for himself and at his own peril whether the road is or is not fit for use. Devlin v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 545; and see Clapp v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 36 Minn. 6; Waldheir v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 514; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 146. Neither is the conductor of a train required to know of all defects and obstructions that may

9. Assumption that Machinery Is Suitable.—The servant has the right to assume that the machinery and implements furnished him by his master are safe and suitable for the business engaged in.¹

10. Master's Duty to Protect Servant.—Although an employee assumes all the hazards reasonably incident to the service in which he engages, he has a right to rely on the fact, when placed in a situation of danger, where engrossing duties are required of him, that the employer will not, without proper warning, subject him to other perils unknown to the employee, and from which the work exacted necessarily distracts his attention.² And furthermore that the usual precautions against accidents will be taken.³ exist on the road over which he runs. St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Irwin, 37 Kan. 701.

Hole in Floor—Due Care.—In an action against a builder for negligence, by reason of which a subcontractor was injured, evidence was introduced to show the customs and usages of builders in reference to openings in the floors of said buildings while in the process of construction. Held, that such evidence was admissible upon the question whether the injured party was in due care at the time of the injury. Murphy v. Greeley, 146 Mass. 196.

An employee operating a carding machine does not assume the risks arising from an opening in the floor of which he had no knowledge. Hoffman v. Clough (Pa.), 23 W. N. C. 399.

1. Nowd v. Mississippi R. Co., 50 Miss. 178; Speed v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 303; Fort Wayne etc. R. Co. v. Gildersleeve, 33 Mich. 133; Cone v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 81 N. Y. 206; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 57; Bradbury v. Goodwin, 108 Ind. 286; Bogenschutz v. Smith, 84 Ky. 330.

Defective Brake.—A brakeman having been employed but one day in a railroad yard, when, in consequence of a defective brake, he received the injury for which suit was brought. Held, that he could not be charged with negligence if the defect was not patent to the eye, or if he was not informed of it by others; that he had a right, in the absence of such information, to assume that the brakes were in a condition in which it was safe to mount the car and set them when ordered to do so by the yardmaster. Northern Pacific etc. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 407; Smith v. Car Works, 60 Mich. 508.

Telephone Pole.—In an action for injuries sustained by plaintiff, by the breaking of a post, on which he was sent to work, where it was a disputed question whether plaintiff was or was not the employee whose duty it was to serve as inspector for defendant, a telephone company, it was held to be error to charge that "plaintiff had a right to assume that the pole upon which he was ordered to work . . . was safe and suitable," and that it was not his duty to inspect the same. Cumberland etc. Co. v. Loomis, 87 Tenn. 504.

2. Coombs v. New Bedford Cordage Co., 102 Mass. 572; Atlas Engine Works v. Randall, 100 Ind. 293; 50 Am. Rep. 798; Haley v. Case, 142 Mass. 316.

Backing Train Without Notice.—A laborer ordered to unload a car has a right to assume that other cars will not be backed down on the car while he is at work, without notice to him. North Chicago Rolling Mill Co. v. Johnson, 114 Ill. 57.

3. Schultz v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 44 Wis. 638; and see Ditberner v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 47 Wis. 138; Chicago R. Co. v. Sweeney, 52 Ill. 325; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Donahue, 75 Ill. 106.

In an action for damages by a servant against his master, it appeared that plaintiff had his leg broken by reason of a chain breaking, which was worked with a ratchet; that while he was working the ratchet a noise was heard, made by the chain; that the work stopped, and again the same noise was heard, and the ratchet again stopped; that defendant enquired, "What is the matter?" and was answered, "The chain is going to break;" that defendant assured him there was no danger, and told him to "go ahead on the chain;" that he did so, and it broke, and plaintiff was injured. Held, that plaintiff could re-

11. Dangers Subsequently Arising.—The ground cannot be taken that an employee who brings suit to recover for injuries suffered in the course of his employment, assumes only those risks that existed at the beginning of his employment; he also must take notice of all risks which arise during the course of the employment, of which he had knowledge or was bound to have knowledge.¹

12. Work Outside Scope of Employment.—The servant's implied assumption of risks, which accompanies and is a part of the contract of hiring, is confined to the particular work and class of work for which he is employed; and if the master orders him to work temporarily in another department of the general business where the work is of such a different nature and character that it cannot be said to be within the scope of the employment, and where he is associated with a different class of employees, he will not, by obeying such orders, necessarily thereby assume the risks incident to the work.²

13. Using Defective Machinery After Promise of Repair.—Although a servant does not assume the risk of defective machinery, by remaining a reasonable time in the employment, after the master has promised to repair the same, yet the contrary is the case if he remains after such period has elapsed. The question of reasonable time is one of fact for the jury.³

cover, as it was defendant's duty, when he saw 'that plaintiff was fearing the chain would break; before ordering him to proceed, to have examined the chain, to see if it was safe. Hoffman v. Dickinson, 31 W. Va. 142.

1. Sowden v. Idaho Quartz Mining Co., 55 Cal. 443.

Should an employee discover that the service has become more hazardous than usual, or than he had anticipated, by reason of defective machinery, etc., the general rule is that he must quit the service or assume the risks to which he is exposed. Missouri Furnace Co. v. Abend, 107 Ill. 51; Smith v. Sellars, 40 La. An. 527.

2. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Adams, 105 Ind. 151.

3. Stephenson v. Duncan, 73 Wis. 404; Union Mfg. Co. v. Morrissey (Ohio), 22 Am. L. Reg. 574; Hough v. Texas etc. R. Co., 100 U. S. 225; Conroy v. Vulcan Iron Works, 62 Mo. 35; Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389; Le Clair v. First Div. St. P. & P. R. Co., 20 Minn. 9; Brabbitts v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 38 Wis. 289; Holmes v. Worthington, 2 Fos. & Fin. 533; Holmes v. Clarke, 6 H. & N. 937; Clarke v. Holmes, 7 H. & N. 937; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Duffey, 35 Ark.

602; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 637; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Kane (Tex. 1883), 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 218; Greenleaf v. Illinois etc. R. Co., 29 Iowa 14; Kroy v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 32 Iowa 357; Greenleaf v. Dubuque R. Co., 33 Iowa 52; Way v. Illinois etc. R. Co., 40 Iowa 341; Lumley v. Caswell, 47 Iowa 159; Snow v. Housatonic R. Co., 8 Allen (Mass.) 441; Reed v. Northfield, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 94; Whittaker v. Boylston, 97 Mass. 273; I. & St. L. R. Co. v. Watson, 114 Ind. 21; Parody v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 205; Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Donnelly, 70 Tex. 371; Greene v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 31 Minn. 248; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 214; Conroy v. Vulcan Iron Works, 6 Mo. App. 102; Shearman & Redf. on Negligence, § 96.

Ten Days' Delay Unreasonable.—In an action by a servant against the master for injuries sustained from defective machinery, a complaint alleging that ten days prior to the accident the servant requested the master to repair the defect, giving notice that he would not remain in the service unless the repairs were made at once, and that the master then promised to make such repairs, and thus induced the servant to remain in his service until the time of the ac-

But where the instrumentality with which the servant is required to perform service is so glaringly and palpably dangerous that a man of common prudence would not use it, and with the utmost care and skill danger is still imminent, the master cannot be held responsible for the damage resulting therefrom, although the servant may have notified him of the danger, and he may have promised to repair it.¹ But where a servant, in obedience to the requirement of his master, incurs the risk of machinery which, though dangerous, is not so much so as to threaten immediate injury, or where it is reasonably probable it may be safely used by extraordinary caution or skill, he is not thus made guilty of concurrent negligence, and the master is liable for a resulting accident.² And where a person operating a machine complains to his employer that it is unsafe, and the employer repairs it, and tells his employee that he has done so, it is not negligence for such employee to continue at work at the machine, although it afterwards appears that the repairs were not substantial.³

14. Servant Ordered Into Place of Danger.—But if a master or superior orders an inferior into a situation of danger, and he obeys and is injured, the law will not charge him with assumption of the risk, unless the danger was so glaring that no prudent man would have entered into it.⁴

15. Employee Voluntarily Assuming Place More Dangerous than Necessary.—An employee leaving his own place of work for one more dangerous, in violation of the directions of his employer, can recover nothing if injured after such change.⁵

cident, fails to show that the servant was injured within a reasonable period for the performance of the master's promise, and shows no cause of action, where it further alleges that the master had ample time and opportunity, and was able to repair the defect, between the time of the promise and that of the injury, but neglected to do so. Stephenson v. Duncan, 13 Wis. 404; Huddleston v. Lowell Machine Shop, 106 Mass. 282; Ford v. Fitchburg R. Co., 110 Mass. 240; Laning v. New York etc. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 521; Crutchfield v. Richmond R. Co., 78 N. Car. 300; Hoey v. Dublin etc. R. Co., 18 W. R. 930; Couch v. Steel, 3 E. & B. 402; Jones v. Roach, 9 Jones & Sp. 248.

1. Conroy v. Vulcan Iron Works, 62 Mo. 35. See Patterson v. P. & C. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389; McQueen v. Central Branch etc. R. Co., 30 Kan. 689; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226; East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 685; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 224.

2. Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389.

The facts in the above case were as follows: Plaintiff, who was a conductor employed by a railroad company, notified the superintendent, and also the foreman of the railroad, of the dangerous condition of a switch thereon. The superintendent and foreman promised to repair the same, but directed plaintiff to use it, observing care. While carefully using it an accident was caused by the switch, whereon plaintiff was injured. Held, that defendant was liable.

3. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. McKee, 37 Kan. 592; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Kane (Tex. 1883), 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 218.

4. Miller v. Union Pacific R. Co., 12 Fed. Rep. 600; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 614; McDermott v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 285; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 258.

5. Brown v. Byroads, 47 Ind. 435; Cunningham v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 882; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 217; Wormell v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 79 Me. 397; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 272; Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Conlan, 101

16. Accident Before Completion of Repairs.—Where, however, an employer, discovering defects in a piece of machinery, takes steps to remedy the same, but an accident occurs before the repairs are made, the question of the employer's negligence is for the jury.¹

17. Risks Attendant on Shipmaster's Orders.—In maritime service, the master of the vessel has necessarily absolute authority, and the seamen are bound to obey him, especially in emergencies; and a seaman who is ordered to do a particularly hazardous act, and does it after protesting, does not take the risk of injury, but the vessel owner is liable to him.²

18. Appliance of Which Servant Has Optional Use.—If an employer furnishes a machine or implement to an employee, the defects of which, and the dangers resulting from its use, are apparent, and leaves it to the option of such employee whether he will use it or not, and injury results to him from its use, the employer will not be liable.³

19. Inappropriate and Defective Tool.—And likewise of unauthorized use of an inappropriate tool;⁴ or where the employee uses a defective tool, by order of employer, there being no other.⁵

20. Labor Undertaken through Fear of Dismissal.—If a servant of full age and ordinary intelligence, upon being required by his master to perform other duties more dangerous and complicated than those embraced in his original hiring, undertakes the same, knowing their dangerous character, although unwillingly and from Ill. 93; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Eubanks, 48 Ark. 460; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 176.

1. Murphy v. Crossan, 98 Pa. St. 495.

Shovellers in Vessel's Hold.—

Where shovellers in the hold of a vessel inform their foreman that a rope has become weakened so that its further use is dangerous to them, and material and appliances for replacing it with a safe rope are provided by the employer, the question whether it was the duty of the shovellers or their foreman or of the employer to replace the weak rope with a safe one is a question of fact for the jury. Daley v. Boston etc. R. Co. (Mass.), 147 Mass. 101; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 299. See Johnson v. Boat Co., 135 Mass. 209.

2. Thompson v. Hermann, 47 Wis. 602; Parsons on Maritime Law 463; Abbott on Shipping 177; The Palledo, 3 Ware (U. S. C. Ct.) 321; United States v. Smith, 3 Wash. (C. C.) 525; Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Story (C. C.) 343; Flanders on Shipping, § 73; United States v. Hunt, 2 Story (C. C.) 125; United States v. Taylor, 2 Sumn. (U. S. C. Ct.) 588.

3. International etc. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 64 Tex. 632.

Scaffold.—Thus where an employee was directed to do a certain piece of work, and on the next day, while at work, fell with the scaffold upon which he stood, it was held that as he could have done the work without going upon the scaffold, and had observed, about three hours before its fall, its insecure condition, he could not recover damages from his employer. Nolan v. Schickle, 69 Mo. 336.

4. Moran v. Brown, 27 Mo. App. 487.

5. Baker v. Western etc. R. Co., 68 Ga. 699. See Greenleaf v. Dubuque etc. R. Co., 33 Iowa 52; Quaid v. Cornwall, 13 Bush (Ky.) 601; Snow v. Housatonic etc. R. Co., 8 Allen 441; Dale v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 63 Mo. 455; Sweeney v. Berlin etc. Envelope Co., 101 N. Y. 520; 54 Am. Rep. 722; Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389; Clarke v. Holmes, 7 Hurlst. & N. 937; East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Duffield, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 63; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 35; Greenleaf v. Dubuque etc. R. Co., 33 Iowa 52.

fear of losing his employment, and is injured, he cannot maintain an action against the master for the injury.¹

21. Accidental Injury from Unexpected Cause.—Likewise where accidental injury results to a servant from an unexpected cause arising in the course of his employment.²

22. Action Authorized by Statute.—One who voluntarily assumes a risk, thereby waives the provisions of a statute made for his protection.³

XXIV. WORK OUTSIDE SCOPE OF SERVANT'S EMPLOYMENT.—No recovery can be had by an employee while in performance of a service not within the scope of his duty, if his opportunity for observing the danger was equal to that of the employer.⁴

And if a servant of ordinary intelligence undertakes, although unwillingly, for fear of dismissal, duties of greater danger than contemplated by the contract of service, and is injured by reason of ignorance or inexperience, he can maintain no action against the master.⁵ But such servant can show what he said on being ordered

1. Sweeney v. Berlin Envelope Co., 101 N. Y. 520; Woodley v. Metropolitan R. Co., 46 L. J., Exch. 521.

Order with Oath.—Likewise where servant was ordered "with an oath." Williams v. Churchill, 137 Mass. 243.

Order to Hurry.—So held where injury was caused by order to hurry. Taylor v. Carew Mfg. Co., 140 Mass. 150. Compare East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Duffield, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 63; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 35.

2. Lindall v. Bode, 72 Cal. 245; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. McCormick, 74 Ind. 440; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 660; Richards v. Rough, 53 Mich. 212; Rodman v. Michigan etc. R. Co., 55 Mich. 57; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 521; Hickey v. Toaffe, 105 N. Y. 26.

3. Spiva v. Osage Coal & Mining Co., 88 Mo. 68.

And see the following late cases involving the principle discussed in this section:

Buckley v. Gutta Percha Mfg. Co., 113 N. Y. 540; Kern v. De Castro etc. Sugar Refining Co., 5 N. Y. Supp. 548; Arabello v. San Antonio etc. R. Co. (Tex.), 1889, 11 S. Rep. 913; Pederson v. Rushford, 41 Minn. 289; Metzer v. Peninsular Car Co., 76 Mich. 94; Brazil etc. Coal Co. v. Gaffney, 119 Ind. 455; Tudor Iron Works v. Weber, 129 Ill. 535; South West etc. Imp. Co. v. Andrews (Va.), 1889, 9 S. E. Rep. 1015; Oszkoscil v. Eagle Pencil Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 501; White v. Kennan (Ga.), 1889, 9 S. E. Rep. 1082; Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Williams (Tex.), 12 S. W. Rep. 172; Seese v. North Pacific R. Co., 39

Fed. Rep. 487; Carroll v. East Tenn. etc. R. Co., 82 Ga. 452; Goodrich v. New York etc. R. Co., 116 N. Y. 308; Fisher v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Mich.), 43 N. W. Rep. 926; Myers v. Hudson Iron Co. (Mass.), 22 N. E. Rep. 631; Ireland v. Gardner, 7 N. Y. Supp. 609; Pullutro v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 7 N. Y. Supp. 510; Smith v. Irwin, 51 N. J. L. 507; Smith v. Winona etc. R. Co. (Minn.), 43 N. W. Rep. 968; Dartmouth Spinning Co. v. Achard (Ga.), 10 S. E. Rep. 449; Carey v. Sellers (La.), 6 So. Rep. 813; Madau v. White River Lumber Co. (Wis.), 43 N. W. Rep. 1135.

4. Houston etc. R. Co. v. Fowler, 56 Tex. 452; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 504; Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Lempe, 59 Tex. 19; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 201; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Adams, 105 Ind. 151; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408; Warnell v. Maine Central R. Co., 79 Me. 397; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 272; Atlanta etc. R. Co. v. Ray, 70 Ga. 674; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 286; East Line etc. R. Co. v. Scott, 68 Tex. 694; Hawley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 71 Iowa 717.

5. Leary v. Boston etc. R. Co., 139 Mass. 580; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 383.

Employee Told to Do the Work or Lie Off.—The fact that plaintiff objected to the work, and defendant's foreman told him he could either work or lie off, cannot make defendant liable on the ground that plaintiff was put on different work from that which he was employed to do. Prentiss v. Kent Furniture Mfg. Co., 63 Mich. 478.

But the scope of a servant's duties are to be defined by what he was employed to perform; by what, with the knowledge and approval of the employer, he actually does perform, rather than by the mere verbal designation of his position. Rummell v. Dillworth, 111 Pa. St. 343; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 262. And see Buzzell v. Mfg. Co., 48 Me. 113; Cahill v. Hilton, 106 N. Y. 512; Keene v. Rolling Mills Co. (Mich.), 33 N. W. Rep. 295; Thompson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 564; May v. Ontario etc. R. Co., 10 Ont. 70; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 337.

Change of Brakeman from Freight to Passenger Train.—The change of a brakeman's employment from a freight to a passenger train is a favorable one. Adkins v. Atlanta etc. R. Co., 27 S. Car. 71.

Employee of Electric Light Company.—Plaintiff, an employee of defendant, whose duty it was to go up to the top of defendant's electric light tower and trim the light, was injured by the breaking of the cable of an elevator, in which he was ascending one of the towers. The evidence tended to show that, as plaintiff and the overseer were about to ascend, another employee informed them that the lights in that tower were already trimmed, but the overseer directed plaintiff to go up, notwithstanding. Held, that the court properly refused to charge that if plaintiff's duty was only to trim lights, and the lights in the tower in question had already been trimmed, he was not in the performance of any duty when the accident occurred, and could not recover. Weiden v. Brush Electric Light Co., 73 Mich. 268.

Laborer Is Ordered to Couple Cars.—It was observed in the case of Union Pac. R. Co. v. Ford, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 558, in the supreme court of the United States, "If the order had been given to a person of mature years, who had not engaged to do such work, although enjoined to obey the directions of his superior, it might with some plausibility be argued that he should have disobeyed it, or he must have known that its execution was attended with danger, or at any rate, if he chose to obey, that he took upon himself the risks incident to the service." Many authorities, however, favor a somewhat contrary doctrine. See Lalor v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 52 Ill. 401.

Or Act as Brakeman—Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bayfield, 37 Mich. 205.

Or to Close Elevated Damper.—And also where a common laborer employed in loading and unloading cars is injured while attempting to close a damper twenty feet above stationary boilers by order of his foreman. Broadwick v. Detroit Union Depot Co., 56 Mich. 261.

Or Work on Dangerous Machine.—And likewise where a common laborer was set to work upon a dangerous machine. O'Connor v. Adams, 120 Mass. 427. And see Dowling v. Allen, 74 Mo. 13; East Line etc. R. Co. v. Scott, 68 Tex. 694.

Or Section Hand to Act as Brakeman.—So it was held where a section hand was ordered out on a construction train and was injured while acting as a brakeman, the duties of which position were unfamiliar to him. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Adams, 105 Ind. 151; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408.

Or Passenger Brakeman to Act as Switchman.—And likewise where a brakeman on a passenger train was injured while doing switch work by order of the division superintendent. Jones v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 573.

Fireman Ordered to Work Engine.—Where a conductor, in the absence of the engineer, ordered the fireman to work the engine, and the fireman was competent, but received an injury, it was held that the company was not liable. Brazil v. W. etc. R. Co., 93 N. Car. 313.

Machinist Coupling Cars.—Warmell v. Maine etc. R. Co., 79 Me. 397; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 272.

Stationary Engine—Fireman Throwing on Belt.—And where a person, employed as the fireman to run a stationary engine, was injured while assisting, by order of the engineer, to throw on a belt used in operating a pump. Mann v. Oriental Print Works, 11 R. I. 152.

Cook of tug handling bowline and injured thereby held not entitled to maintain action against owner. Williams v. Churchill, 137 Mass. 243; 50 Am. Rep. 304.

Ordering Boy to Adjust Belt Amongst Dangerous Machinery.—F, a boy of tender years, had been engaged by a company conducting a machine shop, as a workman or helper under the superintendence of C, and required to obey his orders; after being employed for a few months, chiefly in receiving and putting away mouldings, as they came from a moulding machine, the boy, by the order of C, ascended a ladder to a great height from the floor, among rapidly re-to perform it, and that he protested against the requirements.¹ When it comes to extraordinary danger, it is clear that a servant must not be exposed to the same without notice.² But if the employee was in the midst of it, and had opportunity to observe the danger, damages cannot be recovered on the ground that the company knew the danger, and the employee did not.³

Where a servant is injured while temporarily engaged in more hazardous work than that for which he was employed, the question of negligence must depend on facts and circumstances of each particular case.⁴ And furthermore the mere fact that the servant was an infant does not give cause of action against the master for setting him at dangerous work.⁵ But an agreement on the servant's part to obey rules does not warrant an employer in assigning him duty outside the scope of his employment.⁶

XXV. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—(See vol. 4, p. 58)—1. General Rule.—One who, by his negligence, has brought an injury upon himself cannot recover damages for it. Such is the rule of the civil and of the common law. A plaintiff in such cases is entitled to no relief. The question is whether the plaintiff so far contributed to the misfortune by his own negligence or want of ordinary care and caution, that, but therefor, the misfortune would not have happened. If so there can be no recovery.⁷

volving and dangerous machinery, for the purpose of adjusting a belt by which a portion of the machinery was moved, and while engaged in the endeavor to execute the order had his arm torn from his body. The jury by a special verdict found that this order was not within the scope of the boy's employment, but was within that of C, that the order was not a reasonable one, and that a prudent man would not have asked the boy to execute it. Held, that the company was liable in damages for the injuries. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fort, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 553.

1. Jones v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 573; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 221.

2. Mich. Central R. Co. v. Smithson, 45 Mich. 212; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101.

3. Houston etc. R. Co. v. Fowler, 56 Tex. 452; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 504.

4. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Adams, 105 Ind. 151; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408. And see Cole v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 71 Wis. 114; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274; Warmell v. Maine Central R. Co., 79 Me. 597; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 272; Kaffer v. R. Co. (Ind.), 1 West. Rep. 287; Cummings v. Collins, 61 Mo. 520; Newlett v. R. Co., 67 Mo. 239; Brown v. Byroads, 47 Ind. 435; McGlynn v.

Brodie, 31 Cal. 376; Hawk v. R. Co. (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 459; Russell v. Tillotson, 140 Mass. 201; Atlas Engine Works v. Randall, 100 Ind. 293; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fort, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 554; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bayfield, 37 Mich. 205; Dowling v. Allen, 74 Mo. 13.

Evidence of Actual Duties.—In an action by a servant injured while engaged in dangerous work for which he had not been hired, the actual duties of such servant may be shown. Jones v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 573; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 221.

5. McGinnis v. Canada etc. Bridge Co., 49 Mich. 466; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 135.

6. Jones v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 573; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 221.

7. Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 443; Central R. & Banking Co. v. Roach, 64 Ga. 635; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; Callahan v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 11 Fed. Rep. 536; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 594; East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Rush, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 145; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 502.

Minors.—And furthermore contributory negligence on the part of a minor will defeat his right to recover for an injury, as in the case of an adult. At-

Where, therefore, both the master and the seryant have equal knowledge of the danger of the service required and of the means of avoiding it, and the servant, while engaged in the performance of the work he is set to do, is injured by reason of his own inattention and negligence, the master is not liable.¹ Likewise where the servant is not specifically commanded as to the time and manner in which the work may be done, but is told to do a particular thing, and has such discretion that he can have some control over the means, time and manner of doing the work, then, unless he does it in a way and with the means which will be safest, he is guilty of contributory negligence.²

2. Servant Must Have Been in Fault.—But a plaintiff's right to recover is not affected by his having contributed to his injury unless he was in fault in so doing.³ las Engine Works v. Randall, 100 Ind. 293; 50 Am. Rep. 798; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Harney, 28 Ind. 28; Umbach v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 83 Ind. 891; Brazil etc. Co. v. Cain, 98 Ind. 282.

1. The Atlas Engine Works v. Randall, 100 Ind. 293; 50 Am. Rep. 798.

2. English v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 906; North Pacific R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642; Johnson v. Bruner, 61 Pa. St. 58.

3. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Eysler, 2 Colo. 141; Davies v. Mann, 10 M. & W. 545; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 35 Md. 32; Shearman & Redfield on Neg., § 28; Fero v. Buffalo etc. R. Co., 22 N. Y. 215; Cook v. Transportation Co., 1 Den. (N. Y.) 91.

Illustrations in the Negative.—Employee in foundry held free from contributory negligence in carrying molten metal over frozen ground. Smith v. Peninsular Car Works, 60 Mich. 501; or in opening oven door, where he was injured by the falling of weights hung upon defective hook. Spicer v. South Boston Iron Co., 138 Mass. 426.

Railroad employee under charge of master mechanic held not guilty of contributory negligence in using piece of timber as master mechanic directed, where he was not in a position to see the danger, and the master mechanic was. Douglass v. Texas etc. R. Co., 63 Tex. 564. And see Galveston R. Co. v. Drew, 59 Tex. 11; Wall v. T. & P. R. Co., 4 Tex. L. Rev. No. 3, p. 38; Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 5 Tex. L. Rev. 115; Tex. & P. R. Co. v. Murphy, 46 Tex. 356.

A brakeman, obeying an unusual signal from the engineer to set the brakes, necessarily attempted a passage, which he knew to be dangerous, over an intervening car, which the conductor had told him he need not go over, and which it would have been unnecessary for him to pass over if the brake on another car had been in working order, and fell and was injured. Held, that his knowledge of the danger of his attempt ought not to defeat his recovery, since it was his duty to obey orders. Hosie v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 75 Iowa 683.

Construction Laborer—Use of Hand Car.—A construction laborer returning upon hand car from work at later hour than usual, by order of foreman, is not guilty of contributory negligence. McKune v. California etc. R. Co., 66 Cal. 302; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 589.

Engineer Running Behind Time.—An engineer injured while running behind schedule time, at a speed greater than was ordinarily allowable, but which was, according to the practice of the company, excusable in belated trains, can recover. Pennsylvania Co. v. Roney, 89 Ind. 453; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 223.

Running Contrary to Rules.—Also in running train contrary to rules of new time table or first trip after it takes effect. Nelson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 60 Wis. 320; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391.

Speed in Running Over Switches.—Engineer running over switch at rate of 18 to 20 miles an hour and injured by derailment of train, held not guilty of contributory negligence. Gulf C. & S. R. Co. v. Pettis, 69 Tex. 689. See East Line etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 65 Tex. 167; Texas etc. R. Co. v. O'Donnell, 58 Tex. 27; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 712.

Engineer Stepping from Engine to Main Track to Get Signal.—In an action against a railroad company for causing the death of plaintiff's husband, it appeared that deceased, an engineer, in defendant's employ, pulled his train in on a switch to clear the main track for a passenger train then due. He could not see to the rear of his train from either side of his cab, on account of obstructions, and at a call from the rear brakeman stepped on the main track and directed the fireman to move the train forward. While standing on the track and looking to the rear of his train, a hand car with section men in it ran over him. The car was run at a very rapid rate of speed when at the depot. The section men could see to and beyond the place where deceased was standing. Held, that deceased was not guilty of contributory negligence in stepping off from the engine upon the main track to get the signals from the brakeman. Barry v. Hannibal etc. R. Co. (Mo.), 11 S. W. Rep. 308. Compare Glenn v. Columbia etc. R. Co.; 21 S. Car. 466.

Conductor Leaving Middle of Train Contrary to Rule.—Where a conductor went forward to give the engineer warning, although the rule required him to remain in the middle of the train, it was held that the error was a reasonable one and that he was not guilty of contributory negligence. Somerset etc. R. Co. v. Galbraith, 109 Pa. St. 32; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 375.

In Use of Defective Ladder.—Richmond etc. R. Co. v. Moore, 78 Va. 93; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 239.

In Mounting Moving Car to Prevent Collision.—Brakeman.—Kelley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 50 Wis. 381; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 65.

Bundle Falling from Hatchway.—Employee struck by while walking beneath it, although knowing that the hatchway was used for that purpose, held not guilty of contributory negligence. Post v. Stockwell, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 28.

Illustrations in the Affirmative.—Engineer Running at High Speed.—The plaintiff, a locomotive engineer in the service of defendant, was running a train over its road immediately after a very heavy storm, which he knew had caused numerous slides and washouts along the whole line of road. He knew that no section men had been along the line after the storm, and that he had to rely on his own watchfulness to guard against danger. He was going around a curve where he knew he would be liable to meet dangerous places, but could not see or detect danger more than 130 feet ahead. He unnecessarily continued at a rate of speed so great that it was impossible for him to stop his train within the distance that he could see a washout, and consequently ran into one and was injured. It was held that plaintiff could not recover, he being guilty of contributory negligence. Sweeney v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 33 Minn. 153; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 302. As to injury arising from act of God see Rodgers v. Central Pacific R. Co., 67 Cal. 606. And see Pennsylvania Co. v. Roney, 89 Ind. 453; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 223.

Where an accident occurred while deceased was running his train over a bridge undergoing repair, it was held that the railroad company could not be held, it not appearing that the accident would have occurred if the train had been running at a proper rate of speed. St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Morgart (Ark.), 1888; 8 S. W. Rep. 179.

An engineer cannot be allowed to recover against the company for injuries received in a collision with another train, where his own train as well as the other was out of time. Georgia etc. R. Co. v. McDade, 59 Ga. 73.

Conductor—Failure to Discover Condition of Cars.—Where the printed rules of a railroad company required each conductor, before moving a train, to inform himself of the condition of the cars composing it, and the conductor failed to do so, and was injured by reason of defective brakes, it was held that he could not recover. Alexander v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 83 Ky. 590.

Failure to Remove Ice from Platform.—The intestate was employed as a car repairer. On the day of the accident he was sent by his foreman to repair a water tank. It stood upon standards eleven or twelve feet high. At the base of the tank was a deck averaging thirty-five inches in width. The work to be done required him to let off the water in the tank and get inside. The intestate let off the water and went to dinner. On coming back he slipped off the deck, which had become covered with ice, and was killed. Held, that as he took no precautions to prevent slipping he was negligent and no recovery could be had. English v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 906.

Car Repairer Not Leaving Signal.—Where two car repairers went under a car, neglecting either to put out a flag, or to put a third man on guard, other cars were switched upon them, killing one of them, held no recovery could be had. Renfro v. Chicago etc. Co., 86 Mo. 302; Hallihan v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 117.

In Failing to Ask Assistance.—A night car repairer, employed to work on cars while on the track, was required to place a draft iron upon a car, which he directed to be switched onto a side track, where it was stopped at the place indicated by him. His assistant was absent, but plaintiff knowing of such absence, and of the condition of the road, started to do the work himself, and in attempting to lift the iron to its place slipped on some ice and was injured. There were other employees near, who were ready to and did assist him when called. Held, that the company was not liable. Way v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 76 Iowa 393; and see Dunlap v. Barney Mfg. Co., 148 Mass. 51; Missouri etc. R. Co. v. McElyea, 71 Tex. 381.

There is a want of ordinary care in the voluntary attempt of an employee of a railroad company, discharging the duties of a helper to a hostler, to get upon a switch engine in motion by the step at the rear right hand side of the cab of the engine, where he had no duty to perform in the cab of the engine, and when a safer place for him to get upon the engine would be the rear footboard, which was used for this purpose by that class to which he belonged. Union Pacific R. Co. v. Estes, 37 Kan. 715.

Mounting Tender.—Plaintiff was a fireman on an engine in defendant's switch yard, and while getting upon the tender he caught hold of a hand hold on it, which, being insecurely fixed, gave way, and he fell to the track and was run over. The engine and tender were moving at the rate of about two miles an hour, the tender in front. There was a step at the cab on the engine intended for the engineer and fireman to get off and on the engine. Held, that the plaintiff, in imprudently mounting the tender at the end approaching him, contrary to the orders of the company, and in failing to wait until the cab step came opposite to him, where he could have entered with safety at the entrance made for his use, was guilty of such contributory negligence as to defeat his right to recover against the railroad company. Murray v. Gulf etc. R. Co. 73 Tex. 2; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 177.

Failure to observe overhead bridge in plain sight by brakeman, who was struck thereby and injured, held to constitute contributory negligence. Stoneback v. Thomas Iron Co. (Pa.), 2 Cent. Rep. 604; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Rowan, 66 Pa. St. 399.

Projecting person beyond side of car constitutes contributory negligence. Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 69 Iowa 161; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Markes, 41 Ark. 542. See Pool v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Wis. 657; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 332; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 439; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Freeman, 36 Ark. 41; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Parkhurst, 36 Ark. 371; Daggett v. Iowa City, 34 Iowa 284; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Hampton, 64 Tex. 427; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 291.

Flying Switch Contrary to Orders.—A railroad employee injured in making a "flying switch" cannot recover in the face of a rule of said company prohibiting such act, he having knowledge thereof. Pilkington v. Gulf etc. R. Co., 70 Tex. 226; Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Ryan, 70 Tex. 56; Reagan v. St. Louis R. Co., 93 Mo. 348; Alexander v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 83 Ky. 590; Greenwald v. Marquette R. Co., 49 Mich. 197; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 133.

Switchman Between Two Tracks.—In the absence of any special circumstances, an experienced switchman, who is proceeding with his customary duties between two tracks, where the observance of care will enable him to perform such duties in safety, cannot be said to be so absorbed in his duty as to exempt him from the necessity of exercising care for his own safety, and his failure to do so constitutes contributory negligence. Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Long, 112 Ind. 167. In illustration of the same principle see Goodfellow v. Boston etc. R. Co., 106 Mass. 461; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. McClaren, 62 Ind. 566; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. Miller, 25 Mich. 274; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Manly, 58 Ill. 300; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Graham, 95 Ind. 286; 48 Am. Rep. 719; Telfer v. Northern R. Co., 30 N. J. L. 188. Beach Cont. Neg. 394; Bresnahan v. Michigan Central R. Co., 49 Mich. 410; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 147.

Handling Machine in a Careless Manner.—In an action for negligently causing the death of plaintiff's intestate, evidence that deceased, while in defendant's employ, was dragging a machine by a portion of it not intended for such purpose, and was moving backward in a stooping posture, and that the machine breaking, deceased fell into an elevator well, guarded as he knew, by only one bar, which was rather high, shows contributory negligence sufficient to prevent a recovery. Rogen v. Morgan's Sons Co., 1 N. Y. Supp. 273.

Jumping from Moving Train.—Plaintiff was one of a gang of laborers working with a gravel train. When the train was about to start, the foreman called out "All aboard," but plaintiff did not hear him. Seeing others getting aboard, however, he jumped on while the train was moving, and the gravel slipping from under him, he fell off and had his arm run over and cut off. It was held that the company was not liable. Novock v. Michigan etc. R. Co., 63 Mich. 121; Martensen v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 60 Iowa 705; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 233.

Volunteer Signalling Train.—A, who was not an employee of defendant railway company, was requested by a watchman to go up the track to a bridge and notify the conductor of an approaching train that there was a broken rail on the track, and being anxious to prevent loss of life A did so, and signalled the train to stop. The conductor stopped his train but started on again, and while the train was running at about four miles an hour, A, fearing that his signal had been misunderstood, attempted to get upon the train to speak to the conductor, but fell off and was injured. It was held that he could not recover. Blair v. Grand Rapids etc. R. Co., 60 Mich. 154; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 430. See in the same line Eason v. Sabine etc. R. Co. (Tex.), 6 Tex. L. Rev. 178; Mayton v. Texas etc. R. Co., 63 Tex. 77; Barstow v. Old Colony R. Co., 143 Mass. 535; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 473.

Day laborer riding on engine pilot is guilty of contributory negligence. Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 95 N. S. 439. Citing Hickey v. Boston etc. R. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 429; Todd v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.) 18; Gavett v. Manchester etc. R. Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 501; Lucas v. New Bedford etc. R. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 64; Ward v. R. Co., 2 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. U. S. 411; Galena etc. R. Co. v. Yarwood, 15 Ill. 468; Doggett v. Illinois etc. R. Co., 34 Iowa 284.

Mounting Moving Engine with Patent Defects.—Rayburn v. Central Iowa R. Co., 74 Iowa 637; Dowell v. Vicks- burg etc. R. Co., 61 Miss. 519; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42.

Unnecessarily Mounting a Boiler.—East Tennessee R. Co. v. Toppins, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 58; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 222.

Failure to Step Off Track to Avoid Injury.—A train hand sent back at night to signal an approaching train, saw it coming, although it had no headlight, but upon its emerging from a curve in a cut he discovered that the engine was very close upon him, and in getting off the track upon which he was standing his foot was caught by the rail, and in extricating his foot his hand was caught by the train and crushed. It was held that the plaintiff's negligence in not stepping from the track sooner would prevent recovery. Glenn v. Columbia etc. R. Co., 21 S. Car. 466; and see Gibbons v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 66 Iowa 231; Myers v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co., 113 Ill. 386; Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Long, 112 Ind. 166; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. McClaren, 62 Ind. 568; Lake Shore R. Co. v. Miller, 25 Mich. 279; St. Louis R. Co. v. Manly, 58 Ill. 300. Black Cont. Neg. 394. Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Graham, 95 Ind. 286; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77; Telfer v. Northern R. Co., 30 N. J. L. 188; Chicago R. Co. v. Sweeney, 52 Ill. 325; Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Butler, 103 Ind. 31; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 262; Schofield v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 114 U. S. 615; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 353; Holland v. Chicago R. Co., 5 McCrary (U. S.), 549.

Where the facts were as follows: A person who had obtained permission from the station agent of a railroad corporation to come to the station for the purpose of learning telegraphy, was warned by the agent not to walk on the railroad track. He left the station to go to a certain point on an errand which he had volunteered to do for the station agent. Knowing that a train was approaching, he walked upon the track with his back toward the direction from which it was coming. He was run down and killed. It was held that he was guilty of such negligence as would prevent recovery. Barstow v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 143 Mass. 535; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 473.

Failure to Leave Hand Car with promptness.—Where the section men in a hand car were ordered by their foreman to abandon their car on account of an approaching train and one of them, being much slower in doing so than the rest, was injured, it was held that he could not recover for injuries suffered. International etc. R. Co. v. Hester, 64 Tex. 401; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 535.

Failure to take precautions to prevent the freezing of limbs by section hand engaged in shovelling snow, held to constitute contributory negligence. Farmer v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Iowa 136.

Keeping Derrick Rope Wet.—Where a servant is employed in operating a derrick, and is with others charged with duty of keeping rope wet, and he fails to do so, whereby it breaks, and he is injured. Union Pacific R. Co. v. Fray, 31 Kan. 739; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 158.

Ignoring Warning of Danger.—Where the evidence showed that plaintiff, engaged in undermining a wall, was warned of the danger, and the accident was caused by his own negligence in stepping on the timber supporting the wall, held, that he had no right of action. Campbell v. Lunsford, 83 Ala. 512.

Plaintiff's intestate was working on a stone by the side of defendant's track, and was warned by defendant's foreman to beware of approaching trains. He got out of the way twice, but the third time remained, through forgetfulness, and the stone was struck by the train and overturned, killing him. Held, that he was guilty of such contributory negligence that he could not recover. Columbus etc. R. Co. v. Bradford, 86 Ala. 575.

Handling of Electrical Apparatus.—Employee of electric light company held guilty of contributory negligence. Piedmont etc. Illuminating Co. v. Patterson (Va.), 1888; 6 So. Rep. 4.

Failure to avoid elevator well hole known by employee in mill to exist constitutes contributory negligence, and there can be no recovery for an injury received by falling into it. Taylor v. Carew Mfg. Co., 143 Mass. 470; Seymour v. Maddox, L. R., 16 Q. B. 326. See Gleason v. Excelsior Mfg. Co., 94 Mo. 201.

Improper Use of Circular Saw.—Plaintiff, a workman at a lumber mill, was ordered by the foreman to fix up a dump car. He took a piece of scantling and proceeded to cut it with a circular saw. In doing so he leaned over, holding the scantling with one hand on each side of the saw; and when the scantling was cut through he fell across the saw, and his arm was cut off.

Held, that he was guilty of contributory negligence, and that a verdict for defendant was properly directed. Lindstrand v. Delta Lumber Co., 94 Mich. 201.

Riding in Engine Cab Contrary to Orders.—A foreman of a crew of wreckers who boards a "wild train" to reach the scene of a wreck, and contrary to regulations rides in an engine cab, is guilty of contributory negligence. Abend Admr. v. Terre Haute etc. R. Co., 111 Ill. 204; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 614.

Riding on Rear Platform of Tender.—Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Greiner, 113 Pa. St. 600; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 397.

Passing around end of freight car unprovided with steps, etc. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Warner, 118 Ill. 538.

Remaining in Dangerous Place.—Coal miner standing on track in shaft and struck by descending car, held not entitled to recover. Woodward Iron Co. v. Jones, 80 Ala. 123.

It was held, in a California case, that an employee in a mining tunnel, who, knowing that the roof of the tunnel was in an unsafe condition at a certain point, while employed in making it safe, sat down under the dangerous point during a suspension of the work and was killed, was guilty of contributory negligence, and that no recovery could be had of the master. Bunt v. Sierra Buttes etc. Min. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 847; citing McGlynn v. Brodie, 31 Cal. 370; Kielley v. Belcher S. Min. Co., 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 502.

Doing a Dangerous and Unnecessary Act.—Where plaintiff had his hand crushed by keeping hold of a wheel in order to stop certain machinery, it not being necessary to do so, yet being safe if he had not kept his hand on longer than was necessary to stop the machine, it was held that plaintiff was plainly guilty of contributory negligence, and the fact that the owner of the machinery had failed to furnish mechanical appliances to stop it did not make him liable. White v. Sharp, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 94.

Going to Sleep When Sent to Watch.—East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Rush, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 145.

Walking into hole in broad daylight. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Wolfe, 80 Ky. 82; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 625.

Falling Through Defective Steps.—Stroble v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 70 Iowa 55; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 14.

3. Recovery Notwithstanding Servant's Negligence.—It is also well settled that a plaintiff may recover, notwithstanding his own negligence exposed him to the injury in question, if the defendant, after becoming aware of the plaintiff's danger, failed to use ordinary care to avoid doing the injury,¹ or wilfully inflicted the damage.²

4. Reasonable Diligence of Employee as to Tools and Machinery.—While a servant must use due diligence in guarding against injury from improper or unsafe tools furnished by his employer, he may rely, to some extent at least, on faithful performance by the master.³

Using Car After Being Ordered to Get Another—Where a section master on a railroad was injured by using a dump car, which it was necessary for him to use in the prosecution of his work, after he knew that it was out of order and in a dangerous condition, although he had been ordered by his superior to get another car, it was held that the injury was the result of his own carelessness, and that he could not recover. Pleasants v. The Railroad, 95 N. Car. 196.

Use of Hand Instead of Stick.—An employer is not liable for injury to an employee who, though familiar with the machinery, used his hand where he should have used a stick. Wetjen v. So. White Lead Co., 5 Mo. App. 597.

Attempt to Board Moving Train.—A servant of a railroad company cannot recover in a suit against the company for injuries received while recklessly attempting to board a moving train, although it is shown that the train was improperly equipped and that some of its appliances were defective. Dowell v. Vicksburg etc. R. Co., 61 Miss. 519; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42.

A brakeman in the employ of a railroad company went to adjust a switch in the dark. According to the rules of the company he should have immediately got upon the train before it started and reported that the switch was all right. He failed to do this, but waited to get upon the train until the same was in motion, when, in endeavoring to do so, he slipped, fell and was injured. It was held that he had been guilty of such contributory negligence as to preclude recovery. Chambers v. Western North Car. R. Co., 91 N. Car. 471. And see Kelley v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 50 Wis. 381; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 65.

Playing with Machinery.—A boy injured while playing with a machine, on which he was not employed, and which he had been cautioned to keep away from, cannot recover. Rock v. Indian Orchard Mills, 142 Mass. 522.

1. Kansas etc. R. Co. v. Cranmer, 4 Colo. 524. See Shearman & Redfield on Neg., § 36; Denver etc. R. Co. v. Olsen, 4 Colo. 239; Schumacher v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 175.

2. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. McCoy (Ky.), 1883; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 278; Beems v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 58 Iowa 150; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 658; Frazer v. South etc. R. Co., 81 Ala. 185; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 565; Smoot v. Mobile etc. R. Co., 67 Ala. 13; Wells v. Coe, 9 Cal. 159; Rowland v. Cannon, 35 Ga. 105; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Patterson, 93 Ill. 270; Pennsylvania Co. v. Hankey, 93 Ill. 580; Ray v. Jeffries (Ky.), 5 S. W. Rep. 867; Coombs v. Purrington, 42 Me. 332; Osborne v. Knox etc. R. Co., 68 Me. 49; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 272; Warmell v. Maine etc. R. Co., 79 Me. 397; Hart v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 94 Mo. 255; Cornwall v. Charlotte etc. R. Co., 97 N. Car. 11; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 7 Bush (Ky.) 235; Digby etc. v. Kenton Iron Co., 8 Bush (Ky.) 166.

Exception to the Rule.—There are exceptions, however, to this rule, as where the person injured, knowing of the neglect of the party charged, voluntarily, with the intention of causing his own injury, places himself where the injury could not be avoided, either before or after the discovery of his condition. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. McCoy (Ky.), 1883; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277.

3. Guthrie v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 11 Lea (Tenn.) 372; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 209.

Conductors should ascertain whether brakes are in proper condition before starting; if he fails to do so, and is injured by defective brake, he cannot recover, though car inspector also failed

5. Negligence Through Terror.—Where an employee, in the course of his employment, finds himself in imminent peril, through the negligence of the employer, and in the terror of the moment adopts an unsafe course exposing him to greater peril, such action on his part will not prevent a recovery.¹

6. Questions for Court and Jury.—Where the facts are undisputed, and only one inference can be drawn from them, it is the duty of the court to decide, as matter of law, whether or not there was negligence.² But where the evidence is conflicting, the duty of discovering the truth devolves upon the jury, the court announcing the legal principles applicable to any state of facts found by them to be true.³

to make examination. Alexander v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 83 Ky. 589; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 458.

1. Central R. Co. v. Roach, 64 Ga. 635; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Gurvey, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 46; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 568; Schall v. Cole, 107 Pa. St. 1; Gumz v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 52 Wis. 672; Schultz v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 44 Wis. 638; Mark v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 30 Minn. 493; Stevenson v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Mo.), 18 Fed. Rep. 493; Lalor v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 52 Ill. 401; Bell v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 72 Mo. 50; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 580.

In an action by a locomotive engineer to recover for the breaking of his arm in attempting to quickly reverse the lever in order to stop the train after the engine had left the track, if plaintiff acted with reasonable skill and prudence in reversing the lever, in view of the haste and sudden emergency in which he was required to act, he did not contribute to his own injury. Knapp v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 71 Iowa 41; following Knapp v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 65 Iowa 91; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 60.

2. Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Watson, 114 Ind. 20. And see Barnes v. Sowden, 119 Pa. St. 53; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Locke, 112 Ind. 404; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Spencer, 98 Ind. 186; 145 Mass. 468; Counsell v. Hall, 14 N. E. Rep. 530; Pleasant v. Raleigh R. Co., 95 N. Car. 195; Herring v. Wilmington etc. R. Co., 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 640; Avera v. Lexton, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 247; Smith v. North Carolina R. Co., 64 N. Car. 238; Anderson v. Steamboat Co., 64 N. Car. 399.

3. Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kean, 65 Md. 394; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 580; Ormsby v. Union Pacific R. Co., 2 McCrary (U. S.) 48; Somerset etc. R.

Co. v. Galbraith, 109 Pa. St. 32; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 375; Colorado Electric Co. v. Lubbers, 11 Colo. 505; Kansas Pacific R. Co. v. Ward, 4 Colo. 30; Kane v. North Cent. R. Co., 128 U. S. 91; Pleasants v. Raleigh etc. R. Co., 95 N. Car. 196; Hatfield v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 61 Iowa 434; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 153; Fink v. Mo. Furnace Co., 16 Mo. App. 61; Kain v. Smith, 89 N. Y. 375. And see Miller v. Union Pacific R. Co. (Colo.), 12 Fed. Rep. 600; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 615; Pringle v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Iowa 613; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 91; Hawley v. North Cent. R. Co., 82 N. Y. 370; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248; Central R. & Banking Co. v. Roach, 64 Ga. 635; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; Houser v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 60 Iowa 230; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500; Meloy v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 358; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. McCandliss, 33 Kan. 366; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 296; Stoher v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 91 Mo. 509; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 229.

Brakeman Killed by Overhead Bridge.

—It appeared that defendant put into its train one car of a different kind and higher than those generally used; that while deceased was standing on said car, whither he had gone in discharge of his duty as brakeman, the train passed under a bridge and defendant was thrown off and killed; that several persons were looking towards him at the time, but gave him no warning, seeming to apprehend no danger. Held, that the questions of negligence and contributory negligence were alike for the jury. Stirk v. Central R. & Banking Co., 79 Ga. 495. And see Clark v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 78 Va. 709; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 78; Riley v. Connecticut etc. R. Co., 135 Mass. 292; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 181.

7. Burden of Proof.—Contributory negligence is purely a matter of defence as to which the burden of proof is on the defendant.¹

8. Proof Necessary to Establish.—The mere fact that an employee has performed work knowing it to be dangerous, does not of itself make him guilty of contributory negligence, but it must appear that he performed that which was dangerous in a negligent manner.² And that such negligence was the proximate cause of the injury complained of.³ And of course such negligence must be that Trainman Ascending Ladder in Car.—In an action for injuries caused by moving a car inside of which plaintiff had ascended by a ladder, it was properly left to the jury to say whether, under the circumstances, plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence in not himself giving notice to those in charge of the train that he was to ascend the ladder. Pierce v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73 Iowa 140.

Walking Over Train—Sudden Jerk.—The act of a servant in walking over a train of flat cars while the same are in motion, or even stepping from one of such cars to another while the train is in motion, is not negligence per se. In an action by him to recover damages for injuries sustained by a fall occasioned by a sudden jerk of the cars, the question of contributory negligence is for the jury. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. McCandless Adm., 33 Kan. 366; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 296. And see G. H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Smith, 59 Tex. 406; Doss v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 59 Mo. 27; Filer v. New York etc. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 47; Georgia R. R. etc. Co. v. McCurdy, 45 Ga. 288; Pa. R. Co. v. Kilgore, 32 Pa. St. 292.

Miner Injured by Descending Car.—The plaintiff, while in the employ of defendant, was passing from a mine pit, on an incline track, upon which was run a "skip car," but which was generally used by the men in passing to and from the pit, it being the most convenient but not the only way, where he was struck by the descending car, which was being lowered, by the foreman's direction, without the usual signal of warning. Held, in an action for the injury received, that the question of plaintiff's contributory negligence was properly submitted to the jury. Luke v. Wheat Min. Co., 71 Mich. 364.

Stepping from Moving Pay Car.—For an employee of a railroad company who had boarded the pay train to receive the amount due him, and, having completed his business, to attempt to alight from the train, which was then moving, is not such contributory negligence per se as will prevent recovery for injuries sustained, and it is for the jury to determine whether such acts should prevent recovery, or only mitigate damages. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Stacker, 86 Tenn. 343.

Killing of Brakeman Through Separation of Train.—Plaintiff's son, an experienced brakeman, when last seen alive, was performing his duty in setting the brakes on a freight car on which he was riding. A minute later, the train having separated at the first coupling in front of him, he was thrown to the ground, run over by the rear end of the train, and killed. Although there was no other evidence bearing on the question of negligence, or of freedom from it, on his part, held, that the court was justified in submitting it to the jury in an action against the company for negligence. Burns v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 69 Iowa 450.

1. Bogenschutz v. Smith, 84 Ky. 330; Cole v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Wis. 272; Whitsett v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Iowa 150; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 336. And see Piquegno v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 52 Mich. 40; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 210.

Where a defendant relies upon such a defence, he must prove it, and in the absence of proof to the contrary, plaintiff must be presumed to have been without fault. Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. McKenzie, 81 Va. 71; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 395.

2. Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Holborn, 84 Ala. 133.

3. Thomp. on Neg. 1151-1157; Cornwall v. Charlotte R. Co., 97 N. Car. 11; Owens v. R. Co., 28 N. Car. 502; Stucke v. Milwaukee etc. R. Co., 9 Wis. 202; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Goss, 17 Wis. 428; Rothe v. Milwaukee etc. R. Co., 21 Wis. 256; Potter v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 21 Wis. 372; Cunningham v. Lyness, 22 Wis. 245; O'Connors v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 94 Mo. 150; Henry v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 495; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 110.

of the plaintiff or of some person for whose acts he is responsible.¹

9. Failure to Look for Hidden Danger.—An inexperienced employee is not precluded by contributory negligence from recovering from an employer for an injury from a hidden danger in machinery.²

10. Knowledge of Danger Not Usually Incident.—In an action growing out of the death of defendant's employee through exposure in defendant's service to a danger not commonly connected with the employment, knowledge of such danger is not to be presumed in proof of contributory negligence, but must be brought home to the deceased.³

11. Slight Want of Care.—A slight want of ordinary care on plaintiff's part will not necessarily prevent a recovery for injuries suffered.⁴ And it is not necessary, in order to enable a party to recover for injuries done to his property caused by the negligence of others, that he should be entirely free from all negligence himself; but if his negligence is slight, and that of the other party is gross, or if his is remote, and that of the other party is the proximate cause of the injury, he may recover.⁵

12. Care Required in Use of Appliances.—While the law requires of an employer a high degree of care in furnishing his workmen with safe tools, it also, in the case of a skilled workman operating with a dangerous tool, requires a correspondingly high degree of care on his part in its use.⁶ Such person is bound to exercise his thinking faculties and give careful attention, and if he fails to do so, and is injured in consequence, he is guilty of contributory negligence, which will prevent his recovery for such injury.⁷

And the proximate-ness or remote-ness of contributory negligence depends rather on the causal connection between plaintiff's act and the result than on their closeness in time. Cunningham v. Lyness, 22 Wis. 245.

1. Stetler v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 46 Wis. 497; Flannagan v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 50 Wis. 462.

2. Dowling v. Allen, 6 Mo. App. 195.

Employee of Oil Company.—A green hand told to wipe a plate attached to a machine, which outwardly indicated no danger, is not guilty of contributory negligence in failing to have examined the machine, and to have discovered the hidden danger. Howard Oil Co. v. Fanner, 56 Tex. 452.

3. Smith v. Peninsular Car Works 60 Mich. 501; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 269; Colbert v. Rankin, 72 Cal. 197.

4. Griffin v. Town of Willow, 43 Wis. 509; Ward v. Milwaukee R. Co., 29 Wis. 144; Dreher v. Fitchburg, 22 Wis. 675; Walker v. Westfield, 39 Vt. 246. Compare Potter v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 21 Wis. 372.

5. Union Pacific R. Co. v. Rollins, 5 Kan. 167; Caulkins v. Mathews, 5 Kan. 191. See in this connection The New World v. King, 16 How. (U. S.) 469; Galena etc. R. Co. v. Jacobs, 20 Ill. 478; Jones on Bail, 5, 7, 8.

6. Wormell v. Maine Central R. Co., 79 Me. 397; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 272; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 4 Ill. App. 262; Cornwall v. R. Co., 97 N. Car. 11.

Laborer in Woolen Factory—Defective Card.—It cannot be said, as a matter of law, that a servant was not in the exercise of due care because two days before he had seen the fan of a carding machine running in the wrong direction, as it did when he was injured. White v. Nonantum Worsted Co., 144 Mass. 276; Taylor v. Carew Mfg. Co., 143 Mass. 470; Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Conlan, 101 Ill. 93; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243; Wabash R. Co. v. Elliott, 98 Ill. 481; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 651.

7. Stone v. O. C. Mfg. Co., 4 Oreg. 52; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. McClurg, 56 Pa. St. 295; North Pa.

13. Due Care Must be Shown.—Where a statute does not otherwise provide, the rule requiring the plaintiff, in an action for negligence, to show that at the time of the injury complained of he was in the exercise of due care, is the same whether the action is brought under a statute or at common law. The doctrine of contributory negligence governs both classes of actions.¹

14. Presumption Where Servant Is Killed While on Duty.—Where a servant is killed while on duty, the law will presume, in the absence of contrary evidence, that the deceased exercised due care.²

etc. R. Co. v. Heileman, 49 Pa. St. 60; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Evans, 53 Pa. St. 250; Rush v. Davenport, 6 Iowa 443; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Thomas.

1. Taylor v. Carew Mfg. Co., 143 Mass. 470; Thompson v. Bridgewater, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 188; Adams v. Carlisle, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 146; Munn v. Reed, 4 Allen (Mass.) 431; Plumley v. Birge, 124 Mass. 57; Denison v. Lincoln, 131 Mass. 236.

2. Kansas City etc. R. Co. v. Flynn, 78 Mo. 195; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 23; Cahill v. Hilton, 106 N. Y. 512; Donovan v. Gay, 97 Mo. 448.

Killing of Brakeman in Absence of Witnesses.—In an action to recover damages for injuries resulting in the death of a brakeman, it appeared that there was no witness to the transaction. Held, that under such circumstances evidence of the prior habits of the deceased as to care, prudence and sobriety is admissible as tending to prove that he was not guilty of contributory negligence, but where there were witnesses who saw the transaction, such evidence is not admissible. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Clark, 11 Ill. App. 104.

Female Keeper of Boarding Car—Jerk of Train.—Plaintiff and his wife were keeping a boarding car in connection with a construction train, and just as the car was about to be moved the wife was standing with the conductor near the door to see where it would be placed. The car started with a jerk, and she was thrown out upon the track. Held, proper to charge that defendant was liable if the injury was caused by the negligence of its servants, although there may have been negligence on her part, unless she could, by the exercise of ordinary care, have avoided the consequence of defendant's negligence. Brown v. Sullivan, 71 Tex. 470.

Use of Defective Hand Car.—In an action against a railroad company for injuries to an employee alleged to have been caused by a defect in a hand car and in a rail, a charge that the promise of the section master to repair the rail some days before, and the fact that he had sent the car to the shop for repairs and had again put it in use, might be considered on the question of contributory negligence, is not a charge upon the weight of evidence where the uncontradicted evidence shows the facts recited in it. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. James (Tex.), 10 S. W. Rep. 332.

Where Car Repairers Worked Under Car Without Guard.—Two railroad employes were inspecting and making light repairs on a train, working in couples, the object being that one should watch while another worked. Both were under a car when the train was started, and one was killed. Held, that an instruction that "if you find that O and N were working together, and were instructed that one should keep watch to warn the other, then it was contributory negligence for them to both go under the car together, and if you find that, having been so instructed, they were both under the car together, then plaintiff cannot recover," was improperly refused. Oleson v. Chicago, B. & N. R. Co., 38 Minn. 412.

Employee in Hand Car Run Down by Engine.—And furthermore, an instruction that if an employee, running a hand car ahead of an engine he knew to be about to follow, by keeping a vigilant watch might have run his hand car from the track and avoided the collision, he could not recover, could not properly be given in view of testimony that showed he was given to understand by the engineer and conductor of the engine that it would not start within double the time that actually elapsed before he was struck. Hawley v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Iowa), 29 N. W. Rep. 787.

Catching Foot in Guard Rail.—Hulm v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 92 Mo. 440; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 221. And see Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Burdge, 94

XXVI. LIABILITY OF SERVANT TO MASTER.—1. In Cases of Contracts.

—In all cases where the servant contracts for the master without authority, or when having authority to contract for him he exceeds it, he thereby becomes personally responsible to his employer in damages arising through such action on his part.¹

2. In Cases of Wrongful Acts.—As the contract of service is mutual, the employer has a claim against the employee for his wrongful acts or neglect of duty; and it is held that the employer does not waive this claim by paying the servant and continuing him in his service.² And a master can also recover from his servant although he pays without suit, or where even he has paid nothing.³

3. Suit Against Servant—Defence by Master.—A servant requesting his master to defend a suit for injuries occasioned by the serv-

Ind. 46; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 192. See generally CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 15. Likewise the latest cases. Bajus v. Syracuse etc. R. Co., 5 N. Y. Supp. 804; Sobeiski v. St. Paul etc. R. Co. 41 Minn. 169; Interstate etc. Co. v. Fox, 41 Kans. 715; International etc. R. Co. v. Hester, 64 Tex. 401; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 535; Central R. & B. Co. v. Kitchens (Ga.) 1889, 9 S. E. Rep. 827; Doyle v. Baird, 6 N. Y. Supp. 157; International etc. R. Co. v. Tarver (Tex.), 1889, 11 S. W. Rep. 1043; Schumacher v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 174; Guthrie v. Maine etc. R. Co., 81 Me 572; Humphreys v. Newport News etc. Co. (W. Va.), 10 S. E. Rep. 39; Central R. & B. Co. v. Dickson, 82 Ga. 629; Quick v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co. (Ill.) 1889, 22 N. E. Rep. 709; Schmidt v. Liestekow (Dak.), 43 N. W. Rep. 820; Parker v. Georgia Pac. R. Co. (Ga.), 10 S. E. Rep. 233; Lockhart v. Little Rock etc. R. Co., 40 Fed. Rep. 631; Hartwig v. Bay State etc. Co., 118 N. Y. 664; Stewart v. New York etc. R. Co., 8 N. Y. Supp. 19; Shenandoah Val. R. Co. v. Lucoda (Va.), 10 S. E. Rep. 422; Williams v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 116 N. Y. 628; Sutherland v. Troy etc. R. Co., 8 N. Y. Supp. 83; Ballou v. Georgia Pac. R. Co. (Ga.), 10 S. E. Rep. 352; Smith v. Wrightsville etc. R. Co. (Ga.), 10 S. E. Rep. 361; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Springsteen, 41 Kans. 724; Kansas City etc. R. Co. v. Kier, 41 Kan. 661; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Rice, 51 Ark. 467; Kossman v. Stutz, 5 N. Y. Supp. 764; McDonald v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 41 Minn. 439; Carroll v. East Tenn. etc.

R. Co., 82 Ga. 452; Philadelphia etc. R. Co., v. Huber, 128 Pa. St. 63; Central R. Co. v. Neighbors (Ga.), 10 S. E. Rep. 115; Goodrich v. New York etc. R. Co., 116 N. Y. 398; Strawbridge v. Bradford, 128 Pa. St. 200.

1. Wood's Master and Servant 663; Bell's Principles 224; Frazer's Master and Servant 192; Patterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East 62; Owen v. Gooch, 2 Esp. 567; Church of St. Peter v. Varian, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 644; Meech v. Smith, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 315; Stephen's Nisi Prius, 2337-8; Green v. New River Co., 4 T. R. 589; Cassiday v. M'Kenzie, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 282.

2. Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 294; Page v. Hodge, 63 N. H. 610; White v. Phillipston, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 108; Walcott v. Swampscott, 1 Allen (Mass.) 101; Baltzen v. Nicolay, 53 N. Y. 467.

Engineer of Tug Boat—An engineer of a tug boat has been held to be liable to his employer for any damage thereto by fire or otherwise which could be fairly attributable to any act done or omitted by him as a natural result, or just consequence, even though not directly so attributable. Gilson v. Collins, 66 Ill. 136.

3. The servant of a common carrier negligently injured a piano in his charge for transportation, and his master paid the amount of the damage to the owner without suit. Held, that he could recover the amount from the servant; and, furthermore, that he could have recovered it even if he had not paid it, since his liability to the owner would have been a sufficient ground of action. Smith v. Foran, 43 Conn. 250.

ant's misconduct is liable for the costs and counsel fees therein.¹

4. Double Employment.—Where one employs an agent who is already in the service of another principal, with full knowledge of his first employment, and concurrently therewith, the second contract must be construed in the light of the duties imposed by the first, and the agent will not be liable to the second employer for a failure of duty if caused solely by the obligations imposed by the first employment.²

5. Servant Known to be Incompetent.—But the fact that the servant employed is known to be incompetent will preclude a recovery against him for an injury resulting from his want of experience.³

XXVII. LIABILITY OF SERVANT TO THIRD PERSON.—A servant is liable in damages to a third person suffering through his carelessness or negligence or unlawful act.⁴ But not for failing to perform his master's obligations.⁵

XXVIII. LIABILITY TO COSEVANT.—One servant may maintain an action against a coservant for injuries suffered through the latter's negligence.⁶

XXIX. MASTER'S LIABILITY TO HIS SERVANT FOR NEGLIGENCE.—
1. Generally.—A master is ordinarily liable in damages to his servant who is injured through his negligence.⁷

1. Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Latham, 63 Me. 177.

2. Southern Ex. Co. v. Frink, 67 Ga. 201.

3. Alexander v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 83 Ky. 589.

4. Brown v. Lent, 20 Vt. 529; Mitchell v. Harmony, 14 How. (U. S.) 115; Richardson v. Kimball, 28 Me. 463; Althorf v. Wolfe, 22 N. Y. 355; Hewitt v. Swift, 3 Allen (Mass.) 420; Phelps v. Waite, 30 N. Y. 78; Wright v. Wilcox, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 343; Suydam v. Moore, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 358.

5. Tuttle v. Love, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 470; Bank v. Bank, 7 N. Y. 459; Henshaw v. Noble, 7 Ohio St. 226; R. R. Co. v. Collins, 5 H. & N. 969.

A servant is not liable for his master's wrongful conversion of a chattel that had been lawfully taken by the servant with the owner's consent. Silver v. Martin, 59 N. H. 580.

6. Osborne v. Morgan, 130 Mass. 102; overruling Albro v. Jaquith, 4 Gray (Mass.) 99; Wright v. Roxbury, 2 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (3rd series) 748; Swainson v. Northeastern R. Co., 3 Exch. Div. 341; Wiggett v. Fox, 11 Exch. 382; Griffiths v. Wolfram, 22 Minn. 185; Hinds v. Harbon, 58 Ind. 21; Hinds v. Duenacker, 66 Ind. 547; Degg v. Midland R. Co., 1 H. & N. 773. Compare Southcote v. Stanley, 1 H. & N. 247.

7. Walker v. Balling, 72 Ala. 204; Smoot v. Mobile etc. R. Co., 67 Ala. 13; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Allen, 78 Ala. 494; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; Trask v. California etc. R. Co., 63 Cal. 96; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 192; McGlynn v. Brodie, 31 Cal. 380; Conlin v. Santa Fe etc. R. Co., 36 Cal. 410; Malone v. Hawley, 46 Cal. 409; Bee-son v. Green Mt. etc. Mon. Co., 57 Cal. 20; Leahy v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 65 Cal. 152; Colorado etc. R. Co. v. Ogden, 3 Colo. 409; Wells v. Coe, 9 Colo. 159; Wilson v. Willimantic etc. Co., 50 Conn. 433; Herbert v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 3 Dak. 38; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 85; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 407; Baker v. Western Atlantic R. Co., 68 Ga. 699; Kranz v. White, 8 Ill. App. 583; Paint Mfg. Co. v. Ballou, 71 Ill. 417; Allerton Packing Co. v. Egan, 86 Ill. 253; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Platt, 89 Ill. 141; Packing Co. v. Hightower, 92 Ill. 139; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Longan, 118 Ill. 41; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. McCormick, 74 Ind. 440; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 474; Pennsylvania Co. v. Long, 94 Ind. 250; Nordyke etc. Co. v. Van

(a) Where no Evidence of Negligence Is Adduced.—Where, in an action against an employer for injuries or death alleged to have been caused by his negligence, there is no evidence of such negligence, it is the duty of the court to withdraw the case from the jury, and to give binding instructions in favor of the defendant.¹ For the highest duty of man is to protect human life, or the person of a human being, and that duty is never performed so as to escape responsibility until all possible care, under the circum-

Sant, 99 Ind. 188; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Orr, 84 Ind. 50; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; Umbach v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 83 Ind. 191; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 98; Bradbury v. Goodwin, 103 Ind. 286; Krueger v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 111 Ind. 51; Hammond v. Schweitzer, 112 Ind. 246; Pennsylvania Co. v. Whitcomb, 111 Ind. 212; Crowley v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 65 Iowa 658; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 56; Baldwin v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 72 Iowa 45; Atchison, Topeka etc. R. Co. v. Halt, 29 Kan. 149; The Solomon R. Co. v. Jones, 30 Kan. 601; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. McKee, 37 Kan. 592; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Moore, 29 Kan. 632; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Moore, 29 Kan. 632; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243; Solomon R. Co. v. Jones, 30 Kan. 601; Hannibal etc. R. Co. v. Fox, 31 Kan. 586; Needham v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 85 Ky. 423; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. McCoy (Ky.) 1883, 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277; Bogenschutz v. Smith, 84 Ky. 330; Buzzell v. Laconia Mfg. Co., 48 Me. 113; Beaulieu v. Portland Co., 48 Me. 291; Shanny v. Androscoggin Mills, 66 Me. 420; Wonder v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 32 Mo. 411; King v. Boston etc. R. Co., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 112; Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray (Mass.) 274; Coombs v. New Bedford etc. Co., 102 Mass. 572; Huddleston v. Lowell Machine Shop, 106 Mass. 282; Ford v. Fitchburg Railroad, 110 Mass. 240; Sullivan v. India Mfg. Co., 113 Mass. 396; Summersell v. Fish, 117 Mass. 312; Arkerson v. Denison, 117 Mass. 407; O'Connor v. Adams, 120 Mass. 427; Wheeler v. Wason Mfg. Co., 135 Mass. 294; Lawless v. Connecticut R. Co., 136 Mass. 1; Clark v. Soule, 137 Mass. 380; Spicer v. South Boston Iron Co., 138 Mass. 426; Keith v. New Haven etc. Co., 140 Mass. 175; Hewitt v. Flint etc. R. Co., 67 Mich. 61; Gates v. Southern Minn. R. Co., 28 Minn. 110; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 227; Madden v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 32 Minn. 303; Tierney v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 33 Minn. 311; Gibson v. Pacific R. Co., 46 Mo. 163; Parsons v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 94 Mo. 286; Reber v. Tower, 11 Mo. App. 199; Covey v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 27 Mo. App. 170; Covey v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 86 Mo. 635; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 382; Stephenson v. Ravenscroft, 25 Neb. 678; Warner v. Western etc. R. Co., 94 N. Car. 250; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 432; Collyer v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 49 N. Y. L. 59; Corcoran v. Holbrook, 59 N. Y. 517; Kain v. Smith, 80 N. Y. 458; Painton v. North Central R. Co., 83 N. Y. 7; Burke v. Witherbee, 98 N. Y. 562; Pantzer v. T. F. I. M. Co., 99 N. Y. 368; Sizer v. Syracuse R. Co., 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 67; Thorn v. New York Ice Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 497; Cullen v. National Sheet Metal Roofing Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 562; Barrett v. Singer Mfg. Co., 1 Sweeney (N. Y.) 545; Little Miami etc. R. Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 42 Ohio St. 318; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 578; Johnson v. Bruner, 61 Pa. St. 58; Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389; Baker v. Allegheny etc. R. Co., 95 Pa. St. 211; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Hughes, 119 Pa. St. 305; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 348; Payne v. Reese, 100 Pa. St. 301; Gunter v. Graniteville Mfg. Co., 15 S. Car. 443; Ex parte Johnson, 19 S. Car. 492; Sanders v. Ebiwan Phosphate Co., 19 S. Car. 559; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Lyde, 57 Tex. 505; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Crenshaw, 71 Tex. 340; 9 S. W. Rep. 262; Clark v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 78 Va. 709; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 78; Wedgewood v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 41 Wis. 478; 44 Wis. 44; Behm v. Armour, 58 Wis. 1; Thompson v. Hermann, 47 Wis. 602; Hough v. Texas etc. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fort. 17 Wall. (U. S.) 553; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213.

1. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Schertte, 97 Pa. St. 450; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 158.

stances, has been exercised.¹ Where the master is a corporation, its officers and agents are charged with a master's duty.² Likewise manufacturers hiring the services of convicts.³ A receiver is also liable for injuries arising from negligence where the company in his charge would be liable, but only to the extent of property in his hands.⁴

(b) Relation of Master and Servant Must be Shown to Exist.—The basis of such liability is the relation of master and servant, and proof of such relation is indispensable to a recovery.⁵ One who, without being requested or authorized by the master to do so, assists servants at their work, is deemed to be their fellow servant within the meaning of the general rule, so as to limit the liability of the master to him, even though he would not be regarded as a servant in such a sense as to make the master liable to strangers for his negligence. This is so where such assistance is given at the request of the servants; and it makes no difference in his favor that the person rendering such assistance does so unasked or even against the will of the master, or of the servants, or both. On the other hand, if his assistance is rendered at the request of the mas-

1. Shumacher v. St. Louis etc., 39 Fed. Rep. 174.

2. Ford v. Fitchburg Railroad, 110 Mass. 240; Holden v. Fitchburg Railroad, 129 Mass. 268; Lawless v. Connecticut etc. R. Co., 136 Mass. 1; Toledo v. Cone, 41 Ohio 149.

Negligence in Railroad Construction.—And where a railroad company is formed, the construction of the road will, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, be presumed to be done by the corporation, and it will be responsible for injuries arising from negligence in such construction. The Solomon R. Co. v. Jones, 30 Kan. 601.

3. Injury to Convict Through Defective Machine.—Thus a convict was injured while working at a machine designed to mould the soles of shoes, the same being furnished by defendant, who hired the services of a large number of convicts, employing them in the manufacture of shoes. It was held, suit being brought to recover damages therefor, that while the usual relation of master and servant did not exist, because the labor furnished was compulsory, yet the defendant owed a duty to the convict which required him to furnish machinery fitted to and sufficient for the work and to keep the same in constant repair. Hartwig v. Bay State S. & L. Co., 43 Hun (N. Y.) 425.

Defective Bunk.—But the lessees of a penitentiary are not responsible in damages for personal injuries inflicted upon a convict resulting from defective construction of a sleeping bunk, the bunk having been constructed by a sergeant having charge of the convicts and under the immediate supervision of one of the penitentiary commissioners. Cunningham v. Moore, 55 Tex. 373; 40 Am. Rep. 812.

4. Paige v. Smith, 99 Mass. 395; Murphy v. Holbrook, 20 Ohio St. 437; Sprague v. Smith, 29 Vt. 421; Blumenthal v. Brainerd, 38 Vt. 402; Mersey Docks v. Gibbs, 11 H. L. Cas. 686; Ohrby v. Ryde Commrs., 5 B. & S. 743; Whitehouse v. Fellows, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 765; Ruck v. Williams, 3 H. & N. 308. See RECEIVERS.

5. Bullock v. Gaffigan, 39 Leg. Int. 338; Smith v. Oxford Iron Co., 42 N. J. L. 467; 36 Am. Rep. 535; Lendberg v. Brotherton Iron Min. Co., 75 Mich. 84; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Clark, 26 Neb. 645; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Texas etc. R. Co., 38 Fed. Rep. 816; Kern v. Sugar Refining Co., 5 N. Y. Supp. 548; Hunt v. Walch, 5 N. Y. Supp. 802; Interstate etc. R. Co. v. Fox, 41 Kan. 715; Sobieski v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 41 Minn. 169; Kansas City etc. R. Co. v. Kier, 41 Kan. 661; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Springsteen, 41 Kan. 724; Doyle v. Beaird, 6 N. Y. Supp. 517; Louisville etc. Co. v. Hall, 87 Ala. 708; Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Nelms (Ga.) 1889, 9 S. E. Rep. 1049; Twitchell v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 419; McGovern v. Central Vt. R.

ter, he becomes for a time a servant in every legal sense.¹ But the rule is otherwise where the person injured is not a mere volunteer, but assists for the purpose of aiding or advancing his own or his master's business. Though performing a service which may be beneficial to both parties, his doing so in his own behalf, or in the behalf of his master, however beneficial may be his assistance to the master of the other servants, gives him the right to be protected against their negligence. The act done by him should, however, be a prudent and reasonable one, and not a wrongful interference and intermeddling with business in which he has no concern.² But where the services are rendered by request of the man in charge, though the person assisting expect no pay, and is employed for a mere temporary purpose, he is, for the time being, a servant and entitled to the same protection as any other servant.³ But not unless the employee has express authority to make the request, or occupies such a position toward the employer and the act to be done, that the authority can be fairly implied.⁴

Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 838; Guthrie v. Maine Central R. Co., 81 Me. 572; Seese v. North Pac. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 487; Strawbridge v. Bradford, 128 Pa. St. 200; Goodrich v. New York etc. R. Co., 116 N. Y. 398; Rietman v. Stolte, 120 Ind. 314; Lehigh etc. Coal Co. v. Hayes, 128 Pa. St. 294; Hungerford v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 41 Minn. 444; Daley v. American Printing Co. (Mass.), 1889, 22 N. E. Rep. 439; Gorman v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 78 Iowa 509; Otis v. Cowles Electric etc. Co., 7 N. Y. Supp. 251; Doyle v. St. Paul etc. R. Co. (Minn.) 1889, 43 N. W. Rep. 787; Appeal of Standard Mfg. Co. (Pa.) 1889, 18 Atl. Rep. 637; Central R. Co. v. Lanier (Ga.), 10 S. E. Rep. 279; Howard v. Delaware etc. Canal Co., 40 Fed. Rep. 195.

Lessor and Servant of Lessee.—A lessor is not liable to a servant of the lessee for damages resulting from the negligence of the latter, unless some duty remained upon the lessor from a failure to perform which the injury arose. It would make no difference that the servant injured was originally employed before the lease by the lessor, was ignorant of the lease, and supposed that he was still so employed. Crusellie v. Pugh, 67 Ga. 430; 44 Am. Rep. 724.

1. Shear & R. on Negligence, § 182; McKinney on Fellow Servants, § 19.

And see in this connection Sweeney v. Old Colony R. Co., 10 Allen (Mass.) 368; Wendell v. Baxter, 12 Gray (Mass.) 494; Carleton v. Franconia Iron Works, 99 Mass. 216; Pittsburgh v. Gries, 22 Pa. St. 54; Eaton v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 57 N. Y. 382; Southcote v. Stanley, 1 H. & N. 247; Axford v. Prior, 14 W. R. 611; Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal Co., 11 Ad. & El. 223; Chapman v. Rothwell, El. B. & E. 168; Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 470; Terbutt v. R. Co., L. R., 6 Q. B. 73; Gibbs v. Liverpool Docks, 3 H. & N. 164. And see Degg v. Midland R. Co., 1 H. & N. 773; Holmes v. North Eastern R. Co., L. R., 4 Ex. 257; Wright v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 10 Q. B. 298; 1 Q. B. D. 252; Bachelor v. Fortescue, 47 J. P. 808; Flower v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 69 Pa. St. 210; 8 Am. Rep. 251; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Harrison, 48 Miss. 112; 12 Am. Rep. 356.

2. Mechem on Agency, § 669. Citing Osborne v. Knox etc. R. Co., 68 Me. 49; 28 Am. Rep. 16; Mayton v. Texas etc. R. Co., 63 Tex. 97; 51 Am. Rep. 637; Degg v. Midland R. Co., 1 H. & N. 773; Potter v. Faulkner, 1 Best & S. 800; Street R. Co. v. Bolton, 43 Ohio St. 224; 54 Am. Rep. 803; Eason v. S. & E. I. R. Co., 65 Tex. 577; 57 Am. Rep. 606; Wright v. London etc. R. Co., 1 Q. B. Div. 252; Holmes v. North Eastern R. Co., L. R., 4 Exch. 254.

3. Mayton v. Texas etc. R. Co., 63 Tex. 77; Eason v. Sabine etc. R. Co., 6 Tex. L. Rev. 178; McIntyre R. Co. v. Bolton, 43 Ohio St. 224; Johnson v. Ashland Water Co., 71 Wis. 553.

4. Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Gastineau, 83 Ky. 119.

(c) Pivotal Point in Such Actions.—In such actions, the true question for the jury is not whether the master could have done something to have prevented the injury; but whether he did anything which, under the circumstances, in the exercise of ordinary care and prudence, he ought not to have done, or omitted any precaution which a prudent and careful man would or ought to have taken.¹

(d) Performance of Personal Service for Superior Officer.—Nor is a railroad company liable to an employee for an injury occurring while performing an individual service for his superior officer under the latter's directions.²

(e) Injury from Master's Direct Personal Act.—And furthermore, if injury results to the servant from the direct act or negligence of the master, as where he is personally present superintending the work and giving orders, he is answerable in damages to the same extent as if the relation of master and servant did not exist.³

2. Master's Duty to Furnish Machinery.—One of the most important obligations on the part of a master is to furnish his servant

Assisting Brakeman by Permission of Yardmaster.—A person who without pay assists as a brakeman in making up a railroad train by the direction or with the express permission of a yardmaster who has authority to employ necessary assistants in his department, is not a trespasser on the train, but a servant of the company, and it will be liable to him for an injury resulting from the use of a defective brake. Central Trust Co. v. Texas etc. R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 448.

Passenger Assisting Street Car Driver.—The plaintiff was passenger on defendant's railroad, on a car northward bound. The railway was a single track with occasional side tracks for the passage of cars moving in opposite directions. The north bound car having been drawn beyond the side track, where it was to have met the south bound car, it became necessary to push it back to the side track, so that the cars could pass and each proceed to its destination. At the request of the driver of the north bound car, the plaintiff assisted him in pushing the car back to the side track. While so engaged, without fault on his part, he was injured by the carelessness of defendant's driver on the south bound car. Held, that the plaintiff did not engage in the service of defendant as a mere volunteer, that he could not be looked upon as a fellow servant with the driver of the south bound car, and that he could recover for injury sustained.

McIntire R. Co. v. Bolton, 43 Ohio St. 224.

Son of Employee Assisting His Father.—A railroad company is liable in damages for negligently backing a freight car so as to injure the minor son of an employee of another company, assisting his father in rightfully repairing a car. Pennsylvania Co. v. Gallagher, 40 Ohio St. 637; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 341.

1. Leonard v. Collins, 70 N. Y. 90.

2. Hurst v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 49 Iowa 76.

Evidence Necessary to Warrant a Recovery.—In order to recover, the plaintiff must establish by a fair preponderance of proof that the defendant was guilty of negligence, and that the injury complained of was the natural and ordinary result of such negligence, and that the negligence was the proximate cause of the injury, which a reasonable, prudent and cautious person ought to have apprehended might result from the act which he did. Harris v. Union Pac. R. Co., 3 Colo. 25.

But the fact that the plaintiff was hurt without his own fault or negligence cuts no figure in the absence of evidence going to show the defendant to be legally chargeable with the injury. Henry v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 495; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 110.

3. Lorentz v. Robinson, 61 Md. 64.

Unusual—Arising Through Master's Negligence.—Where a servant is injured, not by anything occurring in his employment, or that is incident thereto, with such appliances for his work as are suitable and may be used with safety; and this, by implication of the law, is a stipulation in every contract for service; and if the servant is injured by reason of defective appliances placed in his hands by the master or his agent, the master is liable for damages, unless he can clearly show that he has used due care in the selection or manufacture of the same.¹ The rule also applies to the question of furnishing a sufficient number of persons skilled enough to perform the labor of the employment in safety and properly.² And it is furthermore true that the ignorance of the master as to the defect is no excuse, if he did not use ordinary care in the selection or care of the machine or appliance causing the injury.³ Where the master manu-but by a temporary peril to which he and other servants are exposed by the negligent, positive act of the employer, without any negligence on the servant's part, he is entitled to recover damages from the employer on account of such injury. And it is not necessary that the servant should have given notice of such temporary peril and demanded its removal. Fairbank v. Haentzsche, 73 Ill. 236.

1. Weems v. Mathieson, 4 McQueen (Sc.) 215; Feltham v. England, L. R., 2 Q. B. 46; Warner v. R. Co., 39 N. Y. 468; Chicago R. Co. v. Sweet, 45 Ill. 202; Northcote v. Bachelder, 111 Mass. 322; Camp Point Mfg. Co. v. Ballou, 71 Ill. 418; Noyes v. Smith, 28 Vt. 39; Kranz v. White, 8 Ill. App. 583. Compare Robinson v. Blake Mfg. Co., 143 Mass. 528. See FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 7, p. 825.

A refusal to charge that the fact of the suitability or unsuitability of the instrument was to be proved like any other fact is not error, where the issue is not the unsuitability of the instrument employed, but rather whether it was used in a prudent manner. Texas Mex. R. Co. v. Douglass, 69 Tex. 604.

Where Weight Did Not Belong to Machine.—A part of a machine used in a cotton mill consisted of a pulley, over which a chain passed, to one end of which was hung a weight. An extra weight was hung by a rawhide lacing to a hook made of wire, fastened into the chain to which the other weight hung. The extra weight did not come with the machine, and was not specially intended as a weight. It had been used on the machine for about two years for the purpose of using more rapidly a part of the machine, but the weight had been off at times during the two years, and the machine operated successfully without it, although better with it. A person who was employed upon the machine was injured by the falling of the weight, in consequence of the breaking of the lacing. Held, in an action for such injury, that, there being no dispute how the weight was attached, or as to its purpose, it was rightly ruled that the weight was a part of the machine. Rice v. King Philip Mills, 144 Mass. 646.

Business System.—A master is also liable for injuries arising from a failure to pursue a proper business system. Sword v. Cameron, 1 Sec. Ses. (Scotch Rep.) 493; Barton's Hill Coal Co. v. Reed, 3 M'Q. 289; Stone v. Cheshire R. Co., 19 N. H. 427.

Electric Light Company—Proper Appliances.—Where plaintiff's intestate, while employed in putting up telegraph wires for defendant company, fell from a telegraph pole and was killed, through failure of defendant to furnish the means and appliances required for the safe and efficient performance of such work, defendant was held liable in damages. Clairain v. Western Union Tel. Co., 40 La. An. 178.

2. Moss v. Pac. R. Co., 49 Mo. 167.

It has been held, in England, that the master is the proper judge of the number of servants requisite for any particular work. Skipper v. The E. C. R. Co., 9 Exch. 223.

3. Hayden v. Smithfield Mfg. Co., 29 Conn. 548; Noyes v. Smith, 28 Vt. 59; Ryan v. Fowler, 24 N. Y. 410; Hayden v. Smithfield Mfg. Co., 29 Conn. 548; Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray (Mass.) 274; Seaver v. Boston etc. R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 466; Snow v. Housatonic etc. R. Co., 8 Allen (Mass.) 441; Wonder v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 32 Mo. 411; Gibson v. Pacific R. Co., 46 Mo. 163; Buzzell v. Laconia Mfg. Co., 48 Me.

factures the machinery in use, he will have done his duty if he exercises reasonable care in the selection of workmen and material and the examination of the same upon completion.¹

3. Liability of Railroad Companies.—Cases involving injuries to the employees of railroad companies through the negligence thereof may well be said to be ever present in the courts for adjudication, and in discussing the liability of masters in general in this regard, it will be necessary to consider in detail the particular liabilities of such companies to their employees. And where an employer has failed to furnish a particular apparatus, unless it be shown that the injury was occasioned by the want of it, he is not liable.²

(a) Rule of Liability—Passengers and Employees.—The rule of liability of a railroad company for negligence is not the same in the case of an employee as in the case of a passenger. In the case of an employee no presumption of negligence on the part of the company arises from the accident alone; its negligence must be clearly shown in order to warrant a recovery.³

(b) Suitable Track and Roadbed—(a) Liability Generally.—A railroad company is liable to its employes for injuries sustained by reason of its negligence in failing to keep its track in proper condition.⁴ But a railroad company is not bound to furnish an absolutely safe track; its duty being to use all reasonable care in keeping it in good order and condition.⁵ It is also negligence in a 113; Laning v. New York Cent. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 521; Flike v. Boston etc. R. Co., 53 N. Y. 549; Corcoran v. Holbrook, 59 N. Y. 517; Haskins v. New York etc. R. Co., 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 129; Owen v. New York etc. R. Co., 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 108; Mad River etc. R. Co. v. Barber, 5 Ohio St. 541; Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389.

1. Hard v. Vermont Central R. Co., 32 Vt. 473; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Swett, 45 Ill. 197.

2. Gordon v. Reynolds Card Mfg. Co., 54 Hun (N. Y.) 278.

3. East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Maloy, 77 Ga. 237.

4. Richmond etc. R. Co. v. Norment, 84 Va. 167; Knapp v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 71 Iowa 41; Central R. Co. v. Mitchell, 63 Ga. 173; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145; Hewitt v. Flint etc. R. Co., 67 Mich. 61; Rosenbaum v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 38 Minn. 173; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Eubanks, 48 Ark. 460; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 176; Pool v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 56 Wis. 227.

Failure to Spike Rails.—In an action to recover for the death of a fireman, caused by the tender leaving the track at a certain place, it was held that it was immaterial whether the rails were properly spiked at other places, or at that place, unless the failure so to spike them caused or contributed to the accident. Kuhn v. Wisconsin etc. R. Co., 70 Iowa 561; following Ruggles v. Nevada, 63 Iowa 185.

To Ballast Track.—It is negligence in a railroad company to leave the spaces between the ties of a railroad track used for construction purposes unfilled, and it is responsible for an injury to one of its brakemen caused by stepping between the ties and falling, where it appears that he was engaged about his duties in the night time, and was ignorant of the defect in the track. Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Redeker, 67 Tex. 181. Compare Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Schertte, 97 Pa. St. 450; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 159; Rosenbaum v. St. P. & D. R. Co., 38 Minn. 173; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274.

5. Devlin v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 545; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 524; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Weaver, 35 Kan. 412; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 341.

Dilapidated Road in Process of Repair.—Duty of company to servant to keep track in good order must be considered with qualification when road has become dilapidated and is in process of reconstruction, in which work em-railroad company to fail to keep its roadbed in a safe condition.¹

(b) Evidence to Prove Negligence.—Where a defective track is alleged to have been the cause of an accident, it is enough to prove such a state of things as to the condition of the track shortly before or after as will induce a reasonable presumption that the condition is unchanged.²

(c) Use of Track by Several Companies.—Where two or more chartered railroads use the same track, such track, though the exclusive property of one of the companies, is, for the time being, the ployees are engaged. Rochester etc. R. Co. v. Brick, 98 N. Y. 211; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 605.

1. St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Weaver, 35 Kan. 412; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Roman, 104 Ind. 88; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 390; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Johnson, 116 Ill. 206; Central R. Co. v. Mitchell, 63 Ga. 173; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145; Porter v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 66; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 44; Norden v. Fitchburg R. Co., 129 Mass. 268; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; Clark v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 28 Minn. 128; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 240; Wells v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 56 Iowa 520; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243; Hawley v. Northern etc. R. Co., 82 N. Y. 370; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248.

Injury While Repairing Roadway.—A brakeman on a gravel train, employed in repairing defective roadway, may recover for injuries inflicted by cars running off track in consequence of bad condition of roadway, where plaintiff has not had opportunity to discover such defects. Madden v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 32 Minn. 303; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 63.

Roadway Recently Belonging to Another Company.—But in an action against a railway company for negligent injury to an employee from a defect in a roadway which has just come under its control from another company, there can be no presumption that defendant had sufficient time to remedy the defect. Batterson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 184; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 123.

Rotten Ties.—In an action against a railroad company for injuries to an engineer caused by the derailment of his engine, it appeared that the ties were rotten at the place where the accident occurred, and that another train passing over the place a short time before had caused the rails to spread. Held, that the company was liable in allowing the rotten ties to remain in the track. Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Pettis, 69 Tex. 689; and see Knapp v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 71 Iowa 41; Hewitt v. Flint etc. R. Co., 67 Mich. 61; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Eubanks, 48 Ark. 460.

Alighting on Track Instead of Roadbed.—Brakeman after uncoupling car from engine and thinking latter had stopped, jumped on track when the engine ran over him, held that he could introduce evidence that condition of roadbed was such that he could only alight on the track. Pringle v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Iowa 613; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 91.

Embankments.—The giving way of a railroad embankment is prima facie evidence of negligence in its construction. Stoher v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 91 Mo. 509; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 229.

2. Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Eubanks, 48 Ark. 460; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 176.

Reasonable Time After Accident.—It was held in above case that evidence of the condition three years before trial, and twenty-one months after the accident, is inadmissible. So held where the evidence referred to the condition of the track three years after the accident. Stoher v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 91 Mo. 509; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 229.

Evidence of Experts.—Where a train was running backward at the time of an accident, and there was evidence that the track was in the same condition at that time as when it was seen by an expert witness, it was held that it was proper for the expert to state whether, if the track was in the same condition, it would be more dangerous to run the train backward than forward. Kuhn v. Wisconsin etc. R. Co., 70 Iowa 561; Rosenbaum v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 38 Minn. 173; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274.

Plaintiff's son, who was a brakeman track of each company so using it, and the proprietary company is not responsible to its employees for personal injuries which they sustain solely by reason of the negligent use of the track by the employees of another company. The redress for such injuries is against the company whose employees are at fault.¹ A company operating its trains over the road of another company must likewise see that the track is in safe condition.²

(d) Obstructions on Track—Adjacent Structures.—A company is likewise liable if it fails to keep its track free from obstructions,³ and structures dangerously near the same.⁴ But a railroad company on one of the defendant's freight trains, was killed on account of a separation of the train. The train was passing over a portion of the track where there was a sag, then a rise, or "hog's back," and then a down grade, and the separation took place when the front end of the train was on the down grade and the central portion was on the "hog's back." Held, that the opinion of an expert was not admissible to show how the brakes should have been applied to prevent the breaking of the train, but that it was a question for the jury, to be determined from the facts in regard to the weight of the train, the depth of the sag, the character of the "hog's back," and all the circumstances of the case. Burns v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 69 Iowa 450.

1. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Friddell, 79 Ga. 489; Kain v. Smith, 80 N. Y. 458.

Engineer Hauling for Another Company on Its Road.—A railroad company sending its locomotive engineer (employed by the month) with one of its engines to haul temporarily for another company the trains of the latter over the line of such latter company, is not responsible to the engineer for the bad condition of the track, nor for the want of adaptation of the engine to the track, it not being alleged that the employer company knew of such bad condition or want of adaptation, and concealed its information. Dunlap v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 81 Ga. 136. But see Stetler v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 46 Wis. 497; Phila. W. & B. R. Co. v. State etc., 58 Md. 372; Sellers v. Richmond etc. R. Co. (N. Car.), 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 451; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Peyton, 106 Ill. 534; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1.

Defect in Rolling Stock of One Company and Track of Another.—It was held in Augusta etc. R. Co. v. Killian, 79 Ga. 234, that if the injury was caused by a defect in the trucks of the cars of the company employing plaintiff no recovery could be had, but if caused both by defect of the trucks of the cars of the one company and the track of the other, the latter company is responsible in proportion to the extent its tracks contributed to the injury. And see Sawyer v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 38 Minn. 103; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 396.

Voluntary Use of Defective Road.—But the voluntary though unnecessary use of the decayed road of another company, without inspection, is negligence. Stetter v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 46 Wis. 497; 49 Wis. 609.

2. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Peyton, 106 Ill. 534; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1.

Use by Several Companies of One Station.—And where two railroad companies use a station jointly, each is bound to the observance of the same care for the safety of the servant of the other company about the station as for its own. Illinois Central R. Co. v. Frelka, 110 Ill. 498; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 7.

Employee Having Two Masters.—An employee of two or more persons or corporations operating a railroad may maintain an action against either for an injury resulting from defective machinery furnished by them for use in the course of his employment; their liability is several as well as joint. Kain v. Smith, 80 N. Y. 458.

3. Wilson v. Denver etc. R. Co., 7 Colo. 101; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 192; Bassex v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 45 Wis. 477.

4. Tank Spout.—Atlanta etc. R. Co. v. Woodruff, 66 Ga. 707.

Awning.—Railroad companies have been held to be negligent in permitting an awning of a station house to overhang the track. Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Welch, 52 Ill. 183; Clark v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 28 Minn. 128; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 240.

is not to be regarded as negligent in erecting and maintaining contrivances or things for use in the operation of its road for the reason that they are dangerous to the persons operating their trains.¹

(e) Failure to Block Switches and Frogs.—A railroad company has been held not to be guilty of negligence in failing to block its switches² or frogs.³ And it has been held in Michigan that a railroad company is under no legal obligation to maintain a station agent at a flag station where there is an unblocked siding for the protection of its employees.⁴

(c) Engines.—It is negligence for a railroad company to fail to Telegraph Pole. Or a telegraph pole to stand within eighteen inches of the same. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Russell, 91 Ill. 298.

Cattle Chute.—Where a railway company erects a "cattle chute" in such close proximity to its track as to endanger the lives of its employees, in the proper operation of its trains, it is negligence. Allen v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 57 Iowa 623; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 620.

Switch Stand.—Pidcock v. Union Pacific R. Co. (Utah), 19 Pac. Rep. 191.

Stump of Tree.—Likewise where a brakeman, unfamiliar with the fact that a stump was dangerously near the track, was ordered to see if the wheels were sliding, and, while looking with his head outside the train, was struck by the stump, the existence of which was known to the employe of the company, who gave the order unaccompanied by any special warning. Riley v. West Virginia etc. R. Co., 27 W. Va. 145.

Post Erected by Station Master.—Also where a brakeman, while descending from a car on a moving train, was struck by a post erected by the station agent near the track for his own use, and in no way connected with the operation of the road. Kearns v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 66 Iowa 599; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 287.

Or Beam.—Arabello v. San Antonio etc. R. Co. (Tex.), 1889, 11 S. W. Rep. 913.

Water Crane Near Track.—Engineer leaning out of the engine, looking for signal of conductor, which he neglected to give, was struck by it and killed. Held, that negligence of conductor was not proximate cause of accident, and company was not liable. Gould v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 66 Iowa 590; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 289.

Allowing Snow Bank to Remain—But a railroad company has been held not to be guilty of negligence in allowing snow bank to remain as left by plough. Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Dowell, 62 Iowa 629; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 153. Or failing to place signals at, or give notice by bell or whistle when approaching the same. Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 69 Iowa 161.

1. Gould v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 66 Iowa 590; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 289.

2. New Device for Blocking.—Where an action for damages was based upon the fact that a switch at the junction in which plaintiff's feet were caught was unblocked, it was held, the evidence showing that unblocked switches had been in use on the various railroads all over the country for years, that a failure to use a new device for blocking did not render the company liable for injury caused thereby. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Londergan, 118 Ill. 41; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 491.

3. When to Do So Would be Dangerous.—Particularly if it does not appear that in doing so it would not entail greater dangers than it would avert. McGinnis v. Canada etc. Bridge Co., 49 Mich. 466; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 135. And see Griffith v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 72 Iowa 645; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 227; Mayes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 563; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 527; Rush v. Mo. Pac. R. Co., 36 Kan. 129; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 484; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. McCormick, 74 Ind. 440; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 474; Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Coates, 62 Iowa 486; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265; Wilson v. Winona etc. R. Co., 37 Minn. 326; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 244; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Eubanks, 48 Ark. 460; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 176; Huhn v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 92 Mo. 440; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 221.

4. Hewitt v. Flint etc. R. Co., 67 Mich. 61; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 249.

use safe and appropriate engines.¹ And to this end it must have the boilers of its engines properly tested.²

(d) Cars.³—It is also negligence for a railroad company to fail to furnish suitable passenger and freight cars.⁴ But it has been held that a railroad company is not liable for failure to place a hand hold on top of a freight car.⁵ Ordinarily an employer is bound to use due diligence in providing and maintaining safe machinery and instrumentalities to be used by his employees without regard to the ownership of the same, and a railway corporation, with respect to the cars of other companies, which are to be moved and handled by its employees is bound to use due diligence and care in seeing that the cars are safe to be so handled by its servants; and such railway company cannot divest itself of this duty to its servants for their safety and protection by a contract with such other companies whose cars are used that the latter shall keep them in repair.⁶

1. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Rung, 104 Ill. 641; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 218; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Holt, 29 Kan. 149; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 206. Cases of defective throttle valves.

Having No Other Engine at Hand Is No Excuse.—A railroad company is not relieved from the charge of negligence in sending out an employee with a defective engine simply because it did not have sufficient time after notice of the defect to repair it, and had no other engine in proper condition to send out. Green v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 31 Minn. 248.

Notice to Company by Employee of Defect.—It was held in one case, with reference to a defective locomotive, the evidence showing that the defect had existed for some time, that it was known to the engineer, who had often told the foreman of the round house, his immediate superior, of its dangerous condition, that the company had notice thereof, and was guilty of gross negligence in using the engine. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Rung, 104 Ill. 641; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 218.

2. Failure to Apply Steam or Hydraulic Test.—The application of the steam test for boilers being shown to be neither practicable nor generally approved, on account of its danger, and the hydraulic test being extraordinary and rarely used, except when engines are first put in use, or fail to work well, or when they are overhauled periodically, the failure of a railroad company to have either or both of these tests applied to the defective boiler does not authorize the imputation of negligence.

Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Allen, 78 Ala. 494; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514.

3. See COUPLING CARS, vol. 4, p. 417.

4. Where a switchman, under whose direction trains were made up, discovered a defect in a car, communicated that fact to the general office by a telephone which had been placed in the yards for such purpose, and received the reply, "If she will hold together, send her off," it is to be presumed that such direction came from one having authority to give it, in the absence of evidence to the contrary. Reed v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 72 Iowa 166; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 190.

Formation of Poisonous Grease.—A railroad company has been held to be not liable for injury arising from poisonous grease forming on bearings; as on the boxing of a wheel, when nothing has ever occurred to suggest danger of such occurrence. Kitteringham v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 62 Iowa 285; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 14. Compare Potts v. Plunkett, 9 Ir. C. L. 290; Waffling v. Coster, 40 L. J. Exch. 43.

5. Fair v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.), 12 Cent. Rep. 530. And see Gutridge v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 94 Mo. 468.

6. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Avery, 109 Ill. 314; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 649; Getter v. New York etc. R. Co., 2 Keys (N. Y.) 154; Mackin v. Boston etc. R. Co., 135 Mass. 201; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 196; Ballou v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 257; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480; Harrison v. Central R. Co., 31 N. J. L. 293; McDermott v. Pacific R. Co., 30 Mo. 115; Falkner v.

A railroad company is also responsible for an injury occasioned by want of proper care and prudence in the management of a train under their exclusive care, discretion and control, though the train belongs to another company.¹ But it is not negligence for a railroad company to receive, in the ordinary course of business, the cars of another company and to transport them, although they may not be fitted with the most approved appliances.² And furthermore, the transportation company is not bound to inspect such foreign car until the same has been in its charge and use a reasonable time. But if such company permits a defective and dangerous car belonging to another company to come into its yards or upon its tracks and remain for so many days that it might, by the exercise of a high degree of diligence, discover its condition, it will be liable for an injury occasioned to an employee in consequence.³

(e) Buffers, Poles, Ladders, Brakes, etc.—A railroad company must also use safe and proper buffers;⁴ likewise push poles suited to the purposes of their use;⁵ also ladders free from serious defect.⁶

Erie R. Co., 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 324; Warner v. Erie R. Co., 39 N. Y. 468; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Conroy, 68 Ill. 560; Shanny v. Androscoggin Mills, 66 Me. 420; Flannagan v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 50 Wis. 462; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 150; Guttridge v. Mo. Pac. R. Co., 94 Mo. 468; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Avery, 109 Ill. 314; Gottlieb v. New York etc. R. Co., 100 N. Y. 462; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 421; Keith v. New Haven etc. R. Co., 140 Mass. 175; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 421; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Carlton, 60 Tex. 397; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 350.

1. Fletcher v. Boston etc. R. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 9.

2. Baldwin v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 50 Iowa 680.

Repeating of Original Test.—Neither is such transporting company bound to repeat the tests which are proper to be used in the original construction of such cars, but may assume that all parts of the cars which appear to be in good condition are so in fact. Ballou v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 257; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480.

Latent Defects.—Nor to guard against defects undiscoverable by suitable inspection. Mackin v. Boston etc. R. Co., 135 Mass. 201; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 196; Smith v. Potter, 46 Mich. 258; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 140; Fay v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 30 Minn. 231; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 193.

3. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bragonier, 11 Ill. App. 516.

Foreign Cars Regularly Transported.

—But where the cars of one company pass regularly and for an extended period into the use of another, the latter is bound to exercise the same care to ascertain and cure defects in such cars as in the case of its own rolling stock. Gottlieb v. New York etc. R. Co., 29 Hun (N. Y.) 637; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Valirius, 56 Ind. 511.

4. Ellis v. New York etc. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 546; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 641; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Flanagan, 77 Ill. 365.

5. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Jackson (Va. 1888), 6 S. E. Rep. 220.

6. Carey v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Wis. 608; Goodman v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 81 Va. 571.

Defective Bung.—M was conductor of freight train on R. & D. R. R., running from Greensboro to Richmond. A car was taken into train during the night at Burkeville, the handle of the ladder whereof had been broken off long enough for the fracture to appear weather-worn. Next morning at Powhatan station, M, attempting to descend this ladder, face towards it, caught at, and would have caught the handle, had it been in its place, but fell and was killed. Held, defendant was guilty of negligence in permitting the car ladder to remain out of order, which negligence caused M's death, and renders defendant liable for damages. Richmond etc. R. Co. v. Moore, 78 Va. 93; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 239.

A railroad company must also furnish brakes, stout and well made.¹ But, in the absence of proof to the contrary, there is a presumption that iron used in the construction of a car brake is of good quality.² The company is also bound to provide platform lumber cars with side stakes;³ and footboards over open cars.⁴

In an action against a railroad company for personal injuries, plaintiff testified that he was injured while attempting to board a moving freight train in discharge of his duties as defendant's brakeman, and that the accident was caused by want of the ordinary step to the ladder by which he attempted to mount, of which defect he was not aware, but which he might have seen had he looked. The conductor and another brakeman testified that plaintiff was not in the discharge of his duties; others testified that plaintiff had been forward for a drink of water, and that he had so stated since the accident. Plaintiff's physicians testified that plaintiff told them that he was injured in jumping from the engine, and through no fault of defendant. No one except plaintiff saw the accident. Held, that there was such a preponderance of testimony in favor of defendant that a judgment for plaintiff would be reversed. Mo. Pacific R. Co. v. Walker (Tex.), 7 S. W. Rep. 791; Williams v. Clough, 3 H. & N. 258; Potts v. Plunkett, 33 Law T. 111; 9 Ir. C. L. 290.

Defective Ladder on Foreign Car—The facts being as follows: The plaintiff was injured in consequence of a defective step ladder on one of defendant's freight cars. He was not in the service of the defendant company, but of another company which was then using the car in its own business. The car had been sent over the road of the latter company, which connected with that of the defendant, consigned to a point in another State; but, on its return, it was transferred beyond the point of junction at which it should have been returned to defendant, and was loaded with freight consigned to a distant point on such connecting road. It was held that the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff in respect to the condition of the car growing out of contract or otherwise, and that an action could not be maintained. Sawyer v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 38 Minn. 103; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Co. Cas. 394.

1. Texas etc. R. Co. v. McAttee, 61 Tex. 695; Central Trust Co. v. Tex. etc. R.

Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 448; Wonder v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 32 Md. 411; 3 Am. Rep. 143; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Taylor, 69 Ill. 461; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. George, 19 Ill. 510; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Jewell, 46 Ill. 99; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Swett, 45 Ill. 197.

Flaw in Brake Rod—A company is responsible for an injury suffered by an employee through a flaw in the rod of a car brake which might have been discovered by an ordinarily careful inspection, the plaintiff having had no reasonable opportunity to make. Johnson v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 81 N. Car. 446. But a defect which did not exist when last inspected, inspections being frequently made, is not such a one as will hold an employer liable in case of an injury arising therefrom. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Hagar, 11 Ill. App. 498.

Improper Brake Pin—A brake, which had been examined and found in good order a short time before, fell when plaintiff attempted to use it, and he was thrown under the car. There was no evidence as to whether the brake pin fell out or broke, or that proper inspection could have prevented the accident. Philadelphia R. Co. v. Hughes, 119 Pa. St. 301; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 348.

Continuing to Use Old Fashioned Brake—Where Evidence Was Contradictory—Where the evidence showed that the accident was occasioned by the fracture of an old fashioned brake which was less effectual than a more modern make, but as to safety of which compared with old form plaintiff's evidence was contradictory, it was held that there was no evidence of negligence for the jury. Disher v. New York etc. R. Co., 94 N. Y. 622; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 223.

2. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Hughes, 119 Pa. St. 301; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 348.

3. Bushby v. New York etc. R. Co., 107 N. Y. 374.

4. Hosie v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 75 Iowa 683; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Harper, 44 Ark. 524.

(f) Allowing Disobedience of Orders.—A railway company is likewise negligent in allowing its orders to be disobeyed.¹

(g) Running Trains—Speed.—A railroad company is liable for injury arising from the reckless or careless running of its trains.² Or the sudden starting of the same without notice.³ Or the run-

1. Southern Kan. R. Co. v. Crocker, 41 Kan. 747; Kern v. De Castro etc. Sugar Refining Co., 5 N. Y. Supp. 548; Schultz v. Moon, 33 Mo. App. 329; Bajus v. Syracuse etc. R. Co., 5 N. Y. Supp. 804; Rikel v. Ferguson, 5 N. Y. Supp. 774; Hotis v. New York etc. R. Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 605; Nichols v. Bush etc. Mfg. Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 601; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Hall, 87 Ala. 708; McCarthy v. Horn, 5 N. Y. Supp. 917; Fredenburg v. North Central R. Co., 114 N. Y. 582; Carpenter v. Merc. Nat. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 315; Nadau v. White R. Lumber Co. (Wis. 1880), 43 N. W. Rep. 1135; Oehme v. Cook, 7 N. Y. Supp. 764.

Habitual Abuse of Rules and Regulations.—The right of a railway engineer to recover will not be defeated by the fact that at the time of the accident he was violating a rule of the railroad company forbidding engineers to permit firemen to operate the engine except when they are themselves present upon them, there being evidence to the effect that at the time of the accident, and for years before, there was an established usage on the part of defendant's engineers, known and acquiesced in by the superior officers, to allow firemen to make short moves, the engineer not being at the time on the engine, but near enough to give directions. Barry v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 98 Mo. 62; Hayes v. Bush etc. Mfg. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 407.

Injury to Passenger Through Servant's Breach of Rule.—Defendant recovered a judgment against a railroad company for personal injuries received by him while in the company's employ as a freight conductor. At the time of the injury, a passenger was riding on the freight train with the consent of defendant, who knew that this was against a rule of this company. The passenger was injured at the same time as defendant, and sued the company therefor. Held, that defendant being insolvent the company could enjoin the collection of his judgment to the amount sued for by the passenger until that suit was decided, and, if judgment was rendered against the company therein, have it, satisfied out of defendant's judgment as the proximate cause of the injury to the passenger was, as between the railroad company and defendant, defendant's permitting him to ride on the freight train against the rule. Memphis etc. R. Co. v. Greer, 87 Tenn. 697.

Operation of Engine by Fireman—Usage.—In a Missouri case it was held that plaintiff's right to recover was not defeated by the fact that at the time of the accident he was violating a rule of the railroad company forbidding engineers to permit firemen to operate the engine except when they themselves were upon them, there being evidence to the effect that at the time of the accident, and for years before, there was an established usage on the part of defendant's engineers, known and acquiesced in by the superior officers, to allow firemen to make short moves, the engineer not being at the time on the engine, but near enough to give directions. Barry v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 98 Mo. 62.

2. Dick v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co. (Ohio), 38 Ohio St. 389; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101; Wright v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 10 Q. B. 252. But see Jackson v. Kansas City etc. R. Co., 31 Kan. 761; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 178, a case of the reversal of an engine in switching and making up trains.

Failure to give signal held not to be negligence, where employee at elevator was injured owing to failure of employee of elevator company to give usual signal, viz: to cry "the cars are coming." Speed v. Atlantic & Pac. R. Co., 71 Mo. 303; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77.

3. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bingenheimer, 116 Ill. 226; Campbell v. New York etc. R. Co., 35 Hun (N. Y.) 506.

Collision While Unloading Freight.—In an action to recover for personal injuries resulting from alleged negligence, it appeared the defendant company put the plaintiff and others of its servants to work unloading a railroad freight car standing on a spur of a side track having connection with other tracks only at one end, and being a track not used for passing trains, and there being nothing to lead the laborers to believe the ning of its trains at an immoderate rate of speed.¹ And the fact that an engineer is under instructions to make certain time does not modify or dispense with a standing rule as to the care to be observed in approaching stations.² Of course, evidence that a train was run at an immoderate rate of speed is improperly admitted where negligence of that kind is not pleaded.³

4. Duty to Protect Servant.⁴—A railroad company is liable for negligence in failing to protect a servant when exposed to danger.⁵ And the duty to protect, of course, applies to employers of every description.⁶

car they were unloading would be disturbed, and while so engaged the loaded car was violently struck by other cars which became detached from an engine used in switching cars in the yard, whereby the plaintiff was injured. It was held that it was the duty of the defendant not to have brought on this peril without timely notice to the laborers so engaged; that either the cars ought not to have been brought into the position they were, without notice, or it should have been first ascertained that no danger to the laborers could result therefrom, and that the failure to do so was gross negligence. The Chicago Rolling Mill Co. v. Johnson, 114 Ill. 57.

1. Thompson on Neg. 418.

Rate of Speed in Moving Cars—Instructions.—It is not erroneous to tell the jury that it would not be negligence to move the cars at a rate of speed not greater than five or six miles an hour. Brazee v. Western etc. R. Co., 93 N. Car. 313.

Throwing of Mail Bag from Rapidly Moving Train.—But the fact that a train was running past a station at the rate of thirty or thirty-five miles an hour does not render a company liable for injury to its servants at a station caused by throwing of mail bag from such train. Muster v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 61 Wis. 325; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 113.

Unlawful Rate Within City Limits.—And the fact that a train was run at an unlawful rate of speed within a city is no ground for imputing negligence to the railway as between it and its employee, where there is no evidence that the injury to the latter was caused by collision with any object. Lockwood v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 55 Wis. 50; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 151.

2. Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Neer, 26 Ill. App. 356.

3. Kuhn v. Wisconsin etc. R. Co., 70 Iowa 561.

4. See post, DUTY TO PROTECT MACHINERY.

5. Omission to Provide Warm Car.—Where a railroad track was badly drifted with snow, A, an employee, was induced to go out in the night time to shovel, by the promise that a car should be kept near by in which he could be warmed. This was not done and his feet were frozen. It was held that he could recover. Hyatt v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 19 Mo. App. 634; Dick v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co., 38 Ohio St. 389; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101.

Promise of Vice Principal to Protect.—In Missouri, it is held that the servant of a railway company may rely on the vice principal's promise to protect him while at work on a side track, notwithstanding the existence of a rule of the company requiring servants to protect themselves by putting out flags while engaged in such work. Moore v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 85 Mo. 588; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 509; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Watts, 63 Tex. 549; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277.

Watchman Near Dangerous Bank.—The under boss of a gravel train gang was directed by his immediate superior to take men and dig out a car which had been partly covered and derailed by a fall of gravel from a high bank near by. He proceeded to dig out the car and while so employed was killed by the embankment caving in. Prior to that time the custom had been to station a watchman to give notice to the workmen of danger from the falling bank, but it was omitted on that occasion. The company was held to be liable. Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Crockett, 19 Neb. 138; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 390.

6. Nelson v. Johansen, 18 Neb. 180; 53 Am. Rep. 806; Larson v. Berquist, 34 Kan. 334; 55 Am. Rep. 249. Cases of the improper exposure of an infant servant.

Hole in Floor.—But it has been held not to be negligence for a master to leave a small hole in a floor, useful for the purposes for which the room is used, and not in the ordinary line of travel, partially unprotected for a few days while changes and repairs are being made.¹

Failure to Provide Fire Escape.—If a manufacturing establishment has a mill properly constructed for its ordinary business, it is not, in the absence of a statutory requirement, responsible to a employee for not providing a means of escape from a fire which is not caused by the negligence of the corporation.² And it is likewise the duty of the employer to use all reasonable and necessary means to protect one employed against any superadded danger that might be expected to arise from extrinsic causes.³

Wheeler v. Mason Mfg. Co., 135 Mass. 294. Servant injured by unguarded saw with which he was working. But see Thorsen v. Babcock, 68 Mich. 523, where a boy working on sawdust carrier was injured.

Injury from Falling Brick.—Where a laborer was killed by the falling of a brick upon his head, the evidence tending to show a want of protection against such an accident, it was held that a verdict against the owner of the building should not be disturbed. Ford v. Lyons, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 512.

1. Wannamaker v. Burke, 111 Pa. St. 423; Wheeler v. Mason Mfg. Co., 135 Mass. 294.

Unguarded Rollers.—A boy was engaged to work on a train of rollers in a spike mill; after having been at work a few days he was, while fulfilling his duty, caught by the cogs of the rollers, drawn in and hurt; a board protection extended along the rollers, but stopped short of the point at which the boy had to stand to perform part of his work about the rollers; had the board extended three feet further than it did he could have done his work in safety. Held, there was sufficient evidence of negligence on the part of the employer and mill owner to require the submission of the case to the jury. Rummell v. Dilworth, 111 Pa. St. 343.

2. Jones v. Granite Mills, 126 Mass. 84.

Door Sill Slightly Defective.—In Wilson v. Allen Paper Car Wheel Co., 29 Fed. Rep. 840, it was held that an employer was not negligent in providing door sill one and one half inches higher than floor, over which truck driver was compelled to drive a loaded truck.

3. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Watts, 63 Tex. 549; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277;

Hough v. Texas etc. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213.

Promise of Foreman that Cars Should Not be Moved.—Plaintiff, who was a car repairer, was ordered by his foreman to go under certain cars and repair a defective drawbar, said foreman assuring him that he would see that the cars were not moved. No red flag was put out according to the rules of the company; notwithstanding the foreman's promise, the cars were moved and the plaintiff injured. Held, that the company was liable. Moore v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 85 Mo. 588; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 509.

Declaration of Foreman that Rail was Free and Clear.—Where a railroad section hand was ordered to take up a rail and was told by the foreman that it was free and clear, when the contrary was the case, and the rail rebounded and injured the hand, it was held that he could recover. Rowland v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 463.

Lashing Spare Wheel—Failure to Give Seaman Notice.—Defendant, master of a vessel, caused the spare wheel, which in its ordinary condition rested loosely and unfastened upon the drum of the steam wheel, to be lashed so that it would rotate with the drum, thus rendering the apparatus dangerous to one engaged in cleaning it. No notice of the changed condition of the wheel was given to libellant, a seaman, in consequence of which, while the latter was engaged in his duty of cleaning the apparatus, his hand was caught and so injured as to require amputation. Held, that defendant was liable for the injury in the sum of $4,000. Withcofsky v. Wier (N. Y.), 32 Fed. Rep. 301. And see Watson v. The Houston & T. C. R. Co., 58 Tex. 434; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 213.

But a railroad company is not absolutely bound to make all necessary guards against danger caused by ordinary storms, and to guard against landslides, washouts and obstructions, which might endanger the lives of its employees.¹

5. Duty to Fence Machinery.—Neither does the neglect to fence the ordinary machinery of a servant's employment, of itself, make a master liable to him for an injury preventible by such precautions.² But where a statute requires machinery to be fenced, a failure to do so is negligence per se, and the master is liable unless it fully appears that the servant assumed the risk.³

6. Ropes, Chains and Mine Machinery.⁴—An employer is likewise liable for injury arising from a defective rope.⁵ Suitable chains

1. Gates v. Southern Minn. R. Co., 28 Minn. 110; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 237.

Extraordinary Storm.—A company is not liable on the ground of negligence for injuries caused by accidents occasioned by storms of extraordinary violence. Houston etc. R. Co. v. Fowler, 56 Tex. 452; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 504. See Gates v. Southern Minn. R. Co., 28 Minn. 110; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 237.

2. Sullivan v. India Mfg. Co., 113 Mass. 396.

Failure to Box Cogs.—Where, in an action against a railroad company to recover damages for personal injury received by an employee in attempting to oil an iron punch, driven by iron cog wheels which were six or seven feet from the floor of the shop, the evidence offered showed that it was not usual to box or fence such machinery, and that it was so arranged with a tight and loose pulley that the same could be immediately brought to a standstill by throwing the belt upon the loose pulley. It was held that the failure or negligence to box or fence such cog wheels was not of itself culpable negligence on the part of the company. Sanborn v. Atchison etc. R. Co., 35 Kan. 292. See Stone v. Oregon Mfg. Co., 4 Oreg. 52.

3. Clarke v. Hohmes, 7 H. & N. 942; Gibbs v. Crombie, 2 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ed., Sc.) 210.

Statute Referring to Minors.—A lad about thirteen years old was employed as a slate picker in a coal breaker. Another lad, who was attending the machinery, called to him to bring to him the oil can, and he left his post and, in taking the can, fell into a pair of rollers breaking coal, where he was severely injured. It appeared that the rollers were covered with a box upon the top of which was an opening covered by a plank which was displaced at the time of the accident, and was so often before with the knowledge of the injured boy. Held, that the provision in the Act of March 3rd, 1870, that all machinery where boys work shall be properly "fenced off" was intended to mean properly protected, and that in providing this cover for the rollers the employer did his whole duty under the act. Honor v. Albrightson, 63 Pa. St. 475.

4. See post, LATENT DEFECTS.

5. Dixon v. Rankin, 14 Sec. Ses. (Sc.) 493; Boardman v. Brown, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 336; rope used in excavation of tunnel.

An employer is liable in damages to an employee who is injured through the stretching of the rope of a derrick. Courtney v. Cornell, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 286.

Derrick Rope Two Years Old.—An employee of a railroad company was killed while at work by the breaking of a rope on a derrick in use and belonging to the company. It was shown that the rope externally appeared sound, but had been in use for two or three years, and continually exposed to the weather, and there was evidence that it was actually rotten when the break occurred. There was evidence also that such a rope, after exposure for a year or more, becomes unsound, although this one betrayed no outward sign of decay. Held, that there was evidence for the jury upon the question whether such a rope was a sound one, and if not, the railroad company would be liable for one injured by reason of such unsoundness. Baker v. Allegheny Valley R. Co., 95 Pa. St. 211; 40 Am. Rep. 639.

Where Suitable Rope Is Furnished—Failure to Use.—In an action for inju-also must be furnished an employee.¹ Likewise machinery and appliances in coal mines.² Also proper rails in the yards of manufacturing establishments.³ Proper and unworn nuts should alone be used on machinery.⁴

7. Accidental and Improbable Injuries.—A master is not liable where the cause of the injury was purely accidental.⁵ Nor can an employer be held liable as for negligence in omitting to guard ries sustained by plaintiff while working for defendant on a derrick, caused by the breaking of a rope, there was no evidence that the foreman was not fully competent, or that the other workmen needed to be more competent, or that any of the apparatus was in any way defective. The evidence showed that defendants had furnished a supply of new rope for any that might be defective, and there was a sufficient supply of tackle also furnished. Held, that plaintiff could not recover. McKinnon v. Norcross, 148 Mass. 533.

Rope Carefully Examined by Both Parties.—Plaintiff, who was an experienced well digger, was employed to clean out a well, and the rope furnished him to enable him to descend into it was examined carefully both by plaintiff and defendant's overseer, and pronounced a good one and sufficient for the purpose for which it was to be used. Held, that plaintiff could not recover for injuries caused by the breaking of the rope. Reid v. Central R. & B. Co. 81 Ga. 694.

1. Murphy v. Phillips, 35 L. J., N. S. 477.

2. Defective Cage.—A person employed as cager at the bottom of the shaft of a coal mine, who is injured in the performance of his duty by a lump of coal falling from the top of the shaft from an uncovered cage, is entitled to recover damages under the provisions of the Missouri act of March 23rd, 1881, requiring the cage to be covered "so as to keep safe, as far as possible, persons descending into and ascending out of said shaft," although he may not be strictly within the letter of the clause. Durrant v. Lexington Coal Min. Co., 97 Mo. 62.

Cable and Hook.—But the owner of a coal mine is not liable for an injury arising from the use of a hook attached to a cable used in drawing cars, it not appearing that such use had caused accidents before. Burke v. Witherbee, 98 N. Y. 562.

3. Defective Brake—Mining Car.—Intestate was a "door boy" in the defendant's mines, his duty being to open and close doors, one of which was the "intake," or door out of which the cars were run. As cars came on the main track loaded, the brakes were applied and the wheels blocked by a "spragger" until the train was made up, when the brakes were loosened and of its own momentum it went down the track, and at a signal the "door boy" would open the "intake" door, to do which he had to cross the track. The only lights were the miners' lamps, one of which the train runner carried on the front car. The accident occurred by the weight of one car starting the others, the brakes of same being defective, and but one "spragger" was on duty at the time, instead of two, as usual. Intestate's position was in a space of about five feet wide between the mine wall and the track, at the "intake" door. The train with no runner on collided with the door, killing intestate instantly. Held, evidence of defendant's negligence sufficient to sustain a verdict for plaintiff. Southwest Va. Imp. Co. v. Smith (Va. 1888); 7 S. E. Rep. 365; Osborne v. Morgan, 137 Mass. 1.

4. Plaintiff, an employee of defendant, was injured by the falling of a pulley, caused by a wheel working from its shaft impinging upon and unscrewing the nut holding it on the shaft. The nut should have been fastened so that the friction would tighten it. The defect was known to defendant, but not to plaintiff. Held, that the defendant was liable. Columbia etc. R. Co. v. Hawthorn, 3 Wash. Ter. 353. See Berger v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 39 Minn. 78; Foster v. Pusey (Del. 1888), 14 Atl. Rep. 545.

5. Gassaway v. Georgia Southern R. Co., 69 Ga. 347.

Falling of Coal from Tender.—An injury to a track walker in the employ of a railroad by a piece of coal falling upon him from the tender of a passing engine, in which the coal was piled up above the top, was held to be a pure accident for which no action would lie.

against accidents that are not likely to happen.¹ And the fact that the accident was unusual or extraordinary does not tend to prove negligence on the part of a railroad company.² Nor is an employer negligent in pursuing a certain line of conduct, where nothing has ever occurred to suggest it to be negligence in the master in so doing.³

8. Latent Defects.—An employer is not liable to a servant injured through a latent defect, whose existence he did not suspect.⁴ But otherwise if he should have known of the defect, but failed to learn of its existence, through negligence.⁵

9. Use of Machinery for Improper Purpose.—Nor is a master liable

Schultz v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Wis. 616; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Co., 404.

Order to Hurry.—A railroad company is not liable to a servant injured while obeying a command to hurry to supper. Piquegno v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 52 Mich. 40; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 210.

Planing Machine.—A fairly intelligent youth of sixteen had his hand mutilated by the jointer in a planing mill, where for two weeks he had been at work. He had had no previous experience with such machinery, but the dangerous nature of the jointer was manifest to anyone who looked at it, and he would not have been hurt if he had not laid his hand, without looking, upon the table in which the jointer operated. Held, that the injury was accidental, and he could not recover for it. Palmer v. Harrison, 57 Mich. 182.

1. Sjogren v. Hall, 53 Mich. 274; Steffen v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 46 Wis. 259; Deford v. State, 30 Md. 179; McHenry v. Marr, 39 Md. 510.

2. Kuhn v. Wisconsin etc. R. Co., 70 Iowa 561.

3. Kitteringham v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 62 Iowa 285.

4. As concealed defects in the timbers of a bridge. Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Conroy, 61 Ill. 162. Or railroad switch. Ladd v. New Bedford R. Co., 119 Mass. 412. Or ladder. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Platt, 89 Ill. 141.

5. Grizzle v. Frost, 3 F. & F. 622; Roberts v. Baxter, 44 Cal. 187; R. Co. v. Fort, 17 Wall. (U. S.); Clarke v. Holmes, 7 H. & N. 944; Mellors v. Shaw, 1 B. & S. 437; Ashworth v. Stanwix, 30 L. J., Q. B. 333; Roberts v. Smith, 2 H. & N. 213; Stupp v. R. Co., 9 Exch. 223; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Allen, 78 Ala. 494; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; Spicer v. South Boston Iron Co., 138 Mass. 426; McDermott v. Pacific R.

Co., 30 Mo. 115; Gibson v. Pacific R. Co., 46 Mo. 163; Devitt v. Pacific R. Co., 50 Mo. 302; Painton v. Northern etc. R. Co., 83 N. Y. 7; McGatrick v. Wason, 4 Ohio St. 566; Mad River etc. R. Co. v. Barber, 5 Ohio St. 541; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Hughes, 119 Pa. St. 301; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 549.

Fall of Pulley.—Plaintiff, an employee of defendant, was injured by the falling of a pulley, caused by a wheel working from its shaft, impinging upon and unscrewing the nut holding it on the shaft. The nut should have been so fastened that the friction would tighten it. The defect was known to defendant, but not to plaintiff. Held, that the injury was caused by a latent defect, for which defendant was liable. Columbia etc. R. Co. v. Hawthorn, 3 Wash. Ter. 353. See Berger v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 39 Minn. 78; Foster v. Pusey (Del.), 14 Atl. Rep. 545.

Spring in Drawbar.—Such as a defective spring in a drawbar, of which no one had knowledge. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Wagner, 33 Kan. 660.

Internal Defect in Timber.—Or an undiscoverable defect in the timbers of a car. Parsons v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 94 Mo. 286. And see Ryan v. Fowler, 24 N. Y. 410; Wright v. New York etc. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 562; Noyes v. Smith, 28 Vt. 59; Seymour v. Madox, 5 Eng. L. & Eq. 265; Priestly v. Fowler, 3 Mees. & Welsh 1; Couch v. Steel, 22 Eng. L. Eq. 77.

Defective Rope.—A master is not liable to a servant who is injured by reason of a defective rope, which was not known to exist by the master. Nelson v. Dubois, 11 Daly (N. Y.) 127.

Where a servant was killed by the breaking of a rope on his master's derrick on the first day of his using it in his master's work, the rope being where a machine was used for a dangerous and improper purpose, and one for which it was not provided or intended.¹

10. Exposure to Hidden Danger.—A master is also negligent in exposing his employee to dangers not obvious, or fairly incident to the employment.²

11. Introduction of Unusual Machinery.—An employer who introduces, without notice to his employees, new and unusual machinery, whether belonging to himself or another, involving an unexpected or unanticipated danger, through the introduction of which the employee, while using the care and diligence incident to his employment, meets with an accident, is liable in damages.³

12. Selection of Machinery.—The duty to furnish safe machinery does not require that the machinery used shall be the best and latest improved of its kind, but only that it shall be reasonably safe and suitable for the purpose.⁴

two or three years old and rotten, though apparently sound, it was held that the question of negligence was for the jury. Baker v. Allegheny Valley R. Co., 95 Pa. St. 211; 40 Am. Rep. 634.

1. Felch v. Allen, 98 Mass. 572. Compare Boardman v. Brown, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 336.

2. Jenny Electric L. & P. Co. v. Murphy, 15 Wes. Rep. 507; Coombs v. New Bedford Cordage Co., 102 Mass. 572; Malone v. Hawley, 46 Cal. 408; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Woodward, 41 Md. 268; Perry v. Marsh, 25 Ala. 659; Strahlendorf v. Rosenthal, 30 Wis. 676; Paulmeir v. Erie R. Co., 34 N. J. 151; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Welch, 52 Ill. 183; Snow v. Housatonic R. Co., 8 Allen (Mass.) 441; Lanning v. New York etc. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 521; R. Co. v. Caven, 9 Bush (Ky.) 559; Coughtry v. Globe Woollen Co., 56 N. Y. 124; Bech v. Carter, 68 N. Y. 283; Deford v. Keyser, 30 Md. 179; Gadley v. Hagarty, 20 Pa. St. 387.

Ice and Snow Blocked Track.—So held where a railroad company sent out cars upon a track blocked with snow and ice, in consequence of which plaintiff was injured. Fifield v. Northern R. Co., 42 N. H. 225.

Exposure to Escaping Gas.—Where a gas company, by negligence, permits the escape of poisonous gases into a room not properly arranged so as to let it pass out, and knows of such escape and the danger of inhaling the same, and either the company or its superintendent duly authorized to employ and discharge, manage, direct and control its employees or workmen, orders a servant to do certain work in such room, and the servant, in obedience to such order, without knowledge of the danger to which he is exposed, and without fault or negligence on his part, undertakes to do the work and is overcome by the gas so escaping, whereby he falls and receives an injury from which he dies, the company will become liable to the personal representative of such deceased servant, in damages, for his death. Citizens' Gas etc. Co. v. O'Brien, 118 Ill. 174.

3. O'Neil v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 337; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 614; Walsh v. Peete Salve Co., 110 Mass. 23.

4. Hickey v. Taaffe, 105 N. Y. 26; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Londergan, 118 Ill. 41; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 491; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 18 Ill. App. 119; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. McCormick, 74 Ind. 440; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 474; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Orr, 84 Ind. 50; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; McGinnis v. Canada etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 466; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 135; Pittsburgh & C. R. Co. v. Sentmeyer, 92 Pa. St. 276; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 508; Payne v. Reese, 100 Pa. St. 301; Hayden v. Smithville Mfg. Co., 29 Conn. 249; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Asbury, 84 Ill. 429; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Valerius, 56 Ind. 512; Muldowney v. Illinois C. R. Co., 39 Iowa 615; Shanny v. Androscoggin Mills, 66 Me. 520; Cumberland R. Co. v. State, 45 Md. 229; Arkerson v. Dennison, 117 Mass. 407; Botsford v. Mich. etc. R. Co., 33 Mich. 256; Le Claire v. First Div. etc. R. Co., 23 Minn. 9; Nolan v. Shackle, 3 Mo. App. 300;

Railroad companies are ordinarily in duty bound to adopt new inventions as soon as they have been tested and practically found to be more safe than appliances in use.¹

The question of suitability of a certain machine or appliance is for the jury.² But it should not be left to the jury to say what machines, appliances, or tools, should be used by a master, in order to escape liability for injury to an employee caused by the negligence of a co-employee.³ The degree of care required of a master in furnishing safe machinery for the use of his servant is to be measured by the circumstances; as the kinds of machinery necessary, the nature of the business, the incidental hazards, etc.⁴

A master cannot claim immunity upon the ground that he has exercised due care in selecting mechanics of competent skill in the selection or construction of such machinery.⁵

Fifield v. Northern R. Co., 42 N. J. 225; Paulmier v. Erie R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 151; Booth v. Boston etc. R. Co., 67 N. Y. 593; Hardy v. Carolina etc. R. Co., 76 N. Car. 5; Mullan v. Philadelphia etc. R. Co., 78 Pa. St. 25; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 27; International R. Co. v. Doyle, 49 Tex. 190; Dasey v. Phillips etc. Co., 42 Wis. 583; Hough v. Texas etc. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Flanigan, 77 Ill. 365; Laning v. New York etc. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 521; Ryan v. Fowler, 24 N. Y. 510; Seaver v. Boston R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 466; Park v. O'Brien, 23 Conn. 239; Norris v. Litchfield, 35 N. H. 271; Wright v. New York etc. R. Co., 25 N. Y. 562.

1. Burns v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 69 Iowa 450; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Allen, 78 Ala. 494; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; Fort Wayne etc. R. Co. v. Gildersleeve, 33 Mich. 133; Botsford v. Michigan etc. R. Co., 33 Mich. 256; Western etc. R. Co. v. Bishop, 50 Ga. 465; Wonder v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 32 Md. 441; Salters v. Delaware etc. Canal Co., 3 Hun (N. Y.) 338; Stack v. Patterson, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 225; Devitt v. Pacific R. Co., 50 Mo. 302; Dynen v. Leach, L. J., Exch. 221. Compare St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Valerius, 56 Ind. 511; Hayden v. Smithville Mfg. Co., 29 Conn. 548; Kelley v. Silver Spring Min. Co., 7 Rep. 60.

2. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Heenan, 103 Pa. St. 124.

3. Cappins v. New York etc. R. Co., 43 Hun (N. Y.) 26.

4. Jones v. New York Central etc. R. Co., 22 Hun (N. Y.) 284.

5. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. McKee, 37 Kan. 592; Collyer v. Pennsylvania etc.

R. Co., 49 N. J. L. 59; Walker v. Bolling, 22 Ala. 294; Wells v. Coe, 9 Cal. 159; Miller v. Union Pacific R. Co., 3 Colo. 492; Wilson v. Willimantic Linen Co., 50 Conn. 433; Krueger v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 111 Ind. 51; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 329; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Moore, 29 Kan. 632; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243; Wheeler v. Wason Mfg. Co., 135 Mass. 294; Rogers v. Ludlow Mfg. Co., 144 Mass. 108; Thompson v. Drymala (Minn.), 1 N. W. Rep. 955; Reber v. Tower, 11 Mo. App. 199; Lutz v. Geisel, 23 Mo. App. 676; Herriman v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 27 Mo. App. 435; Brothers v. Carlton, 52 Mo. 372; Flike v. Boston etc. R. Co., 53 N. Y. 549; Corcoran v. Holbrook, 59 N. Y. 517; Malone v. Hathaway, 64 N. Y. 5; Pantzar v. Tilly Foster Min. Co., 99 N. Y. 368; Benzing v. Steinway, 101 N. Y. 547; Bushby v. New York etc. R. Co., 107 N. Y. 374; Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. Smith (Neb.), 36 N. W. Rep. 285; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. McElvea (Tex.), 9 So. W. Rep. 313; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Rand (Tex. 1882), 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 399; Brabbitts v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 38 Wis. 289; Bessex v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 45 Wis. 477; Herbert v. North Pac. R. Co., 3 Dak. 38; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 85; Michigan Central R. Co. v. Smithson, 45 Mich. 212; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101; Ellet v. St. L. etc. R. Co., 76 Mo. 518; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 183; Smith v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 15 Neb. 483; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 561; Cowles v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 84 N. Car. 309; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 90; Hain v. Smith, 80 N. Y. 458; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 545; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Keary, 3 Ohio St. 201; Berea Stone

The question of due care in the selection of machinery is ordinarily for the jury.¹ But it is the duty of the court to determine whether the proof is sufficient to authorize the jury to find due care.²

13. Evidence as to Sufficiency.—When the sufficiency of a machine, instrument or appliance is in question, evidence of similar accidents from the same cause is competent.³ Evidence is also admissible to prove that after an accident the machine which caused it was repaired or improved, as tending to establish that it was not safe at the time of the accident.⁴

14. Sufficiency Not Warranted.—There is no implied warranty on the part of a master that the tools furnished are sound and fit for the purposes intended.⁵

15. Repairs and Inspections.—A master is likewise liable to his servant for an injury arising from a failure on his part to use reasonable care to keep buildings, machinery, tools, etc., in a safe and fit condition for use.⁶ And the question of reasonable care has

Co. v. Kraft, 31 Ohio St. 287; Wills v. Oregon R. & N. Co., 11 Ore. 257; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 539; Gunter v. Graniteville Mfg. Co., 18 S. Car. 262; 44 Am. Rep. 573; Wells v. Coe, 9 Colo. 159; Kelley v. Erie Tel. Co., 34 Minn. 321; Bridges v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 6 Mo. App. 389; Mulvey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 14 R. I. 204; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Harper, 44 Ark. 524; Hough v. Texas etc. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213, 218; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. McDaniel, 102 U. S. 456; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 58. See FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 7, p. 825, 830.

1. A legislative act required that all slope mines should be provided with two passage ways, one to be used and set apart exclusively as a man way. A, an employee, was killed while passing through the slope, and in an action brought by his widow to recover damages for his death, there was a dispute as to whether the manway was in proper form, or in proper condition, so that A might have used it instead of the slope. The court left as a question of fact for the jury. Held, there was no error in this. Cambria Iron Co. v. Shaffer (Pa. 1887), 8 Atl. Rep. 204.

2. Wormell v. Maine Central R. Co., 79 Me. 397; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 272; Sweeney v. Berlin etc. Envelope Co., 101 N. Y. 520; 54 Am. Rep. 722; Slack v. Patterson, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 225; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Elliott, 1 Cold. (Tenn.) 1012; Dynen v. Leach, 26 L. J. Exc. 221.

Owners of Mines—Precautions Against Fire Damp.—The owner of a mine is not bound to employ the most expensive precautions against fire damp, but only to use reasonable efforts for ventilation. Berns v. Gaston Gas Coal Co., 27 W. Va. 285.

3. Morse v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 30 Minn. 465; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 168.

4. Columbia etc. R. Co. v. Hawthorn, 3 Wash. Ter. 353; Pennsylvania Tel. Co. v. Varnan (Pa.), 1888, 15 Atl. Rep. 624; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. McKee, 37 Kan. 592.

5. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Allen, 78 Ala. 494; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Duffey, 35 Ark. 602; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 637; Wells v. Coe, 9 Colo. 159; Columbus etc. R. Co. v. Troesch, 68 Ill. 545; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Brogonier, 11 Ill. App. 516; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Fenton, 12 Ill. App. 417; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Pratt, 14 Ill. App. 346; Smith v. Sellers, 40 La. An. 527; Flynn v. Beebe, 98 Mass. 575; Siela v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 82 Mo. 420; Batterson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 184; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 123; Porter v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 66; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 44; Pleasants v. Raleigh etc. R. Co., 95 N. Car. 96; Painton v. North Cent. R. Co., 83 N. Y. 7; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 454; Mad River etc. R. Co. v. Barber, 5 Ohio St. 541; Sykes v. Packer, 99 Pa. St. 465; Green etc. R. Co. v. Bresmer, 97 Pa. St. 103; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 647; Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Delahaunty, 53 Tex. 206; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 628.

6. 2 Thompson on Neg. 984. Holden relation to, and is dependent upon, the facts and circumstances of each particular case.¹ And his liability is the same when overseers are deputed to perform the duty and are negligent.²

But while an employer must frequently inspect machinery in use by his employees,³

v. Fitchburg R. Co. (Mass.), 129 Mass. 268; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; Michigan etc. R. Co. v. Smithson, 45 Mich. 210; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101; King v. Ohio etc. R. Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 277. And see Hough v. Texas etc. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213, 218; Wells v. Coe, 9 Colo. 159; Shanny v. Androscoggin Mills, 66 Me. 420; Snow v. Housatonic R. Co. (Mass.), 8 Allen 441; McMilla v. U. P. Brick Works, 6 Mo. App. 434; Lewis v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 59 Mo. 495; Chapman v. Erie R. Co., 55 N. Y. 579; Warner v. Erie etc. R. Co., 39 N. Y. 468; King v. New York etc. R. Co., 4 Hun (N. Y.) 769; Lanning v. New York etc. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 521; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Swett, 45 Ill. 197; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Welch, 52 Ill. 183; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Ingraham, 77 Ill. 309; Goheen v. Texas etc. R. Co., 3 Cent. L. J. 382; Weems v. Matheson, 4 McQueen (Sc.) 215.

1. Hallower v. Henley, 6 Cal. 200; Hayden v. Smithville Mfg. Co., 29 Conn. 548; Fletcher v. Boston etc. R. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 9; Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray (Mass.) 274; R. Co. v. Moore, 21 N. J. L. 824; Pennsylvania etc. R. Co. v. Ogier, 35 Pa. St. 60; Keegan v. Western etc. R. Co., 8 N. Y. 175; Ryan v. Fowler, 24 N. Y. 410; Byron v. Telegraph Co., 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 39; Noyes v. Smith, 28 Vt. 59; Paterson v. Wallace, 1 Macq. (Sc.) App. Cas. 748; Brydon v. Stewart, 2 Macq. (Sc.) App. Cas. 30; Marshall v. Stewart, 33 Eng. L. & E. 1; Matthews v. McDonald, 3 Macph. (Sc.) 506; Swords v. Edgar, 59 N. Y. 28; Godley v. Haggerty, 20 Pa. St. 387; Sweeney v. Old Colony R. Co., 10 Allen (Mass.) 368; Seymour v. Maddox, 6 Q. B. 376; Indemaur v. Dawes, L. R., 1 C. P. 274; Hounsell v. Smyth, 7 C. B. (N. S.) 731.

Proper Heat for Steam Boiler.—The plaintiff, while in the discharge of his duty as watchman for the railroad, in its yards at Texarkana, was injured by the explosion of the boiler of one of the company's locomotives, caused, as the plaintiff alleged, by a defect in the boiler, which the company might have discovered by the exercise of proper diligence. The defendant denied all knowledge of defects in the exploded engine, as well as a want of care on its part. The chief point in dispute was whether the boiler had been properly tested. The evidence for the plaintiff showed that one test, usually applied, had not been applied to this boiler. On the other hand, defendant introduced the evidence of mechanics experienced in such matters, who testified that the best test for finding a defect in a boiler was applied; that care and diligence failed to disclose any imperfection in the boiler. It was held that if the company omits any test of soundness of the boiler that ought to have been made, it was guilty of negligence, and it was not for the court to take the question from the jury. Noyes v. Smith, 28 Vt. 59; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 60.

2. Hough v. Texas etc. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213, 218; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. McDaniels, 107 U. S. 454; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 158. And see Mitchell v. Robinson, 80 Ind. 281; Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261. Compare Rice v. King Phillip Mills, 144 Mass. 229. And see FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 7, p. 830, where authorities are fully collected.

We find it laid down in a Massachusetts case that if a master employs a servant to work on a machine so far out of repair as to be dangerous, he is not relieved from responsibility merely by proof that he has entrusted to competent servants the duty of making ordinary repairs, and keeping it in order from day to day, if they inspected it simply to keep it in order so that it would do good work. Rogers v. Ludlow Mfg. Co., 144 Mass. 198. Compare Sanborn v. Madeira Flume & Trading Co., 70 Cal. 261.

3. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Holt, 29 Kan. 149; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 206.

The inspection must be made by competent inspectors. Durkin v. Sharp, 88 N. Y. 225. And see Braun v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Iowa 595; 36 Am. Rep. 243; Turney v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 33 Minn. 311; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 545.

he is not bound to pursue a system which will embarrass the operation of his business.¹

A railroad conductor must inspect brakes and other appliances in connection with his train, and if he fails to do so, and is injured, he cannot recover of the company though it was the duty of the car inspector also to make the examination and he failed to do so.² So also must brakemen.³

Allowing machinery to remain out of repair when its condition is brought to an employer's notice, or by proper inspection might be known, is culpable negligence.⁴

An employer is not chargeable with negligence merely because he delays for any length of time to repair a defective machine while it remains unused, and is not so situated as to create danger; nor, in case of a car, because it fails to move the same to

1. Smoat v. Mobile etc. R. Co., 67 Ala. 13; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Lyde, 57 Tex. 505; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 188; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Hughes, 109 Pa. St. 301; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 349.

2. Alexander v. Louisville R. Co., 83 Ky. 589; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 458.

It was held in one case that even if it was the duty of the conductor to inspect the cars constituting his train, it was largely a question of fact whether the short time he had been in charge of the train (thirty-six hours) was sufficient, by ordinary diligence, to have enabled him to know of the defect through which he lost his life. International etc. R. Co. v. Kindred, 57 Tex. 491; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 649.

3. Alexander v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 83 Ky. 589; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 458.

Where Inspectors Are Employed at Local Stations.—The fact that a railway company may have employed car inspectors, at certain local stations, to inspect cars, will not relieve brakemen using the same from their duty of inspecting that part of the machinery they are expected to handle, and reporting defects to the company. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bragoner, 119 Ill. 51.

Foreign Cars.—A railroad company is not liable to its brakeman for an injury caused by neglect of its competent inspector to inspect a car received from another road for transportation. Mackin v. Boston etc. R. Co., 135 Mass. 201; 46 Am. Rep. 456.

Presumption of Brakeman's Skill as Inspector.—But it was laid down in a Georgia case that there is no presumption that a brakeman has sufficient skill to determine, from an inspection of the brakes, their fitness for use. Central R. Co. v. Haslett, 74 Ga. 59.

Usual Duties as to Inspection—Evidence.—In an action involving the question of a brakeman's negligence in his failure to examine the brakes on a freight car, either party has the right to prove what were the customary and usual duties of brakemen as to the inspection of brakes. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bragoner, 119 Ill. 51.

4. North Pac. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 407; Beeson v. Green Mt. etc. Min. Co., 57 Cal. 32; Leahy v. Southern Pac. etc. R. Co., 65 Cal. 150; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 230.

Bridge.—Where a railroad corporation purchased the line of another company, of which an existing bridge formed a part, which bridge at the time of the purchase was unsafe and dangerous by reason of defects in its original plan and construction, and such defects were obvious to the eye of a skilled inspector, and could have been easily and surely ascertained by proper examination, held, that it was negligence on the part of the corporation to continue its use without such an inspection and a correction of the defects; that it was liable to an employee upon one of its trains for injuries received by a fall of the bridge; and this although the bridge had been in use for several years before the purchase. (Devlin v. Smith, 89 (N. Y. 470, distinguished.) Vosburgh v. Lake Shore R. Co., 94 N. Y. 374; 46 Am. Rep. 148; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 249.

its shops for repairs and does not make them at the place where the car was injured.¹

A master is also bound to know that a tool or machine will only last a given time, and it is his duty to renew the same at proper intervals.²

18. Master's Duty to Instruct Inexperienced and Minor Servants—

(a) General Rule.—It is the duty of a master who sets a servant to work in a place of danger to give him such notice and instruction as is reasonably required by the youth, inexperience or want of capacity of the servant; and failing to do so, is liable for the damages suffered through such neglect.³ And a master who should have known, but does not, that a machine was out of repair and dangerous is likewise liable to a servant who suffers through failure of warning.⁴ His duty is not discharged by informing the servant generally that the service engaged in is dangerous, especially where he is a person who neither by experience nor education has, or would be likely to have, knowledge of such facts; he should be informed not only that the service is dangerous, and of the perils of a particular place, but where extraordi-

1. Flannagan v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 50 Wis. 462; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 150. Approving 45 Wis. 98.

2. Baker v. Allegheny Valley R. Co., 95 Pa. St. 24; 40 Am. Rep. 639; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 141; Kitteringham v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 62 Iowa 285; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 14.

3. Atkins v. Merrick Thread Co., 142 Mass. 431; McGowan v. La Plata M. & S. Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 861; Jones v. Florence Min. Co., 66 Wis. 268; Parkhurst v. Johnson, 50 Mich. 70; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Callbreath, 66 Tex. 526; Whitelaw v. Memphis etc. R. Co., 16 Lea (Tenn.) 391; Coombs v. New Bedford Cordage Co., 102 Mass. 572; Snow v. Housatonic R. Co., 8 Allen (Mass.) 445; Sullivan v. India Mfg. Co., 113 Mass. 397; Holden v. Fitchburg R. Co., 129 Mass. 268; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; Swoboda v. Ward, 40 Mich. 420; Michigan R. Co. v. Smithson, 45 Mich. 212; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101; Perry v. Marsh, 25 Ala. 659; Atlas Engine Works v. Randall, 100 Ind. 293; 5 Am. Rep. 798; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Frawley, 110 Ind. 18; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308; Buckley v. Gutta Percha Mfg. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 450; Baxter v. Robert, 44 Cal. 187; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Smithson, 45 Mich. 212; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101; Spelman v. Fisher Iron Co., 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 151; Slater v. Jewett, 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 515.

An untruthful statement made by a servant, when he enters upon employment, that he is accustomed to such work, relieves the master from the duty of explaining the dangers ordinarily incident, but does qualify his obligation to furnish reasonably safe appliances. Steen v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 37 Minn. 310.

A fair opportunity to acquire the knowledge and skill requisite to the performance of his duties, as they are ordinarily acquired by men in the same service must be accorded a person hired to fill a certain position. Moore v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 65 Iowa 505; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 396.

4. Rice v. King Phillip Mills, 144 Mass. 229; Covey v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 86 Mo. 635; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 382; Stone v. Mfg. Co., 4 Oreg. 52; Michigan etc. R. Co. v. Dolan, 32 Mich. 510; Stark v. Patterson, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 225; Williams v. Clough, 3 H. & N. 258; Potts v. Plunkett, Jr. Com. Law (Q. B.) 290; McEwing v. Waterford etc. Railway Co., 8 Ir. Com. Law (Q. B.) 389.

Broken Track—Due Warning.—A railway company whose track is broken without any fault of its own is under no obligation to its employees to repair it within any specified time, if it duly warn them so that they shall not be injured in consequence thereof. Henry v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 495; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 110. See Hill v. Gust, 55 Ind. 45. Compare nary risks are or may be encountered, if known to the master, or should be known by him.¹

(b) Duty to Compel Obedience.—It is not sufficient for a master to give proper instructions to his servant to avoid liability; he must also see that they are obeyed.²

(c) Ordinary Processes.—But an employer is not bound to warn an experienced workman that certain appliances and processes with which he is entirely familiar are dangerous.³

O'Connor v. Adams, 120 Mass. 427; Anderson v. Morrison, 22 Minn. 274.

1. Smith v. Car Works, 60 Mich. 505.

Overhead Bridge.—Thus if a railroad company maintains a bridge over its track at a height insufficient to permit a brakeman on a train to be carried under it without stooping, the company, if it fails to warn him, is liable for an injury sustained by his head coming in contact with the bridge. Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Rowan, 104 Ind. 88; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 390.

Driving Under Low Hung Sign.—If a servant, who is engaged in backing while standing at his horses' heads, a loaded van, is directed by his master to mount the van and drive it under a gateway over which there is a sign, and then to back down, the master being familiar with the practice of so driving vans, and the servant, though an experienced teamster, never having driven under the gateway before, and their relative positions are such that the master has better means of observation than the servant, whose attention is devoted chiefly to the management of his horses, and of seasonably appreciating the dangers attending the act, and the servant, in following the directions of the master, is injured by coming in contact with the sign, the servant may maintain an action against the master for such injury. Haley v. Case, 142 Mass. 316.

Lime Kiln.—The proprietor of a lime kiln was in the habit of having the stone removed from the base of the kiln, as it was burned, and of pushing the mass, wedged into the crater above, down into the emptied space. When the mass gave way those who were upon it and crowding it down would step back to the margin of the crater to escape going down with it. The proprietor had an inexperienced laborer helping him at this work when an unusually large quantity of burned stone had been removed, and he did not warn him of the danger. When the mass dropped the workman fell with it and was burned to death. Held, that his employer was liable for causing his death by negligence. Parkhurst v. Johnson, 50 Mich. 70; 45 Am. Rep. 28.

Starting of Wash Wheels in Tannery Vats Without Notice.—Deceased was employed to remove hides from vats in a tannery and put them in wash wheels. The space between the vats and the wash wheels was about four feet wide, and the wheels in the vats were eighteen inches from the sides. Deceased was accustomed to start one of the wheels in the morning, and after it had run fifteen minutes stop it and take out the hides, when the wheel in the other vat would be started by an employee from the other side and run fifteen minutes out of each hour. Deceased knew the time when the wheels would be started. Held, that it was not negligence to start the wheel in the vat at which the deceased was not working without notice to him. Ball v. Detroit Leather Co., 73 Mich. 158.

2. Johnson v. Central Vermont R. Co., 56 Vt. 707; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 169.

3. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Clark, 108 Ill. 113; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 261.

Danger of Gas in Fire Room.—It was recently held in a Georgia case that it was not criminal negligence in a corporation not to give warning to the master machinist employed in their establishment that there was danger of fire in the gas room, or that there was danger that the wall or walls would fall in case fire occurred, it not being alleged that he was ignorant of the danger, or of the causes which produced it. Allen v. Augusta Factory (Ga.), 8 So. Rep. 68.

Tendency of Boards to Spring Back.—The tendency of a board when warped to spring back during the operation of being sawed by a circular saw is not so obvious that an inexperienced workman must be held necessarily to take

(d) Danger from Extraneous Causes.—If the employer has knowledge that the particular employment is, from extraneous causes, hazardous or dangerous to a degree beyond what it fairly imports or is understood by the employer to be, he is bound to inform him of the fact; if he fails to do so, he is liable for such damages as the employee sustains by reason of such causes.¹

(e) Patent Dangers.—It is the master's duty to instruct even where the danger or hazard is patent, if through youth, inexperience, or other cause, the servant is incompetent to fully understand the nature and extent of the hazard.²

17. Minor Servants.—(a) Work More Dangerous than Agreed Upon.—The fact that a master sets a minor servant at a more dangerous class of work than that for which such servant was originally employed, does not make him liable for injuries sustained by the minor in doing such work, unless, under all the cir-cognizance of it without being warned. Wheeler v. Wason Mfg. Co., 135 Mass. 294.

Signal Boards in Railway Station.—But signal boards warning persons to keep off tracks at their peril, erected in station used jointly by two companies, are not to be regarded as applying to the servants of either company. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Frelka, 110 Ill. 498; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 7.

Danger from Exposed Gearings.—An employer is not bound to give notice to an employee who is an experienced machinist, that the uncovered and plainly exposed gearing of machinery with which he is working is dangerous, nor can the employee recover for injury caused by coming in contact with the gearing because it might have been made less dangerous by being covered. Foley v. Pettie Machine Works (Mass. 1889), 21 N. E. Rep. 304. In this connection see Berger v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 39 Minn. 78; Hull v. Hall, 78 Me. 114; Robertson v. Cornelson (S. Car.), 34 Fed. Rep. 716; Balle v. Detroit Leather Co., 73 Mich. 158; Judkins v. Maine etc. R. Co., 80 Me. 417; Norfolk etc. R. Co. v. Jackson's Admr. (Va. 1888), 8 S. E. Rep. 370; Crowley v. Pacific Mills, 148 Mass. 228; Stephen-son v. Duncan, 73 Wis. 404; Eicheler v. St. Paul Furniture Co., 40 Minn. 263.

Open Holes in Sugar Bins.—See Bohn v. Havemeyer, 114 N. Y. 296. 402; affirming 46 Hun (N. Y.) 557.

1. This principle is not affected by the fact that the danger known to the employer arises from the felonious or tortious designs of third persons acting in hostility to him. The employee is entitled to all the information the employer may possess with regard to the danger of the employment arising from extraneous causes, to enable him to determine for himself whether, at the proffered compensation, he will assume the risk and incur the hazard. Baxter v. Roberts, 44 Cal. 187.

2. Grizzle v. Frost, 3 F. & F. 622; U. P. R. Co. v. Fort, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 554; Coombs v. Cordage Co., 102 Mass. 572. Compare Jones v. Phillips, 39 Ark. 17.

Inexperienced Boy of Seventeen.—An inexperienced boy of seventeen employed to work upon visibly dangerous machinery is entitled to warning of the danger from his employer. Dowling v. Allen, 74 Mo. 13.

Boy of Twelve—Danger from Cogs.—Plaintiff, a boy of twelve years, had worked at defendant's machine several days before he was injured. While putting a cylinder in place, which was part of his duty, his foot slipped, and, involuntarily throwing out his hand to prevent himself from falling, he thrust it into a set of cog wheels. It was not necessary for plaintiff, in discharge of his duty, to put his hands within nine inches of the cogs. Held, that the accident being the result of a cause over which the defendant had no control, defendant was not rendered liable by failure to instruct plaintiff as to the danger of cog wheels, it being obvious. Buckley v. Gutta Percha etc. Mfg. Co., 113 N. Y. 540.

Boy of Fifteen—Falling Stones in Mine.—If a boy of fifteen is sent into a mine without warning of the danger from falling stones and he is injured by one, cumstances, the setting him at such work was a negligent act on the part of such master.¹ Yet the master will be much more strictly held to the exercise of an intelligent discretion in this regard toward such persons than toward adults.²

(b) Employment of Minors—Recovery by Parent.—It is an act of negligence on the part of a railroad company to take into its employment as a brakeman a minor of such tender years as not to know the risks of the service, if the agent of the company making the contract knows that he is a minor, and that the contract is made without the consent of the parents.³ Where, therefore, a minor so employed contrary to the wish of the parent is injured in the course of his employment, the parent may recover damages.⁴ But in order that a father may recover from a railroad company, for damages resulting to him through loss of services owing to injuries sustained by his minor son while in its employ, it is necessary that he should aver and prove that the defendant knew of his son's the employer is liable. Jones v. Florence Mining Co., 66 Wis. 268; 57 Am. Rep. 269; Dowling v. Allen, 74 Mo. 13; 41 Am. Rep. 298.

Girl, as to Danger from Clay Mill.—Plaintiff was a girl employed by defendant in his clay mill, who was wholly inexperienced in the business, having been but nine days in the service, and unaware of the risk from the machinery. The superintendent put her to work to remove some clay while the rollers were in motion and she was injured. It was held that she could recover. O'Byrne v. Burn, 16 Cas. in Ct. of Sess. (2nd series) 1025. Also see Bartonshill v. McGuire, 3 Macq. 300; Indermaur v. Dawes, L. R., 2 C. P. 311.

Risk Attending Use of Laundry Machine.—A girl of fourteen, employed to feed collars to an ironing machine, was not instructed as to the obvious danger. After six weeks she caught her finger in a button hole and her hand was drawn between the rollers. Held, that her employer was not liable. Hickey v. Taaffe, 105 N. Y. 26.

Boy of Nineteen—Use of Split Saw.—Where plaintiff in an action for personal injuries done by defendant's split saw was nineteen years of age, had been in defendant's employ three years, was "put on all kinds of machinery to run," had been employed in the room where the split saw was located, and had worked at the split saw several days before he was injured in operating it, it was held that he could not hold the defendant liable on the ground that he was inexperienced and defendant should have warned him of the danger. Prentiss v. Kent Fur. Mfg. Co., 63 Mich. 478. See likewise Lewis v. McAffe, 32 Ga. 405; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Harney, 28 Ind. 28; Hill v. Gust, 55 Ind. 45; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Valerius, 56 Ind. 511; Allison v. Western etc. R. Co., 64 N. Car. 382; U. P. R. Co. v. Fort, 17 Wall. 553; Memphis etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 2 Head (Tenn.) 517; Fisk v. Central Pac. R. Co., 72 Cal. 38.

1. Anderson v. Morrison, 22 Minn. 274.

2. Lewis v. McAffe, 32 Ga. 405; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Harney, 28 Ind. 28; Hill v. Gust, 55 Ind. 45; Allison v. Western etc. R. Co., 64 N. Car. 382; U. P. R. Co. v. Fort, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 553; Memphis etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 2 Head (Tenn.) 517.

3. Goff v. Norfolk etc. R. Co. (Va.), 36 Fed. Rep. 299.

4. Grand Rapids etc. R. Co. v. Showers, 71 Ind. 451; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 9; Hamilton v. Galveston etc. R. Co., 54 Tex. 566; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 528.

Youth Twenty Years Old.—In a statutory action to recover for death caused by negligence, when the next of kin, for whose benefit the action is prosecuted, were so related to the deceased as to be entitled to his services, the law presumes some loss; and where it appeared that the deceased was a man engaged in active employment, presumably lucrative, and that he was nine months less than twenty-one years of age, it was held that a recovery might be had in behalf of the father of more than minority when it employed him.¹ And in an action brought by a parent to recover damages for an injury that resulted in the death of his son, it is incumbent upon him to show such facts as would entitle the son to recover had he been simply injured but not killed. But to recover, the parent is not required to show that deceased was a minor, whose age could and should have been known to the company.²

The mere fact that a brakeman injured was a minor will not entitle him to recover for such injury if he was physically able to perform the duties he was employed to do, and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed that he was of ordinary intelligence.³ And the fact that a minor was employed as a brakeman by a railway company without the consent of his parent will not of itself authorize a recovery for damages resulting from injuries inflicted in the course of his employment.⁴

The mere fact that a railway company employed a minor with his parent's consent in one capacity and then changes his duties is not negligence.⁵

(c) Where Minor Is Instructed.—A young and inexperienced brakeman has no greater right of action for an injury against the company employing him than an older and more experienced hand would have under the same circumstances, if his duties have been fully explained to him.⁶ Nor has any minor employee under like circumstances.⁷

merely nominal damages. Robel v. C. etc. R. Co., 35 Minn. 84.

1. Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Redeker, 67 Tex. 181.

2. Texas etc. R. Co. v. Crowder, 61 Tex. 262; 63 Tex. 505; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Carlton, 60 Tex. 400; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 350.

3. Youll v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 66 Iowa 346; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 589.

4. Texas etc. R. Co. v. Crowder, 61 Tex. 262. And see Texas etc. R. Co. v. Carlton, 60 Tex. 400; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 350.

Testimony of Father as to Boy's Appearance When Employed.—In an action by a minor against a railroad company for an injury received through the alleged negligence of the company, while in its employ, the plaintiff himself having testified before the jury, it is not error to permit the boy's father to testify as to his relative appearance as to age at the time of the injury and at the time of the trial, and that he did not appear older at the time he entered the company's employment than he really was. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Frawley, 110 Ind. 18; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308.

Danger in Transferring Lumber.—Where plaintiff, a minor, hired by his father to defendant to transfer lumber from one car to another, which work both had done for defendant before, and which was not more than ordinarily hazardous, was injured by the lumber slipping and falling, defendant was held not to be liable by reason of its failure to specially warn plaintiff of danger before putting him to work. East & West R. Co. v. Sims, 80 Ga. 807.

Declarations as to Skill by Minor Previous to Accident.—In an action by a widowed mother against a railroad company for damages for the death of her minor son, employed by the defendant without her consent, wherein the complaint alleged that the deceased came to his death by reason of injuries received by him while performing certain dangerous work at which he had been put by the defendant, and in which he was unskilled, declarations by the deceased, made prior to the accident, that he was skilled in such labor, are inadmissible in evidence against the plaintiff. Pennsylvania Co. v. Long, 94 Ind. 250.

5. Texas etc. R. Co. v. Carlton, 60 Tex. 397; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 350.

6. McGinnis v. Canada Southern Bridge Co., 49 Mich. 466.

7. McGinnis v. Canada S. Bridge Co., 49 Mich. 466; Sullivan v. India

(d) Permanent Injury.—And furthermore, a minor being damaged in his person may bring suit to recover for any permanent injury which he has sustained reaching beyond his majority.¹

(e) Failure to Instruct—Negligence of Co-employee.—And furthermore, an employer failing to make appropriate explanation to a minor servant is liable for an injury resulting from the danger known to the employer and unknown to the employee, although the immediate cause of the injury was the negligence of co-employees.²

But in one State at least it has been held that generally it is not the duty of the employer to instruct a servant in the rules applicable to the service unless information be asked, or the employee is known to be ignorant and inexperienced regarding dangers peculiar to the service.³

Where a master owes to his servant the duty of notifying him of a special peril to be encountered in the work to be done, such duty is not discharged by delegating the performance of it to a third person.⁴

18. Safe Place to Work.—The proprietors of manufacturing establishments are charged with the duty of providing their employees with a suitable place in which work may be performed with a reasonable degree of safety to them, and without exposure to dangers that are not within the obvious scope of the employ-

Mfg. Co., 113 Mass. 396; Gilbert v. Guild, 144 Mass. 60.

Where Minor Fails to Understand.—

Where a minor servant, without negligence, fails to understand instructions and is injured, the master is liable. Smith v. Car Works, 60 Mich. 504; Ryan v. Tarbox, 135 Mass. 207.

Employee of Eighteen Presumably Able to Understand.—An employee of eighteen years is ordinarily old enough to be capable of understanding the uses and dangers of a given employment. Gordon v. Reynolds Mfg. Co., 54 Hun (N. Y.) 278.

1. The Central R. Co. v. Brinsom, 64 Ga. 475; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 343.

2. Jones v. Florence Mining Co., 66 Wis. 268; 57 Am. Rep. 269. And see Dowling v. Allen, 74 Mo. 13; 41 Am. Rep. 298.

The Complaint in Such Cases.—A complaint for damages for personal injuries which proceeds upon the theory that the plaintiff, an inexperienced minor, was put to work with machinery which his employers knew to be dangerous, but of which danger they did not inform him, is sufficiently explicit as to the character of the machinery if it avers that there was danger in operating it, and that it was dangerous in the particular which caused the injury. Donley v. Scanlon, 116 Ind. 8.

3. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Watts, 63 Tex. 549; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277. Nor against an obvious danger. Costello v. Judson, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 396; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Adams, 105 Ind. 151; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408.

4. Wheeler v. Wason Mfg. Co., 135 Mass. 294; McKinney on Fellow Servants, §§ 39, 40.

Incompetency of Instructor.—An employer who furnishes an instructor to teach an ignorant servant as to the duties he is expected to perform is answerable for any injury to him arising from the incompetency or negligence of the instructor. In such a case the instructor does not stand to the party injured in the relation of a co-servant, but as a representative of the master. Brönnan v. Jordan, 13 Daly (N. Y.) 208; McKinney on Fellow Servants, §§ 39, 40.

If a flagman, aware of the approach of a backing engine, gives no warning, his negligence is imputable to the railroad company employing him. Finklestein v. New York etc. R. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 34.

ment in the business as usually carried on.¹ Ordinary care in this regard is all that is required of the master; he does not stand in the relation of an insurer to the servant against injury, and can be held chargeable only when negligence can properly be imputed to him.²

But the obligation of a master to provide reasonably safe places and structures for his servants to work upon, does not oblige him to keep a building, which they are employed in erecting, in a safe condition at every moment of their work, so far as its safety depends on the due performance of that work by them and their fellow servants.³

19. Particular Customs.—A custom with reference to the adop-

1. Smith v. Peninsular Car Works, 60 Mich. 501; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 269; Consolidated Ice Machine Co. v. Kiefer, 26 Ill. App. 466; Ferren v. Old Colony R. Co., 143 Mass. 197; Paterson v. Wallace, 1 McQ. 748; Brydon v. Stewart, 2 McQ. 30.

Construction of the Building in Use.—But although a building was negligently erected, yet if no negligence is imputable to the master, either in directing how the building should be constructed or in having knowingly committed its construction to incompetent persons, he cannot be held chargeable for injuries resulting to his servants from such defects. Brown v. Accrington Spinning Co., 3 H. & C. 511; Potts v. Port Carlisle Dock & R. Co., 8 W. R. 524; Hackett v. Middlesex Mfg. Co., 101 Mass. 101.

Dangerous Use of Unsafe Building.—Yet if the master use an unsafe building in a dangerous manner, whereby an injury occurs, he will be liable therefor. Caledonian R. Co. v. Greenock Sacking Co., 2 Ct. of Sess. (Sc.) 671 (4th series).

2. Tinney v. Boston etc. R. Co., 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 218; Wright v. New York Cent. R. Co., 25 N. Y. 562; Columbus etc. R. Co. v. Arnold, 31 Ind. 174; Columbus etc. R. Co. v. Froesch, 68 Ill. 545; Coombs v. New Bedford Cordage Co., 102 Mass. 572; Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray (Mass.) 274; Gilman v. Eastern R. Co., 10 Allen (Mass.) 233.

3. Armour v. Hahn, 111 U. S. 313.

Falling Brick.—Upon the trial of this action, brought by the plaintiff to recover damages for the death of her intestate, which was alleged to have been occasioned by the negligence of the defendant, it appeared that the intestate, while working in the cellar of a building being erected by the defendant in the city of New York, in preparing mortar to be used by the bricklayers, was required to go to a tub of water in that portion of the cellar under the space left for the construction of the stairways. While near the tub deceased was struck by something, but by what was not shown by any direct evidence, although the post mortem examination showed that his skull had been fractured by a blow upon the top of his head, and the facts proved were such as to warrant the jury in concluding that it was by some hard substance falling upon him from the top of the building. One witness testified that he heard a noise, which he described as a kind of thud; that he looked up and saw deceased stagger over towards the wall, and that he, the witness, caught the deceased just as he struck the tub. Evidence was also given tending to show that broken portions of brick did fall from the upper part of the building where the bricklayers were at work, and that there was no safe or secure covering to protect persons who were required to resort to the tub in preparing mortar, while on the part of the defence evidence was given tending to prove that a complete and secure covering was placed and maintained in this part of the building. Held, that the evidence sustained a verdict against defendant. Ford v. Lyons, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 512. And see generally Anderson v. Bennett, 16 Oreg. 515; Baldwin v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 72 Iowa 45; Missouri etc. R. Co. v. McElyea, 71 Tex. 386; Southwest Va. Imp. Co. v. Smith (Va. 1888), 7 S. E. Rep. 365; Dunlap v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 81 Ga. 136; Wilson v. Willimantic Linen Co., 50 Conn. 433; 47 Am. Rep. 650; Coombs v. New Bed-

tion of certain safeguards in a given business must be so general that it is presumed that the defendant had knowledge of it, in order to make him liable for neglecting to provide the same.¹

20. Proximate and Remote Cause.—In such actions the injuries must be the actual, natural and proximate result of the wrong committed, the legitimate sequence of the thing amiss.² And what is the proximate cause of an injury is usually a question for the jury.³

21. Burden of Proof.—The servant who seeks to recover for injuries claimed to have been received through negligence for which his employer is liable, must establish that negligence by proof, and that he himself was not in fault but exercised due care. Under this rule the plaintiff is required to show the facts surrounding and leading to the injury; and if from them a jury can reasonably infer negligence in the employer contributing to the injury, and the exercise of due care upon the servant's part, then he is entitled to recover.⁴

22. Questions for Court and Jury.—(See title NEGLIGENCE).—In cases of doubt, where the facts are disputed, or where different minds may reasonably draw different conclusions from the same undisputed facts, the question of negligence vel non is a question of fact for the determination of the jury.⁵

ford Cordage Co., 102 Mass. 572; Snow v. Housatonic R. Co., 8 Allen (Mass.) 445; Sullivan v. India Mfg. Co., 113 Mass. 397; Holden v. Fitchburg R. Co., 129 Mass. 268; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; Smith v. Car Works, 60 Mich. 501; Daley v. Schaaf, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 314; Cook v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 34 Hun (N. Y.) 45.

1. Couch v. Watson Coal Co., 5 Cent. L. J. 108.

Covering Cages in Coal Mines.—It was furthermore held in the above case an expert being admitted to testify that it was customary to use covers on the cages in one coal mine in another State, held, first, that the usage in one coal mine was not sufficient to establish a general custom; and second, that to make such a custom binding upon the defendant, it must be shown in mines similarly situate in its locality. Couch v. Watson Coal Co., 5 Cent. L. J. 108.

Storage of Grain.—Where a corporation believed, and was justified in believing, that a certain quantity of grain could be safely stored on a floor of their building, and the floor gave way, whereby an employee was injured, it was held that he could not recover. Dillon v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 283.

2. Clifford v. Denver etc. R. Co., 9 Colo. 333.

3. Eames v. Texas etc. R. Co., 63 Tex. 660; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 540.

A servant at work on a track jumped to get out of the way of car propelled at moderate speed. He slipped and fell on the ice. Held, that the rate of speed was the proximate cause of the accident. Crowley v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 65 Iowa 658; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 56.

Failure to Notify Servant of Obstructions.—If a railroad company permits unnecessary obstructions to remain near its track, it is not liable for injuries arising therefrom where due care was not exercised by the employee, and a failure to notify him of their existence was not the proximate cause of the injury. Gould v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 66 Iowa 590; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 289.

Defective Engine Stop—Unfamiliar Engineer.—Texas etc. R. Co. v. Wiesner, 66 Tex. 674.

4. Texas etc. R. Co. v. Crowder, 63 Tex. 502; Corcoran v. Boston etc. R. Co., 133 Mass. 507; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226; Ardesco Oil Co. v. Gilson, 63 Pa. St. 146; Langhoff v. Milwaukee etc. R. Co., 19 Wis. 515; Meloy v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Iowa), 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 358; Norris v. Union Pacific R. Co., 3 Colo. L. J. 25.

5. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Allen, 78 Ala. 494; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514;

It is frequently stated that when the facts are undisputed or conclusively proved the question of negligence is to be decided by the court; but a better opinion, however, would seem to be, that in order to justify the withdrawal of the case from the jury, the facts of the case should not only be undisputed, but the conclusion to be drawn from those facts indisputable.¹

23. Knowledge of Master.—It must be shown that the master knew, or should have known, of the condition which caused the injury.² But it is well settled that although a master might have known by the use of ordinary care and diligence that a tool furnished his servant for use was defective, is not sufficient to make him liable for the injury resulting from its use, irrespective of any probability of harm or danger in using.³

Colorado Cent. Co. v. Holmes, 5 Colo. 197; Kansas etc. Co. v. Twombly, 3 Colo. 125; Pleasants v. Railroad Co., 95 N. Car. 195; Murphy v. Crosson, 98 Pa. St. 495; Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 657; Fernandes v. S. C. R. Co. (Cal.), 4 Cent. L. J. 82; Detroit etc. R. Co. v. Van Steinburg, 17 Mich. 99; Case v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 69 Iowa 449. Compare Case v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Iowa 762; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 142; Columbus etc. R. Co. v. Troesch, 68 Ill. 545; Fraker v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 32 Minn. 54; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 256; St. Louis Iron Mountain etc. R. Co. v. Harper, 44 Ark. 524; Smoot v. Mobile etc. R. Co., 67 Ala. 13; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Orr, 84 Ind. 50; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; Nolan v. Schicke, 3 Mo. App. 300; Painton v. North Cent. R. Co., 83 N. Y. 7; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 454; East Tenn. etc. R. Co. v. Stewart, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 432; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 614; Johnson v. Armour, 18 Fed. Rep. 490; State v. Railroad, 52 N. H. 529; Goynor v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 100 Mass. 208; McGrath v. Hudson R. R. Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 144; Bridges v. North London R. Co., L. R., 7 H. L. 213; Beers v. Housatonic R. Co., 19 Conn. 566; Vinton v. Schwab, 32 Vt. 612; Pennsylvania Canal Co. v. Bentley, 66 Pa. St. 30; Wyatt v. Citizens R. Co., 55 Mo. 485; Norton v. Ittner, 56 Mo. 351; Stoddard v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 65 Mo. 514.

Construction and Inspection of Bridge.—Where an employee of a railway company was injured by the falling of a bridge, the details of the construction and inspection of the same being before the jury, it was held that it was for it to decide whether reasonable care had been used in the construction and inspection of the same. Bowen v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 95 Mo. 268.

Blocking Rail in Certain Manner.—And where, owing to a block in the space between the main and the guard rail on the track of defendant's road being worn, and a portion split off, caused by the operation of the road, plaintiffs' intestate, a brakeman, caught his foot in said space and was killed, the court submitted to the jury the question whether or not the block was so placed as to be dangerous to employees of the company. Griffith v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 72 Iowa 645; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 227.

Negligence of electric light company in turning on current. Question of negligence for jury. Colorado Electric Co. v. Lubbers, 11 Colo. 505.

1. See NEGLIGENCE.

2. Smith v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 69 Mo. 32; Porter v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 63; State v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 82 Mo. 430; Hayden v. Smithfield Mfg. Co., 29 Conn. 548; Atchinson etc. R. Co. v. Wagner, 23 Kan. 660; Morris v. Gleason, 1 Ill. App. 570; Lopez v. Central Ariz. Mining Co., 1 Ariz. 464; Corcoran v. Boston etc. R. Co., 133 Mass. 507; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226. Compare Hoffman v. Dickinson, 31 W. Va. 142.

3. Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Duffy, 35 Ark. 602; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 637. And see Currant v. Missouri Pac. etc. R. Co., 86 Mo. 62; Pantzar v. Tilly Foster Mining Co., 99 N. Y. 368; Hull v. Hall, 78 Me. 114; Texas Pac. R. Co. v. McAtee, 61 Tex. 695; Cook v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 34 Minn. 45; Regan v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 93 Mo. 348; Schmidt v. Block, 76 Ga. 823; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Hughes, 119

And the rule holds good where the employer is a municipality.¹

Evidence of notoriety of the defect in the particular appliance by which the injury was caused is proper in establishing notice or knowledge on the part of the master.²

Of course, a servant cannot recover for an injury arising from his own unskilfulness, of which his master was not informed.³

24. Competency and Qualification of Servant.—Ordinarily, when an adult person solicits employment in a particular line of work, the act of solicitation involves an assertion by the person seeking employment that he is competent to discharge all its ordinary duties; and it is one of the general, implied conditions of every contract for service with an adult person that the servant is competent to discharge the duties for which he is employed.⁴

Pa. St. 301; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 349.

An allegation in a petition that the injury was caused by the negligence of the master in failing to provide safe appliances, and stating particulars of the defect, is equivalent to a specific allegation that the master knew or might have known of the defect. Crane v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 87 Mo. 588; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 440.

Plaintiff was standing upon a platform engaged in taking down a steam pipe. A section of the pipe which had been but partially screwed into the cylinder suddenly started while plaintiff was attempting to unscrew it, and separated from the cylinder, causing him to fall from the platform. The pipe had answered the purposes for which it was intended, and there was no evidence that the defendants had failed to employ competent workmen to put it in, or that they knew or ought to have known of its condition. Held, that the defendants were not liable for the injury to the plaintiff. Behm v. Armour, 58 Wis. 1, distinguished; Hobbs v. Staner, 62 Wis. 108.

1. Turner v. Indianapolis, 96 Ind. 51; 7 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 94. And see Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 418; Griffin v. New York, 9 N. Y. 496; Howe v. Lowell, 101 Mass. 99; Manchester v. Hartford, 30 Conn. 118; Smith v. New York, 66 N. Y. 295; Furnell v. St. Paul, 20 Minn. 117; Nichols v. Alberis, 66 Mo. 413; Hubbard v. Concord, 35 N. H. 52; Ward v. Jefferson, 24 Wis. 342; Dantzeiser v. Cook, 40 Ind. 65; Weightman v. Washington, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 39; Mersey Docks v. Gibbs, 11 H. L. Cas. 687; Castor v. Uxbridge, 39 App. Cas. Q. B. 113; Van Pelt v. Davenport, 42

Iowa 308; Bancher v. New Haven, 40 Conn. 456; Chicago v. McCarthy, 75 Ill. 602; Atlanta v. Perdue, 53 Ga. 607; Colley v. Westbrook, 57 Me. 181; Rice v. Des Moines, 40 Iowa 638; Market v. St. Louis, 56 Mo. 89; Allbrittin v. Huntsville, 60 Ala. 486; Howe v. Plainfield, 41 N. H. 485; Perkins v. Fayette, 68 Mo. 152; Farrell v. Oldtown, 69 Me. 72; Kenady v. Lawrence, 128 Mass. 318; Lafayette v. Larson, 73 Ind. 367; Joliet v. Walker, 7 Ill. App. 267; Shell v. Appleton, 49 Wis. 125; Atlanta v. Champe, 66 Ga. 659; Huntington v. Breen, 77 Ind. 29; Smith v. Bangor, 72 Me. 249; Salina v. Trasper, 27 Kan. 544; Logansport v. Justice, 74 Ind. 348; Chatsworth v. Ward, 10 Ill. App. 75; Benware v. Pine Valley, 53 Wis. 527; Centralia v. Krouse, 64 Ill. 19; Rappa v. Moore, 68 Pa. St. 404; Cleveland v. St. Paul, 18 Minn. 255; Doulon v. Clinton, 33 Iowa 397; Dewey v. Detroit, 15 Mich. 307; Estelle v. Lake Crystal, 27 Minn. 243; Sterling v. Thomas, 67 Ill. 264; Durant v. Palmer, 29 N. J. L. 544; Osgood v. Hamilton, 29 Kan. 1; Evansville v. Wilter, 86 Ind. 414; Washington v. Small, 86 Ind. 462; Medina v. Perkins, 48 Mich. 67; Chicago v. Stearns, 105 Ill. 554; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 594; Montgomery v. Wright, 72 Ala. 411; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 642; Bailey v. Spring Lake, 61 Wis. 227; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 651.

2. Crane v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 87 Mo. 588; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 440.

3. Whittaker v. Coombs, 14 Ill. App. 498.

4. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Estes, 37 Kan. 715; Squire v. Wright, 1 Mo. App. 172; Alexander v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 83 Ky. 589; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 458.

As to whether or not a servant was qualified for a certain position is a question to be determined by the jury from all the facts and circumstances of the case.¹

25. Recovery by Trespasser.—A trespasser cannot ordinarily recover for injuries suffered through the negligence of another.² Unless an injury is wilfully inflicted upon him.³

26. Obedience to Orders.⁴—A servant is bound to obey all the master's lawful and reasonable commands, even though such commands may, under the circumstances, seem harsh and severe.⁵

27. Rules and Regulations.—(a) Duty to Promulgate.—It is the duty of an employer to make and promulgate rules, which, if faithfully observed, will give reasonable protection to his Undertaking of Integrity and Honesty.—Whoever bargains to render services for another undertakes for good faith and integrity, but he does not agree that he will commit no errors. Page v. Wells, 37 Mich. 415.

Thus a locomotive engineer is not bound, at all hazards, to comprehend fully all the results of changes in the running time of trains made by a new time table, and is not necessarily guilty of negligence in running his train contrary to the rules of such time table on the first trip after it takes effect. Nelson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 60 Wis. 320; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391.

1. Moore v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 65 Iowa 505; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 396.

Confessed Want of Skill on Part of Conductor.—A conductor on a railroad train cannot recover against the company for an injury resulting from his own confessed want of experience and skill. The fact that the company employed him with knowledge of his want of experience will not enable him to recover. Alexander v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 83 Ky. 590; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 458.

2. Unnecessarily Using Dark Passage.—And a servant who gropes along a dark passage on his master's premises where he has no business, and opens a door and falls down an elevator which has a bar in front of it, has no cause of action against his master. Pfeiffer v. Ringler, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 437.

Or through a scuttle while moving about for curiosity. Severy v. Nickerson, 120 Mass. 306. Also see Indemaur v. Dawes, L. R., 1 C. P. 274.

3. Collyer v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 49 N. J. L. 59; Jones v. Roach, 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 248; Span v. Ely, 15 N.

Y. 255. Compare Kielly v. Belcher etc. Mining Co., 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 500. And see St. Louis etc. Iron Co. v. Burke, 12 Ill. App. 369; Falen v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 48 Mich. 622; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 161; Baker v. Hughes, 2 Colo. 79; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Donahue, 75 Ill. 106; Hughes v. Winona etc. R. Co., 27 Minn. 137; Baker v. Hughes, 2 Colo. 79; Wells v. Coe, 9 Colo. 159; Martensen v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 60 Iowa 705; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 233; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Conrad, 62 Tex. 627; Bunt v. Sierra Buttes Gold Mining Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 847; English v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 906; Cook v. Bell, 29 Sec. Ser. (Scotch Rep.) 427; O'Neill v. Wilson, 20 Sec. Ser. (Scotch Rep.) 137.

4. See post, 27, RULES AND REGULATIONS.

5. Saunders v. Anderson, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 486; Mitchell v. Toale, 25 S. Car. 238; Union Pacific R. Co. v. Fray, 31 Kan. 739.

Obedience Likely to Result in Injury.—But a servant is not bound to risk his life or limb in obedience to his master's orders, and if he do so, and is injured, the master is not liable. Stephens v. R. Co., 86 Mo. 221; R. Co. v. Lave, 10 Ind. 554; Riley v. Boxendale, 30 L. J., Exch. 87; Hawley v. R. Co., 29 N. W. Rep. 787.

Where Act Would be Unlawful.—Neither, though ordered, should he commit an act known by him to be unlawful. Southern v. How, Cro. Jac. 471; Grylls v. Davies, 2 B. & Ad. 516.

Command Accompanied by Threat.—A command accompanied by a threat is a command to which an employee is not bound to submit. Capper v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 103 Ind. 305; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 525.

employees; and whether he is negligent in that respect in a given case is a question for the jury.¹

Instructions as to Rules.—It is not generally the duty of the employer to instruct the employee in the rules applicable to the service, unless information be asked, or he is known to be ignorant and inexperienced regarding dangers peculiar to the service.²

(b) Disobedience of Rule.—If an employee knowingly and intentionally disobeys a reasonable rule or regulation established for his safety, unless he does so under the influence of fear produced by sudden danger, and the act of disobedience is the proximate cause of the injury complained of, he cannot recover.³

An employee may, however, recover for injuries even when he has violated some rule of his employer, when such violation did not contribute to the injury suffered.⁴

Of course, in any case, the rules and regulations of an employer

1. Abel v. Priest etc. of Delaware etc. Canal Co., 103 N. Y. 581; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 497; Sheehan v. New York etc. R. Co., 91 N. Y. 332; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 235; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. Lavalley, 36 Ohio St. 221; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 549; Vose v. Lancashire R. Co., 2 Hurl. & N. 728; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Taylor, 69 Ill. 461; Regan v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 93 Mo. 348.

Failure to Provide Watchman According to Rule.—Where custom and rule of company is to provide watchman to protect defective car under which employees are working, and an injury is occasioned by failure to do this, the question of negligence is for the jury. Luebke v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 59 Wis. 127; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 183.

2. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Watts, 63 Tex. 549; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277.

3. Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Ryan, 69 Tex. 665; 33 Am. & Eng. Cas. 289; Gardner v. Michigan etc. R. Co., 58 Mich. 584; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 435; Wolsey v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 33 Ohio St. 227.

Habitual Breach—Employer's Knowledge.—But otherwise where injury arises from a breach, which has grown to be habitual with the knowledge of the employer. Fray v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 30 Minn. 234; Hayes v. Bush etc. Mfg. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 407.

Rule as to Running Switch.—An action cannot be maintained against a railroad company for injuries received by a brakeman while acting in wilful disobedience of a rule of the company prohibiting "flying switches." Pilkinton v. Gulf etc. R. Co., 70 Tex. 226.

The violation by a conductor of a rule of the company forbidding a "running switch" does not preclude him from recovering against the company for an injury received in making such a switch, it appearing that this was the only practicable way of putting cars on the particular switch, and that it had been so habitually resorted to as to raise the presumption that the company was aware of and approved it. Alexander v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 83 Ky. 590; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 458.

Knowledge of Servant as to Existence of Rule.—In an action against a railroad company for negligently killing plaintiff's husband, it appeared that deceased, while defendant's brakeman, was killed while making a "flying switch." The petition alleged a rule of defendant prohibiting "flying switches," but there was no allegation or proof that deceased was ignorant of the rule. Held, that deceased will be presumed to have known of the existence of such rule. Pilkinton v. Gulf etc. R. Co., 70 Tex. 226; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kean, 65 Md. 394; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 580.

Evidence as to Such Flying Switch.—It was held not to be error to permit plaintiff to describe a "flying switch" when he did not state that the same was the transaction in which the accident occurred, particularly in view of the fact that the company had put in evidence a rule prohibiting servants from making a flying switch. Pringle v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Iowa 613; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 91.

4. Central Railroad v. Mitchell, 63 Ga. 173; Ford v. Fitchburgh etc. R. Co., 110 Mass. 240; Thomas v. Memphis R.

must be known to the employee in order to bind him.¹ But it has been laid down that a railroad conductor, at least, is in duty bound to post himself as to the rules of the company employing him.²

(c) Evidence of Rules.—A printed rule of a master is admissible in evidence, in an action by a servant against him for negligence, to show that the servant was properly attempting to carry out his master's orders at the time of the injury.³

(d) Agreement to Obey Rules.—Where an employee, upon entering upon his employment, signs a contract binding himself to obey all orders, rules and regulations, but in which the general language applies equally to all classes of employees, the agreement to obey all orders must be construed to apply to all which are issued to him in the line of duty in which he is employed; and it does not empower the company to assign him to other duties wholly disconnected therewith, and differing therefrom.⁴

28. Contributory Negligence in Use of Appliances—Notice of Defects.—An employee cannot recover when injured by the use of a defective appliance under his own exclusive care;⁵ nor when he has knowledge of the defect and fails to notify the master and no blame is imputable to him in not discovering the same.⁶ And this duty of an employee to report defects and breakages is none the less where the company employs local inspectors, unless inspection is Co., 51 Miss. 637; Vose v. Lancashire R. Co., 2 H. & N. 728; Haskin v. New York etc. R. Co., 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 129.

1. Covey v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 27 Mo. App. 170.

Evidence of Rules Not Known.—In an action against a railroad company for damages for negligently causing the death of one of its employees, it is not error for the court on the trial to exclude evidence offered by the railroad company to prove certain written or printed rules, which it claims the deceased wrongfully disregarded, when it is not shown that the deceased ever had any knowledge of such written or printed rules. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Plunkett, 25 Kan. 188; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 127.

2. Alexander v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 83 Ky. 589; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 458.

3. Louisville R. Co. v. Frawley, 110 Ind. 18; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308.

In case of an injury from an unblocked frog, an order of the company to block all frogs may go in evidence. Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Coates, 62 Iowa 486; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265.

4. Jones v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 573; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 221.

The rule requiring persons crossing a track to look in both directions for approaching trains, does not apply strictly to employees at work on the track. Crowley v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 65 Iowa 658; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 56.

5. Stroble v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 70 Iowa 555; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 510. A case of defective platform steps. Wells v. Cole, 9 Cal. 159. Defective hoisting apparatus in mine.

6. Cowles v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 84 N. Car. 309; 37 Am. Rep. 620; Critchfield's Case, 78 N. Car. 300; Johnson v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 81 N. Car. 453; Baker v. Allegheny etc. R. Co., 95 Pa. St. 211; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 141; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bragonier, 119 Ill. 724; State v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 82 Mo. 430; Baker v. Allegheny etc. R. Co., 95 Pa. St. 211; 40 Am. Rep. 634; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 141; Le Clair v. First Div. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 20 Minn. 9; De Berry v. Carolina Cent. R. Co. (N. Car.), 6 So. E. Rep. 723; Noves v. Smith, 28 Vt. 59; Skipp v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 9 Exch. 223; Keegan v. W. R. Co., 4 Seld. 175; M'Millan v. Saratoga etc. R. Co., 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 450; Stroble v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 70 Iowa 555; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 510.

given exclusively to them.¹ But if a corporation is negligent in respect to furnishing suitable machinery, it is charged in law with notice of the unfitness of the machine, and cannot take advantage of its own wrong and set up as a defence to an action for such injury that it did not have notice of the defect in its machine.² Notice need not, in cases of this character, be given to the master in person. Notice to a vice principal is equivalent to notice to the master.³ But knowledge of a defect in a machine by servants not employed about the same is not notice to the company.⁴ And where the defect is of such a character, or occurs at such a time, that the master cannot reasonably be expected to have knowledge of it, neglect on the part of a servant to give him notice thereof relieves him of responsibility.⁵

29. Selection and Retention of Competent Servants.—See FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 7, p. 844, et seq.

30. Contracts Absolving Master.—A master cannot, by a contract with a servant, in consideration of the employment, exempt himself from liability to the servant for injuries sustained through his negligence. Such a contract is void as against public policy.⁶ Though they have been sustained in England and in Georgia.⁷ If a servant has compromised his claim for damages, and afterwards uses up the amount received in liquidation of the claim, he cannot be heard to assert fraud and deceit as to the compromise, when he does not tender back the amount he has already received.⁸ Contracts between the master and servant entered into after the servant received the injury by which a servant releases the master

1. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Bragonier, 11 Ill. App. 516.

And likewise under rules requiring a telegraph operator to report defects in roads and bridges, or obstructions of any kind, wherever met, to the superintendent, and if possible to the nearest section master or bridge foreman, when they come to his knowledge, whether he is requested to do so by another employee or not. Hall v. Galveston etc. R. Co. (Tex.), 39 Fed. Rep. 18.

2. Warner v. Western N. Car. R. Co., 94 N. Car. 250; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 432.

3. Speed v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 303; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77; Dutzi v. Geisel, 23 Mo. App. 676; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. McKenzie, 81 Va. 71; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 395; Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 564; Wooden v. Humeston etc. R. Co., 76 Iowa 310; Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389; Baldwin v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 75 Iowa 297. Compare Covey v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 86 Mo. 635; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 382. As to who is a vice principal, notice to whom is notice to company, see FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 7, p. 824, et seq. See also McKinney on Fellow Servants, ch. 3.

4. St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Harper, 44 Ark. 524; Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 390.

5. Patterson v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 389.

6. Roesner v. Hermann, 10 Biss. C. Ct. 486; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. Spangler, 44 Ohio St. 471; 58 Am. Rep. 833; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 319; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Eubanks, 48 Ark. 460; Willis v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 62 Me. 488; Kansas etc. R. Co. v. Pearey, 29 Kan. 169; 44 Am. Rep. 630; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 260; Roesner v. Hermann, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 486; 8 Fed. Rep. 782.

7. Griffiths v. Earl of Dudley, 9 Q. B. Div. 357; R. Co. v. Bishop, 50 Ga. 465; R. Co. v. Strong, 52 Ga. 461; Galloway v. Western etc. R. Co., 57 Ga. 512.

8. Stewart v. Houston etc. R. Co., 62 Tex. 246.

from the damages, are upheld as valid if founded upon a valuable consideration, and not obtained from the servant by means of misrepresentation or fraud.¹

31. Injury to Which Servant Consents.—A servant cannot come into court and obtain satisfaction from a master for a supposed injury to which such servant was consenting.²

32. Liability for Negligence of Vice Principal.—See FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 7, p. 824 et seq.

33. Neglect of Statutory Duty.—Where a statute or municipal ordinance imposes upon a person a duty designed for the protection of others, if he neglects to perform the duty he is liable to those for whose protection it was imposed for any damages resulting proximately from such neglect, and of the character which the statute or ordinance was designed to prevent.³ And where cer-

1. Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Welch, 52 Ill. 183; Schultz v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 44 Wis. 638; Butler v. Regents, 32 Wis. 124; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Doyle, 18 Kan. 58.

A party who, having the capacity and opportunity to read a release of claims for damages for personal injuries, signed by him, and not being prevented by fraud practiced on him from so reading it, failed to do so, and relied upon what the other party said about it, is estopped by his own negligence from claiming that the release is not legal, and binding upon him according to its terms. Wallace v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Iowa 547; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Welch, 52 Ill. 183.

Benefit Fund—Release of Employees.—The defendant iron company had in operation an arrangement by which a benefit fund was established. This fund was subscribed by the workmen and the company, and was designed for the relief of those to whom any injury or accident should happen. Such relief could only be obtained by signing an agreement to release and discharge the company from all claims for damages on account of injury caused by negligence of the company, its officers or agents.

The scheme was printed in large posters and posted up in conspicuous places upon the premises where the men were employed. The plaintiff, an employee of the company, and entitled to share in the proceeds of such fund, was injured. He was paid the money allowed to injured employees and signed the agreement releasing the company. At the time he signed the agreement he did not read it, nor was he aware of its contents. He afterwards brought an action against the company for damages for the injury inflicted by its negligence. Held: (1) That the plaintiff was not bound by such agreement unless fully informed of the terms or conditions printed and posted for his information, and of the contents or substance of the agreement he signed on receiving his monthly aid.

(2) That whether he understood the purport of the instrument he signed or whether he was misled into signing it, supposing it to be a mere receipt for the money, were questions which, under the circumstances, should have been submitted to the jury.

(3) That as the mutual aid fund, by the terms of the address to the employees, was to be held by the company as trust money and did not belong to the company in any other capacity than as trustee, and was paid out in the same capacity, there was no obligation on the plaintiff's part to repay the benefit fund before bringing action against the company. O'Neil v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 63 Mich. 690; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 107.

2. Consenting to Sexual Intercourse.

—As where an employer persuaded his female servant to consent to sexual intercourse with his minor son, to whom she was affianced, but who subsequently refused to marry her. Jordan v. Hovey, 72 Mo. 574; 37 Am. Rep. 447. And see Roper v. Clay, 18 Mo. 384; Paul v. Frazier, 3 Mass. 71; Sherman v. Rawson, 102 Mass. 400; Kelly v. Riley, 106 Mass. 339; Burks v. Shain, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 341; Whalen v. Layman, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 194; Wells v. Padgett, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 323.

3. Osborne v. McMasters, 40 Minn. 103, following Bott v. Pratt, 53 Minn. 323; Coe v. Platt, 6 Exch. 727; Caswell tain duties are imposed on the master by legislative act, it is negligence per se on his part to abstain from carrying them out. And he is liable for injuries arising from such failure, unless it can be clearly shown that the servant assumed the risk.¹

34. Requisites of Petition.—Whatever is the real ground of complaint ought to be distinctly stated in the petition.² In an action by an employee against his employer, to recover for an injury received from the dangerous condition of the premises where he was required to work, it has been held that the employee must aver want of knowledge on his part, of the defect;³ in other words, that the defect was known to the master, or was such as with reason-

v. Worth, 5 E. & B. 849; Dale v. Sheppard, 5 E. & B. 846; Schofield v. Schunk, 5 E. & B. 858; Holmes v. Clark, 30 L. J.; Exch. 135; Britton v. Great Western Cotton Co., 41 L. J. Exch. 99.

Thickness of Walls.—If a city ordinance regulates the thickness of the walls of buildings, a violation of such ordinance in the construction of a building is prima facie evidence of negligence. Giles v. Diamond State etc. Co. (Del.), 1889; 7 Atl. Rep. 368.

1. Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray (Mass.) 410; Gibbs v. Crombie, 2 Ct. of Sess. Cas. 4th ed. (S. Car.) 210; Clarke v. Holmes, 7 H. & N. 942; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Mathias, 50 Ind. 65.

2. Edens v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 72 Mo. 212; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 459.

It was furthermore held in this case that as the company's negligence consisted in having a defective sand box on the engine and in keeping a defective frog in the track, a recovery could not be had for negligent running of the cars. And see Waldhier v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 514; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 146; Buffington v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 64 Mo. 246.

Aggravation of Pre-existing Infirmities.—Under a declaration alleging infirmities caused directly and altogether by the accident, plaintiff cannot recover for the aggravation of pre-existing infirmities. Wilkinson v. Detroit Steel Spring Works, 73 Mich. 403.

Defective Construction or Want of Repair.—In a suit brought to recover damages for the death of a brakeman, caused by the breaking of a defective hand hold, it was held unnecessary to state in the pleading whether the alleged defect which caused the death was in construction or arose from want of repair, such defect being pointed out with particularity. Guttridge v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 94 Mo. 468

Sickness Resulting from Exposure of the Servant.—In an action by a laborer engaged in the construction of a road, against his employer, a railroad company, for damages for breach of contract and negligence, in that defendant failed to supply him with good and suitable board and lodging, a complaint alleging that plaintiff "was compelled to sleep on the cold, wet and frozen ground, without anything under him except damp branches of pine and spruce trees, and without sufficient blankets or bed clothes to cover him and protect him from the cold, whereby plaintiff was taken dangerously sick from such exposure," is good upon demurrer, as the sickness referred to is not too remote, to support an action. Clifford v. Denver etc. R. Co., 9 Colo. 333.

Lack of Information as to Projecting Beam.—In an action for personal injuries received by a railroad employee, the complaint alleging that the injury was caused by the negligent construction of the road by defendant's agent placing and leaving standing a beam in dangerous proximity to the track, by which plaintiff, who had been ordered to sit on the edge of a flat car by such agent, was injured, that plaintiff had no knowledge, or means of knowledge, of the beam having been so placed and left standing, which the agent knew, and that plaintiff was guilty of no negligence, is sufficient though it shows that plaintiff took his seat on the edge of the car voluntarily and without protest, "as was the universal custom," as the danger, being unknown to him, was not assumed as a risk of his employment, especially where it does not appear that the beam was used in the operation of the railroad. Arabello v. San Antonio etc. R. Co. (Tex.), 1889, 11 S. W. Rep. 913.

3. Bogenschutz v. Smith, 84 Ky. 330.

able diligence he ought to have known, and that the plaintiff did not know and could not reasonably be held to know of it.¹ But this cannot be said to be the general rule, for it has been held in other States that it is not incumbent upon the plaintiff to aver such ignorance in his complaint, but rather it is for defendant to aver and prove knowledge on part of plaintiff.²

35. Evidence.³—(a) Declarations; Res Gestæ.—The declarations of the party injured as to the cause of the injury, made at the time of the accident, are part of the res gestæ and admissible.⁴ And such declarations can bind the principal only when made with reference to a transaction within the scope of the employment of the declarant.⁵ But they should be voluntary and spontaneous, and made so shortly after the principal trans-

1. Wason v. West (Me.), 1886, 3 Atl. Rep. 911; Hull v. Hall, 78 Me. 114; Indiana etc. R. Co. v. Dailey, 110 Ind. 75; Lake Shore etc. R. Co. v. Stupak, 108 Ind. 1; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Adams, 105 Ind. 151.

2. Cole v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Wis. 272; 30 N. W. Rep. 600; Crane v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 87 Mo. 588; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 440; Thompson v. North Missouri R. Co., 51 Mo. 191. And see Griffiths v. London etc. Dock Co., 13 L. R., Q. B. Div. 259; 53 L. J., Q. B. Div. 504; 51 L. T., N. S. 533; 33 W. R. 35; 49 J. P. 100.

3. See post, 36, DAMAGES.

4. Brownell v. P. R., 47 Mo. 240; Perigo v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 55 Iowa 326; Bass v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 654; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Crowder (Tex.), 7 S. W. Rep. 711; McKinnon v. Norcross et al., 20 N. E. Rep. 182; Adams v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 74 Mo. 553; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 414; Union Pacific R. Co. v. Fray, 35 Kan. 700; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 309; Waldele v. New York etc. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 275; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 400; Pennsylvania Co. v. Rudell, 100 Ill. 603; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 30; Hanover R. Co. v. Coyle, 55 Pa. St. 396; Terry v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 47 Iowa 549; Casey v. New York etc. R. Co., 78 N. Y. 518; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Wright, 80 Ind. 182; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 628; Moore v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 59 Miss. 243; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 401; Dietrich v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 58 Md. 347; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 115; Patterson v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 54 Mich. 91; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 130; Hawks v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 15 W. Va. 628; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Fillmore, 57 Ill. 265; Packet Co. v. Clough, 14 C. of L.—58

20 Wall. (U. S.) 528; Ladd v. Couzins, 35 Mo. 516; McDermott v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 73 Mo. 516; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 85.

Anything in the nature of narrative is to be carefully excluded. Bacon v. Inhabitants of Charlton, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 586; Lund v. Inhabitants of Tyngsborough, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 42.

5. McDermott v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 73 Mo. 516; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 85; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Goddard, 25 Ind. 185; Patterson v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 54 Mich. 91; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 130.

Statement by Agent Not Authorized to Bind.—The statements made by a clerk or agent, not authorized to bind the company, as to the date of the arrival of a train at a certain point, are not admissible in evidence. Hewett v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 611; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 569.

By Station Agent as to Cars for Through Freight.—Declarations of a station agent as to the use of freight cars by company for through freights are not admissible, he not being connected with through freight business. Branch v. Wilmington etc. R. Co., 88 N. Car. 573; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 692.

Bellefontaine R. Co. v. Hunter, 23 Ind. 335; Hynds v. Hays, 25 Ind. 31; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Theobald, 51 Ind. 246; Dickinson v. Colter, 45 Ind. 445; Rathel v. Brady, 44 Ind. 412; Bennett v. Holmes, 32 Ind. 108; Lafayette etc. R. Co. v. Ehman, 30 Ind. 83; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Fisher, 13 Ind. 258; Wayne Co. T. Co. v. Berry, 5 Ind. 286; Tomlinson v. Collett, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 436; Patterson v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 54 Mich. 91.

action as to preclude the idea of deliberate design.¹ Exclamations of pain made by the injured person are admissible in evidence as part of the res gestæ, even if made after the accident.² But while it is essential that the declarations should be contemporaneous with, or at least so connected with, the main fact in issue as to constitute a part of the transaction, and thus derive

1. Pilkinton v. Gulf etc. R. Co., 70 Tex. 226.

Declarations Made Upon the Spot.—The declarations of the engineer made upon the spot, at the time of the accident, and in view of the effects of his conduct, are evidence against the company as part of the res gestæ. Hanover R. Co. v. Coyle, 55 Pa. St. 396; McLeod v. Ginther, 80 Ky. 399; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 291.

Where plaintiff was injured by the sudden starting of a horse car from which she was alighting, a remark made to her by the conductor immediately after she fell, to the effect that he was very sorry and that it was his fault, is inadmissible as a part of the res gestæ. Williamson v. Cambridge R. Co., 144 Mass. 148. Compare Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. State of Md., 62 Md. 479; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 83.

Twenty Minutes After Accident.—In another case the time which had elapsed after an alleged injury was twenty or twenty-five minutes, and a witness was permitted to testify that the party told him he got hit; that there was a long train and he stood waiting for it to go and the engine followed and struck him. Waldele v. N. Y. etc. R. Co., 29 Hun (N. Y.) 35.

Thirty Minutes After Accident.—But such declaration is not admissible if made thirty minutes after accident. Armil v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 70 Iowa 130.

While Person Is Being Removed.—Nor while the person injured is being removed. Martin v. New York etc. R. Co., 103 N. Y. 626.

Or After Removal Twenty or Thirty Rods.—Nor after he has been removed twenty or thirty rods. Merkle v. Bennington, 58 Mich. 156.

Within from Three to Five Minutes.—But to the contrary, where made within from three to five minutes of the occurrence of the accident, Durkee v. Central etc. R. Co., 69 Cal. 533; and see Waldele v. New York etc. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 274; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 400; People v. Murphy, 101 N. Y. 126; Bigley v. Williams, 80 Pa. St. 107; Tilson

v. Terwilliger, 56 N. Y. 273; Casey v. New York etc. R. Co., 78 N. Y. 518; Com. v. Hackett, 2 Allen (Mass.) 136; Travellers' Ins. Co. v. Mosly, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 397.

On the Night After.—In an action against a railroad company by a passenger for damages caused by an assault of the conductor, the latter testified that he did not tell one W, on the night after the difficulty, holding his ticket punch in his hand, "this is the thing I did him (plaintiff) up with." Thereupon W was permitted to state that the conductor, at the time and place mentioned, did make such a statement to him. Held, that though the conductor's declaration, made subsequently to the occurrence, was not admissible against the company, yet as there was other competent evidence sufficient to prove that the assault was made in the manner indicated, the error in admitting the testimony was cured by withdrawing it and instructing the jury not to consider it. Dillingham v. Anthony, 73 Tex. 47.

Admissions Made the Next Morning.—But the admissions made by the railway servants the next morning after a passenger's baggage is lost are inadmissible. Morse v. Conn. R. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 450.

Subsequent Declarations of Brakeman.—So also the subsequent declarations of a brakeman as to the cause of an accident. Michigan etc. R. Co. v. Carrow, 73 Ill. 348.

Declarations of Defendant Thirty Minutes After Accident.—And likewise evidence as to the declarations of defendant by means of signs, thirty minutes after accident. Waldele v. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 274; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 400; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Wright, 80 Ind. 182; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 628; Dietrich v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 58 Md. 347; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 115; Patterson v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 54 Mich. 91; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 130.

2. Nourton etc. R. v. Shafer, 54 Tex. 641; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 421; Perkins v. Concord R. Co., 44 N. H. 223; credit from the main fact or act itself, to explain or characterize which it is offered in evidence, still it is not necessary that a declaration, to be a part of the res gestæ, should be precisely and astronomically contemporaneous and concurrent in point of time with the principal transaction, but rather that it be made voluntarily, unpremeditatedly and spontaneously, and under the immediate and unconscious influence of the principal transaction and be made at such a time, whether contemporaneous and concurrent or not, and also under such circumstances and conditions, as to exclude the idea of deliberate intent or design.¹

(b) Submission of Person to Inspection.—Where it is necessary to further the interests of justice a party suing an employer for personal injuries may be compelled to submit his person to the examination of competent medical experts.² But where it does not appear that such an order is necessary for purposes of justice, it will not be made.³

36. Damages for Personal Injuries⁴—(a) Measure and Elements Generally.—In assessing damages to a person injured, the jury may consider the character of the injuries received by the plaintiff, how far they disabled him from pursuing his ordinary occupation, and also the physical and mental suffering to which he was subjected by reason of such injuries; and they may allow such damages as in their judgment would be a fair and just compensation.⁵ Likewise evi-

Matteson v. New York Cent. R., 35 N. Y. 487.

1. Conlan v. Grace, 36 Minn. 276; Williamson v. Cambridge R. Co., 144 Mass. 148.

2. Walsh v. Sayre, 52 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 334; Schroeder v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 47 Iowa 375; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Thul, 29 Kan. 466; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 783.

3. Lloyd v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 53 Mo. 509; Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 68.

Exhibition of Injured Limb to Jury.—In Malahado v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 30 N. Y. 370, it was decided that a party might exhibit an injured limb to the jury so that a surgeon could demonstrate the nature and character of the injury.

Torn Clothing.—In an action by a servant against his master for negligence resulting in personal injuries to servant, it is discretionary with the trial court to admit in evidence the torn clothing worn by plaintiff at the time he was injured. Tudor Iron Works v. Weber, 129 Ill. 535.

4. See DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 40; DEATH, vol. 5, p. 125.

5. B. & O. R. Co. v. Kean (Md.), 28

Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 580; Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Iowa 652; Indianapolis v. Gaston, 58 Ind. 224; Wright v. Compton, 53 Ind. 337; Cox v. Vanderkleed, 21 Ind. 164; Taber v. Hutson, 5 Ind. 322; Fisher v. Hamilton, 49 Ind. 341; Stoher v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 91 Mo. 509; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 229; Beems v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Iowa 435; Pennsylvania Tel. Co. v. Jarnan (Pa., 1888), 15 Atl. Rep. 625; Hogue v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 365; Cleary v. City R. Co., 76 Cal. 240; Birkett v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 110 N. Y. 504.

Railroad Operation—Carrying—Responsibility for Negligence.—The transfer of freight by a railroad company from a vessel to its cars is a railroad operation within the meaning of Pub. St. Mass., ch. 112, § 212, and St. 1883, ch. 243, providing for damages for death from the negligence of a corporation operating a railroad. Dailey v. Boston etc. R. Co., 147 Mass. 101; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 298.

Offering to Settle for Certain Sum Previous to Suit.—A letter to the superintendent of a railroad company containing a brief statement of the injuries of a party, alleging that he was damaged $500, but rather than go to law

dence as to the business education and habits of sobriety and economy is admissible in such cases.¹ In suits instituted by a father for the negligent killing of his son, the father is not entitled to recover anything for physical suffering, or mental pain and anguish, endured on account of the son's death; nor can he recover damages because of the loss of the son's society.² In case a servant is killed in the course of his employment, it is proper, in case of suit, to show the number of children the deceased left, for the purpose of fixing damages.³ But it would be error to admit evidence showing that there was a line of promotion in the business in which plaintiff was engaged, together with the salaries of the different grades, though plaintiff was shown to have been so injured as to be unfit for service, there being no evidence to show that plaintiff had any reason to expect promotion.⁴ Where a personal injury occasioned by negligence is subsequently increased or aggravated through the fault of the person injured, the party causing the original injury is not liable for the increase or aggravation.⁵

would settle for $200 if the matter was closed up at once, written before the commencement of an action against the company by an attorney who afterwards appears in the cause of the plaintiff, is not evidence of the facts admitted therein, unless it be proved that the plaintiff authorized the letter to be written. Solomon R. Co. v. Jones, 34 Kan. 443.

1. Taylor v. Western Pacific R. Co., 45 Cal. 324.

Recovery by Parent for Killing of Son.

—In an action by a father for damages for the negligent killing of his son, under a legislative act limiting the damages in such cases to pecuniary loss only, the jury may consider the circumstances of the son, his occupation, age, health, habits of industry, sobriety, and economy, his annual earnings, and his probable duration of life at the time of the accident; also the amount of property, age, health, and probable duration of plaintiff's life, and the amount of assistance he had a reasonable expectation of receiving from the son. Hall v. Galveston etc. R. Co. (Tex.), 39 Fed. Rep. 18; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 649. See International etc. R. Co. v. Kindred, 57 Tex. 491, 498; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Cowser, 57 Tex. 293, 304.

2. Hall v. Galveston etc. R. Co. (Tex.), 39 Fed. Rep. 21; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Barron, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 105; March v. Walker, 48 Tex. 375.

3. Mulcairns v. Janesville, 67 Wis. 24; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 268; Stoher

v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 91 Mo. 509; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 229.

Funeral Expenses.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Zebe, 33 Pa. St. 318; Murphy v. New York etc. R. Co., 88 N. Y. 445; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 490; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Weber, 33 Kan. 543; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418. Compare Dalton v. South Eastern R. Co., 4 C. B., N. S. 306.

4. Chase v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 76 Iowa 675.

Probable Effect of Injury.—In an action to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence, the evidence of experts as to future consequences which are expected to follow the injury is competent. New York etc. R. Co. v. Strohm, 96 N. Y. 305; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 167.

Reduction of Wages.—Reduction of wages growing out of infirmities consequent upon servant's injury may also be shown. Central R. Co. v. Coggin, 73 Ga. 689.

5. Atlanta etc. R. Co. v. Ayers, 53 Ga. 12; Bardwell v. Jamaica, 15 Vt. 488.

Employment of Physician.—Thus, such person cannot recover for injuries occasioned by his failing altogether to send for a physician. Allender v. C. R. I. & P. R. Co., 37 Iowa 264. For although the best professional assistance need not be employed, the person injured is in duty bound to exercise reasonable care and skill in the selec-

(b) Life Tables.—Where the injury to plaintiff is shown to be permanent, the Carlisle tables are admissible in evidence to show plaintiffs' expectancy of life.¹

(c) Exemplary Damages.—An injured party is entitled to exemplary, punitive or vindictive damages only where the defendant has been guilty of gross negligence.²

(d) Amount of Damages; Question for Jury.—In actions for personal injuries the amount of damages must be left largely to the reasonable discretion of the jury. It, however, is not at liberty to give any sum it pleases.³ And the trial court ought not to interfere and grant a new trial unless there has been a manifest abuse of the trust, such as to indicate passion, prejudice, partiality, or unaccountable caprice or corruption.⁴ Where a judgment is reversed on the sole ground that the damages awarded are excessive, the court may indicate the excess, and allow it to be remitted and judgment entered for the remainder.⁵ It is error to charge the jury that they may give such damages as they may deem a fair and just compensation for the pecuniary loss resulting from tion of a physician. Collins v. Council Bluffs, 32 Iowa 324; Rice v. Des Moines, 40 Iowa 638. But where the person injured has exercised reasonable skill and care in selecting a physician, the party causing the original injury is liable for any increased damages occasioned by unskilful treatment, or even for death which ensues from such cause. Storer v. Inhabitants of Bluehill, 51 Me. 439; Eastman v. Sanborn, 3 Allen (Mass.) 504; Lyon v. Erie R. Co., 57 N. Y. 489; Santer v. New York etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 50.

1. Chase v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 76 Iowa 65.

Evidence of Actuary as to Probable Duration of Life.—In an action to recover for personal injuries an actuary testified, under objection, as to the probable duration of the life of a healthy man of a certain age, and the value of an annuity at that age for such a life, based upon the assumption that he would earn a certain sum per annum. Held, error, as tending to confuse the jury, where the evidence showed that the disability incurred was only partial. Texas Mex. R. Co. v. Douglass, 69 Tex. 694.

2. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. M'Coy (Ky.), 1883, 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 278.

Under a Statute providing that if the life of any person is lost by the wilful neglect of any other person or corporation, or of their agents or servants, punitive damages may be recovered therefor, it was held, that where a servant was killed in working on dangerous premises, furnished by the master, and he knew the condition of the premises, and continued to use them without objection, the master is not liable, as he is not guilty of wilful neglect. Needham v. Louisville etc. R. Co. (Ky.), 1887, 11 S. W. Rep. 306.

3. Waldhier v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 87 Mo. 37; Coleman v. Southwick, 9 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 45.

4. Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Roddy, 1 Pickle (Tenn.) 400; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 340; Shumacher v. St. Louis etc. R. Co. (Ark.), 39 Fed. Rep. 174.

It was held in one case that a verdict of $8,000 against a railroad company for negligently causing the death of a young and healthy engineer, whose expectation of life was thirty-one years, is not excessive to a point indicating either partiality, passion, prejudice, caprice or corruption. Tenn. etc. R. Co. v. Roddy, 1 Pick. (Tenn.) 400; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 340.

5. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Dwyer, 36 Kan. 59.

Fifteen hundred dollars has been held to be a reasonable verdict where an employee's injuries were of a very severe character. Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Dorsey, 66 Tex. 148; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 446. As to other instances of excessive damages see Texas etc. R. Co. v. Douglass, 73 Tex. 325; Columbia etc. R. Co. v. Hawthorn, 3 Wash. Ter. 353; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Brown, 26 Kan. 443; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 228;

the person's death, without making reference to any proof of the amount of damages sustained.¹

37. Food, Lodging and Medical Attention.—It is the duty of a master to provide his domestic servants with wholesome and sufficient food and suitable lodging. Failure to do so was at common law an indictable offence.² But a physician's bill is not an implication or incident to a contract for service. It requires an express contract to create that obligation.³ But if the master does send for a physician he is not only liable himself, but has no right to deduct the charge from the wages of the servant without an express agreement to that effect.⁴ There is no general liability on the part of a railroad company to provide surgical aid for sick or wounded servants, nor has the conductor any general authority to employ a surgeon; but an emergency may arise vesting such authority in the conductor.⁵

Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Dwyer, 36 Kan. 58; Whalen v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 75 Iowa 563; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Welch, 52 Ill. 183.

1. North Chicago Rolling Mills Co. v. Morrissey, 111 Ill. 646; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 47; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Sykes, 96 Ill. 162; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254; Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Coates, 62 Iowa 486; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265. See Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Silliphant, 70 Tex. 623.

2. R. v. Gould, 1 Salk. 381; R. v. Friend, Russ. & R. 22; R. v. Ridley, 2 Camp. 650. And see 14 and 15 Vict., ch. 11; 24 and 25 Vict., ch. 95; 38 and 39 Vict., ch. 86.

3. Sweetwater Mfg. Co. v. Glover, 29 Ga. 399. And this is so even if the accident occurs while the servant was in the discharge of his duty. Sellen v. Norman, 4 C. & P. 80; Cooper v. Phillips, 4 C. & P. 581.

4. Emmons v. Lord, 18 Me. 351.

5. Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. McMurray, 98 Ind. 358; 49 Am. Rep. 752; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 371.

Conductor's Authority When Accident Occurs at Point Remote.—As where, as in above case, a servant of a railroad company, while in the line of his duty, is injured at a point distant from the chief offices of the company, and there is an urgent necessity for the employment of a surgeon to render professional services to the injured brakeman, the conductor, if he is the highest agent of the company on the ground, has authority to bind the corporation by the employment of a surgeon to render professional services required by the emergency. Union Pacific R. Co. v.

Beatty, 35 Kan. 265; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 84.

Promise of Employer to Pay Physician.

—The fact that an employee has been disabled while in the employ of a railroad company, and in the discharge of his hazardous duties, is a sufficient consideration to support a promise to pay for the nursing and medical attendance necessary to his cure. Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Rodrigues, 47 Ill. 188.

Legislative Act Requiring the Calling of Physician.

—And where a statute provides that a railroad company, when an accident occurs on its line whereby anyone is injured, shall give immediate notice to the nearest physician, and report to the state commissioner, etc., under penalty of fine, it was held—a brakeman having been thrown from a train and left to freeze to death—that the fact that the brakeman was known to have been on the train at a certain point, and was missed at a point many miles distant, was not sufficient to affect the company with knowledge of the fact that the brakeman had been either killed or injured by an accident between those points, especially when there was no evidence whatever that any accident had there occurred to the train, and, on the contrary, the evidence showing that the train ran as usual between the points, with nothing exceptional or peculiar to attract the attention of those charged with its management. Adkins v. Atlanta etc. R. Co., 27 S. Car. 71; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 281.

But a railway road master, having charge of the repairs of the roadway, has no implied authority to contract for the nursing of a person injured on the

38. Joint Liability of Masters.—Where two corporations are co-operating in the erection of a structure, and their successive concurrent negligence caused the death or injury of an employee of one of them, they are jointly liable.¹

39. Indemnification of Servant for Loss or Damage.—A master is bound to indemnify his servant for all expenses or loss incurred or sustained in obeying his lawful orders. No express contract of indemnity is required; the law will presume from the relation of master and servant an obligation to hold the latter harmless from the consequences of obedience to the lawful orders of the former.² But a promise to indemnify a servant against the consequences of violation of a statute, or a felony or misdemeanor, or a manifest civil wrong, is of no effect; as a promise to indemnify a printer against the consequences of publishing a libel.³

MASTER IN EQUITY.

- I. Definition, 919.
 - 1. Origin and History, 920.
 - 2. Masters in the United States, 921.
- II. Appointment, 921.
- III. Powers and Duties in General, 922.
 - 1. Clerks, Commissioners and Referees, 928.
- IV. Reference, 928.
 - 1. Accounts, 932.
 - 2. Testimony, 936.
 - 3. Time of Reference, 936.
- V. Report, 937.
 - 1. Form of Report, 937.
 - 2. Masters Must Follow Decretal Order, 937.
 - 3. The General Report, 938.
 - 4. Reporting Testimony, 940.
 - 5. Weight Given to the Report by the Court, 940.
- 6. Final Draft of Report, 941.
- VI. Objections, 942.
- VII. Confirmation, 944.
 - 1. Effect of Confirmation, 944.
- VIII. Exceptions to Master's Report, 944.
 - 1. Who May Take Exceptions, 948.
 - 2. When Exceptions May be Taken, 948.
 - 3. Questions of Fact, 949.
 - 4. Effect of Acquiescence, 949.
 - 5. Overruling Exceptions, 950.
- IX. Review of Report, 951.
- X. Additional Testimony, 953.
 - 1. Motion to "Open and Recommit," 954.
- XI. Master's Sales, 954.
- XII. Costs, 955.
- XIII. Compensation, 956.
- XIV. Master's Estimates, 957.

I. DEFINITION.—An officer of a court of equity who acts as an assistant to the chancellor.⁴

The close analogy which exists between masters in equity and certain other officers with similar powers and duties, such as arbitrators, auditors and referees, should be observed. The functions line of the road, there being no emergency calling for immediate action, and there being a superior agent within reach, but the corporation will be bound by the ratification of such contract by the general manager. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. McVay, 98 Ind. 391; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 382. See Agency, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 365.

1. Consolidated Ice Machine Co. v. Kiefer, 26 Ill. App. 466; Shearman and Redf. on Negligence, § 58; 5 Wharton on Negligence, § 788.

2. Macdonnell's Master and Servant, 76; Story on Agency, § 339.

3. Shackel v. Rosier, 2 Bing. N. C. 634.

Allowing Prisoner to Escape.—Or to indemnify a police constable for suffering a prisoner to escape. Featherstone v. Hutchinson, Cro. Eliz. 199.

4. Bouv. Law Dict.

of these officers, generally speaking, are to relieve the court of the investigation of complicated questions of fact, especially accounts, or to furnish the aid of the judgment, in matters of business, of men trained in such pursuits; and such preliminary hearings before competent officers, who can take time to examine the case well and report upon it intelligently and accurately, serves to develop the true points of contest for the court's consideration. Their jurisdiction is merely ancillary and proceedings before them do not finally determine the rights and liabilities of the parties to the cause, unless their reports, containing not only facts directly proved but deductions of fact and conclusions of law, are approved by the court after examination. Proceedings before arbitrators are often by consent of the parties, but those before auditors, masters in equity and referees are commonly regulated by statute and rules of court, which sometimes, however, provide for a reference by consent. It is evident that in such proceedings, whether at law or in equity, the principles of law applicable to these several officials are practically the same, and it will be found both useful and instructive to contrast with each other the several titles referred to in the notes.¹

1. Origin and History.—After establishing the system of proceeding by writs, which were authenticated by the great seal, the chancellor, who had charge of the seal, appointed certain assistants to himself, originally called clerks, clerici or præceptores, and afterwards masters. They were to assist the chancellor, both in issuing writs under the great seal and in preserving due regularity in the form of the writs. Before they issued any writ they were required to hear and examine the complaints of the suitors. The masters were generally required to be doctors of the civil law, and proficient in the common law of England. They were generally ecclesiastics, and among them was Martin de Pateshull, Dean of St. Paul's, afterwards chief justice of the king's bench. Another was the Abbott of Reading. From the reign of Henry VI, down to the commonwealth the court of chancery consisted of the chancellor, the master of the rolls, and the college of clerks. The clerks lived in the king's palace, or in some special place assigned to them. The judicial authority of the master of the rolls is to be traced from the reign of Edward I. It is probable that in the times of Richard II, the master of the rolls was one of the twelve clerici de primâ formâ, who were the council of the lord chancellor, and of whom the present masters are an historical survival. These clerks first obtained the title of masters in the reign of Edward III. In early times the masters were appointed by the king, but in the reign of Edward IV their appointment was entrusted to the chancellor. The office was conferred by a ceremony in which the chancellor in open court placed a cap upon the master's head. The masters appear to have been looked upon like the pedanci judices, or assistants of the Roman practors. In the time of Henry V, one of the eleven masters present in court, might on the petition of counsel, in the absence of the chancellor, dispose of applications relating to procedure, as for fixing the time of answering, or for publications of depositions, though they were not permitted to make any definitive order. In the time of Elizabeth it became customary to refer causes to such masters as the master of the rolls should call in. They sometimes sat on the bench with the chancellors, with covered heads, and advised him if called upon. Occasionally the great seal was committed to two or three masters by the chancellor during his absence, and on these occasions they sat to hear motions. When a suit depended on a matter of account it was usually, and in Lord Bacon's time always, referred to one of the masters, "matters account," according to one of Bacon's orders, not being "fit for the court." This machinery was infinitely preferable to that of the jury, and consequently account became an important head of equity jurisprudence. The masters also went into the country to examine witnesses under special commissions. A time was usually fixed for the masters to report, and when made the report was confirmed by an order, if no objection was made.¹

A master's office is a branch of the court. Stewart v. Turner, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 458.

1. ARBITRATION AND AWARD, vol. I, p. 646; AUDITORS, vol. I, p. 1009; REFEREE.

2. Masters in the United States.—In the United States; officers of this name exist in many of the States, with similar powers to those exercised by the English masters, but variously modified, restricted and enlarged by statute and rules of court, and in certain of the States similar officers are called commissioners, or by other titles.

II. APPOINTMENT.—A master is appointed by order of court on motion,² and he must of course follow the directions contained in the order of his appointment.

1. Spence Eq. Juris. of Court of Chan., vol. 1, p. 355.

2. Phillips' Appeal, 68 Pa. St. 137.

The circuit courts of the United States may appoint standing masters in chancery in their respective districts, both the judges concurring in the appointment, and they may also appoint a master pro hac vice in any particular case. United States Equity rule 82; State v. McIntyre, 53 Me. 214.

Who May be Master.—It is improper for a master to perform any official act as master in a cause in which he is solicitor, or partner of the solicitor. Brown v. Byrne, Walk. Ch. 403.

Where the statute prohibits the clerk of court acting as master, except in special matters, the parties may waive the right to object to his so acting.

Fisher v. Hayes, 22 Blatchf. (U. S.) 505.

Consent Will Not Authorize Him to Act as a Referee at Law.—Consent will not authorize a master to whom a question has been sent for the information of the court, to act as a referee at law, and to hear and determine the whole case. Farmers' Loan etc. Co. v. Central R., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 332.

A notice was to appear before A, a master, and the return was by B, a master; it was held to be irregular. Whipple v. Brown, Harr. (Mich.) Ch. 436.

Master Should Complete Proceedings.—Where proceedings under an order of reference have been begun by one master they should be completed by him and the party obtaining the order cannot transfer the proceedings to another

III. POWERS AND DUTIES OF MASTER.—The province of a master is to examine a case in detail, and the effect of a preliminary hearing before a competent master is to eliminate what is undisputed and to develop the true points of the contest for the court's consideration;¹ hence he is given certain powers to facilitate his en-master to be completed. Bishop v. Williams, Walk. Ch. 423; Larkins v. Murphy, 68 N. Car. 381.

May be Transferred in Case of Death or Inability.—The proceedings may of course be transferred to another master in extreme cases. 9 Ves. 341; Prac. Reg. 165; 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1168.

A court cannot appoint a commissioner out of the State, to settle an account, without the consent of the parties. Anderson v. Gest, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 26.

1. Phillips' Appeal, 68 Pa. St. 447; Clark's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 137; Backus' Appeal, 58 Pa. St. 186, 192; Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 149.

Duties of Master.—In Simmons v. Jacob, 52 Me. 147. CUTTING, J., observes: "In this state (Maine) we have no regula generalis in relation to the duties of a master in chancery; but, in each case where a master is appointed, the rule for his guidance is the decretal order. He is not usually appointed to act merely as a commissioner to take testimony, which any ordinary magistrate might do, but as an officer to receive and adjudicate upon the force and effect of evidence produced before him and thus to ascertain facts and form an opinion as to the law arising thereon, both of which constitute his findings and are the only subject matter to be inserted in his report to the court—so that if his legal conclusions are not sustained by the facts found, the court may interpose and correct the error." See also Howe v. Russell, 36 Me. 115; Mason v. York etc. R. Co., 52 Me. 82; Cary v. Herrin, 62 Me. 16, 18; Emerson v. Atwater, 12 Mich. 314.

Master in South Carolina.—A commissioner in equity is not a judge within the meaning of the constitution of South Carolina, so as to entitle him to hold his office "during good behavior." Ex parte Gray, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) Ch. 77.

A master in chancery appointed under the constitution of South Carolina of 1778, was not displaced by the act of 1799, and a new appointment under that act. In re Gibbs, 1 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 587.

Master in Ohio.—Referees and master commissioners, under the Ohio code, possess judicial functions. 1871, Williams v. Stevens, 1 Cinc. (Ohio) 176.

Master in Indiana.—A master commissioner referred to "for finding" is a general referee. Lee v. State, 88 Ind. 256.

A reference to a master "to hear the evidence, find the facts and report the same together with the evidence," held not to authorize conclusions of law. McNaught v. McAllister, 93 Ind. 114.

In Tennessee.—By the Tennessee chancery practice, orders for taking bills pro confesso, and setting down causes for hearing, properly appertain to the duties and functions of the clerk and master, and not of the chancellor; and should be made at rules, and not in court. And when the chancellor assumes to make such orders he is exercising the appropriate function of the master, and must conform to the rules prescribed for the government of the clerk and master. Lanum v. Steel, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 280.

Jurisdiction in Rhode Island.—A master appointed under Rhode Island Rev. St., ch. 164, § 17, to settle the accounts of a removed assignee, has jurisdiction over every question which goes to the charge and discharge of the assignee, as an accounting party, though involving fraud in the performance of his trust; the act relating to jury trials in equity causes having no application to summary proceedings in equity, upon petition. Lowitz v. Alden, 6 R. I. 512.

One of the most important duties of the master is to make computations and take accounts in complicated pecuniary transactions referred to him by the court, and which the court will generally refuse to look into without his aid.

Master's Powers and Duties.—For a summary of the duties and powers of masters in the federal courts, see Equity Rules United States Supreme Court, 73-81. See AUDITORS, vol. 1, p. 1009.

In Ransom v. Winn, 18 How. (U. S.) 295, McLEAN, J., said: "Where a chancery suit involves matters of account, the action of a master should be had in quiries, among others, compelling the attendance of parties and witnesses,¹ the inferior court, and the items admitted or rejected should be stated so that exception may be taken to the particular items or class of items, and such a case should be brought before this court on the rulings of the exceptions by the circuit court."

On the reference of an account to a master for statement he should admit the oath of a party to prove only such items as from their nature are not susceptible of full proof. Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 103.

1. Master's Warrant.—The 78th Equity Rule of the United States courts provides that the commissioner, master, or examiner shall certify to the clerk's office in case a witness refuses to appear or to give evidence, whereupon the court or any judge thereof may order attachment. See also 1 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 908; Braithwaite's Pr. 144. To bring the parties before the court the master issues a "warrant" which is a memorandum, entitled in the cause, and signed by him, appointing a day and hour for all parties or their solicitors concerned to attend a meeting before him on the matter of reference. This notice should be given at the earliest reasonable time. If either party shall fail to appear at the time and place appointed, the master shall be at liberty to proceed ex parte, or in his discretion to adjourn the examination and proceedings to a future day, giving notice to the absent party or his solicitor of such adjournment; and it is the duty of the master to proceed with all reasonable diligence, in every such reference, and with the least practicable delay; and either party shall be at liberty to apply to the court or a judge thereof, for an order to the master to speed the proceedings, and to make his report, and to certify to the court or judge the reasons for any delay. United States Equity rule 75. See also Chancery Rules of New Jersey, 2 McCart. (N. J.) 515, 531.

In State v. McIntyre, 53 Me. 214, the court held that a master's report could not be successfully objected to as an ex parte report where he had proceeded in the absence of defendant, after giving him due notice.

Notice to Parties.—Parties are entitled to notice of the hearing before the master, though only records are to be examined. Wardlaw v. Erskine, 21 S. Car. 359. See also DeWalt v. Kinard, 19 S. Car. 286.

A commissioner appointed to take an account gave the defendant three days' notice of the date fixed for proving claims against him. Held, that while the notice was too short, the judgment would not be reversed, as it did not appear that defendant was prejudiced thereby. Moore v. Bruce (Va.), S. E. Rep. 195.

In cases in chancery where a default has been taken and a reference is made to a master to ascertain and report the amount due, no notice is required to the defendant to appear before the master on the reference. Moore v. Titman, 33 Ill. 353, 358.

On a reference to a master to state an account, reasonable notice of the hearing must be given to the opposite party. A notice to his attorney sent by letter, mailed three days prior to the time fixed, was held insufficient when the attorney could no more than have reached the master's office if there had been no delay in the mail or otherwise, and if he had been at home and left at once to attend. Strang v. Allen 44 Ill. 428.

On a bill against an administrator to account, the matter was referred to a master, and the defendant was to give notice to the complainant of the time and place of the hearing before the master. The defendant took no steps in the case during the succeeding vacation, and, at the next term, the court rendered a final decree for the complainant. Held, that there was no error in the proceeding. Murdock v. Holland, 3 Blackt. (Ind.) 114.

In New Jersey the time for notice is fixed by rule at four days at least, exclusive before the day assigned for the hearing. Rule 43. Chancery Rules of New Jersey. See 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1171; Massachusetts Equity rule 31, and Tennessee Rule of Ch. Pr., rule 4. Every warrant for attendance before the master is peremptory. 59th Order, 1828; United States Equity rule 75. And he may proceed to an ex parte hearing upon the nonattendance. (75th Equity rule United States.) If he report that he "gave reasonable notice to each and all of said defendants" of the time and place appointed, for the hearing, it is sufficient in the absence of evidence to the contrary. State v. McIntyre, 53 Me. 214; Simmons v. Jacobs, 52 Me. 147.

the production of documents,¹

Time to Prepare for a Hearing.—The time to prepare for a hearing after notice given to the parties by a master in chancery unless fixed by some rule or order, is left in the discretion of the master; but it should be a reasonable notice. Bernie v. Vandever, 16 Ark. 616.

A notice to appear on the day the case was referred, in a few hours, between 8 and 12 P. M. was held to be unreasonable and the report was set aside. Bernie v. Vandever, 16 Ark. 616.

Master's Summons.—Pending a reference, it is proper for the master to issue a summons, at the request of the defendant, to proceed in the examination of witnesses. Fream v. Dickinson, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 300.

A summons to proceed upon a reference issued by the master before the actual entry of the decree, or order of reference, is irregular. Quackenbush v. Leonard, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 131.

The time fixed by the master for the service of a summons should be stated in the summons itself, or form a part of the underwriting, where the latter is necessary to inform the party of the object of the hearing; and the underwriting, as well as the summons, should be signed by the master. Whipple v. Stewart, Walk. (Mich.) Ch. 357.

Where a defendant appeared before the master at the return of a summons, and objected to his proceeding, on the ground that no time had been fixed for the service of the summons, held, that such appearance was no waiver of his right to make such objection. Whipple v. Stewart, Walk. (Mich.) Ch. 357.

Where proceedings are to be had under an order of reference to a master, it is not necessary to serve a copy of such order on the defendant with the master's summons, but he is bound to take notice of it without service. Whipple v. Stewart, Walk. (Mich.) Ch. 357.

Parties Entitled to Attend—The general rule appears to be that all parties beneficially interested are entitled to attend before the master on all those proceedings which may affect their interests. The rule is subject to some limitations, as in the case of executors or administrators, trustees, etc.; and these restrictions are adopted for the purpose of protecting the party upon whom, or the funds upon which, the costs of the suit will eventually devolve, from being put to expense by unnecessary attendance of parties before the master and the application of them is generally regulated by the master to whose discretion it is left. 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1174.

1. Production of Documents.—Under the United States Equity rule 77, the master may require the production of all books, papers, writings, vouchers, and other documents applicable to the matter referred.

In an order of reference to a master, the defendant may be directed to produce before the master "all books, papers and writings in his custody or power," and may be examined on oath upon such interrogatories as the master may direct, relative to the subject matters of the reference. Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 513.

Where, upon an order to deliver over books, papers, etc., the court intends to permit it to be done upon his own ex parte affidavit merely, he is directed generally "to produce and deliver the same on oath;" but when the party is directed to produce and deliver them on oath "before a master," or "under the direction of a master," it is held that all parties interested may examine as to the full and fair compliance with the order. Hallett v. Hallett, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 432.

Where a master was ordered to take testimony, where no interrogatories had been filed, the testimony consisting principally of books of account alleged to be in the custody of the respondent, held, that it was a proper departure from the rule requiring interrogatories to be filed, and that courts may depart from their general rules in cases where it would prevent a failure or delay of justice, and the respondent having filed an affidavit in answer to the motion, that he had no books called for in his control, that the affidavit to that effect would reply to the order. The same affidavit was made in answer to the order, and the master reported that he considered the respondent no longer amenable to his process. This report was adopted by the court, the complainant being left to a subpoena duces tecum to bring the books into court. Russell v. McLellan, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 157.

examination of parties and witnesses,¹

When any decree directs books or papers to be produced before the master, it is in the discretion of the master to determine what documents are to be produced. He may also require such documents to be left with him for examination. The master has power to fix a time within which they must be produced, and disobedience of his orders is contempt. Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1177, 1178.

In South Carolina, a master has no power conferred upon him to compel a party to produce a deed to be used in evidence, either by § 791 of the General Statutes or by §§ 294 and 389 of the code. Cartee v. Spence, 24 S. Car. 550.

In a bill for an account between partners, it is the duty of the master, upon a reference to him, to take and state an account between the parties, to state the accounts, and include that statement in his report. The parties and witnesses should be examined under oath, and their statements reduced to writing. If a witness refuses to appear before the master, or to answer, the court, upon information thereof, will punish him for contempt. The master should require all books and other evidences to be presented, which will enable him to present a full statement, and strike a correct balance. Brockman v. Aulger, 12 Ill. 277.

In an equity proceeding, the examiner to take testimony had filed his report, and a master had been appointed, when application was made to the court to reopen the evidence, on the ground that two of the witnesses had made a mistake in their testimony before the examiner. Held, that the application, in the discretion of the court, might be granted, but that such discretion should be exercised with great care. Burton's Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 214.

1. Examination of Parties.—The master is at liberty to examine any creditor or other person coming in to claim before him, either upon written interrogatories or viva voce, or in both modes, as the nature of the case may appear to him to require. The evidence upon such examination must be taken down by the master, or by some other person by his order, and in his presence, if either party requires it, in order that the same may be used by the court, if necessary. United States Equity rule 81. See also Gilmore v. Gilmore, 40 Me. 50, 53;

Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 513; Hollister v. Barkley, 11 N. H. 501; Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 499; Story v. Livingston, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 359.

A viva voce examination does not alter the rights of the parties, and therefore there can be no cross-examination by the party's own counsel. His answers are testimony, when responsive, and he may accompany them with an explanation fairly responsive to the interrogatory. Benson v. LeRoy, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 122.

See also Jackson v. Jackson, 3 N. J. Eq. 96, 102; Winter v. Wheeler, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 25.

The master has no power to examine parties other than that given by the decree, but this is usually ample, and should be rectified when it is not sufficient. The examination is usually by written interrogatories, and it is in the discretion of the master what parties shall be examined and what interrogatories shall be admitted. Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1181; McCracken v. Valentine, 9 N. Y. 42; Copeland v. Crane, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 93.

No witness in chief, examined before publication, nor the parties, ought to be examined before the master on a reference without an order, for that purpose, which order usually specifies the subject and extent of the examination. Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 495.

When an examination is once begun before a master, he ought, on assigning a reasonable time to the parties, to proceed to its conclusion with as little delay and intermission as the nature of the case will admit of; and where it is once concluded, it ought not to be opened for further proof without special and very satisfactory cause. Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 495.

The rule of the chancery court of New York, which directs to the master or other officer, who is to approve sureties in any case, to require such sureties to justify, means that he shall not only examine them on oath as to the extent of their pecuniary responsibility, but also as to their residences, and other qualifications to become such sureties according to law and the practice of the court; or he should require an affidavit of such qualifications. Ten Eck v. Simpson, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 177.

The return of a master, charged with the execution of an order of court, showing the failure of a person to appear and submit to an examination as required by the order, is sufficient foundation for a rule to show cause why an attachment should not issue for contempt. Whipple v. Brown, Harr. (Mich.) Ch. 436.

Suspending Examination.—It is bad practice to suspend an examination before a master until the court shall have passed upon the relevancy of the testimony offered. Rusling v. Bray, 37 N. J. Eq. 174.

Oral Examination.—"The practice of oral examination is universal in the State of New Jersey, as well in relation to parties as witnesses, and the practice of cross examination by counsel is also universal, but must be confined to matters or facts which were the subject of enquiry on the original examination and which were authorized to be examined into by the decretal order." Jackson v. Jackson, 3 N. J. Eq. 96, 103. See also in this connection Marlatt v. Warwick, 18 N. J. Eq. 108.

Shepherd v. McClain, 18 N. J. Eq. 128; Doody v. Pierce, 9 Allen (Mass.) 141; French v. Hayward, 16 Gray (Mass.) 512; Brady v. Brady, 8 Allen (Mass.) 101; Bailey v. Myrick, 52 Me. 132.

By the United States Equity rule 77, the master has full authority to examine the parties in the causes upon oath, touching all matters contained in the reference. See also Pingree v. Coffin, 12 Gray (Mass.) 288.

If a master declines to examine any party when required, exception should be taken to his report on this ground. Chenwell v. Martin, 4 Sim. 340; Simmons v. Gulleridge, 13 Ves. 265; Edwards v. Goodwin, 10 Sim. 123.

A reference to a master, to examine the defendant on interrogatories touching an alleged contempt, and to take and report proofs, does not authorize the master to receive ex parte affidavits, without a special clause in the order of reference to that effect; and as a general rule, no new affidavits will be received by the court at the hearing. Cumming v. Waggoner, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 603.

Upon an order for the appointment of a receiver, the master may examine the defendant under oath, as well as witnesses, for the ascertaining whether all the property of the defendant has been delivered to the receiver; but the defendant cannot be required to deliver up property of which he has denied, under oath, all possession or control by him. Fitzburgh v. Everingham, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 29.

Where the master certifies that an examination is insufficient, the complainant may file new interrogatories; and the defendant will be ordered to answer such interrogatories and the exceptions together, but if it is certified to be sufficient, the defendant cannot be re-examined to the same point on new interrogatories, without the permission of the court, on cause shown, and notice of the application to the defendant. Case v. Abeel, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 630.

Written Interrogatories and Cross Examination.—The answers to interrogatories are put in writing on advisement of counsel; and under this mode of proceeding there can be no cross examination. Jackson v. Jackson, 3 N. J. Eq. 96, 102.

A party interrogated before a master in chancery has a right to demand that the questions be propounded to him in writing. Otherwise, as to witnesses. Winter v. Wheeler, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 25.

Upon a reference to a master in chancery to take proofs, in a suit by a husband for a separation, where the defendant wife admits the charges in the bill to be true, either by answer or by suffering the bill to be taken as confessed for want of an answer, such defendant may appear and cross examine the witnesses of the complainant, and may produce witnesses to disprove the charges in the bill; but such cross examination must be at her own expense, and not at the expense of her husband; and the master is not bound to take testimony for her without compensation. Perry v. Perry, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) Ch. 285.

Exceptions.—Any objection to the form of the interrogatories as settled by the master, or to his other rulings should be taken in the form of an exception, and brought thus before the court. 1 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1182. See generally INTERROGATORIES, vol. 11, p. 526.

Sufficiency or Insufficiency of Examination.—In considering the sufficiency or insufficiency of an examination upon exceptions to the master's certificate the court will look at it, to see whether there is any substantial defect. An insufficient examination is considered a and the admission or rejection of evidence.¹

nullity; when, therefore, the examination is found insufficient, either upon the master's certificate or by order of the court, made upon exceptions to it, the same proceedings may be adopted as if no examination had been put in at all. 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1186, citing Purcell v. McNamara, 12 Ves. 170; Jackson v. Jackson, 2 Green Ch. (N. J.) 102; 1 Hoff. Ch. Pr. 529-533; Allfrey v. Allfrey, 12 Beav. 620.

Credibility of Witness.—An objection to the credibility of a witness may be ordinarily made after publication and before hearing; but the interrogatories must be so shaped as to prevent the party, under color of an examination to credit, from procuring testimony to overcome that already taken and published in the cause. Gass v. Stinson, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 605.

Competency of Witness.—An objection to the competency of witness cannot be made after publication, if the incompetency was known before the commission to take his deposition issued. Gass v. Stinson, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 605.

May Receive Testimony Without Order.—The master, when directed to ascertain the facts of a case, may receive the testimony of witnesses pertinent to such facts without an order expressly directing him to that effect. Goodwin v. McGehee, 15 Ala. 232.

The fact, that the signature to an instrument, which has not been acted on as evidence by the chancellor, and on which the equity of the bill was in no way dependent, was proved before him at the hearing, does not preclude the master, when such instrument is offered in evidence upon a reference to him, from enquiring into its genuineness, for reasons apparent on the face of the instrument, irrespective of the signature. Aday v. Echols, 18 Ala. 353.

In a reference to a master the order need not particularly empower him to take testimony, if the subject matter is only to be ascertained by evidence. In taking evidence, although the better plan is to take the answers in writing, upon written interrogatories, he may examine the witnesses viva voce, the parties to the suit being present, personally, or by counsel, and not objecting to such a course. Story v. Livingston, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 359.

By an agreement of the parties, which was made an order of court, two cases were referred to three masters, "to take testimony and report the facts, with the form of a decree, under and in pursuance of the agreement herewith filed." The agreement also stipulated that the awards of the masters should be final, "without exception or appeal." Held, that the awards of the masters were conclusive, and that appeals therefrom must be quashed. Hostetter's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 132.

A witness who has given his deposition, which has been read at the hearing, cannot be examined anew before the master, without a special order of the court. Gass v. Stinson, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 605.

If any great right or public policy has been violated by the master, relief will be afforded; otherwise not. McDougald v. Dougherty, 11 Ga. 570.

Masters are empowered to examine witnesses and even parties to the cause. Interrogatories to a party before the master are in the nature of interrogatories in a bill of chancery. And the answers are evidence to the same extent. McDougald v. Dougherty, 11 Ga. 570.

As to the general principles on which examinations before a master are to be conducted regulating the practice, as to the mode of taking testimony, on an order of reference to a master, see Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 495; Gass v. Stinson, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 605; Jenkins v. Eldridge, 3 Story (U. S.) 292, 299; Hollister v. Barkley, 11 N. H. 501; Benson v. Le Roy, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 122; McDougald v. Dougherty, 11 Ga. 570; Dougherty v. Jones, 11 Ga. 432; Gilmore v. Gilmore, 40 Me. 50.

1. Admissibility of Evidence.—Under the 77th rule of the United States supreme court, the admission of evidence rests entirely in the sound discretion of the master. Wooster v. Gumbirner, 20 Fed. Rep. 167. But this rule is not everywhere upheld. In equity proceedings, where the claims set up by one of the parties against the other are resisted on the ground of fraud, and that question is presented to the court, and judicially determined in favor of such claims, and the case is sent to a master to find the amount due, he is not authorized to re-examine the question of fraud or receive any testimony bearing thereon,

The statutes of various States and the rules of court and local customs often regulate and sometimes extend these powers and impose other duties upon the masters; such as the settlement of deeds, the appointment of new trustees, and matters relating to the management of estates of insolvent debtors.¹ Certain ministerial acts, like the sale of property decreed by the court to be sold are also entrusted to masters.²

1. Clerks, Commissioners and Referees.—Many matters formerly entrusted to masters are now performed by officers of the court called clerks, commissioners or referees. Their chief duties are to make enquiries, take accounts, sell estates and adjust other matters, before there can be a final disposition of the cause.³

IV. REFERENCE.—The delegation by the court of any matter to a master is technically called a reference.

What shall be referred to a master, general or specific, is a mat-but all the legal evidence had at the hearing, bearing upon the question to be determined by the master, may by him be considered. Gilmore v. Gilmore, 40 Me. 50.

By United States Equity rule 80, all affidavits, depositions and documents which have been previously made, read, or used in the court, upon any proceedings in any cause or matter may be used before the master.

There is no error in the admission in evidence, at the hearing before a master to whom a cause has been referred by this court, of a deposition taken out of the commonwealth on commission, although it does not appear that all the formalities required in depositions taken within the State were observed. Tyng v. Thayer, 8 Allen (Mass.) 391. See also Stiles v. Allen, 5 Allen (Mass.) 320; Bacon v. Rogers, 8 Allen (Mass.) 146.

If the defendant wishes to controvert any allegations in the bill, he should put them in issue by plea or answer; and neglecting this, he is precluded from introducing evidence for that purpose before the master on a reference. Ward v. Jewett, Walk. (Mich.) Ch. 45.

Where the master erroneously refuses to receive testimony, the proper way to correct it is by motion to the court for an order compelling him to receive the evidence, and not by excepting to his report. Ward v. Jewett, Walk. (Mich.) Ch. 45.

1. 1 Barb. Chan. Pr., 468.

2. Morton v. Sloan, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 278; Ryan v. Dox, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 440.

It is proper to order a reference to decide whether a sale to enforce a vendor's lien should be made in gross or in parcels. Clark v. Carlton, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 452.

Sales made in South Carolina under order of court, in counties where there is no master, may be ordered made by the sheriff. Childs v. Alexander, 22 S. Car. 169.

A creditor coming in under a decree, to prove a claim not mentioned in the pleadings, must present the particulars of his claim to the master, accompanied by his affidavit, either positive, or to the best of his knowledge and belief, that the sum claimed is justly due, and that neither he, nor any person by his order, or on his account, has received satisfaction or security for any part of the claim. Morris v. Mowatt, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 142.

Upon a rule against a master, to show cause why he has not paid over money belonging to suitors, he cannot discharge himself upon his own affidavit that the money has been stolen without negligence on his part. In re Bostick, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 327.

Where, pending a bill, the parties settled their accounts between them, and reported the same into court, but a new order of reference was made by mutual consent, the commissioner is not precluded from examining the accounts generally, and correcting any mistakes therein; especially where the party benefited by the errors had torn the signatures of the parties from their settlement. Todd v. Bowyer, 1 Munf. (Va.) 447.

3. Beebe v. Russell, 19 How. (U. S.) 283, 285.

ter in the discretion of the court.¹ Where the evidence in a cause is all written and a decree thereon can be rendered without diffi-

1. Phillips' Appeal, 68 Pa. St. 137; Clark's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 447, 451; Martin v. Foley, 82 Ga. 352.

Reference of an Equity Cause Discretionary with the Court.—In a suit to set aside a deed alleged to have been procured by fraud and undue influence, and to have an accounting in case the deed is set aside, where it is apparent to the trial judge that the controlling issue is as to the validity of the deed, it is not error to refuse to refer the cause to an auditor before the trial by a jury of that issue, as the reference of an equity cause is discretionary with the court, under Code Georgia, sections 3097, 4202. Martin v. Foley, 82 Ga. 552.

Reference—When Ordered.—See Emery v. Mason, 75 Cal. 222; Moore v. Bruce (Va.), 7 S. E. Rep. 195.

As a general rule, the party obtaining a reference is entitled to the prosecution thereof in the first instance; and where a reference is directed at a hearing in which both parties have an interest, it is to be prosecuted by the solicitor of the plaintiff; and in either case, the adverse party has no right to carry the decree to the master's office until the prosecution of the reference has been committed to him, either upon default of the party originally entitled to the prosecution or by a provision in the decree directing the reference. Quackenbush v. Leonard, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 131.

Where a cause is referred to a commissioner, the court ought to settle the principles on which he is to make up his account. Kay v. Fowler, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 593.

Orders of reference to a master should specify the principles on which the accounts are to be taken, or the enquiry proceeds, so far as the court shall have decided thereon; and the examinations before the master should be limited to such matters within the order as the principles of the decree or order may render necessary. Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 495.

In What Cases a Reference Should be Ordered.—Where enquiries as to compensation or damages do not involve much complexity of facts or amounts, an issue of quantum damnificatus is not necessary, but the usual course is to refer the matter to the register and master. Springle v. Shields, 17 Ala. 295.

A reference to a master may be ordered to ascertain what are "usual covenants" according to local usages.

The "usual covenants" of a deed, held to be covenants of seizin; of right to convey, against encumbrances; of quiet enjoyment, and of warranty. Wilson v. Wood, 17 N. J. Eq. 216.

Where the plaintiff, in a bill for specific performance, shows his right to a conveyance, but the defendant has, by sale or otherwise, put it out of his power to convey, it may be referred to a master, to ascertain the damages. Woodcock v. Bennet, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 711.

In a suit in chancery to restrain further detention of land, damages for injury already received may be determined by reference to the master. Busby v. Mitchell, 29 S. Car. 447.

Under Acts Virginia, 1883, p. 150, as amended by Acts 1884, p. 57, authorizing a judge in vacation to order an account by a commissioner, where the judge has the bill and exhibits before him, which make out a prima facie case, it is not error to order an account. Moore v. Bruce (Va.), 7 S. E. Rep. 195.

An action of contract, praying for relief in equity, under the Acts of 1853, ch. 371, and 1855, ch. 194, is to be treated as a suit in equity, and as such may be referred to a master in chancery to state an account between the parties.

A remark by a master in chancery in his report on a suit in equity between partners, that "no sane man, with a knowledge of the true state of the firm's affairs, could intelligently have assumed the obligations which the defendant claims to have been fixed on the plaintiff," is no ground of exception. Topliff v. Jackson, 12 Gray (Mass.) 565.

It is a matter of discretion with the chancellor whether he will order a reference to the clerk and master with regard to matter of title; and it is highly expedient in most cases that he should investigate the matters for himself. Buchanan v. Alwell, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 516.

It is not error for a court of equity to direct a commissioner, instead of a jury, to state and report the profits of land. Roberts v. Stanton, 2 Munf. (Va.) 129.

A court of chancery may direct the reference of a case to a master, with authority to examine the defendants on oath; and such examination will have culty a reference is unnecessary.¹ But the court will generally refer such matters as complicated accounts, infringement of copy-the effect of an answer. Templeman v. Fauntleroy, 3 Rand. (Va.) 434.

Where the defendant in a bill to foreclose fails to answer, after service of a subpoena on him for several terms, the matter may be referred to a master, his report taken, and a final decree rendered at the same time. Mussina v. Bartlett, 8 Port. (Ala.) 277.

Where a bill by a creditor, for the benefit of an assignment by his debtor, set forth a schedule of his claims entitled to preference, a claim not included in the schedule was refused a preference in payment, but the creditor was allowed to go before the master for a further investigation of the claim of preference. Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 615.

Where there are infant defendants to a bill to foreclose a mortgage, it should be referred to a master to report whether it will be for their interest to sell the whole mortgaged premises, together or in parcels; and if in parcels, what parcels, and which it will be for their interest to sell first. And, in such case, he should report the evidence so far as to enable the court to judge of the correctness of the master's conclusions. Walker v. Bank of Mobile, 6 Ala. 452; Fry v. Merchants Ins. Co., 15 Ala. 810.

The usual and best method of proceeding, in cases of foreclosure, is to appoint a master to find and report the amount due, and then exceptions may be filed to the report, upon which the judgment of the chancellor is given; and this may afterwards be assigned as error. Guy v. Franklin, 5 Cal. 416.

A final decree cannot be passed on a bill to foreclose a mortgage, without a reference to the clerk or master to compute and report the amount due. Beville v. McIntosh, 41 Miss. 516.

In an action to recover money on a bond in which the genuineness of an alleged receipt is in issue, such issue may be referred to a master commissioner for his decision. Hansberger v. Cochran, 82 Va. 727.

Where the pleadings show that an accounting of partnership affairs extending over a series of years will be required, and there is nothing to indicate that difficult questions of law will be involved, it is discretionary with the court, under Code South Carolina, section 293, to direct a reference. Bouland v. Carpin, 27 S. Car. 235.

In a suit in chancery to restrain further detention of land, damages for injury already received may be determined by reference to the master. Busby v. Mitchell, 29 S. Car. 447.

Truth of Pleas.—Where judgments are pleaded in bar, the court on motion may refer the plea to a master to ascertain its truth. Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Emma Silver Min. Co., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 389.

1. Lever v. Redwood, 9 Port. (Ala.) 79.

When Reference Should Not be Ordered.

—Where a master is not considered necessary by the court to settle a long account between parties to a bill, the court having facts enough before it to strike the true balance, the matter will not be referred to a master, unless both parties agree to or ask for the reference. Jewett v. Cunard, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 277.

A reference will not be ordered to enquire relative to a fact, constituting the gist of the controversy, and put in issue by the pleadings. Lunsford v. Boston, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) Eq. 487.

A reference to a master is not necessary to ascertain the amount due on a promissory note. Savage v. Berry, 3 Ill. 545.

Under Minnesota statute the chancellor may hear and disallow exceptions to a bill without a reference. Goodrich v. Parker, 1 Minn. 195.

A reference will not be made upon the mere speculation of the parties that evidence may be produced before the master: the testimony in chief must be taken before the reference. Planters' Bank v. Stockman, 1 Freem. (Miss.) Ch. 502.

Where a question has been distinctly put forth in the pleadings, an issue raised and testimony taken, the parties must abide by the case made out, and the court will not direct a further enquiry before a master unless upon the ground of newly discovered evidence. Morton v. Hudson, 1 Hoffm. (N. Y.) 312.

A reference to ascertain damages after default, under the New York practice, will not be made on the affidavit of the plaintiff that the enquiry involves the examination of a long account; but a copy of the account itself must be shown. Brown v. Miller, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 24.

In a proceeding in chancery, to charge the heirs with a debt of their father, the complainant, after submitting the cause for final hearing and decree, moved the court to refer the matter to the master. The court held that it was their business to decide whether the heirs had received assets, etc., and rejected the motion. Byrd v. Belding, 18 Ark. 118.

Where an accounting is prayed, the court may itself take or state the account; and after ascertaining and declaring on the evidence that there is no profit, return money or property acquired by the party whose estate was sought to be charged, under a contract set forth in the complaint, it is not error to refuse to refer the cause for the taking of an account. Emery v. Mason, 75 Cal. 222.

On a bill which asks only for the construction of a will, it is error to order a reference to state an account of advancements chargeable to one of the beneficiaries. Marquise de Portes v. Hurlbut, 44 N. J. Eq. 517.

Where on a bill to foreclose a mortgage the debt has been paid into court, and the counsel for the mortgagee claims a lien thereon for a general balance due from his client, the court has no power to order the reference of such claim to a master or the payment of any balance found due; neither client nor counsel are for this purpose before the court or amenable to its jurisdiction. Wolfe v. Lewis, 19 How. (U. S.) 280.

Where, in a foreclosure suit, a junior encumbrancer has filed an answer, neither denying the amount claimed nor the order of priority, except by consent, an order of reference cannot be made, without setting the cause down for hearing. Wright v. McKean, 13 N. J. Eq. 259.

On a bill for foreclosure against infants and others, where any of the defendants have answered, the complainant cannot enter a rule of course to refer the cause to a master, except by consent of such defendants as have answered, or their solicitor. Faitoute v. Haycock, 2 N. J. Eq. 105.

A reference to a master need not be ordered as to a nonresident defendant brought in by publication, where the proofs upon the only question involved in the case are taken in open court. Bussey v. Bussey, 71 Mich. 504.

The court in an equity suit has no power under the practice act, without the consent of parties, to order a reference for the trial of any issue of fact except one which requires the examination of an account. Williams v. Benton, 24 Cal. 424. See also McLin v. McNamara, 1 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 407.

Upon a motion in a cause before the circuit court for reference to a master, with directions to look into the cause and also into a case then pending in a State court, and to see whether or not the two cases were upon the same matter and between the same parties, it was held that inasmuch as upon an examination of the pleadings the court could see that different questions arose in the two causes, the motion must be denied. Loring v. Marsh, 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 311.

In a suit in chancery by a receiver to enforce the lien of a judgment against the lands of the debtor, where it does not appear from the record in any way that there are others who have liens on the land, the court may properly ascertain the amounts of the liens of plaintiff without referring the cause to a commissioner. Howard v. Stevenson, 33 W. Va. 116. See also Emery v. Mason, 75 Cal. 222; Busby v. Mitchell, 29 S. Car. 447.

Scope of Reference.—See Perrin v. Lepper, 72 Mich. 454; McCormack v. James, 36 Fed. Rep. 14.

Master May Refuse to Pass Upon Matters Not Included in the Reference.—The supreme court ordered a reference to a master and remanded the cause to the district court, which confirmed his report. On appeal, held that, though there were matters which should have been included in the reference, yet it was right for the master to refuse to pass upon them, as they were not included therein, and therefore that the decree of the district court should be affirmed. Pim v. Nicholson, 10 Ohio St. 623.

Jurisdictional Questions.—Jurisdictional questions are not, or the master. Smith v. Rock, 59 Vt. 232.

Insufficiency of Answer.—Under the 63rd equity rule of the Supreme Court of the United States, exceptions to an answer for insufficiency must be set down on a rule day for hearing before a judge of the court. A reference of such exceptions on a day not a rule day, and to a master and not a judge, is, unless cured by some subsequent action of the court, a nullity, and an abandonment of the exceptions. LaVega v. Lapsley, 1 Woods (U. S.) 428.

Special Master.—The court may ap-right,¹ title,² divorce and any other matter in which a master can assist the court in arriving directly at the points of contest in the cause.

1. Accounts.—By comparison with a prior title the nature of equitable proceedings in matters of account, and the duty and authority of masters in equity to whom accounts are referred will more clearly appear.³ In certain States the common law action of account has been abolished.⁴ And in most of the States, legislation has made alterations in common law methods of procedure or has substituted a new practice.⁵ With what is here said in reference to the duties and responsibilities of masters in equity in matters of account should be compared, principles classified under other titles showing the analogy which exists between them and arbitrators, auditors, referees and similar officials commonly appointed for the same purpose in proceedings at law.⁶ point a special master in chancery to take testimony in a case. Davis v. Davis, 30 Ill. 180.

Where the mortgage and certified copies of the notes were, without objection, referred to a special master to state an account in a suit for foreclosure, the court refused to set aside a decree based upon the master's report. Pogue v. Clark, 25 Ill. 351.

1. Infringement of Copyright.—Before granting an injunction on a charge of infringement of copyright, the court will generally refer the matter to a master, with instructions to report the extent of the infringement, if any, that the court may act in the case. Story v. Derby, 4 McLean (U. S.) 160.

The costs of a reference to a master, to ascertain the damages resulting from an infringement of a patent, will be put upon complainant when damages are refused, if complainant knew, or could have known, all that was brought out by the reference, and respondent has done nothing that would deceive complainant, nor concealed facts. Hill v. Smith, 32 Fed. Rep. 753.

2. Title.—Where a purchaser at a partition sale shows that the title is defective as cause for not complying with the terms of sale, and when the title depends upon questions of fact, the title should be referred to the master for testimony and report. Rehkapf v. Kuhland, 30 S. Car. 234.

Where, upon a bill to compel the specific performance of a contract for the purchase of land, the court is satisfied, at the hearing, that there can be no fuller investigation of the title, and all the facts are before the court, and the court is satisfied that the principal objections to the title still exist, and from their nature cannot be removed, it will not direct a reference to a master to enquire if a good title can then be made. Dominick v. Michael, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 374.

Where a bill for a specific performance of a contract for the sale of land is set for hearing by consent, the question being one of law as to whether the vendor's title was defective or not, and neither party asking a reference to a commissioner, the court ought not to refer the title to a commissioner; nor, if the title is found defective, to give time to the vendor to perfect it, but to decree at once. Jackson v. Ligon, 3 Leigh (Va.) 161.

In a suit for a specific performance of a contract for the sale of land, where the only question is whether the vendor can make title, the court will direct a reference to a master, to ascertain the title, without the consent of the other party. Gentry v. Hamilton, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 376; Beverley v. Lawson, 3 Munf. (Va.) 317.

3. See ACCOUNT RENDER, vol. 1, p. 128.

4. See ACCOUNT RENDER, vol. 1, p. 128.

5. See ACCOUNT RENDER, vol. 1, p. 128.

6. See ARBITRATION AND AWARD, vol. 1, p. 646; AUDITORS, vol. 1, p. 1009; REFEREES.

Accounts.—In cases of complicated accounts the orders of reference to a master should specify the principles on which the accounts are to be taken, so far as the court shall have decided thereon, and the examination before the master should be limited to such matters within the order as the principles of the decree or order may render necessary. Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 495; Kay v. Fowler, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 593; Stonington Savings Bank v. Davis, 15 N. J. Eq. 30; Gordon v. Hobart, 2 Story (U. S.) 243, 260; Harris v. Fly, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 421; Torrey v. Shaw, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 356; Simmons v. Jacobs, 52 Me. 147; Updike v. Doyle, 7 R. I. 446; Duborg v. U. S., 7 Pet. (U. S.) 625; Hudson v. Trenton Locomotive & M. Mfg. Co., 16 N. J. Eq. 475; Izard v. Bodine, 9 N. J. Eq. 309, 311; Moss v. McCall, 75 Ill. 190; Patten v. Patten, 75 Ill. 446.

Consent of counsel cannot impose on court the burden of making up complicated accounts. It is bad practice for the chancellor to take an account himself, except in simple and obvious cases. A reference should be made in complicated cases. Bryan v. Morgan, 35 Ark. 113.

It is not the province of a court of equity to investigate the items of an account. They will be referred to a master. Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 103; Jewett v. Cunara, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 277; St. Colombe v. U. S., 7 Pet. (U. S.) 625; Tiel v. Roberts, 4 Hayw. (Tenn.) 86; Peyton v. Smith, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) Eq. 325; Bland v. Wyatt, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 543.

To the master's report and account the parties may take exceptions, and thus bring the matter before the court. St. Colombe v. U. S., 7 Pet. (U. S.) 625.

As to the mode of taking exception, and the method of presenting evidence on such an exception in matters of account, see Prince v. Cutler, 69 Ill. 267.

The court will not lay down in advance the principles on which an account is to be stated by a commissioner or auditor. Vanderwick v. Summerl, 2 Wash. 41.

On a bill for discovery, relief and account, the right of the plaintiff must be first established and decided, after which an account may be taken. Neale v. Hagthorp, 3 Bland (Md.) 551. See also Franklin v. Meyer, 36 Ark. 96; Dunlap v. O'Dena, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 272.

A decree to account calls on both parties to be active in the cause. And especially after a decree, the defendant being in court and called upon to account with all the material in his possession, by which an account could be taken, can take no advantage of the apparent laches of the complainant. The question of laches is to be decided upon the special circumstances of each case. Glenn v. Hebb, 17 Md. 260.

Account Should be Ordered for Both Parties.—In general, where a bill renders an account necessary, the account should be ordered for both parties, and both become actors; and if a balance be found due to the defendant, it ought to be decreed to him. Payne v. Graves, 5 Leigh (Va.) 561.

Cannot Exceed Allegations and Proofs.—An order of reference for an account before a master, cannot be more extensive than the allegations and proofs; and where the charges are specific, setting forth the items, an account will not be decreed beyond the matters charged. Consequa v. Fanning, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 587. Compare Calvert v. Carter, 18 Md. 73.

Notice to Account.—No precise form of words is necessary in a notice to account, etc., in a suit in equity. It is enough if it be such that it cannot mislead the party, or leave him in any doubt of the object of it. Whittier v. Vaughan, 27 Me. 301.

Question of Fact.—When the question whether a charge in an account referred to a master should be allowed or not, is one of fact, depending upon the evidence, the conclusion of the master as to the fact is to be deemed prima facie correct. Stimpson v. Green, 13 Allen (Mass.) 326.

Full Statement of Facts Required.—In a reference in matters of account the master should set forth in his report a plain and full statement of the figures and facts found by him, and it is not sufficient to make a general reference to the depositions. Hurdle v. Leath, 63 N. Car. 366.

Account of Rents and Profits.—An account of rents and profits of land may be taken by a commissioner, as well as be ascertained by a jury; and the former is the more usual course. Newman v. Chapman, 2 Rand. (Va.) 93.

Imperfect Account.—In any proceeding where it becomes necessary to take an account, and that account has been reported by the commissioner to whom it was referred, the presiding judge, if in his opinion such account is imperfect, may recommit it to the same commissioner, in order that it be reformed or perfected. 1874, Turner v. Houghton, 71 N. Car. 370.

Answer of One Defendant as Evidence Against Codefendants.—The answer of one defendant cannot be used as evidence against his codefendants in stating an account before the master; but if the other answers and proof in the cause show a greater balance against them than the account, as stated on the basis furnished by the answer, it is error without injury. Halstead v. Shepard, 23 Ala. 558.

Master Should State Account in Detail.—The master should state the account in detail, not in the aggregate. Gage v. Arndt, 121 Ill. 491.

A court of equity may refer an account generally, and on the return of the report, determine such questions as may be contested by the parties. Field v. Holland, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 8.

Where a case for accounting is brought up on appeal without any accounting having taken place below, the court will refuse to hear it, and will remand it. Barnebee v. Beckley, 43 Mich. 613.

Where Testimony is Conflicting.—Accounts involving large sums, where the testimony is conflicting, will be referred to the master to state. Beale v. Beale, 116 Ill. 202. See also St. Colombe v. U. S., 7 Pet. (U. S.) 625.

Court Should Lay Down Principles.—In referring partnership accounts to a commissioner, the court should settle the construction of the articles of partnership, and decide what kind of accounts come within the partnership, and lay down the principles by which the commissioner should be governed. Sharp v. Morrow, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 300.

Where Correct Will Not be Retaken.—Where the result of taking an account is correct, it will not be directed to be retaken, though there may be some errors in the mode of stating it. McAlister v. Olmstead, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 210.

When New Account Should be Taken.—On a bill of injunction to stay proceedings on a judgment at law, if it appears from a commissioner's report, not excepted to by the defendant, that the complainant is entitled to a credit which the defendant failed to give, the court ought not to set aside the order for account, and dismiss the bill, on the ground that the complainant had neglected to carry into effect a previous order, referring, by consent of parties, the accounts between them to a different commissioner; but the last order having been made on the defendant's motion, the report being excepted to for want of notice to the complainant of the time and place of taking the account, and such exception appearing well founded, a new account ought to be directed to be taken. Roberts v. Jordans, 3 Munf. (Va.) 488.

Collateral Matters.—By reference of a case to a master, to state an account and report the evidence, he is not required to report his conclusions or determine the liability of parties on collateral matters. Fordyce v. Shriver, 115 Ill. 530.

Where a case is sent to a master in chancery to take an account, it may be done either by requiring the parties to bring in debtor and creditor accounts under oath, or by examining them on interrogatories; both modes are sometimes combined. Hollister v. Barkley, 11 N. H. 501.

Form of the Account.—Where a chancery suit involves matters of account, the action of the master should be had in the inferior court, and the items admitted or rejected should be stated, so that exceptions may be taken to the particular items or class of items; and such a case should be brought before the supreme court on the rulings on the exceptions by the circuit court. Ransom v. Winn, 18 How. (U. S.) 295.

Failure of Proof.—Where the proof fails to furnish a proper basis for an accounting, the court may either dismiss the bill or refer the case to a master to take further testimony. Ridenbaugh v. Barnes, 14 Fed. Rep. 93.

To Expedite Proceedings.—An account may be ordered to be taken for the purpose of expediting proceedings, without first decreeing that the party is liable to account. Carter v. Alston, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 237.

Proper Equity Must be Shown.—Before an interlocutory decree to account is passed, the facts in relation to the account should be put in issue, but there must also be evidence which shows them to be probable, and the equity proper. McLoskey v. Gordon, 26 Miss. 260. See also Planters' Bank v. Stockman, 1 Freem. (Miss.) Ch. 502.

Examination of a Long Account Under New York Statutes.—The term "examination of a long account," as used in the provisions of the New York Revised Statutes and Code of Procedure authorizing the reference of causes, does not mean the examination of it to ascertain the result or effect of it; but the proof by testimony of the correctness of the items composing it. Magoun v. Sinclair, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 63.

Under the New York Code of Procedure, the court cannot refer the trial of an action, where any issue raised upon the complaint is such that the objecting party has the right to its trial by jury. All the causes of action stated in the complaint must be referable. And the power to refer even actions arising on contract is restricted to cases where the court can see, from the proofs before it, that the examination of a long account will be required. 1873, Evans v. Kalbfleisch, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 13.

Where Referred to Accountants Instead of Master.—Where accounts between parties were referred to accountants, in the place of a master, and two of them having thoroughly examined a certain branch of the accounts, the other concurred without examination; held, that the proceeding was regular. Gibson v. Broadfoot, 3 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 584.

In California.—When an account between parties must be taken, the court may take it, or may refer it to a commissioner. Field v. Holland, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 8; Hidden v. Jordan, 28 Cal. 301.

In Delaware.—In Delaware, the chancellor has not power to appoint a person as master in chancery, to state an account. Reybold v. Dodd, 1 Harr. (Del.) 401.

In Kentucky.—In Kentucky, the chancellor may adjust complex accounts without the intervention of an auditor. Shipp v. Jameson, 6 Litt. (Ky.) 190.

If the state of the accounts is such that the courts cannot safely render a decree, the cause should be sent to an auditor with authority to examine the parties on oath as to the doubtful items of their accounts. Power v. Reeder, 9 Dana (Ky.) 6.

In Maryland.—In Maryland, where there are no masters attached to the court of chancery, it is competent for an auditor to take testimony, state an account, or frame any statement which may be necessary or proper to enable the court correctly to dispose of any case in which it has the power to grant relief. Townshend v. Duncan, 2 Bland (Md.) 45.

In Virginia.—In Virginia, when the court of chancery orders an account to be made up without appointing a person before whom it is to be done, the order must be executed before one of the masters of the court. Anderson v. Gest, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 26.

An order for an account must be executed within twelve months, in Virginia. Anon., 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 410.

A motion for an account is irregular; the complainant should move for a decree; on that hearing, if an account appears necessary, it will be ordered. Hampton v. Pollard, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 451.

Power of Master Under Rule of Court.—

On a reference to a master to state an account, he may, under rule 102 of court, require the parties to exhibit in writing, before him, the items of their claims, within such time as he may think reasonable, or be precluded from afterwards making such claim, unless there is some reasonable excuse for the delay. Story v. Brown, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 112.

And the master should regulate the manner of taking the reference, at the return of the first summons, so far as it can conveniently be done. Story v. Brown, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 112.

Time Given to Masters.—The time which should be given to commissioners to ascertain the amount of rents, waste, etc., is discretionary with the court. Bullock v. Beemis, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 285.

Cases Depending Upon Local Rules of Law.—Proper manner of taking an account, determined, in cases depending upon peculiar facts; or upon local rule of law. Sibert v. Kelly, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 669; Coit v. Tracy, 9 Conn. 15; Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 495; Peck v. Hamlin, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 247; McConnico v. Curzen, 2 Call (Va.) 358.

Miscellaneous.—Where the defendants, in their answer, pray an account from the plaintiff, they are bound to render an account of any moneys due to the plaintiff, though the bill does not pray an account. Terry v. Hopkins, 1 Hill (S. Car.) Ch. 1, 9.

The defendants in a suit will not be ordered to account among themselves, unless such account is necessary to a final settlement, and at least one of the parties interested requires it. Craig v. Craig, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) Ch. 102.

On a bill impeaching a settled account, the title of the complainant to relief depends on his success in showing errors against him in the settlement; and when the court directs an account to be taken, the commissioner, in executing the order of account,

2. Testimony.—Where matters of fact are referred, the masters take testimony and report facts to the court.¹

3. Time of Reference.—A case should not be referred to a master until the issues made by the pleadings have been settled by a decree. It is not proper to try those issues upon exceptions to the master's report.²

should confine himself to a statement of these errors, the sum of which is the proper measure of relief. Shugart v. Thompson, 10 Leigh (Va.) 434.

Where, on a bill filed for foreclosure, it is referred to the master to take and state an account, it is error in the chancellor to make a final order for the sale of the property before the report of the master comes in and is confirmed. Graham v. King, 15 Ala. 563.

A reference to a master for an account does not preclude the parties from denying their liability to account. Smith v. Estes, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 156.

When a bill sets up matters of account as a foundation for a trust, an account must be taken before a decree can be made. St. Clair v. Smith, 3 Ohio 355.

The report of a master on the accounts of a receiver appointed under the New Jersey act of 1829, to prevent frauds by corporations, requires confirmation, and may be excepted to; and on the exceptions the particular items of the account may be examined. Richards v. Morris Canal etc. Co., 4 N. J. Eq. 428.

Where an injunction is granted to a judgment, and an account between the parties directed, the commissioner ought not to give the plaintiff at law credit for claims not exhibited to the jury, nor mentioned in the answer, and which are prior in date to the commencement of the suit. Lipscomb v. Littlepage, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 454.

An account not mentioned in the bill, but brought forward in the answer, increasing the demand of the plaintiff at law, may be allowed under the general demand for a just account. An account exhibited, and sworn to be just, in response to a bill to settle accounts, ought to be allowed as correct as to all the articles therein contained; but interest cannot be annexed thereto, without proof of an agreement or understanding that interest was to be paid. Dozier v. Edwards, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 71.

A party in account before a master, will not be allowed for anything under the head of general expenses, but must specify the items. Methodist Church v. Jaques, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 77.

Where a master was directed to "take an account of all the personal property which came to the hands of A and B, by virtue" of a certain contract, and a draft for money had come into their hands at the same time, and for the same purpose as other property, and they had obtained the money on it; held, that it was no objection to his proceedings that he charged A and B with the sum so received. Morse v. Slason, 16 Vt. 319.

If the decree directs the account to be stated on proper principles, errors in allowing items alleged not to be within the rules of the decree, can only be brought up by exceptions to the account. Williamson v. Downs, 34 Miss. 402.

After a final decree, an order for the defendant to account before the master, changing the nature of the relief, will not be granted on motion; the reference, if granted at all, must be after a rehearing. Hendricks v. Robinson, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 283.

1. Knapp v. White, 23 Conn. 529; Sparhawk v. Wills, 5 Gray (Mass.) 423; Izard v. Bodine, 9 N. J. Eq. 309; Pilkinton v. Cotten, 2 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 238.

Under Vermont R. L., 730, the supreme court will not revise error in admission of testimony by master, unless exception is taken and filed. Bruce v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 58 Vt. 253.

2. Ward v. Paducah etc. R. Co., 4 Fed. Rep. 862.

Time of Ordering Reference.—An order of reference to a master to take the testimony, and report it, with his conclusions of law and fact, should not be made before the time for answering, allowed upon overruling a demurrer to the complaint, has expired. Holliday v. Holliday, 27 S. Car. 622.

Authority Conferred by Order.—An order of reference to a master to ascertain the sum due, made after a hearing, in a suit for foreclosure of a mortgage, with directions to the master to examine the complainant as to pay-

V. REPORT.—The document exhibiting the master's findings and conclusions is called his "report," the object of which is to present the case to the court in such a manner that intelligent action may be had; and it is this action that finally determines the rights of the parties.¹ A general report embraces the whole matter referred to the master by a given decree or order; while a separate report embraces only one distinct object of the reference, and these may be made by the master from time to time as may be convenient. They are open to exception in the same manner as general reports.²

1. Form of Report.—A master's report should recite the issue, determine the facts to be found, and the law arising from the findings, and the form of the decree.³

2. Masters Must Follow Decretal Order.—Masters have no right to review, reject or disregard the decision, order or directions of the court as contained in the decretal order under which they are appointed. They are bound to follow all such orders and directions,⁴ and if the report does not furnish the facts necessary to enable the court to make a final decree on the merits, it should be set aside notwithstanding no exceptions are taken to it.⁵

ments received, gives him no authority to examine the complainant or defendant, as to the validity of the mortgage, upon an issue of fraud raised by the pleadings. McCrackan v. Valentine, 9 N. Y. 42.

Evidence of Negligence.—A party applying to the master, under the rule of court, to have the prosecution of a reference committed to him, for neglect of the plaintiff's solicitor, must give notice to such solicitor of the application, papers, etc., on which the application is founded; and he must produce evidence of the negligence, though the master's certificate of the facts is sufficient, where the evidence of negligence exists in his office. Holley v. Glover, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 9.

Question of Priority.—Where a defendant, in a suit to foreclose, sets up a claim of priority adverse to the claim of the plaintiff, the master, on a reference to compute the amount due to the mortgagee and to prior encumbrancers, is not authorized to settle the question of priority. Harris v. Fly, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 421.

Counsel Fee.—On a reference to a master to compute the amount due on a bill taken pro confesso, the complainant's solicitor's fee was included in his assessment. Held, that as the fee was not claimed in the bill the decree should be reversed, even though the defendant had bound himself by an agreement filed in the cause, to pay the fee if the complainant had to foreclose the mortgage. Adams v. Payson, 11 Ill. 26.

1. North Carolina R. Co. v. Swasey, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 405, 410.

2. 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1294; Kennedy v. Kennedy, 3 Ala. 434.

Oath to Master.—A report of a master in an equity cause in a United States circuit court will not be set aside because the master was not sworn, unless the order of reference expressly ordered that he should be sworn, which is not usually necessary. Thompson v. Smith, 2 Bond (U. S.) 320.

Failure to Report.—If a commissioner fails entirely to make any report on a matter referred to him, the court should refer this matter to him again to be reported upon, and this should be done though no one except to such report. No one's right can be regarded as abandoned or prejudiced by his failure to except to such report because of such failure. Childs v. Hurd (W. Va.), 9 S. E. 362.

3. Agnew v. Whitney, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 298.

4. Felch v. Hooper, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 489.

5. Lang v. Brown, 21 Ala. 179. In re Hemiup, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 305; Mott v. Harrington, 15 Vt. 185.

Where the master to whom a cause was referred to compute damages reported that the complainants were en-

3. The General Report.—The general report should embrace all the matters referred to the master by the decree, and should refer to any separate reports that have been made, specifying the particulars of them, so that the court may see that all the matters referred have been disposed of. But the master should be careful not to go beyond the limits of the reference.¹ If he does, the proper course is not to except to the report, but, before it is confirmed, to apply to the court to have the report referred back for review.²

The report should meet every point raised by the order or decree of reference, and should state, not the evidence but the master's conclusions from the evidence.³ Even when the evidence titled to no damages, it was held that the report was inconsistent with the decree, which implied that the complainants were at least entitled to nominal damages, and the cause was referred back. Lonsdale Co. v. Moies, 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 538.

Where the master to whom a reference for an account is made, reports generally adverse to the complainant, recommending that the bill be dismissed for want of equity, such order will not be made, but the cause will be referred anew. 1869, Blauvelt v. Ackerman, 20 N. J. Eq. 141; Hays v. Hays, 64 N. Car. 59.

Must Not Report Matters Not Referred.—If a master reports as to matter which is not referred to him, his report, so far as relates to that matter, is a nullity. White v. Walker, 5 Fla. 478.

Master's Findings Like a Special Verdict.—The master's finding of facts is somewhat like a special verdict and must not be omitted. Their soundness is tested on exceptions in the court below, and the decision on them comes before the supreme court. Clark's Appeal, 62 P. St. 447.

Where a bill in equity was brought, no waste being charged therein, and the subject matter was referred to a master for report thereon, he, with the consent of the parties, reported upon the question of waste; held, that all of the report relating to waste should be stricken out, and that the master, not being directly authorized thereto, could not acquire any authority to make the enquiry from the consent of the parties. Gordon v. Hobart, 2 Story (U. S.) 243.

As a general rule, a master should not hear further testimony after the parties have seen the draft of his report. Tyler v. Simmons, 6 Paige (N. Y.) Ch. 127; Burgess v. Wilkinson, 7 R. I. 31.

A master may grant a rehearing upon the discovery of proof subsequently to the previous hearing, at any time before the final settlement of his report. Pattison v. Hull, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 747.

1. White v. Walker, 5 Fla. 478; Gordon v. Hobart, 2 Story (U. S.) 243; Lever v. Redwood, 9 Port. (Ala.) 79; Harris v. Fly, 7 Paige (N. Y.) Ch. 421.

In stating an account, a master must conform to the directions of the decree. Uddike v. Doyle, 7 R. I. 446, 458; Lonsdale v. Moies, 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 538; Blauvelt v. Ackerman, 20 N. J. Eq. 141; Hays v. Hays, 64 N. Car. 59.

He cannot hear evidence, which if it had been before the court, would probably have changed the complexion of the decree; nor can such evidence be noticed on appeal. Maury v. Lewis, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 115; Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 495; Kay v. Fowler, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 593; Simmons v. Jacobs, 52 Me. 147.

Where accounts are involved in an equity suit, it should be referred to a master to state the accounts, and his report should so present the items that exceptions may be taken to it, and an appeal bring up the rulings of the inferior court on these exceptions. Ransom v. Winn, 18 How. (U. S.) 295.

A master is not authorized to make a report more extensive than the allegations and proofs warrant. Lever v. Redwood, 9 Port. (Ala.) 79.

2. Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1296; Jenkins v. Briant, 6 Sim. 605; Lever v. Redwood, 9 Port. (Ala.) 79, 80; Gordon v. Hobart, 2 Story (U. S.) 243.

3. Parker v. Nickerson, 137 Mass.

does not admit of arriving at certainty, the master is bound to find in favor of any presumption reasonably arising. He should not state inference of law arising from the facts before him.¹

The master does not usually state the special circumstances of the case in his report, but this is sometimes required by the decree, where it is apprehended that particular circumstances may come out which will influence the mind of the court.²

487; Nims v. Nims, 20 Fla. 204; Herrick v. Belknap, 27 Vt. 673, 694; Pilkinton v. Cotten, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 238.

Report of Particulars.—A master ordered to report as to particular facts should report his conclusions from the evidence only, and it is improper and irregular to set forth the evidence in his report unless specially directed to do so by the court. Mott v. Harrington, 15 Vt. 18; 5 In re Hemiup, 3 Paige (N. Y.) Ch. 305; Goodman v. Jones, 26 Conn. 264; Malone v. Williams, 39 Ala. 202. But see note 6, below.

May Submit a Question of Law to the Court.—But if the conclusion which he is to draw is a question of law, and not a mere legal presumption of a fact, he is permitted, in the exercise of a sound discretion, and without an order for that purpose, to make a special report submitting the legal question to the decision of the court.

A master should report his conclusions of fact and so much of the evidence as is necessary to an understanding thereof. Parker v. Nickerson, 137 Mass. 487.

A master's statement of an account is not sufficient in stating the balance merely. The statement should be so made that the court may understand on what the master's conclusions were based. Nims v. Nims, 20 Fla. 204.

His report should show how his conclusions were reached. Frazier v. Swain, 36 N. J. Eq. 156.

It has been held in two cases that arguments and processes of reasoning are out of place in a master's report. He should give only results, stated clearly, sufficiently and intelligibly, with the proofs on which they rest. All else is superfluous. Evans v. Evans, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 143; Herrick v. Belknap, 27 Vt. 673.

Conflicting Testimony.—Where the testimony before a master, who is also examiner, is conflicting, although the merits may appear contrary to his findings, if it has been confirmed by the court below, the supreme court will not reverse. The report of a master approved by the court below, as a general rule, will not be set aside by the supreme court. Sproull's Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 137; Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 149.

Where a matter of fact, depending upon conflicting evidence and the credibility of witnesses has been referred to a master, his decision will not be interfered with on his mere judgment of facts unless it is a very plain case of mistake or error. Izard v. Bodine, 9 N. J. Eq. 309. See also Sinnickson v. Bruere, 9 N. J. Eq. 659. 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1299, citing Merriam v. Barton, 14 Vt. 501, 514; Adams v. Brown, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 220, 222; Reed v. Reed, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 398; Sparhawk v. Wills, 5 Gray (Mass.) 423; Howe v. Russell, 36 Me. 115; McKinney v. Pierce, 5 Ind. 422; State v. McIntyre, 53 Me. 214; Pierce v. Faunce, 53 Me. 351; Stimpson v. Green, 13 Allen (Mass.) 326; Mason v. York etc. R. Co., 52 Me. 82-115; Rowan v. State Bank, 45 Vt. 160, 162; White v. Hampton, 10 Iowa 238.

In determining the question whether, upon the sale of a "master's interest," or one-twelfth part, in a ship, the vendor agreed to pay the expenses of extensive repairs which were then making upon her, if the direct evidence is conflicting, it is important and material for a master, to whom the case has been referred, to decide as to the progress which has then been made in the repairs; and an exception lies to his report if it states that this point was not material. Rennell v. Kimball, 5 Allen (Mass.) 356.

1. Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1299; In re Hemiup, 3 Paige (N. Y.) Ch. 305.

2. Mott v. Harrington, 15 Vt. 185; Pingree v. Coffin, 12 Gray (Mass.) 288, 311; March v. Eastern R. Co., 43 N. H. 534.

In a master's report which read: "It would be for the interest of the defendants to sell the estate in separate lots, if the premises can be conveniently

4. Reporting Testimony.—Sometimes the master must report the testimony by order of the court or when either party requires him to do so. In such an instance the testimony should be certified by him, and annexed to, but not embodied in, the report.¹

5. Weight Given to the Report by the Court.—The weight given by the court to the findings of a master is regulated, in many of the States, by statute or by rules of court. In some States the findings of a master are prima facie correct,² and the court will consider only such matters of law and fact as are brought before it upon exceptions. As a rule, however, it may be stated that the findings of fact by a master are conclusive unless clear mistake or fraud are shown.³

divided," held not sufficiently definite to be the foundation of a decree for the sale of the property. Walker v. Hallett, 1 Ala. 379.

1. Clapp v. Sherman (R. I. 1888), 17 Atl. Rep. 130; In re Hemmip, 3 Paige N. Y. 305; Mott v. Harrington, 15 Vt. 185; Donnell v. Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 366; Sparhawk v. Wills, 5 Gray (Mass.) 423.

Reporting Evidence.—Unless ordered to do so by the court, the master is not bound to report the evidence upon which his report is founded. Howe v. Russell, 36 Me. 115; Herrick v. Belknap, 27 Vt. 693; Gilmore v. Gilmore, 40 Me. 50; McKinney v. Pierce, 5 Ind. 422; Bailey v. Myrick, 52 Me. 132; Simmons v. Jacobs, 52 Me. 147.

Reporting Evidence.—When the exceptions are filed, if either party desires the evidence to be reported, they request the master to report it in whole, or in part, as the case may be. It is usual for the master to comply with this request, but if it is made by neither party, it is not incumbent upon the master to report the evidence at all. He may or may not, in his discretion. Union Sugar Refinery v. Mathiesson, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 146, 149. See also Harper v. McVeigh, 82 Va. 751.

An auditor's report in accounting need not contain the evidence on which his conclusions are based, the foundations of items objected to being triable de novo by a jury. Ritchie v. Levy, 69 Tex. 132.

In Jackson v. Jackson, 3 N. J. Eq. 96, where the master reported the evidence without being ordered to do so by the court upon the argument of the exceptions to the report, the court examined the evidence reported and ordered the report to be corrected where it was found erroneous without sending it back to the master.

Where, by agreement of the parties, entered of record, a cause is referred to a master commissioner, under the Indiana act of March 2nd, 1853 (1 Gav. & H. 433), to report the evidence and his findings thereon at the next term of the court, if he fails to report the evidence, his report will, on motion, be set aside. McGillis v. Slattery, 52 Ind. 44.

Returning Testimony.—The master is not required to return the oral testimony with his report, unless directed to do so by the decree under which he acts, or requested to do so by some of the parties. Clapp v. Sherman (R. I. 1888), 17 Atl. Rep. 130.

Where a bill to foreclose a mortgage has been taken as confessed against absent defendants, the master, to whom a reference is ordered to take proofs of the facts stated in the bill, must report the testimony itself, and not his opinion deduced therefrom. Anonymous, 1 Clark (N. Y.) Ch. 423.

2. Medsker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 66; McGuire v. Wright, 18 W. Va. 507; Kutz's Appeal, 100 Pa. St. 75; Anderson v. Henderson, 124 Ill. 164.

When the parties consent to a reference to a master to hear and decide all issues and report his findings both of fact and of law, and such reference is entered as a rule of court, his findings are to be taken as presumptively correct, and are reviewable only under the reservation in the consent and order of the court, when there has been manifest error. Kimberly v. Arms, 129 U. S. 512; Anderson v. Henderson, 124 Ill. 164.

3. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Texas Pac. R., 33 Fed. Rep. 803; Welling v. La Bau, 34 Fed. Rep. 40; Bugbee's Appeal, 110 Pa. St. 331; Magarity v. Shipman, 82 Va. 784; Stuart v. Hendricks, 80 Va. 601.

6. Final Draft of Report.—When the report is prepared, an intimation to that effect is sent to the solicitors for the parties to the cause.¹ They submit such suggestions to the master as they think fit, and when the final draft is prepared, and no objections

The findings of a master will neither be reviewed nor revised, if there is evidence tending to sustain them, unless fraud or corruption is shown. Waterman v. Buck, 58 Vt. 519.

It is neither the policy nor the practice of the supreme court of Pennsylvania to revise the findings of a master on the facts, when approved by the court, except in cases where the error is flagrant. Appeal of Coxe, 120 Pa. St. 98. See also Borough of Sharpsburg's Appeal (Pa. 1887), 10 Atl. Rep. 39; Messinger's Appeal, 109 Pa. St. 285.

Conclusiveness of Report.—In Vermont, the findings of a master seems to be as conclusive as the verdict of a jury. Howard v. Scott, 50 Vt. 48.

Same in Tennessee. Brown v. Dailley, 85 Tenn. 218; Turley v. Turley, 85 Tenn. 251. See also McKinney v. Pierce, 5 Ind. 422.

The report of a master, like the verdict of a jury, will not be reconsidered as to facts, and set aside, unless some clear mistake or abuse of power is shown. Mason v. Crosby, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 258.

The report may, however, be re-examined. Webb v. Bowers, 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 497.

The fact that a master has erred in some respects affords no ground for setting aside his report or recommitting it, if such errors do not appear to have produced results materially different from what would otherwise have happened. Mason v. Crosby, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 258.

In Holmes v. Holmes, 3 C. E. Green (N. J.) 141, it was held that, upon exceptions to a master's report on a question of fact, the court will come to a conclusion upon the evidence, irrespective of the master's opinion. The report is not entitled to the same weight as the verdict of a jury upon a motion for a new trial in a court of law. See Stevens v. Miner, 110 Mass. 57; Cary v. Herrin, 62 Me. 16; Com. v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 192, 194; Hauser v. Roth, 37 Ind. 89.

The report of facts made by a special master is conclusive, when the reference is voluntary and no mistake or fraud is shown. Merrill v. Montpelier etc. R. Co., 54 Vt. 200.

Findings Not Conclusive.—Findings of fact by a master are not conclusive; but, on exceptions duly taken, the court will examine the evidence, and ascertain that it supports the master's conclusions. Worrall's Appeal, 110 Pa. St. 349.

Properly speaking, no report is conclusive. When a master reports facts directly proved by the witnesses, the court will give his report great weight, because of his superior opportunities for judging of the credibility of the witnesses and the effect of their testimony. But where the fact is a deduction merely from the facts reported by him, his conclusion is simply a result of reasoning, of which the court is as competent to judge as he. Hence, the report is neither a decision nor an infallible guide, but a serviceable instrumentality to aid the court in performing its own functions. Phillips' Appeal, 68 Pa. St. 130, 137; Clark's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 447, 451; Sproull's Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 137; Backus' Appeal, 58 Pa. St. 186, 192; Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 149.

Weight of Report in New Jersey.—To determine whether a master has arrived at a correct conclusion from the evidence, it is necessary to review and weigh the evidence. For this reason the master's report is entitled to no special consideration beyond the soundness of his reasoning and the advantage of seeing the demeanor of the witnesses while examined. Rule of Chancery, 44, New Jersey; Holmes v. Holmes, 18 N. J. E. 141.

Conflicting Testimony.—A master's findings of facts upon conflicting testimony are not to be set aside without clear proof of error or mistake. Whitney v. Leominster Savings Bank, 141 Mass. 85; Messinger's Appeal, 109 Pa. St. 285; Morgan's Appeal, 110 Pa. St. 271.

The findings of a fact by a master, on conflicting evidence, will not be set aside, although the court may differ with him as to the weight of the evidence. Bridges v. Sheldon, 18 Blatchf. (U. S.) 507.

1. Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1301.

are filed during the time allowed by the rules, the report is signed by the master.¹

VI. OBJECTIONS.—After the examination is concluded, in cases of reference to a master to take accounts, or make enquiries, a day should be assigned for the parties to attend before the master to the settling of his report, and to make their objections, if any, in writing; and when the report is finally settled and signed, the parties should be confined to their exceptions, to be taken in court, to such objections as were overruled or disallowed by the master.²

1. Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1303.

Time of Reporting.—The master may report back the cause to the court at any time when he has completed his investigations; and it is the duty of the clerk to allow him to file his report at any time. Union Sugar Refinery v. Mathiesson, 3 Chff. (U. S.) 146, 148.

Notice to Terminate.—Under Code Civil Procedure New York, section 1019, stating that a notice to end a reference, when a report is not filed or delivered within sixty days, may be served before the report is filed or delivered, a notice to terminate, served after the filing of the report, is nugatory. O'Neill v. Howe, 9 N. Y. S. 746.

Miscellaneous.—Where the report of a clerk and master, upon which a decree was made, did not identify the land sold, but referred to the mortgage deed, which was a part of the record as containing the description, held to be sufficiently certain. Sims v. Cross, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 460.

Under a rule against a master to show cause why he had not paid over the proceeds of certain sales, the court refused to hear evidence to contradict the affidavit of the master denying that he had sold, or been ordered to sell. Ex parte Perry, 1 Harp. (S. Car.) Ch. 50.

Where a matter, of fact, unaccompanied by any evidence, is urged against the acceptance of the report of a master, as that the master had expressed feelings of hostility to the party objecting, the decision of the judge in accepting such report is not subject to exceptions. State v. McIntyre, 53 Me. 214.

In a suit in equity to foreclose a mortgage, where the obligation, to secure which the mortgage was given, is unliquidated, and there is nothing before the court to show that the amount due is less than the amount necessary to give the court jurisdiction, the court is not divested of its jurisdiction, although the master should report a less sum to be due. Ferguson v. Kimball, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) Ch. 616.

A master in chancery, appointed to report the sum due on an outstanding mortgage of land, is not authorized to decide on the titles thereto. Mowe v. Russell, 36 Me. 115.

The report of a master, in stating the affairs of a mercantile firm, should show whether the partnership resulted in profit or loss, and to what extent, and should also dispose of the uncollected dues. Zimmerman v. Huber, 29 Ala. 379.

Where a cause is referred to a master "for hearing and determination on the merits," his report cannot be considered as an award by which the parties are concluded, or on which final judgment or decree can be pronounced. Rankin v. Rankin, 36 Ill. 293.

2. Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 495; Copeland v. Crane, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 73; Byington v. Wood, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 45; Keege v. Bossieux, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 83; Gordon v. Lewis, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 143; Lewis v. Lewis, 1 Minor (Ala.) 35; Story v. Livingston, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 359; Beckwith v. Butler, 1 Wash. (Va.) 224; White v. Johnson, 2 Munf. (Va.) 235; Gaines v. New Orleans, 1 Woods (U. S.) 104.

For practice in Tennessee, see Cook v. Dews, 2 Tenn. Ch. 406.

Objection to the execution of a reference by a particular master must be made before the hearing by the master, and cannot be made after his report has been returned. Johnson v. Swart, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 385. See also Troy Iron etc. Factory v. Corning, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 328.

Where an order referring exceptions to an answer was entered out of time, an objection on that account, taken by the defendant at the return of the summons under the order, was held to be in time. Johnson v. Bloomer, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 328.

Must be Taken Before Confirmation in

In ordinary cases, the objections are made after the master has prepared a draft of his report; and objections may sometimes be made by a party who has not previously appeared before the master; but he cannot introduce new matters in evidence to support such objections.¹ Where the report is erroneous on its face it may be enquired into although no objection was taken to it.² The report is then filed in the proper office.

Court Below.—When no objections are made to a master's report in the court below, and it is there confirmed, such objections cannot be enquired into in the superior court, on error. Huginin v. Starkweather, 10 Ill. 492. See generally APPEAL, vol. 1, p. 616; CERTIORARI, vol. 3, p. 60; ERROR, vol. 6, p. 810.

To Admission of Evidence.—Objections to the admission of evidence should be made at the time, or the objection cannot be raised by excepting to the allowance of the item proved by that evidence. Taylor v. Kilgore, 33 Ala. 214.

Where no objection is made to the introduction of evidence upon a hearing before a master, no question as to its competency can be raised upon exceptions to the master's report. Kinsey v. Kinsey, 37 Ala. 394.

To Competency of Witness.—An objection to the competency of a witness should be made before the master who is executing the decree, under which the testimony is taken, at the time of applying for the order to examine the witness, or at least when the testimony is read before the master. Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 615.

To a Copy of an Award.—A copy of an award was annexed to the bill; the original was not called for, nor was any objection made to the use of the copy before the master; held that the objection could not be first made by exceptions to the master's report, but must then be taken to be waived. Iaeger v. Bossieux, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 83.

In Matters of Account.—When an account has been taken and returned by a master, a party desiring to object to any item should file his exceptions to the report, specifying the item objected to and the grounds of objection. It is not the duty of the chancellor to examine items not thus excepted to, and on appeal the duty of the supreme court extends no further. Smalley v. Corliss, 37 Vt. 486.

When an account is ordered, the decree is interlocutory in regard to the details. The party ordered to account may present objections to the time of its commencement or termination by exceptions to the commissioners' report. Humphrey v. Foster, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 653.

Change of Practice Before Report Filed.—An objection to the report of a master on the ground that he was not appointed under Maine Pub. Laws of 1862, ch. 155, is invalid when it appears that his hearing in the matter was concluded before the act took effect, although the report was filed afterwards. Simmons v. Jacobs, 52 Me. 147.

1. Byington v. Wood, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 145.

Draft of Report.—On the question of damages for infringement of patent, the master should allow both parties to introduce testimony. When he has heard the parties, and come to a conclusion, he makes a draft of his report, shows it to the parties, or files it in the clerk's office, and gives time for the parties, if they see fit, to make objections to the report. When these objections are made, it becomes his duty to consider or reconsider, as the case may be, the questions involved in those objections; and if, upon full consideration, he is still of the opinion that he was right in his conclusions stated in the report, he makes his final report and then the whole matter comes back to the circuit court for adjudication. Union Sugar Refinery v. Mathiesson, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 146, 149.

Practice in preparing draft of reports before argument and submitting them to parties. Hatch v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 856; Fisher v. Hayes, 16 Fed. Rep. 469.

2. Levert v. Redwood, 9 Port. (Ala.) 79; Gerald v. Miller, 21 Ala. 433.

Where a master has followed the order of a judgment and enforced its directions, no objection can be taken, on appeal, to his action, when the appeal arises upon exceptions to his report, and not upon objection to the original judgment under which the reference to him was made. New Orleans v. Gaines, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 624.

VII. CONFIRMATION.—Wherever the discretion of the court is exercised upon the first order, and where the master is only called upon to perform some act, or make some enquiries necessary for carrying out the court's order, the report requires no confirmation.¹ Such are reports of the appointment of trustees, the settling of interrogatories, and the like. A report of sale, however, requires confirmation.²

Reports required to enable the court to make a discretionary order or decree, require confirmation.³

1. Effect of Confirmation.—A confirmed report of a master or commissioner, at best, stands in the same relation to the decree as a verdict to a judgment. The decree is almost certain to follow the report, but until the decree is entered the report cannot be enforced.⁴

VIII. EXCEPTIONS TO MASTER'S REPORT.—Strictly, in equity practice, though it is different in some of the States, no exceptions to a master's report can be made which were not taken before the master; the object being to save time, and to give him an opportunity to correct his errors, or to reconsider his opinions. A party neglecting to bring in exceptions before the master, cannot afterwards except to the report, unless the court, on motion, see reason

1. Daniell's Ch. Pr. 304; Case v. Abeel, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 630, however, requires confirmation.

2. Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1305.

3. Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1305.

4. Kingsbury v. Kingsbury, 20 Mich. 212.

The action of the chancellor in confirming a commissioner's report is only interlocutory, and the correctness of the report may be passed on at the final hearing and a final judgment rendered. Adkisson v. Dent (Ky. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 950.

Although the commissioner's notice of the time and place of taking the account states that the decree of reference will be executed on a certain day "if fair, if not, the next fair day thereafter, Sundays excepted," these words will not prevent its being deemed in substantial compliance with the statute (though not advisable to be inserted); and where the commissioner did take the account on the day named, and the appellant did not show that he was injured, held that there was not sufficient grounds to refuse confirmation of the report. 1876, White v. Drew, 9 W. Va. 695.

The report of a commissioner in equity showed a balance due an executor by the insolvent estate of his testator. The report was confirmed without objection, and the court then immediately made an order against the objections of the creditors, and without hearing argument, that the ascertained balance should be paid to the executor, out of the assets of the estate, in preference to all other claims. Held, that, as the time within which the creditors were entitled, under the rules of court, to file exceptions to the report, had not expired when the order of confirmation was made, both orders should be set aside and the cause remanded, with leave to the creditors to file exceptions. Tindal v. Tindal, 1 S. Car. 111.

A matter may be referred to a master, and his report received and confirmed, all at the same term of the court. Taylor v. Roberts, 3 Ala. 83.

The usual order nisi to confirm a master's report, which is entered upon the filing of such report, becomes absolute at the expiration of eight days, except as to the matters embraced in the exceptions to the report; and the decretal order, made upon the exceptions, need not direct the report to be confirmed as to those parts thereof which are not directed to be altered or reconsidered by the master. Clark v. Willoughby, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) Ch. 68.

As to the practice in Michigan, as to confirmation of a master's report, under the 82nd rule of the court, see Suyto be dissatisfied with the report, and refer it to the master to re-examine it, with liberty to the party to make objections to it.¹

Exceptions to a master's report are proper only in those cases in which he has come to a wrong conclusion upon the matters which were referred to him to ascertain or decide. Where he proceeds irregularly or neglects to report upon the matters referred to him, the proper course for the aggrieved party is to apply to the court to set aside the report or to refer it back to the master to dam v. Dequindre, Walk. (Mich.) 23.

1. Story v. Livingston, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 359.

Where a cause comes before the court, upon the master's report, nothing is properly before the court, except the exceptions taken at the hearing, and whatever may have been insisted on, by way of argument, is considered as waived, if not made matter of exception, unless it appears on the face of the report that the master has committed an error, which should be corrected. Gordon v. Lewis, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 143.

Exceptions to a master's report should be taken before the master, and it is too late to except after application for a decree in conformity with the report. Lewis v. Lewis, Minor (Ala.) 35.

In Alabama, where the chancellor refers matters in controversy to commissioners, a party is not precluded from excepting to their report by his not having excepted to the special matter of objection before the commissioners. Colgin v. Cummins, 1 Port. (Ala.) 148.

In Alabama, matters of account must be brought before the master, and if rejected, excepted to, to enable the party to assign them as error. Davenport v. Bartlett, 9 Ala. 179.

If a suit is brought to recover back money paid on a decree, which was afterwards reversed on error, because the allegations and proof did not correspond, the defendant can derive no benefit from the master's report in the cause, although no exceptions were taken to it; the report falls to the ground with the decree. Crocker v. Clement, 23 Ala. 296.

Rule in New Jersey.—The rule that exceptions to an account stated by a master shall be made before him, and before he makes his report, has not been actually recognized in New Jersey, except in cases where a draft of the account was served, and the party omitted to make any exceptions, or suggest any alterations, before the master. Mechanics' Bank of Philadelphia v. Bank of New Brunswick, 3 N. J. Eq. 437.

Miscellaneous.—An exception to a master's report cannot be sustained, unless the truth of it appears upon "the face of the proceedings." Pearson v. Darrington, 32 Ala. 227.

If exceptions are not taken to a master's report in the court below, it cannot be questioned in the appellate court. Reigard v. McNeil, 38 Ill. 400. See also Kee v. Kee, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 116.

Where exceptions are taken to the report of a commissioner to whom an executor's account is referred, and the exceptions are sustained, and an appeal taken to the supreme court, and the evidence is not set out in the record, the supreme court can only consider the exceptions to items, the character of which sufficiently appears from the face of the account itself. Smith v. Hurd, 16 Miss. 682.

The appeal given by section 29 of the Chancery act (Nix. Dig. 99, § 29) is taken by filing exceptions to the master's report within eight days from the service of the rule, which is the mode of bringing objections to the reports of masters before the chancellor for review. Weber v. Weitling, 18 N. J. Eq. 39.

It is the practice in equity courts, upon filing a report on exceptions to an answer, to take an order that the same shall be confirmed, unless cause be shown in eight days after the service of the same. The filing of exceptions to the report is a sufficient showing cause against its confirmation. Weber v. Weitling, 18 N. J. Eq. 39.

A commissioner's report will not be set aside unless excepted to. Farmer v. Samuel, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 187.

After the report of a master in chancery is prepared, it is proper for the master to hear exceptions, and correct his report, or, if he disallows them, to report them to the court with the eviperfect the same.¹ An exception cannot be taken to a master's report on the ground that it is uselessly expensive, when the master takes the accounts directed by the decree appointing him. If the decree is wrong, it must be reformed by the court; but so dence relating thereto, to be heard. Brockman v. Aulger, 12 Ill. 277.

Upon exceptions to a master's report, the argument is confined to the exceptions taken, and does not reopen matters fully discussed and determined by the whole court before the reference to the master. Pingree v. Coffin, 12 Gray (Mass.) 288, 315.

It is not usual to refer accounts with instructions; but questions for the court should be brought before it by exceptions to the report. Clements v. Pearson, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 257.

Where a master's report finds in favor of a plea, the report should be excepted to, in order to bring the matter before the court. Dickinson v. Codwise, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 341. See also State v. Foy, 71 (N. Car.) 527.

Where, during the progress of a cause in equity, there was a reference of accounts to a master, who reported, and his report was excepted to, on matters of fact and of law, and before any final action on the exceptions, the judge permitted one of the parties to withdraw his account and substitute another, held that this was a mere interlocutory order, and not such a judgment as could be brought to the supreme court before final judgment. Brunswick etc. R. Co. v. State, 48 Ga. 415.

How Exceptions Are Regarded.—Exceptions to the report of a master in chancery are to be regarded so far only as they are supported by the special statements of the master, or by evidence brought before the court by a reference to the particular testimony on which the exceptor relies. Jones v. Lamar, 39 Fed. Rep. 585. See also Singer v. Steele, 125 Ill. 426.

Neglect to Raise Exceptions.—A master's report will be deemed conclusive when the parties, although notified of the report, have not raised objections to it before the master, nor filed exceptions to it after it has been filed in court and before its approval. Jewett v. Rock Riv. Paper Co., 101 Ill. 57.

When Waived.—Exceptions to a master's reports are waived unless saved in the report and insisted on by bill. Winship v. Waterman, 56 Vt. 181.

Exception to a principal finding of a master based on all the evidence in his report is not waived by refraining from making the exception before the master, and subsequently making it before the court, since all that the parties could do would be to request the master to change his findings, a thing which they were under no obligation to do. Jennings v. Dolan, 29 Fed. Rep. 861.

If the master sustains an exception to evidence, and allows an appeal, the court must be called upon to act upon the appeal, or the exception will be regarded as waived; both new code Tennessee, § 4626, and the chancery rules requiring that the exception must be disposed of before the commencement of the hearing. Carter v. McBroom, 85 Tenn. 377.

Exceptions to Amounts.—Questions arising on a reference of accounts to a master will not be determined previous to the taking of the account. They must be brought before the court on exceptions regularly taken. Vanderwick v. Summerl, 2 Wash. 41.

If the chancery court below refers matters of account to a master, his report cannot be objected to in the appellate court unless exceptions to it have been filed in the court below. Brockett v. Brockett, 3 How. (U. S.) 691; Kinsman v. Parkhurst, 18 How. (U. S.) 289.

All questions contested before a master in chancery should be presented to the court by objection and exception to his report. The court will not entertain a motion to instruct the master pending the proceeding before him. Lull v. Clark, 20 Fed. Rep. 454.

An exception to the amount of a commissioner's fees must be taken in the trial court, and in the absence of such an exception, and on the filing of the proper affidavit by the commissioner, that court did not err in allowing his fees. Shipman v. Fletcher, 83 Va. 349.

Report of master upon questions not referred to him by court is erroneous, and subject to exception by party aggrieved. Taylor v. Robertson, 27 Fed. Rep. (Ill.) 537.

1. Tyler v. Simmons, 6 Paige (N.

long as it stands, it is imperative upon the master.¹ Exceptions are in the nature of special demurrers,² but are not required to be so full and specific. All that is necessary is, that the exceptions should distinctly point out the findings and conclusions of the master which they seek to reverse;³ for the part not excepted to, it seems, will be taken as admitted.⁴ They must not be general assignments of error, for that would impose the burden upon the court of examining every item in the account to detect the error. They must show specific errors⁵ and must be founded on the facts stated in the report, or in the accompanying documents and

Y.) Ch. 127; Herrick v. Belknap, 27 Vt. 673, 695; Pierce v. Faunce, 53 Me. 351.

1. Udike v. Doyle, 7 R. I. 446.

2. Wilkes v. Rogers, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 566; Story v. Livingston, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 359; O'Reilly v. Brady, 28 Ala. 530; Ridley v. Ridley, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 323; Goddard v. Cox, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 112; Stanton v. Alabama R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 506.

Form of Exceptions.—An exception to a report of the master, like a special demurrer, must point out certainly and specifically the objections relied on. It must be positive, explicit and certain, leaving nothing to supposition or inference. Kader v. Yeargin, 85 Tenn. 486.

An objection before a master that evidence is "irrelevant and incompetent," is too vague to be considered on hearing before the court. Hamilton v. Southern Nev. Gold and Sil. Min. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 562.

3. Foster v. Goddard, 1 Black (U. S.) 506.

4. Wilkes v. Rogers, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 566; Story v. Livingston, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 359; O'Reilly v. Brady, 28 Ala. 530; Smally v. Corliss, 37 Vt. 486, 492; National Bank v. Sprague, 23 N. J. Eq. 81; Ransom v. Winn, 18 How. (U. S.) 295; Chapman v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 18 W. Va. 184; White v. Hampton, 10 Iowa 238.

When the trial court determines the basis of a report, and sends the case to a master for an account, matters reported by him and not excepted to in that court, will be taken as acquiesced in. Singer v. Steele, 125 Ill. 426.

5. Dexter v. Arnold, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 108; Brantley v. Gunn, 29 Ala. 387; Halcomb v. Halcomb, 11 N. J. Eq. 281.

The court will not notice any exceptions to a master's report, except those that point to the particular item or matter objected to. Foster v. Gressett, 29 Ala. 393. See also Royall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363; Ferguson v. Collins, 8 Ark. 241; Ridley v. Ridley, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 323; Comr. and-in-Chief, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 43; Alexander v. Alexander, 8 Ala. 796; O'Reilly v. Brady, 28 Ala. 530; Bivingsville Mfg. Co. v. Bivings, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 455.

Where several exceptions to an answer are allowed by the master, and the defendant takes one general exception to the report, that exception will be overruled, if any of the exceptions to the answer are well taken. Candler v. Pettit, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 427; Franklin v. Keeler, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 382; Noble v. Wilson, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 164.

Exceptions to the report of a master appointed to state an account are to be regarded by the court only so far as they are supported by the special statements of the master, or by a distinct reference to particular portions of the testimony on which the party excepting relies. For the court does not investigate the items of an account, or review the whole mass of testimony taken by the master. Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 103.

In the exceptions it is not enough to allege errors in general terms merely. Particulars should be indicated. To allege that the master has arrived at a wrong conclusion upon the evidence is not enough. Some portion of the testimony to support the allegation must be stated. Greene v. Bishop, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 186.

The party excepting should require the master to state the evidence on which the exception is founded, or the court will refuse to enter at length upon the evidence in order to ascertain the correctness of the ruling. Greene v. Bishop, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 186.

Noting Exception.—An exception to each ruling of the master which is to be proofs;¹ for it is not the duty of the chancellor to examine items not thus excepted to.² To sustain exceptions to the report of a master, they must be supported by statements in the report, or by the production of evidence.³

1. Who May Take Exceptions.—All parties to the record who are interested in the matter in question may take exceptions to the report, and where there are several sets of parties, appearing by different solicitors, they may, if they are not disposed to join, each take exceptions, although their grounds of exception are the same.⁴

2. When Exceptions May be Taken.—Exceptions should not be taken to the master's report before it has been filed. They should be signed by counsel.⁵

contested should be noted at the time; but it need not be then put in form. The master should note on his minutes each exception when taken. Troy Iron etc. Factory v. Corning, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 328; 3 Fish. Pat. Cas. 497.

Questions arising upon objections made during a hearing before a master, and reserved by him, should be embraced in the objections filed with him to his draft report. Troy Iron etc. Factory v. Corning, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 328.

Leave to Amend.—Although it is proper to overrule a general exception to the report of a master in chancery as requiring the court to review the entire mass of testimony, yet, where a re-assignment of the hearing can be made without prejudice to the interests of the parties and the business of the court, it is discretionary to grant time and leave to amend the exceptions. Jones v. Lamar, 39 Fed. Rep. 585.

Omissions.—Exceptions to a master's report will be sustained, and the report recommitted, when it appears that a material question did not receive the attention which its importance warranted, and when the evidence on the question apparently can be made more specific. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Texas Pac. R. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 359. See also Richie v. Levy, 69 Tex. 132.

1. Dexter v. Arnold, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 108, 109; Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 103; Rennell v. Kimball, 5 Allen (Mass.) 356; White v. Hampton, 10 Iowa 238; Miller v. Howard, 26 N. J. Eq. 166.

What Are Not.—Exceptions to a report of a master in chancery merely alleging that the finding of the master is erroneous and unsatisfactory, without attempting to specify any particulars in which the error consists, or even suggesting what correction ought to be made, and omitting altogether to refer to any portion of the testimony to support the allegation, will not be sustained. Greene v. Bishop, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 186.

Exceptions to a report of a master in chancery, unaccompanied by any imputation of undue influence or fraud, and merely alleging that the master has arrived at a wrong conclusion upon the evidence, without pointing out any specific portion of the testimony to support the allegation, cannot be regarded as sufficient to put the finding of the matter in issue, or to require the court to review or revise the same in a matter of fact dependent entirely upon the weight and effect of the evidence submitted to his consideration. Greene v. Bishop, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 186.

When exceptions are taken to the report of a master in chancery, the evidence which furnishes the ground of the exception should be required, by the party excepting, to be stated by the master; and unless this is done, the court will not enter at large into the evidence in order to ascertain whether or not the master was wrong in his conclusion. Boston Iron Co. v. King, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 400; Sparhawk v. Wills, 5 Gray (Mass.) 423.

Exceptions, including distinct matters, as to a part of which the report is free from error, may be unconditionally overruled; or an exception may, in the discretion of the chancellor, be sustained in part, and overruled in part, unless it be so specially framed as to prevent such partial allowance. Brantley v. Gunn, 29 Ala. 387.

2. Smalley v. Corliss, 37 Vt. 486; Reed v. Jones, 15 Wis. 40.

3. Miller v. Whittier, 36 Me. 577.

4. 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1311.

5. 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1316.

Hearing on the Exceptions.—Either party may set down the case for hearing upon the exceptions to the master's report.¹ Both parties may except either to the preliminary or to the final report, or to both reports, and they are entitled to a hearing upon all the questions which have arisen before the master, provided they are embraced in the exceptions.²

3. Review of Questions of Fact.—If the master reports the evidence it becomes the duty of the court, if the exceptions are proper, to review the questions of fact embraced in the report, as well as the questions of law.³

4. Effect of Acquiescence.—An exception to a master's report will not be allowed when, by long acquiescence, it should be treated as Under United States Equity rule 83, in the United States courts, the parties have one month from the time of filing the report to file exceptions thereto; and if no exceptions are filed within that period by either party, the report shall stand confirmed on the next rule day after the month is expired. If exceptions are filed, they shall stand for hearing before the court, if the court is then in session; or if not, then at the next sitting of the court which shall be held thereafter by adjournment or otherwise. U. S. Sup. Ct., Rules in Equity, Nos. 83 and 84.

Where no exceptions have been taken to the report, it is open at the hearing to no exception except because of errors apparent on its face. Himsly v. Rose, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 313.

Further time to file exceptions to the master's report will not be granted after the expiration of the twenty days allowed by rule, because counsel did not know the report was filed, as he could have known it by using proper care. Clapp v. Sherman (R. I. 1888), 17 Atl. Rep. 130.

A report of a master returned into court, sealed up and endorsed "Fees to be paid before opening," is not filed within the meaning of a rule allowing one month for the filing of exceptions to an order extending the time. Exceptions will be denied. Donaldson v. Johnson (R. I. 1888), 16 Atl. Rep. 140.

Amendment.—Exceptions to a master's report are not pleadings in such sense as to give a right of amendment by adding new exceptions after certain exceptions have been filed and disallowed, and the time allowed for excepting has elapsed, and the case has proceeded to trial. The right to except to the report arises under a special rule, by which the court may allow time for excepting. Where the time for filing exceptions is limited by the order, exceptions cannot afterwards be made, except by leave of the court, and upon good cause shown, and then it is in the discretion of the judge to allow or disallow them. Suttles v. Smith, 75 Ga. 830.

Exceptions to Amended Report.—It is irregular for a party, by new exceptions to a master's amended report, to raise the same questions which have been considered and decided by the court on the exceptions to the original report.

Time for Filing Exceptions on Insufficiency of Answer.—There is no precise time for filing exceptions to the report of a master on the insufficiency of the answer, as it does not require confirmation. Myers v. Bradford, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 434.

1. Union Sugar Refinery v. Mathieson, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 146, 149.

2. Union Sugar Refinery v. Mathieson, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 146, 149.

3. Review of Question of Fact.—Union Sugar Refinery Co. v. Mathieson, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 146, 149.

Matter of Fact.—A question of fact arose on the pleadings, which either party might have had tried and determined in the usual course. But by consent the cause went to a master, who determined that issue. The defendant excepted. Held, that the finding could not be reviewed by the court. Bridges v. Sheldon, 18 Blatchf. (U. S.) 507. See also McCormack v. James, 36 Fed. Rep. 14.

Exceptions to the admission or exclusion of evidence taken before a master need not be restated when the exceptions to his report are filed. They can be considered upon the record, at the argument of the motion to confirm his report. Marks v. Fox, 18 Fed. Rep. 713.

having been settled;¹ nor will it be allowed, notwithstanding error, if upon the entire report it is evident that the error did not affect the conclusion.²

5. Overruling Exceptions.—The overruling of exceptions to a master's report has the effect of confirming the report.³

On an application to open a master's report for the introduction of additional evidence, the party must show good reason why it was not offered before the master. Whiteside v. Pulliam, 25 Ill. 285.

1. Walker v. Beal, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 743.

2. Gottfried v. Crescent Brewing Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 433.

3. White v. Hampton, 10 Iowa 238.

To Prevent Exceptions for Purpose of Delay.—Under United States Equity rule 84, in order to prevent exceptions to reports from being filed for frivolous causes, or for mere delay, the party, whose exceptions are overruled, shall, for every exception overruled, pay costs to the other party, and, for every exception allowed, shall be entitled to costs; the costs to be fixed in each case by the court, by a standing rule of the circuit court.

Right to be Heard Before Master by Counsel.—Where a matter in chancery is referred to a master, the parties have a right to be heard before him by counsel, and if this right is refused them, or they have not been properly notified of the hearing, the cause will be again referred. Whiteside v. Pulliam, 25 Ill. 285.

Exception for Want of Notice.—Where exception is taken to a master's report for want of notice the affidavit filed in support of the motion should show that the solicitor was not notified. Whiteside v. Pulliam, 25 Ill. 285.

Where a report in a cause had been returned six years, and then heard and decided, held, that it was too late thereafter for the party against whom the decision was made, to except to the report for want of notice. Miller v. Holcombe, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 665.

Miscellaneous.—A bill in equity was brought by the administratrix of a deceased partner against the surviving members of the firm, and the cause was referred to a master to take the books and papers of the partnership, examine the same, hear the parties and the evidence, state the accounts, and report the material facts. The defendant submitted to be examined on oath, without objection. Held, that he could not except to the master's report, on the ground that he had no authority to examine him under oath. Copeland v. Crane, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 73.

After a decree setting the priorities of creditors under an assignment in a suit for that purpose, one of the creditors, upon petition to the court, was allowed to except to the master's report as to the order of precedence, in order to enable him to place his debt in the first class, the delay having arisen from a mistake as to the mode of presenting his claim. Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 615.

And a creditor was allowed to go before the master to make further proof to entitle him to a preference, the neglect to make such proof having resulted from a misunderstanding of what was said by the master, upon payment of the costs of resisting the application. Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 615.

Exceptions to a master's report upon the disposal of a surplus, in a case of foreclosure, were ordered to be put on the calendar, as the matter of the exceptions could not come on as a special motion. Eagle Fire Ins. Co. v. Flanagan, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) 559.

When the insolvency of one of the defendants is alleged, and the other undertakes to show the contrary, an exception for impertinence is well taken where a restating of accounts has been had, before an officer of the court, by its order, and the balances adjusted, such accounting being final and conclusive. Jones v. Roberts, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 611.

Where a reference is ordered to report facts under New York Code, § 271, subd. 3, the report has the effect of a special verdict, and may be reviewed on appeal without exceptions. But questions on the correctness of the proceedings on the trial or in the determination of the facts must be raised by exception. Marshall v. Smith, 20 N. Y. 251.

No exception lies, on the ground of inconsistency, to a master's report, which finds an agreement between the vendor and purchaser of a share in a

IX. REVIEW OF REPORT.—If the court is not satisfied with the master's findings, it may direct him to review his report, though no exceptions have been taken. This is done when there has been an error or omission which could not have been the subject of exception.¹ It is not error for the judge to review, or in a case of law to reverse, the findings of fact by the master. He has the right to substitute findings of his own and predicate the law on ship, that the title should not vest in the purchaser until the completion of repairs, which were then making upon her, and an agreement by the vendor to pay the expenses of the repairs. Rennell v. Kimball, 5 Allen (Mass.) 356.

Where exceptions to the answer are referred to a master, the proper mode of bringing his report before the chancellor is, not by exceptions thereto, but by appeal. Wheeler v. Redmond, 6 N. J. Eq. 153.

Upon a hearing of exceptions to a master's report on a matter of account, before the chancellor, new facts or evidence not before the master are not admissible, much less in the court of appeals, on an appeal from the decree below on the exceptions. Bank of the State v. Rose, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) Eq. 90.

When the omission to reckon interest on two certain items appears to be due to the master's oversight, the court will make the necessary corrections. Crossman v. Card, 143 Mass. 152.

It will not be presumed that a commissioner's report, returned nine days before commencement of the term at which it was disposed of, was acted on less than ten days before its return. Moore v. Bruce (Va.), 7 S. E. Rep. 195.

Where the court overrules exceptions by defendant to a master's report, but does not dispose of complainant's exceptions, omission to make a formal order sustaining them is not error, where the court decrees in favor of complainant on most, if not all, points covered by his exceptions. Anderson v. Henderson, 124 Ill. 164.

Exceptions to a register's report, dependent on testimony not filed in accordance with the rules of chancery practice, are properly overruled. Kilpatrick v. Henson, 81 Ala. 464. See also, as to exceptions to master's report, Kelsey v. Hobby, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 269; Oliver v. Platt, 3 How. (U. S.) 333; Simpson v. Baker, 2 Black (U. S.) 581; Memphis v. Brown, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 289; Livingston v. Woodworth, 15 How. (U. S.) 546; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Gillette, 28 Fed. Rep. 673; Scro- field v. Stoddard, 58 Vt. 290; Stuart v. Hendricks, 80 Va. 601; Chapman v. McMillan, 27 W. Va. 220; Anderson v. Caraway, 27 W. Va. 385; Pico v. Sepulveda, 66 Cal. 336.

1. 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1320; Lang v. Brown, 21 Ala. 179; Compare Wilkes v. Rogers, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 566, where it was held that a court of chancery cannot set aside a report upon exceptions not taken, and require further proof; not even in a case where infants are concerned when they have a guardian.

Setting Aside Report—Burden of Proof.—Where a master reports, his report is to be considered like the verdict of a jury, and to be set aside for the same reasons. The burden of proof is on the party excepting to the report, and if no abuse of power is shown, or clear mistakes proven, and if, though there be some errors, they do not affect the result, the report will be confirmed. Mason v. Crosby, 3 Woodb. & M (U. S.) 258.

Practice in Reviewing.—It is the duty of the master to obey the instructions of the chancellor; and if it is desired that the chancellor should review his directions, the party supposing himself to be aggrieved may take exceptions, and by this means bring the point again to the attention of the chancellor. If, on the argument of these exceptions, it should be made to appear that the justice of the case cannot be got at, without an alteration of the decree in conformity with which the report is made, the chancellor should direct the report to stand over, and order that portion of the decree containing the erroneous directions to be reheard.

When the report of the master is in direct opposition to the original decree, an order of the chancellor confirming it may be reviewed in the appellate court, without exceptions to the report in the court below. Lang v. Brown, 21 Ala. 179.

Parties asking the supreme court to review findings of fact by a master should, in the printed argument, collect such findings,¹ but the court will not order a review unless it is clearly and satisfactorily shown that the findings of the master are not in accordance with the law and the evidence.² Or unless there the evidence relating thereto, with a reference to the pages where it may be found. Morgan's Appeal, 110 Pa. St. 271.

Where the parties consent to a reference to a master in chancery to hear and decide all the issues, and report his findings both of fact and law, and such reference is entered as a rule of the court, his findings are to be taken as presumptively correct, and only reviewable under the reservation in the consent and order of the court, when there has been manifest error in the consideration given to evidence, or in the application of the law. Kimberly v. Arms, 129 U. S. 512. See also Anderson v. Henderson, 124 Ill. 164.

Errors of Computation May be Corrected by the Court.—Errors of computation by a master may be corrected by the court without a recommitment, at any time before or after the confirmation of his report. Howe v. Russell, 36 Me. 115, 116.

When a decree directing an account to be taken was a final decree, with no equity reserved, and when no further directions need be given consequent upon the master's report, an error made by the master can be corrected by the court, without referring the account back to him for a restatement, or setting down the cause for a further hearing. Huston v. Cassidy, 14 N. J. Eq. 320.

Where the master's report, in a partition suit, shows the actual interests of the several parties in the premises, it is not necessary to send the report back to the master to correct an erroneous estimate which he has made in relation to such interests; but the error may be corrected by the decree. Carpenter v. Schermerhorn, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) Ch. 314.

Duty of Court to Review.—In the final hearing on the exceptions, all the interlocutory orders are open for revision; and if the court on examination changes its opinion previously formed, or finds it in conflict with the decisions of a higher court, it is bound to reverse its former decree. Fourniquet v. Perkins, 16 How. (U. S.) 82.

Formal Errors.—Where by mistake there is a discrepancy between the opinion on a report of a master and the decree recommitting it for certain alterations, the master must follow the decree. Taylor v. Kilgore, 33 Ala. 214.

Re-examination of Witnesses.—On a second reference, in equity, to a master, a party is not entitled, unless authorized by an order from the chancellor, to re-examine a witness whose deposition has been taken, or who has been examined at a former reference. Pearson v. Darrington, 32 Ala. 227.

Neglect of Master.—The remedy for a neglect of the master to execute a part of the order of reference is not by excepting to his report, but by a motion to refer the report back to the master, to amend it in that respect. Stevenson v. Gregory, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) Ch. 72.

When Review May be Had.—So long as a cause is on the docket, the court may receive exceptions to the report, if it is clearly shown that the report works injustice. Wooding v. Bradley, 76 Va. 614.

1. Calvert v. Nickles, 26 S. Car. 304.

2. Stanton v. Alabama etc. R. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 585.

Where Evidence Is Vague and Uncertain.—Where much of the evidence given before a master is of a vague and uncertain character, yet if, in his conclusion, he disregards such evidence, and bases his findings upon testimony that is certain and definite, there is no reason for reversing the decree reported by him. Appeal of Perry (Pa. 1887), 8 Atl. Rep. 450.

Where Evidence Is Conflicting.—Where the evidence is conflicting the findings of fact by the master will not be disturbed by the court. Central Trust Co. v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 246. See also Central Trust Co. v. Texas etc. R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 448; Welling v. La Bau, 32 Fed. Rep. 293; Jennings v. Dolan, 29 Fed. Rep. 861; Blackburn v. Clark, 85 Tenn. 506.

A commissioner's report on matters of fact, recommitted, re-examined, and re-reported without change, and sustained by the lower court, will not be set aside by the appellate court because the evidence is doubtful and conflicting. Handy v. Scott, 26 W. Va. 710.

Conditions.—One of the parties asking to have the report set aside, the has been some abuse of authority on the part of the master.¹ The report, however, may be set aside or referred back for irregularities in the proceedings, or for the failure of a master to report upon all matters submitted to him.²

X. ADDITIONAL TESTIMONY.—A master cannot reopen a cause for further testimony after the closing of the testimony and the submission of his draft report to the parties, without special order of the court; and this will be granted only upon the grounds of surprise³ other party asked, if the motion were granted, to be allowed to take further testimony. Held, that the confirmation be set aside on those terms. Seigle v. Seigle, 36 N. J. Eq. 397.

Reopening Findings.—Where a case is remanded to a master merely to complete an account, a question once settled cannot be reopened before the master and further testimony introduced, unless permission has been given by the appellate court which remanded the case. Brown v. Brown, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 608.

As to when a decree founded on a master's report will be opened, see Townsend v. Low, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 249; Pratt v. Lamson, 6 Allen (Mass.) 457.

Amendment Does Not Authorize a General Review.—Where a master's report, upon the hearing of exceptions to the same, is sent back to be amended, it is not open to review generally by the master; unless the court expressly authorizes him to review it generally; or the nature and scope of the exceptions allowed necessarily embrace the whole subject matter of the account originally taken by the master. Clark v. Wilmoughby, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) Ch. 68. See also Hooper v. Hooper, 29 W. Va. 276.

Incidental Rulings.—Only in a case of extreme hardship should the court review an incidental ruling of the master in the course of an accounting. Welling v. La Bau, 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 305.

Where, in proceedings to settle partnership affairs, a master was appointed to make sale of real estate of the firm, held, that the court had power to set aside the sale after the deed therefor had been executed, confirmed and delivered, it appearing that the confirmation had been made without notice to parties in interest, that the sale was irregular, there being a misdescription of the premises, and the price inadequate—on the ground that these facts constituted surprise and fraud. Re Hildreth, 41 N. J. Eq. 656.

Rehearing.—New hearings are never allowed on exceptions to a master's report. Felch v. Hooper, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 489.

New Reference After Final Decree.—After a decree establishing the rights of parties to a suit and for the payment of a stated sum, a reference will not be made to take proofs and report as to rents received since the decree. Bonner v. Illinois L. & L. Co., 96 Ill. 546.

1. Howe v. Russell, 36 Me. 115.

Burden of Proof.—In the case of authority by the master, the burden is on the excepting party to establish the mistake or misconduct alleged. See also McDougald v. Dougherty, 11 Ga. 570; Dean v. Emerson, 102 Mass. 480.

2. White v. Hampton, 10 Iowa 238.

Irregularity in Proceedings.—Where the proceedings before a master have been irregular, his report may be set aside for irregularity, on motion. In such case an order should be obtained enlarging the time to except, until the motion can be heard and decided. Suydam v. Dequindre, Walk. (Mich.) 23. See also, on review of report, Lively v. Winton, 30 W. Va. 554; Appeal of Tolles (Pa. 1888), 14 Atl. Rep. 394.

The action of a chancellor in refusing a reference will not be reviewed on appeal.

3. Burgess v. Wilkinson, 7 R. I. 31.

After a reference and report in an action for a partnership accounting, defendant filed a petition and affidavit to the effect that he had discovered numerous checks and receipts which, if taken into account, would show that he was improperly charged with certain sums by the master, and as to which sums he was unable to give an explanation on the hearing. Held, that the case would be opened to let in further testimony, although the defendant was guilty of laches in the nonproduction of such evidence, he having been the acting and controlling manager of the entire partnership business. Dignan v. Dignan (N. J. 1889), 17 A. 546.

or additional evidence, where good reason has been shown why it was not offered before the master.¹

1. Motion to "Open and Recommit" Analogous to Motion for a New Trial.—A motion to "open and recommit" a report of the master, confirmed without appeal, on the ground that since the filing of the report the mover has come into possession of material evidence that was not available before, is to be determined by the same principles as motions for a new trial, and petitions for rehearing on the ground of newly discovered evidence; and an order refusing to grant such a motion will not be set aside except for manifest abuse of discretion.²

XI. MASTER'S SALES.—Masters in equity are in some jurisdictions and in certain forms of equitable proceedings authorized to conduct judicial sales on behalf of the court. It is evident that this subject does not fall appropriately under this title for treatment; because, first, the principles of law which govern the court in authorizing such sales must depend upon the facts of the cases and the particular equitable proceeding in which they are presented; and, second, because the duty and responsibility of masters so appointed are the same as those already treated under other titles. It should also be borne in mind that this, as well as many other matters connected with the general subject, is regulated by statutes and rules of court in the several States, which cannot be set out in detail. In some States officials specially ap-

1. Whiteside v. Pulliam, 25 Ill. 285.
Taking Additional Testimony.—A party will not be allowed to open a case and have evidence retaken where his motion papers fail to show newly discovered evidence, or evidence of which the party could not avail himself at the first hearing, and where it appears that the party merely wishes to deny what he did not deny before, but which called for denial then as much as at the time of the application for a rehearing. Witters v. Sowles, 31 Fed. Rep. 5.

Defendant moved for a rehearing on the ground that his counsel had not offered evidence before the master which he was urged to put in. Held, that the counsel not deeming the evidence necessary to the proper conduct of the case, at best it was but an error in judgment, and no ground for a rehearing. Paterson v. Read, 43 N. J. Eq. 18.

2. Hubbard v. Camperdown Mills, 26 S. Car. 581.

No mistakes of judgment, or want of attention or capacity of counsel afford any just or proper grounds for granting a motion to open a case. Witters v. Sowles, 31 Fed. Rep. 5.

Where there is such an insufficiency of testimony as to preclude making a just decree, and the points are covered by the pleadings, and are such that there can be no doubt that testimony exists as to them, the cause will be remanded, with directions to take further testimony on such points. Fuller v. Fuller, 23 Fla. 236.

Rule 64 of the chancellor practice of Alabama, which provides that "After publication passed, no testimony shall be taken except by consent, or by special application to the chancellor and allowance by him," operates only on the rights of the parties, leaving unabridged the chancellor's discretion to order such additional testimony for the information of his conscience. Dixon v. Higgins, 82 Ala. 284. See also Wagoner v. Wagoner, 67 Md. XIV Mem.

Additional Proofs.—A court of equity on rejecting an account of mesne profits stated by an auditor, and returning the case to him for restatement, may properly allow additional proofs to be taken, notwithstanding a restriction as to time in the decree. Worthington v. Hiss, 70 Md. 172. See also Fuller v. Fuller, 23 Fla. 236.

pointed for this purpose are called commissioners. In the federal courts such sales are usually conducted by the marshal.¹

XII. Costs.—In the United States the subject of costs is regulated by statutes and rules of court. The duties appertaining to a master's office, as an item of expense in an equity cause, are included in the general costs of the suit, and the same general principles of law that govern the matter of costs in an equitable proceeding from beginning to end are of course applicable. It may be stated as a general rule that the prevailing party is entitled to costs, with the proviso, that the matter usually rests within the sound discretion of the court, and that discretion is limited by definite principles and fixed rules, regard being had to the circumstances governing each particular case.² The court, in exercising this discretion, does not impose costs as a penalty or punishment, but as a necessary consequence of a party having created a litigation in which he has failed.³ In suits under the protective and administrative jurisdiction of the court, the general rule is that the party requiring aid shall be liable for the costs;⁴ and in suits under the litigious jurisdiction of the court, the costs follow the result,⁵ though decrees are sometimes made and bills dismissed without costs on the ground that the failing party has been misled by his adversary's conduct or where the question in dispute was of a very doubtful character, or, in some cases, merely in consideration of the hardship of his case.⁶

1. See JUDICIAL SALES, vol. 12, p. 209; FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES, vol. 8, pp. 245-258; EXECUTIONS, vol. 7, p. 117; and see also SHERIFF'S SALES.

Setting Aside Sales.—The purchaser at a master's sale is entitled to a deed, unless there be some special circumstances to authorize the biddings to be opened; but these need not be such as are required between individuals to afford a proper ground of equitable relief. Morton v. Sloan, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 278.

A Tennessee statute makes it the duty of the court, when real estate is sold under its decree, to make a reference to a master before confirmation of the sale, to find out if there were any unpaid taxes which, on the day of sale, were a lien on the land, and if so, to decree that the master pay said taxes out of the first money coming to him from the sale. Where such reference was omitted and the money paid over to creditors, held, that the court might, at the same term of court, order the same to be refunded for the payment of taxes. Williams v. Whitmore, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 262.

2. Nicoll v. Town of Huntington, 1

Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 166; Eastburn v. Kirk, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 317; In re Heiniup, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 305; Woodson v. Palmer, 1 Bail. Eq. (S. Car.) 95; Lee v. Pindle, 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 288; Clark v. Reed, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 446; Tomlinson v. Ward, 2 Conn. 396; Stone v. Locke, 48 Me. 425; Brooks v. Byam, 2 Story (U. S.) 525; Gray v. Gray, 15 Ala. 779; Kaye v. Bank of Louisville, 9 Dana (Ky.) 261; Hunt v. Lewin, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 138; Cowles v. Whitman, 10 Conn. 121; Saunders v. Frost, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 259, 260; Bryant v. Russell, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 508.

3. 2 Daniell's Ch. Pr. 1377, quoting LORD CRANWORTH in Clark v. Hart, 6 H. L. Cas. 633.

4. Adams' Eq. 389 and cases cited.

5. Adams' Eq. 391.

6. Bradley v. Chase, 22 Me. 511; Pinnock v. Clough, 16 Vt. 500; Clark v. Reed, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 446; Hammersley v. Barker, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 372; Pattison v. Hull, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 747; Jones v. Mason, 5 Rand. (Va.) 577; Blakeney v. Ferguson, 14 Ark. 641; Tatham v. Lewis, 65 Pa. St. 65. See generally COSTS, vol. 4, p. 322.

Dismissal of Suit Without Costs.—If

XIII. COMPENSATION.—The compensation of masters, whose functions are judicial, may usually be measured by the standard of judicial salaries.¹

by the complainant's own act or procurement, the object of the suit is defeated, he cannot be permitted to discontinue, without costs. The bill can be dismissed without costs only in those cases where prima facie the complainant would not be charged with costs on a decree dismissing the bill at the hearing, as in cases of suits brought by trustees, executors, etc. Hammersley v. Barker, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 372; Beebe v. Beebe, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 170; Pennell v. Wilson, 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 674; Palmer v. Van Doren, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 384.

If the complainant prima facie would be chargeable with costs if the suit was decided against him at the hearing, the court would not examine the whole merits of the cause merely to ascertain whether there are any equitable circumstances which might excuse him from the payment of costs. Hammersley v. Barker, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 372.

Costs are in the discretion of the court. They do not always follow the event of the cause. Where a plaintiff had probable cause for seeking the aid of the court, but failed in establishing his title; but the defendant showed no title, or no better title, to the property in dispute, the bill was dismissed without costs on either side. Nicoll v. Town of Huntington, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 166.

In Tatham v. Lewis, 65 Pa. St. 65, the master recommended that the bill be dismissed; but, as it appeared to him that plaintiffs were warranted in prosecuting an investigation, that the decree should be without costs. Decree affirmed. Each party to pay their own costs.

Where an appellant succeeded only as to part of the matters of the appeal, neither party was allowed any costs as against the other upon the appeal. Stafford v. Mott, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 100.

The stockholder who comes into this court rightfully and with good faith, by a bill of interpleader, is entitled to his costs out of the fund. Those costs fall, in such cases, directly upon that defendant who had right, but eventually upon him who was in the wrong. It makes no difference in the rule that the defendant who was in the wrong is without the jurisdiction. Canfield v.

Morgan, Hopk. (N. Y.) 224; Farley v. Blood, 30 N. H. 354; Manchester Print Works v. Stimson, 2 R. I. 415.

Decree for Costs.—The rights of the parties are determined by the final decree. There must not only be a decree in favor of a party but there must also be an express order or decree for his costs, or they are lost. Conable v. Bucklin, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 221; Travis v. Waters, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 500.

Partial Relief.—Partial relief usually entitles complainants to costs. Rough v. Marshall, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 567; Hightower v. Smith, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 542; Sapp v. Phelps, 92 Ill. 588.

Where there has been an oppressive accumulation of costs occasioned by the errors and imperfections of the complainants' proceedings, the court will relieve the defendants from their payment. Blakeney v. Ferguson, 14 Ark. 641.

1. Middleton v. Bankers' etc. Tel. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 524.

Costs—United States Circuit Courts.—In the circuit courts of the United States whenever any reference of any matter is made to a master to examine and report thereon, the party at whose instance, or for whose benefit, the reference is made, shall cause the same to be presented to the master for a hearing on or before the next rule day succeeding the time when the reference was made. If he omit to do so, the adverse party shall be at liberty forthwith to cause proceedings to be had before the master, at the costs of the party procuring the reference. United States Equity rule 74.

In New York, the master will in no case be allowed more than $5 per day, including his taxable fees on the reference and for the report. And if his taxable fees amount to that sum, or nearly so, no extra allowance will be made. Woodruff v. Straw, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 409.

In North Carolina, a clerk or master is not entitled to any specific fee for issuing a subpoena for a witness to appear before him to give his depositions. He is to be compensated for such service as the court may think proper. Stokes v. Brown, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 33.

In South Carolina, an officer of the court of chancery cannot issue execution for his fees, for services not enumerated in the statute regulating fees, until such fees have been estimated upon a quantum meruit, or by the taxation of a master. Butler v. Ryan, 3 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 178.

XIV. MASTER'S ESTIMATES.—In ascertaining values or profits the master should report his own judgment according to his belief of the testimony; and not a conclusion arrived at by averaging the estimates of the witnesses.¹

A decree dismissing the plaintiff's bill, with costs, which is affirmed on appeal, includes the master's compensation, though not taxed before the appeal, and the court below has no power to order the same to be paid by the defendant. Jones's Appeal, 87 Pa. St. 428.

Right to Have a Clerk.—Code Maryland, art. 16, § 144, gives an examiner in equity the right to have a clerk to write down the testimony. Held, that this provision of the code is still in force, and has not been affected by any equity rule. Canton v. McGraw, 67 Md. 583.

1. Averaging the sums proved by the witnesses is an exceptional mode of procedure, to be resorted to only from necessity. Pilkinton v. Cotten, 2 Jones' Eq. (N. Car.) 238.

In Moore v. Bruce (Va.), 7 S. E. Rep. 195, the court held that it is error for the commissioner (master) to return the debtor's property at his own valuation; but where it is not disputed and other evidence tends to show it correct, the judgment will not be reversed.

The fact that a master, upon a reference to him to estimate damages, has made an average of the estimates of the witnesses, is not, of itself, a ground for setting aside the report. Morison v. McLeod, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 108.

Interest.—In taking account of profits against an infringer of a patent, interest is not allowed before the date of the submission of the master's report, but only after that date and upon the amount shown to be due by his report and the accompanying evidence. Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 149.

Where a master charges interest upon an account upon a wrong principle, the court will not disturb the calculation, if no substantial damage is done to either party. Phelan v. Hutchinson, Phill. (N. Car.) Eq. 116. See generally INTEREST, vol. 11, p. 379.

Where a bill in equity prays that the judgment in a suit on a note in favor of the plaintiff in such suit be enjoined, and that the note be decreed to have been given without consideration, the court, if it refers the case to a master, should direct him to take and report testimony as to the consideration of the note, and he should receive and compute interest on only those items that are duly allowed by the court upon examination of the reported testimony. Owens v. Rhodes, 10 Fla. 319.

Miscellaneous—Money in Hands of Master.—A genuine bank book of a commissioner (master) in equity shows a due discharge of his duty in depositing the funds. State v. Norris, 15 S. Car. 241.

Death of Master.—Upon the death of the master his executor may be required to account in the proceeding in which the fund was acquired, for the fund and its earnings. Van Doren v. Van Doren, 45 N. J. Eq. 580.

Removal of Master.—A master in partition cannot be removed on ex parte hearing on petition by one of the parties, even though he had done nothing on the order of sale for five years. Gibbons' Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 587.

After a cause was at issue, on motion of the complainant, leave was given to take testimony before any examiner of the court. The first examiner notified to take testimony being sick, complainant took testimony before a second, and finally before a third examiner. The defendants were present and cross-examined the witnesses. The court, on motion of complainant, ordered the testimony as taken to stand, and that the third examiner should continue taking the testimony under the original order. Held, that the order of the court violated none of the equity rules, nor any of the general principles of equity. Canton v. McGraw, 67 Md. 583.

Special Master.—May be appointed where former order of master is involved, and he may be called referee. Roberts v. Johns, 24 S. Car. 580. See also Verner v. Davis, 26 S. Car. 609.

Where a master in equity borrowed

MASTER OF A VESSEL—(See also ADMIRALTY; CHARTER PARTY; DEVIATION; MARINE INSURANCE; MARITIME LIEN; SEAMEN; SHIPPING).

- I. Appointment and Dismissal, 958.
- II. Authority, 960.
 - 1. In General, 960.
 - 2. As Agent, 961.
 - 3. As Supercargo, 965.
 - 4. To Sell Vessel, 966.
 - 5. To Sell Cargo, 968.
 - 6. To Enforce Discipline, 969.
 - (a) As to the Crew, 969.
 - (b) As to Passengers, 971.
- III. The Duties of the Master, 971.
 - 1. As to Owners, 971.
 - 2. As to Passengers, 972.
 - 3. To the Crew, 972.
- IV. Rights, 973.
 - 1. In General, 973.
 - 2. Wages, 974.
- V. Liability, 974.
 - 1. On Contracts, 974.
 - 2. Misconduct, 974.

I. Appointment and Dismissal.—A master of a vessel is appointed by the owners and his employment continues at their discretion.¹ No formalities are necessary for his appointment.² The registry acts do not affect the validity to his authority, but where a vessel is registered in the name of a particular person as master, that person must be deemed the master for every legal purpose.³

money, and, to secure the payment, hypothecated certain certificates of stock which he held as master, and in trust, the official character in which he held the stock and the trust appearing on the face of the certificates, the lender was decreed to deliver up the certificates to the parties entitled, and account for all dividends received. Simons v. Bank, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 270.

Authorities.—Daniell's Ch. Pr. (5th Am. ed.); Adams' Equity (7th. Am. ed.)

1. Ward v. Ruckman, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 419; Fox v. Holt, 4 Ben. (U. S.) 278.

2. "In this country and in England the law does not interfere in relation to the qualifications or mode of appointment of a master, further than as regards his national character. He is pro hac vice the agent of the owner; and any mode of authorization competent to give power to one man to act for and bind another is sufficient to constitute him master of a ship. The Registry act of the United States requires that the name of the master shall be inserted in the register of the vessel (Act of Dec. 31st, 1792, § 9, 1 U. S. Stat. at Large 291); that on a change of ownership, a new register shall be taken out; and that when the master is changed, the register shall be produced to the collector, and a report be made to him, by the owner, or the new master, of such change, whereupon the collector shall endorse a memorandum of the change on the register, and subscribe his name thereto (Id. § 15; Id. 295). None of these provisions, however, whether complied with or not, affect the validity of the master's authority. They are only designed to secure the revenue against the allowance to foreign vessels, of privileges which only vessels belonging to citizens of the United States are entitled to enjoy." The Boston, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 309.

3. In the Dubuque, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 20, it was held that where there is a master by virtue of the registry, there cannot be in contemplation of law, another master de facto; that another person employed by the owners to navigate, and even discipline the ship, does not become master in either sense. In deciding this case the court followed the dissenting opinion in Draper v. Commercial Ins. Co., 21 N. Y. 378.

In L'Arina v. Manwarring, Bee Adm. (U. S.) 199, the ship had a real master, who of his own motion, acting in his capacity as master, hired a man at Havana to lend his name to be used as nominal master to clear the vessel at that place, and to proceed to Charleston and back to Havana. The court held that the person so hired never was master; that the real master had no authority thus to divest himself of his office, and confer it upon another; that this could be done by the owners only. See also the Boston, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 309.

The master of a vessel registered under the laws of the United States must be a citizen of the United States.¹

In case of necessity a consul may appoint a master.² Where the master is lost, the mate may become temporary master, and persons may lawfully treat with him as such.³

When a person is once appointed master; he will be deemed to continue as such until his actual displacement by some overt act or declaration of the owner.⁴

1. Rev. Stat. 4131; Act 7, June 26th, 1884, ch. 121, § 1, 23 Stat. 53. In United States v. Gillis, Pet. C. C. (U. S.) 159, it was decided that a citizen of the United States, resident in a foreign country, may, under the act of December 31st, 1792, command a registered vessel of the United States, without her right to the payment of domestic duties being affected thereby. In ten opinions of Attorney General, it was declared that a freeman of color might be master if otherwise qualified.

2. In the case of the Jacmel Packet, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 107, the authority of a master appointed abroad by an American consul, in place of a master who had absconded, to give a bottomry bond and hypothecate the vessel for advances necessary to save her, was sustained.

3. In the Favorite, 2 C. Rob. 232, SIR WILLIAM SCOTT held that where a person contracts to serve as a mate, it is a part of the contract legally implied in it, that he shall likewise act as master in case of the death or removal of the actual master. See also The Boston, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 309.

In the Ann C. Pratt, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 340, CURTIS, J., said: "When the owners appoint the mate, they are supposed to contemplate such casualties, and to agree that the mate shall exercise all the needful powers of master, in case they occur; and third persons may rightfully treat with him as master, when he has thus become such," citing the Kennersley Castle and The Rubicon, 3 Hagg. 8, 9; The Alexandria, 1 Dods. 280.

4. In the Tribune, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 144, STORY, J., said: "The next objection is that Dennett was not master of the vessel at the time; and if he was, that he had no authority to make the contract. I am of opinion, that he was master. He had been master for a whole year before, and his name stood on the ship's papers as master. Being once master, he must be deemed still to continue to hold that character, until some overt act or declaration of the owners, displaced him from that station." See also Fox v. Holt, 36 Conn. 558; The Swallow, Olc. Adm. 334; Truesdale v. Young, Abb. Adm. (U. S.) 391; Thomas v. Osborn, 19 How. (U. S.) 22; L'Arina v. Exchange, Bee Adm. (U. S.) 198; Stringham v. Schloener, 4 Ben. (U. S.) 16; Slocum v. Swift, 2 Low. (U. S.) 212.

When one, claiming under an alleged employment as master for a foreign voyage, seeks to establish such employment, merely by inference from services rendered and acts performed by him, under authority of the owners, in making the vessel ready for sea, the court will require that the evidence shall be so strong as to exclude all reasonable doubt that an employment for the voyage was intended. Jones v. Davis, Abb. Adm. (U. S.) 446.

The absolute right of the owners to dismiss is well settled. Thus in Montgomery v. The General Greene, Bee (U. S.) 388, JUDGE HOPKINSON affirmed the right of the owners to dismiss, at their pleasure, a master who had been employed for a particular voyage, whose cargo was on board, for which he had signed bills of lading, and who was all ready and about to sail. In affirming the decree, the court, in 1 Dallas (U. S.) 51, said: "As to the other point, the dismissal of the captain, we are of the opinion that, upon a general retainer for no particular voyage, the captain may be dismissed at any time without cause assigned; but that where there is a charter party, bills of lading and a particular voyage agreed upon, though the owners may dismiss the captain, yet they would be liable in a common law court."

In Brown v. Hicks, 24 Fed. Rep. 811, it was held that an agreement engaging

Under the laws of the United States, the majority in interest of the owners of a vessel have the power to remove the master, whether he be part owner or not.¹

II. AUTHORITY—1. In General.—The master has general authority to do everything that is necessary and proper relating to the management of a vessel, in furtherance of the general purposes of the voyage.²

As between owners and underwriters, the master has an ima master for "a whaling voyage not exceeding three years in duration" meant that the voyage was to last three years, unless its purpose should be accomplished sooner, and that the master was entitled to damages if the owners terminated the voyage sooner, because it was not a successful one.

On the power of removal generally, see The Camilla, Swab. 312; Dennis v. Marfield, 10 Allen (Mass.) 138.

As to the termination of the contract by the destruction of the ship, see General Interest Ins. Co. v. Ruggles, 12 Wheat (U. S.) 408.

1. By Rev. Stat. 4250, it is enacted that the majority ownership of a vessel shall have the same power to remove a master, who is also part owner, as such majority, if owners, have to remove a master not an owner; but this does not apply where there is a valid written agreement subsisting, by virtue of which such master would be entitled to possession. In commenting upon this section of the revised statutes, McKENNEN, J., in The Clayton v. Emory, 4 Fed. Rep. 342, said: "This not only confers upon a majority of owners the absolute power to remove a part owner from the command and possession of a vessel, because such power is exercisable by them against one who is not an owner, but by the clearest implication it enacts that nothing but a written agreement, entitling a part owner to possession, shall be available against this right of the majority."

The co-owner of a whaling ship, who is also master, and who has contracted for a cruise of four seasons, at a certain lay, and who is wrongfully deprived of his command at the end of three seasons, has an action against his co-owners for his removal. The measure of damages in such a case is the probable value of his lay for the season for which he was displaced. Parsons v. Terry, 1 Low. (U. S.) 60.

In Childs v. Gladding, 11 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 386, it was held that the part owner of a ship who is appointed master, is not thereby endowed with any new or additional right as a part owner, such as retaining his position of master against the express wishes of the majority of the owners.

In Ward v. Ruckman, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 419, the court said: "The right of a master to continue in command of a vessel because he is a part owner, can only rest on a contract made with the owners. Even if such a contract is made with one captain, it is not an assignable right to be transferred with the share, but is personal with the captain with whom it is made."

A part owner, who is a master, is entitled to an official investigation before removal, in the course of a voyage. Parsons v. Terry, 1 Low. (U. S.) 60.

2. "In cases of necessity happening during the voyage, the master is by law, created the agent for the benefit of all concerned, and his acts done under such circumstances, in the exercising a sound discretion, are binding upon all parties in interest." Miston v. Lord, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 354; The Sarah Ann, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 206; Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 342; Soule v. Rodocanachi, Newb. Adm. 504; The E. H. Fittler, 1 Low. (U. S.) 114; The Henry, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 465; Stone v. Ketland, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 142; Mervin v. Shailer, 16 Conn. 489.

The master has authority to employ the vessel under his command in a salvage service, and to put at hazard the interests of her owner. Waterbury v. Myrick, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 34; The Centurion, 1 Ware (U. S.) 477.

He may regain possession of the vessel by ransom. Phillips v. McCall, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 141; The Gratitude, 3 C. Rob. 268.

He may borrow money necessary for the completion of the voyage. The Fortitude, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 228; Stearns v. Doe, 12 Gray (Mass.) 482; Wes-ton v. Wright, 7 Mees. & W. 396; Beldon v. Campbell, 6 Exch. 886; Des- plied power to do what is fit and right to be done with ship or cargo, in case of emergency.¹

2. As Agent.—Within the scope of his employment the master has full authority to bind the owners to the extent of their interest in the vessel. He is a special and not a general agent. He can enter only into such contracts as are connected with the ordinary employment of the vessel.² Thus he may employ sea-cadillas v. Harris, 8 Greenlf. (Me.) 298.

The powers of masters employed on western steam boats is determined by maritime law. Holcroft v. Halbert, 16 Ind. 256.

1. Implied Authority.—The Ann D. Richardson, Abb. Adm. 499; Miston v. Lord, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 354. It is limited by the express or implied authority derivable from the laws of the vessel's country, or the usage of the trade, or the business of the ship, or the instructions of the owner. The Woodland, 7 Ben. (U. S.) 118. See also The Pacific, Brown & L. 243.

The master has no implied authority to borrow money for work previously done. Beldon v. Campbell, 6 Eng. L. & E. 473. Nor to make insurance. Foster v. United States Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 85; Holcroft v. Wilkes, 16 Ind. 373; Patterson v. Chalmers, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 595.

2. Master as Agent.—"The master of the ship is the confidential servant or agent of the owners, and they are bound to the performance of all the lawful contracts made by him relative to the usual employment of the ship, and the repairs and other necessities furnished for her use." The Aurora, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 96. See also The Gulnare, 24 Fed. Rep. 487 (contract for coal); The Queen, 28 Fed. Rep. 755 (repairs); The Eugene Vista, 28 Fed. Rep. 762 (employment of tug); The Senator, 1 Brown Adm. (U. S.) 544 (employment of tug); The North Carolina, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 41 (settlement of claim for salvage); Ross v. The Active, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 226 (sale of cargo); The H. D. Bacon, 1 Newb. Adm. 274 (salvage services); Stocker v. Corbett, 1 Const. Rep. 81; Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story (U. S.) 465 (carrying money for hire); The New World v. King, 16 How. (U. S.) 469; Citizens' Bank v. Nantucket Steamboat Co., 2 Story (U. S.) 16; Sheppard v. Taylor, 5 Peters (U. S.) 675; McDaniel v. Emanuel, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 455; Nelson v. Belmont, 21 N. Y. 36; Purvis v. Tunno, 1 Brev.

(S. Car.) 260; The Eolian, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 321 (pilotage); Brown v. Lull, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 443; The Grand Turk, 1 Paine (U. S.) 73; The Phebe, 1 Ware (U. S.) 263 (contract on bill of lading); The Freeman v. Buckingham, 18 How. (U. S.) 180; Glading v. George, 3 Grant (Pa.) 290; The Flash, Abb. Adm. 67, 71; Gen. Ins. Co. v. Ruggles, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 408; Grant v. Norway, 10 C. B. 665; The Gen. Worth, 30 Miss. 703; Ward v. Green, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 173; Smith v. The Creole, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 485, 519; Oakland etc. Mfg. Co. v. Jennings, 46 Cal. 176, 184. As to the master being a special agent, see The Irma, 6 Ben. (U. S.) 1; Webb v. Peirce, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 104; Mitchelson v. Oliver, El. & B. 419; The Thetis, 22 L. T. Rep. 272.

In Cases of Necessity the Master Is the Agent of All Parties Concerned.—In Miston v. Lord, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 354, the court said: "In cases of necessity happening during the voyage, the master is, by law, created the agent for the benefit of all concerned, and his acts done under such circumstances, in the exercise of a sound discretion, are binding upon all parties in interest." In this case it was held that the agency of the master on behalf of the shipper at the port of distress, arising out of the necessities occasioned by the disaster, was limited to the sale of the cargo. See also The Sarah Ann, 13 Peters (U. S.) 387; 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 206; Copeland v. Security Ins. Co., Woolw. (U. S.) 278; The Velona, 3 Ware (U. S.) 139; The Gratitude, 3 C. Rob. 240. The nature of the master's authority as agent is carefully considered by JUDGE STORY in the leading case of Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story (U. S.) 465.

In Peters v. Ballister, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 495, the owners of the ship and cargo sent them to the West Indies, directing the master to sell the cargo, and bring or send home a return cargo, the principal object of the voyage being the freighting business among the islands, and also directing him to manage the men,¹ receive consignments,² settle claims for demurrage,³ or voyage in such a manner as in his opinion should be most advantageous. The master sold the outward cargo, and purchased a return cargo, but found no opportunity to send it home. A creditor of the owner threatened the master to detain the vessel and cargo by legal process unless his debt was paid. The master accordingly sold the cargo to the creditor for the payment of the debt. The court held that the sale, not being in the ordinary course of business, was void and could be disaffirmed by the owners.

Ratification.—If a master exceeds his authority, his acts may be ratified by the owners. Thus in Lyman v. Redman, 23 Me. 289, a master of a vessel bought, without authority, a cargo of plaster on credit for the benefit of the vessel and owners. The owners received the vessel and cargo from the master, and sent them under charge of another master to another port for the purpose of selling the plaster. On this voyage a part of the cargo was thrown overboard for the security of the remainder and of the vessel, and the residue was sold at the port of destination and the proceeds thereof applied to the repair of the vessel. Held, that the owners were liable to those who had furnished the plaster to the first master. See also Hathorn v. Curtis, 8 Me. 356. In Davis v. Marshall, 4 Harr. (Del.) 64, HARRINGTON J., in charging the jury, said: "If it be proved that it was customary for the captain of this vessel to buy wood for transportation and sale, and pay for it on the return from market, it is evidence that Mr. Wilson knew of, assented to, and authorized such contracts on the part of his captain, and he is liable accordingly for the price of the wood. But if the usual business of this vessel was to carry the wood of others for freight, and not to buy it on account of the vessel, then Wilson, the owner, would not be liable to Mr. Marshall for a contract made with the captain."

1. Hiring of Seamen.—"By the general rule of the maritime law the personal contract of the master for the wages of seamen binds the owners, and the seamen may have their remedy against either." Baker v. Corey, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 496. See also Luscomb v. Osgood, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 82; Pickering v. Holt, 6 Me. 160.

In Sherwood v. Hall, 3 Sumn. (U.

S.) 127, the owners were held liable in damages for the tort of the master in shipping a lad under age.

The master may engage seamen on a whaling voyage on shares. Whalen v. The Silver Spring, 32 Hunt's Mer. Mag. 711. But he cannot after hiring a crew bind the owners for increased wages. Neilson v. Laura, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 242. Nor for the payment of wages for three months after the term of service. Canizares v. The Santissima Trinidad, Bee Adm. (U. S.) 353.

2. Authority to Receive Consignments.

In Freeman v. Buckingham, 18 How. (U. S.) 182, it was decided that under the admiralty law of the United States contracts of affreightment, entered into with the master in good faith, and within the scope of his apparent authority as master, bind the vessel to the merchandise for the performance of such contracts, wholly irrespective of the ownership of the vessel, and whether the master be the agent of the general or special owner. See also The Eolian, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 321; Poland v. The Spartan, 1 Ware (U. S.) 134; Jackson v. Julia Smith, 6 McLean (U. S.) 484; The Hendrik Hudson, 7 L. R., U. S. 93; Murfree v. Redding, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 276; Boucher v. Lawson, Abb. on Ship. 119; King v. Lenox, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 236; Walter v. Brewer, 11 Mass. 99; Fisher v. Willing, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 118; The Grand Turk, 1 Paine (U. S.) 73; Sheppard v. Taylor, 5 Peters (U. S.) 675. When an owner is on board and exclusively attending to the shipment of the cargo he is not bound by the master's contract. But to relieve himself of liability, he must show the fact that he was exclusively attending to the shipment of the cargo; and he must show this, though he was on board as supercargo. Ward v. Green, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 173.

The liability of the owners will not be affected by the fact that no bill of lading was signed. Fox v. Holt, 36 Conn. 558.

3. Demurrage.—In Alexander v. Dowie, 1 Hurl. & N. 152, the plaintiff, the owner of a ship, entered into a charter party with the defendant, containing stipulations as to demurrage. The ship was detained in South America beyond the time stipulated for. The captain was in possession of the ship, and was to be paid freight and demurrage by bill in South America. After enter into contracts for repairs and supplies.¹

The master as such cannot make insurance for owners,² purchase a cargo,³ settle prior claims,⁴ make bills or notes binding the the making of the charter party, and before the settlement hereafter mentioned, the ship with the charter was sold to F, the captain becoming a part owner. The captain settled the account for freight, demurrage and delay with the defendant by taking a bill in South America. It was held that F and the plaintiff, in whose name he was suing, were bound by the settlement. POLLOCK, C. B., said that the master as captain must have had authority to make such a settlement.

1. Contracts for Repairs and Supplies.

—A master may procure all necessary repairs and supplies for the vessel in a foreign port, and may bind both the owners and the vessel for their payment. He cannot bind the owners to pay for repairs at the home port without special authority. See Thomas v. Osborn, 19 How. (U. S.) 22; Phillips v. Ledley, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 226; Mervin v. Shailer, 16 Conn. 489; Patterson v. Chalmers, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 595; Provost v. Patchin, 9 N. Y. 235; Wainwright v. Crawford, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 226; The George, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 151; Hussey v. Allen, 6 Mass. 163; Joy v. Allen, 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 303; Webster v. Seekamp, 4 Barn. & Adol. 352; Dyer v. Snow, 47 Me. 254. See MARITIME LIENS.

The master has no authority to bind the owners if a third person is clothed with a special ownership or authority. Webb v. Peirce, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 104; Gracie v. Palmer, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 605; The Joseph Cunard, Olc. Adm. 120; Phillips v. Ledley, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 226; The City of New York, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 187; The William & Emmeline, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 66.

Nor can the master bind the owners if they are within easy communication. Woodruff etc. Iron Works v. Stetson, 31 Conn. 51.

2. Insurance.—Holcroft v. Wilkes, 16 Ind. 373; Foster v. United States Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 85; Patterson v. Chalmers, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 595.

In case of a constructive total loss the master is agent of the underwriters. Peirce v. Ocean Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 83; Gordon v. Mass. F. & M. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 249. But where there is no abandonment, the underwriters have no authority over the master. The Senator, 1 Brown. Adm. (U. S.) 546; United Ins. Co. v. Scott, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 106; Ward v. Peck, 18 How. (U. S.) 267; The Henry, 2 Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 465.

3. Purchase of Cargo.—“The owner of a ship cannot be bound by any contract of the master concerning the purchase of cargo. To bind the owners in such a contract, the master must be clothed with powers other than those which are necessarily incident to his office as commander of the ship. He may, indeed, act in the double character of master and supercargo or consignee; but his power to sell, cases of necessity excepted, or to purchase cargo, flows not from his official character as master, but from special authority conferred for that purpose. The evidence, by which this agency is to be proved, may as in other cases, be positive or presumptive; by direct appointment contained in letters of instruction or by general and long-continued usage, under which all interested may be presumed to have contracted; or by subsequent ratification. But unless this agency be superadded by his authority as master, he has no power to bind his owners in any contracts excepting such as relate to the usual employment of the vessel committed to his charge, and the means requisite for that employment.” Hathorn v. Curtis, 8 Me. 356; Davis v. Marshall, 4 Harr. (Del.) 64; Newhall v. Dunlap, 14 Me. 180; Lyman v. Redman, 23 Me. 289; Hewett v. Buck, 17 Me. 147; Naylor v. Baltzell, Taney (U. S.) 55; Kenzel v. Kirk, 37 Barb. (U. S.) 113. The owners may, however, expressly authorize the master to purchase a return cargo. Bidenlac v. Smith, 31 N. Y. 259; Lyman v. Redman, 23 Me. 289.

4. Prior and Invalid Claims.—The master has no authority to settle prior claims. Kelley v. Merrill, 14 Me. 228. Nor invalid claims. Merritt v. Walsh, 32 N. Y. 685, 687. In the latter case the court said: “The defence is placed upon the ground that Stinson, the master who sailed the vessel in the last mentioned year, had authority to bind the owners by the allowance of the claim, notwithstanding it was not a valid one against his employers. The owners,¹ nor enter into contracts binding the owners beyond the value of the ship.²

The owners may make a master their general agent by parol, and in such a case they are bound by any contract or agreement which he may make in their behalf.³

Persons dealing with the master of a vessel are bound to enquire into his authority to act; and in case he is without such authority, they will not be protected merely because they acted in good faith.⁴

master of a vessel is the agent of the owners; and for most purposes, the general laws of agency apply to the relation which subsists between them. But the account of 1855 accrued before Stinson became master, and when the navigation of the vessel was confided to another person as master. That account had, therefore, no connection with the agency exercised by him. Hence, he had no shadow of authority to permit the money of his employers to be applied to the payment of an alleged indebtedness arising out of a transaction which was foreign to his agency."

1. In the Joseph Cunard, Olc. Adm. (U. S.) 120, the master of a ship drew a bill of exchange upon the owners, in favor of the agent of the charterer, for disbursements and expenses, the drawee having notice that the master was instructed by the owners not to draw such bills, and the drawer afterwards negotiated the bill to the defendants. The court held that under the facts of the case the debt for which the bill was drawn was no lien upon the ship, and that the holders could not maintain an action in rem upon it.

In Douglass v. Moody, 9 Mass. 548, a neutral hired and loaded a ship for a voyage, in the course of which she was captured and carried into port and libelled as a prize, but before any further proceedings in admiralty, a compromise took place between the captors and hirer on which for the release of the vessel and cargo, the latter drew a bill of exchange, which the master endorsed, he having been appointed by the owners. The vessel was then released. It was held that the owners of the vessel were not liable to the hirer on account of such bill of exchange, until payment thereof, but if paid, they would be liable, as for an average on the value of the vessel and cargo at the time and place of incurring the expense.

In May v. Kelly, 27 Ala. 497, it was held that the acceptance of a bill of exchange by the captain and master of a river steamboat, in his own name, as captain, does not bind the owner as acceptor.

But where a bill of exchange is drawn by the master of a ship, by authority of the owners in his own name, for cargo supplied for the owners, the latter are liable. Wallace v. Agry, 4 Mason (U. S.) 336. See also Holcroft v. Halbert, 16 Ind. 256; Carr v. Burke, 32 Mo. 233; Bowen v. Stoddard, 10 Met. (Mass.) 375.

2. "In the primitive maritime law there was in strictness no personal liability beyond that of the master. The owners would always exempt themselves from personal responsibility by abandoning their interest in the ship and freight as an appurtenance to the ship. The authority of the master extended no farther than to bind the property of the owners entrusted to his management. And such is now the law of all maritime nations on the continent of Europe." The H. B. Foster, 3 Ware (U. S.) 165; The Rebecca, 1 Ware (U. S.) 188; Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story (U. S.) 465; The Larch, 3 Ware (U. S.) 28; Cannan v. Meaburn, 1 Bing. 243, 465.

3. Where the owners of a vessel employ a master for a voyage, and by parol authorize him to exercise his best judgment in the disposal of the cargo and also in the purchase of a return cargo, they constitute him their general and special agent for such purpose. Bidenlac v. Smith, 31 N. Y. 259. See also Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story (U. S.) 465.

4. The Eugene Vista, 28 Fed. Rep. 762. In this case it appeared that a vessel in process of loading was driven ashore and damaged, and the owner of the cargo demanded a return of the property shipped by him, offering to pay the expense of unloading. The master refused the request and em-

3. As Supercargo.—The master is not ordinarily the agent of the shipper for any other purpose than that of carrying and delivering the goods; but in cases of unforeseen necessity, the law clothes him with the authority of a supercargo and he may make such disposition of the cargo as may be most to the advantage of its owners.¹

When the same person is not only master of the vessel, but also supercargo, he acts in two distinct characters. In the navigation of the vessel and the conveyance and delivery of the cargo, he acts as the agent of the owners of the vessel, but in the sale of the goods he is the agent of the consignor.²

ployed a tug to haul the vessel off and tow her to a place of safety. The court held that the owner had no power to bind the cargo, and that the owner of the tug must look to the vessel alone for his compensation. See also Clan v. McLeod, 38 Fed. Rep. 447.

When a master acts under instructions limiting his authority, and these instructions are known to the creditor, it will operate to prevent the claimant from recovering anything within the limit. The Woodland, 7 Ben. (U. S.) 110.

In Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story (U. S.) 465, it was held that the master of a vessel has no power to bind the owners beyond the authority given to him by them, and the extent of that authority must be limited to their express or implied instructions, or to the law of the country, to which the ship belongs, and in which they reside. In deciding this case, STORY, J., said: "Looking at the question presented in the case at bar, as to the liability of the owner for the acts of the master, the natural enquiry first occurring to the mind, would be, what is that authority which the owners have confided to him? Is it a general authority to bind them in all cases whatsoever? Or is it a limited authority to bind them only in certain cases, and to a certain extent? There is no reason to say, that a master of a ship has any more authority to bind the owners than any other agent has to bind his principal. The authority is deducible solely from the nature of his employment, and the express or implied incidents to the trade or business in which the ship is engaged. If the ship is owned and navigated under the flag of a foreign country, the authority of the master to contract for, and to bind the owners, must be measured by the laws of that country, unless he is held out to persons in other countries, as possessing a more enlarged authority. He is but an agent, and no person dealing with him has a right to suppose that he is clothed with any authority beyond what the laws of the country to which the ship belongs, deduces from the nature of his employment, or which, by his instructions, express or implied, he is held out to the world to possess. If any person chooses to trust him under any other circumstances, or beyond this, it is a matter of blind credulity, and at his own peril. . . . The master has no power to bind the owners, beyond the authority given to him by the owners; and that from the nature of the case, the extent of that authority must be limited to the express instructions of the owners, or the law of the country where the ship belongs and they reside; for it is there that the authority is given, and there it is to be interpreted."

See also The Packet, 3 Mason (U. S.) 255; The Nelson, 1 Hagg. Adm. 169; Penn. St. Nav. Co. v. Shand, 3 Moore P. C. C., N S. 272.

1. Thus where a ship in consequence of a disaster occasioned by the dangers of the sea, is obliged to put into a port for repairs, and is detained for a considerable time, the master may in the interest of the shipper, sell such part of the cargo as is of a perishable nature. The Velona, 3 Ware (U. S.) 139.

A master may hypothecate his cargo on freight in a foreign port, to secure repairs absolutely necessary for the prosecution of the voyage. The Gratitude, 3 C. Rob. 240.

2. Hathorn v. Curtis, 8 Me. 356, 360; The Waldo, Daveis' R. 161; Stone v. Waitt, 31 Me. 409; 2 Livermore 215; Williams v. Nichols, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 58; Story on Agency, § 36; Dusar v. Perit, 4 Bing. 361; Courcier v. Ritter

4. To Sell Vessel.—A master of a vessel has authority in a foreign port to sell the vessel in case of actual, urgent and extreme necessity. The measure of his discretion is whether a prudent owner would have done the same under similar circumstances. If the vessel is disabled, stranded or sunk, and the master has no funds to repair and prosecute the voyage, and is unable to raise such funds, he may sell the vessel.¹

⁴ Wash. (U. S.) 552. Where the master is himself consignee, he has authority as supercargo. Smedly v. Yeaton, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 181; Biggs v. Lawrence, 3 Term Rep. 454. Where the master becomes warehouseman, he acts as consignee, and not as master. Wilcocks v. Phillips, 1 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 47; Gove v. Moses, 1 Wash. Ter. 7.

¹ In the case of The Amelia, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 18 (1867), MR. JUSTICE DAVIS carefully considered the authority of the master to sell, in the following language: "Although the power of the master to sell his ship in any case, without the express authority of the owner, was formerly denied, yet it is now the received doctrine of the courts in this country, as well as in England, that the master has the right to sell in case of actual necessity. . . . From the very nature of the case there must be this implied authority of the master to sell. The injury to the vessel may be so great and the necessity so urgent as to justify a sale, and, under such circumstances, the master becomes the agent of all concerned, and is required to act for their benefit. The sale of a ship becomes a necessity within the meaning of the commercial law when nothing better can be done for the owner or those concerned in the adventure. If the master, on his part, has an honest purpose to serve those who are interested in ship and cargo, and can clearly prove that the condition of his vessel required him to sell, then he is justified. As the power is liable to abuse, it must be exercised in the most perfect good faith, and it is the duty of courts to watch with great care the conduct of the master. In order to justify the sale, good faith in making it and the necessity for it must both concur, and the purchaser, to protect his title, must be able to show their concurrence. The question is not whether it is expedient to break up a voyage and sell the ship, but whether there was a legal necessity to do it. If this can be shown, the master is justified; otherwise not. And this necessity is a question of fact, to be determined in each case by the circumstances in which the master is placed and the perils to which the property is exposed. The facts of this case bring it within these well settled principles of maritime law, and clearly show that the master was justified in terminating his voyage and selling his ship. When the voyage began the ship was seaworthy and well provided, but after she had been at sea a short time, she became disabled during a violent storm, and with great difficulty was taken into the harbor of Port au Prince. The master at once entered his protest before the Dutch consul general (the ship being owned in Amsterdam), who caused three surveys to be made of the condition of the vessel. No action was taken on the first survey, but the result of the second was to incur an expense of one thousand Spanish dollars in partial repairs, decided by it to be practicable, and recommended in order that the ship should be put in a proper condition to proceed on her voyage to Boston. In making these partial repairs one of the sides of the vessel was uncovered, disclosing additional damages of a serious character not previously ascertainable, which caused the consul general to order a third survey. This third and final survey was thorough and complete. The men who made it were captains of vessels, temporarily detained in port, and the agents of American and English underwriters. No persons could be more competent to advise, or, from the nature of their employment, better acquainted with the structure of vessels and the cost of repairing them. Their report is full and explicit. After the advice given in it the master, who was bound to look to the interest of all parties concerned in the adventure, had no alternative but to sell. In the face of it, had he proceeded to repair his vessel, he would have been culpable. Being in a distant port, with a disabled vessel, seeking a solution of the difficulties surrounding him; at a great distance from his owners, with no direct means of communicating with them, and having good reason to believe the copper of his vessel was displaced, and that worms would work her destruction, what course so proper to pursue as to obtain the advice 'of that body of men who by the usage of trade have been immemorially resorted to on such occasions?' No prudent man, under the circumstances, would have failed to follow their advice, and the state of things, as proved in this case, imposed on the master a moral necessity to sell his vessel and reship his cargo." See also Patapsco Ins. Co. v. Southgate, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 604; The Sarah Ann, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 387; 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 206; The Henry, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 465; The Lucinda Snow, Abb. Adm. (U. S.) 305; The William Carey, 3 Ware (U. S.) 313; Robinson v. Com. Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 220; Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story (U. S.) 465; The Etta, 4 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 350; The J. F. Spencer, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 337; The Herald, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 409; Post v. Jones, 19 How. (U. S.) 150; The Brutus, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 526; Tome v. Dubois, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 548; The Fanny & Elmira, Edw. Adm. 117; The Gratitude, 3 C. Rob. 240; The Robert L. Lane, 1 Low. (U. S.) 388; Bodlam v. Tucker, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 380; Cannon v. Meaburn, 1 Bing. 243; Robertson v. Clarke, 1 Bing. 445; Somes v. Sugrue, 4 Car. & P. 276; Hayman v. Molton, 5 Esp. 65; Hunter v. Parker, 7 Mees. & W. 322; Tanner v. Bennett, Ryan & M. 182; Idle v. Royal Exch. Assur. Co., 8 Taunt. 755; Stephenson v. Piscataqua etc. Ins. Co., 54 Me. 55; Butler v. Murray, 30 N. Y. 88; Chambers v. Grantzon, 7 Bos. (N. Y.) 414; Pierce v. Ocean Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 83; Miston v. Lord, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 354; The William Carey, 3 Ware (U. S.) 313; Joy v. Allen, 2 Wood & M. (U. S.) 303; Scull v. Briddle, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 150; The Tilton, 5 Mason (U. S.) 465; Gordon v. The Mass. F. & M. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 249; Read v. Bonham, 3 Brox. & B. 147; Tunno v. The Mary, Bec Adm. (U. S.) 120; Fontaine v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 293; Storer v. Gray, 2 Mass. 565; Story v. Strettell, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 10; McMasters v. Schoolbred, 1 Esp. 237; Havelock v. Rockwood, 8 Term

He cannot sell the vessel in the home port or where he is within easy reach of the owners.¹

Rep. 268; The Nathaniel Hooper, 3 Suinn. (U. S.) 542; Mills v. Fletcher, 1 Doug. 231; Freeman v. East Ind. Co., 5 Barn. & Ald. 617; Underwood v. Robertson, 4 Camp. 138; Winn v. The Columbian Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 279; The Soglasie, Spink's Adm. 104; Prince v. Ocean Ins. Co., 40 Me. 481; Hartman v. The Brig Will, 4 Pa. L. J. 350; Cambridge v. Anderton, 2 Barn. & C. 693; Ireland v. Thompson, 4 Com. B. 149; Pike v. Balch, 38 Me. 302; The Australia, 1 Swabey 480; The Margaret Mitchell, 1 Swabey 386.

1. In Scull v. Briddle, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 150, an action of trover was brought to recover a vessel wrecked on the coast of Maryland and sold by the captain to the defendants. The owner lived in Philadelphia. In charging the jury, WASHINGTON, J., said: "In cases of extreme necessity the master may sell in a foreign country, rather than let the property perish; but not in the country where his owner lives; and no case of the sort can, it is believed, be shown. Mischievous would be the consequence if such doctrines were tolerated. In this case there was, in fact, no necessity for the sale; for the captain might have got these articles into a place of safety, and ought to have done so, and informed his owner, or rather the owner of the vessel, of her, he, the owner, living in Philadelphia." A verdict was rendered for the plaintiff.

In the case of the Sarah Ann, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 387, Scull v. Briddle was criticised as stating the law too broadly, and it was held that the true criterion for determining the authority of the master to sell a vessel stranded near a foreign port, or in a part of the United States, or of a different state than that to which the vessel belongs, or in which the owners may be or reside, when the necessity occurs, is the distance of the owners or insurers from the scene of stranding. If, by the ordinary means to convey intelligence of the situation of the vessel, the master can obtain directions as to what he should do, he should resort to those means. But if the peril is such that there is a probability of loss, and it is made more hazardous by every day's delay, the master may act promptly to

An examination of the vessel should be made by competent surveyors, and a sale should not be made unless the surveyors report in favor of it. Their report, however, is not conclusive.¹

The burden of proving the necessity of the sale is upon the persons who claim title under the sale.² If it has been made in good faith and for the benefit of all parties concerned, the sale is binding upon the owners, and a good title to the vessel passes to the purchasers.³

5. To Sell Cargo.—The master may sell the cargo in case of urgent necessity,⁴ for the benefit directly or indirectly of the cargo.⁵

save something for the benefit of all concerned.

1. "If the master can within a reasonable time consult the owners, he is required to do it, because they should have an opportunity to decide whether, in their judgment, a sale is necessary. And he should never sell, when in port with a disabled ship, without first calling to his aid disinterested persons of skill and experience, who are competent to advise, after a full survey of the vessel and her injuries, whether she had better be repaired or sold. And although his authority to sell does not depend on their recommendation, yet if they advise a sale, and he acts on their advice, he is in a condition to furnish the court or jury reviewing the proceedings strong evidence in justification of his conduct." The Amelia, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 18. See also The Henry, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 465; Weston v. Minot, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 436; The Etta, 4 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 38.

2. In Hartman v. The Brig Will, 4 Pa. L. J. 350, a brig was driven ashore and after survey sold by the captain for $315. The purchaser got her off, repaired and sold her for $2,750. She was then arrested by the original owners. The court held that both bona fides and necessity must be shown, and while the former might be presumed in the absence of evidence of collusion, the latter must be proved as an independent fact, saying: "It is the business of him who accepts title under a captain's sale to look carefully into the fairness of the whole dealings; . . . he must see to it not merely that the bargain will pass the ordinary inspection of the market without being condemned as tainted, but that it is without reproach or just suspicion." And though on the evidence produced the court would have sustained the sale, they refused to do so because the captain was not called, nor his absence explained by the claimants, saying, "the captain's evidence is vital to the claimants' case." See also The Amelia (U. S.), 6 Wall. 18 (bill of sale not required); The Henry, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 465; Lucinda Snow, 11 Abb. Adm. 305; 11 N. Y. Leg. Ob. 97.

3. In The William Carey, 3 Ware (U. S.) 313, the barque was sold the day following condemnation, and under some circumstances of concealment, but the sale was sustained. And it is sufficient if apparently justified at the time. The Ship Fortitude, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 228, where the subject is carefully examined. The Gratitude, 3 Rob. C. Adm. 240.

4. For Repairs.—Where the master is driven into a foreign port for repairs necessary to continue the voyage, and has neither means nor credit, and cannot communicate with the owners, he may sell a part of the cargo. Star of Hope, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 203; Ross v. The Ship Active, 2 Wash. C. C. (U. S.) 226.

So where it endangers the safety of the ship it may be sold even though it might have been transported. Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 342; Fontaine v. Columbian Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 29.

So where in danger of perishing through injury or delay. Aststrup v. Lewy, 19 Fed. Rep. 536; Meyers v. Baymore, 10 Pa. St. 114; Vlierboom v. Chapman, 13 Mees. & Wels. 230. In Ewbank v. Nutting, 7 Com. B. (62 E. C. L. R.) 797, where cargoes were injured by water soon after leaving port, so that the ship might have returned but did not, and cargo was sold at port of refuge, the jury found the sale not necessary.

5. The repairs must be necessary to continue the voyage; not made to improve the ship at the cargo's expense. The Gratitude, 3 C. Rob. Adm. 240; The Onward, L. R., 4 Adm. & Eccl. 38

His authority is only that implied from the particular emergency.¹ Where possible, the owner must first be notified of the facts and instructions awaited.² The burden of proof is on the purchaser to show good faith and necessity, without which his title is invalid.³

6. To Enforce Discipline—(a) As to the Crew.—The master has sole authority over the officers and crew on board his ship,⁴ to maintain discipline⁵ and enforce obedience to his lawful orders in (bottomry bond); Stirling v. Nevassa Phosphate Co., 35 Mo. 128.

1. Where the cargo can be reshipped on reasonable terms, the master's duty is to perform the voyage. Schieffelin v. New York Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 21; Salters v. Ocean Ins. Co., 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 107; Treadwell et al. v. Union Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 270; Hunt v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 5 Maule & Selw. 47; Van Omeron v. Dowick, 2 Camp. 42. But see Shipton v. Thornton, 9 Adol. & El. 314.

If the voyage cannot be proceeded with, or the cargo shipped, it should be stored, unless perishable. Smith v. Martin, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 262.

A usage to sell without necessity is void. Bryant v. Com. Ins. Co., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 131; Palmer v. Blackburne, 1 Bing. 61.

It is no valid reason that a creditor of the owner threatens to detain the vessel unless master would sell him cargo in part payment of his debt. Peters v. Ballister, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 495. Nor that the consignee refuses to receive the cargo. Arthur v. Schooner Cassius, 2 Story (U. S.) 81; Moore v. Hall, 38 Fed. Rep. 330.

A survey is no defence, if no necessity in fact existed, or if the fact therein stated or inference therefrom was unfounded. Winn v. Columbian Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 279; Meyers v. Baymore, 10 Pa. St. 114.

2. In Astrup v. Lewy, 19 Fed. Rep. 536, the cargo being wet and in danger of perishing, was sold. The consul who made the survey voluntarily stated in his deposition that the shipper was "communicated with," but made no reply. It did not appear what facts were communicated to the shipper. Held, prima facie sufficient evidence of compliance with the obligation to communicate. But in Kleinwort & Co. v. The Casa Marittima, L. R., 2 App. Cas. 156, where the cargo was hypothecated, it was held that the notice must state, not the necessity for expenditure merely, but the necessity for hypothecation. See also The Onward, 4 Ad.

& Eccl. R. 38; The Oriental, 7 Moo. P. C. 393; Elwell v. The Georgia, 32 Fed. Rep. 843; Pike v. Balch, 38 Me. 302. See BOTTOMRY, vol. 2, p. 487.

3. Presumption.—The purchaser must show necessity, and the presumption is against it. Morris v. Robinson, 3 Barn. & Cress. 196; Freeman v. East India Co., 5 Barn. & Ald. 616.

In Salters v. Everett, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 268, where the master fraudulently transhipped goods at an intermediate port, and took a bill of lading in his own name, which he transferred to his agents, the vendors; held, a bona fide purchaser for value took no title.

In Post et al. v. Jones et al., 19 How. (U. S.) 150, one who might have acted as salvor took advantage of extreme peril to drive a bargain. He was treated by the court as salvor, not as a purchaser.

4. Butler v. McClellan, 1 Ware (U. S.) 219, where the rule is thus stated: "By the maritime law the captain has all the authority of command on board the vessel, and the inferior officers, as well as the seamen, are bound to obey his [lawful] orders. . . . The necessities of the service require promptness of action in emergencies, and the law finding it necessary to invest the captain with a dictatorship to meet emergencies and preserve uniformity of government, very properly gives him the entire command in all cases." See also Krauskopf v. Ames, 7 Pa. L. J. (4 Clark 100); The Henry, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 465.

5. Discipline.—The Alrena, 22 Fed. Rep. 861, where mate was properly arrested for insubordinate language. U. S. v. Smith, 3 W. C. C. (U. S.) 525; U. S. v. Freeman, 4 Mass. (U. S.) 511; Thorne v. White, 1 Pet. Adm. 171; Thompson v. Burch, 4 W. C. C. (U. S.) 338.

Where the mate spoke of the captain as an old rascal, the court said: "The master has a right to exact from his officers and crew not only a strict observance of all his lawful orders . . . but also a respectful demeanor towards himself." But the master is not justimatters relating to its navigation.¹ This authority is quasi paternal;² while summary in character, it must be exercised with discretion, and the discretion cannot be delegated.³ Punishment should be administered moderately,⁴ with a proper instrument,⁵ and, if the circumstance admit, after consultation, and entered on the log.⁶

fied in discharging a female cook in a foreign port for mere impertinence. The Superior, 22 Fed. Rep. 927.

1. Immorality.—The master may not punish for general immorality, not inconsistent with duties as seamen. Bangs v. Little, 1 Ware (U. S.) 520.

2. Quam admodum eam tenet pater in filios, magister in discipulos, dominus in servos vel familiares. Casaregis. Disc. 136, n. 14, cited by Valin, on French Ad., tom. 1, p. 449; Fuller v. Colby, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 1, where the subject is carefully examined. Case of Agincourt, 1 Hagg. Adm. 271; Brown v. Howard, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 120. But the purpose and therefore the extent of its exercise is different, being for the safety of the ship rather than for moral improvement. Bangs v. Little, 1 Ware (U. S.) *506; Abbott on Shipping (8th ed.), page 248 [177], note.

3. U. S. v. Harriman, Hughes 525, the mate was indicted and convicted for beating, etc., under Rev. Stat. U. S., § 5347. The court charged "the master cannot delegate to an inferior officer a general authority to inflict punishment, nor can the inferior officer inflict punishment at his own pleasure for any offence of the crew. The authority of any inferior officer to give blows exists only when it is at the very moment, absolutely required by the necessities of the ship's service to compel the performance of duty . . . in a moment of peril to the ship, or in self-defence." Elwell v. Martin, 1 Ware (U. S.) 53, 45, where the subject is carefully examined. U. S. v. Taylor, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 584; Murray v. White, 9 Fed. Rep. 562.

4. The paternal nature of his authority authorized personal chastisement as well as confinement. Fuller v. Colby, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 1, where the whole subject is carefully examined.

But the punishment must be moderate; he has not an arbitrary right. In Turner's Case, 1 Ware (U. S.) 83, the master was held justified, while in port, in chaining to the deck a cook who had twice deserted. See The Lothar Castle, 1st Hagg. Adm. 384; U. S. v. Wickham, 1 W. C. C. R. (U. S.) 316;

Watson v. Cristie, 2 Bos. & Pul. 224.

It must be decently administered. Cushman v. Lyon, 1 Story (U. S.) 91.

Flogging is now prohibited in the navy, by Rev. Stat. U. S., § 1624, art. 49, and on board vessels of commerce by Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4611. See Payne v. Allen, Sprague (U. S.) 304. A whaling ship is a vessel of commerce. U. S. v. Cutler, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 501. And cruel and unusual punishments, or beating, wounding, imprisoning or starving the crew without justifiable cause, or from malice, hatred or revenge, is forbidden under penalty. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 5347. Under this, however, flogging was not forbidden. U. S. v. Collins, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 194; U. S. v. Taylor, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 584; U. S. v. Freeman, 4 Mason (U. S.) 505. (Indictment for murder for sending aloft a sailor in a weak and sick condition, who fell overboard and was drowned.) The word crew in the statute includes an officer. U. S. v. Winn, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 209.

Confinement of sailor in irons should not be on mere suspicion. Joy v. Almy, 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 262; The Nimrod, 1 Ware (U. S.) 9; Turner's Case, 1 Ware (U. S.) *77, 83. Imprisonment on shore in foreign port, can be resorted to by the master for protection, where the presence of the offender would endanger the ship, but not as a punishment. Magee v. The Moss, Gilp. (U. S.) 219; Brown v. The Maiden, Gilp. (U. S.) 294; Wilson v. The Mary, Gilp. (U. S.) 31; The David Pratt, 1 Ware (U. S.) 495; The William Harris, 1 Ware (U. S.) 373; U. S. v. Ruggles, 5 Mason (U. S.) 192. And see SEAMEN. By statute, June 7th, 1872, Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4599. The master may arrest a deserter without warrant and bring him before a justice, or if there be no such court conveniences or the sailor does not so require, may convey him at once on board.

5. In Carleton v. Davis, 2 Ware (U. S.) 225 a belaying pin, and in Roberts v. Sholfield, 3 Ware (U. S.) 184, a slungshot, were held improper.

6. Murray v. Moultrie, 6 Car. & P.

A deadly weapon may be used to suppress mutiny, or even to compel obedience.¹

(b) As to Passengers.—The master may exercise such control over passengers as is necessary for the general safety and comfort. He must show a clear necessity to justify the use of force.²

III. THE DUTIES OF THE MASTER—1. As to Owners.—The master's duties require his general supervision of the ship and cargo,³ and the exercise of the highest skill and care for their safety.⁴ He must abide by the ship until the last, and use every human diligence and skill to save the property or its proceeds for the owners.⁵

25 (E. C. L. R.) 471; Krauskopf v. Ames, 7 Pa. L. J. 77 (4 Clark 100). Entry of the offence and punishment inflicted is required by Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4290.

1. Bee Adm. (U. S.) 248; Relf v. The Maria, 1 Pet. Adm. (U. S.) 186; Thorne v. White, 1 Pet. Adm. (U. S.) 168; Hart v. Littlejohn, 1 Pet. Adm. (U. S.) 115. Or where the seaman himself resorts to violence and weapons. U. S. v. Peterson, 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 305; The Palledo, 3 Ware (U. S.) 321; Brown v. Howard, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 120.

2. Obedience is an implied condition of the contract of carriage. Boyce v. Bailiffe, 1 Camp. 58. In Prendergast v. Compton, 8 Car. & P. (34 E. C. L. R.) 454, the passenger was held properly excluded from the cabin table for conduct unbecoming a gentleman and for threatening to beat the captain. See Chamberlain v. Chandler, 3 Mason (U. S.) 242. (Libel against master for ill-treating female passenger.) Krauskopf v. Ames, 7 Pa. L. J. 77 (4 Clark 100). Where damages were awarded against captain for beating with a cord a steerage passenger for kindling his cooking fire with tarred canvass against the regulations of the ship known to him; that the passenger was a Jew, offensive in his habits, and unable to speak English held no justification. In that case the court said: "The master has the absolute charge of his vessel, the absolute command of the crew, and a necessary control over his passengers. He may make proper regulations for their government such as may ensure their safety, promote the general comfort, and preserve decent order; and these regulations he may enforce by all temperate and needful exercise of power. But here his authority over his passengers finds its limits, and he is a trespasser if he go beyond it. He must show not only a breach of regulation before venturing to use force toward any one of them but that there was a clear necessity for the exercise of that degree of force. . . . Courteous request, patience and renewed remonstrance or reprimand; and at last just so much restraint, and if that be unavailing, just so much active force and no more as the exigency may call for; these are the legitimate rights of a captain over his passengers. . . .

By Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4263, master of vessel transporting passengers between United States and Europe is authorized to maintain good discipline and sanitary regulations among the passengers.

3. His duties to the cargo are that of common carrier. Elliott v. Rossell, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; King v. Shepherd, 3 Story (U. S.) 349. He must see to the loading and unloading. Wilson v. The Belvidere, 1 Pet. Adm. 258; The R. G. Winslow, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 13; Joliet S. S. Co. v. Yeaton, 29 Fed. Rep. 331; The Keystone, 31 Fed. Rep. 412; Brudge v. 220 Tons of Fish Scrap, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 141; s. c., 2 Fed. Rep. 783. And must take precautions against fire. New Jersey Steam Navigation Company v. The Merchant's Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344; Busk v. Royal Ins. Co., 2 Barn. & Ald. 73; Patapsco Ins. Co. v. Coulter, 3 Peters (U. S.) 222.

4. For skill in navigation, see Stone v. Ketland, 1 W. C. C. R. (U. S.) 142; Niagara v. Cordes, 21 How. (U. S.) 7.

5. In Duncan v. Reed, 39 Me. 415, where the ship was stranded and in Willard v. Dorr, 3 Mason (U. S.) 161, where the ship was condemned as a prize, the master was allowed wages up to final sale his duties being held to continue till then. See also Marshall v. The Union Ins. Co., 2 W. C. C. R. (U. S.) 452; Hannay v. The Eve, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 42; Simms v. The Mariners, 2 Pet. Adm. (U. S.) 393; The Saratoga, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 164; Powell v. The Betsy, 2 Brown (Pa.) 336. In the

2. As to Passengers.—The master is bound to protect passengers from personal injury and insult.¹ Towards women and minors he stands in loco parentis.² In case of a passenger or sailor falling overboard, he is bound both by law and contract to make every effort at rescue, consistent with safety to the ship and those on board.³

3. To the Crew.—The master is bound to see that the provisions for the crew are adequate and of good quality,⁴ and that medicine and antiscorbutics are supplied.⁵ In case of emergencies, such as accident or injury to a sailor, it is in the master's discretion to Niagara v. Cordes, 21 How. (U. S.) 7, where the vessel was partially wrecked and left in a leaky condition by the master in care of the crew with no proper effort to save the cargo, the court said: "Where a vessel is wrecked his obligation as agent for the owner continues to take all possible care of the vessel and cargo. He must show that no human skill or care could save the property." And see the Ocean Wave, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 317; The Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 435; Brown v. Lull, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 443; The Grand Turk, 1 Paine (U. S.) 73.

1. Nieto v. Clark, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 145. Where the master was justified in discharging in a foreign port a sailor who had attempted rape on female passenger. Flint v. The Norwich etc. Trans. Co., 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 158. Where a passenger was injured by accidental discharge of a musket in the hands of a soldier who was himself being transported with his company. Pendleton v. Kinsley, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 416. Where a passenger was injured by an officer in a dispute about his fare. 3 Mason (U. S.) 242. The Lord Derby, 17 Fed. Rep. 265. Where a passenger was injured by a watch dog kept on board.

2. In Smith v. Wilson, 13 Pitts. L. J. 538, where a minor passenger lost money to a gambler, and the master, when informed, had not compelled a restoration, the master was held liable in damages.

3. In U. S. v. Knowles, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 517, the master was indicted for manslaughter for allowing a sailor to drown who had fallen overboard. United States v. Holmes, 1 Wallace Jr. (U. S.) 1, was an indictment for manslaughter. The mate, eight seamen, and thirty-two passengers escaped in the long boat from a sinking ship. After twenty-four hours, the sea rising, and the overloaded boat being in danger, the prisoner and the crew during the night threw overboard fourteen male passengers. Two women also were either thrown over, or sacrificed themselves with their brothers. There was no fighting. The defence was homicide in self defence. The court examined at length the duty of seamen to passengers, holding that in emergencies the passenger has the superior right, saying: "The captain indeed and a sufficient number of seamen to navigate the boat must be preserved . . . but if there be more seamen than are necessary to manage the boat, the supernumerary sailors have no right for their safety to sacrifice the passengers. The sailors and passengers in fact cannot be regarded as in equal positions . . . and while we admit that sailor and sailor may lawfully struggle with each other for the plank which can save but one, we think that if the passenger is on the plank even the law of necessity justifies not the sailor who takes it from him." Where, however, some must be sacrificed but there is time to consult (as in case of starvation), the court approves a selection by lot as in some sort an appeal to God for the selection of the victim; but the necessity must be justified before the law.

4. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4564, fixes the lowest limit of quantity to be carried per man. See Sundry Mariners v. The Ship Washington, 1 Pet. Adm. (U. S.) 219; Ferrara v. The Talent, Crabbe (U. S.) 216; The Ship Elizabeth v. Rickers, 2 Paine (U. S.) 291; Pratt v. Thomas, 1 Ware (U. S.) 427; Coleman v. The Brig Harriet, Bee Adm. (U. S.) 80; The Elizabeth Frith, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 195; The Mary Paulina, Sprague (U. S.) 45; Foster v. Sampson, Sprague (U. S.) 182; Collins v. Wheeler, Sprague (U. S.) 188; Baxter v. Doe, 142 Mass. 558. See also Rev. Stat. (U. S.), §§ 4565 to 4568.

5. Rev. Stat. (U. S.), § 4569; The Phebe, 1 Ware (U. S.) 362; Freeman v.

seek the nearest port for surgical aid; there is no absolute duty to do so.¹ The master must protect the crew from abuse and prevent quarreling.²

Under the provisions of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the master sailing to a foreign port is required to give bond for the safe return of the ship's company to the United States. He is also required, at the request of the consul in a foreign port, to transport destitute seamen to the United States.³

IV. RIGHTS—1. In General.—The master's rights depend largely on the terms of his contract.⁴ He cannot trade on his own account, where his interests would conflict with those of his principals.⁵ He has no right to carry and maintain his wife and children at the ship's expense.⁶ He may secure an allowance for extra services,⁷ but not for wages of native attendant on himself while sick in foreign port.⁸ He is entitled to deduct from freight money for any liability incurred.⁹

Where the master navigates the vessel for his own exclusive benefit for a definite period, he is owner for the voyage, and as such is subject to the rights and liabilities of owner.¹⁰

Baker, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 372.

1. Peterson v. Chandos, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 544; s. c., 4 Fed. Rep. 645; Brown v. Overton, Sprague (U. S.) 462; Danvir v. Morse, 139 Mass. 323. He is liable for neglect in case of sickness. Bosquall v. The City of Carlisle, 39 Fed. Rep. 807. See SEAMEN.

2. Shorey v. Rennel, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 418; Anderson v. Ross, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 91. Duty to protect crew against assault by officers. Thorne v. White, 1 Pet. Adm. (U. S.) 168. Where the master fails to interfere to protect seamen from an assault by the mate, he is liable as a joint trespasser. Hanson v. Fowle, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 539; Jordan v. Williams, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 69; Thomas v. Lane, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 1.

3. See SEAMEN, where the authorities on this subject are collected.

4. Woodbury v. Brazier, 48 Me. 302; Miller v. Livingston, 1 Caines (N. Y.) 349; Brown v. Hicks, 24 Fed. Rep. 811.

5. Thompson v. Havilock, 1 Camp. 527; Mathewson v. Clark, 6 How. (U. S.) 122. But the right to carry goods for himself or others, for his own advantage depends largely upon usage. Vose v. Morton, 5 Gray (Mass.) 594; Rennell v. Kimball, 5 Allen (Mass.) 356; King v. Lenox, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 235.

6. In Marshall v. Crawford, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 37, it was held that the master without special contract had no right to carry his wife and child at the ship's expense. In Winsor v. Sampson, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 548, the master was allowed the use of vacant state rooms, freight for his piano which was also used by the ship's company, and for repairs for a chronometer owned by him but also used by the ship.

7. In String v. Hill, Crabbe (U. S.) 451, he was allowed for painting the ship. In Woodbury v. Brazier, 48 Me. 302, where the master was discharged in a foreign port he was held not entitled to his expense of passage home. See also McGilvery v. Stockpole, 38 Me. 283; Kohler v. Wright, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 318.

8. Sunday v. Gordon, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 569.

9. Thus he may maintain freight to pay seamen. Goodridge v. Lord, 10 Mass. 483. See also Lewis v. Hancock, 11 Mass. 72.

10. In Lincoln v. Wright, 23 Pa. St. 76, 81, BLACK, C. J., said: That the possession, control and management of a vessel, the right to direct her destination and receive her earnings, would fix the responsibility of a person for supplies whether he had the legal title or not. The master in such a case is liable as a carrier. Tyler v. Holmes, 38 Me. 258; Nash v. Parker, 38 Me. 489; Decker v. Furniss, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 291. He is also liable for damages sustained during the voyage. For other cases on this subject see CHARTER PARTY.

2. Wages.—The master contracts with the owners on their personal credit.¹ He has no lien on the ship for his wages,² but has a lien on the freight in his hands for wages, payments made and liabilities incurred for the ship.³ Capture or shipwreck terminates the contract, but his wages continue until his duties end.⁴ When discharged in foreign port, he is entitled to three months' wages as a mariner,⁵ but not to home passage.⁶

V. LIABILITY—1. On Contracts.—In contracting for the ship's benefit, the master binds himself as well as the owners,⁷ unless it affirmatively appears that credit was given to the owners alone.⁸ If the credit is given to the master alone, he alone is liable.⁹

2. For Misconduct.—The master is civilly liable to the owners or to third persons for any injury resulting from his unskilfulness or negligence,¹⁰

1. Fisher v. Willing, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 118.

2. Willard v. Dorr, 3 Mason (U. S.) 91; Ingersol v. Van Bokkelen, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 314; Richardson v. Whiting, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 530. The authorities on this subject are collected under MARITIME LIENS.

3. Moore v. Jones, 15 Mass. 424; Ship Packet, 3 Mason (U. S.) 255; Fisher v. Willing, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 118. See Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4526. See MARITIME LIENS.

4. Smith v. Gilbert, 4 Day (Conn.) 105; Durcan v. Reed, 39 Me. 415; Willard v. Dorr, 3 Mason (U. S.) 161; Hammond v. The Essex F. & M. Ins. Co., 4 Mason (U. S.) 196; Thompson v. Rowcroft, 4 East 34; Furguson v. Fitt, 1 Hayw. (N. C.) 239; Phillips v. McCall, 4 W. C. C. R. (U. S.) 141; Bergstrom v. Mills, 3 Esp. 36; Hawkins v. Turzell, 5 Ellis & B. 883; McGilveny v. Stockpole, 38 Me. 283; Strong v. Hill, Crabbe (U. S.) 454; Winsor v. Sampson, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 548.

5. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4562, opinion Attorney General 458.

6. Woodbury v. Brazier, 48 Me. 302.

7. Jarman v. Bennet, 2 Strange R. 816; Rich v. Coe, Cowp. 636; Leonard v. Huntingdon, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 298; Marguand v. Webb, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 89; The Leonidas, Olc. (U. S.) 12; James v. Bixby, 11 Mass. 34; Stirling v. Loud, 10 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 542; 33 M. & R. 436. He is personally liable for wages of crew earned while he was master. Smith v. Oakes, 141 Mass. 451.

8. Snyder v. Hurd, 8 Tex. 98; Farmer v. Davis, 1 Tenn. 108; Farrel v. McClellan, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 302.

9. In James v. Bixby, 11 Mass. 35, 36,

PARKER, J., said: "It is settled that, if the master procures necessary repairs to be done without any express contract, an implied obligation arises as well against the owners as against himself, to pay for such repairs. But even this admits of the exception, that, where there is a special promise by the master, the owner is not liable; and e converso, where there is a special promise by the owners, the master is discharged from obligation."

In the early case of Jarman v. Bennet, 2 Strange 816, it was held that prima facie the repairer of a ship has his election to sue the master who employs him, or the owners; but if he undertakes it on a special promise from either, the other is discharged.

In Hussey v. Allen, 6 Mass. 162, PARSONS, C. J., said: "When necessary supplies are to be furnished for a vessel on her voyage, and from home, the merchant may furnish them on the credit of the vessel, by taking a hypothecation, or on the credit of the master by his consent, or on the credit of all who are owners at the time the supplies are furnished."

In Thorn v. Hicks, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 696, it was held that where an exclusive credit is given to the master, the owners are not liable.

10. In Stone v. Ketland, 1 W. C. C. R. 142, it was said: "It is not sufficient that he exercise his best judgment. It must be the judgment of a skilled and careful commander. See also Purviance v. Angus, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 180. The Gentlemen, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 396. Where the captain sailed with an incompetent crew, but was held not liable under the circumstances. Marshall v. Crawford, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 37. Where the proand also as to a statutory penalty.¹ He is liable as a trespasser for malicious and vindictive punishment,² and for manslaughter for causing the death of any person by negligence, misconduct or inattention to duty.³

He is also liable to numerous statutory penalties, the most important being for maliciously,⁴ and without justifiable cause,⁵ forcing⁶ any mariner or officer on shore, in a foreign port, in order to leave him behind, and refusing to bring home all who are in condition and willing to return; for refusal to pay wages and charges;⁷ for failure to keep and produce list of ship's company on foreign voyage;⁸ for refusing to give passage to destitute seamen at consul's request, when bound home.⁹

The master is also liable for the unskilfulness or lineggence of his officers or crew.¹⁰ visions were insufficient and the master was compelled to return. Freeman v. Walker, 6 Me. 68; Watkinson v. Langton, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 213. Where the master was held liable for goods stolen. Nisson v. Wessels, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 483; Van Syckel v. The Thomas Ewing, Crabbe (U. S.) 405; s. c., 5 Pa. L. J. 301, where it was held the master was justified in following a pilot boat up the bay at night, having failed himself to obtain a pilot. The Montana, 17 Fed. Rep. 377. For running ashore in a fog. The Packer, 28 Fed. Rep. 156; The Noddleburn, 28 Fed. Rep. 855; Withcofsky v. Wier, 32 Fed. Rep. 301; Knox v. Nenetta, Crabbe (U. S.) 534.

1. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4602, provides that any master who by wilful breach of duty or drunkenness does or omits any act, whereby the safety of the ship, or of any person, is endangered, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

2. Dinsman v. Wilkes, 7 How. (U. S.) 89, and 12 How. (U. S.) 390; Sheridan v. Furbur, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 423; United States v. Taylor, 5 McLean (U. S.) 242; Sumn. (U. S.) 584. Indictment under act congress for beating, etc. Payne v. Allen, Sprague (U. S.) 304; United States v. Collins, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 194; Riley v. Allen, 23 Fed. Rep. 46. Beating a roustabout. United States v. Beyer, 31 Fed. Rep. 35; Sampson v. Smith, 15 Mass. 365. Assault for refusal to wash mate's clothes after hours, unjustified. Jarvis v. Sherwood, Bee Adm. 248; Rice v. The Polly & Kitty, 2 Pet. Adm. 240. And see Rev. Stat. U. S., § 5347. One acting as master is liable under this statute. United States v. Nice, 30 Fed. Rep. 490. But in such cases the courts will not limit the master's discretion too nicely. But- ler v. McLellan, 1 Ware (U. S.) 219, *220; Elwell v. Martin, 1 Ware (U. S.) 53; United States v. Cutler, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 501; United States v. Freeman, 4 Mason (U. S.) 505; Thorne v. White, 1 Pet. Adm. 168; Morris v. Corneil, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 62; Thompson v. Busch, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 338; United States v. Taylor, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 584.

3. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 5344; United States v. Farnham, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 528; United States v. Taylor, 5 McLean (U. S.) 42; United States v. Knowles, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 517; United States v. Holmes, 1 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 1.

4. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 5363.

5. U. S. v. Ruggles, 5 Mason (U. S.) 192; United States v. Coffin, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 394. As to justifiable cause. Speyer v. The Mary Belle Roberts, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 1; United States v. Netcher, 1 Story (U. S.) 307. Imprisonment on shore for fault is forcing.

6. United States v. Riddle, 4 W. C. C. (U. S.) 644. Physical force not necessary.

7. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4563.

8. Rev. Stat. U. S., 4575. See The Atlantic, Abb. Adm. 451; Lamb v. Briard, Abb. Adm. 367; Miner v. Harbeck, Abb. Adm. 546; The Schooner Eagle, Olc. Adm. 232; The Ship Moslam, Olc. Adm. 289; Jordan v. Williams, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 69; Snow v. Wope, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 301; Campbell v. Steamer Uncle Sam, 1 McAll. (U. S.) 77; The Strathairly, 124 U. S. 558.

9. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 4578; Matthew v. Offley, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 115.

10. Angus v. Parviance, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 180. The principle of respondet superior applies. He is not liable for the negligence of a pilot, the pilot is master pro hac vice. Suell v. Rich, 1 Johns.

MATERIAL.—(a) Any article used in building or repairing houses, ships, etc.¹

(b) adj. Of the substance; essential; important.²

MATTER.—(a) Whatever is perceptible by the senses; any material.³

(b) The subject of legal action, consideration, complaint or defense.⁴

(c) Some substantial or essential thing; opposed to form.⁵

(N. Y.) 305. Where the master was not on board. Bussey v. Donaldson, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 206; Smith v. Condry, 1 How. (U. S.) 28. But in Denison v. Seymour, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 9, where the pilot was employed by the owners, and had exclusive direction of the course of the vessel though bound to stop or proceed at the captain's order, the master was yet held liable for his negligence. See also Nicholson v. Mounsey & Symes, 15 East 383, where the captain of war vessel was held not responsible as a master, he not appointing his inferior officer. Hugges v. Montgomery, 5 Bos. & Pul. 446; The E. M. Norton, 15 Fed. Rep. 686.

1. Moyer v. Pennsylvania State Co., 71 Pa. St. 293; Hundhausen v. Bond, 36 Wis. 29.

2. Anderson's Law Dict.

Material for a Building.—The earth excavated from a building lot, merely to prepare such lot for the erection of a building thereon, and placed in an adjoining street for removal elsewhere, cannot be regarded as "building material" within the meaning of a city ordinance. Hundhausen v. Bond, 39 Wis. 29.

An act incorporating a slate company (act of June 25th, 1864, § 7; Pamph. L. 947, Pennsylvania) provided that the stockholders should be individually liable "for debts due mechanics, workmen and laborers employed by the company, and for materials furnished." This did not include hauling, repairing wagons, lumber for erecting machinery, provender for horses used for the company, powder for blasting, tools, etc. "Materials" refers to that only which forms part of the products of the company. Moyer v. Pennsylvania Slate Co., 71 Pa. St. 293. See MECHANICS' LIEN for a full collection of authorities as to what constitutes "material for a building."

"Material Defendant."—A party is a "material defendant" whose interest is antagonistic to complainant's and against whom relief is prayed. Waddell Admr. v. Lanier, 54 Ala. 440.

What Is a Material Issue.—In common law actions it is one which is decisive of the cause. In equity, it is an issue upon a fact which has some bearing upon the equity sought to be established. Wooden v. Waffle, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 145.

Material Fact.—A representation of a fact not material, although untrue, will not vitiate a policy of insurance. Curry v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 6 Wheel. Am. C. L. 204.

Material Allegation.—"No allegation can be deemed material unless an issue taken upon it, whether of law or fact, will decide the cause, so far as relates to the particular cause of action to which the allegation refers. Newman v. Otto, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 670.

A statement of claim, after alleging a promise by the defendant to marry the plaintiff, went on to allege, in paragraph 4, that, "the plaintiff relying upon the said promise permitted the defendant to debauch and carnally know her, whereby the defendant infected her with a venereal disease. It then alleged a breach of the said promise. An order having been made at chambers to strike out paragraph 4 of the claim, held, reversing the decision of the common pleas division, that the order was wrongly made, that the facts alleged in the paragraph complained of were "material facts," and as such were properly pleadable. Millington v. Loring, L. R., 6 Q. B. D. 190.

"Material."—As used in statutes against perjury construed in State v. Brown, 79 N. C. 642.

3. Anderson's Law Dict.

4. Nelson v. Johnson, 18 Ind. 332.

5. Douglas v. Beasley, 40 Ala. 148.

"New matter constituting a defense" is not pleaded by averments which simply deny the allegations of the complaint, but only when they constitute a statement of facts, the proof of which avoids the legal conclusion otherwise to be drawn from the statement of facts in the complaint. It is in the nature of a plea of confession and avoidance. Craig v. Cook, 28 Minn. 234.

Matter of Law.—That which is to be ascertained by reasoning from the established rules of law, or from the enactments of the legislature. The court is to determine matters of law. Rap. & La. Law Dict.: Lovinier Exr. v. Pearce, guardian, 70 N. Car. 167.

Matter of Fact—In Pleading.—Matter the existence or truth of which is determined by the senses or by reasoning based upon their evidence. The decision of such matters is referred to the jury. Hob. 127; 1 Greenl. Ev. 49.

Matter in Pais (literally, matter in the country.)—Matter of fact, as distinguished from matter of law or matter of record. Bouv. Law Dict.

Matter in Deed.—Such matter as may be proved or established by a deed or specialty; matter of fact, in contradistinction to matter of law. Co. Litt. 320; Steph. Pl. 197.

Matter of Record.—Some judicial matter or proceeding entered upon one of the records of the court, and of which the court takes peculiar cognizance. Thus the judgments in actions in the courts of record, being matter which is entered upon the records of the court and filed with its officer, are thence termed matters of record. Rap. & La. Law Dict.

"Material New Matter."—In Nelson v. Johnson, 18 Ind. 332, PERKINS, J., observes: "Section 586 of the code (Ind.) authorizes a review of a judgment upon a complaint filed within three years after the rendition of the judgment. The review may be had for errors appearing on the face of the record, and for 'material new matter' discovered after its rendition. New matter is a different thing from new evidence. 'Matter,' as the word is used in law, means a fact or facts constituting the whole or a part of a ground of action or defence. Evidence is that which tends to prove or disprove the existence of such fact or facts. A new trial could not be granted, even at the term, for new matter discovered after the trial, because the new matter would have to go into the pleadings before proof of it would be allowed.

"New Matter" in Pleading.—See Gould's Pl. 156; Story's Eq. Pl., § 404; 3 Bla. Com. 309, 313.

"Matters and Proceedings in Bankruptcy."—See Kidder v. Horrobin, 72 N. Y. 159-167.

"Matter in Controversy."—Where, in an action of tort in this court, the plaintiff lays his damages at $500 or upwards and the jury find a less sum, he is entitled to costs. In cases of tort the sum demanded in the narr. is the "matter in controversy." Hancock v. Barton, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 269.

The damages allowed by law, upon affirmance of a county court judgment by a superior court of law, are not to be reckoned as part of the "matter in controversy" for the purpose of giving the court of appeals jurisdiction. If therefore the judgment be for less than $100 but would amount to more, by adding the damages, upon affirmance, an appeal does not lie to the court of appeals. Melson v. Melson's Admr., 2 Munf. (Va.) 542.

Under the existing acts of assembly, in all cases where this court has jurisdiction, costs are of course. Therefore a plaintiff is entitled to costs although he recover less than fifty pounds, provided the "matter in controversy" be $500 or upwards. If a declaration on a policy of insurance contain a count for a total loss, and a count for money had and received, etc., for a return of premium, and the jury find a verdict for the defendant on the first count, and on the count for money had and received, etc., a verdict for the plaintiff, for a less sum than $500, the plaintiff is entitled to costs; all disputes arising out of the same policy being "the matter in controversy between the parties." Wurts v. McFaddon, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 78.

The "Matter in Demand."—As used with reference to suits in equity, does not necessarily mean a money demand, but the pecuniary value of the matter in controversy. Blakeslee v. Murphy, 44 Conn. 188.

"Matter in Dispute."—See Mason v. Oglesby, 2 La. An. 793; Pugoe v. Corregolles, 5 Rob. (La.) 90; Frellsen v. Copley, 2 La. An. 911; Owen v. Boyd, 7 La. An. 109; City of New Orleans v. Imley, 12 La. An. 87; Wilson v. Daniel, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 404; Rush v. Cobbet, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 275; Dumphy and Hildrith v. Guindon, 13 Cal. 28; Thrasher v. Haynes, 1 Wheel. Am. C. L. 427; Malcolm v. Fullarton, 2 T. R. 645; Ravee v. Farmer, 4 T. R. 146; Ingram

MATURE—MATURITY.—The time when a bill of exchange or promissory note becomes due.¹

v. Milnes, 8 East 445; Fisher v. Pimbley, 11 East 193.

"For Matter of Form."—The plaintiff's assignee in bankruptcy commenced an action in his own name, to enforce this claim and failed, because it was brought in the name of the wrong party, the present plaintiff then and now being the owner, having purchased it of the assignee. Held, that the failure was "for matter of form" within section 973 R. L. (Vermont), whereby a claim is saved from the operation of the statute of limitations; and that this claim was not barred, the second action having been commenced within one year from the determination of the original action. Premo v. Lee, 56 Vt. 60; Goff v. Robinson, 60 Vt. 633; Spear v. Braintree, 47 Vt. 729.

"A Matter Depending in the Court."—The act 3 Geo. IV, ch. 102, giving increased jurisdiction to the court, is to be construed liberally for the dispatch of business; and an affidavit sworn during term is sufficient to bring the subject matter before the court, as "a matter depending in the court" within the terms of the act and the king's warrant founded thereon. Ex parte Smith, 7 Dowl. & Ry. 382.

"Matters of subsistence for man" comprehend all articles or things, whether animal or vegetable, living or dead, which are used for food, and whether they are consumed in the form in which they are bought from the producer or are only consumed after undergoing a process of preparation, which is greater or less according to the character of the article. Slodd v. Commonwealth, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 813.

¹ See Bills & Notes, vol. 2, p. 396.

"To be Mature" Equivalent to "To be Suable."—In Taylor v. Mayor etc., City of New York, 82 N. Y. 18, FOLGER, C. J., observes: "The phrases 'cause of action' and 'right of action' are used, because ordinarily, and in the absence of some especial circumstance, when a debt is mature it may be demanded and sued upon, and payment of right and by its terms be then exacted; because, in general, the phrases "to be mature" and "to be suable" both express the same fact as to the debt. It is the condition or state of the demand at the time that is looked at. See also Wells v. Stewart, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 40; Martin v. Kunz Muller, 37 N. Y. 396.

In Osborne & Co. v. Campbell, 6 Lanc. Law Rev. 206, an action was brought against the defendant on the following contract endorsed on the back of a note given by S. G. Welliver to the plaintiff.

"For value received I or we hereby guarantee the payment of the within note at maturity and at all times thereafter, and waive demand, protest and notice of nonpayment thereof. (Signed) W. A. Campbell."

RICE, P. J., observes: "Though the word guarantee is used, yet as the guaranty is to pay 'when due' or 'at maturity' the undertaking obviously has reference to the liquidation of the note at the time specified, and not to the solvency of the maker."

Maturity in a Will.—In Executors of Conduct v. King, 13 N. J. E. 380, the chancellor observes: "The term maturity is not synonymous with legal majority. As used by the testator, it may well be held to import maturity of mind and character, the combined result of age and education."

"Pay Bonds at Maturity."—As commonly understood, the word "maturity," in its application to bonds and other similar instruments, applies to the time fixed for their payment, which is the termination of the period they have to run. A provision in a charter that the grants thereby made are upon the condition that the company "shall pay said bonds at maturity," while it implies an obligation to pay both principal and interest when the bonds shall become due, does not imply an obligation to pay the interest as it semi-annually accrues. United States v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 91 U. S. 72.

"After Maturity."—Where a promissory note payable on a certain day bears interest "after maturity," interest should be computed from the day

MAY—(See also INTERPRETATION; STATUTES; WILLS)—

1. Definition.—Is permitted to; has liberty to.¹ The word "may" in a statute is sometimes used in a mandatory, and sometimes in a directory and permissive sense. It has always been construed "must" or "shall" whenever it can be seen that the legislative intent was to impose a duty and not simply a privilege or discretionary power,² and where the public is interested and the public or third persons have a claim de jure, to have the power exercised.³ But it is only where it is necessary to give effect to the clear policy and intention of the legislature that it can be construed in a mandatory sense, and where there is nothing in the connection of the language or in the sense and policy of the provision to require an unusual interpretation, its use is merely permissive and discretionary.⁴

In contracts, deeds, wills and other private writings the construction of the word must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case, its relation to the context of the instrument in some cases being the test. While in others it may be interpreted solely by the intention of the party creating the instrument.⁵

fixed for payment, and not from the expiration of the days of grace. Wheless v. Williams & Daniels, 62 Miss. 369; Bank of Utica v. Wager, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 766; Weems v. Ventress, 14 La. An. 267.

The words "at maturity" refer to and include the whole day, unless specially and distinctly limited to a certain hour of the day. Leigh v. Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. of New York, 26 La. An. 436.

Matured.—A judgment is matured (within meaning of 2 Ind. Rev. Stat., p. 62, § 51, requiring a set-off to be "matured") although the time of stay of execution has not expired. Hays v. Boyer, 59 Ind. 341.

1. Bouv. L. Dict.

2. Thompson v. Lessee of Carroll, 22 How. (U. S.) 434; Mason v. Fearson, 9 How. (U. S.) 248.

3. Malcolm v. Rodgers, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 193.

4. Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 64.

5. McIntyre v. McIntyre, 23 W. N. C. (Pa.) 42.

"May."—Should be construed, in a statute, to mean "shall" wherever the rights of third persons or the public good requires. Steines v. Franklin County, 48 Mo. 167; State v. Saline County Court, 48 Mo. 390; James v. Dexter, 112 Ill. 489.

In construing statutes the word "may" will be considered as mandatory only, for the purpose of sustaining or enforcing, but not for creating a right. State v. Holt Co., 39 Mo. 521.

The words "may" and "shall" should be considered in the construction of the law as convertible terms. Cooke v. Spears, 2 Cal. 412.

Mandatory.—In the following cases the word "may" has been held to be mandatory:

Rex v. Barlow, Carth. 293, Salk. 609, "that church wardens may make a rate." See also Rex v. Derby, Skin. 370.

Blackwell's Case, 1 Vern. 152, that the chancellor may grant a commission of bankrupt.

Rex v. Hastings, 1 Dowl. & R. 148, that the mayor might for the future hereafter have and hold . . . a court of record.

Ticknor v. McClelland, 84 Ill. 471, that a chattel mortgage may be acknowledged before a justice of the peace of the town or district where the mortgagor resides.

State v. State Canvassers, 36 Wis. 498, that if any election returns shall be found to be so informal or incomplete that the board cannot canvass them, they may dispatch a messenger to the inspectors who made the returns, etc.

People v. Brooks, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 457, that affidavits may be taken before commissioners of deeds. See also Caniff v. New York, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 430.

Adriance v. Supervisors, 12 How. Pr. N. Y. 224, that supervisors may correct an erroneous assessment.

Randolph Co. v. Rolls, 18 Ill. 29, that all actions against any county may be prosecuted in the circuit court of that county. See also Schuyler Co. v. Mercer Co., 9 Ill. 20.

St. Louis R. v. Teters, 68 Ill. 144, that a court may grant a continuance, if the absence of one of the attorneys is occasioned by his being a member of the legislature, and then in attendance on its sessions.

Gillinwater v. Mississippi R., 13 Ill. 3, that a certain number of corporators may present a petition to the legislature before they become incorporated. See also Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 64.

Chicago & A. R. v. Howard, 38 Ill. 414. Where one section of an act provides that a common informer "may" sue for a penalty, another that the State's attorney "may" sue, the latter has no exclusive right to bring suit.

Rockwell v. Clark, 44 Conn. 534, that when any married woman shall carry on any business, and any right of action shall accrue to her therefrom, she may sue upon the same as if she were unmarried. See also Rumsey v. Lake, 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 339; Van Cleve v. Rook, 11 Vr. (N. J.) 25.

Mason v. Pearson, 9 How. (U. S.) 243, a provision, that a municipality may sell one lot for the taxes assessed on several, restricts them to selling only one if that will produce the amount. See also Thompson v. Carroll, 22 How. (U. S.) 434.

Walley's Case, 11 Nev. 260, that the court may, of its own motion, or on application, set apart for the use of the family of the deceased all personal property which is by law exempt from execution. See also Balentine's Case, 45 Cal. 696.

Stines v. Franklin Co., 48 Mo. 167, that an act concerning issuing bonds for roads, etc, provided that before any expenditures shall be made the county courts may, for the purpose of information, submit the amount of the proposed expenditures to the voters of the respective counties.

People v. Commissioners, 4 Neb. 150, that county commissioners may let contracts to the lowest responsible bidder.

Low v. Dunham. 61 Me. 566, that in proceedings to enforce a maritime lien, the court may issue an order to sell the vessel.

Supervisors v. United States, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 435, that a board of supervisors may, if deemed advisable, levy a special tax.

Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705, that a city council may, if it believe that the public good and the best interests of the city require it, levy a tax to pay its funded debt. See also Cairo v. Campbell, 116 305.

Phelps v. Hawley, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 160; 52 N. Y. 23, that if a private bridge be destroyed and not rebuilt by the company within a certain time, it shall thereupon become a public bridge and may be maintained at the expense of the county. See also Newport Bridge Case, 2 El. & El. 377.

Scully v. Ackmeyer, 2 Cin. (Ohio) 296, that an assessment may be recovered in the name of the city.

Barnes v. Thompson, 2 Swan. (Tenn.) 313, that a mechanic's lien may be enforced by attachment.

Hines v. Lockport, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 378, that a common council may make streets, sidewalks and repair them. See also New York v. Furze, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 612; People v. Brooklyn, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 404.

State v. Buckles, 39 Ind. 272, that a State auditor may draw his warrant on the treasurer.

Blake v. Portsmouth R., 39 N. H. 435, that any corporation whose powers expire by limitation may continue to be a body corporate for three years thereafter, for the purpose of prosecuting and defending suits.

See also Medbury v. Swan, 46 N. Y. 202; Baldwin v. New York, 2 Keyes (N. Y.) 411; Re Goddard's Estate, 94 N. Y. 552; People v. Livingston Co., 6 Hun (N. Y.) 574; L. I. R. Co. v. Conklin, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 386; N. Y. & E. R. Co. v. Coburn, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 224; Grantman v. Hall, 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 466; Pumpelly v. Owego, 45 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 238; Waller v. Thomas, 42 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 342; People v. New York Co., 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 121; Ex parte Chase, 43 Ala. 311; Horst v. Moses, 48 Ala. 148; Vason v. Augusta, 38 Ga. 545; Leavenworth & D. M. R. Co. v. Platte Co. Ct., 42 Mo. 175; Van Wagoner v. Patterson Gas Light Co., 23 N. J. L. 297; Kellogg v. Page, 44 Vt. 361; Fisher v. Clark, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 332; People v. Otsego Co., 51 N. Y. 401; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 28; Rock Island Co. v.

United States, 71 U. S. 435; Ralston v. Crittenden, 13 Fed. Rep. 508; Kennedy v. Sacramento, 19 Fed. Rep. 580; Schuyler Co. v. Mercer Co., 9 Ill. 20; Kane v. Footh, 70 Ill. 587; Jones v. Statesville, 97 N. Car. 86; Whitten v. State, 61 Miss. 718; Wright v. State, 5 Port. (Ind.) 290; State v. McGimpsey, 60 N. Car. 337; Leighton v. Maury, 76 Va. 870; Ex parte Lester, 77 Va. 673; Railroad Co. v. Royalston, 58 Vt. 234; Railroad Co. v. Mowatt, 35 Ohio St. 288; Spaulding v. Lees, 4 Mo. App. 351; Mitchell v. Pike, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 142; Reid v. Brambridge, 1 South. (N. J.) 351; Carhart v. Miller, 2 South. (N. J.) 573; Hagadon v. Roux, 72 N. Y. 583; Lyon v. Rice, 41 Conn. 245; Gilinwater v. Railroad Co., 13 Ill. 3; Blake v. Portsmouth etc. R. Co., 39 N. H. 435; People v. Brooks, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 457; Appleton v. Warner, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 270; State v. Board of Canvassers, 36 Wis. 498; Plank Road Co. v. Com., 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 237; Chetwood v. State Bank, 2 Halst. (N. J.) 32; Coopers v. Mayor, 55 Cal. 599; Bell v. Crane, L. R., 8 Q. B. 481; Bancroft v. Sawin, 3 N. E. Rep. 307; Johnston v. Pate, 95 N. Car. 68; Welsh v. Solenberger, 8 S. E. Rep. 92; Beau v. Simmons, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 389; James v. Dexter, 112 Ill. 489; Pacific R. Co. v. Reynolds, 8 Kan. 623; Beach v. Woodhill, Pet. C. C. (U. S.) 2; Lyon v. Rice, 41 Conn. 245; Estate of Ballentine, 45 Cal. 696; Quinn v. Wallace, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 452; Thompson v. Carroll, 22 How. (U. S.) 422; People v. Supervisors, 51 N. Y. 401; People v. Com., 4 Neb. 150; Seiple v. Borough of Elizabeth, 27 N. J. L. 407; Phelps v. Fadden, 125 Mass. 200; State v. Laughlin, 73 Mo. 443; Ex parte Whittington, 34 Ark. 394; Coopers v. Mayor, 55 Cal. 599; Rains v. Herring, 68 Tex. 468; Silvey v. United States, 7 Ct. Cl. 334; Hill v. Barge, 12 Ala. 692; Smith v. King, 14 Oreg. 10; City of Indianapolis v. McAvoy, 86 Ind. 587; Wormwood v. City of Waltham, 4 N. E. Rep. 194; Ex parte Simonton, 9 Port. (Ala.) 393; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala.) 28; People v. Otsego Co., 51 N. Y. 401; Nave v. Nave, 7 Ind. 122; Newburgh etc. Turnpike Co. v. Miller, 5 Johns. Ch. 124; People v. New York Co., 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 114; Com. v. Marshall, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 182; Norwegian Street, 81 Pa. St. 349; Knox v. Lee, 79 U. S. 457; Monmouth v. Leeds, 76 Me. 28; People v. Supervisors, 68 N. Y. 119; State v. Neuner, 49 Conn. 233; Com. v. Smith, 111 Mass. 497; Mc-Intosh v. H. & St. J. R. Co., 26 Mo. App. 377; Kohn v. Hinshaw, 20 Pac. Rep. (Oreg.) 629; Johnston v. Pate, 95 N. Car. 68.

Under the statute (Gen. Stat., tit. 19, ch. 5, § 11. Connecticut), which provides that "where any married woman shall carry on any business and any right of action shall accrue to her therefrom, she may sue upon the same as if she were unmarried," a suit can be brought only in her name. Rockwell v. Clark, 44 Conn. 534; Rumsey v. Lake, 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 339.

When, by statute, "a mortgage may be acknowledged before a justice of the peace of the town or district where the mortgagor resides," the word "may" is imperative and the district, in the statute, means election district. Ticknor v. McClelland, 84 Ill. 476.

The expression in section 123 of the Probate act (Nevada) "may set apart for the use of the family of the deceased," must be construed as imperative and mandatory as if it had read shall set apart. Estate of David Walley, 11 Nev. 260.

The words "may pay" in an insurance contract held to be "liable to pay." Fame Ins. Co.'s Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 397.

Directory.—In the following cases the word "may" has been held directory:

Bank's Case, 28 Ala. 28, that the trial of any person charged with an indictable offence may be removed to another county, on the application of the defendant, duly supported by affidavit. See also Kelly v. State, 52 Ala. 366.

Cross v. Pearson, 17 Ind. 612, that in a justice's court all matters of defence, except, etc., may be given in evidence without plea.

Reed v. Bainbridge, 1 South. (N. J.) 357, that an assignee of bonds, etc., may maintain an action of debt thereon in his own name. See also Carhart v. Miller, 2 South. (N. J.) 575.

Chetwood v. State Bank, 2 Halst. (N. J.) 32, that a plaintiff may assign as many breaches as he shall see fit. See also Shaeffer v. Jack, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 429.

Central R. v. Ingram, 20 Kan. 66, that a demand (of damages for killing stock on a railroad) may be made of any ticket agent or station agent of such railway company. See also Union Trust Co. v. Kendall, 20 Kan. 515; State v. Han. & St. Jos. R. Co., 51 Mo. 532, that suit may be commenced by serving the summons on any director, etc., of a corporation.

Mitchell v. Duncan, 7 Fla. 13, that on a proceeding to set aside a defective execution, and bond and affidavit given, execution may issue against the party making the affidavit and his sureties.

State v. Holt Co., 39 Mo. 521, that a court, if satisfied that an applicant is a person of good character, may grant him a tavern licence.

School District v. Sterricker, 86 Ill. 595, that the certificate of a school teacher may be in the form following (setting out a form). See also Davidson v. Gill, 1 East 64; Crosby v. School District, 35 Vt. 623; Apgar v. Trustees, 5 Vr. (N.J.) 311.

Kane v. Footh, 70 Ill. 587, that the court may, at the request of either party, require the jury to render a special verdict.

Fowler v. Perkins, 77 Ill. 271, that appeals in certain cases may be taken to the supreme court, does not repeal a prior statute allowing appeals in such cases to the circuit court. See also Hogan v. Devlin, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 184; Webb v. Robbins, 77 Ala. 180; Lewis v. State, 3 Head (Tenn.) 127, that on a jury's recommending a defendant in a capital case to mercy, the court may commute the punishment from death to imprisonment for life.

Com. v. Gable, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 423, that in indictments for involuntary manslaughter the attorney general may, by leave of the court, waive the felony and proceed as for a misdemeanor.

Com. v. Haines, 107 Mass. 194, that penalties for an offence may be recovered before any court of competent jurisdiction does not exclude an indictment for the same offence in the superior court. See also Hirschfelder v. State, 18 Ala. 112; Barnawell v. Threadgill, 5 Ired. Eq. (N.C.) 86; McKoin v. Cooley, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 559; Sifford v. Beatty, 12 Ohio St. 189, that in an action against a sheriff for the recovery of property taken under execution and replevied by the plaintiff, the court may, upon application of the defendant in execution, permit him to be substituted as defendant.

Cooke v. State Bank, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 339, that suits against any national bank may be had in any court of the United States held within the district where such bank is established, or in any state court in such district, does not exclude a suit in a state court against such bank located in another State.

Lovell v. Wheaton, 11 Minn. 92, that an award may be returned to any term of court held during the time limited by the submission. See, however, as to time in general, Birdsong v. Brooks, 7 Ga. 88; Stevenson v. Lawrence, 11 Am. Law Reg. 409; Free Press Asso. v. Nichols, 45 Vt. 7; Burlingame v. Burlingame, 18 Wis. 285; Bowman v. Blyth, 7 E. & B. 26-45.

Kelly v. Morse, 3 Neb. 224, that the court may require actual notice to be given to either party, where it appears necessary and proper before acting on an award of arbitrators. See also Cole v. Green, 6 M. & G. 872; Corliss v. Corliss, 8 Vt. 373.

Caldwell v. State, 34 Ga. 10, that of two or more defendants jointly indicted for any offence, any one defendant may be tried separately.

Bauseneer v. Mace, 18 Ind. 27, that public sales of lands may be in parcels so that the whole amount may be realized. See also Cunningham v. Cassidy, 17 N. Y. 276.

Darby v. Condit, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 599, that the court may, in its discretion, require security for costs of an executor.

Allen v. Wells, 22 Ind. 118, that the court, where a cause is transferred to a higher court because the title of land is involved, may tax all costs made in the former court. See also MacDougall v. Patterson, 11 C. B. 755; Jones v. Harrison, 6 Exch. 328; Crake v. Powell, 2 El. & Bl. 210.

Buffalo Plank Road v. Commissioners, 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 237, that every person liable to do highway labor, living or owning property on the line of any plank road, may, by application in writing, be assessed his proportion of the assessment for the labor on such highway.

Bell v. Crane, L. R., 8 Q. B. 481, that every authority having power to impose rates may exempt a building used as a Sunday or ragged school from any rate.

As to who may be assessed, Curtis v. Richland, 56 Mich. 478; McMaster v. Lomax, 2 Myl. & K. 32, that the court may issue an attachment for contempt, for want of an answer, "if they shall so think fit."

Cutter v. Howard, 9 Wis. 309, that the court may remove an executor for certain specified causes (although one of the causes exists).

Kelly v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 83, that a common council may pass ordinances for abating nuisances, etc., as they shall deem expedient. See also Goodrich v. Chicago, 20 Ill. 445.

Ridley v. Ridley, 24 Miss. 648, that in attachments against nonresidents, the court may order notice of the attachment to be published in a newspaper of the State. See also Cory v. Lewis, 2 South. (N. J.) 846; State v. Click, 2 Ala. 26.

Nave v. Nave, 7 Ind. 122, that in divorce suits, witnesses may be examined orally in open court.

State v. Sweetser, 53 Me. 438, that an indictment may be found and tried in the county where the offender resides or where he is apprehended.

Dean v. White, 5 Iowa 266, that a corporation having an office in any county may be sued in that county.

Malcom v. Rogers, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 188, that heirs shall or may recover in one writ or action, as heirs of the deceased person.

New York & E. R. v. Coburn, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 223, that on an appeal from an award of damages for lands condemned by commissioners, the court may direct a new appraisal.

Striker v. Kelly, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 9, that a resolution may not be passed by a common council without calling the ayes and noes. See also McKeene v. Weller, 11 Cal. 57; St. Louis v. Foster, 52 Mo. 513.

Williams v. People, 24 N. Y. 405, that for certain stealings the offender may be punished as for grand larceny.

When Word "May" Is Permissive.—The word "may," as used in G. L., ch. 136, § 9 (New Hampshire), which provides that on a petition for an account against a mortgagee, an issue of fact "may be determined by a jury," is to be taken in a permissive and not in a mandatory sense. Proctor v. Green, 59 N. H. 350; State ex rel. School Directors v. Police Jury, 40 La. An. 756.

The word "may" has also been held to be used in a permissive sense in the following cases: Cooke v. State Nat. Bank of Boston, 52 N. Y. 96; DeBevoort v. Welsh, 7 B. & C. 278; Com. v. Haynes, 107 Mass. 196; State v. Holt County Court, 39 Mo. 521; Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 46; Fowler v. Perkins, 77 Ill. 271; State v. Sweetser, 53 Me. 438; Devine's Case, 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 90; Medberry v. Swan, 46 N. Y. 200; Williams v. People, 24 N. Y. 405; People v. Henderson, 21 Pac. Rep. 146; The Mary N.

Hogan, 17 Fed. Rep. 814; Littlejohn v. Regents of Wisconsin University, 37 N. W. Rep. 346; The Shelbourne, 30 Fed. Rep. 52; Cutler v. Howard, 9 Wis. 309; Phillips v. Fadden, 125 Mass. 199; Steins v. Franklin Co., 48 Mo. 167.

When the charter for a log driving company provides that "the company may drive all logs and other timber" in a certain stream, the word may is to be construed as permissive and not imperative. But when the company accepts the privilege thus conferred of driving "all the logs," etc., it assumes a duty commensurate with the privilege conferred. By this acceptance it has the exclusive right to drive all the logs, and the duty to drive results. Weymouth v. Penobscot Log Driving Company, 71 Me. 29.

"May leave the same to her children" in a will; held, the word "may" is precatory only and not obligatory. McIntyre v. McIntyre, 23 W. N. C. (Pa.) 42.

As against the government the word "shall" when used in statutes is to be construed as "may" unless a contrary intention is manifest. Railroad Co. v. Hecht, 95 U. S. 168.

The word "shall" in an act will not be construed "may" unless it is absolutely necessary to prevent irreparable mischief. City Sewage Utilization Co. v. Davis, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 625.

The expression "the children which I may have," which is represented as not importing future children only, but referring also to those already born, admits either a prospective or retrospective sense, or both, as it is used indefinitely or with a definite meaning. A man speaking of such estate as he "may purchase" certainly means, in future; if of such as he may have purchased at the time of his death, he means both past and future. Wilkinson v. Adam, 1 Ves. & B. *442.

"May Exempt."—Under 32 & 33 Vict., ch. 40, § 1, which enacts that every authority having power to impose rates, "may exempt" a building used as a Sunday or ragged school from any rate; the rating authority have a discretion whether they will or will not exempt such a building. Bell v. Crane, L. R., 8 Q. B. 481.

"May" Confers a Power.—The word "may" in the thirteenth section of the County Courts Extension act, 13 & 14 Vict., ch. 61, which provides that in certain cases the court, or a judge at chambers, may by rule or order direct that the plaintiff shall recover his costs, is not used to give a discretion, but to confer a power upon the court and judges; and the exercise of such power depends, not upon the discretion of the court or judge, but upon the proof of the particular case out of which such power arises. MacDougall v. Patterson, 73 E. C. L. 755.

"May Receive."—A took B's notes for the use by B of a patent belonging to him, and agreed to credit on the notes "any amount he may receive from S for the use of said patent to this date, over $480." He had at that time received from S on that account $360, and soon after received $540 more. Held, that the $360 was not to be included in the calculation, the term "may receive" being properly applicable only to money thereafter received. Greene v. Robinson, 41 Conn. 470.

"May Advance."—The expression "may advance" in the written memorandum accompanying an equitable mortgage does not necessarily prevent the deposit from being a security for past advances. Ex part Smith, 2 Mont. D. & De G. 587.

"You May if You Please."—If A devise all her personal estate to B to be disposed of as B shall think fit, and add by parol, "you may, if you please, give £100 to my niece," B in a bill in the answer, to which the parol declaration is admitted, shall be decreed to pay the £100 to the niece. Nab v. Nab, 10 Mod. 404.

"May be."—The expression, in a statute, that "the county court in which any part of the route of the said railroad may be" may subscribe to the stock, is to be construed with reference to the situation of the subject matter. Used of a railroad already built, "may be" would be equivalent to "exist," "is built," "in operation," or the like. But referring to a road not yet built, not located or surveyed, nor organized, it must have a different meaning. County of Calloway v. Foster, 93 U. S. 573.

"May have" and "may have been" are presumably retrospective. Heeney v. Brooklyn Benevolent Society, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 363.

"May Saw."—The agreement is to deliver all the merchantable spruce plank "that they may saw," etc. These words are not promissory in their nature, except so far as relates to the delivery of plank which they shall saw during the ensuing winter; nor do they import a promise or undertaking to saw any particular or any quantity of merchantable spruce plank during the ensuing winter. Wemple v. Stewart, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 159.

"May summon" the master of a vessel to show cause why process should not issue against the vessel, means shall be at liberty, is permitted, to summon him. The Shelbourne, 30 Fed. Rep. 52.

"May be Made."—The covenant is to pay for "all the buildings" and improvements that may be made on said lands. It is not denied that this covenant is obligatory upon the plaintiff in this suit. The words may be made on said lands, may be understood as synonymous with "may have been made, or shall then be and remain on said lands." Van Rensselaer's Heirs v. Penniman, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 582.

In Phillips v. Fadden, 125 Mass. 201, AMES, J., observes: "The language of the new statute (St. of 1876, ch. 17, Massachusetts) is permissive rather than imperative. It provides that the offender may be apprehended and that when he has recovered from his intoxication the officer may make a complaint against him for the crime of drunkenness. But this change in the law from shall to may, although it undoubtedly leaves it to the sound judgment and discretion of the officer to decide whether the case requires the arrest of the offender, was not intended to change the purpose of the arrest when made. The words 'shall' and 'may' are not unfrequently equivalent terms." See also Worcester v. Scheisinger, 16 Gray (Mass.) 166.

The phrase "may in any wise" is not understood as synonymous with the terms "by any possibility," or "under any circumstances." Gregory v. Kanouse, 6 Halst. (N. J.) 62.

In the Following Cases the Word "Shall" Has Been Construed to be Discretionary or Directory.—New Castle Co. v. Bell, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 584; Holland v. Osgood, 8 Vt. 276; People v. Holly, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 481; Thompson v. Sergeant, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 452; Johnson v. Williams, 2 Tenn. 178; Attorney General v. Baker, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 521; York Railway v. Reg., 1 E. & B. 858; Rex v. Leicester, 9 D. & R. 772; Reg. v. South Weald, 5 B. & S. 391; Caldow v. Pixell, L. R., 2 C. P. D. 562; Wheeler v. Chicago, 24 Ill. 105; Parish v. Elwell, 46 Iowa 162; Stevenson v. Lawrence, 11 Am. Law Reg. 409; City Sewage Co. v. Davis, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 625; People v. Supervisors, 50 Cal. 561; MAYHEM—(See also CRIMINAL LAW).

- | | |
|----------------------------------|--|
| I. Definition, 985. | IX. Indictment, 995. |
| II. Maim, Maiming, 985. | X. Conviction of Lesser Offence, 996. |
| III. At Common Law, 985. | XI. Joinder of Offences, 996. |
| IV. English Statutes, 987. | XII. Responsibility of Conspirator for the Acts of His Co-conspirators, 997. |
| V. American Legislation, 989. | |
| VI. Felony or Misdemeanor, 991. | |
| VII. Intent, 993. | |
| VIII. Wilful and Malicious, 995. | |

I. DEFINITION.—Mayhem is the act of unlawfully and violently depriving another of the use of such of his members as may render him less able, in fighting, either to defend himself or annoy his adversary.¹

II. MAIM—MAIMING.—The word "maim" is not, according to the better use, a synonym for mayhem, which is a particular sort of aggravated maim.² But, like mayhem, it implies a permanent injury,³ or crippling,⁴ certainly when employed in reference to cattle.⁵ And such appears to be its general legal meaning.⁶

III. AT COMMON LAW.—Mayhem at common law is such bodily hurt as renders a man less able in fighting to defend himself or annoy his adversary, but if the injury be such as disfigures him only, without diminishing his corporal abilities, it does not fall within the crime of mayhem. Upon this distinction the cutting off, disabling, or weakening a man's hand or finger, or striking out an eye or foretooth, or castrating, or, as Lord Coke adds, breaking his skull, are said to be maims; but the cutting off of his ear or nose are not such at common law.⁷

Rodebaugh v. Sanks, 2 Watts (Pa.) 9; Colt v. Eves, 12 Conn. 243; Com. v. Commissioners, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 536; Ludlow v. Ludlow, 1 South. (N. J.) 394; Cason v. Cason, 31 Miss. 578; Justices v. House, 20 Ga. 328; Catterall v. Sweetman, 9 Jur. 591.

"It Shall and May be Lawful," Is Generally Mandatory.—Gray v. Locke, 3 Atk. 166; Stamper v. Miller, 3 Atk. 211; Simonton's Case, 9 Port. (Ala.) 390; Traver v. Commissioners, 17 Ala. 573; Rex v. Eye, 1 Barn. & Cress. 85; Chapman v. Milvane, 5 Exch. 61; Mason v. Fearson, 9 How. (U. S.) 237; Davison v. Davison, 2 Harr. (N. J.) 171. See, however, Verplank v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 84; Newburgh Co. v. Miller, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 112; Seiple v. Elizabeth, 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 407; Rex v. Commissioners, 2 Chit. 251; Bridgeman's Case, 1 Dr. & Sm. 164.

When Any Proceeding Is "Authorized."—Kellogg v. State Treas., 44 Vt. 356; People v. Supervisors, 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 114; Rogers v. Bowen, 42 N. H.

102; Milford v. Orono, 50 Me. 529; Veazie v. China, 50 Me. 518; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 3 Am. Law Reg. 292; Com. v. Johnson, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 275; Gould v. Hayes, 19 Ala. 462; Reg. v. Commissioners, 14 Ad. & El., N. S. 459; State v. Harris, 17 Ohio St. 608; Angle v. Runyon, 9 Vr. (N. J.) 403; Harris v. Supervisors, 52 Cal. 554. And see also Potter's Dwaris on Stat. 222, note 29.

1. Bouv. L. Dict.; Reg. v. Hagan, 8 C. & P. 167.

2. Bishop on Stat. Crimes, § 316, and authorities cited; Com. v. Newell, 7 Mass. 245, 247.

3. State v. Briley, 8 Port. (Ala.) 472.

4. Turman v. State, 4 Tex. App. 586.

5. 1 Car. & K. 539; Baker v. State, 4 Ark. 56.

6. State v. Briley, 8 Port. (Ala.) 472, where the same meaning was given to the word "disabling" in the statute.

7. 1 East P. C. 393; 1 Hawk. P. C. (Curw. ed.), p. 107, § 1; Reg. v. Hagan, 8 Car. & P. 167; 3 Inst. 62; 118 Staundf.

All maims are said to be felony; because anciently the offender had judgment of the loss of the same member which he had occasioned to the sufferer; but now the only judgment which remains at common law is of fine and imprisonment; from whence the offence seems to have been afterwards considered more in the nature of an aggravated trespass. Lord Coke accordingly classes it as an offence "under all felonies deserving death, and above all other inferior offences."¹

By the common law also, if a person maim himself, as for example, to have a more specious pretence for asking charity, or to prevent his being impressed as a sailor or enlisted as a soldier, he may be indicted, and, on conviction, fined and imprisoned.²

In order to found an indictment or appeal of mayhem, at com-38b; 2 Hawk., ch. 23, § 16; 3 Bla. Com. 121; 4 Bla. Com. 205.

In Bishop on Crim. Law, vol. 2, § 1001, note 2, a quotation from Pulton (De Pace Regis 1609, fol. 15, §§ 58 and 59), one of the earlier authorities, is as follows:

What Acts Are Mayhem.—"If a man do put out the eye, or cut off the hand, or foot, or any joynt of the hand or foot of another, it is maihem, though it be done by chaunce-meddly. (But if one man of malice pretended [prepensd?] do cut but the tongue, or put out the eyes of any of the King's subjects, it is felony.) And if one man doe crush the mouth or head of another, or break out his foreteeth, it is maihem, for with them he may defend himself in battaile; but to break his hinder teeth, or to cut off his nose or ears, whereby he looseth his hearing, is no maihem, but a deformitie, or blemish of his bodie, and no weakening of his strength. It is a maihem to pull any bone out of a man's hand, or cut off any finger of a man's hand, or to breake any of them so that they become shrunk up, it is maihem. To cut off the cheeke or jaw bone of any person, or so to crush or breake any of them that the same person is the lesse able to take his meat or drinke, is a maihem. If one person or more doe take another person by force, and put him in the stocks, or otherwise bind him fast, and after pour so much skalding hote oyle and vinegar, or hote melted lead, or other skalding liquor, upon any part of his bodie, and so continue it until it doth wast and consume the flesh of the same part and drie up and mortifie the vaynes and sinews of the same part, it is a maihem. If A doe strike at B, and the weapon wherewith he striketh, breaking or falling out of his hand by the force of the blow, doth put out the eyes of D, this shall be adjudged a maihem, for that A hath an intention at the first to doe some hurt in striking at B. The greatness or smallness of the wound in some of the cases aforesaid doth make the difference, whether it be a maihem or not."

Mr. Bishop then further quotes from Pulton, showing the distinction between mayhem as a felony or misdemeanor, the indictable crime, and mayhem as a civil tort and for which damages in money might be demanded: "Now, if the reader will read on, in Pulton, beyond the place whence the above passages are extracted, he will see that the mayhem of which this author is particularly treating is such as was punishable by the old and now obsolete process of appeal of mayhem; and, says (Jacob L. Dict., tit. Appeal): "Appeal of mayhem is the accusing one that hath maimed another; but this being generally no felony, it is in a manner but an action of trespass; and nothing is recovered by it but damages." Pulton, however, fol. 16, after saying that "An appeale of maihem is in effect but an action of trespass, wherein the plaintiffe shall recover damages according to the qualitie and quantitie of the offense," adds, "and the defendant shall be imprisoned." But as showing that the appeal is pretty purely a civil action, he mentions, fol. 17, that a plea of release of all demands, by the plaintiff, will avail the defendant in bar.

1. 1 East P. C. 393; also 1 Hawk., ch. 44, § 3; 2 Hawk., ch. 23, § 18; 4 Bla. Com. 205.

2. 1 Hawk. P. C. (Curw. ed.), p. 108, § 4.

mon law, the act must have been done maliciously; though it matters not how sudden the occasion.¹

It seems there can be no accessories before the fact in mayhem, at common law; though there appears to have been some difference of opinion, or rather misapprehension, upon the subject.² For supposing the offence to be in the nature of an aggravated trespass only, the rule will apply, that in crimes under the degree of felony there can be no accessories, but that all persons concerned therein, if guilty at all, are principals.³ It does not appear to have been anywhere supposed that there can be accessories after the fact in mayhem.⁴

IV. ENGLISH STATUTES.—The English statutes, as well as statutes in some of the United States, have greatly enlarged the scope of the offence of mayhem, which now includes all malicious injuries disabling to the person⁵.

1. 1 East P. C. 394.

2. 1 Russell on Crimes 719.

Lord Hale states there are no accessories before in mayhem, but that they are in the same degree as principals. (1 Hale 613.) Hawkins, on the contrary, says, that it seems there may be accessories before the fact in mayhem. (2 Hawk. P. C., ch. 29, § 5). In 1 East P. C., ch. 7, § 7, p. 401, there is a learned argument to show that the latter opinion proceeded on a mistake.

3. 1 Russell on Crimes 34.

4. 1 Hawk. P. C., ch. 55, § 13, and 2 Hawk. P. C., ch. 29, § 5; 1 East P. C., ch. 7, § 7, p. 401.

5. 1 Wharton Crim. Law, § 581.

English Statutes.—By statute 5, H. IV., ch. 5, to remedy a mischief which then prevailed of beating, wounding, imprisoning, or maiming persons, and after purposely "cutting their tongues or putting out their eyes" to prevent them from giving evidence against the perpetrators, it is enacted, that "in such cases the offenders that so cut tongues or put out the eyes of any, and that duly proved and found that such deed was done of malice prepensed, shall incur the pain of felony." That is, as Lord Coke explains it, if the act be done voluntarily and of set purpose, however sudden the occasion.

By stat. 37, H. VIII. ch. 6, if any person "maliciously, willingly, or unlawfully cut, or cause to be cut, off the ear or ears of any subject, otherwise than by authority of law, chance-medley, sudden affray, or adventure, he shall not only forfeit treble damages to the party grieved, to be recovered by action of trespass, but shall forfeit £10 to the king for every such offence, in the name of a fine."

But the principal and most severe statute upon this subject is that of 22 and 23 Car. II, ch. 1, commonly called the "Coventry Act," from the circumstances of its having passed on occasion of an assault made on Sir John Coventry in the street, and slitting his nose, by persons who lay in wait for him for that purpose, in revenge as was supposed for some obnoxious words uttered by him in parliament, in which he reflected on the profligate conduct of Charles II, in respect to his intercourse with actresses.

By 22 and 23 Car. II, ch. 1, it is enacted, "That if any person shall, on purpose and of malice aforethought, and by lying in wait, unlawfully cut out or disable the tongue, put out an eye, slit the nose, cut off a nose or lip, or cut off or disable any limb or member of any subject of his majesty, with intention in so doing to maim or disfigure, in any of the manners before mentioned, such his majesty's subjects, that then and in every such case the person or persons so offending, their counsellors, aidors and abettors, knowing of and privy to the offence as aforesaid, shall be and are by the said statute declared to be felons, and shall suffer death as in cases of felony without benefit of clergy."

But by 22 and 23 Car. II, ch. 1, § 2, it is provided, "That no attainder of such felony shall extend to corrupt the blood or forfeit the dower of the wife, or the lands, goods or chattels of the offender."

To bring an offender within the Coventry act there must be proof of a deliberate and premeditated design to do a personal injury of the sort described, to another; and it must appear that the mischief was done in the manner described therein, that is, on purpose and of malice aforethought, and by lying in wait for that purpose.

Maiming or Disfiguring Within the Act.—In Rex v. Carrol and King, O. B. July, 1765, 1 M. S. Sum. 224, it was held that a slitting of the nose, whether a perpendicular or a transverse cut, was within the meaning of the act; and in Coke and Woodburn, 6 St. Tr. 212, 215, 223, the slitting of the nose which brought them within the act was a cut across the nose, which separated the flesh of it, and cut it quite through into the nostril. And there it was objected that the nose could not be said to be slit, because the edge of it was not cut through; but the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE KING overruled the objection. 1 East P. C. 396.

It is necessary to consider what shall be said to be a cutting under this last act. This is a question of fact on the evidence whether the wounding be a cutting or not, and it is immaterial with what instrument it is done, whether with an instrument made for cutting or not, so that in fact the wound be a "cut." This was decided in the case of one Harwood, who was convicted at the Old Bailey, January session, 1805. He had been detected in attempting to commit a felony, and in order to escape apprehension, he struck the prosecutor with an iron crow bar on the head. The surgeon in his evidence stated that a part of the bone of the skull was cut out like a piece of quill. The chief baron, who tried the prisoner, thought, as the implement was rather calculated for bruising, that it was doubtful whether it came within the meaning of the act; but the judges held the conviction was right.

So in a case tried before Mr. J. CHAMBRE at York Lent. Ass. 1806, the incisions were made with a claw of a hammer, but the surgeon stated they were incisions. The judges held the conviction right. But in a case of John Adams, who was tried at Old Bailey, January session, 1808, a blow on the head, given with an iron bar, and which had given a contused and not an incised wound; the judges held the case not within the act. 1 Hawk. P. C. 108.

Against Whom the Offence in General May be Committed.—It does not seem necessary that the malicious intention described should be directed against any particular individual. If it be conceived against all persons who may happen to fall within the scope of the perpetrator's design, the particular mischief done to any one shall be connected with the general malignant intent, so as for the statute to attach upon the offenders. This is necessarily to be inferred from the case of Rex v. Carrol before stated, who was an entire stranger to the gentleman whom he assaulted, and who could not have been personally in his contemplation till the occasion occurred on the sudden. So if a blow be intended to maim one, and by accident maim another, the party is equally liable to be indicted for such maim. The statutes of H. IV, H. VIII, and Car. II are evidently directed to the maiming of others; but a person who even maims himself, or procures another to maim him, that he may have more color to beg, or disables himself to prevent being pressed for a soldier, is subject to fine and imprisonment at common law; and so is the party by whom it was effected at the other's desire.

Lying in Wait.—There must be proof of a deliberate design by lying in wait to commit the offence described in the act in order to bring the case within it. In general what shall be considered as a "lying in wait" on purpose to maim or disfigure must depend very much on the concomitant circumstances of each case. 1 East P. C. 397.

Intent.—Although a person be maimed or disfigured maliciously, yet the case will not fall within the statute unless the offender lie in wait for that purpose. Where the injury arose out of a sudden attack unconnected with any premeditated design against the person, it was held not to be within the statute. Rex v. Tickner, S. C. Leach 170. And the same line of construction has been adopted even where personal violence was intended, it being of a different and less atrocious sort, and with a different view. 1 East P. C. 399.

In Rex v. Mackey and Arrigoni, the commander of a press-gang maiming a man whom he casually met, and who resisted being impressed (being in truth no mariner), but against whom he appeared to have an antecedent grudge, is not a lying in wait within the statutes. But though the statute adds, "with intention to maim or disfigure" the party, yet if the intent were of a higher and more atrocious nature, namely, to murder him, and in that attempt the of-

V. AMERICAN LEGISLATION.—While our legislation is modeled on the English and based principally on the statutes 22 and 23 Car. II (A.D. 1670), commonly called the "Coventry Act," it is not uniform in all our States.¹ Under the Federal Crimes Act,² mayhem as punishable, and the particular made of committing the offence, is by stabbing, cutting, shooting or striking, or the particular weapon or instrument used, are not material.³ Nor is it necessary, where the injury is inflicted in a sudden conflict, that the design should have been formed previously, if the act is committed maliciously and on purpose, and in pursuance of a design formed during the conflict,⁴ with the apparent intent of mutilating or destroying any physical organ of the body.⁵

The New York statute⁶ covering the offence is, however, a departure from the rule here stated, and unless there is direct evi-

fender do not kill but only maim him, it is an offence within the act; for those additional words relating to the intent are merely auxiliary to the preceding words "on purpose and of malice aforethought" confining the crime to an intended violence. But if a corporal violence be intended, the more malignant the intention, the more clearly it falls within the malice described by the act. Besides, it is a known rule of law that if a man intend to commit one species of felony, and in the prosecution of that commit another, the law will connect his felonious intention with the felony actually committed, though different in species from that which he originally intended. 1 East P. C. 400. This is illustrated by Rex v. Coke and Woodburn, 6 St. Tr. 212.

1. State v. Simmons, 3 Ala. 497; State v. Abram, 10 Ala. 928; State v. Briley, 8 Port. (Ala.) 472; State v. Absence, 4 Port. (Ala.) 397; Eskridge v. State, 25 Ala. 30; State v. Coleman, 5 Port. (Ala.) 32; Adams v. Barrett, 5 Ga. 404; Com. v. Newell, 7 Mass. 245; State v. Gerkin, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 121; State v. Crawford, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 425; State v. Mairs, Coxe (N. J.) 453; Scott v. Com., 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 224; Chick v. State, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 161; Com. v. Lester, 2 Va. Cas. 198; Moore v. State, 4 Chand. (Wis.) 168; United States v. Scroggins, Hempst. (U. S.) 478; State v. Bohannon, 21 Mo. 490; Foster v. People, 50 N. Y. 598; Henry v. State, 18 Ohio 32; Reg. v. Murphy, 1 Crawf. & Dix C. C. 20; Trimble v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 143; Davis v. State, 22 Tex. App. 45.

Maiming by the Texas Penal Code art. 507, is defined as follows: "To maim is to wilfully and maliciously cut off or otherwise deprive a person of the hand, finger, toe, foot, leg, nose or ear; to put out an eye, or in any way deprive the person of any other member of his body." Davis v. State, 22 Tex. App. 45.

2. Crimes Act 1790, § 13; United States v. Scroggins, Hempst. (U. S.) 475.

3. United States v. Scroggins, Hempst. (U. S.) 478, 480.

4. State v. Simmons, 3 Ala. 497; State v. Gerkin, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 121; U. S. v. Scroggins, Hempst. (U. S.) 478; State v. Ormond, 1 Dev. & Batt. (N. Car.) 119; State v. Hair, 37 Minn. 351; State v. Jones, 70 Iowa 505; Ridenour v. State, 38 Ohio St. 272; State v. Evans, 1 Hayw (N. Car.) 325; State v. Crawford, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 425; State v. Skidmore, 87 N. Car. 509; State v. Bloedow, 45 Wis. 279; Hayden v. State, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 546; Baker v. State, 4 Ark. 56; United States v. Gunter, 5 Dak. 234; United States v. Askins, 4 Cranch C. Ct. 98; Bowers v. State, 24 Tex. App. 542; Terrell v. State, 86 Tenn. 523, reviewing statutes of Tennessee, North Carolina and Texas.

5. Moore v. State, 4 Chand. (Wis.) 168; Davis v. State, 22 Tex. App. 45; Kitchens v. State, 80 Ga. 810.

6. 2 Rev. Stat. 664, § 27, which reads as follows: "Every person who, from premeditated design, evinced by lying in wait for the purpose, or in any other manner, or with intention to kill or commit any felony, shall cut out or disable the tongue, or put out an eye, or slit the lip or slit or destroy the nose, or cut off or disable any limb or member of another, on purpose, upon conviction thereof shall be punished," etc.

dence of premeditation the case is not brought within the statute.¹

1. In Godfrey v. People, 63 N. Y. 207 (reversing Godfrey v. People reported in 5 Hun (N. Y.) 369), the evidence tended to show that the accused and the complainant had been playing cards together, and got into a quarrel over the game, which resulted in a fight. The parties closed and during the struggle the accused bit off a piece of complainant's ear. MILLER, J., in the opinion of the court observes: "A question is made by the prisoner's counsel whether, as the case stood upon the evidence, the prisoner could be convicted of the crime of mayhem. This question was presented upon the trial in the request and refusal to charge that he could not, and by an exception to that portion of the charge in which the judge charged the jury that if they found from the evidence, that the prisoner wilfully and intentionally seized the left ear of the complainant with his teeth at any time during the affray, with the intention of biting it off, and did wilfully and intentionally, and on purpose, bite it off, that, though the intention to bite off his ear originated or was first meditated, but an instant before he seized the ear, they would be authorized to find that he bit the ear off, from 'premeditated' design, within the meaning of the statute.

"According to the statute there must be a premeditated design which must be shown by lying in wait for the purpose, or in some other manner. There was no evidence upon the trial to establish that the prisoner lay in wait for the complainant, or that, prior to the time of the commission of the alleged offence, he had contemplated or intended to do the act. The proof evinces that it was done upon the impulse of the moment, in an affray which originated unexpectedly, with no previous ill feeling, except what arose at the time, or apparent intention on the part of the prisoner or the prosecutor, to engage in any such altercation as produced the consequences which ensued. There was then no premeditated design evinced by lying in wait for such a purpose, within the meaning of the statute, and under the circumstances presented, it is certainly not clearly apparent how, or in what form, such premeditated design is evinced in 'any other manner.' The last words are not very explicit, and somewhat general, but they cannot without a constrained construction be held to mean that they include cases of simple assault and battery where there is no direct proof of any intent or purpose which results unfortunately in the loss or disabling of some member of the body of the person assailed. There must be a design or intention existing, and a purpose to do this very act, and this must be the result of premeditation to bring it within the statute. The words cited must be construed in connection with and in reference to those which precede them in the same section; and when thus interpreted they evidently mean in any like or similar manner.

"There are numerous instances where full force and effect may be given to this language where a premeditated design has existed without lying in wait for that purpose, while it would not be applicable to cases where no such intention had been formed or proved. Take the case of a person who had determined and threatened to cut off an ear, put out an eye, or to disable some limb or member of the body of another and preparing himself with the necessary weapon for that purpose, should meet the individual against whom his animosity was directed, and commit the offence, or if, perchance, when seeing him at a distance, he should follow him, suddenly rush upon his victim and carry his intention into execution. These cases without referring to others which might be named, are sufficient to show how the language employed could be made effective, and have full operation.

"This interpretation of the language stated is also sanctioned by the last clause of the section which provides that the cutting off or disabling of any limb or member must be done 'on purpose.' If the offence was committed within the meaning of the statute, it must have been done 'on purpose,' as well as with a 'premeditated design.' There is no real ground for claiming that there was premeditation and a purpose existing at any time during the progress of the conflict when the passions of both parties were

VI. FELONY OR MISDEMEANOR.—Both East and Hawkins say that all maims are felony. That anciently castration was punished with death, and other maims with loss of member for member. But afterwards no maim was punished in any case with life or member but only with fine and imprisonment, which is considering it more in the nature of an aggravated trespass. In this country the common law offence of mayhem is not generally considered to be a felony but is punished as a misdemeanor, unless committed by castration, and then perhaps it is.¹ aroused, and there was no time or opportunity for reflection or deliberation. Such an assumption would be contrary to the natural inferences to be drawn from the circumstances and the situation of the parties at the time, and looking at them it cannot be fairly claimed that the prisoner intended to commit the offence of which he was convicted. An argument is made by the learned counsel for the prosecution, to the effect that the doctrine of instantaneous malice under the old law of murder is applicable, and that the definition of premeditation, as applied to such a case, may be invoked. I cannot concur in this view. In cases of homicide, where the offence is committed by means of weapons, or by the use of violence sufficient to produce death, such a rule might well be applied, because every circumstance tends to show that the result was intended. But this differs widely from a case of simple assault and battery, where there was a hand to hand fight, without any weapon which could be used to maim or disable, and every intention is against any such purpose.

"Another answer to this position is, that the statute of mayhem in England, as well as in this State, was evidently intended to provide for cases where there was an antecedent and secret purpose to commit the act, and not for casual and sudden affrays, where the act was done in the heat of the strife and with no direct evidence of any such intention." See also Tully v. People, 67 N. Y. 15.

1. 2 Bishop on Criminal Law, § 1008, citing Com. v. Newell, 7 Mass. 245; Adams v. Barrett, 5 Ga. 404; Com. v. Lester, 2 Va. Cas. 198; State v. Absence, 4 Port. (Ala.) 397.

In Com. v. Newell, 7 Mass. 245, PARSONS, C. J., in reviewing the subject at common law and under the statutes, observes: "By the ancient common law, mayhem was an injury of a peculiar nature, constituting a specific offence the commission of which could be regularly averred by no circumlocution, without the aid of the barbarous verb mahemiere. It consisted in violently and unlawfully depriving another of the use of a member proper for his defence in fighting, and was punished by a forfeiture of member for member, in consequence of which forfeiture it was deemed a felony. If the sufferer sought this satisfaction, or rather revenge, his remedy was by an appeal of mayhem, and the sovereign punished this injury done to his subject by an indictment for a mayhem; and in both the appeal and indictment, the offence must be alleged to have been committed feloniously.

"A punishment of this description could have existed only in a rude state of civil society; and as civilization advanced, the punishment was disused, and the offender made satisfaction by paying pecuniary damages, and was punished by his sovereign by fine and imprisonment, in the same manner as in cases of trespass. So long ago was this punishment disused, that Staundford, remarking on the statute of 5 H. IV, ch. 5, which made the putting out of an eye felony, observes that before that statute it was not felony. He, however, subjoins a quære, and refers to Bracton.

"This was the state of the common law long before, and at the time when our ancestors emigrated to this country, bringing with them but a very small part of the common law, defining crimes and their punishment. Mayhem was therefore never deemed by them a felony, but only an aggravated trespass at common law; and as such the offender was answerable to the party injured in a civil action of trespass, and to the government upon an indictment for a misdemeanor; and no statute provision during the existence of the colonial and provisional charters, recognizes mayhem as a distinct offence from trespass or as constituting a specific felony. We are therefore obliged to consider mayhem as no felony by the common law adopted in this State.

In several of the States, however, it is made a felony by statute.¹

"Since the revolution, the only legislative provisions relating to this offence, consider and punish it as a misdemeanor. If therefore the statute of 1804, ch. 123, has declared the maliciously cutting off an ear with intent to maim and disfigure a mayhem, we cannot thence infer that it is felony. The statute, however, has not made that declaration. It only enacts that if any person, with set purpose and aforethought malice, and with an intention to maim and disfigure, shall unlawfully cut off an ear of another, he and every person privy being present and aiding, or absent and having counseled or procured the commission, shall be punished by solitary imprisonment, and by confinement to hard labor. Here the word maim is used in the popular sense of mutilitating; and not as synonymous with the technical word mayhem. The cutting off the ear is not called a maim, but created an offence, when done with an intention to maim and disfigure, and punished as a misdemeanor; for a trespass may be committed with set purpose, and with malice aforethought.

"The fifth section of the statute provides that every man who shall assault another, with intent to maim and disfigure him, shall be punished as a felonious assaulter. But this expression is descriptive of the temper, disposition and character of the offender, and not of the legal nature of the offence. By the same statute, any person sending a challenge to fight a duel shall also be punished as a felonious assaulter; and very clearly the mere sending of the challenge is not even an assault. We are therefore satisfied that the offence described in the indictment (the breaking and entering a dwelling house with intent to cut off an ear of an inhabitant) is not a felony, either by our common law, or by any statute. The attorney general has argued that if the indictment is not a sufficient description of a felony, yet it may be supported as an indictment for a misdemeanor.

"There are one or two ancient cases in favor of this position, as Holmes' Case (Cro. Car. 376), and Martin Lesser's Case (Cro. Jac. 497). But in a later case of Rex v. Westbeer (2 Str. 1133), the old cases were considered and overruled. The court, when the prisoner was discharged, observed that in the cases cited for the king, the judges appeared to be transported with zeal too far. Thus stands this question at common law. But our statute of 1805, ch. 88, in authorizing a conviction of part of an indictment for felony, restrains the conviction to cases, where the part, of which the prisoner is found guilty, constitutes of itself a felony. This provision seems to be a statute construction of the point, which leaves no doubt remaining."

In Com. v. Lester, 2 Va. Cas. 198, an indictment which charges that a prisoner feloniously did break the jaw bone of another with intent to maim, disfigure, disable or kill, and concludes against the form of the statute (1 Rev. Code of 1819, ch. 156, §§ 1 and 2, p. 582), is yet not a good indictment under the statute, because it does not aver that he did disable any limb or member, but only that he did break a bone with intent to disable, etc. If a prisoner be charged with feloniously breaking the jaw bone of another, contra formum statute, the indictment cannot be sustained as one for mayhem at common law; because a mayhem at common law, with one exception only, is not a felony. The words "felonious assaulter" in the statute do not make the technical offence of mayhem a felony. State v. Danforth, 3 Conn. 112; Com. v. Newell, 7 Mass. 245.

In Foster v. People, 1 Colo. 293, the court held that the effect of the proviso in section 43 of the Criminal Code, Rev. Stat. 202, is to reduce the crime in certain specified cases from a higher to a lower grade. A conviction for misdemeanor may be had upon an indictment for felony in case where the misdemeanor is included in the higher offence. An indictment for mayhem in which the fact and the intent are charged, is good for the principal crime, mentioned in section 43, Rev. Stat. 202, and also for the misdemeanor mentioned in the last clause of that section. See also People v. Jackson, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 92; Stewart v. State, 5 Ohio 241; Benham v. State, 1 Iowa 542; Com. v. Blaney, 133 Mass. 571.

1. Canada v. Com., 22 Gratt. (Va.) 899;

VII. INTENT.—It is well settled that mayhem must be committed on purpose, unlawfully and with intent to maim, but when the act is once proved, the law will presume that it was committed on purpose and with intent to maim, until the evidence shows the contrary; such as that it was done for the necessary self defence of the party against some great bodily harm attempted by the person maimed, and that there was no other means of preventing the mischief or other circumstances of a like kind, for unless this can be proved, the excuse that it was a sudden and unexpected Hardy v. Com., 17 Gratt. (Va.) 592; State v. Thompson, 30 Mo. 470.

In Canada v. Com., 22 Gratt. (Va.) 899, C is indicted for feloniously and maliciously cutting, striking, wounding, etc., H, with intent to maim, disfigure, disable and kill. The indictment charges that C made an assault upon H, and feloniously and maliciously, etc. The jury find "the prisoner not guilty of the malicious cutting and wounding as charged in the indictment; but guilty of an assault and battery as charged in the indictment, and assess his fine at $500." Held, 1st. This is an acquittal of the prisoner of the felony charged, whether of the "malicious" or "unlawful" cutting, etc., with intent to maim, etc.; and it is a conviction for the misdemeanor of assault and battery. MONCURE, J., observes in this connection: "The offence of assault and battery, which is a mere misdemeanor is substantially charged in the indictment in this case, the acts which constitute it being part of the felony therein charged. If the accused had been convicted of the felony, then the misdemeanor would have been merged in the felony. But if the accused was acquitted of the felony, it was competent for the jury to convict him of the misdemeanor, to wit: Of the assault and battery substantially charged in the indictment." 2nd. Though the indictment only used the word "malicious," the jury might have found the prisoner guilty of the "unlawful" cutting, etc., with intent, etc. 3rd. Though the indictment is for a felony, the assault and battery being charged in it, the prisoner may be acquitted of the felony, and convicted of the misdemeanor; and the jury may assess a pecuniary fine upon him, but not imprisonment. 4th. Upon such a conviction the court may sentence the prisoner to be imprisoned in the county jail, in addition to the pecuniary fine.

In State v. Thompson, 30 Mo. 470, an indictment charging that the defendant on, etc., at, etc., did then and there feloniously assault one J. D. with a certain handle of a hoe, a deadly weapon, by feloniously assaulting and striking him, the said J. D., then and there feloniously to maim, wound and disfigure, contrary, etc., was held to be a good indictment under R. C. 1855, p. 567, § 38, entitled an act concerning crimes and punishments. SCOTT, J., in the opinion of the court, observes: "The thirty-eighth section of the act concerning crimes and punishments, punishes all assaults made with intent to kill, or to commit any robbery, rape, burglary, manslaughter, or other felony. This indictment charges the defendant with having made a felonious assault with an intent feloniously to maim, wound and disfigure. A felonious maiming is a felony. The defendant is then charged with an assault with intent to commit a felony, and the indictment is within the words of the law. Whether the offence laid in the indictment is a common assault and battery not indictable, would be a question arising on the trial on the evidence. It is sufficient that the charge is made a felony; whether it is or not will be determined by the evidence. The weapon used in making the assault is alleged to be a dangerous one. See also State v. Brown, 60 Mo. 141; Molette v. State, 49 Ala. 18; Com. v. Reed, 3 Am. Law 140; Scott v. Com., 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 224.

14 C. of L.—63

In Molette v. State, 49 Ala. 18, PETERS, J., observes: "The offence of mayhem is a felony under the Revised Code, § 3541, and the biting off an ear, if done maliciously, intentionally and unlawfully, is mayhem."

In Com. v. Reed, 3 Am. Law J. 140, BUFFINGTON, J., observes: "Whether mayhem be felony or misdemeanor, it is properly charged as being done feloniously." See also Scott v. Com., 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 224.

affray will not constitute a defence;¹ nor will the consent of a party, to the injury being inflicted upon himself, excuse him from

1. State v. Simmons, 3 Ala. 497; State v. Gerkin, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 121; State v. Danforth, 3 Conn. 112; State v. Evans, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 325; State v. Crawford, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 425.

In State v. Evans, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 325, the court held that the act once proved to be committed the law will presume it done intentionally.

Biting Off Finger.—The law requiring the act of biting off the finger to be done on purpose, unlawfully and with intent to maim, when the act itself is proved, the law will presume it was done on purpose and with intent to maim, as it actually was a maim, till the evidence sheweth the contrary; such as that it was done by accident, or done in such a manner as was not likely to be attended with that effect; or that it was done for the necessary self defence of the party against some great bodily harm attempted by the person maimed, and that there was no other means of preventing the mischief, or other circumstances of the like kind. If a sudden rencounter shall be deemed sufficient to excuse the party maiming from the penalties of this branch of the act, it will be of very little avail, for then in every sudden affray, the one party may bite off the nose, fingers, etc., of the other and excuse himself by saying it was done in the heat of passion upon a sudden affray. See also State v. Skidmore, 87 N. Car. 509; Terrell v. State, 86 Tenn. 523; Davis v. State, 22 Tex. App. 45; Bowers v. State, 24 Tex. App. 542; State v. Hair, 37 Minn. 351; Eskridge v. State, 25 Ala. 30.

In State v. Gerkin, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 121, in an indictment under the forty-eighth section of the thirty-fourth chapter of the Revised Statutes, an intent to disfigure is prima facie to be inferred from an act which does in fact disfigure, unless that presumption be repelled by evidence on the part of the accused of a different intent, or at least of the absence of the intent mentioned in the statute. It is not necessary under this statute to prove malice aforethought or a preconceived intention to commit the maim.

Not Necessary that the Whole Ear Should be Bitten Off.—To constitute a maim, under this statute by biting off an ear, it is not necessary that the whole ear should be bitten off; it is sufficient if a part only is taken off, provided it is enough to alter and impair the natural personal appearance and to ordinary observation to render the person less comely. See also in this last connection, State v. Abram, 10 Ala. 928.

In State v. Skidmore, 87 N. Car. 509, upon a trial for an indictment for maim, it appeared that while the parties were engaged in fighting the defendant bit off a part of one of prosecutor's ears and the judge charged it was incumbent on defendant to satisfy the jury that the act was done in self defence. It was also held that it was not error to refuse to charge that if the severance of the ear while in defendant's teeth resulted from the violent manner in which the parties were separated, it would not be a maim done "on purpose with intent to disfigure," for this the law presumes when the act is proved. See also State v. Norton, 82 N. Car. 628; Wright v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 342; Worley v. State, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 172; Young v. State, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 200.

In State v. Hair, 37 Minn. 351, in a prosecution for maiming under section 177 of the Penal Code, the court held that the injury must be wilfully inflicted "with the intent to injure, disfigure or disable;" but the "intent" is to be presumed from the act of maiming, unless the contrary appears. The "intent" referred to in the statute may be defined to be the purpose at the time to do, without lawful authority or necessity, that which the statute forbids; and the words "intent to injure" refer to injuries of the same class specified in the statute, or such as might reasonably be expected to be dangerous, or result in serious bodily harm.

In State v. Jones, 70 Iowa 505, on an indictment for disfiguring the person of another in the midst of an altercation, held that the court properly instructed the jury that a specific intent on the part of the defendant to disfigure was an essential element of the crime, but that such intent might be inferred or presumed if he did the act deliberately and the disfigurement was reasonably to be apprehended as the natural and probable consequence of the act, but that they ought to consider all the circumstances of the transaction in determining whether the specific intent existed in his mind at the time, or punishment. He will, on the contrary, be guilty of the crime in the same degree and manner, with the party who inflicted the injury.¹

While the "intent" under the New York statute must amount to an antecedent and secret purpose to commit the act and not a doing of the act in a sudden and unlooked for affray with no evidence of premeditation,² yet in other States it has been held that it is not necessary that the specific intent should exist previous to the conflict if the act is committed maliciously and on purpose, in pursuance of a design formed during the conflict.³

VIII. WILFUL AND MALICIOUS.—To constitute the offence of mayhem, the act must be done both wilfully and maliciously. A wilful act is one committed with an evil intent, with legal malice, without reasonable ground for believing the act to be lawful, and without legal justification.

A malicious act is one committed in a state of mind which shows a heart regardless of social duty, and fatally bent on mischief; a wrongful act, intentionally done without legal justification or excuse.⁴

IX. INDICTMENT.—While at common law an indictment for mayhem must not only charge the facts which constitute the injury but must also charge, as a conclusion from the facts averred, that the party was "maimed," it is not necessary in an indictment under a statute which describes a particular act, or acts, as a crime of a particular grade, after charging the acts, to state the legal conclusion that they amount to the crime of the grade declared, for such is the conclusion of the law on the facts alleged.⁵ In some whether he did the act deliberately. In such case, the court properly refused to instruct the jury that, as an intent to disfigure was an essential element of the crime, they would not be warranted in convicting unless there was other evidence of such intent than the mere presumption which might arise from the doing of the act in the manner in which it was done. See also Ridenour v. State, 38 Ohio St. 272.

1. 1 East P. C. 396; 1 Hawk. P. C. 108; Champer v. State, 14 Ohio St. 437; State v. Beck, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 363; Barholt v. Wright, 45 Ohio St. 177; Shay v. Thompson, 39 Wis. 540; Galbraith v. Fleming, 60 Mich. 403.

2. Foster v. People, 50 N. Y. 598; Godfrey v. People, 63 N. Y. 207; Burke v. People, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 481; Tully v. People, 67 N. Y. 15. See also Molette v. State, 49 Ala. 18; Slattery v. State, 41 Tex. 619.

3. State v. Simmons, 3 Ala. 497; State v. Hair, 37 Minn. 351; State v. Jones, 70 Iowa 505; Ridenour v. State, 38 Ohio St. 272; State v. Gerkin, 1

Ired. (N. Car.) 121; State v. Evans, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 325; State v. Crawford, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 425; State v. Skidmore, 87 N. Car. 509; State v. Bloedow, 45 Wis. 279; Hayden v. State, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 546; Baker v. State, 4 Ark. 56; United States v. Gunter, 5 Dak. 234. Where the court held "that under Rev. Stat. U. S., section 5348, prescribing the punishment of one who shall maliciously put out the eye, etc., of another, with intent to maim and disfigure, a premeditated intent and design on the part of defendant need not be shown."

See generally CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 681.

4. Bowers v. State, 24 Tex. App. 542; Wright v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 342; State v. Hair, 37 Minn. 351; State v. Gerkin, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 121; Molette v. State, 49 Ala. 18; Worley v. State, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 172.

5. Guest v. State, 19 Ark. 405; Anderson v. State, 5 Ark. 444; Absence v. State, 4 Porter (Ala.) 397; Chick v. State, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 161; Benham

States the indictment need not charge that the act was done feloniously,¹ but must charge that the offence was committed on purpose as well as unlawfully.²

In general it may be said, that in an indictment for mayhem, whether or not it be absolutely necessary to employ the exact words of the statute, it is well settled, that the offence as to facts and circumstances must be brought within the provisions and limitations of the statute creating it either by the use of the terms employed in the act, or others clearly and necessarily equivalent.³

X. CONVICTION OF LESSER OFFENCE.—On an indictment for mayhem, there might be a conviction of any lesser offence (e. g., assault and battery) which the indictment includes.⁴

XI. JOINDER OF OFFENCES.—Offences of the same character, and subject to the same punishment, though differing in degree may be united in the same indictment and the prisoner tried on both at the same time and convicted of one and not of the other.⁵

v. State, 1 Iowa 542; Rifle-maker v. State, 25 Ohio St. 395; Ridenour v. State, 38 Ohio St. 272; Kitchens v. State, 80 Ga. 810.

In Angel v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 231, although the statute against unlawful shooting, etc., affixes a penalty when the act is done with intent to maim, disfigure, disable or kill (in the disjunctive), yet the indictment should charge the intents conjunctively. Although all of the intents be laid, yet proof of either supports the indictment.

In Republica v. Reiker, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 282, the court held an indictment on the first clause of the sixth section of the act of April 22nd, 1794, against maiming, leaving out the words "lying in wait," or on the second clause leaving out the word "voluntary," is defective.

1. State v. Absence, 4 Port. (Ala.) 397.

2. State v. Ormond, 1 Dev. & Batt. (N. Car.) 119; State v. Green, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 39.

3. Com. v. Clark, 6 Grat. (Va.) 675; Com. v. Israel, 4 Leigh (Va.) 675; Roberts v. Com., 10 Leigh (Va.) 686; Com. v. Lester, 2 Va. Cas. 198; Peas v. Com., 2 Gratt. (Va.) 629; Com. v. Hamlett, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 82; Howell v. Com., 5 Gratt. (Va.) 664; United States v. Gunter, 5 Dak. 234.

Miscellaneous.—In State v. Green, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 39, the court held that an indictment under the North Carolina statute (R. S., ch. 34, § 48) for maiming by biting off an ear need not state whether it was the right or left ear.

In Angel v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 231, an indictment under the Virginia statute against mayhem charged a shooting with intent to maim, disfigure, disable and kill; while the statute used the disjunctive or, instead of the conjunctive as in the indictment. Held, that the indictment was good.

In State v. Ailey, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 8, the court held that an indictment for mayhem which charges that the defendant slit, cut off and bit off the ear of a person, is not bad for duplicity.

In State v. Mairs, Cox (N. J.) 453, it was held that an allegation that the nose of the prosecutor was bitten off is within a statute, so as to imply a cutting off of the nose.

In State v. Vowels, 4 Oreg. 324, it was held proper to designate as mayhem the maliciously and feloniously tearing off of an ear.

4. Com. v. Blaney, 133 Mass. 571; State v. Bloedow, 45 Wis. 279. See also State v. White, 45 Iowa 325; State v. Connor, 59 Iowa 357; State v. Waters, 39 Me. 54; State v. Phinney, 42 Me. 384; State v. Butman, 42 N. H. 490; State v. Reed, 40 Vt. 603; Beckwith v. People, 26 Ill. 500; Wall v. State, 23 Ind. 150; State v. Thompson, 30 Mo. 470; Canada v. Com., 22 Gratt. (Va.) 899; Cameron v. State, 13 Ark. 712; Guest v. State, 19 Ark. 405; Strawn v. State, 14 Ark. 549; Benham v. State, 1 Iowa 542; State v. Fisher, 103 Ind. 530; Mills v. State, 52 Ind. 187; Richie v. State, 58 Ind. 355; Powers v. State, 87 Ind. 144, 145; Behymer v. State, 95 Ind. 140; Barnett v. State, 100 Ind. 171; Hunter v. Com., 79 Pa. St. 503.

5. Baker v. State, 4 Ark. 56; People v. Gates, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 312; Peo-

XII. RESPONSIBILITY OF CONSPIRATOR FOR THE ACTS OF HIS CO-CONSPIRATORS.—Upon this subject in connection with the crime of mayhem the rule as deduced from the authorities seems to be that each conspirator is responsible for everything done by his confederates which follows incidentally in the execution of the common design, as one of its probable and natural consequences, even though it was not intended as a part of the original design or common plan. In other words, the act must be the ordinary and probable effect of the wrongful acts specifically agreed on, so that the connection between them may be reasonably apparent, and not a fresh and independent product of the mind of one of the confederates outside of, or foreign to the common design.¹

MEANDER—(See also METES AND BOUNDS).

Meander means to follow a winding or flexuous course; and where in a deed one of the boundaries of the land conveyed is designated thus, viz.: "thence with the meander of the river," etc., it must mean a meandered line—a line which follows the sinuosities of the river, or, in other words, that the river is the boundary of the land claim between the points indicated.²

ple v. Rynders, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 425, 430; State v. Ailey, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 8; Whiteside v. State, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 175, 182; State v. Harris, 11 Iowa 414; McBride v. State, 2 Eng. (Ark.) 374; Benham v. State, 1 Clarke (Iowa) 542. 397.

1. Bowers v. State, 24 Tex. App. 542; Lamb v. People, 96 Ill. 73; Ruloff v. People, 45 N. Y. 213; Thompson v. State, 25 Ala. 41; Frank v. State, 27 Ala. 37; Williams v. State, 81 Ala. 1; 9 Crim. Law Mag. 480; Kirby v. Stat. 23 Tex. App. 13; Spies v. People, 122 Ill. 1; State v. Absence, 4 Port. (Ala.) 397.

2. Turner v. Parker, 14 Oreg. 340; Schurmeier v. Railroad Co., 10 Minn. 100.

INDEX.

- Maim. See Mayhem
Maine Law. See Intoxicating Liquors
Mainprise, 1
Maintenance, 3
Malice, 5
 Implied, 6
 In fact, 6
 In law, 5
Malicious mischief, 8
 Animals, injuries to, 9
 Buildings, injuries to, 10
 Common law, 8
 Crops, injuries to, 10
 Definition, 8
 Essentials of offence, 11
 Evidence, 15
 Indictment, 12
 Injury or damage, 12
 Intent, 15
 Jurisdiction, 16
 Malice, 11
 Statutes, 9
 Trees and timber, injuries to, 10
Malicious prosecution, 16
 Advice of counsel, 53
 Answer, 45
 Character, 59
 Civil actions, 32
 Complaint, 42
 Corporations, 39
 Criminal actions, 21
 Damages, 71
 Defences, 51
 Definition, 16
 End of prosecution, 59
 Essentials, 21
 Evidence, 58
 Former action, termination of, 28
 Infants, 41
 Malice, 22, 51
 Miscellaneous, 58
 Nature, 16
 Partners, 39
 Pleading, 42
 Practice, 45
 Principle on which action depends, 19
 Probable cause, want of, 24, 63
 Public officers, 41
 Who may sue, 37
 Who may be sued, 38
Malpractice, 76
 Action barred by recovery for services, 83
Malpractice—Continued.
 Actions, survival of, 85
 Care, skill and diligence, 76
 Consultation with others, 81
 Contributory negligence of patient or attendant, 81
 Criminal liability, 85
 Damages, 84
 Defence, as a, 83
 Definition, 76
 Evidence, 83
 Gratuitous services, 81
 Judgment, errors of 80
 Partnership liability, 82
 Pleading, 83
 Warranty to cure, no implied, 80
Malt. See Intoxicating Liquors
Mandamus, 88
 Abatement, 223
 Admission to society, 154
 Alternative writ, 212
 Amendment, 224
 Appeal, 118, 120
 Appellate courts, 138
 Assessments, erroneous, 192
 Attachment, reinstating, 117
 Attorneys, 130
 Auditing a claim, 176
 Auditing officers, 147
 Awarding public contracts, 150
 Bill of exceptions, 122
 Bonds, 168, 169
 Bonds, approval of, 168
 Bonds, municipal aid, 192
 Books and records of corporation, 155
 Books, papers, etc., 147
 Books, custody of municipal, 173
 Books, to compel delivery of, 207
 Bridges, 205
 Canals, 163
 Change of venue, 115
 Circuit courts, 137
 Clerks of court, 132
 Commutation tickets, 162
 Contempt, attachment for, 240
 Continuance, 114
 Contracts, enforcement of, 104 [150
 Contracts, materials furnished under,
 Contracts of municipalities, 209
 Corporation, 152
 Costs, 239
 Costs, refusal to award, 120
 County courts, 139

Mandamus—Continued.

County seat, removal of, 208
 Courts, 137
 Courts acting under a special commission, 120
 Courts, against inferior, 108
 Damages for land taken, 162
 Damages, unliquidated, 104
 De facto officers, 207
 Defences by return, 234
 Definition, 91
 Demand and refusal, 106
 Demurrer, 224, 232
 Depot, erection of, 162
 Discretion of court, 97
 Discretion of inferior courts, 108
 Discrimination by railway, 162
 Dismissal of causes, 116
 Docket, removing cause from, 116
 Duties, not discretionary, 98
 Duties, purely ministerial, 99
 Equitable relief, 102
 Estimates of municipalities, 210
 Ex parte application, 216
 Federal courts, 137
 Federal officers, 142
 Fees, allowance of, 206
 Form of writ, 211
 Funds, want of, 184
 Guardians, 165
 Highway, 163, 206
 Highway, opening, 204
 Indictment, remedy by, 105
 Infants, 165
 Injunction, 117
 Injunction cannot stay peremptory writ, 217
 Injunction distinguished from, 93
 Intervention by third person, 221
 Joinder of different causes, 225
 Judges, 127
 Judgment, levy of tax to pay, 188
 Judgments, 112, 238
 Judgments, enforcing, 113
 Judgments, payment of, 182
 Judicial officers, 127
 Jurisdiction, 93
 Jurisdiction, exercise of, 112
 Justice of peace, 133
 Laches, 107, 186, 124
 Land commissioners, 146
 Licence, 118
 Licence, granting, 170
 Member of corporation, reinstatement of, 153
 Member of legislature, 146
 Misappropriation of funds, 184
 Motion to quash, 233
 Municipal corporations, 165
 Municipal improvements, 209
 Municipal office, to admit to, 201
 Municipal officers and elections, 196
 Notice, 107

Mandamus—Continued.

Obstructions in streets and highways, 206
 Officers, election of, 155
 Officers of municipal corporations, 196
 Omissions of duty, 105
 Origin and nature of, 92
 Overseers of poor, 176
 Parties, 217
 Payment of claims, 176
 Peremptory mandamus, motion for, 238
 Peremptory writ, 213
 Petition, requisites of, 222
 Pleading, 112, 221
 Poll-books, inspection of, 173
 Practice, 226
 Private persons, 165
 Public buildings, erection of, 209
 Public funds, distribution of, 173
 Public officers, 139
 Public records, 208
 Public records, inspection of, 171
 Railway, abandonment of, 162
 Railway company, 158
 Records, correction of, 173
 Relators, 217
 Religious corporations, 153
 Respondents, 219
 Return, 230
 Return, amending or withdrawing, 237
 Return, answer to, 238
 Return, damages for false, 237
 Return, evasive, 237
 Return, manner and time of making, 236
 Return, neglect to make, 237
 Return to peremptory mandamus, 238
 Rule to show cause, discharging, 238
 Salary, issuing warrant for, 149
 Salary, payment of, 180
 School boards, 174
 Schools, taxation for, 191
 Seal, affixing, 153
 Service, 229
 Sheriff, 136
 Special term, ordering, 120
 State boards, 147
 State courts, 138
 State officers, 143
 Statute of limitations, 186
 Statutory remedy, 103
 Statutory rights, 102
 Stipulation to settle, 120
 Stock, to issue certificate of, 158
 Stock, transfer of, 157
 Summons, setting aside, 117
 Supersedeas, 114
 Supervisors, 206
 Taxation, 186
 Tax, payment of, 191

Mandamus—Continued.

- Tax, payment of State, 151
- Tax illegally collected, refunding of, 192
- Telephone companies, 163
- Title, conveying, 151
- Title to office, 146
- Trial by jury, 225
- Useless and unlawful acts, 104
- Violation, 239
- Warrant, affixing seal to, 151
- When issued, 94
- Writ, form of, 211
- Writ of error, 118
- Mandate, 240
 - Action, who may maintain, 248
 - Consideration for contract, 241
 - Damages, measure of, 248
 - Definition, 240
 - Deposit, distinguished from, 241
 - Dissolution, 248
 - Evidence, 249
 - Form, 241
 - Parties, duties and obligations of, 243
 - Pleading, 249
 - Requisites, 242
- Mania, 250
- Manifest, 250
- Manufacturing corporations, 269
 - Action by stockholder against company, 311
 - Actions to enforce liability, 309
 - Agents, 277
 - Assignment for creditors, 275
 - Capital stock, 271
 - Certificates, liability in respect to filing, 284
 - Defences, 307
 - Definition, 269
 - Dissolution, 313
 - Incorporation law, compliance with, 271
 - Mortgages, 272
 - Municipal aid, 311
 - Officers, 277
 - Organization, 270
 - Powers, 272
 - Powers of agents, 277
 - Reports, liability in respect to filing, 284
 - Sale and transfer of goods, 274
 - Stock and stockholders, 274
 - Stockholder, action by, against company, 311
 - Stockholders, contribution among, 306
 - Stockholders, individual liability of, 294
 - Taxation, 311
 - Trustees, individual liability of, 279
- Map, 315
- Marine insurance, 319
 - Abandonment, 385

Marine insurance—Continued.

- Alien enemies, 323
- Custom and usage, 329
- Definition, 319
- Double insurance and priority, 341
- Insurable interest, 323
- Insurable interest, amount of, 335
- Losses not covered, 385
- Particular average, 402
- Perils, insured against, 375
- Policies, matters avoiding, 351
- Policy, 328
- Premium, return of, 400
- Risk, duration of, 343
- Time policies, 334
- Total loss, 385
- Voyage policies, 334
- What may be insured, 319
- Who may be insured, 323
- Marital rights, 409
- Maritime liens, 410
 - Construction, lien for, 421
 - Damages for, 436
 - Definition, 410
 - Demurrage, 439
 - Lien at common law, 453
 - Lien of ship on cargo, 438
 - Lien, priority of, 439
 - Lien under State law, 454
 - Lien, waiver, discharge and extinguishment of, 447
 - Money, advances of, 423
 - Pilotage, 434
 - Repairs, 412
 - Safe transport, 436
 - Salvage, 436
 - Services, 425
 - Supplies, 412
 - Towage, 434
 - Waiver, 447
 - Wharfage, 434
 - What are subject to, 411
- Market overt, 458
- Markets, 459
 - Definition, 459
 - Discontinuance, 467
 - Lands and houses, 460
 - Municipal regulations, 462
 - Negligence, actions for, 467
 - Nuisances, 461
 - Removal, 467
 - Right to establish, 460
 - Sales, 464
 - Stalls and stands, 465
 - Streets, in, 461
 - Use of market, 464
- Marque, 469
- Marriage, 470
 - Capacity of parties, 487
 - Celebration of ceremonies, 514
 - Celebration, when must be proved, 530
 - Certificates, 523

Marriage—Continued.

- Cohabitation and repute, 527
- Conflict of laws, 486
- Consent, 508
- Consummation, 518
- Contract in evasion of marriage rights, 479
- Contract in restraint, 474
- Contract not to, 473
- Contract to, 473
- Contract to bring about, 474
- Duress, 510
- Essentials of, 482
- Foreign marriages, proof of, 531
- Fraud, 509
- Illegal, 482
- Illegal, penalties attending, 538
- Jactitation, 532
- Life, presumption of, 521
- Marriage settlements, 479
- Nullity suits, 532
- Parties as witnesses, 526
- Presumptions, 519
- Proof by cohabitation and repute, 529
- Proof of, 519
- Records, 523
- Valid, void, voidable, and illegal, 482
- Voidable marriage, nullifying, 535
- Witnesses, 525
- Marriage broker, 538
- Marriage settlements, 538
 - Antenuptial settlements, 539
 - Capacity of parties, 543
 - Conflict of laws, 551
 - Consideration, 544
 - Construction of, 550
 - Definition, 539
 - Enforcement of, 548
 - Form, 540
 - Fraud, 546, 550
 - Postnuptial settlements, 552
- Married women, 589
 - Actions by, 650
 - Common law, 591
 - Contracts of, 604
 - Crimes of, 649
 - Deeds of, 626
 - Estoppel against, 637
 - Representative capacities in, 680
 - Status of, 591
 - Torts of, 647
 - Traders, as, 667
 - Wills of, 594
- Marshal, 684
- Marshalling assets, 685
 - Admiralty, 707
 - Alienation, inverse order of, 707
 - Creditor, rights of paramount, 696
 - Creditors of different persons, 699
 - Decedent's estates, 725
 - Default of paramount creditor, 698
 - Definition, 685
 - Devisees, 738

Marshalling Assets—Continued.

- Equitable interference, 685
- Equity, how enforced, 692
- Funds to which the doctrine is applied, 688
- Jurisdiction of probate courts, 739
- Legacies, 707
- Legatees, 727
- Partnership assets, 713
- Sureties, 701
- Widow's paraphernalia, 739
- Masonic Lodges. See Societies
- Master and Servant, 740
 - Agents, 761
 - Apprentices, 753
 - Assumption of risks of employment, 842
 - Bequest, signification of the term, servant in, 751
 - Classification, 746
 - Combinations, and coercion of servant, 803
 - Common law, 745
 - Contract, enforcement of, 787
 - Contract of service, 761
 - Contractors, independent, 751
 - Contributory negligence, 861
 - Corporations, 760
 - Definitions, 745
 - Enticing servant away, 800
 - Express contracts, 771
 - False representations, persons engaged in work upon, 751
 - Fellow servants, 829
 - Gratuitous services, 768
 - Illegal contracts, 785
 - Immoral contracts, 787
 - Implied contracts, 767
 - Infants, 753
 - Injuries to servant, master's right of action, 788
 - Insane, 759
 - Liability for acts of independent contractor, 829
 - Liability for wilful and malicious acts of servant, 815
 - Liability of master for negligence or unskilfulness of servant, 804
 - Liability of master on servant's contract, 804
 - Liability to coservant, 873
 - Liability of master to servant for negligence, 873
 - Liability of servant to master, 872
 - Liability of servant to third person, 873
 - Married women, 759
 - Menial servants, 750
 - Municipal employees, 753
 - Parties, 753
 - Partners, 760
 - Presumption from appearances, 751
 - Public officers, 753

Master and servant—Continued.

- Relation, 752
- Statute of frauds, 763
- Termination of relation, 788
- Volunteers, 751
- Work outside scope of employment, 859

Master in equity, 919

- Accounts, 932
- Additional evidence, 953
- Appointment, 921
- Compensation, 956
- Confirmation, 944
- Costs, 955
- Definition, 920
- Estimates by master, 957
- Objections, 942
- Origin and history, 920
- Powers and duties, 922
- Reference, 928
- Report, 937
- Report, exceptions to, 944
- Report, review of, 951
- Sales by master, 954

Master of a vessel, 958

- Appointment and dismissal, 958
- Authority, 960
- Duties, 971
- Liability, 974
- Rights, 973

Mayhem, 985

- American legislation, 989 [997
- Coconspirator, responsibility for,
- Common law, 985
- Conviction of lesser offence, 996
- Definition, 985
- English statutes, 987
- Felony or misdemeanor, 991
- Indictment, 995
- Intent, 993
- Joinder of offences, 996
- Maim, 985
- Wilful and malicious, 995

Words and Phrases

- Main, 1
- Main channel, 1
- Mainer, 1
- Mainprise, 1
- Main river, 1
- Main sea, 1
- Main wall of house, 1
- Mainsworn, 2
- Maintain, 2
- Maintain an action, 2
- Maintain in substantial repair, 2
- Maintain the buildings, 3
- Maintained, 2
- Maintaining, 2
- Maintaining and sustaining, 3
- Make, 4
- Make over, 4
- Maker, 4
- Makes over and confirms, 4

Words and Phrases—Continued.

- Making, 4
- Making distress, 4
- Making his law, 4
- Majority, 3
- Majority in bankruptcy act, 3
- Majority in value of the creditors, 3
- Majority of shareholders, 3
- Male, 5
- Male children, 5
- Male heirs, 5
- Malfesance, 5
- Malice, 5
- Malicious, 6
- Maliciously, 7
- Maltreatment, 86
- Man, 86
- Manage, 87
- Manage an estate, 87
- Manage and superintend, 87 [87
- Managed carelessly and negligently,
- Manager, 87
- Managing agent, 88
- Managing owner of ship, 88
- Man and wife, 86
- Mandatory, 249
- Man, dog or cat, 86
- Manhood, 249
- Mania, 250
- Manifest, 250
- Manner, 251
- Manor, 254
- Mansion, 255
- Manual, 255
- Manufactory, 256
- Manufacture, 257
- Manufacturer, 264
- Manufactures of metals, 314
- Manumission, 314
- Manure, 314
- Manuscript, 315
- Many, 315
- Map, 315
- Marauder, 315
- Mare, 316
- Margin, 316
- Marine, 317
- Mariner, 409
- Martial rights, 409
- Maritime, 409
- Mark, 457
- Market, 458
- Marketable title, 458
- Market overt, 458
- Market value, 467
- Marshal, 684
- Material, 976
- Matter, 976
- Mature, 978
- Maturity, 978
- May, 979
- Meander, 997
- Middle of main channel, 1

